The liuely Portrayture of the truely pious, & Learned, & Judicious Gentleman: Edward Leigh Esqȝ & M.r of Arts of Magdalen Hall in Oxford,

Ætatis Suæ 60 Ao Domin. 1662:

John Chantry: sculp:

The liuely Portrayture of the truely pious, & Learned, & Judicious Gentleman: Edward Leigh Esqȝ & M.r of Arts of Magdalen Hall in Oxford,

Ætatis Suæ 60 Ao Domin. 1662:

John Chantry: sculp:

Published

A SYSTEME OR Body of Divinity:

Consisting of TEN BOOKS.

Wherein the

FUNDAMENTALS

and main Grounds of

RELIGION

are OPENED;

The Contrary

ERROURS REFUTED;

Most of the

CONTROVERSIES

Between

Us, the PAPISTS, ARMINIANS and SOCINIANS

Discussed and handled;

SEVERAL

SCRIPTURES

Explained, and vindicated from corrupt Glosses.

A Work seasonable for these times, wherein so many Articles of our Faith are questioned, and so many gross Errours daily published.

The Second Edition corrected, and enlarged; there being about one hundred Sheets inserted throughout the whole Work, besides the ADDITIONS annexed by themselves at the End.

By EDWARD LEIGH Esquire, and Master of Arts of Magdalen-Hall in OXFORD.

Quisquis bonus verúsque Christianus est, Domini sui esse intelligat, ubicunque invenerit Veritatem. Aug. de Doct. Christ. l. 2.

LONDON,

Printed by A. M. for William Lee at the Signe of the Turks-head in Fleet-street over against Fetter-lane, M. DC. LXII.

A

SYSTEME

OF

Body of Divinity:

Consisting of Ten Books.

WHEREIN

THE FUNDAMENTALS

OF

RELIGION

ARE

Opened;

The Covenant

OF

WORKS

AND

GRACE

Unfolded and Vindicated;

All the

CONTROVERSIES

OF

Moment

Discussed and Solved;

The Practical Part

OF

SCRIPTURES

Explained and Improved.

By DAVID DICKSON, Professor of Divinity, and Master of Arts in the University of Glasgow.

A SYSTEME OR Body of Divinity:

Consisting of TEN BOOKS.

Wherein the

FUNDAMENTALS

and main Grounds of

RELIGION

are OPENED:

The Contrary

ERROURS

REFUTED:

Most of the

CONTROVERSIES

Between

US, the PAPISTS, ARMINIANS and SOCINIANS

Discussed and handled.

SEVERAL

SCRIPTURES

Explained and vindicated from corrupt Glosses.

A Work seasonable for these times, wherein so many Articles of our Faith are questioned, and so many gross Errours daily published.

The Second Edition, corrected and much enlarged throughout the whole Work; with other ADDITIONS also annexed.

By EDWARD LEIGH Esquire, and Master of Arts of Magdalen-Hall in OXFORD.

Quisquis bonus verúsque Christianus est, Domini sui esse intelligat, ubicunque invenerit Veritatem. August. de Doctrina Christiana l. 2.

LONDON,

Printed by A. M. for William Lee at the Signe of the Turks-head in Fleet-street over against Fetter-lane, M. DC. LXII.

A SYSTEM

OR

Body of DIVINITY:

Containing the Sum of

FUNDAMENTALS

of the Christian Church or

RELIGION

Clearly

PROVED:

To all the Orthodox and Godly Magiſtrates, Miniſters,

AND

PEOPLE of ENGLAND,

who are Lovers of Truth and Holineſſe.

I Am not ignorant that the Socinians make ſport in their Books with the Proteſtant Authors, becauſe they call themſelves the Orthodox, and ſay, We uſe that as a ſpell, thinking thereby to charm all diſſentiates. And ſome that plead for Univerſal Redemption, Apoſtaſie of the Saints, and ſuch corrupt Doctrines, ſeem to ſlight thoſe mormolukes of Arminianiſm, Pelagianiſm, Socinianiſm.

Yet there are thoſe who are Orthodox, whoſe judgement is ſound in matters of Faith, and there are alſo without queſtion many in theſe dayes, who are Hetrodox and unſound in the Faith, We have no ſuch cuſtome, nor the Churches of Chriſt, ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 11. 16.

The concurrent judgment of the Reformed Churches is not to be ſlighted.

That ſaying of Vincentius Lirinenſis cap. 5. in Commonit. adver-

Ex uſu ſermonis in religione recepti, Orthodoxi illi dicuntur, qui nullam doctrinam ab Eccleſia damnatam atque rejectam amplexi ſunt. Amyraldi Diſſertat. de Gratia univerſali.

Quod per omnes Eccleſias receptum eſt, diſputando velle in controverſiam vocare eſt αιλουρείκον

Grotius in loc. Orthodoxus is videlicet qui de rebus fidei rectam opinionem habet. Druſ. Spicileg. Nec etiam illi duntaxat Heterodoxi, vel non Orthodoxi vocari poſſunt, qui doctrinam aliquam ab Eccleſia apertè damnatam vel rejectam amplexi ſunt, ſed & qui vel erroneum dogma vel inutile tuentur, quod cum Scriptura non conſiſtit, aut ſibi non conſtat. Aliud etiam eſt ſimpliciter orthodoxum non eſſe, aliud talem non eſſe in loc vel illo capite. Spanhem. Exercitat. de Grat. univerſ. Annotat. in Sect. 2. Truth is from God, Pſal. 31. 5. Joh. 14. 6. Errour from the Devil, Joh 8. 44. Truth is a conformity to the mind of God, revealed in his word, Iſa. 8. 20. Joh. 17. 17. Errour is a repugnancy to the Word of God, 2 Pet. 2. 16. Truth cleanſeth and purifieth; Errour defiles the ſoul, 1 Tim. 3. 17. Truth ſets it free, Joh. 8. 32. Errour inthrals it, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

ſus Hæreſes is worthy our ſerious conſideration, Mos iſte ſemper in Eccleſia viguit, ut quò quiſque foret religioſior, eò promptius novellis adinventionibus contrairet. That cuſtome (ſaith he) hath ſtill flouriſhed in the Church, that the more religious any one was, the more readily he would oppoſe new inventions.

Amicus Socrates, amicus Plato, ſed magis amica veritas.

Truth is precious and ſhould be maintained: Errour is dangerous and ſhould be oppoſed. Buy the truth and ſell it not, ſaith Salomon. Jeruſalem is called a City of truth, Zech. 8. 3. The Church is called the pillar and ground of truth, 1 Tim. 3. 15. Chriſt came into the world, that he might bear witneſſe to the truth, John 18. 27. The Prophet Jeremy complains, That none were valiant for the truth. Contend earneſtly for the Faith, which was once delivered to the Saints. We can do nothing againſt the truth, but for the truth, ſaith Paul. It is made a ſign of Chriſts ſheep, John 10. 4, 5. to take heed of errours and falſe teachers.

Jer. 9. 3.

Jude v. 3.

2 Cor. 13 8.

Nullus enim ſuavior animi cibus eſt, quam cognitio veritatis, cujus aſſerendæ atque illuſtrandæ ſeptem volumina diſtinavimus. Lactant. de falſa religione, lib. 1.

Our Magiſtrates ſhould do well to follow the examples of our King Edward the ſixth, and Queen Elizabeth; Two things in King Edward,

1. In his honouring the Word of God.
2. In his oppoſing of errour and falſe worſhip.

Accepi à fide dignißimis, cum illi ex conſuetudine oblati eſſent eo die quo coronabatur in regem, tres gladij, in ſignum quod eſſet trium potentiſſimorum Regnorum Angliæ, Franciæ & Hiberniæ Monarcha: quod tandem dixerit, deeſſe adhuc unum, & cum interrogaſſent principes, quiſnam ille ſit: Reſpondit, eſſe ſacrorum Bibliorum volumen. Ille liber, inquit, Gladius Spiritus eſt, & gladijs his omnibus longe anteferendus. Balæus de Script. Brit. Cent. 2.

When he was Crowned, they put into his hands three Swords: he anſwered, there was one yet wanting, the Word of God, the Sword of the Spirit, which was farre to be preferred before all thoſe. When he was preſſed by Biſhop Ridley and others to tolerate his Siſters Maſſe in her own Chappel, he would not (though importuned) yeeld thereunto, ſaying, He ſhould diſhonour God in it; and being much urged by them, he burſt out into tears, and they affirmed, That he had more Divinity in his little fingers, then they in all their bodies.

Speed Chro. c 24 p. 838.

Queen Elizabeth after her Coronation, when the Bible was preſented unto her at the little Conduit in Cheapſide, ſhe received the ſame with both her hands, and kiſſing it, laid it to her breſt, ſaying, That the ſame had ever been her chiefeſt delight, and ſhould be the Rule by which ſhe meant to frame her Government.

Fregevill a wiſe French Writer in his Apology for the general cauſe cauſe of Reformation, obſerves two memorable things in Queen Elizabeths Government:

1. That under her firſt, Reformation had free and full courſe throughout England.

2. That ſhe was a favourer of the Clergy.

She once in her Progreſſe viſiting the County of Suffolk, all the Iuſtices of Peace in that County met her Majeſty, every one of them having his Miniſter next to his body, which the Queen took ſpecial notice of, and thereupon uttered this Speech, That ſhe had often demanded of her Privy Councel, why her County of Suffolk was better governed than any other County, and could never underſtand the reaſon thereof, but now ſhe her ſelf perceived the reaſon, It muſt needs be ſo (ſaid ſhe) where the Word and the Sword go together.

It is the Duty of the Magiſtrate not onely to regard that the life of his Subjects be civil and honeſt, but alſo that it be religious and godly. Therefore we are taught to pray for them, that we may live under them a peaceable life, not only in all honeſty, but alſo in all godlineſſe, or true worſhip of God, as the word uſed by the Apoſtle doth ſignifie. Therefore the King was commanded to take a Copy of the whole Law, and not of the ſecond Table only, implying that he ſhould look to the execution as well of the firſt Table as the ſecond.

Miniſters alſo ſhould appear for the truths of God, and be able (now if ever) to convince the gain-ſayers, Tit. 1. 9. The Scripture is profitable for doctrine and for reproof, 2 Tim. 3. 16. Shall we have the Pelagian Doctrine of Free-will, and the power of nature pleaded for; and our Bertij maintaining the Apoſtaſie of Saints, and ſhall we have no Bradwardines to write de cauſa Dei, nor Auguſtines de bono Perſeverantiæ?

I remember when the worthy Prolocutor of the Aſſembly with other Divines, brought in the Confeſſion of Faith into the Houſe of Commons, he ſaid, They had been the longer, and had taken the more pains about it, that it might obviate the errours of the times.

Baldazzar a Germane Divine, writing to Oecolampadius, ſaith, Veniat verbum Dei & ſubmittemus, etiamſi nobis eſſent ſexcenta colla.

Ego quidem ſine verbo re in Paradiſo optarim vivere, cum verbo etiam in inferno facile eſt vivere. Luth. Tom.

In Regum ſolenni & publica inauguratione, inter alias Ceremonias, quoque Liber legis in manus ipſis datus fuit, & ſub iſto ſymbolo veritatis cœleſtis in eo comprehenſæ Protectio commendata, 2 Reg. 11. 12. ubi per Teſtimonium, tam Hebræorum, quam Chriſtianorum Interpretes, librum legis, intelligunt. Buxt. Epiſt.

Dedicat. ad Anticritica. Is Chriſtianum verè jureque dicendus eſt, qui verbum Dei agnoſcit, reveretur, & amat. Alioqui de Chriſtiano nomine glietur quantum volet, tantum abeſt ut ſit Chriſtiana pietatis aut religionis cultor, ut ſit illius prophanator & planè impius. Cockburni oratio de utilitate & excellentia verbi Dei.

Sozomen relates a very remarkable ſtory * to this purpoſe. When the Synod of Nice was called againſt Arius, many of the wiſer wiser Heathens came thither to hear the Disputation there. One Philosopher among the rest behaved himself very insolently and petulantly derided the Christian Ministers: an old plain Countrey-man (ex illustrium confessorum numero) being not able to brook his arrogancy, desired to dispute with him, and having at last gained liberty, he began thus, Philosophe audito, UNUS EST DEUS COELI, TERRÆ, &c. Hear Philosopher, (making a Confession of his Faith) there is one God, maker of Heaven and Earth, and all things Invisible, and then shew'd how Christ was born of a Virgin, and conversed here with men, and died for them, and should after come to judge men for all that they had done here on earth, and then concludes, That these * things are so without any other curious search, we certainly believe. Therefore do not spend your pains in vain in a curious refuting of these things, which are only rightly understood by faith, or in searching how they may be done or not. But if thou believest answer me some Questions: with which things the Philosopher being astonished, answered, I believe; and giving him thanks that he had overcome him, was not only of the same judgement with the old man, but also began to give councel to others (who were before enemies to the Christian Faith as well as himself) to assent to the Christian Doctrine, and added an Oth, that he was not only changed by a divine Deity, but also by a certain unexpressible force was converted to the Christian Religion.

* Hiſt. Eccleſ. 18.

* Ista ita se habere, sine ulla alia curiosa indagatione pro certo credimus. Noli ergo in his quæ fide dum tenentur recte intelligunt curiose refutandis laborem frustra consumere, quærere-ve qui ista fieri aut non fieri possint.

Quod si credis, mihi quædam scisciranti responde. Quibus obstupefactus Philosophus, Credo, inquit. Et gratijs illi actis, quod ipsum devicisset, non solum eadem cum sene ipse sentire, verum etiam consilium dare cœpit illis, qui perinde erga fidem Christianam atque ipse ante affecti erant, ut jam doctrinæ Christianæ assentirentur: atque jusjurandum adjecit, se non modo numine divino mutatum esse, sed etiam vi ac virtute quadam inexplicabili ad religionem Christianam conversum.

If Zanchy may be credited, the perseverance of Saints in the Faith, is a main part of the Gospel. Vedelius in his Panacea Apostasia bono constantium & lapsorum præscripta, l. 1. c. 3. shews, that an Apostate breaks all the ten Commmandments.

Doctrina Dei & quidem præcipua pars Evangelij fuit non tantum in dubium vocata, sed etiam damnata, doctrina nimirum de perseverantia Sanctorum in fide, ex qua pendet articulus de certitudine salutis nostræ per Christum. Hæc verò doctrina de perseverantia pendet à doctrina de immutabili sanctorum electione ac prædestinatione, sine qua doctrina articulus de gratuita per Christum justificatione, nullo modo consistere potest. Zanch. discept. cum Marbachio. Tota hæc doctrina Christi est & Apostolorum, explicata ab Augustino, recepta ab Ecclesia Catholica renovata à Luthero & Bucero totius Germaniæ duobus luminibus. Id. Ibid.

I wish

I wiſh that the Reformed Churches by their unhappy diviſions (fomented by the Bouteſeus of Chriſtendom, the Jeſuites) do not weaken themſelves, and accompliſh their enemies great deſign.

It is obſerved by Chemnitius *, that in the year 1540. the Ieſuites by the Interceſſion of Cardinal Contarenus, did obtain from Paul the III, that he would confirm that Order by his Pontificial Authority, who did ratifie it with this caution, that only threeſcore men ſhould be of that Society. But when afterward they obſerved that that Order was more active than others in upholding the tottering Church of Rome, he decreed in the year 1543, that this Society of the Ieſuites ſhould not be limited to any either terms of places, or number of perſons.

* Anno 1540 intercedente Cardinali Contareno à Paulo III. petierunt, ut vita illud inſtitutum. Pontificia autoritate confirmaret: Qui addita hac cautione, illud ratum habuit, ne plures quam 60 viri, ad eam ſocietatem adſcriberentur. Sed cum poſtea animadverterent, illam vitæ rationem ad reſtituendam & reſarciendam nutantem & labaſcentem Pontificiam Eccleſiam præ cæteris ordinibus maximè idoneam eſſe, 1543. anno decrevit, ne ullis vel locorum terminis, vel perſonarum numero, ſocietas hæc Jeſu nomine inſignita circumſcriberetur. Chemnit. in exam. part. 1. Decret. Conc. Trid. Præf.

It is alſo obſervable what Campanella laies down in his diſcourſe of the Spaniſh Monarchy; It is manifeſt (ſaith he) that the King of Spain if he could ſubdue England with the Low-countreys, would ſoon become Monarch of all Europe, and a great part of the world. Now nothing ſo much conduceth to overthrow the Engliſh, as a diſſenſion and diſcord ſtirred up amongſt them and the Dutch, and perpetually nouriſhed, which will ſoon (ſaith he) afford better occaſions. In Chap. 27. of the ſame Book he ſpeaks much to the ſame purpoſe.

Certò conſtat Regem Hiſpaniarum ſi ſolum Angliam cum Belgio domare poſſet, totius Europæ magnæque partis mundi Monarcham citò evaſurum. Jam verò ad evertendos Anglos nihil tam conducit, quam diſſenſio & diſcordia inter illos excitata, tum propetuoq; nutrita, quod citò occaſiones meliores ſuppeditabit. Campanellæ de Monarch. Hiſp. Diſcur. cap. 25. Equidem nulla opportunior aut major potentia eſt ad opponendam claſſem Anglicam, quam potentia Hollandiæ & Zelandiæ. Nam hæ non ſolum navium numero, ſed etiam experientia maritima omnes alias multis paraſangis antecedunt, ut taceam jam de ferocia & divitijs gentium. Campan. ib. cap. 27.

Parſons the Engliſh Ieſuite in his Memorial for Reformation, or a remembrance for them that ſhall live when Catholick Religion ſhall be reſtored unto England, would have the grand Charter burnt, the municipal Laws abrogated, and the Innes of Court converted to ſome other uſe; That for Lawyers. Then for Divines, The Colledges in both the Univerſities ſhould be only in the power of ſix men, who ſhould have all the Lands, Mannors, Lordſhips, Parſonages, &c. and what ever elſe belonged to Church or Cloiſter reſigned into their hands. That at the beginning no mans conſcience be preſſed for matters in Religon: then, that publick diſputations between Papiſts and Proteſtants be held in both the Univerſities. That for ſome years it will be more commodious for the publick, and more liberty for the Preachers, to have no Appropriation or Obligation to any particular Benefice, but Itinerant, mitto cætera. M. Smiths Preface to Dailles Apology for the Reformed Churches, tranſlated by him. He ſaith there he hath been told by the London Bookſellers, that at the leaſt thirty thouſand Popiſh Books have been Printed here within theſe three laſt years.

Shall the Ieſuitical and heretical party be ſo active for Popery, for errour, and ſhall not the Orthodox be as ſtudious to hold faſt and hold forth the Truth? Let Magiſtrates make the intereſt of Chriſt, his Truths, his Worſhip, his People, their great intereſt, let them diſcountenance groſſe errors and damnable hereſies. Let Miniſters preach down, pray down, live down thoſe abominable Doctrines now amongſt us Let all the People of God ſtudy Fundamentals, labour to be ſtabliſht in the Truth, and in their places oppoſe Falſhood, Libertiniſm and all horrid Blaſphemies, and pray earneſtly to God, that he would cauſe the falſe Prophets and the unclean Spirits to paſs out of the Land, Zech. 13. 2. and I ſhould yet hope (though our caſe be very ſad) that God would continue his Goſpel ſtill amongſt us in power and purity, though by our ſins we have forfeited ſo great a mercy; Which bleſſing that it may be vouchſafed unto us (though altogether unworthy) ſhall be the prayer of,

Your true Chriſtian Friend and hearty well-wiſher

Edward Leigh.

To the Christian and Candid READER.

READER.

DIvers have since the publishing of my Treatise of Divinity (consisting of three Books) expresst their good esteem thereof, and withall have said, that if the like were done upon the whole Body of Divinity, it would be a very usefull and profitable Work: I have therefore inserted divers things into the former Treatises, and also enlarged them so far by the Addition of other Subjects, as to make a compleat System or Body of Divinity.

I treat not here of the Covenant and Promises, Afflictions or Martyrdome, because I have in my Books of Divine Promises, and Saints Encouragements, sufficiently discussed those several points.

Divines go different wayes in their handling of positive Divinity, and give several Titles to their Books; Some call their Work, A System of Divinity; Others, [a] A Synopsis; Others, [b] A Syntagma; Others, [c] Common-places; Some, [d] The Marrow; Some, [e] The Body of Divinity; Others, [f] The Summe of Divinity.

There are Calvins Institutions, Bullingers Decads, Zanchies Works, Gerhards Common-places, Ursins Summe of Divinity, and some others, that have more fully handled the Body of Divinity, but there are fewer of our English Writers (unlesse Mr. Perkins of old, and B. Usher lately) who have largely and fully written in English this way.

Some reduce all the Principles of Religion into more, some to few Heads. Some refer all to those four Heads,

1. Quæ Credenda, What things are to be believed in the [g] Creed.
2. Quæ Facienda, What things are to be done in the Commandments.
3. Quæ Petenda, What things are to be begged in the Lords Prayer.
4. Quæ Recipienda, What things are to be received in the Sacraments.

Symbolum Apostolicum Sacramenta precatio Christi.
Verba decem: Hæc summam religionis habent.
Stradlingi Epigram. *l.*1. *p.*33.

The Creed, Commandments, the Lords Prayer, and the Sacraments.

Though I do not punctually observe that method, yet I handle all those four Subjects. I speak of God and his Attributes Almighty in the second Book, and handle all the Articles which concern Christ in the fifth Book, where I treat of the Recovery of man by Christ, and somewhat of the holy Ghost in the seventh

[a] Synopsis purioris Theologiæ, by the Dutch Divines.
[b] Polani Syntagma.
[c] Petri Mart. & Gerhard. loc. communes.
[d] Amesij Medulla. Theol.
[e] Chamieri Corpus Theol.
[f] Aquinas & Alexander Alensis.
[g] Regula fidei una est sola immobilis & irreformabilis. Tertul. de Virg. vel. Oratio legitima & ordinaria, breviarium totius Evangelij complectens: qua Deus ipse, quod salus potuit, ut se vellet orari, docuit. Tertul.

Book (where I handle the Benefits by Christ) in Sanctification of the Church and Communion of Saints. Of Forgiveneſſe of ſinnes in the fifth Petition of the Lords Prayer, and in the Doctrine of Juſtification. Of the Reſurrection of the Body, and Laſt Judgment, and Life Everlaſting, I treat in the laſt Book. I handle the Commandments in the ninth Book. The Lords Prayer and Sacraments among the Ordinances in the ſeventh Book. I ſhall now particularize the ſeveral Subjects of each Book according to the method I obſerve.

First, I treat of the Scriptures or Word of God, the Divine Authority of both the Old and New Teſtament: I maintain againſt the Antiſcripturiſts and ſuch as go about to take away all the Old Teſtament. It was neceſſary that God ſhould give us ſome outward ſignification of his will. All creatures have a rule without themſelves to guide them in their operations. The Scripture is the Rule of Faith and Life, Iſai. 8. 20. All extraordinary wayes of revelation are now ceaſed, we are to pray for a further Diſcovery of Gods mind in his Word, Epheſ. 1. 17. not to expect new Revelations ex parte Objecti, but ex parte Subjecti, a farther clearing of the Scriptures to us. Some ſay the Old Teſtament is a dead Letter *, ſo is the New without the Spirit; how can we convince the Jews but by the Old Teſtament? the ſame Spirit ſpake in both Teſtaments. Some turn the whole Word into Allegories; Others deny conſequences out of Scripture to be Scripture, nothing is Scripture (ſay they) but what is found there expreſly. What is neceſſarily inferred is Scripture as well as what is literally expreſt, Levit. 10. 1. The Apoſtle proves the Reſurrection by conſequence. Paul and Apollo Act. 17. 3. & 18. 28. proved to the Jews by the Scriptures that Jeſus was the Chriſt, although in thoſe Scriptures theſe very words are not found, but are deduced by a neceſſary conſequence.

* Si quis locus ipſis objiceretur, reſpondebant, nos literæ minimè obnoxios eſſe, ſed Spiritum qui vivificat, ſequi oportere. Calv. adverſus Libertinos, c. 3. Vide plura ibid.

Concerning Scripture we believe, That it was impoſſible for humane reaſon without the help of divine Revelation, to finde out thoſe ſupernatural truths which are neceſſary to ſalvation. 2. That to ſupply this defect of natural reaſon, God out of his abundant goodneſſe hath given us the holy Scriptures, which have their authority from the Revelation which is Divine, from the holy Ghoſt. 3. That this being the purpoſe of the holy Ghoſt it is blaſphemy to ſay he would not, or could not attain unto it. And that therefore the holy Scriptures do comprehend all neceſſary ſupernatural truths. 4. That the Scripture is more properly to be called a Rule of ſupernatural truths than a Judg. B. Bramhall in his Anſwer to Militiere his Epiſtle.

In the ſecond Book I treat of God, That place Exod. 34. 6, 7. is as full a deſcription of Gods Attributes, as any in all the Scripture. The Hebrew Doctors note, that there are thirteen Attributes, and but one that ſpeaks of Judgement (that he will puniſh the ſins of Fathers upon their Children) all the other twelve are meerly, wholly mercy, and his juſtice is mentioned to invite men to lay hold on mercy. All Principles, Rules and Motions to Duty are to be found in God, Gen. 17. 1. Joel 2. 13. The Heathens extolled the knowledg of a mans ſelf, ——E Cœlo deſcendit, γνῶθι σεαυτὸν. Juvenal. Satyr.

But Chriſtians muſt chiefly ſtudy to know God, 1 Chr. 28. 9. Jer. 9. 24. Joh. 17. 3. The underſtanding of the Angels is perfected by the Contemplation of the Excellencies that are in God. We ſhall not be properly Comprehenſores in Heaven (although the Schoolmen ſometimes ſay ſo) yet we ſhall know God in a far more perfect manner then in this life, 1 Cor. 9. 12. 2 Cor. 5. 7. If God were more known, he would be more loved, feared, honoured, truſted. God is primum verum which ſatisfies the underſtanding, and Summum bonum which ſatisfies the will. Deo ſolo nos debemus frui, rebus alijs uti, We ought to enjoy God alone, and uſe the world. We are ſaid to enjoy a thing, with which we are delighted for it ſelf, to uſe that which we refer to another thing. I will conclude this with that excellent ſpeech of * Auguſtine, concerning Gods knowledg, Non enim more noſtro ille, vel quod futurum eſt, proſpicit, vel quod præſens eſt, aſpicit, vel quod præteritum eſt, reſpicit: ſed alio modo quodam à noſtrarum cogitationum conſuetudine longe alteque diverſo.

which

Aug. de civ. Dei l. 2. c. 25. Ludov. Viv. in Auguſt. loco ℞ citato.

* De civit. Dei lib. 11. cap. 21.

In the third Book I handle the Works of God. The ſerious conſidering of Gods Works is a great part of ſanctifying his Name. Beſides the natural there is a ſpiritual uſe to be made of all the creatures, Rev. 12.* 1. The Sun points to Chriſt, the Moon to the World, the Stars to the Miniſters of the Goſpel. How frequently did our Saviour take occaſion from earthly things to teach men heavenly truths.

Pſal. 136. 5.

* See D. Arrowſmith on that Text.

In the fourth Book I ſpeak of the Fall of Man, and ſo of Original and Actual ſins.

Some Divines hold that there are three parts of Original Sin:

1. The guilt of Adams ſin.
2. The privation of original righteouſneſs.
3. The corruption of nature.

Of the imputation of Adams ſinne to us, Gariſſe is a learned and pious French Miniſter hath written a large Book. He ſhews there the conſent alſo of Reformed Churches therein, but how great an agreement there hath been of Churches and Eccleſiaſtical Writers, ancient and modern in this matter, D. Andrew Rivet hath taught in a peculiar Book publiſhed upon that Argument. Every man by nature hath likewiſe loſt the Image of God, and is born empty of Grace and Righteouſneſs, and wholly corrupt, Rom. 3. 23, 24. & 5. 12. Rom. 1. 29, to the end. Eph. 2. 1. & 4. 25, to the end. & 5. 3, 4, 9. 2 Tim. 3. 2, to the 6.

See his 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, and 17. Chapters.

Some ſay we are dead, as we come out of the old Adams hand, but through the undertaking of Jeſus Chriſt all men are reſtored unto a State of Grace and Favour, and that through common grace, they may believe if they will. But all unregenerate men are ſtill under the ſtate of death, and there is no ſuch intrinſecal power in them, this man is regenerated (ſay the Arminians) and not that, becauſe he hath better improved his abilities, but the work of Regeneration is an effect of ſpecial diſcriminating grace.

Some of our Divines ſay, God hath left ſome few relicks of his Image in us ſince the Fall, to leave us without excuſe, and as a Monument of his Bounty, and in pity to humane Societies, ſome Knowledg and ſome reſtraint upon the Conſcience. Others diſlike this opinion, and ſay, That Righteouſneſs in Adam was connatural, but conſiſted not in any natural Abilities, and that theſe remainders of Gods Image muſt be of the ſame kind with what is loſt, and ſo good in Gods account, and then man ſhall not be wholly fleſh, and ſo there will be ſomething for Grace to graff upon, which the Arminians lay hold on.

Deus creavit hominem rectum, naturarum autor non utiq; vitiorum, ſed ſponte depravatus juſteque damnatur, depravatos, damnatoſque generavit. Omnes enim fuimus in illo uno, quando omnes ille unus corrupit, quia per fœminam lapſus eſt in peccatum, quæ de illo facta eſt ante peccatum. Auguſt. de civ. Dei, l. 13. c. 14.

In the fifth Book I ſpeak of Mans Recovery by Chriſt, Phil. 2. 6, to the 12. Heb. 9. 11, to the 15. Heb. 1. 3. Mark 10. 33, 34. as he had the grace of Union and Unction, ſo we through him, when we are united to him, we partake of his fulneſs, Joh. 1. 14. By the firſt Adam we loſt Gods Image, Favour and Communion with him: By the ſecond Adam Gods Image is reſtored in us, we are reconciled to God, and have acceſs to him.

1. The reaſon why none can lay any thing to the charge of Gods Elect, is, Becauſe Chriſt died for them, Rom. 8. 33, 34. if therefore Chriſt died for all,

none

none can lay any thing to the charge of a reprobate more than to the charge of Gods elect.

Doctor Twiſſe against Hord.

2. Chriſt prayed only for thoſe who either did or ſhould believe in him, and for whom he prayed, for them only he ſanctified himſelf, Joh.17.9,19. that is, offered up himſelf in Sacrifice upon the Croſſe for them.

3. If he died for all from the beginning of the world, then he died for all thoſe that already were damned.

4. Then he hath merited ſalvation for all, and ſhall they then fail of ſalvation?

In the ſixth Book I ſpeak of the Church and Antichriſt.

There is much ſpoken in theſe dayes of the admitting of Members, and of the free gathering of Churches, I would wiſh ſuch to weigh well what Mr. Baxter hath in his Chriſtian Concord, p. 34, to 41.

For the judgment of divers Reformed Divines holding the Pope to be Antichriſt, ſee Vigniers Preface to that excellent Book of his, entituled, Theatre De L'Antichriſt, and M. Prinns Canterburian Doom, p.277,278,279. if that be true which I heard from the Profeſſour of Divinity in the Univerſity out of the Pulpit. Bellarmine ſaith, That ſince that Doctrine prevailed amongſt us, that the Pope was Antichriſt, that they have been of the loſing hand: I wonder then why ſome of our Divines ſhould ſpeak and write ſo warily that way.

I might adde divers things to that I ſpeak there of the Jeſuites and Monks. The Dominicans come nearer us than the Franciſcans.

Friar Francis is highly commended by the Papiſts for three notable acts:

1. For gathering Worms out of the way.

2. For calling all manner of beaſts, as Wolves and Aſſes his Brethren.

3. For taking lice off beggars, and putting them on himſelf; yea into his own boſom. See Lewis Owens running Regiſter, his unmasking of all Popiſh Monks and Jeſuites, and alſo his Speculum Jeſuiticum.

In the ſeventh Book I ſpeak of Our Union with Chriſt, and the ſpecial Benefits by him, Adoption, Joh.1.12. Juſtification, Act.13.38,39. Sanctification, 1 Theſſ.4.1. Col.2.13. Rom.12.9, to the end. 1 Cor.13.4,5,6,7. Gal.5. 22,23,24. Eph.6.14, to 19. Phil.4.4, to 9.

Nam iſta colluvies ab aliis hæreticorum ſectis in eo differt quod non tantum certis in rebus erraverit, verum ſit immenſum quoddam ſtupendorum delirtorum mare: adeò ut vix unius Anabaptiſtæ caput reperiri poſſit, quod non ſit imbutum aliqua opinione diverſa à reliquis. Calv. Inſtruct. adverſ. Anabaptiſtas.

In the eighth of the Ordinances, where I ſhew the need of them, for the bleſt Chriſtians here, and vindicate the ſeveral Ordinances. For that of Baptiſm, Why ſhould the Priviledg of Infants under the Goſpel be ſtraighter then it was under the Law? Or actual Faith be more required in all that are to be baptized, then it was in thoſe that were to be circumciſed, when Circumciſion as well as our Baptiſm was a Sacrament of Admiſſion into the Church, and a Sign and Seal of the righteouſneſſe of Faith, Rom.4.11.

In the ninth Book I ſpeak of the Decalogue, where I acknowledg I have received much help from a Manuſcript of M. Wheatleys for the four firſt Commandments, and of M. Bals for the firſt. See M. Caudries ſecond part of the Sabbath.

In the laſt I treat of Glorification, *Mat.*25.46. 2 *Cor.*5.10.

See an excellent Sermon of M. Thomas Goodwins of this Argument, ſtiled, The Happineſſe of the Saints in Glory on Rom.8.18.

I have not only gone over the ſeveral Heads of Poſitive Divinity, but I have likewiſe handled many, if not moſt of the chief Controverſies betwixt Us and the Papiſts, the Arminians, Socinians, and alſo diſcuſſed ſeveral things about Church-government, to make it more full, and generally uſefull to ſettle men in the main Truths.

It

To the Reader.

It is reported of David Paræus, That his last labour was bestowed in polishing the body of Christian Doctrine, collected by Zachary Ursine, and that he desired not to die; till he had finished that task; but when he had concluded it, he joyfully uttered these words, Now, Lord, suffer thy servant to depart in peace, because I have done that which I desired. I have cause to blesse God, as for that good esteem which my other Labours have generally found amongst both learned and pious Christians, so for inabling me to accomplish this great Work.

Læti Compend. Hist. Univers. period. German. Art. 2. p. 536.

Some may perhaps blame me for gleaning some notions from such as I hear, as well as from the Authors I read.

To that I might say, Habes confitentem, sed non reum, I know no such guilt in it, if I do make use sometimes of some special Observations I hear from the Pulpit, though I hear often the same things from several persons. Some hold that a mans Sermon is no longer his own when he hath preacht it, and I think the ears as well as the eyes are senses of Discipline. Besides many Divines and some Rabbies (though I had but harsh language from one Divine) have acknowledged themselves beholding to me for my Labours, therefore I hope none will grudge, if I do likewise benefit my self and also others by my Collections in that kind. I pray God to guide us all in the truth, and to preserve us from Apostasie in these declining dayes.

Doctrina & sapientia percipi auribus solis potest, oculis solis non potest. Et hinc videtur natum, ut Auris Minervæ sacra esset. Ping. Symb. Epist. Ep. 38. I had this salutation from one judicious Divine, Sir, You study to make us idle.

Thy hearty Well-willer

EDWARD LEIGH.

IMPRIM-

Imprimatur

June 15th

1653. EDMUND CALAMY.

A Letter written to me by a learned Friend in the Univerſity, in the time of our late Troubles, concerning my Body of Divinity.

SIR,

I Have ſeriouſly read a good part of your Book, and am very well pleaſed both with the Matter and Method of it, and doubt not but it will be of exceeding great uſe for all that would be Proteſtants by Advice, and not by Chance; all that would examine, and be ſatisfied in the Grounds and Foundations of their Religion; indeed it will be for poore Divines (as I fear too many are like to be) rather a little Library, than a ſingle Book, ſeeing they may have in it ſo many and ſo pertinent Proofs and Quotations put orderly in a readineſſe for them.

Your faithfull Friend and Servant

T. B.

IT being deſired by William Lee Bookſeller, that having ſo much Inlarged this Impreſſion, I ſhould Publiſh and Declare, that I ſhall Adde no more for the future to this preſent Work. I am willing to teſtifie ſo much, and have hereunto Subſcribed my Name

March 1662. Edward Leigh.

PROLEGOM-

PROLEGOMENA.

Hebrews VI. I.

THe Apoſtle chides the Hebrews in the former Chapter for their ignorance and uncapableneſſe of Divine Myſteries, from verſ. 11, to the end. He tells them they were dull of hearing, and that their ignorance was affected; they might for their time and means have been teachers, and yet now they muſt be taught; and (which is ſtrange) the very principles of the word of God. Here in the beginning of this Chapter he earneſtly exhorts them to increaſe both in knowledg and obedience.

1. God takes notice of the time of mens enjoying the Goſpel.
2. He expects proficiency according to this time.
3. Men that live under the Goſpel ought not only to be inſtructed, but teach others according to that condition wherein God hath ſet them, not by way of office.
4. Such muſt be firſt inſtructed themſelves in the principles of Religion. 5. There are principles of Religion, Fundamentals, ſuch Doctrines on which all godlineſs is built, 1 Cor. 3. 12. and all ſuperſtructions muſt agree thereto. 6. There is an order and method to be obſerved in bringing men to the knowledg of the Goſpel, viz. to inſtruct them in the principles firſt. 7. Thoſe that are not inſtructed in principles are not capable of higher doctrine. 8. Ignorance in principles is a juſt ground of reproof, and a great matter of reproach to thoſe that live under the Goſpel.

Leaving] The Apoſtle alludes to men running a race, they leave one place and go on forward; we muſt leave the principles of Religion, that is, not ſtick there, but paſſe on to a greater perfection. The Apoſtle hath reference to the Schools of the Jews where he was trained up; there were two ſorts of Schollers, 1. Punies or petties. 2. Proficients, Perfectiſts. Six principles are named, as ſo many Heads and Common-places of the ancient Catechiſm; not but that there were many other neceſſary principles; yet they might be reduced to theſe:

1. Two main duties, that is, 1. The Doctrine of Repentance from dead works, that every man is dead in ſin by nature, and therefore had need to repent. 2. The Doctrine of Faith in God, in him, as manifeſted in the Word, and revealed in Chriſt.

Mark 1. 15. This takes in the right knowledg of the Law, and ſin the tranſgreſſion of it, its nature and deſert, that one muſt mourn for it, and turn from it.

2. Two means, 1. The Doctrine of Baptiſms, by which in the Plural Number he means both the Sacraments; and alſo the inward Baptiſm of Chriſt, and that outward Baptiſm of John, that is to ſay, of the Miniſter, though ſome * referre it to the ſet times of Baptiſm. 2. The Imposition or laying on of hands, that is by a Trope or borrowed ſpeech, the Miniſtry of the Church upon the which hands were laid, not the Sacrament of Confirmation, as à Lapide expounds it: So Cartwright in his Harmony. See M. Gilleſpies Miſcel. cap. 3. pag. 47, 48. and M. Cartw. Rejoynd, p. 278.

* Apoſtolus Baptiſmorum meminit, quia ad ſtatas inter veteres Baptiſmi dies alludit. Paſcha nimirum & Pentecoſtes, ubi plures ſimul baptizari conſueverunt vel quia de plurium Baptiſmo ſimpliciter loquitur. Spanhem.

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 6. 2. Sect. 11, & 12.

Unum eſt judicium irretractabile valens in perpetuum. Grot.

3. Two Benefits, Reſurrection of the dead, that the ſame numerical body ſhall ariſe again, that it dies not with the body; and eternal judgement, ſo called metonymically, becauſe in that Judgement ſentence ſhall be given concerning their eternal ſtate, either in weal or woe. Vide Grot. in Matth. 26. 45.

See Dr Gouge on this Text, and Mr Foorths Expoſit. of the Apoſt. Cat.

Not laying again the foundations] Three things are required in a foundation, 1. That it be the firſt thing in the building. 2. That it bear up all the other parts of the building. 3. That it be firm and immoveable. Simply and abſolutely in reſpect of all times, perſons, and things, Chriſt * only is the foundation upon which the ſpiritual building of the Church is raiſed.

* Dr Field of the Church, lib. 5. cap. 22. Iſa. 28. 16.

The firſt principles of heavenly Doctrine are named here a foundation, becauſe they are the firſt things which are known, before which nothing can be known, and becauſe upon the knowledge of theſe things all other parts of heavenly knowledge do depend. They muſt be ſo firmly laid and received at the firſt, as they ſhould never be queſtioned more, not that Miniſters may not Preach again of principles. Thoſe that deny Fundamentals muſt of neceſſity deſtroy Religion. Perfection is building on the old foundation. In no age ſince the Goſpel dawned in the world, were all fundamentals in Religion denied till now.

As a foundation is to the ſuperſtructure, ſo is catechizing to the ſublimer myſteries of our Religion; The laying of the foundation, is the work of a maſter-builder, 1 Cor. 3. 10.

* Quod eſt ab ipſis poſitum & prædicatum. Jun. ad Bellar. cont. 3. l. 3. c. 32.

The Apoſtles are the foundation of the Church, * Eph. 2. 20. Rev. 21. 14. in three reſpects,

1. Becauſe they were the firſt which founded Churches, and converted unbelievers to the faith.

The Prophets and Apoſtles are not fundamenta fundantia, but fundata, ſuch foundations as themſelves had a foundation, even the Lord Chriſt; the ground of a Chriſtians faith is, Thus ſaith the Lord, thus it is written.

2. Becauſe their doctrine which they received immediately from God by moſt undoubted revelation without mixture of errour or danger of being deceived, is the Rule of Faith to all after-comers.

3. Becauſe they were Heads, Guides, and Paſtors of the whole univerſal Church.

The Propoſition or Obſervation which ariſeth from theſe words thus opened, may be this,

The Obſervation.

The Principles and Foundations of Chriſtian Religion muſt be well laid.

Or thus:

Catechizing and inſtructing of the people in the Principles of Religion is a neceſſary Duty to be uſed.

The Apoſtle illuſtrates this by a compariſon, firſt, from Schools; ſecondly, from building, the foundation muſt be firſt laid.

The excellent definition of catechizing which the Apoſtle here gives, yields us two good proofs of its neceſſity.

2. It

1. It is the Doctrine of the beginning of Christ, by some rendred not unfitly for the sense, which gives beginning in Christ.

2. It is a foundation which bears up all the building (without this, preaching is to no purpose) which though it makes the least shew, yet it is of greatest use; it establisheth men, and keeps them free from wavering.

3. This course is most agreeable, 1. To Art; all Arts proceed from principles. Physicians have their principles, Lawyers their maxims, Philosophers their chief sentences. 2. To Nature, which first forms the vital parts, then the more remote. 3. It is suitable to reason. Principles are, 1. Easiest in themselves. 2. Facilitate other matters. 3. Are the most necessary Doctrines of all the rest, they bear up all the rest. 4. Are of continual and constant use; Principia sunt minima quantitate, maxima virtute.

Sermo qui rudes in Christo inchoat. Fundamenti vocabulum est metaphoricum, ab adificantibus sumptum, atque denotat illud totius structura firmamentum in imo positum, quo sustentatur adificium, quoque subducto corruit protinus, & in frusta dilabitur. Davenant. adhort. ad pacem Eccles. c. 2. Extet communis formula catechismi in usum puerorum, & si qui erunt rudiores in populo: sic ipsa veritas illis familiaris redderur, ac simul eam ipsam discent ab impostoris & corruptelis discernere, quæ sensim apud cessantes irrepere solent. Planè enim tibi persuasum esse oportet, Ecclesiam Dei catechesi carere non posse, &c. Calvinus Epist. Protectori Anglia.

See Dr. Gouge on Heb. 5. 12. Sect. 64. Reasons for the necessity of catechizing. And Mr. Fords little Treatise stiled the Necessity and Antiquity of catechizing. And Bains his Institut. Doctrinæ Christianæ, l. 1. c. 1, 2, 3, 4. And Mr. Thomas Sparke of the Necessity of Catechizing, before his Catechism; and Mr. Croston of catechizing.

4. Gods order and practice hath been still to lay principles; things might easily passe from one to another at first, they lived so long. Cain and Abels sacrificing is an evidence of catechising before the Flood; there was no Word written then, therefore it is like their Fathers taught them. It was practised by Abraham, Gen. 18. 19. the fruit of which observe in his sonne. Gen. 24. 63. and servant, Gen. 12. 26. God himself writes a Catechism for the Jews, describing a short compendium of Religion in the two Authentick Tables of the Law. Hannah delivered Samuel to Eli his Instructor so soon as he was weaned. Jehoiada taught the young King Jehoash. David and Bathsheba practised it, 2 Chron. 28. 8, 9. Psalm 34. 11. Prov. 4. 4. & 31. 1. and Salomon himself seems to give that precept out of the experience of his own most excellent education, Teach a childe the trade of his way, and when he is old he shall not depart from it; though himself scarce did so; and Eccles. 12. 23. he draws all which he had said in his whole Book to two heads, Fear God and keep his Commandments. Christ allowed of Hosannah sung by children. He begins with regeneration to Nicodemus, and he drew the whole Law into two heads, Matth. 22. 37. John and Christ preacht Faith and Repentance, and the Apostles [a] after them. Theophilus was catechized, Luke 1. 4. Apollos, Act. 18. 23. Timothy, 1 Tim. 3. 15. 2 Tim. 2. 2. The Apostle Paul 2 Tim. 1. 13. (of which see Mr. Case in his Introduction to the Morning Exercise at Giles in the Fields, and his conclusion,) commends to Timothies custody a pattern of wholesome Doctrine, which he cals a [b] A form of Doctrine, Rom. 6. 17. and the Analogy

1 Sam. 1. 25.

Prov. 22. 6. See Prov. 6. 22. Prov. 31. 26. which is meant chiefly of instructing her family. Matth. 22. 37. Matth. 3. 8. & 4. 17. Mark 1. 15.

[a] Act. 2. 5, 10, & 13. cap. and in their Epistles.

[b] Τύπος διδαχῆς, a word borrowed from the making of an impression by a stamp or seal.

Joh. 21. 15. Act. 20. 20. It is good to have the principles of the doctrines of faith and rules of life drawn to brief heads. It is usefull to draw Arts and Sciences plentifully laid out, into compendious heads, and some few general rules and principles. Luther profest he was still Discipulus Catechismi, that he studied the principles.

of Faith, Rom. 12.6. that is, certain plain rules, unto which all others must hold proportion.

The Magdeburgenses observe from Heb. 6. and other places, that there was Catechismus ab Apostolis traditus, that the Apostle drew the Doctrine of the Gospel into short heads for the instructing of the children of the Church. See Dr. Gouge on Heb. 5. v. 12. Sect. 64.

By having a model of Christianity,

1. A Christian comes to know where his work lies.

2. This is a great help to growth in grace, 2 Pet. 1. 5.

3. It is the way to become a wise, discerning Christian, Heb. 5. two last verses.

4. Without this, one cannot answer the end of his calling, Col. 1. 10.

5. Without this, one can never attain to the more excellent things in Christianity, in point of grace and comfort, Phil. 1. 9.

This Duty principally belongs to Ministers, their Office is set down under the name of catechizing, Let him which is catechized make him that catechizeth partaker, Gal. 6. 6. Ministers must plant and beget as well as increase and build up, feed the Lambs as well as the Sheep; they are compared to Nurses, wise Stewards, skilfull Builders; it must be performed by Housholders also, Ephes. 6. 4. God chargeth Parents to perform this Duty, Deut. 6. 6, 7. Rehearse them continually, whet them upon thy children, often go over the same thing, as a knife doth the whetstone. They are bound to bring up their children in the nurture and information of the Lord; Children were to be taught the meaning of the Passeover, Exod. 12. 16. Masters of Families also must instruct their servants which are ungrounded, as children. Christ instructed his Apostles, he taught them how to pray, he being the Master of the Family, and they his Family, as appeareth, because he did eat the Passeover together with them; and the Law appoints that every Family should celebrate that Feast together. The reason why God specifieth not this point in the Masters duty, is, because if it be performed by the Father, it shall be needlesse, seeing it is done to the Masters hand; but if the Father neglect it, surely the Master which succeeds in the Fathers room, and hath his Authority, must see it done. For as a Father in Israel, Gen. 17. 12, 13. was bound to see his own sonne circumcised, so he was bound to see his servant circumcised; and if to circumcise him, sure he must as well make him as his childe to know what Circumcision meaned. What Christ did as a Master of a Family, that must every Master of a family do, seeing we must be followers of Christ every one in his place; therefore every one must instruct his ignorant servants in the truths of Religion.

Psal. 78. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 5. The practice of this duty is represented in the whole Book of the Proverbs.

Erudiebantur pueri in veteri Testamento domi à parentibus, & in scholis à Prophetis, de præcipuis Doctrinæ propheticæ capitibus: nempe de Deo, de Lege, de promissione Evangelij, de usu sacramentorum & sacrificiorum, quod essent typi venturi Messiæ & beneficiorum ejus. Paræi Proleg. in Corpus Doct. Christ. Ursin. Omnis Christi actio Christiani instructio.

The Jews did use catechizing; Cyprian saith, Optatus exercised it at Carthage, and Origen at Alexandria; St. Cyrill, Gregory Nyssen, were Catechists. The eminent Fathers and Paul himself were Catechists in their respective times. See L' Estrange of the Liturgy, chap. 9. Clemens Alexandrinus had his Pædagogus, Lactantius and Calvin their Institutions, Athanasius his Synopsis, Augustine his Enchiridion, his Books De Doctrinâ Christianâ, and De Catechizandis rudibus.

Dr Reynolds called Aquinas his Sums, that absolute Body of Divinity. Dr Twisse Doubting conscience resolv. Prov. 22. 6.

Some

Some think it were requisite to have a Catechist in every great Parish, since all the burden now lies on the Minister, who is only able to Preach unto them.

Catechizing is Institutio viva voce, a kind of familiar conference. The Hebrew verb Chanach signifieth to instruct or train up even from childehood; and to initiate or dedicate, from which word holy Henoch [c] had his name, importing nurture in the fear of God. The Greek word χατηχέω signifieth to sound or re-sound as by an Eccho, and is applied even by Heathen Writers unto that kind of teaching which is by word of mouth, sounding in the ear of him that is taught, and especially unto the teaching of the first rudiments of any Science whatsoever. It signifieth any kind of vocal instruction, Acts 21.21, 24. viz. that whereby the principles of Christian Doctrine are made known unto the hearers, as *Luk.*1.4. instructed or catechized, *Gal.*6.6. taught or catechized. See *Act.*18.25. *Rom.*2.18, 1 *Cor.*14.19.

[c] Chanoc. Gen. 5.18. So the Hebrews interpret that Gen. 14.14. his trained or instructed servants, those which he taught in piety; the word comes from Chanach. Κατήχησις vox Græca est, quam Latina Ecclesia pro suâ capit usurpare. Martinius. Eusebius saith, one was set apart on purpose for this office in the Primitive Church, called the Catechist. Hinc Catechumeni dicebantur qui Catechismum discebant, Catechistæ qui Catechismum docebant. Dieterieus.

Catechizing what it is.

Catechizing is a plain and easie instructing of the ignorant in the grounds of Religion, or concerning the fundamental Principles, familiarly by Questions and Answers, and a spiritual applying the same for practice.

Catechesis est elementaris institutio Christiana Religionis vivâ voce tradita, & à discentibus repetita. Altingius. Catechesis Christianæ religionis est, brevis, prospicua, & ad captum rudiorum accomodata doctrina Christianæ è scriptis Propheticis & Apostolicis collecta, & in certas quæstiones ac responsiones digesta explicatio & recitatio. Paræi Prolegom. in Corpus Doctrinæ Christianæ. Ursin.

Whatever the catechizing in the Primitive Church was in private, for the publick it seems not to have been Dialogue-wise [d] by Question and Answer, but in a continued speech, with much plainnesse and familiarnesse.

[d] Mr Pemble.

Some say the form or method of instructing the ignorant by set Questions and Answers, is not unquestionably the best, and most to edification. See *Beams of Former Light, c.*5. *Sect.*5.

Catechizing differs from Preaching; Preaching is the dilating of one member of Religion into a just Treatise; Catechizing is a contracting of the whole into a summe; Preaching is to all sorts, catechizing to the young and rude. See Dr. Gouge on *Heb.*5.12. *Sect.*64.

Mr Greenham. At Sermons and Prayers, men may sleep or wander, but when one is asked a Question, he must discover what he is. Herberts Remains, Chap. 21.

Catechizing should be, 1. Plain; that none might excuse themselves; that the most illiterate might not say at the day of judgment, O Lord, thy wayes were too hard for us. 2. That the manner of the teaching might be suitable to the hearers. 3. That no Governours might pretend the difficulty of it.

It is to be performed either by the Minister in publick, or the Governours in private, or some able body in their place.

2. Instructing, which implieth that original ignorance and blindnes we were born with.

3. It is such an instructing which is by way of distilling things in a familiar manner; our Saviour did not give the people whole Loaves, but distributed them by pieces.

4. Such

Verba Scripturæ non ſunt verba legenda, ſed vivenda, ſaid Luther.

4. Such an inſtructing as acquaints them with the meaning of things, and ſpiritually applies the ſame for practice. It is not enough to ſay the Creed and Lords Prayer, but to underſtand the ſenſe, and apply it to practice.

5. An inſtruction by way of Queſtion and Anſwer, which is thereby made more plain and familiar.

The exerciſe of catechizing hath been proved to be moſt ancient, and very neceſſary and uſefull; and therefore it ſhould be alwayes continued in the Church.

Firſt, Becauſe there will alwayes be found Babes which ſtand in need of Milk, not being able to bear ſtrong meat.

Secondly, Becauſe as no building can ſtand without a foundation, and none can be expert in an Art except he learn the principles thereof: ſo none can have ſound knowledg in Divinity, except he be trained up in the grounds thereof.

The beſt way to perform this exerciſe, is

1. By ſhort Queſtions and Anſwers, the Miniſter demanding the Queſtion, the people anſwering.

2. It muſt be done purely, 2 *Cor.*2.4.

3. Plainly, 2 *Cor.*3.2. *Heb.*5.11.

4. Soundly, Titus 2.7.

5. Orderly.

6. Cheerfully and lovingly, 2 *Tim.*2.24. praiſing the forward, encouraging the willing, patiently bearing with all, admoniſhing ſuch as are unruly. Piſcators Aphoriſmes with his Exegeſis, and Ameſius his Chriſtiana Catecheſios Sciagraphia are uſefull this way, and Nowels Catechiſm in Latine, in Engliſh there are B. Ushers, M. Bains, M. Cartwrights, M. Balls, and M. Crooks Guide, and now the Aſſemblies. One ſpeaks of five hundred ſeveral Catechiſmes extant. Some have Compoſed Catechiſms, wherein the Anſwers were the very words of Scriptures. I cannot but commend that ſingular and invaluable, though low prized book, the Aſſemblies Confeſſion of Faith and larger Catechiſm, for in the Margin thereof are ſet down the choiceſt places of Scripture, for proof of the ſeverall truths therein ſpecified. Mr. Whites Power of Godlineſs, *l.*4.*c.*2.

Summam Chriſtiana fidei brevi libello complexus eſt Geneva Joan. Calvinus, quam Itali, Galli, Belga, Scoti, &c. publicè in Eccleſiis ſuis interpretantur. Eandem, ſententiâ ubique ſervatâ, fuſius apud Anglos & luculentius expreſſit vir non vulgari doctrinâ & facundiâ præditus Alexander Noellus. Ad. Hamilton Apoſtata. Smeton Orthodox. Reſponſ.

Some much eſteem of B. Andrews his, though Dr. Heylin in his extraneus vapulans, c. 4. ſaith, it was neither of his writing, nor approved of by him. Hottinger for the Jews in his Jus Hebræorum much commends the Catechiſm of R. Levi, both becauſe it was commended to him by Conſtantine l' Empereur, and alſo becauſe (ſaith he) Nemo nobis præceptorum examen dederit tantâ brevitate accuratius.

The Book ſtiled Beams of Former Light, commends catechizing in the Preface.

1. From the ſubject matter, it is converſant about ſuch truths, as are neceſſary to ſalvation.

2. From the manner, which is ſo to inſtruct, as to require a perſonal account of what is underſtood and remembred by them that are taught, yet in the Book, He diſlikes an impoſing upon Miniſters one Catechiſm to be held to. He commends the Aſſemblies ſhorter Catechiſm for its comprehenſiveneſſe and exactneſſe of order and expreſſion, yet would not have it impoſed, and ch. 5. he ſome way excepts againſt it. Catechizing is uſefull, full, and the want of it prejudicial to the people, ſaith he in his Preface, and yet the whole Book oppoſeth the urging or impoſing of any Catechiſm, (even that of the Aſſemblies) and ſo of a Liturgy likewiſe, (the Lords Prayer it ſelf) by the Magiſtrate, ſo as to have a ſtated uſe. Magiſtrates ſhould be wary, and not over-rigorous in impoſing ſuch things, yet it will ſcarce be prudent to leave it to every Miniſters diſcretion, to catechize them which way they ſhall think fitteſt. If he be an Anabaptiſt, he ſhall have then liberty to inform his auditory of the unlawfullneſſe of Pœdobaptiſm; his great Argument is in the 9th Chapter, that Independency will be overthrown by it.

Here is a fault that both teachers and hearers muſt ſhare between them; Miniſters do not teach principles ſufficiently, happy is that man which can ſay with Paul, I have kept back nothing that was profitable. Conſectaries of Reproof.

Thoſe that know the truth, have need to be admoniſhed and further inſtructed, 1 *Joh.*2.21. *Rom.*15.14,15. 2 *Pet.*1.12,13.

Reaſons.

1. That they may increaſe in the knowledge and love of it, Eſay 11.9. *Dan.*11.4. *Hoſ.*6.3.

2. That they may practice thoſe truths they know.

3. That they may be eſtabliſhed in the truth, *Rom.*1.9. *Col.*2.17. 1 Theſſ. 3.2. 1 *Pet.*5.10.

2. Thoſe are too blame which will not be taught, children and ſervants which are ſtubborn and unwilling to be catechized; ſome ſay they are too old to learn; but are they too old to repent and be ſaved? Some ſay, they are paſt principles, they are not now to be grounded; but we may ſay with the Apoſtle, Whereas they ought to be teachers, they had need themſelves to be taught. Such people rebell againſt their Miniſter or Maſter, whoſe duty is to teach them, and God who commands it.

Let men be exhorted to practice this duty, Miniſters, Maſters, Parents; Schoolmaſters teach the A, B, C, and the Grammer, Suffer little children to come unto me. See the Exhortation to catechizing, by the Provincial Aſſembly at London, and the Neceſſity and Antiquity of catechizing: By Mr. Ford. 2. Of Exhortation.

Conſider,

1. Thou broughtſt thy children into the world blinde and deformed. See Gen.6.15. and 8. 21.

2. Thou canſt not elſe have comfort in thy children or ſervants; many are croſt in their family for want of this; and many at the gallows will cry out, If they had lived where they had been inſtructed, they had never died a dogs death. Greenham ſaith; Thy children ſhall follow thee, up and down in hell, and cry againſt thee for not teaching them. He that will not provide for his family (ſaith Paul) is worſe then an Infidel; and he that will not teach them is worſe than a Beaſt. The old Nightingale [f] teacheth the young to ſing, and the old Eagle her young ones to flie. Children ill brought up were devoured by Bears, to teach Parents [g], that ſince they have done leſſe than Bears, who ſhape their Whelps by much licking and ſmoothing them (though Voſſius * and Dr. Brown [h] deny this) they therefore by Bears were bereft of them. It is good therefore to ſeaſon

Young people have great temptations, 2 Tim.2.22. Their ſouls are precious.

[f] Ariſt. de hiſt. animal.l.6.c.6.

[g] Cauſſins Holy Court, eighth reaſon of his firſt book.

* De Orig. & progreſſ. Idol. l. 3. c. 54

[h] *Lib.*3. *c.*6. of his Enquiries. Prov. 22. 6. & 31. 1.

season our children [i] with wholesome truths betime; a vessel will long keep the savour of that with which it is at first seasoned, and the Devil will begin betime to sow his seed. Master Bolton upon his death-bed spake unto his Children thus, I do believe (saith he) there is never a one of you will dare to meet me at the Tribunall of Christ in an unregenerate condition.

[i] Non minus placet Deo Hosanna puerorum, quam Hallelujah virorum. The Holy Ghost hath composed Psalms according to the order of the Hebrew Alphabet (as 25, 34, 37, 119.) that Parents might teach their children the first elements of Religion as well as Learning. See Mr Gataker on Psal. 34. 11. & Menoch. de Rep. Heb. lib. 3. cap. 3. In octonariis prolixioris omnium Psalmi, ad singulorum versuum initia recurrentes eadem litera, octonariis ipsis per ordinem alphabeti dispositis, sunt locali memoriæ ad sententias retinendas. Alphabetariis igitur, ut ita dicam, mysteriorum Christi, sic minutatim particulas rerum dispensari convenientissimum est. Guil. Rivet. vindic. Evangel. parte secunda, cap. 8.

We have discharged our duty, our prayers and instructions may be as seed sown, and our reward shall not be only in Heaven, but in the doing of our duty, Psal. 19. 11.

It will be a great comfort to thee and benefit to them when they are instructed in the points of Religion; If thy children dye, yet thou mayest have great hope of them, when thou hast acquainted them with the principal grounds of Religion. The Papists in the Preface to the Catechism of the Councel of Trent, confess that all the ground we have got of them is by catechizing; Infinitos libellos conscripserunt, qui cum pietatis speciem præ se ferrent, incredibile est, quàm facilè incautos simplicium animos receperint. And let us look that we lose not our ground again for want of it. Julian himself could not devise a readier means to banish [k] Christian Religion, then by pulling down the Schools and places of educating children. Egesippus saith, That by virtue of catechizing there was never a Kingdom but received alteration in their Heathenish Religion, within forty years after Christs passion. See Mr. Hales his Letters from the Synod of Dort, p. 8, 9, 12, 13. The great advantage of such forms of Catechistical Doctrine, is that thereby a Minister of the Gospel may acquaint his people with more necessary and saving truths in a few moneths, than he can well Preach over in many years. Mr. Case on 2 Tim. 1. 13.

[k] Euseb. Eccles. hist. l. 10. c. 32.

The Germanes much used Ursins Catechism, which consisting of fifty two Questions, every Lords day one Question was explained.

See Mr Pembles Sermon of ignorance. Luke 1. 5.

All ignorant persons though they be grown in years must be willing to be instructed and catechized.

Ignorance in Principles is a great sin, See Eph. 4. 17. Act. ult. 27. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. 1 Cor. 15. 34.

1. The Lord appointed a Sacrifice for ignorance, Heb. 9. 7.

2. He requires repentance for it.

3. It is the original of all the errours in a mans life, both in doctrine and worship, 1 Cor. 15. 34. Job. 4. 22. such will be a prey to false teachers, Col. 2. 8.

4. The ground of all instability in the wayes of God, Ephes. 4. 14, 15. and of that non-proficiency that is in men, the way to damnation, Acts 4. 12.

Some make a difference between ignoratio and ignorantia, it is hard to do this in English, except the word unknowingnesse may be used. See Dr. Gouge on Heb. 3. v. 10. Sect. 111, 112.

Theophilus a Noble-man and of ripe years was catechized, as the Greek word shews; ignorance bringeth men to the very pit and gulph of destruction ction, *Hoſ.*4.7. and *v.*14. 1 *Pet.*3.15. Chriſtians ſhould be ready to give an anſwer to every man which doth ask them a reaſon [1] of the hope which is in them; the foundation is that which is firſt and ſureſt laid, and hath an influence into all the building.

Jer.10.25. There is generally a great ignorance of Chriſt.

1. Few men ſeek after the knowledg of Chriſt, John 4.10. 2. Few believe in him, becauſe they know him not, John 12.38. 3. Men are eſtranged from him in their converſation, *Epheſ.*4.18. 4. They go on in their former luſts, 1 *Pet.*1.14. Neſcientia dicit ſimplicem ſcientiæ negationem, hac in Angelis eſſe poteſt, ignorantia importat ſcientiæ privationem, dum ſcilicet alicui deeſt ſcientia eorum quæ aptus natus eſt ſcire. Aquin. 1a, 2æ *Qu.*76. *Art.*2. Vide plura ibid. [1] Heb.5.13. One being examined, affirmed blindly, that none had died or ſhould die for him. Another, That the Sunne ſhining in the firmament was the Sonne of God that died for him. The Muſcovites being aſked eaſie Queſtions, will reply, that they could not give an anſwer unto it themſelves, but God and their great Duke knew all things.

Men ſhould do all upon trial and ſolid conviction, 1 *Theſ.*5.21. 1 *Joh.*4.1. The Papiſts would have the people take things upon truſt; they ſay, thoſe places concern the Doctors of the Church, not the people; but compare the 20, and 21. verſ. in the Theſſalonians, and 1. verſ. with 6. in John, and we ſhall ſee the contrary.

This trial is profitable:

Firſt, Becauſe truth then will have a greater force on the conſcience.

Secondly, This is the ground of conſtancy, 2 *Pet.*3.17.

Thirdly, Hereby we ſhall be able to maintain the truth, Matthew 11. 19.

The Scriptures are fundamentum quo, the fundamental writings which declare the ſalvation of Chriſtians, John 5.37. Chriſt fundamentum quod, the fundamental meanes and cauſe which hath purchaſed and doth give it, John 4.42. The [m] perſon we muſt build on is Chriſt, 1 Cor. 3. 11. He is called the foundation of foundations, Iſa.28. The doctrinal foundation is the written Word of God, which is not only the object and matter of our faith, but the rule and reaſon of it. Hold Chriſt as your Rock, build on him; the Scripture as your rule and the reaſon of your believing; this is general, there are ſome particulars.

[m] The Papiſts make the Pope their perſonal foundation.

Firſt, Some things are ſimply neceſſary; It were a notable worke for one to determine this, how much knowledge were required of all.

See Dr Field of the Church, *l.*3.*c.*4. and Mr Rous his catholick Charity, *ch.*10,11. Some diſlike the beginning of the Athanaſian Creed, Whoſoever will be ſaved, &c. Upon pain of damnation thou art bound to know the Articles of thy Faith, to know God in Chriſt, and the holy Catholick Church by the word of God written. The ten Commandments, to know what works thou ſhouldſt do, and what to leave undone. Chriſts prayer, which is an abridgment, epitome or compendious collection of all the Pſalms and prayers written in the holy Scripture. In which thou prayeſt for the remiſſion of ſinne, as well for thy ſelf, as for all others, deſireſt the grace of the holy Ghoſt to preſerve thee in vertue, and all others, giveſt thanks for the goodneſſe of God towards thee and all others. He that knoweth leſſe than this cannot be ſaved, and he that knows no more than this, if he follow his knowledge cannot be damned. B. Hooper on the Command. Fundamentalem Articulum habendum ſentio, qui ex voluntate Dei revelantis ad ſalutem & æternam beatitudinem conſequendam eſt adeò ſcitu & creditu neceſſarius ut ex illius ignoratione, ac multo magis oppugnatione, æterna vita amittenda manifeſtum periculum incurratur. Davenant. de pace Eccleſiaſtica. About fundamental points there may ſometimes ariſe ſuch diſputes as are no way fundamental. For inſtance, that God is one in Eſſence, and three in Perſons, diſtinguiſhed one from another: That the Son is begotten of the Father; That the holy Ghoſt is the Spirit of both Father and Son; That theſe three Perſons are coeternal and coequal: All theſe are reckoned in the number of Fundamentals. But thoſe School niceties touching the manner of the Sons generation, and the proceſſion of the holy Ghoſt, are not likewiſe fundamental and of equal neceſſity with the former. B. Daven. opin. of the fundam. points of Relig. Some things are neceſſary to be believed when they are known, only becauſe they are revealed, otherwiſe conducing little, or it may be nothing to ſalvation. Some other things are neceſſary to be believed, not only becauſe they are revealed, but becauſe belief of them is appointed by God a neceſſary means of ſalvation. Theſe are, thoſe are not eſſentials or fundamentals of ſaving faith. B. Bramhals Replicat. to the Biſhop of Chalcedon, ch.9.

Secondly, Not abſolutely neceſſary. Some make the foundation too

narrow, ſome again too wide; ſome ſay, that if a man mean well, and go on according to the light he hath, though he know not Chriſt, he ſhall be ſaved: Others ſay, that all are bound to know diſtinctly the Articles of the Creed.

Certa ſemper ſunt in paucis, ſaith Tertullian. Certain and undoubted truths are not many, and they are ſuch as may be delivered in a few words. In abſoluto ac facili ſtat æternitas. Hilary.

Fundamental truths are all ſuch points of Doctrine which are ſo plainly delivered in Scripture, that whoſoever doth not know or follow them ſhall be damned; but he that doth know and follow theſe (though erring in other things) ſhall be ſaved.

All the principles of Religion are plain and eaſie, delivered clearly in

1. Scripture, they are to be a Rule to judge of other Doctrines.

2. They are very few (ſay ſome) reduced to two heads, by John Baptiſt, Mark 1.15. and by Paul, 2 Tim. 1.13.

3. In all principles neceſſary to ſalvation, there hath been agreement among all the Churches of Chriſt, Eph. 4.5. though they may differ in ſuperſtructures. Quod ubique, quod ſemper, quod ab omnibus creditur Catholicum eſt. Vincent. Lyrin.

Mr Perkins reduceth the Fundamentals to ſix Principles.

Piſcator alſo in his Prolegomena to his Expoſitio capitum Catecheſeos Religionis Chriſtianæ, makes ſix Heads of Catechiſm, The Apoſtles Creed, the Decalogue, the Inſtitution of Baptiſm, the Inſtitution of the Lords Supper, the Lords Prayer, the Power of the Keys.

Mr Dickſon in his Therapeutica Sacra, l. 1. c. 9. makes ſeven Articles or Heads of Doctrine.

Quemadmodum flumen illud, quod Paradiſum irrigavit; ſic Eccleſia Doctrina in quatuor capita dividitur: nempe Symbolum Apoſtolicum Decalogum, orationem Dominicam & Sacramenta. Clavis Fidei per Doctorem Ellis.

It is the maſterpiece of all the Divines of Chriſtendome, to ſay, what is Fundamental in Chriſtianity, and what is not. M. Thorndikes Principles of Chriſtian Truth, chap. 2. See more there.

Theſe Fundamentals (ſaid a Reverend Divine now with God) are twelve; three concerning God, three concerning Man; three concerning the Redeemer; three concerning the means of attaining good by this Redeemer.

Concerning God.

1. There is one God, which is an Infinite, Perfect, and Spiritual Eſſence.

That the Doctrine of the Trinity is a fundamental and neceſſary to ſalvation. Vide Voet. Theſ. p. 471, &c.

2. This one God is diſtinguiſhed into three Perſons or manners of ſubſiſtence after an incomprehenſible way, which we believe, but cannot perfectly underſtand. The Father begetting, the Son begotten, and the holy Ghoſt proceeding.

3. This one God, the Father, Son and holy Ghoſt, is the Maker, Preſerver and Governour of all things, by his Wiſdom, Power, Juſtice, Providence.

Concerning Man.

1. That he was made by God of a viſible body, and an immortal and ſpiritual ſoul, both ſo perfect and good in their kinds, that he was perfectly able to have attained eternal life for himſelf, which was provided as a reward of his obedience.

2. That

2. That being thus made he yeelded to the temptations of the Devil, and did voluntarily ſin againſt God in eating of the Tree forbidden, and ſo became a child of wrath and heir of curſing, an enemy to God, and ſlave to the Devil, utterly unable to eſcape eternal death, which was provided as a recompence of his diſobedience.

3. That he doth propagate this his ſinfulneſſe and miſery to all his poſterity.

Concerning Chriſt.

1. That he is perfect God, and perfect Man, the ſecond Perſon in the Trinity, who took the Nature of man from the Virgin Mary, and united it to himſelf in one perſonal Subſiſtence, by an incomprehenſible Union.

2. That in mans Nature he did die and ſuffer in his Life and Death, ſufficient to ſatisfie Gods Juſtice, which man had offended, and to deſerve for mankind Remiſſion of ſins, and Life everlaſting; and that in the ſame Nature he Roſe again from the Dead, and ſhall alſo Raiſe up all men to receive Judgement from him at the laſt Day, according to their Deeds.

3. That he is the onely ſufficient and perfect Redeemer, and no other merit muſt be added unto this, either in whole or part.

Laſtly, Concerning the Means of applying the Redeemer, they are three:

1. That all men ſhall not be ſaved by Chriſt, but onely thoſe that are brought to ſuch a ſight and feeling of their own ſinfulneſſe and miſery, that with ſorrow of heart they do bewail their ſinnes, and renouncing all merits of their own, or any creature, caſt themſelves upon the mercies of God, and the onely merits of Jeſus Chriſt, which to do is to repent and believe, and in this hope live holily all the remainder of their life.

2. That no man is able thus to ſee his ſins by his own power, renounce himſelf, and reſt upon Chriſt, but God muſt work it in whom he pleaſeth by the cooperation of his Spirit regenerating and renewing them.

3. That for the working of this Faith and Repentance, and direction of them in a holy life, he hath left in writing by the Prophets and Apoſtles infallibly guided to all truth by his Spirit, all things neceſſary to be done or believed to ſalvation, and hath continued theſe writings to his people in all ages.

Mr Warre in his learned Sermon on Rom. 14.19. gives ſix characters to diſcover Fundamentals. He ſaith there, The denial of Doctrinal Fundamentals, infers the immediate, certain and utter ruine of practical Fundimentals. Paul gives us an inſtance 1 Cor. 15. in the Article of the Reſurrection; upon the denial of that one Article, ſee what follows, Our Preaching is in vain, your Faith is vain, your Hope is vain, your Repentance is vain, your Obedience to Chriſt, and Suffering for Chriſt, is all in vain.

Obſerve thoſe places, Acts 15.11. 1 Tim. 1.15. Let a man hold this, that Articuli cognitu & creditu neceſſarij ad ſalutem, Such Articles as are neceſſary to know and believe to ſalvation, are not ſuch truths as are meerly ſpeculative, but ſuch only as have a neceſſary influence upon practice, and not all thoſe neither, but ſuch as have neceſſary influence upon the act and function of Chriſtian life. Principia Theologica, or Fundamentalia dogmata & fundamenta ſalutis, are not the ſame, but differ formally, though ſome of them may be materially coincident. Mr Mede in a Letter to Mr Hartlib.

there was nothing but death in the world till Christ came, and that he is come to save sinners, John 17.3.

As there are in points of faith, Fundamental Articles, so there are in Secondly, There are practical places, 1 *Cor.*6.9. *Tit.*3.8. Let us

1. See our selves dead without Christ, and wholly trust in him.
2. Let us be exemplary in our lives and conversations.

points of practice, Fundamental Duties. Dr Reynolds on Hosea 14.2,3.

There are other Fundamentals which are only comparatively necessary; that is expected from one man which is not expected from another; and more from those that live in the Church. Have these six Principles of the Apostle not only in your heads, but hearts.

The foundations of Religion must First, Be held with great certainty.

1. That a man is dead in himself.
2. That his remedy lies out of himself.
3. Know the Doctrine of the Sacraments.
4. The Word of God.
5. Have some apprehension of the life to come, 1. That there is a passage from death to life. 2. That there is a fixed and irrevokable estate after this life.

1. Speculative foundations, John 17.3. We must hold one God in three Persons, Christ the Mediator.

6. Hold the Doctrine of Faith so, that Christ may live in you, and you be delivered up into that forme of Doctrine, lay hold on life eternal.

2. Practical, John 16.8. We must be convinced of the sinne of Nature, the righteousnesse of Christ, and the necessity of a holy life, and suspect those opinions, which advance Nature, depresse Christ, decry good works. Secondly, We must be earnest about the particular explication of these truths, 1 *Cor.*5.6. Errour in matter of Justification is dangerous.

He that holdeth fast the Essentials of Religion by a practical belief, shall be saved by it, though he hold any opinions which consequentially subvert the truth, and doth not understand that they do subvert it. The Lutherans maintain, That Christ hath a true Humane Nature, and yet some of them say, That it is every where. Though this be contrary to the former by consequence, yet I am bound to judge that they take Christ to be true man still, because indeed they do so, not seeing the contradiction. M. Baxters True Catholick.

Secondly, There are some particular principles. There is a natural light and supernatural. The light of Nature teacheth some principles: That, you must do as you would be done by, that no man hates his own flesh, that one must provide for his family, that there is a God, and one God, that he is to be honoured and reverenced above all.

2. Supernatural, Let all our actions be done, 1. In Love. 2. In Humility. 3. In Faith. 4. In God. This the Gospel teacheth.

Corollaries. Shew your selves Christians in power; go beyond the Heathen in practising the good rules of Nature.

1. Be carefull to make a wise choice of principles; one false principle admitted, will let in many errours, and erroneous principles will lead men into erroneous practices.

2. Labour to act your principles, if you captivate the light, God will put it out.

3. Be sure you work according to your principles; we pity another in an errour when he follows his principles.

Here

PROLEGOMENA.

Here is an Apology for those Teachers which tread in Pauls steps, are carefull to lay the foundation well. It was the Observation of our most judicious King JAMES, That the cause why so many fell to Popery, and other errors, was their ungroundedness in points of Catechism.

How many wanton opinions are broached in these dayes? I wish I might not justly call them Fundamentall [n] errours. Some deny the Scriptures, some the Divinity of Christ, some the Immortality of the Soul.

[n] Hæresis est pertinax defensio erroris in fide opinionem aliquam pugnantem cum fundamento ejus ponentis. Voet. Hæreticus non est, nisi qui in verbum fidei peccat. Luther. in Epist. Galat. c. 1. v. 8. Hæreticum tota Ecclesia Christiana inde ab initio in hunc usque diem vocavit eum, qui hæresiarcham aliquem sequutus, negat doctrinam aliquam fundamentalem & ad salutem necessariam, inter Christianos controversam. Vedel. de Arcan. Armin. l. 1. cap. 1. Vide plura ibid. There are damnable heresies, 2 Pet. 2. 1. and errours that are capital, Not holding the head, Col. 2. 19. and such as destroy the faith, 2 Tim. 2. 18. Digniores sunt hujus generis scriptiones, quæ Vulcano tradantur: quam quæ à viris pijs & bonis legantur, aut ab eruditis refutentur. Quid enim agas cum negantibus prima fidei principia? Cum rejicientibus omnia Ecclesiæ symbola? Cum omnia Oecumenica Concilia conspuentibus? Cum denique omnes in universum Patres totámque Ecclesiam Catholicam, tanquam Antichristi mancipia superbè damnantibus. Zanch. Epist. ad Sturmium.

Errours are either [o] Contra, against the foundation, which subvert the foundation, as that of the Papists who deny the all-sufficiency of Christs once suffering.

2. Circa about the foundation, which pervert the foundation, as the Lutherans opinion of the ubiquity of Christs body.

3. Citra meerly without; these divert the foundation, as in the controversies of Church-Goverument, whether it be social or solitary; this strikes not at the foundation. Laurentius saith, the Apostle 1 Cor. 3. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. speaks not of heretical Teachers, and those which erre in Fundamentals, but of those which erre in lighter matters, because he saith of both, they build upon one and the same Foundation, Christ. See M. Burgess of Justific. p. 80.

[o] Vide Alingii loc. com. part. 2. pag. 262. & Zanch. Misc. de Magist. Non omnis error est hæresis, sed illa tantum quæ est contra fundamentum aut in fundamento fidei, & pertinaciter defenditur. Voet. Some errours do not touch the foundation, others do concutere, and others do evertere. We hold the Lutherans to be true Churches, agreeing with us in fundamental points of faith, and likewise in being free from Idolatry; for albeit they have Images in their Churches, which we conceive to be a very dangerous thing, yet they do not worship them; and although they hold real presence in the Sacrament, yet they do not adore it. Dr Twiss in his doubting conscience resolved. My Lord Faulkland in his Reply to him that answered him about the Roman Infallibility, pag. 220, to 231. seems to hold the negative.

We should contend for a known Fundamental necessary truth, Jude vers. 3. The common faith; not every opinion entertained on probable ground.

It is a great Question in Divinity,

An Magistratui Christiano liceat capitales pœnas de Hæreticis sumere? Whether Hereticks are to be punished by the Christian Magistrate with death?

The Papists say, Hæretici qua Hæretici comburendi, That Hereticks for Heresie sake, though they do not trouble the State, ought to be put to death. Bellar. Tom. 2. l. 3. c. 21. T. Aquin. part. 2. Quæst. undecima, Articulo tertio. Alfonsus De Castro De Justa hæreticorum Punitione, l. 2. c. 12.

Luther doth not approve of the capitall punishment of Hereticks, especially for the pernicious sequell of it among the Papists against the Protestants. He thinks it better that they be banished. The present Lutherans hold the same almost concerning that Question. Meisner ner P doth distinguish between Hæreticus simplex, and Hæreticus seditiosus ac blasphemus; these last he saith may be punished with capital punishments.

Vide Gerhard. loc. commun. de Magistratu.

P Part. 3. Philos. Sob. Sect. 2. Quæst. 6.

The Socinians (being themselves the worst of Hereticks) would have no outward forcible restraining of any errour, though never so grosse and pernicious.

You must not look (say the Socinians) into the Old Testament for a rule of proceeding against false Prophets and Seducers: Nor (saith Calvin and Catharinus) can you find in the New Testament any precept for the punishment of Thieves, Traitors, Adulterers, Witches, Murtherers, and the like, and yet they may, or at least some of them be capitally punisht.

Zanch. Tom. 2. Misc. in cap. de Magistratu. Aretius hath written the History of

For the Protestants, hear what Zanchy saith, Omnes fere ex nostratibus hujus sunt sententiæ, quod hæretici sint gladio puniendi. Beza hath written a peculiar Tract, De Hæreticis à Magistratu puniendis. Calvin also hath written Aureum librum, (as Beza cals it) of this very Argument.

Valentinus Gentilis put to death at Bern. There was a Statute against Lollards in England, and Hugonots in France.

We do deservedly condemn the cruelty of Turks and Papists, which go about by force alone to establish their superstitions. The Church of Rome and the Pope will judge what Heresie is, and who is an Heretick, and they appropriate to themselves the name of Catholicks, and all such as dissent from them must presently be pronounced Hereticks.

The Pope and Canonists hold him to be an Heretick, Qui non in omnibus ac singulis Papæ decretis obtemperat. He that readeth the Bible in his Mother-tongue, will be esteemed an Heretick with them. Virgilius a Germane Bishop and a Mathematician, was sent for to Rome by the Pope, and condemned of Heresie, because he held that there were Antipodes.

Hæreticus ego tibi, & tu mihi.

Because Heresie is not easily defined (as Augustine saith) and because saith should be perswaded not compelled, We conceive that all fair means should be first used to convince men of their errors, and discover the danger of them; Therefore we will premise some things concerning the nature and danger of Heresie, before we speak particularly of the punishment of Hereticks.

See Statut. 1 c. of Qu. Eliz. chap. 1.

The word Heresie signifies Choise, and therefore the signification of it is sometimes indifferent, importing no more than a way of professing and living which a man voluntarily chooseth, Act. 26. 5. But because it is too ordinary, for men of their own choice, to depart from the Rule, to which they are or ought to stand obliged; thence the word is for the most part used to signifie the free choice of a rule of living, contrary to that rule which they stood obliged to before, Tit. 3. 10, 11. 1 Pet. 2. 1. M. Thorndikes Princip. of Christian Truth, ch. 25.

Proprie Hæretici vocantur qui ea pertinaciter rejiciunt, quæ in sacris Scripturis docentur.

Chillingworth thus defines Heresie: It is (saith he) an obstinate defence of any errour against any necessary Article of the Christian faith. Two things

Daven. de judice controv. Hæresis est error pugnans cum fundamento religionis Christianæ, isque pertinax. Alting. Tom. 2. Probl. Theol. part. 2. Prob. 14. Heresie is an errour in the foundation of Christian Religion, taught and defended with obstinacy. Perk. on Gal. 5. 20. See more there.

must

must concur (say some) to constitute an Heretick. 1. Error in fide, 1 Tim. 1.19. 2. Pertinacia, Tit.3.10.

Errare possum, Hæreticus esse nolo.

See M. Vines on 1 *Pet.*2.1. *p.*46,47. Neque vero alia magis ratione desinimus, quam si veterum trium Symbolorum, vel si veterum quatuor Generalium Conciliorum ulli contraveniat. Episc. And. Tort. Tort.

Dr Field [q] thus describes the nature of Heresie. Heresie is not every errour, but errour in matter of Faith, nor every errour in matter of Faith; (for neither Jews nor Pagans are said to be Hereticks, though they erre most damnably in those things which every one that will be saved must believe; and with all the malice, fury and rage that can be imagined, impugn the Christian Faith and Verity) but it is the errour of such as by some kind of profession have been Christians; so that only such as by profession being Christians, depart from the truth of Christian Religion, are named Hereticks.

[q] *Lib.*3. of the Church, ch.3. See Dr Prideaux his Sermon on 1 Cor. 11.19. Vide Grotium in Tit. 3.11. αἱρετος & αἱρετικὸς dicuntur ab αἱρεῖσθαι, eligere, præferre, est enim hæresis privata aliqua opinio, quam quis pro dogmate Christiano, & fide Catholica sibi amplectendam eligit, eamque pertinaciter defendit. Gerhard. loc. commun. de Mimsterio Ecclesiastico, cap. 8. Ut quis sit propriè dictus hæreticus, requiritur, 1. Ut sit persona in Ecclesiam visibilem per Baptismi Sacramentum recepta, 1 Cor. 11.9. Acts 20 13. 2. Ut erret in fide, sive errorem illum nouiter introducat, sive ab alio acceptum amplectatur (quamvis illud hæresiarcha hoc vero hæretici proprium videri possit.) 3. Ut error directè in ipsum fidei fundamentum impingat. 4. Ut errori coniuncta sit malitia ac pertinacia, per quam etiam aliquoties admonitus nihilominus obstinatè errorem suum defendat. 5. Ut dissensiones & scandala in Ecclesia excitet, ejusque unitatem scindat. Id. ibid. Hæresis consideratur vel in doctrina, vel in persona; hæresis doctrina, est quando id ipsum quod proponitur est contra fidem Catholicam & Orthodoxam. Hæresis autem persona, quum quis hæresin doctrina ita proponit ut asserat etiam convictus. Cham. *de Oec. Pontif. l.*6.

Secondly, For the danger of Heresie. Heresie is a fruit of the flesh, Gal. 5.20. An Heretick after the first and second time reject, Tit.3.10. Heresie or false doctrine is in Scripture compared to [r] Leaven, and to a Gangrene, for the spreading and infectious nature of it. The Heresie of Arius [s] was more dangerous to the Church, than the Sword of all the persecuting Emperors. It is compared to a Land-floud, *Rev.*12. because it did overcome all presently.

Errours are practical or doctrinal only; fundamental, or circa-fundamental, or neither of the two.

[r] See Mr Clarks Sermons on Matth 8.13.

and Mr Cranfords Hæreseomachia on 2 Tim.2.17. [s] Arius in Alexandria una scintilla fuit. Sed quoniam non statim oppressus est totum orbem ejus flamma populata est. Aquin Errores qui non refelluntur probari videntur, & eo magis in crescit authoritas, quo lenius & mitius cum iisdem agitur, gangræna enim sunt, quæ irritant, non curant, blandiora remedia. Brightm. in cap 3. Apoc v 2.

We need not to ask whether he joyn obstinacy to his errour (saith [t] Dr Field) which erreth in those things which every one is bound particularly to believe, because such things do essentially and directly concern the matter of our salvation, and he is without any further enquiry to be pronounced an Heretick, and the very errour it self is damnable; as if a man (saith he) shall deny Christ to be the Son of God, coessential, coequal and coeternal with his Father; or that we have remission of sins by the effusion of his bloud.

[t] Ubi supra.

They therefore who first hold pestilent Heresies; and secondly, who when before they professed the Christian Religion, and held the truth, have yet made a defection from the same, to such Heresies; and thirdly, who labour to infect others; and fourthly, being convicted do yet obstinately persevere in them, and in the manner before-mentioned; such are and ought (say dam Londini, & perrogarentur singulorum sententiæ, surrexit, quidam senex Theologus, atqui hoc planum esse asserit ex ipso Apostolo. (say some worthy Protestants) to be punished by the Christian Magistrate with death.

Cum agitaretur de ista quæstione (An morte multandi & cogendi hæretici) in Synodo quæ-

Hæreticum hominem post unam aut alteram admonitionem devita. Devita inquit, ergò manifestum est hæreticos istos homines post unam aut alteram admonitionem è vita tollendos. Erasm. Annot. in Tit. 3. Vel sola modestia potuisset vitam redimere, said Calvin of Servetus in opusc. Me haud pœnitet ejus libelli authorem fuisse in quo veram de puniendis à magistratu civili hæreticis sententiam ita ex verbo Dei asservi, ut ne nunc quidem vel tu, Castellio, vel tui similes eam refellere possitis. Bezæ *Resp. ad Cast. p.*14. *Vide etiam ibid. p.*32,33. Et Voet. *Sel. Disputat. Theol. partem tertiam. De errore & hæres. partem octavam. pag.*604, &c.

They reason thus from the Office of the Magistrate. Every Magistrate may and ought to punish offenders; and the more pernicious the offenders are, the more hainous ought the punishment to be.

Here the Spirit of God sets forth,
1. The office of a Magistrate, to bear the sword.
2. The end, which is double; 1. The Minister of God for thy good, in general. 2. To execute wrath on him that doth evil.

That the Magistrate is both custos ac vindex utriusque tabulæ, is the opinion of all the Fathers Greek and Latine, and of all orthodox Divines, as Sibrandus Lubbertus shews, Respons. ad pietat. Grotij. These two Scriptures do plainly evince it, For he is the Minister of God to thee for good: but if thou do what is evil, be afraid, for he beareth not the sword in vain, for he is the Minister of God, a revenger, to execute wrath upon him that doth evil, Rom. 13.4. & 1 Tim. 2.2. For Kings and all that are in Authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlinesse and honesty, and are urged by Calvin, Beza, and divers others, to this very purpose. For if (saith Beza) the Magistrate have not power over Hereticks, one of these two things must necessarily follow, either that Hereticks do not do ill, or that what Paul speaks in general, must be restrained to a certain kind of evil deeds, viz. to corporal sins. Ubi lex non distinguit nec nos distinguere debemus.

God never committed to any that charge of the body only, and not proportionably the charge of the soul, as to Masters, Parents, Heirs, Judg. 7. 10.

It was written upon the Sword of Charles the Great, Decem præceptorum Custos Carolus, Charles Keeper of the ten Commandments.

From 1 Tim. 2. 2. both Melanchthon and Beza collect, that the Magistrate is constituted by God, not onely a preserver of the second Table, but also and especially of pure Religion, and the external Discipline of it, and so a punisher also of the offences [u] against it. Godlinesse and honesty makes Kings Guardians of both Tables, as well of the first which containeth the worship of God, as of the second which is the fountain of publick honesty. Dr Hampton on Luk. 22.24,25. Vide Episc. Roffens. de potestate Papæ in rebus temporal. lib. 2. cap. 14. *pag.*460. That Magistrate which takes care only of honesty, doth but one and the least part of his duty. See 2 Chron. 17.7,8,9.

[u] Magistrates in the Scripture (in the Hebrew) are called Masters of restraint. Qui non vetat peccare cum potest jubet. Senec.

For the enforcing of this Argument from these two Scriptures, these Reasons may be added:

1. The sins against the first Table (Cæteris paribus) are greater than those against the second Table, and the Magistrate is more to respect the glory of God than the peace of the Commonwealth.

Non rationibus sed gladiis sua visum est Impostori stabilire dogmata. Erpenij Historia Josephi. The Turks whip men for speaking against God, and kill them for speaking against Mahomet, saying, God can revenge himself, Mahomet cannot.

Heresies and corruptions in judgment are held by a Reverend Divine [x] to be worse than corruptions in manners; his reason is taken out of Lev. 13.44. one that was leprous in his head was utterly unclean. There was a special dishonour put on him that had the leprosie in his head; compare *v.*45, there, with Mic. 3.7.

[x] Mr Hildersam on Psal. 51.7. Lect. 146.

2. Errors

2. Errors and Hereſies are called in Scripture Evil deeds, 2 Joh. v, 10, 11, and Hereticks Evil doers, Phil. 3. 2.

As all blaſphemous hereticks, Lev. 24. 16 ſo ſeducing hereticks are to be put to death.

Divines generally hold, that ſuch who erre blaſphemouſly are to be put to death, ſuch as Arius, and Servetus in France.

That which Ferom wrote to Auguſtine, Quod ſignum majoris gloriæ eſt, omnes Hæretici te deteſtantur, may be applied to thoſe of our times, who have been Champions for the truth, ſuch evil doers will malign them; but if they mannage well ſo good a cauſe, it will bear them out.

The whole 13 Chapter of Deuteronomy is ſpent about the ſeducing of falſe prophets.

Ferom was famous for confuting the Hereſies of his times, for writing againſt Helvidius, Jovinian, Vigilantius, the Luciferians and Pelagians. Origen ſhews great learning in writing againſt Celſus. Baſil oppoſing Eunomius. Cyprians writings againſt Novatus, and Hilaries againſt Conſtantius, deſerves praiſe. Auſtin wrote excellently againſt Pelagius and Gaudentius the Arians, Manichees. Quis unquam (ſaith one) in Eccleſia paulo eruditior, poſt ortam novam hæreſin reticuit? Ea demum vera militia Chriſtiana eſt, hæreſes expugnare.

Are not Moſes moral Laws of perpetual equity, and therefore to be obſerved in all ages? Is blaſphemy more tolerable in the New Teſtament? Mr Cotton on Rev. 16. third Vial. We are not obliged (ſaith Beza) to the judicial Laws, as they were given by Moſes to one people, yet ſo farre we are bound to obſerve them, as they comprehend that general equity which ought to prevail every where. By the judicial Laws of the Jews the falſe prophets and Idolaters were to be put to death, Deut. 13. 8, 9. & 17. 5, 6. where there is a moral equity in the precept, it is perpetual.

THE

THE CONTENTS.

Book I. Of the Scriptures.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of Divinity in general. 1,to 6
2. Of the Divine Authority of the Scriptures. 6,to 37
3. Of the Books of Scripture. 37,to 51
4. Of the New Testament. 51,to 65
5. Of the Books called Apocrypha. 65, to 70
6. Of the Authentical Edition of the Scriptures. 70,to 74
7. Of the Seventy, Syriack, Arabick and Latine translation. 74,to 94
8. The end of the Scripture. 94,to 96
9. Of the Properties of the Scripture, 96,to 125
10. Of the Interpretation of Scripture. 125,to 143

Book II. Of God.

Chap. Pag.

1. That there is a God. 144,to 158
2. What God is. 158,to 163
3. That God is a Spirit, Simple, Living, Immortal. 163,to 170
4. That God is Infinite, Omnipresent, Eternal. 170,to 179
5. That God is Immutable. 179,to 182
6. That God is Great in his Nature, Works, Authority, a necessary Essence, Independent, wholly One. 182, to 191
7. Of Gods Understanding, that he is Omniscient, and of his Will. 191,to 200
8. Of Gods Affections, his Love, Hatred. 200,to 205
9. Of the Affections of Anger and Clemency given to God metaphorically. 205, to 208
10. Of Gods Virtues, particularly of his Goodnesse. 208,to 211
11. Of Gods Grace and Mercy. 211, to 219
12. Of Gods Justice, Truth, Faithfulnesse. 219,to 229
13. Of Gods Patience, Long-suffering, Holinesse, Kindnesse. 229,to 236
14. Of Gods Power. 236,to 239
15. Of Gods Glory and Blessednes. 239, to 259
16. Of the Trinity or Distinction of Persons in the Divine Essence. 259,to 267

Book III. Of Gods Works.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of Gods Decree, and especially of Predestination, and the parts thereof, Election and Reprobation. 268, to 280
2. The Execution of Gods Decree. 280 to 290
3. Of the Creation of the Heavens, the Angels, the Elements, Light, Day and Night. 290,to 302
4. Of some of the Meteors, but especially of the Clouds, the Rain, the Sea, the Rivers, Grasse, Herbs and Trees. 302,to 321
5. Of the Sun, Moon and Stars. 321, to 325
6. Of the Fishes, Fowls, Beasts. 325, to 335
7. Of the Angels good and bad 335, to 359
8. Of Man. 359,to 369
9. Of Gods Providence. 369,to 379

Book IV. Of the Fall of Man. Of Sinne Original and Actual.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of the Fall of Man. 379,to 385
2. What original Corruption is. 385, to 393
3. Of the propagation of original sinne, and conclusions from it. 393,to 395
4. Of actual sin. 395,to 400
5. Of the evil of sin. 400,to 404
6. Of the degrees of sin. 404,to 409
7. That all sins are mortal. 409,to 411
8. Of

The Contents.

Chap. Pag.

8. Of the cause of sin. 411, to 414
9. Of the communicating with other mens sins. 414, to 415
10. Of the punishment of sin. 415, to 418
11. Signs of a Christian in regard of sin, and that great corruptions may be found in true Christians. 418, to 421
12. Two Questions resolved about sin. 421, to 423
13. Of the Saints care to preserve themselves from sinne, and especially their own iniquities. 423, to 426
14. Of the cause of forbearing sin, of abhorring it, and of small sins. 426, to 427
15. Of some particular sins, and especially of Ambition, Apostasie, Backsliding, Blasphemy, Boasting, Bribery. 427, to 439
16. Of carnal confidence, Covetousnes, Cruelty, Cursing. 439, to 446
17. Of Deceit, Distrust, Divination, Division, Drunkennesse. 446, to 451
18. Of Envy, Error, Flattery, Gluttony 451, to 455
19. Of Heresie, Hypocrisie, Idlenesse, Impenitence, Injustice, Intemperance. 455, to 461
20. Of Lying, Malice, Murmuring, Oppression. 461, to 464
21. Of Perjury, Polygamy, Pride. 464, to 469
22. Of Railing, Rebellion, Revenge, Scandal, Schism. 469, to 476
23. Of Sedition, Self-love, Self-seeking, Slander. 476, to 480
24. Of Tale-bearing, Vain-glory, Violence, Unbelief, Unkindnesse, Unsetlednesse, Unthankfulnesse, Usury. 480, to 488
25. Of Witchcraft. 488, to 489
26. Of Errour and Heresie. 489, to 519

BOOK V. Of Mans Recovery by CHRIST.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of the Apostles Creed. 519, to 546
2. Of Christ. I. His Person. 546, to 556
3. Of Christs being Man. 556, to 566
4. Of Christs Offices. 566, to 592
5. Of Christs double state of Humiliation and Exaltation. 592, to 608
6. Of Christs Exaltation. 608, to 618

BOOK VI. Of the Church, the Spouse of Christ, and Antichrist the great enemy of Christ.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of the Church of Christ. 618, to 627
2. Of Pastors. 627, to 645
3. Of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction and Government, Councils, Antichrist, Jesuites, Monks. 645, to 671

BOOK VII. Of our Union and Communion with Christ.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of our Union with Christ. 671, to 677
2. Of Effectual Vocation. 677, to 680
3. Of Conversion and Free-will. 680, to 691
4. Of Saving Faith. 691, to 706
5. Of the Communion and Fellowship Believers have with Christ, and their Benefits by him, and specially of Adoption. 706, to 709
6. Of Justification. 709, to 719
7. Of the parts and terms of Justification, Remission of sins, and Imputation of Christs Righteousnesse. 719, to 723
8. Of the Imputation of Christs Righteousnesse. 723, to 725
9. Whether one may be certain of his Justification. 725, to 730
10. Whether Faith alone doth justifie. 730, to 733
11. Of Sanctification. 733, to 741
12. The parts of Sanctification are two Mortification and Vivification. I. Mortification. 741, to 744
13. II. Of Vivification. 744, to 748
14. The Sanctification of the whole Soul and Body. 748, to 750
15. Of the Sanctification of the Will. 750, to 754
16. Of the Sanctification of the Conscience. 754, to 757
17. Sanctification of the Memory. 757 to 758
19. Of the particular Affections. 758, to 761
20. Of the Simple Affections. 761, to 763
21. I. Of Love and Hatred. 763, to 768.
22. II. Desire

The Contents.

Chap. Pag.

22. II. Desire and Flight. 768, to 771
23. III. Joy and Sorrow. 771, to 776
24. Of Sorrow. 776, to 781
25. Of Hope and Fear. I. Of Hope. 781 to 785
26. II. Of Fear, and some mixed affections. 785, to 788
27. Of the sensitive Appetite. 788, to 801
28. Of the Sanctification of mans body, and all the external Actions. 801, to 808

Some special Graces deciphered. 808, to 834

BOOK VIII. Of Ordinances, or Religious Duties.

Chap. Pag.

1. Something general of the Ordinances. 834, to 837
2. Of ordinary religious Duties; first, Of Hearing the Word. 837, to 839
3. Of Singing Psalms. 839, to 841
4. Of Prayer. 841, to 862
5. The sorts and kinds of prayer. 862, to 878
6. Of the Lords Prayer. 878, to 907
7. Of the Sacraments. 907, to 915
8. Of Baptism. 915, to 934

Chap. Pag.

9. Of the Lords Supper. 934, to 960
10. Of the Masse and other things of the Lords Supper. 960, to 1005
11. Of extraordinary religious Duties, Fasting, Feasting and Vows. I. Of Fasting. 1005, to 1009
12. II. Holy Feasting, or religious Thanksgiving. 1009, to 1011
13. Of a Religious Vow. 1011, to 1020

BOOK IX. Of the Moral Law.

Chap. Pag.

1. Some things general of the Commandments. 1020, to 1033

And the ten Commandments in so many Chapters following. 1033, to 1154

BOOK X. Of Glorification.

Chap. Pag.

1. Of the General Resurrection. 1154, to 1157
2. Of the Last Judgement, 1157, to 1165
3. Of Hell or Damnation. 1165, to 1171
4. Of Everlasting Life. 1171, to 1176

THE

THE FIRST BOOK. OF THE Scriptures.

Chap. I.

Of Divinity in General.

IN the Preface or Introduction to Divinity, six things are to be considered, 1. That there is Divinity. 2. What Divinity is. 3. How it is to be taught. 4. How it may be learnt. 5. Its opposites. 6. The Excellency of Divine Knowledg.

I. That there is Divinity. 1. That there is Divinity.

That is, a Revelation of Gods will made to men, is proved by these Arguments.

1. From the natural light of Conscience, in which (we being unwilling) many footsteps of heavenly Knowledg and the divine Will are imprinted. Rom. 1. 18, 19, 20. & 2. 14, 15.

2. From the supernatural light of Grace; for we know that all Divine Truths are fully revealed in Scripture.

3. From the nature of God himself, who being the chiefest good, and therefore most * Diffusive of himself, must needs communicate the Knowledg of himself to reasonable creatures for their Salvation, Psal. 119. 68.

* Omne bonum est sui diffusivum, ergo maximè bonum est maximè sui diffusivum. Ut se habet simile, ad simile, ita se habet magis ad magis, Locus topicus.

4. From the end of Creation; for God hath therefore made reasonable creatures, that he might be acknowledged and celebrated by them, both in this life, and that which is to come. The manner of his worship must therefore be revealed and appointed by himself.

5. From common Experience; for it was alwayes aknowledged among all Nations, that there was some Revelation of Gods will, which as their Divinity was esteemed holy and venerable; whence arose their Oracles and Sacrifices.

II. What Divinity is. 2. What Divinity is.

The Ambiguity of the Word is to be distinguished.

Theology, if thou look after the etymology of the word, is a ſpeech of God: and he is commonly called a Theologer or Divine who knoweth or profeſſeth the knowledge of Divine things. Peter du Moulin. Theology is ſo named from its end, God, as other arts are called humanity, becauſe man is the end of them.

Theology of Divinity is two-fold, either firſt, Archetypal, or Divinity in God, of God himſelf, by which God by one individual and immutable act knows himſelf in himſelf, and all other things out of himſelf, by himſelf. Or ſecond, Ectypal and communicated, expreſſed in us by Divine Revelation after the Patern and Idea which is in God, and this is called Theologia de Deo, Divinity concerning God, which is after to be defined. It is a Queſtion with the Schoolmen, Whether Divinity be Theoretical or Practical, Utraque ſententia ſuos habet autores. But it ſeems (ſaith Wendeline) rather to be practical, 1. Becauſe the Scripture, which is the fountain of true Divinity, exhorts rather to practice then ſpeculation. 1 Tim. 1. 5. 1 Cor. 8. 3. & 13. 2. Jam. 1. 22, 25. Revel. 22. 24. hence John ſo often exhorts to love in his firſt Epiſtle. 2. Becauſe the end of Divinity, to which we are directed by practical precepts, is the glorifying of God, and the eternal ſalvation of our ſouls and bodies, or bleſſed life, which are principally practical. Wendeline means (I conceive) that the bleſſed life in Heaven is ſpent practically, which yet ſeems to be otherwiſe. Peter du Moulin in his Oration in the praiſe of Divinity, thus determines the matter: That part of Theology which treateth of God and his Nature, of his Simplicity, Eternity, Infiniteneſſe, is altogether contemplative, for theſe things fall not within compaſſe of action: that part of it which treateth of our manners, and the well ordering of our lives, is meerly practick; for it is wholly referred unto action. Chriſtianity is not a bare profeſſion, or ſpeculative ſcience, but a work, a religion to live by, John 6. 29. Matth. 11. 12. Tit. 2. 14. Theology is more contemplative then practick, ſeeing contemplation is the ſcope of action; for by good works we aſpire unto the beatificall viſion of God. See Petavius Prologomena, to his firſt work of Theologica dogmata, c. 8. Divinity firſt dealeth with the underſtanding, yet chiefly and principally woeth the will, It teacheth truth, and preſſeth goodneſſe.

The whole doctrine of Religion is called Theology, that is, a Speech or doctrine concerning God: to ſignifie that without the true knowledg of God, there can be no true Religion, or right underſtanding of any thing. Biſheld on the Creed. Rhetorica à Demonſthene, Phiſica à Galeno, ars Poetica ab Homero, Philoſophia ab Ariſtotele, Geometria ab Euclide, militia à Vegetio, Theologia ſolum à Deo immortali originem ſumpſit. Petav. Prolegom. ad Theol. Dog.

Some thus diſtinguiſh,
Divinity is

2. What Divinity is. Tit. 1. 1. 1 Tim. 6. 3. Col. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 18. Theologia eſt doctrina de Deo ac rebus divinis. Divinity is the knowledg of God.

1. Naturall, Θεολογία φύσικη, of the Deity and our duty to him, which is acquirable by the light of nature, we may know Gods exiſtence, unity, infiniteneſs, that he governes all, is the end to which all things ſhould tend, this is contained in the Law of nature, or dictates of right reaſon. The ſum of which is comprized in the Decalogue.

2. Supernaturall and revealed, this is only acquirable by the light of Scripture. Thus the Trinity of perſons in the unity of eſſence, the eternall generation of the Son, and proceſſion of the holy Ghoſt, the true order, and manner of the creation.

Theology amongſt the Heathens did anciently ſignifie the Doctrine touching the falſe worſhip of their gods; but ſince it is applied, as the word importeth, to ſignifie the Doctrine revealing the true and perfect way which leadeth unto bleſſedneſſe. It may briefly be defined, The knowledge of the truth which is according to godlineſs, teaching how we ought to know and obey God, that we may attain life everlaſting, and glorifie Gods name: or thus, Divinity is a Doctrine revealed by God in his Word, which teacheth man how to know and worſhip God, ſo that he may live well here and happily hereafter.

Melchior Canus in his Common-places, l. 1. c. 2. ſaith, whereas in all other Diſciplines reaſon holds the firſt place, authority the laſt, yet in Divinity, Non tam rationis in diſputando, quàm authoritatis momenta quarenda ſunt.

Theologia eſt integra & incorrupta doctrina ligis, & Evangeliſt, de vero Deo ejuſque voluntate, operibus & cultu à Deo patefacta, & comprehenſa libris Prophetarum & Apoſtolorum, & confirmata miraculis ac teſtimoniis divinis, per quam Spiritus Sanctus, eſt efficax in cordibus electorum, & colligit ſibi in genere humano aternam eccleſiam, à qua in hac & in futura vita celebretur. Paræi Prologom. in corpus Doct. Chriſt. Urſini. I ſhould rather call Divinity a Divine Life, than a Divine Science; it being ſomething rather to be underſtood by a ſpirituall ſenſation then by any verbal diſcription. Smith's way of attaining divine knowledg.

Divinity is the true wiſdome of divine things, divinely revealed to us to live well and bleſſedly, or, for our eternall Salvation. Logica eſt ars benè diſſerendi, Rhetorica torica ars benè loquendi, Theologia ars benè vivendi. Logick is an art of diſputing well, Rhetorick of ſpeaking well, Divinity of living well, Tit. 2. 11, 12. Jam. 1. 26, 27. It is ſuch an art as teacheth a man by the knowledge of Gods will and aſſiſtance of his power to live to his glory. The beſt rules that the Ethicks, Politicks, Oeconomicks have, are fetcht out of Divinity. There is no true knowledg of Chriſt, but that which is practical, ſince every thing is then truly known, when it is known in the manner it is propounded to be known. But Chriſt is not propounded to us to be known theoretically but practically. Theologia conſiſtit in bona conſciencia magis, quam in magna ſcientia. Barnonis præfat. ad prælect. in Jonam.

It is diſputed, whether Theology be Sapience or Science. The genus of it is Sapience or Wiſdom, which agreeth firſt with Scripture, 1 Cor. 2. 6, 7. Col. 1. 19. & 2. 3. Prov. 2. 3. Secondly, with Reaſon; for, 1. Wiſdome is converſant about the higheſt things and moſt remote from ſenſes, ſo Divinity is converſant about the ſublimeſt myſteries of all. 2. Wiſdom hath a moſt certain knowledg, founded on moſt certain principles; there can be no knowledg more certain than that of faith which is proper to Divinity.

Theologia eſt ſcientia vel ſapientia rerum divinarum divinitus revelata ad Dei gloriam & rationalium Creaturarum ſalutem. Walæus in loc. Commun. De genere Theologiæ eſt quæſtio: quod idem ab omnibus non aſſignatur. Nam illis arridet Scientia, aliis Sapientia, aliis Prudentia. Litem hanc dirimere noſtri non eſt inſtituti: eth verè ſcientem, verè ſapientem, verè prudentem eum judicamus, qui verus & ſincerus eſt Theologus. Wendelinus Chriſt. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 1. Quamvis ex eo genere ſcientiarum Theologia non ſit habenda, quarum uſum ac notitiam habuit Ariſtoteles, qui quid divina fides eſſet, ac revelatio; & quam ad aſſenſum certa, & immota, neſcivit; tamen alterius rationis ac formæ, quam quæ illi comperta fuit, eſt ſcientia, quæ & firmitatem habet majorem, cæteris omnibus; & ejus, quod ex principiis deducitur, poſitis, & conceſſis iis, parem prorſus cum illis evidentiam. Petavii Prolegom. in opus Theol. Dog. c. 8. vide plura ibid.

The difference lurketh in the ſubject; Wiſdom or Prudence is either Moral or Religious; all wiſdom, whether moral and ethical, political or œconomical, is excluded in the definition; and this wiſdom is reſtrained to divine things, or all thoſe Offices of Piety in which we are obliged by God to our neighbour.

The third thing in the definition is the manner of knowing, which in Divinity is ſingular and different from all other arts, viz. by Divine Revelation.

Divinity as all other ſciences, conſiſteth of principles and concluſions; the principles of it are the Scriptures.

The fourth and laſt thing in the definition is the end of Divinity, which is, 1. Chiefeſt, The glory of God, 2. Next, A good and bleſſed life, or eternal ſalvation, begun in this life by the communication of Grace and Holineſs, but perfected in the life to come by the fruition of glory. This end hath divers names in Scripture, it is called, The knowledge of God, John 17. 3. Partaking of the Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Likeneſs to God, 1 John 3. 2. Eternal Salvation, the viſion and fruition of God, as the chiefeſt good.

The next end of Divinity in reſpect of man is eternal life or ſalvation, of which there are two degrees, 1. More imperfect, and begun in this life, which is called Conſolation, the chiefeſt joy and peace of Conſcience ariſing, 1. From a confidence of the pardon of ſins, and of freedom from the puniſhment of it. 2. From the beginning of our Sanctification and Conformity with God, with a hope and taſte of future perfection in both. 2. More Perfect and Conſummate after this life, ariſing from a full fruition of God, when the ſoul and body ſhall be perfectly united with God.

III. How Divinity is to be taught.

3. How Divinity is to be taught.

In the general it is to be handled Methodically. There is a great neceſſity of method in Divinity, that being uſefull both to enlighten the underſtanding with the clearneſs of truth, and to confirm the memory, that it may more faithfully retain things; therefore in Divinity there will be a ſpecial need of art and orderly diſpoſal of precepts, becauſe the mind is no where more obtuſe in conceiving, nor the memory more weak in retaining. There is a different way of handling Divinity, according to the ſeveral kinds of it. Divinity is threefold.

Methodica & compendiaria doctrinæ ſacræ tractatio origine divina eſt. Brochmanni Syſtema Theol. Tom. 1. c. 2. Queſt. 4.

1. Succinct and brief, when Divine Truth is ſummarily explained and confirmed by Reaſons, and this Divinity is called Catechetical, Syſtematical.

2. Prolix and large, when Theological matters are handled particularly and fully by Definitions, Diviſions, Arguments and Anſwers; this is called handling of Common-Places, Scholaſtical and Controverſal Divinity. See a defence of School-Divinity in Petavius's Prolegomena to his firſt Tome of his Theologica dogmat. c. 6. &

Hornbeck's Summa Controverſ. Relig. Diſſertat; De Controverſ. Theol. againſt Brockmane, blames the Papiſts that in their caſe-Divinity dubias Conſcientias informaturi, frequentius Traditiones hominum, Concilia & Teſtimonia Patrum, jus utrumque, & ejus cenſus alia, quam Scripturas ſacras, fallere neſcias, adducant. Univerſa Theol. Syſtem. c. 3. queſt. 1. S^r Thomas Moore ſaies of the Caſuiſts, their bus ineſſe, was not to keep men from ſinning, but to inform them quam prope ad peccatum ſine peccato liceat accedere. For practicall Divinity, we are not inferiour to any of the reformed Churches. Supra omnes Nationes reformatas in ex colenda & perficienda theologia Practica, halcyoniis ſuis fruentes, ſudarunt Angli, imprimis jam inde à Perkinſo Practicorum Anglorum Homero uſque in hunc diem Voetii Select. Diſputat. Theol. Pars 3. de Theologia Practica.

For the which purpoſe many Scholars of Hungary, Tranſylvania, France, high and low Germany, Helvetia, either at home or in England, (ſaith he there) learn the Engliſh tongue, and buy their Practicall Books. Baylies Practice of Piety is tranſlated into the French, Dutch, and Germane tongue, and is tranſlating into the Hungarian. Dikes deceitfullneſs of the heart, is alſo tranſlated into French and Dutch. My worthy Tutor M^r Pemble purpoſed to have put it into Latine. He ſaith there, In libris Controverſiarum evolvendis, & precipuè in Scriptis hæreticorum multo cum judicio verſari oportet, ac prudentia.

1. Diſcenda eſt Theologia imprimis textualis
2. Syſtematica ſeu dogmatica.
3. Elenctica & problematica.
Voetius Bibl. Theol. l 1. c.6.

3. Textuel, which conſiſts in a diligent Meditation of the Scriptures, the right underſtanding of which is the end of other inſtructions. This again is two-fold, either more Succinct and applied to the underſtanding of the Learned, as Commentaries of Divinity, or more Diffuſe and Popular, applied to the Capacity and Affections of the Vulgar, as Preaching, which is called patheticall Divinity, and is eſpecially uſefull to correct the manners of men and ſtir up their Affections.

IV. How Divinity is to be learned.

4. How Divinity is to be learned.
Job 28, 1, 2.
Matth. 7. 7.
John 20. 21.

There is need of a four-fold mind to the ſtudy of it:

1. Of a godly and heavenly mind, moſt ardent Prayers in our learning being frequently poured out to God, the fountain of light and wiſdome, that diſpelling the darkneſs of ignorance and errour he would deign to illuminate our minds with the clear knowledg of himſelf; we cannot acquire Divine Wiſdom (as we do the knowledg of other arts) by our own labour and induſtry; it is a praiſe to learn humane arts of our ſelves, here we muſt be taught of God.

2. Of a ſober mind, that we may not be too curious in ſearching out the profound Myſteries of Religion, as about the Trinity, Predeſtination; we muſt be wiſe to ſobriety, and not buſie our ſelves about perplexed and unprofitable Queſtions, being content to know ſuch things which are revealed to us for our Salvation.

Deut. 29.29.
Rom. 12. 3. & 6. 7.
2 Tim. 2. 23.
Matth. 11.27.
Prov. 2.2. & 8. 4,5. & 8.17.33.

3. Of a ſtudious and diligent mind; other arts are not wont to be gotten without labour; this being the Queen of arts, requires therefore much pains both for its difficulty and excellency.

4. Of an honeſt and good mind, Luke 8.40. We muſt learn, 1. With a deniall of our wit and carnal reaſon, not meaſuring the unſearchable wiſdom of God by our ſhallow capacities; 2. With deniall of our wicked affections, 1 Pet. 1.2,3. 3. With a firm purpoſe of Obedience, Joh. 7.17. Pſal. 50.23. Prov. 28.28.

To the accurate knowledg of Divinity (ſaith Hottinger Theſ. Philolog. l. 1. c. 2. Sect. 1.) natural gifts are required, age, wit, memory, and judgment.

V. The things contrary to Divinity, are

5. The oppoſites of Divinity.

1. Heatheniſm, being altogether ignorant of, and refuſing the true and ſaving knowledg of God.

2. Epicuriſm, ſcoffing at Divinity.

3. Hereſie, depraving and corrupting Divinity.

6. The excellency of Divinity.

VI. The excellency of Divine Knowledg, or the ſtudy of Divinity appeareth in theſe particulars:

[a] Paul calls it The excellency of the knowledg of Chriſt. Phil. 3.8. Pſal. 40.8.

1. In the ſubject Matter of it, which is Divine, either in its own Nature, as God and Chriſt, [a] Pſal. 70.7. Joh. 5.46. or in relation to him, as the Scripture, Sacraments. It is called The wiſdome of God, Prov. 2.10. & 3. 13. 1 Cor. 2.6,7. and That wiſdom wiſdome which is from above, Jam. 3. 17. If to know the nature of an Herb, or the Sun and Stars, be excellent; how much more to know the Nature of God? Ariſtotle held it a great matter to know but a little concerning the firſt Mover and Intelligences. Paul deſired to know nothing but Chriſt and him crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 2. [b] that is, he profeſſed no other knowledg.

Si Chriſtum diſcis, ſatis eſt ſi cætera neſcis;
Si Chriſtum neſcis, nihil eſt ſi cætera diſcis.

This Legacy was alwaies renewed in all Dr Harris his Wills, Item, I bequeath to all my Children, and their Childrens Children, to each of them a Bible, with this Inſcription, none but Chriſt. Mr Duports uſual Symbole was, Quid prodeſt eſſe peritum, & periturum?

In this Myſtery of Chriſt God is revealed in the higheſt and moſt glorious way, 2 Cor. 4. 6. there is more wiſdome, holineſs, power, juſtice diſcovered in the Myſtery of the Goſpel, then was known before to men and Angels. Oſtendunt Rambam in Geneſeos exordio & Gerundenſis, totam Sacram Scripturam nil aliud eſſe, quàm continuatum quoddam ſymbolum rerum & myſteriorum ſublimiſſimorum, quæ ſolis Doctoribus, & diu multumque in lege exercitatis, ut ſciant, convenit. Imò ipſam æternam Sapientiam Chriſtum Servatorem noſtrum hoc parabolico dicendi genere uſum teſtantur ea quæ apud Evangeliſtas haud infrequenter leguntur, Athanaſ. Kirch. Obeliſc. Pamphil. l. 2. c. 5. See Dr Sanderſons learned Sermon on 1 Tim. 3. 16. Chriſt is the ſumme of all divine revealed truths, Luk. 24. 27. Acts 10. 43. Here is the only knowledg which is neceſſary to make the man of God perfect, Col. 2. 3.

The Metaphyſicks handle not things properly divinely revealed, but that which the Philoſophers by the light of nature judged to be Divine.

2. In the End; The principal and main end of Divinity is the glory of God, that is, the Celebration or ſetting forth of Gods infinite Excellency; the ſecondary end is mans bleſſedneſs, John 17. 3.

3. In the Certainty of it; Gods Word is ſaid to be ſure, and like Gold ſeven times refined *, there is no droſs of falſhood in it. The Academicks thought every thing ſo uncertain, that they doubted of all things.

4. In the Cauſe of it; Theſe truths are ſuch as cannot be known, but by Gods revealing them to us, All Scripture was given by Divine Inſpiration: Fleſh and bloud hath not revealed this unto thee; a humane light is enough to know other things.

5. In the holineſs of it, Pſal. 19. 5. By them thy ſervant is fore-warned, 1 Tim. 3. 15. The Word of God is able to make us wiſe to ſalvation, and to furniſh to every good work. Chriſt makes this a cauſe of the errour and wickedneſs in mans life, that they do not read and underſtand the Scriptures.

6. In the Delight and Sweetneſſe of it: Job 23. 12. preferred the Word of God before his food; David before thouſaands of Gold and Silver, before the honey and the honey-comb, Pſal. 19. 10. & 119. 103. and when he ceaſeth to compare, he beginneth to admire; Wonderfull are thy Teſtimonies. Archimedes took great delight in the Mathematicks. Auguſtine refuſed to take delight in Tullies Hortenſius, becauſe the name of Jeſus Chriſt was not there, Nomen Jeſu non erat ibi. He ſaith in his Confeſſions, Sacræ Scripturæ tuæ ſunt ſanctæ deliciæ meæ.

7. In the Excellency of the Students of it; 1. The Saints of God in the Old Teſtament, the Patriarks and Prophets, 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. 2. The Saints of God in the New Teſtament, Mat. 11. 25. Col. 1. 27. 3. It is the ſtudy of the Angels and Saints of God in heaven, 1 Pet. 1. 12. Eph. 3. 10. 1. The natural knowledge and enquiry of the Angels could never have diſcovered to them the Myſtery of Chriſt in the Goſpel. 2. They know it by the Church, that is (ſaith Oecumenius) by the ſeveral diſpenſations of God to his people under the Goſpel.

8. In that the Devil and Hereticks oppoſe it; The Papiſts would not have the Bible tranſlated, nor Divine Service performed in the vulgar tongue.

Chriſt is the principal ſubject of the whole Bible, being the end of the Law, and the ſubſtance of the Goſpel, M. Perkins. Vide Ferdin. de eſcalante, &c. Clypeum Concionatorum verbi Dei l. 4. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. & 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37.

Quicquid eſt in ſuo genere ſingulare & eximium, id Divinum.

[b] Agreeable to which is the French Proverb, Minſtre ne doit ſcavoir que ſa Bible, a Miniſter muſt know nothing but his Bible.

* Pſal. 12. 6. Mahomet would have had others believe, that he learned the doctrine of his Alcoran from the holy Ghoſt, becauſe he cauſed a Pigeon to come to his Ear.

Origen ſaith of the devils, there is no greater torment to them, than to ſee men addicted to the Scriptures. Num. hom. 27. in hoc eorum omnis flamma eſt, in hoc uruntur incendio. We ſhould highly prize the Scripture.

1. Chriſt did ſo, Job. 19. 28.

2. It is divinely inſpired, 2 Tim. 3. 16. Scriptura tota quanta quanta eſt Θεόπνευστος à Scriptoribus ſacris non motu proprio exarata, ſed ex afflatu & inſtigatione Spiritus Sancti, quod ad res ſimul & verba, Hornbecks Prologom. ad lib. contrà Judæos. 3. It is the ſword of the ſpirit, Eph. 6. 17. that is the engine and inſtrument by which it works. 4. Becauſe it is ſurer then an immediate revelation, 2 Pet. 1. 19. 5. God hath committed it to writing, that it may be a ſtanding rule of inſtruction and conſolation.

CHAP.

Chap. II.

Of the Divine Authority of the Scriptures.

In Theologia principium duplex, Eſſendi & Cognoſcendi, ſive quo quid eſt, aut cognoſcitur; illud conſtituit ſcibile & objectum, hoc dignit ſcientiam, & perficit ſubjectum: illud eſt Deus, hoc Dei ipſius verbum, videlicet ut in Sacra Scriptura expreſſum & ſignatum eſt. Hoornbeeckii Antiſocinianiſmum l. 1. c. 1. controv. 1. Sect. 1.

TWo things are to be conſidered in Divinity:
First, The Rule of it, the Scripture or Word of God.
Secondly, The Matter or Parts of it concerning God and man.

Principium eſſendi in Divinity is God the firſt Eſſence; Principium cognoſcendi, the Scripture, by which we know God, and all things concerning him. I ſhall handle both theſe principles, but begin with the Scripture, as many Syſtematical Writers do.

Of the Scriptures.

1. There may be a Revelation from God, the Gentiles looked upon their Oracles as anſwers of their Gods.
2. It is highly reaſonable that there ſhould be a revelation of Gods mind and will.
3. We ought to have good ſatisfaction for that which we entertain as a Divine Revelation, Mr Jacomb on 2 Tim. 3. 16. The truths of the Goſpell are ſupernaturall, and therefore it was neceſſary they ſhould be revealed before they could be known, Matth. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10, 11. Gal. 1. 12. Epheſ. 3. 3. Becauſe, 1. All the truths of the Goſpell are matters of grace and favour. 2. They exceed the created reaſon of men and Angels, Matth. 11. 27. Epheſ. 3. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 11. 3. Illumination and elevation of the faculties of the ſoul, was neceſſary for the right reception of them, Matth. 13. 13. Rom. 21. 18. as appears by thoſe Scriptures which aſcribe the knowledg of theſe things to the ſpirit, Deut. 29. 4. Luke 24. 25. Acts 6. 4. 1 John 1. 20. & 5. 20. by prayers for the ſpirit, Pſal. 143. 8. Epheſ 1 17. Col. 1. 9. ſo the promiſes of Gods teaching, John 16. 45. Iſai. 30. 39. Sine Deo, non cognoſcitur Deus, by the diſproportion between naturall faculties, and ſupernaturall truths, John. 1. 54. 1. The Lord ſpeaks by an audible voice, Exod. 3. 4. 1. In a way of majeſty and terrour, Deut. 18. 15. Pſal. 29. 4. 2. By way of mildneſs, 1 King. 19. 12. 3. In his written word, internally, in a way of inſpiration to the Prophets and Apoſtles; ordinarly, in a way of gracious illumination. Vide Dr Owen, Exercitat Pro. Sac. Script. Queſt. 1. Heb. 5, 12. See Dr Arrowſmith's Chain of Princip. Aph. 2d Exercit. 3d.

IT is neceſſary that the true Religion have a rule, whereby it may be ſquared, elſe there could be no certainty in it, but there would be as many Religions as men. It appears by the light of nature, the Heathen had known rules for their Rites, Ceremonies and Services; the Turks have their Alcoran, the Jews their Talmud, the Papiſts their Decretals, every Art hath its Rule; neither can any thing be a Duty which hath not a Rule.

There are three general Characters whereby we may know any Word to be the Word of God, and a Religion to be the true Religion; 1. That which doth moſt ſet forth the glory of God. 2. That which doth direct us to a rule which is a perfect rule of holineſs toward God, and righteouſneſs toward man. 3. That which ſhews a way ſutable to Gods glory and mens neceſſity, to reconcile us to God. The word of God ſets forth Gods glory in all the perfections, and is a compleat rule of holineſſe to God, and righteouſneſſe to men. All the wiſdom of the world cannot ſhew what is more ſuitable to the glory of God and the nature of man, to reconcile God and men, than for him that is God and man to do it.

God revealed himſelf divers wayes to the Fathers, Heb. 1. 1. The manner of revealing Gods will is three-fold, according to our three inſtruments of conceiving, viz. Underſtanding, Phantaſie and Senſes; to the underſtanding God revealed his Will by engraving it in the heart with his own finger, Jer. 31. 33. by Divine Inſpiration, 2 Pet. 1. 21. 2 Chron. 15. 1. Heb. 8. 11. John 14. 26. and by intellectual Viſions, Numb. 12. 6. To the phantaſie God revealed his Will by imaginary Viſions to Prophets awake, and by dreams to Prophets aſleep, Gen. 40. 8. & 41. 8, 9. Acts 26. 10. & 10. 3. Numb. 14. 4. To the Senſes God revealed his Will, and that either by Viſion to the Eye, or lively Voice to the Ear, Gen. 3. 9. & 4. 6. & 15. 4, 5. Exod. 20. 1, 2. & 3. 1, 2, 3. & 33. 17. And laſtly, by writing. This Revelation was, ſometimes immediate by God himſelf after an unſpeakeable manner, or by meanes, viz. Angels, Urim and Thummim, Prophets, Chriſt himſelf and his Apoſtles.

[c] The written Word for the Matter contained in it, is called The word [d] of God, Rom. 6. 6. Christ is the essentiall Word of God, the Scripture the written Word. For the manner of Record, The [e] Scripture, John 10. 35. 2 Tim. 3. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 6. or Scriptures, Matth. 22. 29. John 5. 39. & 10. 33. Rom. 15. 4. 2 Pet. 3. 16. By an Antonomasie or an excellency of phrase, [f] as the most worthy writings that ever saw the light; sometimes with an Epithete, The holy Scriptures, Rom. 1. 2. 2 Tim. 3. 15. The Scriptures of the Prophets, Rom. 16. 26.

Some think that Enoch the seventh from Adam wrote: but Jude 14. speaketh only of his prophesying, which might rather be by word of mouth then writing, because our Saviour citing Scripture, ever gives the first place to Moses; and undertaking by the Scriptures to prove himself to be the Messiah, that he ought to suffer, began at Moses, Luke 24. 27. No doubt if there had been any more ancient then Moses, our Saviour would have alledged it, because all the Scripture that was before him, was to give testimony of him.

The Author of the Scriptures was God [g] himself, they came from him in a speciall and peculiar manner, commonly called inspiration, which is an act of Gods Spirit immediately imprinting or infusing those notions into their brains, and those phrases and words by which the notions were uttered, 2 Tim. 3. 16. All Scripture is given by Divine inspiration, or by inspiration of God. Prophecy came not of old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved, or carried, by the Holy Ghost, 2 Pet. 1. 21. They did not write these things of their own heads, but the Spirit of God did move and work them to it, and in it. The word inspirare signifies sufflare, but it hath a larger signification in Scripture, for it notes there also movere, excitare, & impellere, in which large sense Peter used that Greek word, φερόμενοι, Ferdinando De Escalante Clypeus Concionatorum verbi Dei, l. 1. c. 11. 2 Sam. 23. 2. The Spirit of the Lord spake by me. that is, did immediately guide me, and tell me what matter to utter, and in what words, Ille est artifex omnium Sermonum sacrorum, Per. Mart. See Smith's Discourses of Prophesie, c. 13. Stephen saith, they resisted the Holy Ghost when they did disobey the Scriptures. [h] The Holy Ghost by the mouth of David, and the mouth of Isaiah spake, Acts 1. 16. &. 4. 25. & 28. 25.

[c] The Scripture is called The word of God, Ephes. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 15. The counsel of God, Act. 20. 27 The Oracles of God, Rom. 3. 2. The Law of God, Isai. 1. 2. The mind of God, Prov. 1. 23. [d] It is called Word, because by it Gods Will is manifested and made known, even as a man maketh known his mind and his will by his words. It is also said to be The word of God, in regard, 1. of the Author, which is God himself, 2 Tim. 3. 16. 2. Of the Matter, which is Gods Will, Ephes. 1. 9. 3. Of the End which is Gods glory, Ephes. 3. 10. 4. Of the Efficacy, which is Gods power, Rom. 1. 6. [e] So it is called the Bible or Book by an excellency, 'tis the only Book, as [f] Augustin. de civit. Dei lib. 15. c. 23. Vox Biblia etsi origine Graca sit, ad omnes tamen linguas fere transivit usus ejus & latinis hodie Germanisque usitatissima est. Idem significat quod libri seu libelli. Raupius Prolegom. in Comment. Bib. Synopt. Vide Hotting. Thes. Philol. l. 1. c. 2. §. 3. Scripture is taken, 1. Essentially, for the Doctrine contained in the Scripture. 2. Accidentally, as it is conveyed to us by writing. Cur vero plurativo potius Biblia, quàm singulo dixerint Biblium causa non est alia, quàm quod sacrum illud volumen multos libros complecteretur, quorum singulis Βιβλίω, nomen competeret: quomodo legas Luca 4. l. 17. Βιβλίον Εσαΐου, nec omnem semper sacram Scripturam sic vocarunt sed quandoque sola Hagiographa ut videre est apud Epiphanium hæresi 29. quæ est Nazaræorum Vossi de vitiis Sermonis, p. 1. c. 12. Ita usus obtinuit ut sacra ista scripta, quibus tanquam tabulis perscripta est ac consignata Dei voluntas, nomine Scripturæ per antonomasiam intelligantur, Beza in Joh. 20. 9. The Scriptures exceed all other writings in divers respects; 1. Because all these writings were inspired by the holy Ghost, so were no other writings. 2. They contain a platform of the wisdom that is in God himself. 3. Because they were penned by the greatest, wisest, holiest men, the Prophets, Apostles, Evangelists. 4. They are more perfect, pure and immutable then any mans writings, Mat. 5. 24. 2 Tim. 3. 17. 1 Pet. 1. 23. Mr Bifield on Pet. [g] The principal Author of all Scriptures is God the Father in his Son by the holy Ghost, Hos. 8. 12. 2 Pet. 1. The Father hath revealed, the Sonne confirmed, and the holy Ghost sealed them up in the hearts of the faithfull. Acts 7. 50. 1 Cor. 11. 23.

The Inscriptions of many Prophetical Books and Epistles Apostolical run thus, The word of the Lord which came to Hosea, Amos, Joel. Paul, Peter, James a servant of God, and an Apostle of Christ. The Proeme that is set before divers Prophecies is this, Thus saith the Lord; and the Prophets inculcate that speech, The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it; because they would take off the thoughts of the people from their own persons, and lift them up to consideration of God the chief Authour.

It is all one to say, The Scripture saith, Rom. 4. 3. & 10. 11. & 11. 2. Gal. 4. 30. 1 Tim. 5. 10 and God saith, [k] Rom. 9. 25. Heb. 4. 3. & 8. 5. & 13. 5. and the word Scripture is put for God speaking in the Scripture, The Scripture saith to Pharaoh, Rom. 9. 7. and Exod. 4. 12. Deut. 18. 18. 2 Cor. 13. 3. John 1. 56. Heb. 1. 1. Eze. 12. 25, 28. Rom. 1. 2. Isa. 58. 14. Evangelium dicitur sermo Christi Col. 16. Utroque re:

Petu, & Authoris & materiæ, Davenantius. [k] Rainoldus in Apologia Thesium de Sacra Script. & Eccles.

9. 7. and The Scripture hath ſhut up all men under ſin, Gal. 3. 22. for which in another place God hath ſhut up, Rom. 11.32.

All other diſciplines were from God, and every truth (whoſoever ſpeaks it) is from the Holy Ghoſt; but the Scripture in a ſingular manner is attributed to the Holy Ghoſt; he immediately dictated it to the Holy men of God.

The efficient principall cauſe then of the Scripture was God; the ten Commandments (of which moſt of the reſt is an expoſition) were written after a ſecret and unutterable manner by God himſelf, therefore they are called the writings of God, [l] Exod. 32.16. Secondly, all the reſt which was written (though men were the inſtruments) was done by his appointment and aſſiſtance, Exod. 17. 14. Iſa. 8.1. Jer. 30.2. The Scripture is often attributed to the Holy Ghoſt as the Author, and no mention is made of the Pen-men, Heb. 10. 15. The Prophets and Apoſtles were the Pen-men of the Scripture, whoſe Calling, Sending, and Inſpiration was certainly Divine; for whatſoever they taught the Church of God, or left in writing, they learned not before in the Schools, 1 Cor. 2.13.

[l] Tria concurrunt ut hoc dogma recipiam, Scripturam eſſe verbum Dei. Eſſe quoſdam libros Canonicos, & Divinos, atque hos ipſiſſimos eſſe quos in manibus habemus. Primum eſt Eccleſiæ traditio, quæ id affirmat, & ipſos libros mihi in manum tradit; ſecundum eſt ipſorum librorum divina materia, tertium eſt interna Spiritus efficacia. Epiſc. Daven. de Judic. controverſ. cap. 6.

What the Divine Authority of the Scripture is.

The Divine Authority of the Word may be defined, a certain dignity and excellency of the Scripture above all other ſayings or writings whatſoever; whereby it is perfectly [m] true in word and ſenſe; it deſerves credit in all ſayings, narrations of things paſt, preſent and to come, threatnings and promiſes, and as ſuperiour doth bind to obedience, if it either forbid or comand any thing, 1 Tim. 1. 15. 2 Pet. 1.19. John 5.39. Heb. 6.18. Rom. 1.5. 2 Cor. 10.5,6. & 13.3. & 12.12. Gal. 1.1,12,13. though the things in mans judgement ſeem unlike or incredible, or the Commandments hard and fooliſh to the carnal mind.

[m] Formale objectum fidei generaliter & abſolutè conſideratum eſt divina revelatio in tota ſua amplitudine accepta, ſeu divina authoritas cujuſlibet doctrinæ à Deo revelatæ, ſive ea ſcripta ſit, ſive non ſcripta. At formale objectum fidei illius qua creduntur ea quæ in Scriptura credenda proponuntur, eſt ipſius Scripturæ divina & canonica authoritas. Baronius adverſus Turnebullum.

Hereticks have laboured to prove their corrupt and damnable opinions out of the Scripture, and have received ſome books, if not all as Divine. The Turks at this day ſo eſteem the five books of Moſes, as they will kiſſe ſuch patches of Paper as they find having any part thereof written in the ſame. Ariſtæus an Heathen, when he had determined to have diſputed againſt Scripture, confeſſeth that he was forbidden by God in a dream. Plato is termed Moſes Atticus, Moſes ſpeaking Greek.

The holy Scripture in it ſelf is Divine and Authentical, though no man in the world ſhould ſo acknowledge it; as the Sun in it ſelf were light, though all the men in the world were blind, and could not, or would not ſee it; but in reſpect of us it is Divine and Authentical, when it is acknowledged and eſteemed ſo to be.

The deſcription of the Scripture. Rom. 1. 28. 2 Pet. 3.15,16. 2 Pet. 1.20,21. * 2 Tim. 3.16. Rom. 15. 5.

*The Scripture is the word of God; written by holy men as they were inſpired * by the holy Ghoſt, divinely containing all Divine Truth neceſſary to ſalvation, for the edification and inſtruction of Gods Church thereunto, and for the glory of God.*

The holy Scriptures are that Divine inſtrument and meanes, by which we are taught to believe what we ought touching God, and our ſelves, and all creatures, and how to pleaſe God in all things unto eternall life, Robinſ. Eſſayes 8th Obſerv. Divines have given almoſt fourty ſeveral Arguments to prove the Scriptures to be the word of God.

Scriptura eſt verbum Dei ejuſdem voluntate à Prophetis, Evangeliſtis & Apoſtolis in literas redactum, doctrinam de eſſentia & volun-

That the Scriptures were from God, may appear by ſeveral Reaſons:

1. Intrinſecal, taken out of the Scriptures themſelves.
2. Extrinſecal acts of God and works of providence about them.

1. Intrinſecal. 1. From the excellency of the matter, which is heavenly, the divine and ſupernaturall matter contained in it. It telleth us of ſuch things as do far exceed the reach of mans reaſon, and which it was impoſſible for any man to counterfeit and feign, and which being told are ſo correſpondent to reaſon, that no man can

can ſee juſt cauſe to call them into queſtion; as the Doctrine of Creation of all things in ſix daies; the Doctrine of the fall of our firſt Parents; the Story of the Delivering Iſrael out of Egypt, of the Delivering of the Law and ten Commandments; the Doctrine of the Incarnation of Chriſt Jeſus, of the Reſurrection of the dead, of the laſt Judgement, of the life to come, and of the Immortality of the ſoul. For though this laſt was taught alſo by Philoſophers, yet it is ſo doubtfully and unperfectly handled by them in compariſon of the delivering thereof in Scripture, that it is apparent, it was another Spirit which guided the teachers of it here, than they were guided withall. What Angel could ever have found out ſuch an admirable temper and mixture of Mercy and Juſtice together, as the Goſpel revealeth in the reconciliation of God with man? God hath declared himſelf to be moſt juſt, yet moſt mercifull, Rom. 3.24,25,26. Juſtice requires that there ſhould be no freeing of a guilty perſon without ſatisfaction; ſinne deſerved an infinite puniſhment, that ſatisfaction could not be made by man himſelf; mercy therefore provides a Saviour, which God beſtows on him, verſ. 25. God in giving and eſtabliſhing his Law, uſeth no other Preface, but I am the Lord, Exod.20. nor Concluſion, but I the Lord have ſpoken it; upon his abſolute authority without other reaſons to perſwade, commanding what is to be done, though it be contrary to our natures; forbidding what is to be left undone, though pleaſing to us; he promiſeth things incomprehenſible, requiring Faith; he relateth and teacheth things ſtrange, above likelihood, above mans capacity; and yet will have them to be believed, to be underſtood. There is nothing in the Law againſt reaſon or common equity. Petrus Maffæus a Jeſuite reports in his Hiſtory, that when his fellows came firſt to preach in the Eaſt-Indies, the Gentiles and Indies there hearing the ten Commandments, did much commend the equity of them. See Sr Walter Rawleighs Hiſtory. The Lacedemonians were permitted to ſteal, by their Laws, ſo they were not taken in the fact. Mahomet allured his followers with fair promiſes of ſecurity and carnall pleaſures. The firſt leſſon learnt in Chriſts-School is ſelf-denial, Mark 10.31.

2. It teacheth the Nature and Excellency of God, and the Works of God, more clearly and diſtinctly than any other writings, nay, than any without God could have contrived, viz. That there are three perſons and one God; that God is Infinite, Omniſcient, Omnipotent, moſt Holy; that he created all things, that he doth by a particular Providence rule all things; that he obſerves all mens actions, and will call them to account, and give every man according to his works; that he alone is to be worſhipped, and that he muſt be obeyed in his Word above all creatures.

tate Dei perfectè ac perſpicuè exponens, ut ex eo homines erudiantur ad vitam æternam. Gerh. de Script. Sac. loc. 1. Scriptura eſt expreſſio quædam ſapientiæ Dei affiata è Sancto Spiritu piis hominibus, deinde monumentis literiſq; conſignata. Pet. Martyr. loc. commun. l. 6. Scriptura eſt inſtrumentum divinum quo Doctrina ſalutaris à Deo per Prophetas & Evangeliſtas tanquam Dei actuarios in libris Canonicis veteris & novi Teſtamenti eſt tradita. Synop. pur. Theol. Scriptura eſt inſtrumentum ſacrum, quo doctrina divina ac ſalutaris à Deo per Prophetas, Apoſtolos & Evangeliſtas fideliter, perſpicuè ac plenè in libris canonicis veteris ac novi Teſtamenti eſt tradita. Walæus loc. commun. Vide traitté de L'eſcriture Sainčte par Meſtrezat.

c.9. 9. What power of humane underſtanding could have found out the incarnation of a God, that two Natures, a finite, and an infinite, could have been concentred into one Perſon, that a Virgin ſhould be a mother, that dead men ſhould live again? Dr Taylor on Rom.8.9.10. The Perſon and Offices of Jeſus Chriſt the Mediator are both altogether wonderful, *Iſa.*9.6. 1 Tim 2.5. & 3.16. God and man united in one Perſon, to unite God and man in one Covenant. The purity and integrity of the Law ſhew the Divinity of it, *Matth.*22.37. & 5.7. ch. per tot. and the ſublimity of evangecial myſteries, *Eph.*3.8,9,18.19. 1 *Cor.*2.7,9. *Rom.*11 33. It was utterly impoſſible that any wit of man, by the light of nature, or ſtrength of humane diſcourſe, ſhould have been able to have found out that way which Almighty God hath appointed for our ſalvation, if it had not pleaſed him to make it known to the world by ſupernaturall revelation. The wiſeſt Philoſophers and learnedeſt Rabbies, nor did, nor could ever have dreamed of any ſuch thing, till God revealed it to his Church by his Prophets and Apoſtles, Col. 1.26. 1 *Cor.*2.8,10. Dr Sanderſon on 1 Tim.3.16. Vide Bay. 1. Inſtitut. Relig. Chriſt. l. 1. c. 33. Quot & quibus mediis Arti. culi Chriſtiana fidei credibiles reddantur. In this Book we read more truths, and the ſame more clear concerning the eternall Deity, the nature and imployment of Angels, the nature, operations, and qualities of the immortal ſoul, than in any Book in the world. Mr Lawſons Body of Divinity, l. 1. c. 2. The Doctrine of the Scripture is wonderfull concerning God, Pſal. 139. 6. the creation of all things of nothing, and of mans body, Pſal. 139. 14. Gods providence, *Pſal.*40.5. the work of redemption, 1 Tim. 3.16. The Law is wonderfull, as a rule of life. 1. The precepts are pure, Pſal. 119.96. juſt, *Rom.*7.12. wiſe, Deut. 4.6. God and our neighbours are provided for, the ſanction it is eſtabliſht by everlaſting rewards and puniſhments, 2 *Cor.*9.17. 2. As a Covenant of works, The creature is miſerable unleſs God help him, Rom. 11.32. Gal. 3.22. The Goſpel is every way wonderfull. See Dr Arrowſmiths Chain of *Princip Aphor.*4. See Mr Goodwin in his divine Authority of the Scripture aſſerted, p. 64. brings ten Arguments, brought from the ſubject matter of the Scriptures, to prove their divine originall. The Doctrine of the Goſpel, qua Evangelicall, as it ſtands diſtinguiſht from the Law, is wholly myſterious and ſupernaturall, 2 *Cor.*6.8,9,10. Therefore it is often called a myſtery, *Rom.*16.25. 1 *Cor.*2.7,10. *Eph.*2.4. & 6.18. Col. 2. & 4.5. 1 *Tim.*3.9,16. See Mat. 16.19. It is above naturall reaſon, and againſt carnall reaſon, the perſon of Chriſt, Col. 2.9. his name is wonderfull, *Iſa.*9.6. and the internall operation of the word is wonderfull.

God (ſay Divines) hath three Schooles.

1. The Schoole of his Word, wherein things are clearly taught.
2. Of his Grace, wherein things are effectually taught.
3. Of Affliction, wherein things are experimentally taught.

Zanchy ſaith, There are three Glaſſes, in which God manifeſts himſelf to us.

1. The Glaſſe of the Creature.
2. The Glaſſe of the Holy Scripture.
3. Of Jeſus Chriſt; In that Glaſſe alone God is rightly known and perfectly ſhines.

3. It requireth the moſt exact and perfect goodneſs that can be, ſuch as no man could ever have conceited in his brain, and yet ſuch as being taught and revealed, the conformity of it to right reaſon will enforce any well-conſidering man to acknowledge it to be moſt true and needfull; for example, that a man muſt love God above all, and his neighbour as himſelf; that he muſt keep his thoughts free from all the leaſt taint of ſin, that he muſt lay up his treaſures in Heaven, not care for this life, and the things thereof, but all his ſtudy and labour muſt be to provide well for himſelf againſt the future life; that he muſt not at all truſt in himſelf, nor in any man, but only in God; and that he muſt do all he doth in Gods ſtrength; that he can deſerve nothing at Gods hand, but muſt look for all of free favour through the merits and interceſſion of another.

Triplex ratio eſt, qua nobis innoteſcat ſacrorum librorum authoritas. Prima Eccleſiæ teſtimonium, eos libros approbantis, recipientis & commendantis. Secunda interna Spiritus Sancti perſuaſio, eam ipſam authoritatem cordibus noſtris inſcribentis, eoque perſuadentis. Tertia ipſorum librorum ut ita dicam, genius! Summum gradum obtinet teſtimonium Spiritus, infimum vero teſtimonium Eccleſiæ. Chamierus de Canone. l.1.c.1.

John 7. 18. and 5. 41. and 8. 50, 54. All other writings teach a man to place felicity at beſt in himſelf and in his own virtue. Theſe lift up to God, and bid him place his felicity in him.

4. The end of the Scripture is Divine, viz. The glory of God, ſhining in every ſyllable thereof; and the ſalvation of man, not temporal, but eternal. Theſe writings lead a man wholly out of himſelf, and out of the whole world, and from and above all the creatures to the Creator alone, to give him the glory of all victories: therefore they are from him, and not from any creature; for he that is the Author of any writing will ſurely have moſt reſpect of himſelf in that writing. The Scriptures manifeſt Gods glory alone, Jer. 9.23,24. 1 Cor. 1.31. aſcribe infiniteneſs of being, and all perfections to him, *Nehem.*9.6. The Doctrines, Precepts, Prohibitions, and Narrations tend to the ſetting forth of his glory, and bring ſolid and eternal comfort and ſalvation to their ſouls which follow their direction. They make us wiſe unto ſalvation, 2 Tim.3.15,23. ſhew the path of life, Pſal.16.11. Guide our feet into the way of peace, Luk. 1.79. Chriſt, John 7. 18. proves that he came from God, becauſe he ſought not his own glory, but the glory of him that ſent him.

Philoſophers ſet their own names to the Books which they wrote againſt vain-glory, and therein ſought it themſelves. There are Lumina orationis in the Sermons of the Prophets which ſurpaſſe the eloquence of all the Heathen.

Stylus is an inſtrument with which they wrote, and was a ſharp pointed Iron; a word now ſignifying (the original, hence taken) the peculiar kind of phraſe which any man uſeth, as negligens ſtylus in Quintilian, and exercitatus ſtylus, in Cicero. Dr Heylins extraneus vapulans, out of his Microcoſm. ch. 2. Stylus Scripturæ aliquando eſt exegematicus, quum ſolus Scriptor, aliquando dramaticus, quum alia perſona quam Scriptor: Sæpius mixtus, quum & Scriptor & alia perſonæ loquuntur, quæ varietas niſi prudenter diſcernatur, magna oritur obſcuritas, Bilterf. Diſput.at. De Divin. Script. Sac.emin.p.90. Eſt in Scripturæ ſtylo neſcio quid quod effari non poſſum, præſentiſcitur tamen ab iis, qui legunt, quo facile eum diſcernas à ſcriptis humanis. Camero *Tom.*3.p.135.

5. Another reaſon is taken from the difference of theſe writings from all other whatſoever, in regard of their phraſe and manner of writing. There is a certain authoritative or God-like ſpeaking unto the creature from place to place. See the firſt Chapter of Iſaiah, and 53. and the eighth Chapter to the Romans. The Prophets and Apoſtles propound divine truths nakedly and without affectation, 1 Cor. 2.1. Habent ſacræ Scripturæ, ſed non oſtendunt eloquentiam. Auguſt. They expreſſe the things they handle with a comely gravity, the form of ſpeech is fitted both to the dignity of the ſpeaker, the nature of the thing revealed, and mans capacity, for whoſe ſake it was written. All other Writings uſe perſwaſive and flouriſhing ſpeeches, theſe command, and condemn all other Gods, all other Religions, all other Writings, and command theſe only to be had in requeſt and eſteem, and acknowledged

knowledged as the will of God, without adding or diminiſhing, requiring every conſcience to be ſubject to them, and to prepare himſelf to obedience, without any further objecting or gain-ſaying, and to ſeek no further than to them for [a] direction. Both the Simplicity and majeſty of ſtile ſhew it to be from God; the wonderfull plainneſſe and yet glorious Majeſty; the Simplicity becauſe it is plain, in no wiſe deceitfull; and becauſe it deſcribes great matters in words familiar and obvious to the capacity of the Reader: the Majeſty, ſince it teacheth ſo perſpicuouſly the chiefeſt myſteries of Faith and divine Revelation which are above humane capacity. Whether we read David, Iſaiah, or others whoſe [b] ſtile is more ſweet, pleaſant and rhetorical; or Amos, Zachary, and Jeremiah, whoſe ſtile is more rude, every where the Majeſty of the Spirit is apparent. There is an Authority and Majeſty in them above all other Writings of other Authors; the Scriptures command all both King and People, Jer. 13. 18. 1 Sam. 12. ult. and bind the heart to its good abearing. Jerome could ſay, as oft as I read Paul, it ſeems to me that they are not words but thunders, which I hear. Junius reading the firſt Chapter of John was ſtricken with amazement by a kind of Divine and ſtupendious Authority, and ſo he was converted from Atheiſm, as himſelf ſaith in his life, Divinitatem argumenti & authoritatem ſentio. Johannes Iſaac [c] a Jew was converted by reading the 53. of Iſaiah. Hackſpan (Tractat. de uſu Librorum Rabbinicorum, c. 2. Sect. 3.) ſaith that Gerſon a Jew was converted, è lectione ſcriptorum Apoſtolicorum, nullo præceptore alio. Our Saviour ſpake, As one having Authority, not as the Scribes; ſo this book ſpeaks not as men; it ſimply affirms all things without proof; other Authors uſe many Arguments to confirm the truth of what they ſay. Therefore Raimundus de [d] Sabunda hence proves, That he who ſpeaketh in the Bible is of that Authority, that his bare word ought to be believed without any proof; whereas Galen Atheiſtically urgeth it the other [e] way. The Socinians reject all things in Religion which they cannot comprehend by reaſon, Nihil credendum quod ratione capi nequeat. They hold, That a man is not bound to believe any Article of Faith, nor any Interpretation of Scripture, except it agree with his reaſon; what is above reaſon cannot be comprehended by it. Bernard in 192 of his Epiſtles, ſpeaks of one Petrus Abailardus which vented the Socinian Doctrine in his time, Chriſtiana fidei meritum vacuare nititur, dum totum, quod Deus eſt, humana ratione arbitratur poſſe comprehendere. Cum de Trinitate (ſaith he) loquitur, ſapit Arium, cùm de gratia Pelagium, cùm de perſona Chriſti Neſtorium; He was a man of a fair carriage, profeſſing holineſſe, converſatio mel, doctrina venenum. But Abailardus denies this in his Works lately publiſhed. Tertullian called the Philoſophers (who followed reaſon) Patriarchas hæreticorum, peſſimum eſt illud principium recta ratio, non poteſt ſtatuere de cultu divino. There are theſe uſes of reaſon, 1. To prepare us that we ſhould hearken to the Word. 2. After we have believed it will help us to judg of things. 3. To prevent

There are ſome Doctrines of the Scripture, ſome Revelations in it, ſo ſublimely glorious, that at the firſt propoſal of them, nature ſtartles, ſhrinks, ſuch are the Doctrines of the Trinity, of the Incarnation of the Sonne of God, of the Reſurrection of the dead, of the new-birth. Dr Owen of the Divine original of Scripture.

Stylus prophæticus eſt ſtylus Poeticus.

Jeremy ſpeaketh in a prieſtly grave ſtile, Eſay in a lofty courtly ſtile, Paul is argumentativè, John ſeraphical. Dr Harris near his end, did eſpecially read the Book of the Pſalms, the Prophecy of Iſaiah, and St Johns Goſpel, where he took exceeding delight in the 10, 14, 15, 16, 17. Chapters of that Evangeliſt, and the 8th of the Romans. Communis hoc ſemper mortalium omnium conſenſus habuit verſari quandam in rebus futurorum præſenſionem; eamque divinitatis eſſe propriam, unde apud Latinos ea res divinationis nomen invenit. Petavius de Angelis l. 1. c. 9. vide plura, ibid. The ſpirit foretold ſuch things as art and nature could not foreſee. Prediction is, 1. Naturall as the foretelling of eclipſes by Aſtronomers, Mat. 16. 3. 2. Conjecturall, ſo wiſe men, ſee Guicchardine of Savanarola, 3. Diabolicall, of Heathenish Prophets, wiſards, as the Books of the Sibyls among the Romans. 4. Divine, which is properly Prophetical.

[a] Auſtin was ſo delighted with the Oratory of Ambroſe, that he contemned the Scripture as neither learned nor eloquent enough, yet afterward when he ſaw his own ſhallowneſs, he admired the profundity of Gods holy Oracles, and held the ſtile of them very venerable. Totus ſermo è medio ſumptus eſt, vulgatus & uſitatus, & quamvis altiori & grandiſono genere uti poterat Chriſtus, tamen humili contentus eſt. Lege Geneſeos librum, quàm ſunt omnia ſubmiſſa. Equidem arbitror nullam linguam, adeo inaffectatam eſſe, adeò ſimplicem & familiarem. Hinc Dialogiſmis, narratiunculis, ſimilitudinibus plena ſunt omnia Biblia. Humfredus de Interpretatione linguarum, l. 2 p. 268, 269. [b] Licet tam verba quam res amanuenſibus ſuis Spiritus Sanctus dictavit, attemperavit tamen & ſe cujuſque amanuenſis ſtylo & cujuſq; ſæculi dialecto, unde alius eſt Jeſaias, alius Amoſ ſtylus, Aliqua alia Job, Moſis, alia Davidis, alia Ezræi, Haggæi, Danielis, &c. dialectus. Amama Anti-Barb Bibl. l. 3. [c] Hoc ego ingenuè profiteor, caput illud, 53. Iſa. ad fidem Chriſtianam me adduxiſſe. Joh. Iſaac contra Lindan. Auſtin heard a ſupernatural voice, ſaying, Tolle lege, tolle lege. He firſt fell upon that place, Rom. 13. 12, 13. Confeſ. l. 8 c. 12. [d] Scriptura ſimpliciter abſque probatione omnia dicit & affirmat; in aliis libris probantur omnia quæ ibi dicuntur per rationes & argumentationes. Biblia affirmant Deum creaſſe cœlum & terram: affirmat mundum habuiſſe principium, & nihil probat; hoc ſignificat illum qui loquitur in Bibliis & dicit iſta verba, eſſe tantæ Authoritatis, quod ei debet credi ſimplici verbo ſine aliquâ probatione. Raimund. de Sabund. in Theol. naturali. [e] Moſes multum dicit, ſed nihil probat.

fanatick opinions, Myſteries of Religion are not repugnant to reaſon. 4. That we may draw neceſſary conſequences from truths revealed. * The Philoſopers called the Chriſtians by way of ſcorn Credentes. Julian derided the Chriſtian belief, becauſe it had no other proof, then Thus ſaith the Lord. There is an obedience of faith, Rom. 1.5.

6. Another Argument is taken from the experience of the truth of the Predictions and Prophecies thereof. For ſeeing it is generally confeſſed, that only the Divine Eſſence, can certainly foreſee things contingent wich are to come many ages after, and which depend upon no neceſſary cauſe in nature; Iſai. 41. 22,23. & 44.6. & 46. 10. and therefore in what writings we meet with ſuch things fore-told, and do find them fully and plainly accompliſht, theſe writings we muſt confeſs to have their birth from God. Now in the Scripture we have divers ſuch predictions. The two principal and cleareſt which are moſt obvious and evident, are, 1. The Converſion of the Gentiles to the God of Iſrael, by means of Chriſt. Vide Hornbeck contra Judæos, l. 3. c. 4. For that was fore-told exceeding often and plainly, In him ſhall the Gentiles truſt, and he ſhall be a light to the Gentiles. Jacob lying on his death-bed ſaid, The obedience of the Gentiles ſhall be to him; And David, All the ends of the earth ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God; and Iſaiah, In him ſhall the Gentiles truſt; and Malachy, My name ſhall be great to the ends of the earth. See Iſa. 49.6. & 60.3,5. Scarce one of the Prophets but have ſpoken of the converſion of the Gentiles. Now we ſee the Gentiles turned from their Idols a great number of them, and imbracing the God of the Jews, and the Scriptures of the Jews by means of Chriſt, whom they ſee and acknowledg to be the Meſſias fore-told to the Jews. Again, it was fore-told that Chriſt ſhould be a ſtone of offence to the Jews, that they ſhould reject him, and ſo be rejected by God from being a people. Do we not ſee that to be performed? The accompliſhment of theſe two main Prophecies ſo long before delivered to the world by the Pen-men of holy writ, ſhews manifeſtly, that they were moved by the holy Ghoſt.

Not to mention propheſies in the New Teſtament, whereof the principall magazine is the Apocalypſe, the Old contains very many predictions beyond the activity of humane fore-ſight. Dr Arrowſmiths Chain of Princip. Aphor. 2. 3. exercit.

* Vide Voet. Theſ. de Ratione Humana in Rebus Fidei, & precipuè Vedel. Rationale Theol. lib. 2. cap. 6. & lib. 3. cap. 17. & per totum. Eſt Divinatio, ergo ſunt Dii. Tully. All the world hath acknowledged Divinity in ſuch preſcience. The Larins made known their ſenſe of it to be ſuch in the name by which they called it, that is, Divinatio, Dr Ingelo on Luk. 16.29. See more there of the Authority of the Holy Scripture. The fore-telling of future things is an evident ſign of a Divinity, and for that cauſe this kind of prediction is called Divination; as if to tell what events are to happen, were a proper ſign of a Divinity or Deity; See Sr Walter Rawleighs Ghoſt, l. 1. c. 12. If there be a God, he ought to be worſhipped, and he cannot be worſhipped, unleſs he manifeſt himſelf unto us, as he hath done in the Scripture. Vide Kimedoneium de Scripto Dei verb. l. 2. c. 16. The Lord is therefore careſull to ſet a Star or Selah to the fulfilling of predictions, thirty times in the New Teſtament it is ſaid, Then was fulfilled, that which was fore-told by ſuch a Prophet. Idoneum teſtimonium Divinitatis, veritas Divinationis, Tertullianus Apol. c. 10. Accedunt prædictionum ejuſmodi innumerabilia prorſus exempla, quæ quotidianus uſus ac communis hominum fama celebrat, futurorum ac plane liberorum eventuum, certe nullis habentium neceſſarias cauſas, Petav. dog. Theol. Tom. 3. De Angelis l. 1. c. 9.

† Cyrus was propheſied of an hundred years before he was born. Iſa. 44.28. & 35 1. Joſias three hundred before his birth. 1 King. 13. 2.

That Promiſe, Gen. 3.15. was made 3948 years before it was fulfilled, † as Scaliger computes it. Chriſt proved himſelf to be the Meſſiah by his accompliſhing of the propheſies concerning him, Luke 24. 44. and the Apoſtles alſo Acts 10. 43. and 26. 22, 23. It was fore-told of Chriſt, that they ſhould caſt lots about his Garments, and that his bones ſhould not be broken. Look upon this in the inferiour cauſes, the ſouldiers that brake the other mens bones, and it ſeems to be a very hap and chance; yet there was a ſpecial ordering of this in Gods providence.

God told Abraham, his poſterity ſhould be as the Stars in Heaven, when he had no child, nor hope of a child, and that his poſterity ſhould ſojourn in a ſtrange land for 430 years, Exod. 12.31. The prediction of the four Monarchies in Daniel.

The predictions of Satan were doubtfull and ‖ ambiguous, but theſe * are diſtinct and plain; Satans predictions are of things which might be gathered by conjecture, for the moſt part falſe, though Satan cover his lying by likelihoods, but theſe are above the reach of Angels, moſt true and certain; Satans end was confirmation in ſin and Idolatry.

‖ The Oracles of the Gentiles needed Delio natatore, the ſwimmer Apollo to expound them. Verba oraculorum fermè ambigua, & quæ facilè interpretationem ex qualicunque eventu acciperent. Cicero de Divinatione. 2. Utrum eorum accidiſſet, inquit, verum oraculum fuiſſet. Grotius de veritate Religionis Chriſtiana. l. 4. * The predictions of the Prophets differ much from the deviliſh Prophecies of the Heathen.

7. The

7. The Commandements are, 1. Moſt righteous and equal; 2. Impartiall, they binde all men, and all in men, the affections, thoughts and conſciences, and that perpetually. The ſevereſt Law-givers never made Laws for the thoughts, becauſe they had no means to diſcover and controll them. Cogitationis pœnam nemo patitur: We ſay commonly, Thoughts are free; therefore it is the Word of God which ſearcheth the heart, *Exod.*20.17. True love to our ſelves is required, and we are to love our neighbour as our ſelves. The Laws of men do not binde the conſcience, at leaſt, primarily and immediately, Conſcientia immediatè Deo tantùm ſubjicitur. He only can command the conſcience, that knows it and can judge it.

Deu.17.15, 16 Pſalm 2. The Promiſes and Threatnings exceed the limits of any mortal power, to beſtow or inflict everlaſting life and death; and to aſſure the accompliſhment, this is the only reaſon, The Lord hath ſpoken, or, The zeal of the Lord of hoſts will do it.

Secondly, The threatnings are general, 1. In reſpect of Perſons. 2. In reſpect of things, *Deut.*28.59,60. and dreadfull; they threaten eternal miſery. 3. The Promiſes are comprehenſive bleſſings of all kindes, *Lev.*26. and ſtrange, *Exod.*34.24. of eternal life, Mark 10.29,30. 1 Pet. 1.4.

8. Another reaſon may be taken from the Antiquity [h] of the Scripture; many wonder at the Pyramids of Ægypt, being the moſt ancient ſtructure in the world. The Bible contains a continued Hiſtory from age to age, for the ſpace of four thouſand years before Chriſt, even from the beginning. No Writer of any humane Story can be proved to be more ancient than Ezra and Nehemiah, who wrote about the year of the world 3500. Amongſt the Grecians (ſome ſay) Homer is the moſt ancient Authour that is extant, who lived long after Troy was taken, for that was the ſubject of his Poem. Now thoſe times were not near ſo ancient as thoſe in which the Scripture was written. Homer was after Moſes [i] ſix hundred and odde years, ſaith Peter du Moulin. That which the Ægyptians brag of their Antiquity is fabulous; By their account they were ſix thouſand years before the Creation, unleſſe they account a moneth for a year, and then it maketh nothing againſt this Argument.

[h] Primum quodque veriſſimum. Tertul. The Jewiſh Nation was the moſt ancient of all; therefore the Scripture, which was delivered to them. Cameron de verbo Dei.

Pſa.119.52. 2 Pet,1.21. God himſelf firſt delivered the commanding word, Of every tree thou ſhalt eat. 2. The promiſing word after the fall, The ſeed of the woman ſhall break the Serpents head. Adam was a Miniſter of the word, and Enoch the ſeventh Patriarch, Noah a 120. years before the Floud; after the Floud, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob; then Moſes and the Prophets. Neirembergius de Origine Sacræ Scripturæ, l.4. c.3. & 4. diſcuſſeth thoſe two Queſtions, whether the tables of the Decalogue were the firſt Scripture? and whether Moſes or God wrote them? The word is ancient. 1. In its original, ſo eternal. 2. In reſpect of its manifeſtation, in that reſpect truth is ſaid to be the daughter of time. [i] Between Orpheus his writings, which was the Heathens ancienteſt Poet, and Moſes, are at leaſt five hundred years. B. Andrews. Moſes antiquiſſimus & fideliſſimus Hiſtoricus. Erpenius. Vide Voſſium de Philologia. l. 10. & Simſon Paraſcev. ad Chron. Cathol. c.1. Nam cum tot ſæcula interceſſerint, neque addere quis unquam neque auferre aut permutare quid auſus eſt, ſed omnibus gentis noſtræ hominibus inſita hæc quodamodo atque ingenita fides eſt, credere hæc Dei eſſe conſulta, & his jugiter inhærere, ac pro ipſis (ſi ita res poposcerit) libenter & animam ponere. Euſeb. *Eccleſ. Hiſt. l.*3. Cenſeo igitur, & meum ſenſum congrua diſſertatione comprobabo, primam literarum inventionem & mirandum ſcripturæ artis uſum patefactum Moyſi, ut divinam doctrinam ſcriberet, atque ſacram Scripturam primum omnium librorum fuiſſe. Tunc enim orbis literarum uſum ignorabat. Hinc meritò libri ſacri appellantur Scripturæ. Siquidem in ipſis Scriptura cæpta eſt, hoc eſt, ſcribendi ars. Neirembergius *de origine Sacræ Scripturæ, l.*1. c.10. Vide plura ibid. & c.11. & l.2. & 3.

Hiſtory is an uſefull and delightfull kinde of Inſtruction. Among Hiſtories none are comparable to the Hiſtories of ſacred Scripture: and that in their Antiquity, Rarity, Variety, Brevity, Perſpicuity, Harmony and Verity. Dr Gouge on Exodus 13.13. That Song of Moſes, Exo.15. was the firſt Song that ever was in the world. [k] Orpheus, Muſæus and Linus, the moſt ancient of the Poets were five hundred years after this time. The doctrine of the Goſpel is an ancient doctrine, firſt preacht to Adam and Eve in Paradiſe, Gen,3.15. after to Abraham, Gal.3.8. and the Prophets.

[k] M. Burroughs on Hoſea. Hoc primum eſt omnium canticorum quæ fuiſſe unquam fabula, vel cantata, ſive in ſacris, ſive in exoticis literarum monumentis proditum ſit. Simſ. *Chron. Cathol. par.*10. Primum canticum, cujus meminit Scriptura, hoc eſt, quod antiquitate, ut excellentia eminet, ſupra omnia cantica aut hymnos, qui ab antiquitate ethnica nobis ſuerunt relicti, ut a Muſæo & Orpheo, ac ſimilibus alii. Rivetus *in Exod.c.*15.

9. The Power and Efficacy of the Scripture upon the [l] ſouls of men, ſheweth it to be of God; and the wonderfull alteration that it makes in a man for God; when Heb.4.12. Pſa.19.7. Luke 21.15.

[l] See the powerfull working of it in Pharaoh, Felix, thoſe in Acts 2.37. & 41. See Act. 5.6. 1 Cor.2.5. & 14.25 Iſa.11.6,7,8,9.

be

he doth entertain and beleeve it in his heart. 1. It discovereth to a man his deep corruptions, *Rom.*7.7. & 3.20. & 4.15. 2. It makes him more than a man in power to oppose, resist and fight against his own corruptions; it brings him into a wonderfull familiarity and acquaintance with God. It puts such a life and strength into him, that for Gods sake and his truth he can suffer all the hardest things in the world without almost complaining, yea, with wonderfull rejoycing, Psal. 119.92. The holy Ghost by means of this word works powerfully, [m] in changing and reforming a man, *Joh.*5.25, 1. It overmasters the soul. 2. It separates the heart from lusts, and the world. 3. Alters and changeth the customes of men. 4. It keeps the heart up against all the power of the devil.

m Non movent sacra literæ, sed persuadent, sed cogunt, agitant, vim inferunt. Legis rudia verba & agrestia, sed viva, sed animata, flammea, aculeata, ad imum spiritum penetrantia, hominem totum prætestate Mirabili transformantia. Picus Mirandula ad Hermolaum Barbarum. Da mihi virum, qui sit iracundus, maledicus, effrænatus; paucissimis Dei verbis tam placidum, quam ovem, reddam. Lactantius *de Falsa Sap. l.*3. *sect.*25. vide plura ibid. Leguntur verba Piscatorum, & colla subduntur Oratorum. Aug. de verb. Dom. serm 59. Christiana doctrinæ vim & efficacitatem tum utriusque paginæ testamenti; tum sanctorum Patrum luculenta, crebraque testimonia celebrant, dum repentinam & admirabilem in hominibus vitiorum, ac voluptatum sordibus immersam mutationem animorum, illius opera factam prædicant, & accensum in illis virtutum omnium, imprimisque tolerantiæ & adversus carnis, ac peccati blanditias fortitudinis, constantiæque studium, ut ex sola morum, vitæque commutatione conjecturam caperent olim ethnici de Christiana religione, ab iis susceptæ, quos noverant, quosque caros, vel propinquos haberent; quod Justinus Martyr, Tertullianus, Minutius Fœlix, Lactantius, alique narrant. Perav. *Theol. Dog. Tom.*4. *Pars altera. de Incarn. l.*12. *c.*6. The publike efficacy of the Gospel in the world appeared, 1. By silencing the Oracles. 2. by abolishing idols, *Isa.*2.18. *Zeph.*2.11. and overthrowing the kingdom of Satan. The power of it over the particular consciences of men, is 1. of authority in commanding, *Rom.*3 27. 1 Tim 4.11. judging, Joh. 12.48. 2. of activity and energy.

It reveals the deep mysteries of God, 1 *Cor.*2.2. It is compared to a sword. Eph. 6.17. to fire, to a hammer, *Isa.*23.29. called the arm of the Lord, Isa. 53.1. the power of God to salvation, Rom.1.16. 1 Cor.1.21. a word of salvation. The word of life, Phil.2.16. the word of his grace, Acts 18.3. & 20.32. salvation it self, Ephes. 1.13. Acts 28.28. This efficacy comes not from the word in the letter of it, but from divine institution, Gods blessing on it, and working with it, 2 Cor. 10.4. & 4.7. Mark ult. ult. It quickneth the dull, Psa 119.93,107. comforteth the feeble, Rom. 15.4. giveth light to the simple, Psa. 19.7. *Psa.*119.98,99,100. convinceth the obstinate, 1 *Cor.*12.3. & 14 24. reproveth errors, rebuketh vices, 2 *Tim.*3.16. is a discerner of the thoughts, 1 Cor. 14.24,25. and aweth the conscience, James 4.12.

n They did as it were Transcribere animas, publish their own faults. D. Preston.

The Swenkfeldians, Enthusiasts, Libertines, deny the efficacy of the Word, they say, that saving power is not to be had from the Scripture, but God himself alone: the Word alone doth it not, but as set on by the Spirit.

10. The Candour and Sincerity of the Pen-men or Amanuenses [n], respecting Gods glory only, and not their own; and in setting down not only the sinnes of others, but their own slips and infirmities, doth testifie that they were guided by the holy Ghost, Moses shews his disobedience, Numb. 11.11. Jonah his murmuring, Jonah 1.4. Jeremiah his fretting, *Jer.*20.14. David shames himself in his Preface to the 51 Psalm. St Mark wrote the Gospel out of Peters mouth, and yet the denial of Peter is more expresly laid down by the Evangelist Saint Mark than any other; and Paul sets down with his own Pen his own faults in a sharper manner than any other. Matthew [o] the Evangelist tels us of Matthew the Publican. The Pen-men of the holy Scripture were holy men, called, sent, inspired by the Spirit, which had denied the world with the lusts and affections thereof, and were wholly consumed with zeal for the glory of God, and salvation of men, 2 *Pet.*3.15. 2 Tim. 3.16. *Matth.*16.17. *Gal.*2.11,12. *Eph.*2.3,5. They learned not of men what they wrote; Moses, David, Amos, were Herdsmen; Jeremiah was almost a childe; Peter, James, and John, were in their ships; other Apostles were unlearned before their Calling, *Act.*4.13. Moses learned of the Ægyptians, and Daniel of the Caldeans humane Arts and Sciences; but they could not learn of them the knowledge of the true God, they themselves being ignorant and grosse Idolaters. Neither could they erre in that which they delivered, for by them the Spirit of Christ, and Christ himself did speak, 1 *Pet.*1.11. 2 Pet. 1.21. *Act.*28.25. 2 *Cor.*13.3. In their own judgement the most holy did erre, as 1 *Sam.*16.1. and Nathan, 2 Sam.6. which errour

o They dispraise all mankinde, abase man and make him the vilest of all creatures except the devils. 1 Tim 1.12. Revel 22.8. p Matth.9.9 The Writers of the Scriptures wrote them when the world bare greatest hatred against them, and yet never any durst write a book against Moses in his time, or against the Gospel in those daies. Act.4.13. Dan.1. Exo.5.2. Lev.18.3. Ezek.8.

errour is truly related in the Scripture, but when they ſpake according to the guidance of the Spirit, which did ever aſſiſt them in the penning of the Scripture, they could [p] not erre. I have learned (ſaith Auguſtine to Jerome) to give this honour only to the Canonical Books, firmly to believe that no author of them erred in writing; from all others he expected proof from Scripture or Reaſon.

p Solis libris Canonicis debetur fides, Cæteris omnibus judicium. Luther.

11. The wonderful Conſent, ſingular Harmony and Agreement [q] of the Scriptures (though the Authours thereof lived in ſeverall times, and at ſo great a diſtance, that there paſſed near two thouſand years between Moſes and John the Divine and Evangeliſt; and near fifteen hundred between Moſes and Malachy. Accedit huc Prophetarum inter ipſos admirabilis conſenſus, quum inter Philoſophos mundi tam varia ſit opinionum pugna. Eraſ. Explanat. Symb. Apoſt.) ſhews that they came not from men, but from God, *Luk.*1.70. *Act.*3.18. *Joh.*5.46. each part ſweetly agreeth with it ſelf, and with another, and with the whole, Mat. 17. beg. Acts 26.22. & 11.17. Luke 24.27,44. John 5 45. *Matth.*4.4. what was foretold in the Old is fulfilled in the New Teſtament. If there ſeem any contrariety either in numbring of years, circumſtance of time and place, or point of Doctrine, the fault is in our apprehenſion and ignorance, not in the thing it ſelf, and by a right interpretation may eaſily be cleared. See D. Willet on *Gen.*24.38.

q Incredibilis quædam & planè divina conſpiratio, atque concordia tot virorum, qui diverſis locis, temporibus, linguis, occaſionibus ſacra volumina conſcripſerunt, ut non tam ipſi Scriptores diverſi, quam unius Scriptoris diverſi calami fuiſſe videantur. Bellar. tom. 10. *de verbo Dei. l.*1.*c.*2. Multa in ſacris literis, primâ ſpecie ἀναπορῶν, ſcrupulum lectoribus injiciunt, ad quæ ſi penitius attendas, & loca penetres, ne veſtigium quidem ſupererit τῆς ἀπορίας. Petiti Var. *Lect. l.*1. *c.*1.

Doctor Vane in his loſt Sheep returned home, *Chap.*2. ſaith, Seeing no man is infallibly ſure that all the anſwers uſed to reconcile the ſeeming contradictions of Scripture, are true; no man can be aſſured by the evidence of the thing, that there is that perfect Harmony in the Scriptures, nor conſequently that they are thereby known to be the word of God. Moreover, if we were infallibly aſſured, that there were this perfect Harmony in the Scriptures, yet this to me ſeemed not a ſufficient proof that they are the Word, becauſe there is no reaſon forbids me to believe, that it may not be alſo found in the writings of ſome men; yea, I make no queſtion, but it is to be found, and that with leſſe ſeeming contradiction than is in the Scripture; yet no man accounts that this proves their writings to be the word of God. After he ſaith, We beleeve it to be harmonious, becauſe it is the Word of God, not to be the Word of God, becauſe it is harmonious, which we do not infallibly ſee. How well this agrees with what I have in the margent quoted out of Bellarmine, (who urgeth that as an argument to prove the Scripture to be from God) let the intelligent Reader judge. *Vid. Alberic. Gent. Ad.*1. *Mac. Diſput. c.*10.

Theſe conſiderations ſtrengthen this Argument:

1. The length of time in which this Writing continued, from Moſes until John, to whom was ſhewed the laſt authentical Revelation, which prevents all conceits of forgery, ſince they were not written in one, nor yet in many ages,

2. The multitude of Books that were written, and of Writers that were employed in the ſervice.

3. The Difference of place in [r] which they were written, which hinders the Writers conferring together.

Amicæ ſunt Scripturarum lites. The Socinians hold Dari in Scriptura res leviores, minoris & nullius momenti, in quibus Scriptores ſacri facilè errare potuerint, & diſſidere inter ſe atque pugnare; whom Hoornbeek. in his Anti-ſocinianiſmus confutes. *l.*1. *c.*1. *controv.*1. *Sect.*1. & 2. &c. This is one of the three hundred ſixty ſeven places, or as others reckon three hundred and ſeventy which are cited out of the Old Teſtament, in the New. D. Prideaux on Act. 23.5. See Biſield on 1 Pet.1.16. r Ezechiel prophetans in Babylone concordat cum Jeremia prophetante in Judæa. See D. Hals Paſſion-Sermon. Et quia in lege exactiſſimæ veritatis, contradictorii nullus eſt locus, dedi huic operi nomen conciliatoris, ſeu de convenientia locorum S. Scripturæ, quæ pugnare inter ſe videntur Menaſſeh. Ben Iſrael Lectori.

Objection 1. There are various readings, one Copy hath this, another that word.

Anſw. 1. The induſtry and care of the Jewiſh Writers in their Maſorah was wonderfull.

2. No man queſtions the Writings of any Poet or Oratour, whoſe name is prefixed fixed to it, because in the Manuscripts there is variety of readings.

3. The various readings no where destroy the spiritual sense.

4. The Apostles cited Texts out of the Greek Translation, which varied from the Original Text, as *Hebr.*10.5. compared with *Psa.*40.6. shews

5. It were no insuperable labour by the most ancient Copies, to shew which should be the right reading.

*Object.*2. The seeming contrariety in one Scripture to another.

Answ. 1. Whatsoever contrarieties may prima facie appear, yet there is no reall contrariety, as may appear from the scope of the place, and other circumstances.

2. Those seeming repugnances are for the most part Genealogicall or Chronologicall, to exercise the parts of able men.

2. Arguments extrinsecal; acts of God; and works of his providence about the Scriptures. Numb.11.9. & 20.10. Mar.16.20. Conser with Heb.2.3. See D.Gouge on Heb.2.4. sect.30.34. & sect 36. of the difference betwixt the miracles under the Law and under the Gospel. It is above the power of art and nature to do such things. Christ spake as never man spake, and did as never man did, Joh.3.2. he rose after he had been dead three daies. Rom.1.4. Joh.3.2. & 2.23. & 10.37. Act.5.12. Joh.5.36. Heb.10.4.

*Object.*3. The dubious and uncertain reception of some Books in former times, which we now receive into the Canon.

Answer, Some of them were rejected by Hereticks, or else inconsiderably by some Orthodox, because some passages in them seemed to favour some Heresie.

Two other Arguments may evince this Truth, that the Scriptures were from God.

1. Miracles, both of

1. Confirmation, which the Lord shewed by Moses, Exod. 19.16. & 24.18. & 34.29. the Prophets, 1 *King.*17.24. Christ himself and the Apostles for the confirmation of their Doctrine, such as the devil was not able to resemble in shew. The raising of the dead, the standing still and going back of the sunne, the dividing of the Red Sea and the Rivers, the raining of manna in so great a quantity daily, as to suffice all the multitude in the wildernesse; the making of the barren fruitfull. My works testifie of me (saith Christ) and Beleeve the works which I do, if you will not beleeve me. See *Joh.*15.24.

2. Preservation of the Books of the Scripture from the fury of many wicked Tyrants which sought to suppresse and extinguish them, but could not. As God caused it to be written for the good of his people, so by Divine Providence he hath preserved the same whole and entire. Here we have three Arguments in one. 1. The hatred[t] of the Devil and his wicked Instruments against the Scripture more than other Books. Yet secondly, It was preserved maugre the fury, and the rage of Diocletian, Julian and other evil Tyrants. Thirdly, the miserable end of Julian, Antiochus Epiphanes, Herod, Nero, Domitian and Diocletian, and other Persecutors of this Doctrine. The Books of Solomon, which he wrote of naturall Philosophy and other knowledge, the profitablest Books that ever were, the Canon excepted, are perished[u], but those alone which pertain to godlinesse have been safely kept to posterity; which is the rather to be observed, since many more in the world affect the knowledge of natural things then godlinesse: and yet though carefull of keeping them, they have not been able to preserve them from perpetual forgetfulnesse; whereas on the other side, these holy Writings, hated of the most part, and carelessly regarded[x] of a number, have notwithstanding as full a remembrance as they had the first day the Lord gave them unto the Church. The Romane Empire for three hundred years set it self to persecute and extirpate this new Doctrine; and in all these troubles the Church grew and encreased mightily, *Act.*12.1. Herod killed James with the sword, yet *v.*24. the Word grew and multiplied. The Gospel at the first did spread like a Sun-beam, said Eusebius, it was propagated through all the Roman Empire within 30. years.

In caecitate & sarditate natis Christus videndi & audiendi usum, non quem amiserant, reddidit, sed largitus est omnino novum. Deambulavit super tumentes undas, ut nos super solidam terram: imperavit ventis, mari, tempestati, & paruerunt dicto. Expulit daemones ex humanis corporibus, abstulit lepram, roboravit membra, & compages humani corporis dissolutas, sanavit omne genus morborum, reddidit lucem & vitam mortuis. Lud. Viv. de veritate Fidei Christ. l.2.c.12. The Tyrant Antiochus commanded all the Bibles to be burnt that could be found, 1 *Macc.ab.*1.56. and Diocletian the like; so as they made fires of them in the midst of the streets, which Eusebius saw. Hist. Eccl.l.8.c.1. yet maugre their malice, some remained, and by Gods mercy were transmitted to posterity. M. Philips his Sermon on Mat.1.1. Deut. 31.24. Jer.36.23,27,28. & usr. t Veritas odium parit. Tertullian said, that Gospel must needs be good which Nero persecuted. Qui enim scit illum, intelligere potest non nisi grande aliquod bonum à Nerone damnatum. Tertul. Apologet. cap 5. A precious Gospel that was purchased by the bloud of Christ, and sealed with the bloud of Martyrs. u Carrwright in his Preface to the Confutation of the Rhem. Annotations on the New Testament. x Many delivered the Bible to the Emperour to be burned, whence the name of Proditores & Traditores Bibliorum. Sanguis Martyrum semen Ecclesiæ. Fœcundi sunt Martyrum cineres. Vide Lod.Viv. de verit.1. Fid. l.2. cap.19. de verb.1. People by seeing the sufferings of the Martyrs came more to look into and understand that profession than formerly, which made them patiently endure such torments.

had

Calvin with all his Works since the time they were written, scarce made so many Protestants in France, as I have credibly heard it reported, that the Massacre made in one night. L. Falk. reply about the Infallibility of the Church of Rome.

The Scripture hath no considerable corruption, fuller evidence may be produced for it, than for any other book in the world.

1. The Copies were numerous which were dispersed.
2. In many languages.
3. In places of the remotest distance.
4. All Christians in those places held their Religion upon this Revelation.
5. Every Heretick, and men of all opinions alledged the same Scriptures.
6. No one Church could corrupt it in any material part, but all the Christians in the world would have discovered it, and cried it down.
7. It was the constant businesse of Ministers, (whereof then every Church had many) ordinarily to preach the same Doctrine and Scripture.
8. We have yet Copies of the Scripture extant, of very great Antiquity.
9. All the Writings of the Fathers in every Age since, are full of Citations of Scripture-passages, and all according to our present Scripture in the substance.
10. None of the enemies of Christianity, that in all ages have wrote against this, do deny these writings to be those which the Apostles wrote and delivered. Mr Baxters unreasonab. of Infidel. p. 29,30.

The Miracles wrought in the confirmation of Scripture differ much from the wonders wrought by the false Prophets, Antichrist and Satan himself, *Mat.*10.8.& 11.5. *Mat.*24.24. Mark 16 ult. Acts 2.22.&14.3. *Heb.*2.4. 2 *Thes.*2.11. *Apoc.*13.13,14. they are neither in number nor greatnesse comparable to these: 1. They differ in Substance, Divine Miracles are above the power of Nature, as dividing of the red Sea, the standing still of the Sun; the others seem wonderfull to those which are ignorant of the cause of them, but are not true Myracles, simply above the ordinary course of nature, but effected by the art and power of Satan or his instruments by natural causes, though unknown to men, and many times they are but vain delusions. 2. They differ in the end, those true miracles were wrought by the finger of God, for the promoting of his glory, and mans salvation; these to seal up falsehood and destroy men confirmed in Idolatry and Heathenism, 2 *Thes.*2.9. See Deut. 13. 1,2,3. Those were not done in a corner or secretly, but openly in the presence of great multitudes, [z] nay in the sight of the whole world; by the evidence of which an unknown Doctrine before contrary to the nature and affections of men was believed. Bainham said in the midst of the fire, Ye Papists, Behold ye look for miracles, and here now ye may see a miracle: for in this fire I feel no more pain, than if I were in a bed of Down, but it is to me as sweet as a bed of Roses. The miracles [a] done by our Saviour Christ and his Apostles, received Testimony of the bitterest enemies they had. The Pagans because they could by no reasons weaken the miracles done by Christ (the fame of which had fild the world) least being overcome with the force of truth, they should be compeld to yield and acknowledg Christ to be God, they movens ante rem, finis. Ad hos tanquam ad lapides Lydios examinanda sunt miracula, tum Christi & sanctorum, nempè divina: tum ficta & diabolica. Idem. ibid. vide plura. [y] They are Miranda non miracula. A marvel or wonder is nature mightily improved; a miracle is nature totally cross'd, if not contradicted. If miracles be ceased, yet marvels will never cease. Dr Halles Select Thoughts. [z] There were six hundred thousand witnesses of the Seas rising up in wals. Deut. 4. 3. See Matth. 27. 45. [a] See Dr Willet on Exod. 7. 9. what a miracle is, and how true and false miracles differ: And Dr Prideaux on *Psal.*9.16. the distinction between miracles, signs, prodigies, and Portenta, out of Aquinas. Christi miracula tanta & tam manifesta fuerunt orbi, ut nulla unquam gens fuerit, vel tam impudens, vel tam Christo inimica & infensa, ut ea sit negare ausa. Itaque Gentiles, Judæi, Agareni, omnes grandia & mirabilia esse edita opera confitentur, sed alii alios in causas referunt. Agareni Deum authorem illorum fatentur, Judæi & Gentiles dæmonem. Sed res ipsa clamat apertissimè, Deo authore atque approbatore illa omnia esse acta. Lod. Vid. *de verit. Fid. Christ. l.*2. *c.*13.

Miracula quæ sunt à Deo, multis notis distinguuntur à fictis miraculis dæmonum. Nam dæmon ut qui Deum odit, & nos à Deo vellet avertere, omnia quæcunque potest Divina æmulatur: Et tanto accuratius miracula, quod videt eam rem maximè ad potentiam Divinitatis accedere, quæ est supra naturam. Lod. Vid. *de verit. Fid Christ. l.*2. *c.*13. Miracula hos habent notas rei ipsius, veritas, essentia, qualitas, modus actionis, causa efficiens, causa

blasphemously

blaſphemouſly ſaid, that what he wrought, was not done by divine power, but by Magick, and ſome of them proceeded ſo far, as to affirm, that Chriſt made Books of the ſecret arts, by which he wrought his miracles, and dedicated them to Peter and Paul, his beloved Diſciples. Auſtin, De conſenſu Evangeliſt. l. 1. c. 8, 9, 10, 14. and Euſebius demonſtrat. l. 3. c. 3. and 8. confute their madneſs.

The Papiſts call upon us to confirm our doctrine by miracles.

1. The truth of God may be preacht without miracles, John the Baptiſt wrought none.

2. Let them prove that true miracles have been wrought by them. See Rivet. Exod. 13. 13, 14. & 19. 20.

3. When a new doctrine was delivered, and a new ſtate of the Church eſtabliſhed, it was confirmed by miracles, John 5. 24. & 10. 38. Mat. 16. 20. Acts 14. 3. Now there is no farther need of them, our doctrine is old, and confirmed already by miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles.

Nobis donum miraculorum non eſt conceſſum, nec eccleſia poſtquam ſatis plantata, neceſſarium. Anti-Chriſtus novæ religionis ac fidei plantator, ſignis opus habet: nos qui recepta docemus, non item Oecolampadius & Zuing. Epiſt. l. 1.

Francis de Nevile the Popes Miſſionary converted Ch. 19. profeſſeth he never ſaw any miracle in any place whereſoever he was, and that he never met with any man for the ſpace of 30. years and more, that he lived in the Romiſh Church, who could aſſure him that he ſaw any, although he had been in a great number of Churches and places where the people ſaid many miracles were wrought, and where the Prieſts did keep many great Books ſtuffed with an infinite number of miracles. See more there.

2. The Teſtimony.

1. Of the Church and Saints of God in [b] all ages.
2. Of thoſe which were out of the Church.

1. Of the Church { Both Ancient and Judaical. / And the preſent Chriſtian Church.
2. Of the Members of the Church.

[b] when many agree in a thing, and they wiſe and learned men, and one generation after another, this is much. All thoſe generally which profeſſe Chriſtian Religion, conſent in this main truth.

To which teſtimony theſe things give weight.
1. To them were committed the Oracles of God, Rom. 3. 2.
2. They have conſtantly profeſſed the truth in great miſery, whereas by the only denying thereof they might have been partakers both of liberty and rule. 3. Notwithſtanding the High-Prieſts and others perſecuted the Prophets, while they lived, they yet received their writings, as Propheticall and Divine. [c] Vide Croii obſervat. in novum Teſtamentum, c. 15. By univerſal tradition we know much better that thoſe Books were written by Chriſts Diſciples (who are ſufficient witneſſes of what he taught) than the Ariſtotelians know that theſe are Ariſtotles works; or the Academicks knew Plato's; ſince Chriſtians have both kept them with more care, and in the acceptance of them uſed more caution, as thinking them ſo much more important. My L. Falkl. Reply concerning the infallibility of the Church of Rome, part 2.

1. The Church of the Jews profeſſed the Doctrine and received the Books of the Old Teſtament, and teſtified of them that they were Divine; which invincible conſtancy remaineth ſtill in the Jews of theſe daies, who (though they be bitter enemies to the Chriſtian Religion) do ſtifly maintain and preſerve the Canon of the Old Teſtament pure and uncorrupt, even in thoſe places which do evidently confirm the truth of Chriſtian Religion.

2. The Chriſtian Church hath alſo moſt faithfully preſerved the Old Teſtament received from the Jews, and the New delivered by the Apoſtles, as a depoſitum and holy pledg of the Divine [c] Will, Col. 4. 16.

Eccleſia nunquam magis claruit fanguine & uratione. Luther. Chriſtian Religions chiefeſt glory is, that it flouriſheth by being perſecuted, and hath that advantage of the Mahumetan which came in by force. See of the ten perſecutions, Dieterici Analyſ. Evang. p. 95, 96, 97, 98. and of the death of the ſeverall Perſecutors of the Church, Mr. Morland his Introduction to his Hiſtory of the Evangelicall Churches of the Vallies of Piemont.

Four

Four things are to be conſidered in this Argument,

1. The number which ſuffered for the ſame is numberleſſe, many millions, that none can imagine it to ariſe from pride, weakneſſe or diſcontent. More Chriſtians were ſlain (as hath been obſerved) under the ten bloudy perſecutions, then Paſchal Lambs were offered up under the State of the Old Teſtament.

A Father ſaith, every perſecution ſwept away, as many as a famine, or war. There were more Martyrs in the firſt ages of the Church, which were neereſt to the death of Chriſt. In the five years of Queen Mary, almoſt one thouſand men, women, and children of all ages, degrees, and ſexes, were murthered, ſome hanged, ſtrangled, burned, racked, and cruelly tortured, and put to death for the teſtimony of Jeſus. Forty or fifty thouſand Proteſtants were put to the ſword within the compaſs of one moneth, throughout the whole Realm of France. In the two Dominions of France, and the ſeventeen Provinces, within the ſpace of little more than five years under Charles the ninth of France, and Philip the ſecond of Spain, two hundred thouſand ſuffered as Mrtyrs. See Foxes Martyrology, Meteranus de rebus Belgicis, and Fullers prophane State, of the Duke of Alva, p. 440. Teſtes in Europa, præ aliis Regnis & Provinciis, habemus Hiſpaniam, Galliam, Italiam, Angliam Belgium, quæ Martyres dedere innumeros. Wendeline Præfat. ad exercitat. Ad hæc Chriſtianiſmi incrementa non parùm contulit Martyrum conſtantia Hotting. eccleſ. Hiſt. 2. C. 3. Sect. 1.

2. The Quality and condition of them which ſuffered; noble and baſe, learned and [d] unlearned, rich, poor, old, young, men, women, children, thoſe which were tender and dainty; all theſe could not ſuffer out of vain glory, that ſtubbornly they might defend the opinion which they had taken up. Perſons of all ages, ſexes, conditions of life, qualities.

3. The torments uſed were uſual, unuſual, ſpeedy, ſlow, ſome hewed in pieces, burnt with ſlow fire, caſt into Lions, given to be devoured by the teeth of wilde beaſts, ſome beheaded, ſome drowned, ſome ſtoned.

4. All this they indured conſtantly, patiently, with great joy, even a chearfull heart, and merry countenance, ſinging Pſalms in the midſts of the fire, ſo that the madneſſe of the enemy was overcome by the patience of [e] of them which did ſuffer. See 1 Pet. 4. 14. Some kiſt the ſtake, and thankt the Executioner. Philpots Colehouſe was more comfortable than Bonners Palace.

Of all the Marian Martyrs, Mr Philpot was the beſt born Gentleman; Biſhop Ridley the profoundeſt Scholer; Mr Bradford the holieſt, and devouteſt man; Arch-Biſhop Cranmer, of the mildeſt and meekeſt temper; Biſhop Hooker, of the ſterneſt and auſtereſt nature; Dr Taylor had the merrieſt and pleaſanteſt wit; Mr Latimer had the plaineſt and ſimpleſt heart. Fullers Church-Hiſtory of Britain. Cent. 16. l. 8.

The two firſt Saints of God, of ſpeciall mark, that in this Iſland gave their lives for the truth, were George Wiſhart, and Anne Ayſcu, he for the reputation of his life and learning, and ſhe for the reſpect of her birth and education. Of him ſee in Mr Knoxe's Life. Anne Ayſcu was Daughter to Sr William Ayſcu of Lincolnſhire, and being not above five and twenty years old, was firſt moſt barbarouſly tormented on the rack, and then burned with others in Smithfield. Ayſcu's Hiſtory.

Saluſtius tormenting Theodorus a Chriſtian ſundry wayes, and a long time, to make him forſake his faith, but all in vain, went to Julianus the Emperour, and told him what he had done from the day breake untill ten of the clock: and counſelled him that he ſhould prove that way no more by cruelty: for they gat glory in ſuffering patiently, and he gat ſhame in puniſhing ſo ſharply: becauſe they would not yield unto him.

Luther reports of the Martyr Sr Agatha, as ſhe went to priſons and tortures ſhe ſaid, ſhe went to Banquets and Nuptials. Vide Doctoris Arrowſ. Tactic. Sac. l. 2. c. 9. That Martyr Hawks lift up his hands above his head, and clapt them together, when he was in the fire, as if he had been in a triumph. Catelan Girard of Sr Gio- vanni in Lucerna, being condemned to be burnt at Revel, as he was upon the Pile of wood, called for two Pebble ſtones, and holding them in his hands, told his Perſecutors, you think (ſaith he) to aboliſh and bring to nought our Churches by theſe Perſecutions, but it will be no more poſſible for you to do it, than for me to cruſh into powder theſe ſtones with my hands, or elſe to ſwallow down and digeſt the ſame: Mr Morlands Hiſtory of the Evangelical Churches, of the vallies of Piemont, l. 2. p. 224. See alſo l. 1. c. 8. Ludovicus Paſcale, p. 185. So that their teſtimony was not only humane, God enabling them ſo ſtoutly to die for the truth, Phil. 1. 29. See the Hiſtory of the Councel of Trent, pag. 418. and Dr Taylors Sermon on Dan. 3. 22, 23, 24. ſtiled, The Roman Fornace. Brightman in Cant. 4. verſ. 10.

[d] A Martyr anſwered Biſhop Bonner, My Lord I cannot diſpute but I can die for the truth. John Hus ſaid, when he had a Cap of paper, wherein were three devils painted with the title Hæreſiarcha, Shall I grudge to wear this paper Cap for Chriſt, who wore a Crown of Thorns for me? Reformati ligneas ſanctorum, Papiſtæ vivas Dei comburunt Imagines. Qui primi relictis patriis ritibus ac lege, qui abjectis & repudiatis rebus omnibus, quæ ſolent eſſe hominibus in vita gratiſſima & chariſſima, Chriſtum ſunt ſequuti, qui illi nova atque admirabilia dicenti fidem tribuerunt, gravia, dura præcipienti obedierunt, denique cervices ſuas obtulerunt pro illius Doctrina & Gloria, aliquid certè in eo majus & excellentius animad verterunt humanâ ſapientia & potentia. Lod. Vic. de verit Fid. Chriſt l. 2. c. 14. [e] In the Primitive times they were wont to call Martyrdom by the name of Corona Martyrii, the Crown of Martyrdom, and Stephen the Protomartyr had his name in Greek from a Crown. Eranderti torquentibus fortiores. Cypr. Epiſt. 9. & 19. Æneas Gazæus Græcus, Scriptor retulit in libro ſuo de animarum immortalitate, & reſurrectione mortuorum, Martyres ac Sacerdotes magnæ Lybiæ evulſa à Tyranno & exciſa ipſorum lingua nihil omnino clarè locutos fuiſſe, ac annunciaſſe animo hilari ac magno Dei magnalia. Neand. Geog. parte 3tia. Andreas Apoſtolus crucem uſque adeo non veritus ut & in hac verba eruperit. Si crucem exhorruiſſem, Evangelium crucis non prædicaſſem. In ipſa cruce pendens. Chriſtum plebi aſtanti pradicavit Evang. Dieter. Analyſ. p. 270. Domin parte 2da vide plura ibid. & p. 271, 272.

Martyrs of other Sects differ from the Martyrs of the true Church. 1. They were fewer, not ſo holy and wiſe. 2. They ſuffered not with joy of Conſcience, which the godly Martyrs did. 3. They were puniſhed for their [f] errours diſcovered; The Martyrs were burned for having any part of the Bible, and the Bible ſometime with them; where the Inquiſition reigns it is death to have any part of the Bible in the vulgar tongue. They parted with their lives, not out of deſire of vain glory, nor ſenſeleſs ſtupidity, nor out of any confidence of their own ſtrength. There is a threefold kind of Martyrs, 1. Some ſuffer voluntate & actu, as Steven. Some voluntate non actu, as the Evangeliſt John: A 3d Non voluntate ſed actu, as the Innocents in Bethlehem.

[f] Non pœna ſed cauſa facit Martyrem.

The Gentiles alſo which were out of the pale of the Church, did give teſtimony to ſundry Stories and Examples of the Bible. Suetonius and Tacitus ſpeaks of the miracles of Chriſt, Pliny [g] of the miracles of Moſes, and of the wiſe mens Starre; Macrobius of the ſlaughtering of the Infants; Joſephus of the death of Herod; the Poets of the Floud; Plutark of the Dove which Noah ſent out. Joſephus (a Jew) ſaith in his time there was a monument of the pillar of Salt into which Lots wife was turned. Of Sodoms deſtruction ſpeaketh Strabo, Diodorus Siculus, Galen in his Book of Simples. Pliny, Solinus, Polyſt. hiſt. Tacitus lib. ult. Mela, acknowledging that the remainders of Gods wrath are ſtill to be ſeen there, as the dead Lake, the Fruit fair to the eye, but falling to cinders and ſmoke in the end.

[g] Lib. 2. c. 25. Meminerunt Moſis & Diodorus Siculus & Strabo, & Plinius, Tacitus quoque, & poſt eos Dyoniſius Longinus de Sermonis ſub limitate. Jamnis autem & Mambris qui in Ægypto Moſi reſtiterunt præter Talmudicos Plinius & Apulejus. Grotius de verit. relig. Chriſt.

The Oracles of the Sibyls were in greateſt account among the Heathen *; and held as true of all men; [h] and if thoſe be they which we [i] have, there is nothing which can more plainly ſet forth the birth of Chriſt, his life and death. [k] Cauſabon makes it apparent, that thoſe prophecies of Sybil were counterfeited peices, and at firſt entertained by ſuch as delighted in ſeeing the Chriſtian Religion ſtrengthned with forreign proofs.

[h] Credite me vobis ſolum recitare Sibylla.

* Biſh. Andrews in his large expoſition on the ten Commandements. [i] Vid. Spanhem. Dub. par. 2. Dub. 34. Seſt. 6, 7. [k] Exercit. 1. ad Annal. Bar. * Iſa. 8. 20. Pſal. 19. The Authors often teſtifie that they ſpeak not of themſelves, or by any humane inſtinct, but from Gods command and the Spirit inſpiring.

There was no ſufficient counter-witneſſe againſt the Scriptures. Chriſt had three ſorts of enemies.

1. The Jews, they confeſt that he was a great Prophet, that he wrought miracles.

2. The Devils, they confeſt him to be the Son of God, though he ſlighted their teſtimony.

3. The Heathen Philoſophers, many of them were convinced by the demonſtration of the truth, Athenagoras, Origen, Juſtin Martyr.

Hereticks alſo prove the Scripture to be Divine, for they quote that; and therefore Luther cals the Bible Librum Hæreticorum. Experience teacheth, That all Hereſies either began or increaſed from the miſ-underſtanding of Scripture. Some particular places of Scripture have been much abuſed by Hereticks. The Arians laid their foundation upon Prov. 8. 22. and much urged that Joh. 14. 22. The Maniehees perverted that place, Phil. 2. 7, 8. He was found in the form of a ſervant. Montanus, tanus, yea and the Turks lay hold on that place Joh. 14.16. I will send you another Comforter, which the Turks say is Mahomet. The Papists wrest that place to their purpose, Matth. 16 18. Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church. The Familists bring that Luk. 17.21. The Kingdom of God is within you. The Anti-scripturists stick not to urge those Scriptures Joh. 6.45. 2 Cor. 3.6. Infelices sunt qui in sacris literis ea se reperire posse confidunt, quibus sacrarum literarum fides possit de-strui. Vossii Dissertatio de Ætate mundi, c. 12.

Thirdly, The Scripture it self doth give testimony to it self,* that it is Divine; it is called a Light, Psal. 119.105. because it discovers it self; The testimony, and the Testimony of the Lord: because it bears witness to it self. The Prophets give Testimony of Moses, Mal. 4.4. The New Testament of the Old, 2 Pet. 1.19, 20. Peter gives testimony of Pauls Epistles, 2 Pet. 3.15. and Paul witnesseth That all Scripture is given of God,[l] 2 Tim. 3.16. which must be meant of all Scripture even of the New Testament, that being the last Epistle which Paul wrote, as appears Chap. 4.16.

The creatures discover their divine original, that they are the works of God, Psal. 19. the word therefore which is a clearer discovery of God than any thing else, hath a self-evidencing light, 2 Cor. 2.4. There is some signature and stampe of God upon every Creature, much more on the Scripture.

2. The word is more able to convince men of its divine authority, than a messenger from Hell, or a voice from Heaven; Luk. 16.31. 2 Pet. 1.18.

3. The word preacht by Christ, left an impression of authority upon mens hearts, Joh. 7.26. & 6.68, 69. the voice added nothing to it, and the writing can take nothing from it.

4. Every effect discovers its cause.

5. The bare word of God is enough to convert a sinner, 1 Cor. 14.24, 25. 1 Thes. 2.13.

Fourthly, None of all these Arguments can undoubtedly perswade the heart, Certitudine fidei, that the holy Scripture, or any Doctrine contained in it is the Word of God, till we be taught it of God, till the holy [m] Spirit of God have inwardly certified and assured us of it. This is called, the Sealing of the Spirit of God, Ephes. 1.13. by this the Scripture is imprinted in our hearts, as the signe of the Seal in the Wax. Other Arguments may convince, but this is absolutely necessary; this is allsufficient to perswade certainly, Matth. 11.25. The holy Ghost is the Author of light, by which we understand the Scripture, and the perswader of the heart, by which we believe the things therein to be truly Divine, 1 John 5.6. It is the Spirit that beareth witnesse, because the Spirit (i. Metonymically the Doctrine delivered by the Spirit) is truth. But he that is spiritual, saith Paul, that is, the man enlightned with the holy Ghost, judgeth all things, 1 Cor. 2.15. that is, all things necessary to salvation. So to prove that there is a God, reasons may be brought from nature and the testimony of the Church, but no man can believe it savingly, but by the holy Ghost.

Some learned men hold, that no wicked men can believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God, See Mr Kendals Sancti Sanciti, c. 4. p. 117, 118.

It is hard to carry the matter even between the Socinians Reason, and the Familists Spirit. Socinians will have nothing but Reason, no infused Habits, and so they destroy the testimony of the Spirit. The Familists will have nothing but Spirit, they rest wholly in an immediate private Spirit, Vide Dr Owen, Exercit. 4. Pro Sacris Scripturis, de Lumine Interno. There are three that bear witness in earth[n], Blood (that

[l] Christ commends Moses, the Prophets and Psalms, by which names are meant all the Books belonging to the Cannon of the Hebrews.

[m] The holy Ghost inwardly witnesseth in the hearts of the faithfull, that the Scriptures are the Word of God, 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27. 1 Cor. 2.10, 11, 12 & 12.3. Joh. 10.23. & 14.26. Isa. 51. 16. Isa 59.21. Rom. 8.16. The inspiration of the Spirit is considered as an efficient cause, which disposeth our faculties to believe the truth, and not as an argument of the truth. The Pelagians say, The faculties of the soul are well enough disposed to understand and believe the things of God without the inward inspiration and illumination of the Spirit. Scripturam tanquam mortuam literam intuentur & meros spiritus inflatis buccis crepant, interim tamen neque verbum, neque Spiritum retinentes. Hic autem audis Paulum Scripturæ testimoniis, ut firmissimis, potissimum niti, &c. Luth in 1 Cor. 15 3, 4. Quocirca noli esse immodicus jactator Spiritus si non apertum & externum verbum habueris, neque enim bonus erit, quem jactas, Spiritus, sed ipsissimus Diabolus. Id. ibid. Omnes homines quantumvis illustrati Spiritu sancto, tamen manent discipuli verbi. Luth. Tom. 4. The work of the Spirit now is not to perfect Scripture, or to adde any thing to its discovery, or to be in stead of a Scripture where it is wanting, much less where the Scripture is: But to remove the darkness from our understanding, that we may see clearly what the Scripture speaks clearly: Before the Scripture was perfected, the Spirit did enlighten the Prophets and Penmen of the Scripture both wayes. But now I know no teaching of the Spirit, save only by its illuminating or sanctifying works, teaching men no new lesson, nor the old without book, but to read with understanding what Scripture, Nature, Creatures and Providences teach. Mr. Baxters Saints Everlasting Rest, par. 1. §. 51. [n] Joh. 3.8.

is,

is, Justification by the Bloud of Christ) and Water, i. Sanctification by his Grace, And the Spirit (some say) witnesseth in these. But ye have an Unction from the holy One, and ye know all things °; that is, Ye have received from Christ the holy Ghost the Comforter, and he hath taught and instructed you in all things which are necessary to the salvation of your souls, for you to know and be instructed in; See vers. 27. The testimony is made up by arguing, Whosoever believeth and is sanctified, shall be saved. So the Antiquity, Efficacy and Majesty of the Scripture, the Fidelity of the Pen-men, and its wonderful Preservation, prove it to be the Word of God. The Spirit of God witnesseth, that this Word which hath these remarkable advantages above all other Writings, is the Word of God. The Spirit doth neither witnesse concerning my salvation, nor that the Scripture is the word of God immediatly, but ultimately. Because I am a beleever and my faith is sound, it assureth me that I am in the state of salvation, and so he maketh use of the excellencies in the Word to irradiate my understanding. We are commanded to try the spirits; true joy is first heard out of the Word before it be felt, Psa. 51.8. Spiritual joy is an affection proper to spirituall life, that life is by faith, and * Faith cometh by hearing, Job 33.22. See Joh. 16.14.

° 1 Joh. 2. 22.

* Fides Christiana non acquiritur sed infunditur.

They of Rome laugh and jeer at our Divines when they speak of this inward testimony, and call it a private spirit, and so think to fright us out of our true faith, with false calumnies. This is no private spirit, but the publick spirit of the true Catholick Church, (the mysticall body of Christ) which actuates and animates every member of that great body, and communicates spirituall life to it. Mr Barlow of the difference between common and speciall grace, p. 389, 390. See more there, p. 391, 392, 393.

It is a question, whether God doth not reveal some things not revealed in Scripture, Now to some eminent Saints of his he did. John Hus revealed the rising of Luther a 100. years before his time. The troubles of Ireland were foretold by Bishop Usher in a Sermon 40. years before they brake forth. See Mrs Shawes Tomb-stone, p. 37, 38, 39.

Guicciardin in his second Book of the History of Italy, p. 62. saith thus of Jerome Savanarola, a religious man of the order of Frier-Preachers. This man having been continually exercised for many years in the publike preaching of Gods Word at Florence, and having joyned to his singular doctrine a generall brute of holiness of life, had gotten in the opinion of most part of the people, the name and authority of a Prophet: for that at times wherein in Italy was no other appearance in mans reason then of common tranquility, he would in his Sermon propheste of the coming of forrain Armies. See also ibid. p. 73. The Scotch speak much of Wishart When George Wishart a Scottish Minister, a man of special account for the purity of his life and doctrine, was burned at St Andrews over against the Castle; he was comforted (the flame ready to encompasse him) by the Captain of the Castle his Keeper, and put in minde to call upon God. He answered, that though these fiery flames are grievous to flesh and bloud, yet my spirit is nothing therewith dismai'd; but he that so proudly sitteth over against us (meaning the Cardinall, who convicted him of heresie, and was placed in a window of the Castle to behold the spectacle) shall within a few daies lie on the ground as reproachfully, as now he advanceth himself arrogantly, which within four moneths after came to passe. Knox his History of Scotland.

Now that the Canon of Scripture is compleated, there is nothing revealed in order to faith, worship, obedience, salvation, but in order to future events both in judgement and mercy, God may give some holy men that deep insight, that by arguments out of the word they may be able to foresee judgements in the causes of them. Polybius foretold the mutation of the Romane government a 100 years before it happened.

There is a double kinde of Revelation.

1. Of the Word, peculiar to select persons, Titus 3.16, Gal. 1. 12. this was proper to the Prophets and Apostles.

2. By the Word, and out of the Word, this is only ordinary.

Some

Some queſtion whether every part and parcel of the Scripture be divinely inſpired, as thoſe places [n], Touch him, and he will curſe thee to thy face; Curſe God and die, and that *Pſal.*14.1. Some anſwer thus [o], theſe places are Hiſtorically inſpired, not Dogmatically.

n Leviculum eſt quod objiciunt qui contra ſentiunt. Si omnis Scriptura

Divinitus ſit inſpirata, ſequuturum inde etiam Græcorum & Gentilium Scripturas eſſe divinitus inſpiratas; nam ut benè reſpondet Theophylactus, oportebat eos noviſſe quod Paulus ante dixerat, Sacras literas noſti. Rivet. Iſag. ad Script. ſacr.

o Aliud ſanè Prophetas hoc vel illud ſcripſiſſe, aliud verò ſcripſiſſe ut Prophetas. Spanhem. Vide Eſſenii ſyſtema Theol. Diſput. 3. de Sacra Scriptura. p. 25. Et Melch. Can. de locis Theologicis. *l.*2. *c.*16.17,18. Hac Chriſtiana religionis per magna commendatio eſt, quod a Revelatione ſive oraculo dependeat, eoque iis teſtibus ſtrenue confirmato, quibus hac in re mentiendi fingendique voluntas eſſe non poſſet, niſi ad moleſtias, damna, doloreſque graviſſimos in ſemetipſos accerſendos mentiri eligerent Sharoc. *de officiis. c.*17.

Another Queſtion is, Whether preaching be not divinely inſpired, as well as the Word written?

The preaching of the Prophets and Apoſtles was divinely inſpired: but the preaching of our Miniſters, no further than it agrees with the Word.

Some ſay, The Scriptures are but a device of mans brain, to give aſſiſtance to Magiſtrates in civil government.

Nothing is more repugnant to prudence and policy. What policy was it in the Old Teſtament to appoint Circumciſion? to cut a poor childe as ſoon as he came into the world? Two and twenty thouſand Oxen were ſpent at the Dedication of one Altar; to ſacrifice ſo many Oxen and ſheep, ſuch uſefull creatures? Chriſt choſe ſilly illiterate men to propagate the [p] Goſpel.

Vid. Lod. Viv. *de verit. Fid. Chriſt. l.*5. *c.*1.

This ſerves for Information of our Judgement, and aſſures us of divers Truths.

p Nothing croſſeth humane wiſedom more than the Scripture.

1. That the Scriptures are for themſelves worthy to be beleeved, they have Authority in and of themſelves (not borrowed from any perſons in the world) by which they binde the conſciences of all men to receive them with faith and obedience, for their Authors ſake alone, and the Divine Truth which ſhines in them, though they ſhould not be commended unto men by any authority of any creature. Such as is the Authority of the Authour of any writing; ſuch is the Authority of the writing it ſelf; for all the ſtrength of the teſtimony depends upon the excellency of the perſon which gives the teſtimony; now God is the Author of theſe writings, Thus ſaith the Lord; therefore ſuch Authority as he hath, ſuch muſt they have, a ſupreme, higheſt Authority, which borroweth from none, and is ſubject to none. So this acknowledgement of their original teacheth, that we muſt not beleeve them for the Authority ſake of any man or men, for Gods word can borrow no Authority from men, *Joh.*5.34. I receive not teſtimony from man, ſaith Chriſt, that is, need no mans teſtimony. As the firſt goodneſſe is to be loved for it ſelf, ſo is the firſt truth to be beleeved for it ſelf, ſaith Aquinas. And as Chriſt by himſelf could demonſtrate that he was the Meſſias, ſo the Word by it ſelf can prove [q] that it is the Word of God.

Autoritas ſive αὐτοπιστία Scripturæ. Illud authenticum dicitur, quod ſibi ſufficit, quod ſe commendat, ſuſtinet, probat, & ex ſe fidem ac autoritatem habet. Whitaker. Inter omnes quotquot ſunt ubivis Theologos, qui cauſam hanc Dei atque verbi ipſius contra Pontificios defendendam ſuſceperunt, vix quiſquam invenitur, qui cum Whitakero noſtro comparandus ſit. D. Owen Exercit. pro Scrip. queſt.1. ſect.2. Autoritas Scripturarum ſacrarum, in ſe conſideratarum, & tota à Deo dependet, & à ſolo Deo dependet. Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic.2. *c.*2. *queſt.*2. vide plura ibid.

q Every principle is known by it ſelf. The Scripture is the primum credendum, the firſt thing to be beleeved; we muſt beleeve it for it ſelf, and all other things for their conformity with it.

The whole Scripture muſt be beleeved, at leaſt, implicitly, Act. 24.14. For as he that wilfully diſobeys God in any one command, is guilty of all, Jam.2.10. as contemning the legiſlative power of God, the ground of obligation to obedience, in that as well as other commands. So he that disbeleeves any part of Gods Word as ſuch, is interpretatively guilty of a totall disbeleef, as denying the veracity of God, the formal object of faith, in that as well as other parts of Scripture. But all neceſſary and Fundamental Points of Truth muſt be explicitely beleeved. Mr Warre in his Learned Sermon of Peace, on *Rom.*14.19.

We affirm, That the Scriptures are known to be of God by themſelves; the Papiſts maintain, that we cannot be certain of the Scriptures Divinity by any other

Argument,

Argument, than the teſtimony of the Church, [r] which (ſay they) doth infallibly propound unto us, what is to be beleeved, what is not to be beleeved; and Hermannus ſaith, That the Scripture is no more worth than Æſops Fables, without the teſtimony of the Church. As in other Sciences there are alwaies ſome principles per ſe nota & indemonſtrabilia, whence other things are proved; ſo in Divinity all concluſions in point of beleef and practiſe are proved by the Scripture. The Scriptures prove themſelves by their own natural light, [s] manifeſting their divine originall whence they are, and their right meaning, how they muſt be underſtood. They are like light (primum viſibile) which maketh all other things manifeſt, and it ſelf too by its own proper qualities.

[r] Eccius reckons this among hereticall Aſſertions. Major eſt Scripturæ, quam Eccleſiæ Authoritas.

[s] Niſi Deus hominibus placuerit, non erit Deus, ſaid Tertullian in Apol.

If God pleaſe not men, he ſhall not be God; as truly and certainly as God is God, ſo truly is the Scripture the Scripture. In conſenſu Eccleſiæ quatuor gradus conſiderandi ſunt, veritatis ſalutaris apprehenſio, intelligentia, aſſenſus, obedientia, quorum duo priores communiter hominum miniſterio, per ſacrarum literarum lectionem vel prædicationem, animis hominum inſcribuntur; reliqui vero duo à Spiritu ſancto promanant, qui mentem ſua luce ad aſſenſum, & cor ſeu voluntatem, ſuo motu ad obedientiam adducit. Jer.31.33, Heb.8.10. Gomari Anti-coſterus, *l.*2. *c.*2.

1. The Church rather depends on the Scripture, which is an object not principle of Divinity; the Church ought to be ſubject to Chriſt, *Eph.*5.24. the Scripture is the word of Chriſt, *Col.*3.16.

2. All the words of the Scripture are words of truth, *Dan.*10.21. ſome words of the Church are words of errour, *Iſa.*1.21,24. & 3.8,9. & 5.13. But the authority of him that ſpeaks alwaies truth, is greater than of him who ſometimes lies: Ergo. The Authority of the Scripture is greater than that of the Church. Goodneſſe it ſelf cannot deceive, wiſdom it ſelf cannot be deceived; God is both, *Tit.*1.2. The voice of the Scripture is the voice [t] of God, 2 *Tim.*3.16. but the voice of the Church is the voice of men, *Act.*14.14. & 15.17. & 17.30.

Spiritus ſanctus Spiritus veritatis loquitur ſemper in Scriptura; in Eccleſia verò quandoque Spiritus humanus, ſpiritus erroris. Rainoldus, *Theſ*3.

3. Faith and a firm conſolation in temptations ought to rely on a ſure, that is, a divine foundation, for every humane teſtimony is uncertain.

4. In vain ſhall we diſpute againſt the wicked concerning Religion and Divine truth, if we ſhall ſay, it comes from God, becauſe we affirm ſo.

5. This is proved by Scriptures, John 5.34,35. Chriſt in his Humiliation did not receive the teſtimony of John, much leſſe will he receive the teſtimony of others now he is glorified, *Joh.*5.34,35,36. 1 *Cor.*2.4,5. 1 *Joh.*5.9.

[t] See Chamiers ſixth Book de Canone, divers Chapters, and Mr Pembles Vindiciæ Gratiæ, pag.207. to 222.

6. The Authority proving it greater, more certain, and more known than the concluſion proved by the ſame. Authoritas probans is greater than probata. The Papiſts to prove the Authority of the Church fly to the Scriptures [u]. For I demand, Whence do we underſtand that the Church erres not in delivering the Canon of the Scripture? They anſwer, It is governed by the Holy Ghoſt, and therefore cannot erre in its decrees. But how appears it, that it is ſo governed alwaies? They anſwer, God hath promiſed it, and then they alledge thoſe [x] places to prove it.

[u] Superſtum mihi labor videtur eorum, qui adeo ſollicite illud quoad nos inquiſiverunt: quia ne cogitari quidem poteſt ulla eorum librorum authoritas, niſi quoad nos. Cham.

[x] Mat.28.20. & 18.20. John 15.26. & 16. 13.

*Obj.*1. The Church is ancienter than the Scripture, becauſe it was before Moſes; Ergo, It hath greater Authority.

*Anſ.*1. The Prophets and John Baptiſt were ancienter than Chriſt, yet not of greater Authority.

2. Conſider the Word, 1. Quoad formale [y] externum, as written and cloathed with words; ſo the Church was before the Scripture, 2. Quoad formale internum; the matter and ſenſe or meaning: ſo the Scripture was more ancient than the Church, becauſe the Church is gathered and governed by it, 1 Pet. 1.23, John 17. 20. *Iam.*1.18. Semen ſemper ſobole illa, cujus eſt ſemen, antiquius eſſe neceſſe eſt. In the thing it ſelf, the being and ſubſtance of the Word was before the Church, although in this circumſtance and manner of being it was after.

[y] Scriptura eſt vel ipſa ſcriptio, & literarum per lineas certas, pictura: vel ipſa doctrina per eas Scripturas ſignificata, & in iis literis contenta. Scriptione fatemur Eccleſiam eſſe antiquiorem, ſed negamus eſſe antiquiorem ea doctrina, qua ſignificatur ea ſcriptione. Chamier *Tom.*1. *l.*1. *c.*22.

*Obj.*2. Non crederem Evangelio niſi me commoveret Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Authoritas, ſaith Auguſtine.

Anſ.

Anſ. Theſe words (ſaith Whitaker) are ſo well known to the Papiſts that one can hardly exchange three words with them, but they will produce them. It is true indeed, that we may at the firſt be much moved to receive and hearken to the Scriptures, becauſe the Church gives teſtimony of them; as the woman of Samaria, by her ſpeeches of Chriſt, was a means of moving the Samaritans to beleeve, but when the men of Samaria had heard Chriſt himſelf ſpeak, they beleeved in him more for his own words than the womans, Joh. 4.39,41. In which ſenſe thoſe words of Auguſtine (ſo frequently quoted by the Papiſts) are to be interpreted. Auguſtine ſpake this of himſelf being a Manichee[a]; when he was a Manichee he was firſt moved by the Authority of the Church to beleeve the Goſpel. His meaning is, that he had never beleeved the Goſpel, if the Authority of the Church had not been an introduction unto him, not that his faith reſted upon it as a finall ſtay, but that it cauſed him ſo farre to reſpect the Word of the Goſpel, to liſten unto it, and with a kinde of acquiſite and humane faith to beleeve it, that he was thereby fitted[b] to a better illumination, by force whereof he might more certainly beleeve it to be of God. But that the teſtimony of one Father in one place in a matter of ſuch conſequence ſhould be of that force, it is ſtrange.

Quibus lectis verbis adeo exultant, quaſi reperiſſent id quod pueri in faba ſe reperiſſe clamitant? tamque confidenter, ac ſi ad plenum victoriæ fructum ſola triumphi gloria deeſſet. Chamierus.

a So Muſculus, Calvin, Peter Martyr and Whitaker expound thoſe words; obſerve the compoſition of the word, it ſignifieth to move with other things. b Gerſon ſaith, he taketh the Church for the Primitive Church, and that Aſſembly which ſaw and heard Chriſt.

We deny not the Miniſtery of the Church as an externall means to move us to embrace the Word of God, but we deny the Authority of the Church to be the principal[c] means. When we call the Scriptures Canonical, we call them not ſo paſſively, becauſe they are received into the Canon by men, and accepted of; but actively, becauſe they preſcribe a Canon and Rule to us.

The Office of the Church in reſpect of the Scripture ſtands in four things.

1. To diſtinguiſh Canonical Scripture from that which is not Canonical; although the determination of the Church be not the only or chiefeſt cauſe why the Apocrypha are rejected.

2. To be a faithfull keeper of thoſe Books which are inſpired by God, like a notary which keepeth publick writings.

3. To publiſh, declare and teach the truth, as a Crier with a loud voice ought to pronounce the Kings Edicts, but to pretermit, adde, or alter nothing, Mat. 28.16,20. Act. 8.35. 1 Tim. 3.15. This Church here is not that Church which the Papiſts make to be the Judge of controverſies, neither the Church repreſentative, which is a generall Councel; nor the Church virtual, which they imagine to be the[d] Pope; but the Church Eſſentiale: the Congregation of all faithfull beleevers, The houſe of God, as he calleth it. The Apoſtle here ſpeaks of a pillar, not more Architectonico, underſtanding by it ſome eſſential peece of the building, but more forenſi, ſuch a poſt or[f] pillar on which Tables and Proclamations uſe to hang. In old time the Gentiles uſed to write their Laws in Tables, and ſo hang them upon pillars of ſtone, that the people might reade them, as Proclamations are nailed to Poſts in Market Towns. The Apoſtle deſcribing the Church, likeneth it to one of theſe Pillars, whoſe uſe was to ſhew what hung thereon. It is a Pillar, not becauſe it holds up, [g] but holds forth the truth, as a Candleſtick doth a Candle, Rev. 2.1.

c Eccleſia non habet magiſterium ſupra Scripturas, ſed Miniſterium circa ſcripturas. There are two cauſes why the Apocrypha are caſt out of the Canon. 1. External, the Authority of the Church decreeing, and the quality of the Authours. 2. Internal, the ſtyle, the fabulous and wicked things Chamier.

d Eccleſia, id eſt, Romano Pontifici vel ſoli, vel cum Concilio magiſterium tribuunt ſummum, adeo ut ſolennis ſit apud eos formula, indicet magiſter fidei. Ameſius. e D. Chaloner Credo Eccleſiam Catholicam. Eccleſia dicitur Fundamentum metaphoricè & impropriè, fundamentum ſecundarium. (Rivet and D. Preſton. De ſenſu horum verborum vide Gamerons myrothecium, & Collocutionem Rainoldi cum Harto, c.8. p 557. g An alluſion (ſaith Bedel) to the baſes and pillars that held up the veils or curtains in the Tabernacle.

4. To interpret the Scripture by the Scripture. Since many things in Scripture are doubtfull, and hard to be underſtood without an Interpreter, Acts 8.31. it doth belong to the Church to expound the ſame, to interpret and give the ſenſe, Nehem. 8.8,9. Luke 24.27. provided, that this expoſition be by the Scriptures.

Some of the Papists say, That the Church may condere articulos fidei & facere Canonicum quoad nos, and though they talk of Councels and Fathers, yet all is as the Pope concludes.

That distinction of Authoritative in se, but not quoad nos is absurd, because the Authority the Scripture hath, is for and because of us.

The testimony and tradition of the Church, especially the Primitive Church, is necessary to know that the Gospel of Matthew is divine Scripture by an historical and acquired faith, to know this by a divine [h] and infused faith (besides the Authority of the Church) the matter, character and contents of every Book; and comparing of it with other Scriptures, do serve as an inward cause to produce the said infused faith.

h D. White of the Church. The Spirit witnesseth, the Scripture co-witnesseth, and the Church sub-witnesseth.

Object. We are sent to the Church to determine all Controversies, 1 Cor. 11.16.

Sol. Controversies are either Dogmaticall, concerning Faith; or Rituall, concerning true Order; The Proposition is about these, not the first.

Secondly, From this fundamental Truth, that the Scripture is immediatly from God (the Basis indeed of all Religion, 1 *Cor.*15.) the wickednesse of the Church of Rome is farther to be condemned, which will not suffer the Scriptures to be read in their Churches, but in an unknown [i] tongue, nor in private by the common people without speciall leave and certain cautions from their superiours. Of old they would not suffer them to be read at all, of late they are forced to give licences to some, and they teach them, that they should not make the Scripture judge of the Doctrine and practice of the Church, but the Doctrine and practice of the Church must be the Interpreter and Judge of the meaning of the Scripture, that is, they must take the Scripture to mean none otherwise (whatsoever it seem to say) than what is agreeable to that which the Pope doth teach and practise. There cannot be a surer signe of a bad cause, than that it fears to be tried by the writings which it self cannot deny to be written by God, for correction, for reproof, for instruction in righteousnesse. Some Papists are more modest herein, as *Bellarmine, lib.*2. *de verb. Dei. c.*15. Catholica Ecclesia statuit, ne passim omnibus concedatur Scripturæ lectio; some more rigid, as Hamsly and Hosius. A simple Priest or a Bishop can absolve a man from excommunication for other things, but to reade the Bible in a vulgar tongue (that is, in English, French, Spanish, or Dutch) there is none except the Pope himself or his Deputy can absolve him, and to have it in his house, or to reade it in Spain, or Italy, or where the Inquisition reigneth, is a fact that deserveth burning, and the permission can be given by none but the Pope. *The Conversion of Francis de Neville chap.*4.

i Ut olim Caligula, occlusis omnibus horreis, publicam populo inediam & famem, ita illi obturatis omnibus fontibus verbi Dei, sitim populo miserabilem induxerant. Illi hominibus famem, ut ait Amos Propheta, sitimque attulerunt: non famem panis nec sitim aquæ: sed audiendi verbi Dei. Juel. in Apol. Eccl. Ang. Scio maximam partem Gallorum, qui appellantur Catholici, ita abstinere à Bibliorum lectione, ut multos viderim & audiverim, qui Deo gratias agerent, quod libros illos nunquam contigissent, & se id diligenter in posterum curaturos ne id facerent, etiam juramento adhibito protestarentur: non alia ratione permoti quam Romana prohibitione, & periculi metu quod eis à suis concionatoribus & confessoribus incutiebatur. Rivet. Apolog. pro vera pace Eccles. pag.249. Vide Brochm. *System. Theol. Artic.*2. *de sac. script. quæst.*13. An Lectionis Biblicæ usus promiscuè plebi concedendus sit.

The Papists [k] object the obscurity of Scriptures, as an argument to hinder Laymen from reading them, and account it a matter of profanation to allow men, women and children, and all promiscuously the use of the Vulgar Translation, and think they will rather be hurt than benefited by them, taking occasion of erring from them. Hosius urgeth that, Give not holy things to dogs, Cast not pearls before swine, to prove the people must be barred from reading of the Scriptures. It is Pope Innocents Glosse, a Beast might not touch the Mount, a Lay-man may not meddle with Scripture. Lindan saith, Nihil noxæ inferretur in Ecclesiam salvo traditionis fundamento [l], if there were no Bible; and another, Scriptura citius fecit Hæreticum Lutheranum, quam Catholicum! Because we will have all proved by Scripture, and make that the compleat Rule for what we beleeve or do in all Theological matters, k Scripturæ obscuriores sunt, quam ut possint à Laicis intelligi. Bellarm. & Rhemist. Præfa. in Nov. Test. & Annot. in Act.8.31. & in 1 Cor.14

l Populus non solum non caperet fructum ex Scripturis, sed etiam caperet detrimentum; acciperet enim facillimè occasionem errandi. Bellarm. *de verb. Dei. lib.*2.*c.*15.

they

they call us Scripturarios, Scripture-men, and Atramentarios Theologos; and ſo to carry or reade a Bible is matter of [m] ſcoff; we may ſtile them in Tertullians phraſe Scripturarum Lucifugæ and Traditionaries.

[m] Si populus rudis audiret lingua ſua vulgari legi ex Canticis Canticorum, Oſculetur me oſculo oris ſui, Et, Læva ejus ſub capite meo, & dextera illius amplexabitur me, Et illud Oſeæ: Vade & fac tibi filios fornicationum; Necnon adulterium Davidis, inceſtum Thamar, mendacia Judith, & quemadmodum Joſeph fratres ſuos inebriavit. Sara, Lea & Rachel dederunt ancillas viris ſuis in concubinas, & multa alia eorum, quæ in Scripturis magna cum laude commemorantur, vel provocaretur ad hujuſmodi imitanda, vel contemneret ſanctos Patriarchas ut olim Manichæi, vel putarent mendacia eſſe in Scripturis. Bellarm. de verbo Dei. *lib.*2, *cap.*15. Audivi ab homine fide digno, cum in Anglia à Miniſtro Calviniſta in templo legeretur lingua vulgari capitulum 25 Eccleſiaſtici: ubi multa dicuntur de malitia mulierum; ſurrexiſſe fœminam quandam, atque dixiſſe, Iſtudne eſt verbum Dei? immo potius verbum Diaboli eſt. Bellarm. ibid. Hujus hiſtoriæ fides omnis penes ſit bonum illum virum, à quo Bellarminus eam accepit. Whitakerus.

S[t] Gregory (who is bleſſed in their Church) exhorteth a Lay-man to the ſerious ſtudy of the Scriptures, that thereby he might learn the will of God, alledging that the Scripture is the Epiſtle of God unto his creature. Quid eſt autem Scriptura ſacra, niſi Epiſtola omnipotentis Dei ad Creaturam? Greg. *lib.*4. *epiſt.*46. ad Theodorum medicum: Proving further, That obſcurity of Scripture is ſo frothy an argument for perſwading any devout Chriſtian not to reade it, that it ſhould rather incite them to greater Diligence therein; and therefore he elegantly compares the Scripture to a River, wherein (ſaith he) there are as well ſhallow Fords for Lambs to wade in, as depths and gulphs wherein the Elephant may ſwim.

The Scriptures were written to give knowledge to the ſimple, and wiſedom to the unlearned, Pſa.19.7. Prov.1.4. That is a ſpecial promiſe Iſa 35.8. for this purpoſe.

Chryſoſtom held it a thing neceſſary for all men daily to read the Scriptures, Audite quaſo ſæculares, comparate vobis Biblia, animæ pharmaca.

S[t] Jerom did exhort divers women thereto, and commended them for exerciſing themſelves therein, he writes to Læta and Gaudentia, and ſhews them how they ſhould bring up their daughters, Scripturas ſacras tenebat memoriter. Hieron. de Paula in Epitaphio. He commends the Husbandmen about Bethlem for being ſo perfect in the Scripture, That they had the Pſalms of David by heart, and ſang them as they followed the Plow. Arator ſtivam tenens cantat Davidicum melos. Epiſt. ad Demetriad.

Magdalen the wife of D[r] Pareus, after ſhe was married, and 40. years of age, out of love to the Scriptures, learned to reade, and took ſuch delight in the word, that ſhe got much of it by the heart.

Miſtreſſe Katharine Brettergh knew the Scriptures from a childe, and by reading thereof, gained ſuch knowledge, that ſhe was able readily to apply them, when occaſion was offered, as appeared at the time of her death, and that ſo fitly and effectually, that ſhe ſeemed to have made them her daily meditation.

The Apoſtle would not have commended this in Timothy, 2 Tim.3.15. That from his childehood he knew the holy Scriptures, nor noted it to the praiſe of his Grandmother and Mother, that they had trained him up ſo, if he had not known that the holy Scriptures are ſo plain that even a childe may be able to underſtand them. What may we judge of the other eaſier books, when the holy Ghoſt would have the Revelation, the obſcureſt book of all the Scripture, to be read, *Rev.*1.3? The people took occaſion of erring and blaſpheming from the humiliation of Chriſt; many abuſe Preaching and the Sacraments. See M[r] Froſt his Scripture-ſearch on John 5.39.

Origen being but ſeventeen years old had a fervent deſire to be martyred for Chriſt, and writes thus to his father Leonides (who ſuffered in the fifth Perſecution) Cave tibi ne quid propter nos aliud quam Martyrii conſtanter faciendi propoſitum cogites. His father brought him up from his youth moſt ſtudiouſly in all good literature, but eſpecially in the reading and exerciſe of holy Scripture, wherein he had ſuch inward and myſticall ſpeculation, that many times he would move queſtions to his father of the meaning of this or that place in the Scripture. Inſomuch that his father divers times would uncover his breaſt being aſleep and kiſſe it, giving thanks to God which had made him ſuch a happy father of ſo happy a childe. Foxes Acts and Monuments. *vol.*1.*pag.*70. Ut primum Dei ſingulari benignitate, ab illa idololatria Italiæ diſceſſi, meque nuptam medico Andreæ Grunthlero in Germaniam contuli, incredibile eſt quam Deus mutaverit animum, utpote quæ prius longiſſimè à divinis literis abhorruerim, jam illis ſolis me oblectem, & omnem meum ſtudium, operam, curam, mentem denique omnem, in eo locem, ut quantum fieri poſſit, hæc omnia contemnam, divitias, honores, voluptates, quæ quondam adeo admirari ſolebam. Olymp. Fulv. Morat. Epiſt. ſib.2. Annæ Eſtenſi Principi Guiſanæ.

2. By this reaſon the Latine Bibles ſhould not be ſuffered to be read publickly, becauſe many underſtanding Latine from the reading of them may take occaſion of erring. There is a greater reaſon to be had of Gods elect which are edified by reading of the Scripture, than of thoſe who wreſt them. Peter by this reaſon ſtirred up the faithfull to reade the Scriptures with greater devotion, 2 Pet. 3.14, 15,16,17.

3. This is common both to the Eccleſiaſtical Perſons and Laity, to take occaſion of erring and blaſpheming, from the Scripture. If we peruſe the Hiſtories of times paſt, we ſhall finde that learned and Eccleſiaſtical men, did oftner fall into Hereſies and Blaſphemies from miſunderſtanding and wreſting the Scriptures, than any of the common ſort of people, who were often alſo by the Learned drawn into Hereſie. The Papiſts are not afraid the people ſhould be corrupted by reading their legends, and lying fables, by their Images, which do naturally teach Idolatry.

Davenant. determinat. 39

The Papiſts further object, That the Hebrews did not permit young men to reade part of Geneſis, Canticles, Ezechiel.

We muſt know that the reading of thoſe Scriptures non abl tam hominibus, ſed dilatam fuiſſe, was not taken away from them, but delayed only. They permitted all men before thirty to reade all other Chapters of holy Scripture, and after thirty theſe alſo.

2. This tradition concerning the age of men did drive away as well the Eccleſiaſtick as the Lay perſons.

Notwithſtanding all this that hath been objected by the Papiſts, we hold that the Scriptures ought to be tranſlated into the Vulgar and mother Tongues of each Nation, and that all [n] men ought to reade them and meditate diligently in them, and that for theſe reaſons.

n Vorſtius in his anſwer to Bellarmine joyns theſe two together, the promiſcuous reading of the Scripture, and the turning of it in linguas vernaculas.

1. From the Commandment and will of God revealed in Scripture. He hath commanded all that live in the Church to ſtudy [o] the Scriptures, and read them, Deu. 11.18,19. *Joh.*5.39. He ſpeaks not to the Scribes and Phariſees, but to the people in generall, They muſt try all things. 1 Theſſ.5.21. The Papiſts ſay, ſuch places belong to the Doctors of the Church, and not to the people. The body of that Epiſtle was written to the people, and it is ſpoken to thoſe who are bidden not to deſpiſe propheſying.

o Davenant. deter. quæſt.39. & in c.3. Epiſt. ad Col. v.16. Ingratas eſſe Eccleſiæ Romanæ editiones vernaculas inde apparet, quod in illis locis ubi Pontificis maxime obtinent placita, ut in Hiſpania, non procurant Pontificii homines tales editiones, & ab aliis procuratas ferro & flammis proſequuntur. Ameſ. Bellarm. enerv. c.3. See Col.4.16. & 1 Theſſ 5.27. 2 Joh.13 14.

2. From Gods intention, which commanded it to be written for that end that it might be obvious to all, *Joh.*20.31. *Rom.*15.4.

3. Thoſe are commended which did reade the Scripture, as the Eunuch, Acts 8.22. the Bereans, Act.17. and diſpraiſed which neglected it, as the Iſraelites, Hoſ.8.12. they are pronounced Bleſſed who diligently meditate in the Scriptures, *Pſa.*1.2. How unlike to Peter, 2 Pet. 1.19. are thoſe which pretend to be his Succeſſours?

Scripturæ ſcriptæ ſunt ut inde petamus illuminationem mentis quoad credenda, directionem vitæ quoad agenda.

4. From the fact of the Apoſtles, who as they publikely preached the myſteries of ſalvation to the people; ſo alſo in their Epiſtles they commended the whole doctrine of ſalvation to be read by them. The Epiſtles of the Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, Epheſians were written to the people, therefore to be read by them. One Epiſtle of John was written to Gains a Lay-man, another to the elect Lady.

p Quod omnes tangit, ab omnibus tractari debet.

5. From the Profit and Neceſſity of this ſtudy; men are enlightned and converted by reading of the Scriptures, *Pſa.*19.8,9. they are directed by them as moſt faithfull counſellors in all their waies, Pſa. 119.24. they are armed [p] by them againſt the fiery darts of Satan, *Eph.*6.16. One ſeeing a youth read the Scriptures, ſaid, It was never well ſince ſuch were permitted to turn over the Bible; but he anſwered him in the Pſalmiſts words, *Pſa.*119.9.

6. From

6. From the unanimous Conſent of all the Fathers, Chryſoſtom and Ierom eſpecially, who exhort the people to the private reading of the Scriptures, and teſtifie that the Scriptures were publickly read in their Eccleſiaſticall Aſſemblies, not in an unknown tongue, but in a tongue underſtood by the people [q]. It was decreed by the Councel of Nice, That no Chriſtian ſhould be without a Bible in his houſe. And the Jews at this day ſuffer no houſe amongſt them to be without the Bible. Chriſt and his Apoſtles teaching and diſputing before the people, appeal to the Law and the Prophets, without the name of the Authour, Book or Chapter, becauſe they knew the Bible Text to be familiar to the Iſraelites. In an unknown tongue they cannot profit the people, Ergo, They ought to be tranſlated into a Tongue known to the people, [r] 1 Cor. 14. [s] The Apoſtle in divers verſes treateth of this ſubject, verſ. 6,7,19. He ſaith, All things ought to be done in the Church for the edifying of the people, that no man ſhould ſpeak in an unknown tongue, without an interpreter: and ſaith, That he had rather ſpeak five words and be underſtood, than ten thouſand words in an unknown tongue. Thoſe Arguments before urged for the peoples reading of the Scripture, prove this alſo; for they cannot reade them in every Nation unleſſe they be tranſlated into a Tongue they underſtand. Chriſt and his Apoſtles taught the people the Scripture in their mother [t] Tongue. In the next age after the Apoſtles (ſaith Grotius lib. 3. De Veritate Religionis Chriſt.) the New Teſtament was tranſlated into divers Vulgar Tongues, the Syriack, Arabick, Æthiopick, and Latine; which Verſions are yet extant, and differ not mainly from the Greek.

q Whitaker. cont. 1. quæſt. 2 c. 14. makes mention of very ancient Engliſh Tranſlations, and Turretine of old French Tranſlations. Vide Eſtium ad 2 Tim. 3. 15.

r The word of God was written by the Prophets and Apoſtles Linguis vernaculis, viz. to the Hebrews in Hebrew, to the Greeks in Greek. ſ Vide Caietanum in 1 Cor. 14. t Vernaculum teſte Valla eleg. lib. 1. cap 5. dicitur, quod eſt domi noſtræ, vel in noſtra patria natum; ut lingua vernacula, quæ vulgo dicitur lingua materna, dictum a verna, qui eſt ſervus ex ancilla, domi noſtræ natus. Ebræis ergo lingua Ebræa fuit vernacula, Græcis Græca, Latinis Latina. Hoc tempore nulli ſunt populi, quibus vel Hebræa, vel Græca pura, vel Latina lingua ſint vernaculæ. Rivet. Iſag. ad ſac ſcript. Vide Laurentium contra Gretzerum De Prohibitione Lectionis S. Scripturæ in lingua vernacula.

I never yet heard any reaſon, why it were not convenient to have the Bible tranſlated into the Engliſh Tongue, but all theſe reaſons ſeemed they never ſo gay and glorious at the firſt ſight; yet when they were well examined, they might in effect, for ought as I can ſee, as well be laid againſt the holy Writers that wrote the Scripture in the Hebrew tongue, and againſt the bleſſed Evangeliſts that wrote the Scripture in Greek, and againſt all thoſe likewiſe that tranſlated it out of thoſe tongues into Latine, as to their charge, that would well and faithfully tranſlate it out of Latine into our Engliſh tongue. For the Hebrew, Greek and Latine tongues were then ſuch as all the people ſpake. Sir Thomas Mores Dialogue. l. 3. See M. Baxter againſt Popery, p. 14,15.

In the elder and purer times, the Scriptures were tranſlated into innumerable, yea, into all Tongues uſual amongſt men. See Gregories Preface to the Notes on paſſages of Scripture, and Dr Waltons Conſiderator conſidered, c. 6. 4. The plain and uſuall words, the phraſe and manner of ſpeech moſt frequented, the compariſons and ſimilitudes in Scripture moſt familiar, taken out of the ſhops and fields, from Husbandry and Houſwifery, from the Flock [u] and the Herd, ſhew that the Scriptures were written for the capacity and underſtanding of the unlearned, Ioh. 5. 39. a ſpeciall place; if it be indicative, it ſhews the cuſtome [x] of the Jews; if imperative, it ſhews what they ought to do.

u Prov. 8. 9. By a man of underſtanding he meaneth every one that is godly, as by the fool, the wicked. 3. Conſectary.

x Utinam omnes faceremus illud quod Scriptum eſt, ſcrutamini ſcripturas, Origines.

Many amongſt us are to be blamed for not having the Scripture in their houſes, and for not reading it conſtantly in the ſame as they ought to do, or elſe they reade it as other Books, not with ſuch reſpect to it as the greatneſſe of its Authour deſerveth; I mean with a deſire and purpoſe to beleeve and obey all that they finde there, which muſt needs be the Duty of thoſe that confeſſe theſe writings come from God. [y] We ſhould receive it with reverence, beleeve it with confidence, exerciſe our ſelves in it with diligence and delight, practiſe it with obedience.

y See M. Torſhels Womans Glory, cha. 11. about womens reading of the ſcripture.

Every Chriſtian is not bound to ſtudy controverſies, that more ſpecially concerns Miniſters, Tit. 1.9,11. See Rom. 14.1. but Chriſtians are to ſtudy the grounds of Religion ſo farre, as to be at a certainty, becauſe there are different waies, Ier. 6.16. and hereſies are dangerous, 2 Pet. 2.1. every one ſhould be able to give an account account of his faith and hope, 1 Pet. 3.15. truth upon ſearch will have a greater force on his heart, and one ſhall have a ſtedfaſtneſſe of his own, 2 *Pe.*3.17.

Reading the Scripture is a rehearſing out of the Book ſuch things as are there written barely without any interpretation. It is to be done 1. Publickly, as it was in the Synagogues of the Jews who had the reading of the Law and Prophets amongſt them, The Prophets were read in their ears every day, ſaith Paul, and after the lecture of the Law and the Prophets, in another place. From hence hath been continued the cuſtom of Leſſons of the Old and New Teſtament to the ſame purpoſe, ſaith Mr Thorndike, We honour God more by a publike than a private reading of it.

2. Privately, The godly Jews of Berea did ſearch the Scriptures, and both King and people are commanded to reade the Law, *Deut.*17.19. and 6,7,8,9. What is written in the Law? How readeſt thou? *Luk.*10.26. *Mat.*12.5. and 21.16,42. Chriſt, Peter and Paul in their preaching quote not the Chapter and verſe, only ſay, Iſaiah ſaith, Iſaiah is bold, It is written in the Pſalms, becauſe people ſhould be ſo acquainted with the Scripture, as to know where it is. See Grotius on *Heb.*4.4.

The Churches of Africk had this cuſtom, as Auguſtine ſheweth, firſt, they reade a Leſſon out of the Prophets, then out of the Epiſtles and Goſpel, with a Pſalm between. Act.11.17. Lectio Moſis ſabbathina perantiqua eſt. Tempore Chriſti & Apoſtolorum uſitatam fuiſſe liquet, Act. 15 21. Buxtorf.

Some good Divines hold that the Scriptures barely read (though preaching be not joyned with it) may be the inſtrument of Regeneration, ſince the Doctrine of the Goſpel is called, The miniſtration of the ſpirit, Pſa. 19. The Law of the Lord converteth the ſoul, it is ſo when not preached. B. Davenant in *Col.*4.16. underſtands it of the Word read. The Word is a means of converſion, whether written, preacht or lived, * 2 *Cor.*3.2,3. 1 *Pet.*3.1,2. Pſal. 51.13. But the Word of God is made effectuall by the Spirit, more often, more ordinarily to beget a new life, in the preaching (that is, the interpreting and applying of it) than in the bare reading, 1 *Tim.*4.13. *Matth.*28.29. Chriſts cuſtome was (as we may collect out of *Luk.*4. where one inſtance is recorded to make us conceive his ordinary practice) when he had read, to interpret the Scripture, and often to apply it.

The Scripture doth expreſly mention Baruch to have read the word in a Church-aſſembly without adjoyning any interpretation to it, *Jer.*36.6,7. The very reading of the Word it ſelf was an Ordinance in the Church of Iſrael, though no expoſition followed, Deut. 32. 11,12,13. Deut. 27.14. to 26. M. Cotton Singing of Pſalms a Goſpel-Ordinance, *Cha.*11. * A man may be converted by reading, as Luther ſaies he was; and John Hus by reading of Wickcliffs books. There is a bleſſing that may be looked for by reading, *Rev.*1.3. But this is very rare. M. Fenner on *Rev.*3.1. See M. Fox his Acts and Monuments, Vol 3. p.218. col.1. & Vol.2. p.294. col.1. & p.266. col.2.

Chriſtus Scripturas ſcrutari jubet, vel potius Judæis hoc teſtimonii perbibet, quod illas ſcrutentur. Joh. 5.39. Zepperus.

Let us all learn conſtantly to exerciſe our ſelves in the writings of God, Pſal. 119.11. Iob 22.22. Col.3.16. which if we ſtrive to do in a right manner, we ſhall attain true knowledge of the way to Heaven, and alſo grace and help to walk in that way. Then we ſhall have it ready for our uſe, *Mat.*13.52.

1. This will prevent vain thoughts, *Mat.*12.35. the workings of our ſpirits are as our treaſure is.

2. When we are alone and without help, our hearts will furniſh us with good things, *Pro.*16.7.

3. Will enable us to pray, we ſhall have enough for ſupplication, confeſſion, Pſa. 45.1. *Eph.*6.17,18.

4. It will be a great help to us on all occaſions, *Prov.*6.21,22.

5. It will be a great relief againſt temptations to have the Word ready, *Eph.*6. 17. 1 *Joh.*2,14.

6. It will be a great relief in trouble and affliction, Heb. 12.5.

7. It makes a mans conference and converſation with others more gracious, Mat. 12.34. *Col.*3.16.

If the Lord ſhould deny to any man the publike helps of preaching and conference, yet if that man ſhould conſtantly reade the Word, praying to God to teach him and guide him by it, and ſtrive to follow it in his life, he ſhould finde out the Truth, and attain ſaving grace, the Word would illighten and convert; but if God afford publick preaching and interpretation, we muſt uſe that too as a principal ordinance.

Let

Let us all reade [z] the Scripture.

1. With hearty prayers to God to direct us, and open the ſenſe of it to us [a] Pſa. 119.18. *Prov.*2.3. *Jam.*1.5,17. though Chriſt himſelf was the Preacher, yet he opened their underſtanding to conceive the Scripture, *Luk.*4.45. and with a reſolution to put in practice that which we learn, Jam. 1.25. Matth. 7.24. *Joh.*7.17. and we ſhall finde the Word read Gods power to our edification and ſalvation. Only a ſpirituall underſtanding can diſcern an excellency in the Scripture. Nunquam Pauli ſenſum ingredieris, niſi Pauli ſpiritum inhibueris. Bern.

[z] Scripturam ſacram à legendo Cara vocant & Micra, quod in ea legenda, cognoſcenda, operæ non parum ac temporis ponendum ſit. Ideo præcipiunt, ut homo annos ætatis ſuæ dividat in tres partes, quarum tertiam lectioni tribuat ſacrarum literarum. Druſius Ebraic. quæſt. *Karaml*ectores Scripturæ ſacræ ſecta olim fuit, quæ nudo textui bibliorum addicta erat, ac Traditiones omnes rejiciebat. Buxtorf. de Abbreviat. Hebraic. Vide Richardi Bechm. Happertus. pag. 103. [a] Benè oraſſe eſt benè ſtuduiſſe. Luther. He hath ſtudied well who hath prayed well.

2. Diligently, Attend unto reading, 1 Tim.4.13,15. John 5.39. Search the Scriptures; whether the Greek word be a metaphor from hunting dogs, or from diggers in mines, both import diligence. It was a ſolemn ſpeech uſed in holy actions, Hoc age. The paſſions of the Martyrs may be read when their anniverſary daies are celebrated, Whence the name of Legends. Chamier. We ſhould obſerve the ſcope and circumſtance of the place, the uſe of the word and phraſe, and compare one place with another. See D. Gouge on Heb 11,4.

3. Orderly, That we may be better acquainted with the whole Body of the Scriptures. We ſhould reade on in Chronicles and Ezra, and other places wherein are nothing but Names and Genealogies, to ſhew our obedience to God in reading over all his ſacred Word, and we ſhall after reap profit by that we underſtand not for the preſent; though it will be convenient to begin with the New Teſtament as more plain, before we reade the Old. M. Pemble of the Perſian Monarchy. In reading of the Scriptures men muſt reade not here and there a Chapter (except upon ſome good occaſion) but the Bible in order throughout, and as oft as they can, that ſo by little and little they may be acquainted with the Hiſtories, and the whole courſe of the Scriptures. Rogers. Treat.3. c.12.

4. With Faith, [b] *Heb.*4.2. The Word of God conſiſteth of four parts: 1. Hiſtory, 2. Commandments, 3. Promiſes, 4. Threats, every thing in Gods Word is to be beleeved. All truths taught in the Hiſtory of the Scripture ought to be beleeved. As that the world was made of nothing, only by the Word of God, *Heb.*11.3. and that the bodies of men howſoever they died, ſhall riſe again at the laſt day, Job 19.26. 2. All Precepts, Geneſ 22.6. Abraham obeyed that Commandment though ſtrange. 3. All Promiſes, as that God could give Abraham when he was an hundred years old, a ſeed and poſterity which ſhould be as innumerable as the ſtars in the firmament, *Gen.*15.5. and that by Sarah an old and barren woman, *Gen.*17.16. Abraham and Sarah beleeved it, *Rom.*4.20,21. Heb. 11.11. 4. Threatnings, as that *Gen.*6.13,17. though unlikely, Noah beleeved it, *2 Pet.*2.5. becauſe God had ſaid it, *Heb.*11.7. and that Jonah 3.4. the people of Nineveh beleeved, *v.*5. In narrando gravitas, in imperando authoritas, in promittendo liberalitas, in minando ſeveritas. Spanhem. orat. de officio Theologi.

[b] Verbum Scriptum eſt objectum fidei adæquatum, primum fundamentum, à quo capit initium, & ultimum illud in quod reſolvitur. Ameſius de Circulo Pontificio. Prima veritas eſt fidei objectum formale quo; & Deus ipſe ſive abſolute, ſive in Chriſto eſt ejuſdem objectum formale quod. id ibid.

We reade therefore of faith in the Promiſes, *Pſa.*119.49. Faith in the Commandments, *Pſal.*119.66. Faith in the Threatnings, *Heb.*11.6. but Faith in the Threatnings is not ſo much urged, becauſe guilty nature in it ſelf is preſaging of evil.

5. Conſtantly. Cyprianus was ſo much delighted with the reading of Tertullian, that he reade ſomething in him every day, and called him his Maſter, * Da Magiſtrum. Let Gods command, the examples of the godly, and our own benefit quicken us to a frequent reading of the holy Scriptures. M[r] Bifield hath a Kalendar, ſhewing what number of Chapters are to be read every day, that ſo the whole Bible may be read over in the year. The number of Chapters while you are reading the Old Teſtament, is for the moſt part three a day, and when you come to the New Teſtament it is but two [c]; ſometimes where the matter is Hiſtorical or Typical, or the Chapters ſhort, he hath ſet down a greater number. The Martyrs would ſit up all night in reading, and hearing.

* Divinas Scripturas ſæpius lege, imò nunquam de manibus tuis ſacra lectio deponatur Hieron. ad Nepotian. de vita Cleric.

c Bifields directions for private reading the Scriptures. See Practice of Piety. p.314.

——Vos exemplaria ſacra
Nocturna verſate manu, verſate diurna.

After we have read and underſtood the Scripture, we muſt, 1. Give thanks to God for the right underſtanding of it, and pray him to imprint the true knowledge of it in our hearts, that it may not fall out. 2. We muſt meditate in the Word of God underſtood, and ſo fix it in our minds. One defines Meditation thus: It is an action of the ſoul calling things to mind or remembrance, and diſcourſing of them, that they might be the better underſtood, retained, affected and poſſeſſed. It is as it were every mans preaching to himſelf, and is a ſetting ones ſelf ſeriouſly to conſider in his mind, and apply to his own ſoul ſome neceſſary truth of Gods word, till the mind be informed, and the heart affected, as the nature thereof requires, and is the wholſomeſt and uſefulleſt of all exerciſes of piety. This is to ingraff the Word into ones ſoul, to give the ſeed much earth; this is to bind it to the Tables of our heart, and to hide it in the furrows of our ſouls; this is ſo digeſt it, and make it our own.

What meditation is. It is a diligent application of the mind to find out ſome ſpirituall thing to know it profitably, and taſte the ſweetneſs of it.

To make this duty eaſie,

1. Be ſure to fix upon ſome certain and particular Subject, as the word of God, read or heard, the mercies of the day, our ſinnes, wants, the Attributes of God, Offices of Chriſt.

2. Conſider the circumſtances which may facilitate the duty, as if one would meditate of what he hath heard, to think of the ſcope and tendency of the Sermon, what my heart was moſt affected with. So if I would meditate of the ſinnes of the day, conſider the places where we have been, the company we have converſed with.

In cogitatione evagatio, in meditatione inquiſitio, ſaid one of the Ancients. It is preciſely diſtinguiſhed from cogitation, conſideration, and contemplation; but it is taken in a large ſenſe for cogitation on things ſpirituall, and ſo comprehends conſideration and contemplation.

3. Empty your hearts of worldly cares and buſineſſes, and alſo paſſions.

4. Make choice of a private ſolitary place, Mark 1. 35. and in the morning or evening; the morning, becauſe then we are more refreſht and not drencht in worldly affairs, Pſal. 5. 3. & 88. 13. the evening, becauſe then we are disburdened of worldly cares, and to reflect upon our carriage in the day, Gen. 24 63. Pſal. 119. 147, 148.

5. We ſhould not be diſcouraged by ſome diverſions, but labour to reſiſt wandering thoughts, and return again to our former thoughts.

6. Call in the aſſiſtance of the Spirit, 2 Cor. 3. 5.

3. We muſt apply to our own uſe whatſoever things we read and underſtand, the precepts and examples of the Law to inſtruct our life, the Promiſes and Comforts of the Goſpel to confirme our faith.

Mr Baxters Saints Everlaſting Reſt, part 4. ch. 6. §. 4. See more there, and ſee Mr Whites excellent Book of the Art of Divine meditation, ch. 1. what it is, and its difference from occaſionall meditation, ſtudy, contemplation, ch. 12. that it is a duty, and in the following Chapters he laies down rules for performing of it. See Mr Fenner on Hag. 1. 5. A young Diſciple asking an old Rabbi, Whether he might not have time to learn the Greek Tongue, he ſaid. If he would do it neither by night nor by day, he might, becauſe by night and day he was to ſtudy the Law, Pſ. 1. 2. Meditatio eſt actus religionis ſeu exercitium ſpirituale, quo Deum & res divinas intentas, experimentali, & effectuoſa cognitione recordamur nobiſque applicamus. Voetius.

We ſhould confer of the Scriptures, Pſal. 119. 13. Pſal. 37. 30. Cant. 4. 3.

Reaſons, 1. From the intereſt God hath in the lips and tongue, thy whole body is Gods, 1 Cor. 6. 20. thy wit, ſtrength, hands, tongue are all his.

2. It is the glory of the tongue to ſerve God in this kind, the Pſalmiſt calls his tongue his glory, awake my glory, James 3. 9. The benefit of ſpeech is our priviledge above Angels and Beaſts, Angels have reaſon but not tongues, Beaſts have tongues but not reaſon.

3. Every Creature hath a voice like it ſelf, therefore ſhould the new Creature, Prov. 10. 20. a good tongue diſcovers a good ſpirit.

1. Plenty of knowledge, Prov. 16. 23. Col. 3. 16.
2. A good eſteem of the word, Joh. 3. 31. 1 Joh. 4. 5.
3. What one affects, he will moſt talk of.
4. From the nature of good which is communicative, Joh. 1. 41, 45. this was Chriſts Chriſts manner, Luk. 4. 15. Joh. 4. 14. & 7. 37.

5. It will be for our benefit to be talking of good things to others, ſpirituall good things increaſe by imparting.

The Papiſts would not have the Laicks to ſpeak of the Scriptures, or things pertaining to the Scriptures.

We ſhould alſo delight in ſtudying the Scriptures. Pſal. 119. 14, 16. Jer. 15. 16. Rom. 7. 22.

1. Becauſe truth is the good of the underſtanding, Prov. 24. 14. every truth, though but naturall or philoſophicall, breeds a delight in the mind, much more ſupernaturall. The Word of God deſerves our delight in regard of the authority of it, and for its own excellency.

2. Scripturall truths are more ſublime than other truths, and innoble the mind with the knowledge of them, Deut. 4. 6. concerning God, Angels, the ſouls of men, the Creation and government of all things.

3. Becauſe theſe truths are ſuitable to our neceſſities, and ſhew the way to come to pardon of ſinne, peace, and eternall happineſſe. The Word of God is the only ſufficient direction to happineſſe, Luk. 8. 13. Heb. 6. 4, 9. the Scriptures are a Chriſtians ſupport and charter for Heaven, Pſal. 119. 50. Heb. 6. 18.

Delight will ariſe from contemplation, much more from practicall obedience, Prov. 3. 17. Micah. 2. 7. Some degree of comfort ariſeth from every good action, Rom. 2. 15. The Word of God believed and obeyed, yields the trueſt profit, Pſal. 19. 10. It will truly inrich a man, and make him happy, Luk. 16. 11.

How to know whether we delight in the Scriptures.

1. Then we will ſerve God with delight, Pſal. 112. 1.

2. It is the ſupream and prevailing delight. What doth your care run upon? doth it ſupnort you in trouble, in the midſt of all loſſes?

3. It ſweetens duty, the joy of your Lord is your ſtrength.

Gods People delight

1. In reading the Word, Act. 8. 28. David expreſſeth his delight in the Scriptures twelve or fourteen times, Pſal. 119.

2. In hearing the Word, James 1. 19. Pſal. 122.

3. In Conferring of it often, Deut. 6. 7.

4. In mediating of it, Pſal. 1. 2.

5. In practiſing of it, Pſal. 119. 14.

This delight will be uſefull to them.

1. To draw them off from carnall vanities, Pſal. 119. 37.

2. It will take off the tediouſneſſe of religious exerciſes, one muſt make Religion his buſineſs to prevent ſlightneſs, and his recreation, to prevent tediouſneſs.

Helps to delight in the Word.

1. Get a ſuitableneſs of heart to the Word of God, every ones delights are according to their principles, Rom. 8. 5. Heb. 8. 10, 11.

2. Be in ſuch a condition as thou maiſt delight in the Word, Joh. 3. 20.

3. Purge the heart from carnall diſtempers, 1 Pet. 4. 1.

It ſerves for Thankfulneſſe, 1. That now we have the Scripture: the world was a long time without it; it was the more wicked, becauſe they had no Canon of Scripture. We are not like to erre by Tradition, as former Ages have done. 2. That we have ſo great a part of Scripture, and in our vulgar Tongue; the Martyrs would have given a load of Hay for a few Chapters of S^t James or S^t Paul in Engliſh; 3. That we have ſo great helps for the opening of the Scripture; ſo many excellent Expoſitors; Compare Mollerus on the Pſalmes, with Auſtin. As the later thoughts are uſually the more adviſed, ſo the latter Interpreters are generally the quicker ſighted. See M^r Hales his Sermon on 2 Pet. 3. 16.

All thoſe are to be reproved which contemn or unreverently handle the Scriptures.

4. Conſectary. Some gave five marks for a Bible, the Epiſtle of James was ſold for a load of hay, Fox his Acts and Mon. vol. 2. p. 32. col. 1. edit. ult. Quo juniores eo perſpicaciores. Salmeron.

5. Conſectary.

[f] Speculative and practical Atheists. Speculative Atheism in the judgement consists in maintaining corrupt principles: Practical, in going on in wayes which deny Gods Attributes.

1. Atheists, [f] who impiously oppose the word of God, and all prophane wretches, who live loosely and wickedly, their doom is written in this book. Julian the Apostate, when Christians craved help against all their injuries, would ask with mocks and scoffs, Why they did complain when the Galilean their Master bad them do good for evill? If any one would take away their Coat, that then they should give him also their Cloak. Porphyrius to overthrow the miraculousnesse of the Israelites passage through the red Sea, would say that Moses took the advantage of the low ebbing water, and so went thorow safe, which the Ægyptians not understanding, came in with the flood, and were drowned by the exuberance of the waters.

It argued a prophane spirit in Politian, who said, That there was more in one of Pindars Odes than all Davids Psalms. Omnibus ferè hæreticis hoc unum fuit commune, sacris videlicet Scripturis detrahere. Alphonsus De Castro Adversus Hæreses, l. 13.

Aquinas and Scotus have multiplyed the number of needless questions far beyond the limits of sober, reasonable, and religious inquiries. See Mr. Ley's Discourse of Disputations concerning matters of Religion, c. 2.

2. Papists, who 1. Set up Pictures instead of the Scripture; the Scriptures (they say) may teach men errours, but may not Pictures?

2. Equal the Apocrypha and unwritten verities, or rather vanities with the sacred Scriptures.

3. Charge the Scriptures with insufficiency [g] and obscurity, allow it not to be a perfect Rule.

4. Make it of no force to bind our consciences unlesse the Pope ratifie it.

5. Give the Pope power to dispense with things therein forbidden, yea and with oaths and vows, which no Scripture dispenseth withall.

6. Teach that the vulgar Latine is to be received as Authentick.

7. Wrest and turn it which way they [h] please, Isa. 28. 16. Cardinal Bellarmine in præfat. lib. de Summo Pontifice, and Baronius, say, That by precious and corner stone in this place, the Pope of Rome, although lesse principally, is meant, who is a stumbling stone to Hereticks, and a rock of offence, but to Catholicks a tried, precious corner stone; yet, Peter 2. 6. & 8. expoundeth those words, not of himself, but of Christ. Bellarmine from Matth. 21. Feed my Lambs and Sheep [i], would infer the Popes universal Dominion, Baronius from the Acts, Kill and eat. Psalm. 8. 6. under his feet, that is, say they, of the Pope of Rome; Sheep [i. Christians; Oxen] that is, Jews and Hereticks, Beasts of the field, i. Pagans; Fowles of the air, i. Angels; Fishes of the Sea, i. souls in Purgatory. The Pope in his procession when he is elected, being carried publickly to shew himself to the world, hurls brass among the people, and useth these words of St Peter, Gold and Silver have I none, but that which I have, I give unto thee. Cavendech his Horæ subcesivæ. Aylesbury De Æterno Dei decreto, c. 7. saith, Profecto nullum novi interpretem in torquendis Scripturis, audacem magis quam Arminium, cujus tamen vestigia premit Corvinus.

[g] Ita, qui maximè sibi Christianorum, Catholicorum nomen venditant, nihil tam solenne est, tamque vulgatum, quam Scripturas calumniari, Chamier.

[h] Quam verè dixerit olim Polydorus Virgilius, Doctores quosdam Pontificios sacras literas, quo volunt, retorquere, instar sutorum, qui sordidas pelles suis dentibus extendunt. Vide Cl. Gatak. Ad vers. miscel. c. 8. Quis Scripturæ locus est tam disertus expressusque, cui non qualiscunque interpretationis ludificatio possit apponi Petav. de Trinit. l. 3. c. 5.

They have Tapers in their Churches in the day time, because Christ saith, I am the light of the world: or because they had such at midnight, Acts 20. 8. where Paul preached.

This is the great fault of the School Divines, that they handle Paul and Aristotle, Suæ curiositati litantes potius, quam pietati; so that he is counted most learned amongst them who dares to seek, and presumes to define most things without the Scripture. What Distinctions, Orders, Degrees and Offices do they make of Angels? What curious Questions do they raise? What use would there have been of Sexes, if Adam had not sin'd? Whether Christ should have been incarnate if there had been no sin? and infinite such like.

The Schoolmen perverting the [k] Scriptures have prophaned Divinity with Philosophy, or rather Sophistry, and yet are called School-Divines, [l] when they are neither Scholars in Truth, nor Divines.

[i] Pasce oves meas, hoc est, regio more impera. Thomas ex Aristotele, Patribus, Conciliis, & barbara Bibliorum versione magnum illud Systema compilavit, cui titulum Summæ fecit. Liber sententiarum & Summa Thomæ, tanquam duo Testamenta, in pulpita introducti sunt. Amama. [k] Cum Mose pugnant, cum Prophetis, cum Apostolis, cum Christo ipso, ac Deo Patre & Spiritu sancto, qui sacras literas & oracula divina contemnunt. Bella. de verbo Dei. l. 1, c. 2. [l] Dr Clerk.

Behold

Behold two Swords, Luk. 22. 38. therefore the Pope hath two Swords, one Spiritual, another Temporal, 1 Cor. 2. 15. ergo, The Pope judgeth of all things, and is judged of none.

See Moulins Anatomy de hæresse l. 3. c. 3 & 9.

The Papists stile the Scripture Regulam Lesbiam, Nasum cereum, Evangelium nigrum, Theologiam atramentariam, a Lesbian Rule, a Nose of Wax, the black Gospel, inky Divinity.

Bishop Bonners Chaplain called the Bible, his little pretty Gods Book; [m] Gifford and Raynolds said, it contained some things prophane and Apocryphall.

[m] Dr Rainolds against Hart.

Leo the tenth the Pope, when he admired at the Money gotten by Indulgences, is reported to have said to Cardinal Bembus: Bembe, quantum nobis profuit fabula de Christo? The same man when Bembus brought a place out of the New Testament to comfort him dying, said, Apage istas nugas de Christo. Parzi Medulla Hist. Eccles.

Many wicked men abuse Scripture, they say they must not be too precise, and urge Eccles. 7. 18. they bring that place, Eccles. 3. 4. to justifie mixt dancing: that Matth. 25. 27. for usury: that 1 Cor. 9. 20. for temporizing and complying with all companies, and many that were Professors formerly deny Scripture, they call it a fancy, a meer forgery, the Bible a Riddle.

Those professours despise the word.
1. Who attend not on it, Ezek. 22. 8.
2. Who throw it off as a useless thing, Psal. 119. 126.
3. Who do not desire it, Hos. 8. 13, 14.
4. Who slightly hear it, Isa. 66. 2.
5. Who have too good an opinion of their own knowledg, 1 Cor. 8. 3.

The Rebels in Ireland took the Bibles, threw them into the chanels, [n] and cast them into the fire, and called it Hell-fire, and wished they could serve all the rest so. One of them with his feet stampt the Bible in the dirt, and cursed it, and said, This is it that hath bred all this, and set us together by the ears. Mr Baxter of Conversion, c. 1. §. 14. See the Civil Wars of France, p. 46.

Luther said of Germany, before it was destroyed, it was impossible their unthankfullnesse and contempt of the world, should long remain unpunished. 6. Who little discourse of it. 7. Who prefer the world and worldly advantages before it. There are 2. great grounds of fear, that God may remove the Gospel from us, 1. The wantonnesse of professors. 2. The prophaneness and worldlinesse of the generality of men. Mat. 22. 5. [n] Dr Jones his Remonstrance. See Sr John Temple of the Irish Rebellion, p. 108.

But I may say of the Gospel, as the French Lady of the Crosse Never dog barkt at the Crosse, but he ran mad.

Contra rationem nemo sobrius, contra Ecclesiam nemo Pacificus, contra Scripturas nemo Christianus.

Thirdly, The Brownists vainly and idly [o] quote the Scripture, filling their margins with with many Texts of Scripture, but nothing to the purpose, and misapply it, they alledg those Texts of Isa. 52. 51. and Revel. 18. 4. to draw men from all the Assemblies of Gods people, whither any wicked men do resort. The Swenckfeldians, the Familists in New England, and the new Quakers do hold, that the Scriptures are carnall, the Bible fleshly, elementish, the Word of God is to be rejected as a dead killing letter. Mr Fowlers Dæmonium meridianum.

The Quakers say, That every man hath a light within him, sufficient to guide him, so as that following it he may please God, and be saved without the light of Scripture, or preaching of publick Teachers, which errour is well confuted by Mr Tombes, in his True Old Light exalted above pretended New Light, Sermon 4, & 5. §. 2. & Sermon 6, & 7. & per totum.

[o] Non debet Scriptura quacunque occasione detorqueri à genuino sensu. Imò quodammodo fœdius est, citando detorquere: quia indicium est, nos tum Scripturis abuti ad arbitrium, & tanquam regulam Lesbiam pro nostro commodo huc illuc detorquere. Hoc verò quum semper verum est, tum maximè in disputatione. Quantum enim illud crimen est, ut qui aliorum mendacia refutare profitetur, ipse se ita gerat, ut falsarius appellari possit? Chamier. de Canone, lib. 8. cap. 6. How the Jews wrest and pervert places of Scripture, See Dilheri Electa, l. 1. c. 15. Dum Scripturas interpretari aggrediuntur, Coribantum somnia & imaginationes, non hominum sanorum expositiones afferunt. Buxtorf. Syntag. Judaic. c. 1. Satan indeavours in this latter age to enervate the Word two wayes, 1. In labouring to weaken the Authority of the Old Testament, 2 Tim. 3. 15. given by inspiration, and profitable go together. 2. Men deny all consequences out of Scripture, will have nothing Scripture but what is there in so many words, Matth. 2. ult. James 2. 5. See John 5. 39. There were no other Scriptures to search then, but only those of the Old Testament, for none of the New were written till after Christs Death and Resurrection. See Mr Cooks Font uncovered for Infant Baptism, pag. 24, 25.

Fourthly, The Antinomians or Antinomists, who cry down the Law of God, and call those that preach the Law, Legal Preachers, and stand for Evangelicall grace; the Law is part of Canonical Scripture, and hath something peculiar in it, being written with the finger of God, and delivered with Thunder and Lightning. See Mr Hindes Treatise of the use of the Moral Law in the dayes of the Gospel. Mr Gatakers Treatise on *Numb.*23.21. and Mr Burgesse his Lectures on 1*Tim.*1.8,9. Mr Bedfords Examination of Antinomianism.

First, The second Commandment, then the fourth, then the whole Law, then the Old Testament, and then all the Scriptures, Mr Shaw's Britannia Rediviva.

Those that under a colour of advancing free grace, cry down the Law of God, are enemies to God, to the people of God, to the Gospel, 1. To God in crying down his Law, this is to let every one be at liberty, and do what he list. 2. To the people of God, the Law is to them a Light, a Guide, a Rule, a Counsellor. 3. To the Gospel, the Law is subservient to it, 1. In discovering of sin, by the Law comes the knowledg of sin, and its malignity against God and the souls of men; 2. In driving men to Christ, *Gal.*3.24. 3. In exalting free-grace, 1*Tim.*1.13.14. and the value of Christs Bloud.

Fifthly, Stage-players, who jest with Scriptures; Witches and others, which use charms, writing a piece of S*t Johns* Gospel to cure a disease, or the like, are to be condemned for abusing the Scripture. Per voces sacras (puta Evang. Johannis, Orationem Dominicam frequenter cum Ave Maria recitatam, Symbolum Apostolicum, &c.) morbos curare magicum est. Voetius.

Hujus generis inter Papistas, sunt brevia collo appensa, Ave Maria cum Oratione Dominica in globulis, ad certum numerum recitata. Ames. *lib.*4. de Conscientia, cap. 23.

Sixthly, Printers, who print the Bible in bad Paper, a blind print, and corruptly, are likewise to be blamed.

Seventhly, The Heathens and Jews. Tacitus cals the Doctrine of the Gospel, Superstitionem quandam exitiabilem.

Judæi. Evangelium dici volunt, quasi ‏און גליון‏ Aven Gilion, id est, mendacium seu iniquitatem voluminis. Gualeperjus. 1 Cor. 1. 22.

The Modern Jews call Evangelium Aven gilion, a volume of lies, word for word, the iniquity of the Volume; The blasphemous Jews mean (I suppose) the volume of iniquity. Elias Levita in Thisbi mentions this Etymology or rather Pseudology of the word; but P. Fagius abhorred to translate it.

The Jews think they shew great reverence to the Bible, if they place it not under but above all other books, if they do not touch it with unwashen hands, especially after they have been disburdening of nature, if they kiss it as often as they open and shut it, if they sit not on that seat where the Bible is, but they are not in the mean while solicitous to do and performe what the Bible teacheth, viz. Faith Charity, Justice, Innocency of life, which are the chief parts of Piety. They bend all their thoughts, not to draw out the true and genuine sense of the holy Ghost out of the Scriptures, but how they may by usury and other most unjust means extort money from Goiim, that is, the Gentiles. Paulus Fagius in his Annotat. on *Deut.*17.17.

Scripture arguments are the chiefest to convince an unbeliever. Christ by divers Arguments, John 5. labours to convince the Jews that he was the Messiah promised. 1. John bare witnesse of him, *vers.*33. 2. His works bare witnesse of him, *vers.*36. 3. The Father did bear witnesse of him, *vers.*37. 4. He produceth the Testimony of the Scriptures, vers. 39. They are they which testifie of me. Will you not believe John, my miracles, my Word from Heaven, then believe the written Word. If we believe not the Testimony of Scripture, nothing will convince us, though one rise from the dead; nor Christ himself, if he were here in the flesh and should preach unto us, John 5. ult.

6. Consectary.

The Lord in executing of his Judgements commonly observes proportion and retaliation. Antichrist is the greatest opposite to Gods Law and Word, he is called therefore ὁ ἄνομος, 2*Thess.*2.8. The lawlesse one; He is without Law, above Law, against Law; He abuseth Scripture, takes upon him to judge and interpret Scripture, therefore it shall be his ruine, 2*Thess.*2.8. God shall destroy him with the Spirit of his mouth, id est, Verbo suo. Beza. God hath consecrated the Word to this purpose; the end of it is not only to save, but destroy, being the the savour of death to some; and it is a fit instrument for such a work. Antichrists strength is in mens consciences; only this will pierce thither, Heb. 4. 12. God useth the Word for the destruction of Antichrist, these wayes: 1. It discovers him, his doctaine, his errours. 2. It hardens him. 3. It condemns him, and passeth sentence against him.

It is a gradation. Luk. 16. 31.

CHAP. III.

II. The Books of Scripture.

FRom the Divine flows the Canonical Authority of the Scripture. The Books of Scripture are called Canonical books (say some) from the word κανὼν, which word is used sometimes in the New Testament, 2 Cor. 10. 13. Phil. 3. 16. Gal. 6. 16. τῷ κανόνι τούτῳ, mark the double Emphasis, this notable Canon, because they were put into the Canon by the Universal Church, and acknowledged to be divinely inspired by it, and also are made a perfect Canon or Rule of all Doctrine concerning Religion, Credendorum & agendorum, of Faith and Manners, of all things which are to be believed or done toward salvation. But Cameron thinks it is not termed Canonical, because it is a Rule, for that book (saith he) is called Canonical, which is put into the Catalogue (which the Ancients called a Canon) of those writings which are esteemed Divine. Though it be now received, that these writings are called Canonical, because they contain the Rule of our Faith and Manners, and perhaps are so called in this notion, by S^t Augustine; and other Fathers of the Church, yet if we go to the most ancient use of this word Canon, from which the attribute of Canonical Scripture descendeth; it will easily appear, that it signifieth no more then the List or Catalogue of Scriptures, received by the Church. M^r Thorndikes 32. Chap. of the Principles of Christian Truth. See him of the heires of the Church, Chap. 22. Becanus saith, They are called Canonical [a], both because they contain a Rule which we ought to follow in Faith and Manners, and because they are put into the Catalogue of Divine Books.

Tum antiqui Theologi, Basilius, Chrysostomus, Augustinus; tum recentiores, celeberrimi nominis inter adversarios, Thomas Aquinas, Ferus, Andradius, aliique Scripturam Canonis nomine designant, aut designatam asserunt, tanquam intellectus & voluntatis regulam ad cuncta, seu credenda, seu agenda, perfectissimam, Rainoldus Thesi 1. established for [a] Scripturæ dicuntur Canonicæ quia quid nos credere, & quemadmodum vivere oportet, præscribunt, ut huc fidem omnem, vitamque nostram referamus, quemadmodum lapicida aut architectus ad amussim & perpendiculum opus suum exigit. Whitakerus de Script. controvers. prima Quæstione prima. cap. 2. Libri sacræ Scripturæ Canonici dicuntur; quia fidei morumque regulam continent. Whitakerus & Scharpius de sacra Scriptura. Vide Baronis Præfat. ad Prælect. in Jonam Prælect. 3. Hic aut ille liber, non est Canonicus, quia ecclesia hunc aut illum librum acceptavit, approbavit; inque, numerum librorum verè divinorum retulit: sed Scripta sacra ideò merentur nomen librorum Canonicorum, quia à Deo inspirata & nobis relicta sunt, ut in religionis negotio sint norma veri & falsi, intellectus; & sint regula boni & mali, affectui, Brochmand. Syst. Theol. Artic. 2. De Sac. Script. c. 2. Quæst. 3. vide quæst. 4. Quinam & quot sint libri verè Canon. vide Confrontation de verite, &c. Par Francois Du Jon. l. 3. c. 3.

Mr Hobbes in his Leviathan part 3. cap. 33. saith, Thoose Books only are Canonicall, which are such by Soveraign Authority. Then in the times of Popery the Apocrypha were Canonical.

The Conditions of a Canon are these.

1. I must contain Truth, or be an expresse Form and Image of Truth, which is in the Divine mind.

2. It must be commanded, sanctified and confirmed by Divine Authority, that it may be a Canon to us in the Church.

These books were sanctified, either commonly, all of both Testaments, by the Testimony of the Spirit, and Church, and Canon it self; or the books of the Old Testament were specially and singularly confirmed by Word, Signs and Event, as the Pentateuch; but the Prophetical books and Hagiographa before their carrying into Babylon, by extraordinary sign, the Cloud and Veil in the Temple, 1 Kings 8. 10. Levit. 16. 2. and Gods answer by Ephod, Urim and Thummim, Exod. 28. 30. after their carrying away into Babilon by singular testimonies of events. The books of

This Canon of the Scripture was finished within the space of two thousand years or thereabout.

of the New Teſtament are confirmed by the Sonne of God revealed in fleſh, by his ſayings and deeds, *Heb.*1.2. and by the powerfull Miniſtry of the Apoſtles, by Signs, Virtues and Miracles, Mark 16.20. God owned the Goſpel from Heaven by Miracles, which were wrought by holy men in the face of their adverſaries.

Chriſt confirms his own doctrine and the main and principall doctrine of the Goſpel, by Teſtimonies out of the Prophets, *Matth.*12. the firſt 18 verſes, *Mat.*22.32. the Apoſtles prove the great and weighty doctrine of Chriſtian religion

There is a three-fold Canon in the Church, Divine, Eccleſiaſticall, and Falſe.

The Divine Canon is that which properly and by it ſelf is called the Word of God, immediatly inſpired of God into the Prophets and Apoſtles.

This according to the divers times of the Church is diſtinguiſhed into the Old and New Teſtament, 2 *Cor.*3.6,14. this is a common diviſion of the ſacred Bible among Chriſtians, as in the verſion of Tremellius and Junius, Teſtamenti veteris & novi Biblia ſacra; and the Geneva gives that Title to their Bible, La Bible, qui eſt toute la Saincte Eſcriture du viel & noveau Teſtament. Auguſtine thinks they are better called, Vetus & Novum Inſtrumentum. Heinſius & Grotius, Vetus & Novum Fœdus. Vide Grotii Annotat. in Libros Evangelii. A Covenant is an Agreement between two; a Teſtament is the Declaration of the Will of one.

out of the writings of the Old Teſtament, to ſhew the exact agreement of one with the other. Proprii Canonis dicti univoce duæ conditiones ſunt inſeparabiles, quod veritatem divinam contineat divinitus materiâ & formâ, & quod Authoritate Divina publicæ Eccleſiæ datus & ſanctificatus, ut ſit Canon ſive Regula ipſius, atque hic verè Divinus Canon. Jun. animadverſ. in Bellarm. Totum Dei verbum, quod ſcriptum habemus, Dei fœdus, vel Teſtamentum vocatur. Illud ex veteri, hoc ex novo deſumptum videtur. Baronis Præfat. ad Prælect. in Jon.

A Teſtament is a ſort of covenant which ſuppoſeth the death of the party which makes it, and is for the good of thoſe for whom it is made. Luke 9.22. I diſpoſe unto you a kingdom by way of legacy.

It is called in regard of the Form, Convention and Agreement between God and man, a Covenant; in regard of the manner of confirming it a Teſtament. For 1. In a Teſtament or laſt Will the Teſtators minde is declared, ſo is the will of God in his Word, therefore it is called a Teſtimony often, *Pſa.*19. and 119. 2. Here is a Teſtator, Chriſt; a Legacy, eternal life; Heirs, the Elect; a writing, the Scripture; Seals, the Sacraments. 3. Becauſe it is ratified by the death of Chriſt, Heb. 9.16,17. Ambulatoria eſt Teſtatoris voluntas, uſque ad mortem, ſay the Lawyers.

The books of the Old Teſtament are the holy Scriptures given by God to the Church of the Jews, ſhewing them what to beleeve, and how God would be worſhipped: The New Teſtament containeth the books which treat of ſalvation already exhibited, and Chriſt already come in the fleſh, therefore Chriſt is ſaid to be the end of the Law, and all the promiſes in him are Amen.

Eſt mater Eccleſia & ubera ejus duo Teſtamenta Divinarum Scripturarum. Aug. Tract 3, in epiſt. Joh.

All the books of the Old Teſtament were written originally [b] in Hebrew, becauſe they were committed unto the Hebrews, *Rom.*3.2. except what Daniel [c] and Ezra wrote in the Chaldee. The Jewiſh Church receiving them from God, kept them and delivered them to Poſterity. Many grave Authors hold, That the Hebrew was the firſt Tongue, and Mother of all the reſt; and it may probably be collected from the names of our firſt Parents. It was called Hebrew (ſaith Erpenius) not from Heber of the Poſterity of Shem, as Joſephus, Ierom, and others think, when it is manifeſt that he rather ſpake Chaldee than Hebrew, becauſe Abraham the Patriarch, which drew his original from him was a Chaldean; but it was ſo called, ſaith Erpenius [d] (as all the Rabbins Origen and others teſtifie) from the Hebrews, which people aroſe from Canaan. It is honoured with the Title of the holy Tongue (ſaith the ſame Erpenius) becauſe the moſt holy God ſpoke it to his Prophets, delivered his holy Will written in it to the Church; and becauſe it is very probable from the opinion of great men, that holy men ſhall uſe it with God hereafter in Heaven. Vide Buxtorfium de lingua Hebrea origine, Antiquitate & Sanctitate. There are many Hebraiſms alſo in the New Teſtament (Vor-

b Ut veterum librorum fides, de Hebraïs voluminibus examinanda eſt, ita novorum veritas Græci ſermonis normam deſiderat. Auguſt.

c From the fourth verſe of the ſecond Chapter of Daniel to the end of the ſeventh Chapter; and from the eighth verſe of the fourth Chapter of Ezra unto the end of the ſeventh, the Chaldee Dialect is uſed. Omnes libri Canonici veteris Teſtamenti Ebraicè ſcripti fuerunt. Danielis & Esræ ſunt quædam partes Chaldaicæ, nempè quæ ab iis ex publicis Annalibus & faſtis regni deſumptæ fuerant, in quorum Monarchia tum vivebant ut obſervavit doctiſſimus Junius. Erpenius orat. de ling. Ebr. Some ſay the Hebrews were ſo called from Abrahams paſſing over Euphrates. Id. ibid. Vide Bocharti *Geogr. Sac. l.*2. *c.*14.

ſium

ſtius hath put forth a Book of them) many words and phraſes rather uſed according to the manner of the Hebrews than the Greeks: by which it is manifeſt that the ſame Spirit was the Authour of the Old and New Teſtament. The knowledge of the Hebrew much conduceth to the learning of thoſe famous oriental Tongues, the Chaldee, Syriack, Arabick and Æthiopick, by reaſon of the great affinity which they have with their Mother.

It is a queſtion among Chriſtian Philologers whether the Hebrew tongue was vernacula before Abrahams journeying to the Canaanites? alſo whether the holy Scripture was written in other Characters then before Ezra's time, differing from thoſe in which it is written. Joſephus Scalig. vir ſtupendæ peritiæ aſſerts both. Coch. Tit. Talmud. Exc. Gem. Sanhedrin. c.2. alledgeth Fuller, and others the other way, and determines the Queſtion. Camerarius in his Meditat. Hiſtor. Centuria tertia, c.62. proves by five ſtrong reaſons, that God taught our firſt Parents the Hebrew tongue in Paradiſe, and that it was propagated (tanquam vernacula) very farre to others in the Church.

The Books of the Old Teſtament may be divided ſeverall waies. In reſpect of the Style, ſome were written in Proſe, ſome in Verſe: in reſpect of time, ſome were written before their being taken Captives into Babylon, as Jonah, Amos, Hoſea, Joel, Eſay, Micah, Nahum, Jeremiah, Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Obadiah, ſome in the Captivity[f], and ſome after, as Haggai, Zachary, Malachy. The Hebrews divide the Bible (ex inſtituto Eſdræ) into three ſpeciall parts*.

1. The Law, the five Books of Moſes. 2. The Prophets. 1. The former, Joſhua, Judges, two books of Samuel, and two of the Kings, ſo called becauſe they ſpeak of the firſt Prophets. 2. The later. 1. Greater, three. 2. Leſſer, twelve, which among the Hebrews are bound together in one Volume, Hoſea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachy.

3. The Hagiographa, for want of a more ſpecial name, by which title all the reſt are underſtood, and they are eleven[g]. Our Saviour himſelf mentions this moſt ancient diſtinction, Luk.24.44. calling all the reſt of the books (beſides the Law and Prophets) Pſalms. Ubi Pſalmi ponuntur pro omnibus libris, qui Hagiographorum parte continentur, ex quibus etiam in N.T. quædam citantur, tanquam impleta. Buxtorf. Tiberias. cap.11. In Maſora, quando vox aliqua ter duntaxat reperitur, & quidem in tribus his Scripturæ partibus, tum dicunt; Ter occurrit, Semel in Lege, ſemel in Prophetis, ſemel in Hagiographis. Id.ib. Ferdinando de Eſcalante in his Clypeus Concionatorum verbi Dei, l.5.c.3. ſaith; Some may wonder why the Hebrews excluded Daniel from the number of the Prophets, when he was an excellent Prophet, and ſo entitled by Chriſt himſelf. He alledgeth this as a reaſon of it, becauſe the other Prophets when they foretold any Prophecies in the perſon of God, they ſaid, the Lord ſaith this, or words of the like ſort, but Daniel wholly forbears this kinde of ſpeech.

[f] As Ezechiel, Daniel. Jerom hath followed this diviſion of the Hebrews.

* Buxtorf. Tiberias. c.11.

[g] Both the Chronicles, the Pſalms, Proverbs, Job, Ruth, Daniel, Eccleſiaſtes, Canticles, Lamentations, Eſther, Ezra and Nehemiah, counted for one book. Probatur à nobis hæc librorum Vet.T. diviſio, tanquam Hebræis familiaris, non autem ut accurata. Nam quâ quæſo veritate dicuntur ſoli illi undecim libri Hagiographi: cum omnes & ſinguli ſacrarum literarum libri verè ſancti ſint? Nec video, qui jure paralipomena, à libris Samuelis & Regum ſejungantur. Non denique ſatis capio, cur Danielis liber e numero Propheticorum excludatur. Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic.1. de Sac. Script. c.1. Vide Baronis Præfat. ad Prælect. in Jonam. Prælect.3. p.18, 9.

All the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament (in other places,) are compriſed in the Law and Prophets, Matth.5.17. & 7.12. and 11.13. & 20.40. Act.13.15. & 24. 14. & 26.22. & 28.23. Rom.3.21. or Moſes and the Prophets, Luk. 24.27. & 16. 29. or in the Scriptures of the Prophets, Rom.16.26. or the Prophets alone, Luke 1.70. & 24.25,27. Rom.1.2. Heb.1.1. the name Prophet being taken as it is given to every holy Writer.

Mark 1.2. John 6.45.

1. In ea parte Scripturæ quæ Prophetas continet, in volumine Prophetico. Buxtorf. Tiberias. c.11.

The Jews and the Ancient reckon twenty two [h] Books in the Old Teſtament, according to the number of the Letters of the Alphabet for memory ſake. Ruth [h] Joſeph. contra Appian. lib.1. Euſeb.l.3. c.10. Hieron. præf. in lib. Reg. & in Prolog. Galeat. Some of the Jews, the Talmudical Doctors, reckon four and twenty, reckoning Ruth, and the Lamentations ſeverally, and have reſpect to the 24. Elders. Apoc.5.8. See Sixtus Senenſis his Biblioth. l.1.c.2, ſome twenty and ſeven.

being being joyned with the Book of Judges, and the Lamentations being annexed to Jeremiah their Authour. Hebraei sunt initiales & mediana literæ 22. finales quinque. Quamobrem V.T. modò in 22. modò in 27. libros partiuntur.

All the books of both Testaments are sixty six, thirty nine of the Old, and twenty seven of the New Testament. Some would have Hugo Cardinal to be the first Authour of that division of the Bible into Chapters, which we now follow. No man put the Verses in the Latine Bibles before Robert Stephen; and for the New Testament he performed that first, being [i] holpen by no book Greek or Latine. Vide Croii *observat. in Nov. Test. c.*7.

Waltherus in officina Biblica, p.237. As the Massorites reckoned all the words and letters, so some Christians all the verses of the Bible.

This Arithmetical Distinction of Chapters, which we have in our Bibles was not from the first Authours. Of which that is an evident token, that in all the Quotations which are read in the New Testament out of the Old; there is not found any mention of the Chapter, which would not have been altogether omitted, if all the Bibles had then been distinguished by Chapters, as ours[k], distinguishing of the Bible into Chapters and Verses, much helps the Reader, but it sometimes obscures the sense. Dr Raynolds [l] gives this Counsell to young Students in the study of Divinity, that they first take their greatest travell with the help of some Learned Interpreter in understanding St Johns Gospel, and the Epistle to the Romans, the summe of the New Testament, Isaiah the Prophet, and the Psalms of David, the summe of the Old, and in the rest they shall do well also, if in harder places they use the judgement of some godly Writer, as Calvin and P. Martyr who have written best on the most part of the Old Testament.

i Henric. Steph. Lect. in Concordant. Græc. N.T.

Grotius *de Jure Belli. l.*1. *c.*2. Rivetus Isag. *ad Script. sac. c.*29.

There are now out in English, The Large Annotations of our Divines on all the Bible; The Dutch Annotations; and likewise those of Diodati, Bibliotheca Criticorum in nine Volumes, ready to be published, if not out: Bishop Richardson on a great part, and Mr Jackson from Genesis to the Great Prophets.

Ustata divisio sacrorum librorum in capita, & ab hominibus est, & recens; sicut demonstravit Sixtus Senensis. ut nulla in illis extet vocum distinctio, sed singulæ lineæ, uno tenore scriptæ sint, atque unicam vocem constituere videantur. Croii *observat. in N.T. c.*2. *vide plura ibid. & cap.*4.7. & Raupii Prolegom. in comment. Bib. Synopt. Divisionem S.S. in capite 3. observat esse, nec admodum antiquam, Psalmos si excepris, quorum in certum numerum & ordinem distinctio, antiqua admodum est, ut videre licet, Act. 13.33. In reliquis libris capitum mentio longè post demum secuta. Hotting. *Thes. Philol. l.*1. *c.*2. sect. 5. he saith there, *l.*1. *c.*2. *quæst.*4. Periculosum est, & magno cum discrimine conjunctum, si à recepta codicum lectione desciscamus, aut eandem vel ex versionibus, vel ex collatione locorum parallelorum emendare tentemus.

Rainold. de Roman. Eccles. Idol. Admonit. ad Lectorem. Nos Codices quosdam ita scriptos vidimus,

The Books of the Old Testament are, 1. Legal, 2. Historical. 3. Poetical. 4. Prophetical.

1. Legal (which the Hebrews call from the chief part Torah, Deut. 31.9. & 33.4. the Grecians from the number Pentateuch, that is, the five-fold volume) the five Books of Moses, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, all written by Moses (as it is commonly agreed) except the last Chapter in the end of Deuteronomy concerning his death, written by Joshua. In which five Books are described the things done in the Church from the beginning of the world to the death of Moses. Atque hic finitur Pentateuchum, historiam annorum 2552. cum dimidio, ab initio mundi complectens. R. Usserius *in Annal. V. T. cap.*37. Vide Simf. *Paraf. ad Chron. Cathol. cap.*1. The Sadduces (as some say) received no other Scripture but these five Books of Moses; therefore Christ, *Mat.*22.32. proves the Resurrection of the dead, which they denied, out of the second Book of Moses; but Scultetus saith, that they rejected not the Prophets, *lib.*1. *exercit. Evang. cap.*22. See my Annotat. on *Matth.*22,23.

Pentateuchum a quinque voluminibus dicitur; Πέντε enim Græcis quinque τεύχος volumen vocatur. Isid. *l.*6.

In Judaica Ecclesia, etsi summa fuerit omnium librorum veteris Testamenti, Dignitas & Authoritas, maxima tamen fuit quinque librorum Mosi. Rivetus. Credi vix potest, quâ curiositate qua sollicita superstitione, volumen legis illud, quod in Synagogarum Archivis, ad solennes tantùm Lectiones, & publicos usus asservant, describi curent. Non omnis membrana, sacro huic instituto Idonea censetur; Nec quodvis atramentum. Nihil hic eraditur, nihil deletur, idque metu quodam Religionis. Schickardi Bechinath. Happeruschim. *p.*10.

The Law was divided by the Jews into 54. Sections, which they reade in 52. Sabbaths, joyning two of the shortest twice together, that the whole might be finished in a years space, to which Section was added a Lecture out of the Prophets,

Act.

Act. 13.15. See Act. 15.21. Ainſw. on 6. of Gen. 8. Schickardi Bechinath. Happerus p. 18. Vide Raupii Proleg. in Comment. Bib. Synopt. & Jac. Cap. hiſt. ſac. & Exot. l. 1, p. 215. & Hotting. Theſ. Philol. l. 1. c. 2. ſect. 6.

Anciently it was not the cuſtome of holy Writers to adde Titles to what they had written, but either they left their works altogether without Titles, or the firſt words were Titles, the Titles now in uſe, as Geneſis, Exodus, were prefixed according to the arbitrement of men; and the like is to be thought of thoſe before the Hiſtoricall Books of the New Teſtament, as Matthew, Mark, Luke, John.

With the Hebrews the Titles of Books are taken ſometimes from the ſubject Matter or Argument, as in the Books of Judges, Ruth, Kings, Proverbs, and others of that kinde; ſometimes from the Authors or Amanuenſes rather, as in the Books of Joſhua and the Prophets; ſometimes from the initial words with which the Books begin, which Jerome * follows. The Books of Moſes are denominated from the initiall words. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. par. 3. Dub. 1.

* In prologo Galeato.

בראשית	1, In Principio.	i. e. [m] Geneſis.
אלה שמות	2. Hæc nomina.	h. e. Exodus.
ויקרא	3. Et vocavit.	h. e. Leviticus.
וידבר	4. Et dixit.	i. e. Numeri.
דברים	5. Verba.	ſive Deuteronomium.

m Nomina horum quinque librorum ab Hebræis ſumuntur de primis verbis librorum, Græci & Latini denominant hos libros à materia de qua agitur in principio libri. Bellarminus. Simſ. Paraſc. ad Chron. Cathol. c. 1.

Theſe are ſubdivided again into [n] fifty four Sections, that the reading of them may be finiſhed in ſo many Sabbaths, which is ſignified, Act. 15.21.

Junius, Ainſworth, Amama, Calvin, Bonfrerius, Cornelius à Lapide and Piſcator, have done well on the Pentateuch.

n See my Epiſtle to my Heb. Critica Sacra, and M. Thorndike of religious Aſſemblies. chap. 6. p. 175, 176.

1. Geneſis] In Hebrew Bereſhith. the firſt word of the Book, by the Septuagint it is called Γένεσις, which appellation the Latine Church retained, becauſe it ſets forth the firſt generation of things, Chap. 2.4. and of Adam or mankinde, Gen. 5.1. It conſiſts of fifty Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory of two thouſand three hundred and ſixty nine yeares from the Creation of the world, to the death of Joſeph.

The beſt Expoſitors of this Book are Mercer, Rivet, Paræus, Calvin, Peter Martyr on fourty Chapters, Willet, Ainſworth.

Origen upon the Canticles, and Jerom [o] upon Ezekiel ſay, That the Hebrews forbad thoſe that had not attained to the Age of the Prieſthood, and judgement, viz. thirty years, to reade in three Books for their profundity and difficulty; that is, the beginning of the world, which is contained in the three firſt Chapters of Geneſis, the beginning and end of Ezekiel, ſince that treats of the Cherubins, and the Divine Majeſty, this of the ſtructure of the third Temple; and the Song of Songs, in which thoſe things which ought to be underſtood of the Divine Au hour, are eaſily through youthful affection elſewhere drawn and wreſted.

o Hieron. in prologo in Ezek. & Epiſt. fam. lib. 1. Epſt. 32. Euſtochio, Mercer. præfa. in Gen. & Cantic. Voſſius in Theſibus de creatione. Vide Eſtium ad Ezek. 40.46.

This Book of Geneſis is not only profitable, but very neceſſary for Doctrine; as Moſes is the Prince, and as it were, Parent of Divines: So Geneſis is the foundation and excellent Compendium of all Divinity, propounding evidently the chief parts of it.

2. Exodus [p]] The ſecond Book of Moſes is called in Hebrew Elle Shemoth, in Greek Ἔξοδος, which word the Latines have retained. It conſiſts of fourty Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory (ſay Junius and Tremellius) of one hundred fourty two years*, viz. from the death of Joſeph even to the building of the Tabernacle. Two things are there related, the departure of the Iſraelites out of Egypt, and their tarrying at Mount Sinai.

The beſt Expoſitors of it, are Rivet, Calvin, Willet, Ainſworth.

p Significat exitum filiorum ſcilicet Iſrael de Ægypto, ut in terram Chanaan proficiſcerentur. Menochius.

* An hundred forty ſix, ſaith Senenſis.

3. Leviticus [q] In Hebrew Vajicra, in Greek and Latine, Leviticus, from the matter which it handleth, becauſe it treats eſpecially of the Levitical Prieſthood, and the Levitical or Ceremonial Laws in it. It conſiſts of ſeven and twenty Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory of one Moneth, viz. of the firſt, in the ſecond year after their going out of Ægypt.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Calvin, Ainſworth, and Willet.

[q] Barbara Turcarum gens hodie Moſis doctrinam Πενταπλῶν comprehenſam, non aliter quam divinam veneratur, adeo ut eriam chartarum lacinias, quibus aliquid ejus forte inſcriptum ſit, deoſculetur. Paræus præfat. de libris Moſis. Evangeliſtæ & Apoſtoli in Novo Teſtamento, centies quinquagies & amplius in narrationibus & concionibus ſuis Moſaici Canonis Authoritatem adducunt, ut ſuum cum Moſe & Prophetis conſenſum comprobent. Id. ibid. Tertius liber Moſis, dicitur Leviticus, quia in eo deſcribitur cultus Dei externus per Levitas adminiſtratus. Piſcat. Exeg. Aphoriſ.

4. Numbers] In Hebrew Jedabbar, in Greek ἀριθμοὶ, in Latine Numeri, in Engliſh Numbers, becauſe it begins with declaring the number of the people of Iſrael who were fit for war, and becauſe many numberings are reckoned up in this Book, as firſt, third, and thirty three Chapters. It contains a Hiſtory of thirty eight years, and conſiſts of thirty ſix Chapters.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Calvin, Atterſol, Ainſworth.

5. Deuteronomy [r]] In Hebrew Haddebarim, from the firſt words, in Greek Δευτερονόμιον, which the Latine retains, becauſe it contains a repetition of many neceſſary points of the Law. It conſiſts of thirty four Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory of the two laſt moneths of the year. Some ſay concerning Chap. 34. 10. that part of it was written by Ezra contemporary with Malachy.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Calvin, Ainſworth, Wolphius, Cornelius a Lapide.

[r] Eſt enim Deuteronomium ſive ut Philo loquitur Epinomis, nihil aliud quam lex & hiſtoria ſummatim repetita in eorum gratiam qui promulgationi legis rebuſque illis non interfuerant. Grotius in Exo. 20.

2. The Hiſtoricall Books.

1. Before the Captivity, Joſhua, Judges, Ruth, Samuel, Kings.
2. After the Captivity, both the Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah.

The Hebrews divide the books into four claſſes. The firſt is called Thorah, that is, the law, containing the five books of Moſes.

The ſixth Book in the Old Teſtament is called Joſhua, becauſe it contains a Hiſtory of things done by Joſhua the ſervant of Moſes, which he by the will of God put in writing, it being all written by him, except ſome of the laſt Chapter, where mention is made of his death, and thought to be written by Samuel. It conſiſts of twenty four Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory of eighteen years, viz. from the death of Moſes even to the death of Ioſhua.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are [s] Maſius and Serrarius for Papiſts, Druſius and Lavater of Proteſtants.

The ſecond Nebiim Reſhonim, the books of the former Prophets, as Joſhua, Judges, Samuel, Kings. The third Nebiim Acharonim, later Prophets, Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Ezechiel. And the leſſer being twelve but one book. The fourth Sepher Kerubim the Hagiographall Books. [s] De cujus ingenti at perquam ſolida eruditione, raraque & accurata diligentia nunquam ſatis dici poteſt. Mede Aſſert. 3. Heb. ver.

The ſeventh Book is called Sophetim, Judges, becauſe it contains things done under the Government of the twelve Judges. There is nothing certain of the Author of this Book, though ſome would have Samuel; but he rather collected and compiled into one Volume what was written by many. It deſcribes the ſtate of the Government of Iſrael, from the death of Ioſhua even to the Prieſthood of [t] Eli. It conſiſts of twenty one Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory of two hundred ninety nine years, ſay ſome; of three hundred at leaſt, ſaith Spanhemius.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Peter Martyr, Druſius, Lavater, Serarius.

It was written as it is likely, by divers Prophets. Matth. 2. ult. Vide Bezam, Bucer. & Calvin. in loc.

[t] Petrus Martyr in præfat. com. in lib. Jud. ſcribit, alios putare unumquemque judicem ſuorum temporum res geſtas conſcripſiſſe, quæ poſtea Samuel (eorum monumenta cum diſſecta eſſent) in unum quoddam corpus ſeu volumen coegerit.

The eighth is Ruth, the Authour of which Book is unknown; many think it was written written by Samuel, who added this as a part or concluſion of the Book of Judges. It conſiſts of four Chapters, and is an Hiſtory concerning the marriage and poſterity of Ruth.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Druſius, Wolphius, Lavater, Topſel.

The ninth in order are the two Books of Samuel[u], which contain in them an Hiſtory of an hundred and twenty years. The firſt beginning an Hiſtory of eighty years, of fourty under Eli, 1 Sam. 4.18. and of fourty under Samuel and Saul, Act. 13.21. and conſiſts of one and thirty Chapters. The ſecond Book is a Hiſtory of fourty years, even from the death of Saul to the end of Davids Kingdom, and conſiſts of four and twenty Chapters. Theſe two Books in the Original have two ſeveral Titles: [x]The one is the firſt and ſecond of Kings, the other the firſt and ſecond of Samuel. The former Title it hath received as it ſtands in relation to the two next Books, and in oppoſition to that of Judges; for as in that Story the Regiment of Judges was deſcribed in one Book; ſo in this Story, of which theſe two are but one part, the Regiment of Kings is deſcribed; this is the reaſon of the firſt Title. The other likewiſe of the firſt and ſecond of Samuel is given unto it, 1. Becauſe there is very frequent mention made of Samuel therein, he being a principal ſubject of the firſt part thereof. 2. Becauſe it continueth the narration ſo farre, till the infallible truth of Samuels principal Prophecy (which ſeemed to remain in great doubtfulneſſe, at leaſt when he ended his dayes) was fully accompliſhed in eſtabliſhing the Kingdome upon the Perſon and Family of David the ſonne of Jeſſe.

The beſt Expoſitors of both the Samuels, are Peter Martyr, Druſius: Willet alſo hath expounded them, but not ſo well as he hath other Books of Scripture.

Aliqui hujus libri auctorem faciunt Ezechiam Regem, alii Eſdram, alii Samuelem, quæ opinio verior videtur, & pluribus nititur conjecturis, & graviores habet aſſertores, & etiam plures, Menochius.

[u]The Authors of theſe books of Samuel, are thought to be Samuel, Nathan and Gad: Samuel of the firſt Book to the twenty fifth Chapter, where his death is rehearſed; Nathan and Gad continued it, 2 Chron. 29.29. [x] They are called the firſt and ſecond of Kings by the Greeks and Latines. They contain a large Hiſtory of things done by Kings, the hiſtory of Samuel being prepoſed. The ordinary Gloſſe ſaith, he wrote a good part of the firſt Book. Scriptor horum librorum quatuor Hebræorum eruditiſſimus creditur eſſe Jeremias. Sermonis forma non diſcrepat. Eum credibile eſt uſum commentariis illis Nathanis & Gadi Prophetarum, quorum mentio, 1 Paral. 29.29. Grotius.

The tenth is the two Books of the Kings, in Hebrew Melachim, in Greek and Latine the third and fourth of the Kings, from the ſubject matter of them, becauſe they relate the Acts of the Kings of Iſrael and Iudah. This Hiſtory was written by divers Prophets; but who digeſted it into one Volume is uncertain; many aſcribe it unto Ezra. See Menochius. The firſt Book conſiſts of twenty two Chapters, and contains an Hiſtory of an hundred and eighteen years, and the acts of five Kings of Iudah, Solomon, Rehoboam, Abijah, Aſa, Iehoſaphat: of eight Kings of Iſrael, viz. Ieroboam, Nadab, Baaſha, Ela, Zimri, Thibni, Homri, and Ahab. The ſecond Book conſiſts of five and twenty Chapters, and contains a Hiſtory of three hundred and twenty years, and the acts of the other Kings of Iſrael, twelve in number, and the deſtruction of both Kingdomes.

The beſt Expoſitors of both the Kings, are Peter Martyr, and Caſpar Sanctius.

Becauſe they reckon the firſt and ſecond of Samuel alſo among thoſe of the Kings, Ezra & Jeremiah are thought to be the authors of the Kings. Munſter rendred it the Books of Annals, Libri præteritorum appellantur ab Hieronymo.

The eleventh Book is the two Books of Chronicles, which is called Dibrei Hajamim, verba dierum, becauſe in them the deeds of the Kings of Iudah are particularly deſcribed. The Greeks and Latines divide it into two; with the Greeks it is called liber παραλειπομένων q.d. prætermiſſorum, the Book of Remains, becauſe he ſummarily explains ſome things either omitted, or not fully deſcribed in the Pentateuch, the Books of Joſhua, Judges, Samuel, and the Kings. Of the Latines liber Chronicorum, q.d. Chronologicum; which appellation Luther retains in the Dutch verſion of the Bible. There is nothing certain of the Authour [y] of theſe Books, verba dierum [z] id eſt, excerpta ex regum diurnis. Grotius. Tempus quo hiſtoria Paralipomenon edita, & Canonicis Scriptoribus adjecta ſit, non poſſum pro certo indicare. Suſpicor autem poſt Antiochi perſecutionem, qui ſæviérat in libros divinos, abbreviatorem ex annalibus regum epitomen excerpſiſſe, præmiſſis genealogiis ab Adami uſque, & additis quibuſdam generi Davidico, ut continens temporum ſeries haberetur vulgò uſque ad ſua tempora. Bibliander de optimo genere explicandi Hebraica. [y] Auctor ignoratur, Alii Eſdræ tribuunt, alii Jeremiæ; certi nihil habemus ex Scriptura. Menochius.

Ab Eſdra ſcriptos hos duos libros conſtans ſemper fuit apud Hebræos fama: qui hos libros vocant

though Ezra be thought to be the Authour. The first Book consists of twenty nine Chapters, and contains a History of two thousand eight hundred and five years, viz. from the Creation of the world even to the Kingdom of Solomon. The second consists of thirty two Chapters, and describes a History from the beginning of the Kingdom of Solomon, even to the return out of the Captivity of Babylon.

The best Expositor on both the Chronicles is Lavater.

Twelfthly, The two Books of Ezra[z], they are counted for one Volume with the Hebrews; the Greeks and Latines divide them into two Books, and assign the first to Ezra, the second to Nehemiah.

z Ezra signifieth an helper, Nehemiah a comforter. Certum est libros Paralipomenon, Esdræ & Nehemiæ esse post reliquos ferè omnes sacros veteris Testamenti libros conscriptos. Capel. Critica Sac. l. 1. c. 3.

Ezra was so called from the Author, which was a Scribe, most skil'd in the Law of God, as appears in Chap. 7. v. 1, 6. and 11.

The best Expositors of it are Junius and Wolphius.

a Nehemiah in English is A Comfort sent from God, to comfort his people in those troublesome times.

Nehemiah[a]] It is called by the Latines the second Book of Ezra, because the History begun by Ezra is continued in it; but usually Nehemiah because it was written by him, and also because it contains the re-edifying of the City of Jerusalem, caused by Nehemiah. It consists of thirteen Chapters, and contains a History of fifty five years, viz. from the twentieth year of Artaxerxes to the Kingdom of the last Darius.

The best Expositors of it are Wolphius and Pilkinton.

b Nomen huic libro est á potiore persona. Martinius. Aben Esra docet, historiæ hujus Scriptorem fuisse Mardochæum, idque ex ultimo capite hujus libri colligit. Hanc sententiam tanquam veram amplector tamdiu, donec contrarium probetur.

The next Book is Esther[b], called in Hebrew Megillath Esther, the Volume of Esther. Many of the Jews think this book was written by Mordechai, which those words in Chap. 9. 20. and 23. seem to favour. Isidore saith, Ezra is thought to have written Esther, but some say it was composed after by another; Moses Camius saith it was written by the men of the great Synagogue. Philo Judæus saith, Joachim a Priest of the Hebrews, son of the High-Priest, was the composer of it, and that he did it at the entreaty of Mordecai the Jew. It's remarkable, that though the Book of Esther contain most admirable passages of Gods providence in delivering of his Church, yet in this book alone of all the books of holy Scripture the name of God is not so much as once mentioned. D[r] Drakes Chronol. The Jews throw the book of Esther to the ground before they reade it, because the name of God is not there, as their Rabbins have observed. D[r] Stoughtons Love-sick Spouse. It consists of ten Chapters, and contains a History of ten, or (as others will) of twenty * years, concerning the preservation of the Church of the Jews in Persia by Esther.

Drusius, Serarius, and Merlin have done well on this book.

Mayerus dissertat. Theol. de LXX. Hebdomaibus Danielis. p. 145. LXX huic historiæ somnium quoddam Mardochæi præmittunt quod non est in Hebræo. Grotius. * Martinius.

3. Poetical books.

c Grotius reckons the Lamentations among the Poetical books. M. Caryl on Job 3. ver. 2. pag. 334.

Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Canticles; to which some adde the c Lamentations. Those parts of Scripture which set forth strongest affections, are composed in verse: as those holy flames of spiritual love between Christ and his Spouse in the Canticles of Solomon. The triumphant joy of Deborah after deliverance from Sisera's Army; of Moses and Miriam after the destruction of Pharaoh: the afflicting sorrows of Hezekiah in his sickness; and the Lamentations of Ieremiah for the Captivity of the Jews: The Book of Psalms is as it were a throng of all affections, love, joy, sorrow, fear, hope, anger, zeal, every passion acting a part, and wound up in the highest strains by the Spirit of God, breathing Poetical eloquence into the heavenly Prophet. So the Book of Job, whose subject is sorrow, hath a composure answerable to the matter. Passion hath most scope in Verse, and is freest when tyed up in numbers. See my Annotations on those five Poetical books.

Job] There is great variety of judgement about the Authour and Pen-man of this book. Some say it was of one of the Prophets, but they know not who; Some ascribe aſcribe it to Solomon, ſome to Elihu, many to Moſes; as Neirembergius and Hugo Cardinal, Suidas and Pineda conceive that Iob himſelf was the Authour of this book; and it is thus proved, becauſe when any book is inſcribed by the name of any perſon, and there appears no urgent reaſon, wherefore it could not be written by him, ſuch a perſon is to be thought the Authour, and not the matter of the book, as is manifeſt in the book of Ioſhua, and thoſe of the greater and leſſer Prophets. The Arabical ſpeeches with which it abounds, note that it was written by ſome man living near Arabia, as Iob did; Neither doth it hinder, that Job * ſpeaks of himſelf in the third perſon, for Canonical Writers are wont to do this out of modeſty, Numb. 12.3. John 21.24.

Singula in eo verba plena ſunt ſenſibus. Hier.

Quis libri ſcriptor fuit incertum eſt, nec niſi leviſſimis conjecturis nititur, quicquid de eo dici poteſt. Beza. vide Grotium & Menochium, Walther. in Officina Biblica & Ludov. de Tena Iſag. ad totam Sac. Script. The Apoſtle 1 Cor. 3.19. proves it to be of divine Authority. * Chap. 1.1. Ante legem datam floruiſſe ſatis inde videtur conſtare, quod vir ob juſtitiam atque pietatem incomparabilem celeberrimus, victimas, filiorum nomine, toties obtulerit. Cl. Selden de Jure naturali. & Gentium. l. 2. c. 7. vide plura ibid. Eſt liber iſte Jobi omnium Sacrorum librorum difficillimus, ut qui non modo Theologum, verum etiam Hebreæ, Chaldaicæque linguæ, Poetices, Dialectices, Rhetoricæ, Aſtronomiæ, Phyſices denique, bene peritum interpretem requirat. Bez. in epiſt. ad expoſit. Mere. Vide Simſ. Paraſ. ad Chron. Cath. c. 1. The book of Job is ſuppoſed to have been written before Moſes time, and the Jews in the Talmud ſay, that Job lived in the time of Jacob. Aben Ezra and Jarchi on Job 1. ſay, he deſcended of the ſons of Nachor, Abrahams brother, and generally by moſt he is held to be more ancient then Moſes. M. Nettles Anſw. to the Jewiſh part of M. Seldens hiſtory of Tithes. ſect. 2. Vide Collium de animabus Paganorum. l. 3. c. 5. Jobi liber antiquior eſt lege quemadmodum docetur copioſè â doctis Sixto Senenſi, Mercero, aliiſque, ut in eo non ſit neceſſe inſiſtere. Rain. de lib. Apoc. prælect. 191.

It is conceived to be the firſt peece of Scripture that was written: if Moſes wrote it, it is probable that he wrote it before the deliverance of the people of Iſrael out of Egypt, while he was in Midian. The main and principal ſubject of this book is contained in Pſal. 34.19. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of all. We may divide the book into three parts, and ſo it ſets forth:

1. Iobs happy condition, both in regard of externals aud internals, in the firſt five verſes.

2. Iobs Fall, his calamity, from that to the ſeventh verſe of the fourty ſecond Chapter.

3. Iobs Reſtitution, or reſtoring, from thence to the end.

Beza, Mercer, Pineda, Druſius, Coccius have well expounded it, and M. Caryl a great part of it.

Liber Pſalmorum complectitur quicquid utile eſt in omnibus Scripturis: hæc ſacra poeſis eſt elegantiſſima Legis Prophetarumque Epitome, ſola brevitate & numero à reliquis diſcrepans; cum commune promptuarium earum omnium eſt, quæ nobis neceſſaria ſunt. Trem. & Jun.

The Pſalms are called in the Hebrew Sepher Tehillim, a book of Divine Praiſes, in Greek ψαλτήριον, ſo called from a muſicall Inſtrument uſed in ſinging of the Pſalms, which name the Latines have retained. Vide Menochium. Hymns is the general Title for the whole book of Pſalms; For though it be tranſlated, The Book of Pſalms, yet every one that knoweth that language, knoweth the word is, The Book of Hymns. Chriſt with his Diſciples ſung an Hymn, Matt. 26.30. M. Cottons Singing of Pſalms a Goſpel-Ordinance, c. 5.

Pſalmi dicti ſunt Tehillim ab argumento præcipuo: Etſi enim in libro hoc contineantur etiam petitiones, necnon precationes: hæ tamen non adeo ſunt frequentes, & his ipſis variæ interſperſa ſunt laudationes Dei, a Juſtitia ſumma, à miſericordia & potentia Dei deſumptæ.

It contains ſacred Songs to be fitted for every condition, both of the Church and Members. It is called in the New Teſtament, The Book of Pſalms, Luk. 20.42. and 24.44. Act. 1.20. No Books in the Old Teſtament are oftner cited in the New, then Iſaiah and the Pſalms; that ſixty times, this ſixty four.

Opus omni laude majus, & univerſa ſapientia divina atque humana, exiguum quidem, ſed eo etiam nobilius, atque admirabilius compendium: ea ſermonis elegantia, numerorum & harmonia ſuavitate, ſententiarum eruditione & gravitate, ut nihil majus dici poſſit. Erpenius orat. de ling. Ebr. dignitate. Quiſquis Pſalmos ita ordine digeſſit, ut nunc habemus eos in unum volumen collectos, ſive Ezra fuit, ſive aliquis alius poſt reditum è Babylone; conatus eſt Pſalmos ejuſdem authoris, aut ejuſdem argumenti, aut ejuſdem temporis colligere & conjungere. Foord. in Pſal. 40. According to the Hebrew account the pſalms have 2527 verſes. Beza Pſalmos varia Latinorum carminum genere elegantiſſimè & ſuaviſſimè expreſſos orbi Chriſtiano dedit. Melchior Adam in ejus vita. Pſalterium Buchanani Latinum, opus plane divinum & ad uſum Scholaſticæ juventutis egregiè elaboratum. Graſerus. exercit. in c. 9. Dan.

They

They are in all an hundred and fifty, in Greek an hundred fifty one. Auguſtine and Chryſoſtome aſcribe them all to David as the Author, ſo do Theophylact, Ludovicus de Tena. Some think that after the Captivity Ezra collected theſe Pſalms, diſperſed here and there, into one Volume. There are ten Authors whoſe names are put in the Titles of the Pſalms, viz. David, Solomon, Moſes, Aſaph, Etham, Heman, Jeduthun, and the three ſons of Corah. Oda iſta Davidis dicuntur, quod is multas veteres collegerit, multas ipſe Pſallendi ſciens addiderit, aut per homines idoneos addi fecerit. Grotius.

The Book of Pſalms, though it be called from the greater part, by the name of Davids Pſalms; yet were not all the Pſalms in it compoſed by David, but ſome of them by Moſes, *Pſa.*90. Some by Heman, *Pſa.*88. Some of them by Etham, Pſa. 89. Some by others, *Pſa.*137. M. Gataker on Pſa. 82.6,7,8. Seventy four Pſalms are expreſly entituled Davids Pſalms, that ſome others which want titles expreſſing their Pen-men were his alſo. See *Act.*4.25, Id.ibid.

The Hebrews divide the Pſalms into five Books or parts. The firſt Book hath the firſt 41. Pſalms; the ſecond 31. from 42 to 73. the third 17. from 73 to 90. the fourth 17. from 90 even to 107. the fifth 43. from the 107 to 150. Vide Genebr. in Pſal. 1.1. Tituli ſunt Pſalmorum claves, the Titles are Keys as it were of the Pſalms, ſaith Jerom. For the pſalmes of degrees, aſcent, or excellencies, See Junius his Meditat. on Pſal. 122.

The beſt Expoſitors on the pſalms, are Muſculus, Mollerus, Muis, Calvin, Ford.

The Scripture is the choiceſt Book; the Pſalms the choiceſt peece of Scripture, and the 119 pſalm the choiceſt part of the pſalms. Among 176 verſes in that pſalm there are ſcarce four, or five at moſt, wherein there is not ſome commendation of the word.

Scriptura quidem illa divina aliis omnibus antecellit: ſed in Scriptura reſpectu applicationis ad vulnera, perpeſſiones, actiones, & difficultates quaſvis animorum noſtrorum. Pſalmi aliis ſcripturæ partibus ante ponendi ſunt. Junii Meditat in Pſal. 122. Vide plura ibid.

The pſalms are frequently read both in the Jewiſh Synagogues, and in our Chriſtian Churches; the very Turks themſelves ſwear as ſolemnly by Davids pſalms, as by their Mahomets Alcoran, they have them in ſuch eſtimation. Of all parts of the Scripture, the pſalms have this excellency, that they do in a lively experimental way ſet forth the gracious works of God upon the ſoul. They have a reſpective direction, or comfort to every ones affliction or temptation. Hence they have been called by ſome the little Bible, or the Bible of the Bible. M. Burgeſſe of Juſtification, *p.*225.

Baſil ſaith, If all the other books of Scripture ſhould periſh, there remained enough in the book of Pſalms for the ſupply of all, and therefore he cals it amuletum ad proſtigandum damonem. Our Saviour Chriſt himſelf cites the pſalms, not only as Canonical Scripture, but as a particular, entire, and noble ſumme of that body, *Luk.*24.44. no book of the Old Teſtament (except the prophecy of Iſaiah) is ſo like a Goſpel, ſo particular in all things concerning Chriſt, as the pſalmes. D. Donne on *Pſa.*62.7,9.

Proverbs] In Hebrew Miſhle, the Book of Proverbs is compared to a great heap of Gold-rings, rich and orient ſeverally, and every one ſhining with a diſtinct[a] ſenſe by it ſelf: but other contexts of holy Writ, to Gold-chains, ſo interwoven and linked together, that they muſt be enlightned and receive mutuall illuſtration one from another. The manner of it is uſually to deliver two contra-diſtinct propoſitions.

[a] M. Bolton on Prov.18.14. Sententiæ, verba, ſive dicta graviter & paucis concinnata, quæ in omnium animis hærere & in ore verſari debent, denique ſpeculum ſunt totius vitæ & adminiſtrationis noſtræ. Junius. What ſpeciall prerogatives this Book hath above the reſt of Canonical Books, ſee M. Cawdrey on Prov.29.8.

It conſiſts of one and thirty Chapters: It was written by Solomon, ſaith Auguſtine, Chap.17. of his 20 Book de Civitate Dei; and Joſephus in the 8th book and 2d Chapter of his Jewiſh Antiquities; and it is proved, 1 *King.*4.32. though there indeed indeed it is ſaid only, he ſpake them, yet it is likely alſo he wrote them. Prov. 1.1. they are called the Proverbs of Salomon, becauſe moſt of them are his. It is a Treatiſe of Chriſtian manners, touching piety toward God, and juſtice toward our neighbours.

The beſt Expoſitors on it, are Mercer, Cartwright, Dod and Cleaver, Lavater. Græce dicitur hic liber Παροιμίαι, nimirum Hebræum מָשָׁל propriè comparationem ſignificat, & quia ex comparationibus curtatis plerumque fiebant Proverbia, inde cœpit ſumi in ſignificatione παροιμίας. Grotius.

Eccleſiaſtes] In Hebrew [b] Coheleth, the Feminine hath reſpect either to wiſedom or to the ſoul, the nobler part. See Menochius.

[b] Quod in eum librum collectæ ſunt omnes ſcientiæ: vel quòd ſapientia Solomonis hic homines congreget ad ipſam audiendam. Martinius. The Proverbs were Salomons Ethick. Eccleſiaſtes his Phyſicks. Canticles his Metaphyſicks. Proverbia Scripta ſunt potiſſimum pro ætate juvenili, Eccleſiaſtes pro virili, Canticum pro ſenili. The Jews compare the three Books of Salomon to the three parts of his Temple, they liken the Proverbs to the Porch, Eccleſiaſtes to the Holy Place, Canticles to the Holy of Holies. Opinor Salomonem in ſenectute poſt quam à lapſu reſipuiſſet, ſcripſiſſe. 1. Novem prima Capita libri Proverbiorum, & librum qui Eccleſiaſtes dicitur, ut ex collatione concipi poteſt. 2. Librum Canticorum, ut ex eo libro colligere licet. 3. Pſalmum iſtum quaſi compendium libri Canticorum. Foord in Pſal. 45.

The Authour of this Book was Solomon, who either at his Table, or in his familiar conference propounded theſe Doctrines to his Courtiers, as may be collected out of 1 King. 10.8. Many of the Hebrews ſay, that this Book was written by Solomon to teſtifie his repentance of his ill led life.

It conſiſts of twelve Chapters. The ſumme and ſcope of the whole Book is explained in the laſt Chapter, or the two firſt verſes, viz. that all things in the world are vain; therefore that nothing is more profitable and neceſſary then to fear God and keep his Commandments. The principal parts of it are two: The firſt concerning the vanity of humane matters and ſtudies in the world: the latter of the ſtability and profit of godlineſſe and the fear of God.

The beſt Expoſitors on it are Mercer, Cartwright, M. Pemble, Granger.

Canticles are called in Hebrew Shir ha-ſhirim, by the Latines Cantica [c] Canticorum, The Song of Songs, that is, a moſt excellent Song, the hebrews having no ſuperlatives. Solomon was the Authour of it, 1 King. 4.32. Many of the Ancients refer it to the ſpirituall Marriage between Chriſt and the Church, or every faithfull ſoul. Some think it was penned long after Solomons Marriage with Pharaohs daughter, by comparing 1 King. 7.34 with Cant. 7.4. It conſiſts of eight Chapters, and perpetuall Dialogues.

Liber ille Salomonis diſputationem continet de ſummo bono, quod definit eſſe conjunctionem cum Deo, ac perpetuum Dei fruitionem.

Simſ. Chron. Cathol. parte tertia. [c] Id eſt, ſummum & præſtantiſſimum, vide Gen. 9.25. Eſt autem hæc generalis totius libri inſcriptio, libri argumentum ſcriptoremque exponens. Argumentum eſt Epithalamium excellentiſſimum ſive connubiale Canticum, quo Schelomo decantavit ſacram illam, auguſtiſſimam, & beatiſſimam deſponſationem conjunctionemque Chriſti cum Eccleſia, Jun.

The Jews had this Book in ſuch reverence and account, that before thirty years of age none would ſtudy it.

The beſt Expoſitors are Mercer, Brightman, Ainſworth, Fenner.

This Book which treats of that Spiritual and Heavenly Fellowſhip the ſanctified ſoul hath with Chriſt, cannot be throughly underſtood in the true life of it, but by thoſe that are ſanctified.

4. Prophetical Books.

The { Greater Prophets four, Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel.
{ Leſſer Prophets twelve, Hoſea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micha, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephany, Haggai, Zachary, Malachi.

Grotius orders them thus: Hoſea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Iſaiah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephany, Daniel, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Haggai, Zachary, Malachi.

They are called Prophetical Books, becauſe they were written by Prophets, by Gods Commandement; Prophets were diſtinguiſhed by the Temples, ſome were were Prophetæ priores, those of the first Temple; others Posteriores, of the latter Temple.

Isaiah] Is placed first, not because he is more Ancient then all the rest; for some say, that Jonah[d] and Amos were before him in time; others that Hosea was before him; for Isaiahs beginning was in the dayes of Uzziah. Now Hosea was in the dayes of Jeroboam, and Jeroboam was before Uzziah. This Mr Burroughs saith is one reason, why though he intends to go over the whole prophetical Books, yet he rather pitcheth upon Hosea first, because indeed he was the first Propher, but Isaiah[e] was rather set first for the Dignity of the Prophetical Oracles which he explains, and because his Prophecy is longer then all the rest. He is eloquent in his speech, being a Noble man, therefore the translation can hardly expresse his elegancy. He brings so many and such evident testimonies of the Coming, Incarnation, Miracles, Preaching, Life, Passion, Death and Resurrection of Christ, that he seems rather to write a History of things past, then to prophesie of things to come, and one cals him the fifth Evangelist. Hence (saith Senensis) our Lord Jesus Christ made choice of this among all the Prophets, first of all to read publickly, and expound in the Synagogue of his own Countrey; and in the New Testament, he is ofner cited, then all the rest of the Prophets. He began to prophesie in the year 3160, seven hundred years before Christ was born, Uzziah the King of Judah yet raigning, and came to the last times of Hezekiah, Isa. 1. 1. and 39. 3. therefore he was almost contemporary with Hosea, Amos and Micah, and finished the course of his life under four Kings of Judah, viz. Uzzia, Iothan, Achaz and Hezekiah. The Hebrews say, he was of the Bloud-Royal, and that he was sawed to death with a woodden saw by Manasseh an idolatrous King, after he had taught sixty years. His Prophecy consists of sixty six Chapters.

[d] Learned men conclude from 2 King. 13. 25. that Jonah prophesied first of all the sixteen Prophets.

Dr Hill in a Sermon on the Lord of hosts. Isaiah prophesied 60 years, saith Alsted, 96 saith Cornelius a Lapide. He prophesied with elegancy, alacrity, fidelity, variety.

[e] Jeshagneia, quasi dicas, salus Domini vel Dei, quod præ cæteris plenum sit vivificarum consolationum. Non tam Propheta dicendus sit, quam Evangelista. Hieron. præfat. in Isa. Quicquid de Physicis, Ethicis, Logicis & quicquid de sanctarum Scripturarum mysteriis potest humana lingua, mortalium sensus accipere, complexus est summa præ cæteris Prophetis venustate sermonis, & urbana dictionis elegantiâ. Hieron. Isaias, quem ex regia ortum familia novistis, tanta eloquentia librum suum contexuit, ut omnes Latinos Græcosve oratores longo post se inter valle relinquat. Waser. in præf. ad Grammaticam Syram. Vide plura ib. In sermone suo disertus est, quippe vir nobilis & urbana eloquentia, nec habens quicquam in eloquio rusticitatis admixtum. Unde accidit ut præ cæteris, florem sermonis ejus, translatio non potuerit conservare. Ita universa Christi Ecclesiaque Mysteria ad liquidum prosecutus est, ut non putes eum de futuro vaticinari, sed de præteritis historiam texere. Hieron. præfat. Inter eos vates, qui de Messiæ scripsere, perquam disertus est Isaias: oratio ejus erudita ubique, & majestatis plena, facilè ostendit, qua esset natus origine. Vir enim nobilissimus, & principum consanguinitate clarus, artes omnes scientiasque didicerat, quibus ingenia ad magna fortuna cultum excitantur. Liber autem ejus non tam vaticinia continere, quam Evangelia videtur. Res esse pridem gestas, non futuras, putes. Cunæus de Repub. Heb. l. 3. c. 7. Admirabiles omnes in scribendo Prophetæ sunt, & parem meriti fidem: sed eminent in Isaia sublime quiddam, ingeniosum, vehemens, urbanum, quod majore voluptate, admirationeque lectorem tenet. Maldonat. in Joh. 1.

The best Expositors of it are Calvin, Sculletus, Forerius. Mollerus, and in English Day.

Jeremiah,] This Book was always esteemed as Canonical, and written by Jeremiah. He prophesied under Iosiah, Iehoahaz, Ioachim and Zedekiah. His Prophecy consists of fifty two Chapters.

Lodov. de Tena. Jirmijah celsitudo, vel excelsus Domini, quod magnalia Dei animo magno atque forti douerit. Or Ramah Jah, the reject of the Lord, so he was in regard of his condition. Jeremiæ omnis majestas posita in verborum neglectu est. Adeo illam decet rustica dictio. Cunæus de Repub. Heb. l. 3. c. 7. Simplicitas eloquii, à loco ei in quo natus est, accidit. Fuit enim Anathaites, qui est usque hodiè viculus tribus ab Hierosolymis distans milibus. Hieron. Præfat. in Hier.

He prophesied partly in the Land of Judea, and partly in the Land of Ægypt. In the Land of Judea he prophesied 41 years, and afterward four years in Ægypt. See Jackson on Jer. 7. 16. p. 4, 5.

The best Expositors of it are Calvin, Bullinger, Polanus.

Lamentations] It is called in Hebrew Echa, i. Quomodo, because it begins with this word; The LXX translate it Θρῆνοι, i. e. Lamentationes vel fletus, for the Subject or Matter of it. It contains sad and mourning complaints of the state of the Commonwealth of Israel, into which it fell after the death of Iosiah. It consists of five Chapters.

Jer. 14. 1, 7. and 31. 17.

Nazianzen never read this Book but he wept abundantly.

Jeremiah

Jeremiah is thought to be the Author of it. This was the laſt Prophet that the Lord ſent to Judah before the Captivity. He was the fitteſt man to write a Book of Lamentations, he had ſeen the City beſieged, ſtormed and fired, the Temple deſtroyed, great out-rage and cruelty committed.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Peter Martyr and Udal.

Ezekiel[f]] Signifieth The ſtrength of God, or One ſtrengthned by God. He propheſied at the ſame time with Jeremiah; Ezekiel in the City of Babylon, Jeremiah at Jeruſalem. It conſiſts of eight and fourty Chapters.

The beſt Expoſitors are Junius, Polanus, and Villalpandus a great Linguiſt and Mathematician.

This Prophechy is full of Majeſty, obſcurity, and difficulty. Calvin ſpent his laſt breath on this Prophet, and went over part of it.

[f] Jechezkel fortitudo ſive robur Dei. Stylus ejus nec ſatis diſertus, nec admodum ruſticus eſt, ſed ex utroque temperatus. Sixtus Senenſis. Sermo ejus nec ſatis diſertus, nec admodum ruſticus eſt, ſed ex utroque mediè temperatus. Sacerdos & ipſe fuit, ſicut Hieremias: principia voluminis & finem magnis habens obſcuritatibus involuta. Hieron. Præf. in Hier.

Daniel] He wrote his Prophecy after the Captivity, Chap. 1. 21. and 10. 1. while the viſions are general, and not dangerous to the Jews, Daniel writeth in the Syriack tongue, general over the Eaſt, from Chap. 2. v. 4. * to the eighth Chapter.

All the Chapters in Daniel from Chap. 2. 4. to the beginning of the eighth, are written in the Chaldee tongue, and from the begining of that Chapter to the end of the Book, he writeth in Hebrew; for the affairs that fell under the Chaldean Monarchy, he regiſtred in the Chaldee Tongue: when the Kingdome was deſtroyed, he wrote in his own native tongue, the Hebrew. Dr Lightfoot.

Dei judicium ad cujus exactam cognitionem neceſſaria eſt multiplex Chaldæorum, Græcorum & Latinorum hiſtoria. Hieronymus.

* Broughton on Dan. 1. 4. Danielem Hebræi Prophetis non adſcribunt, non magis quam Davidem, non quòd non multa eximia prædixerint, ſed quia vitæ genus Propheticum non ſectabantur, ſed alter Rex erat, alter ſatrapa. In Græco codice præcedunt Prophetæ minores, ſequuntur majores, & in his Daniel. Grotius. Vaticinandi virtute nemo præ Daniele eſt; docet enim quo tempore ſit venturus Meſſias, & regum ediſſerit ſequentium ſeries, annoſque numerat; & ne quid deſit, etiam præuntia addit ſigna. Quæ omnia ejuſmodi ſunt, uti Porphyrius, cui ſtudium fuit iſta eludere, neſciverit quo ſe verteret, quippe arguebat eum manifeſta rerum fides: igitur ad calumniandum redactus eſt. Cunæus de Repub. Heb. l. 3. c. 7. Vide plura ibid.

But when the oppreſſors are named the Medes; and the Jews plainly deſcribed to be the people whom God defendeth, then in the eighth Chapter, and all after, he writeth in Hebrew, and hath a Commandment to keep cloſe to the plain expoſition in Chap. 12. 4. Some reckon Daniel among the Prophets, but the Jews place it among the Hagiographa. It conſiſts of twelve Chapters, the ſix firſt of which contain matters Hiſtorical, the ſix laſt Prophetical.

All the Prophets had not ſo many viſions of providential alterations as he.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Polanus, Junius, Willet, Broughton, Huit.

The Latines give the firſt place to the greater Prophets, the Greeks to the leſſer, becauſe there are many among them very Ancient. Grotius.

The twelve leſſer Prophets are ſo called, becauſe their Writings are briefer then the four firſt greater. The Hebrews have them all in one Book; the later Prophets ſpake more plainly, preciſely, and diſtinctly, touching the coming of the Meſſiah, than the former. Danæus, Gualter, Ribera, Tarnovius, Druſius and Stokes, have done beſt on all the ſmall Prophets; Mercer and Livelie have done well on the five firſt of them.

Prophetæ poſtremi in unum librum conjuncti fuere, ne parvitate ſua diſtraherentur, aut perirent. Hinc capiendum illud Act. 7. 42. in libro Prophetarum, id eſt, Prophetarum minorum, nempe Amos 5. 25. Buxtorfij Tiberias cap. 11.

Hoſea g] Is the firſt among them, whoſe Prophecy although it conſiſt of more Chapters then Daniel, yet the other is more prolix. Hoſheang noteth Salvator Sag In the order of the twelve Prophets all give the chief place to Hoſea; the Hebrews make Joel the next to it, Amos the third, Obadiah the fourth, Jonah the fifth, Micah the ſixth, Nahum the ſeventh, Habakkuk the eighth, Zephany the ninth, Haggai the tenth, Zachary the eleventh, Malachi the twelfth. But the Septuagint make Amos the next to Hoſea, Micha the third, Joel the fourth, Obadiah the fifth, Jonah the ſixth, the ſeventh Nahum, the eighth Habakkuk, the ninth Zephany, the tenth Haggai, the eleventh Zachary, the twelfth Malachi, Druſ. obſerv. Sac. l. 5. c. 4. Non eſt idem ordo duodecim Prophetarum apud Hebræos, qui eſt apud nos. Oſee commaticus eſt, & quaſi per ſententias loquens. Joel planus in principio, in fine obſcurior; & uſque ad Malachiam habent ſinguli proprietates ſuas. Hieron Præfat. in Duod. Proph.

viour; he is therefore ſo called, becauſe he publiſhed Salvation to the houſe of Judah, and ſpake of the Saviour of the world, and was a Type of Chriſt our Saviour. He propheſied before the Babyloniſh Captivity; in the time of King Jeroboam, under four Kings of Judah, Uzziah, Jotham, Achaz and Hezekiah, and was contemporary (as ſome ſay) with Jonah, 2 King. 14. 26. Iſaiah, Iſa. 1. 1. Amos 1. 1. and Mic. 1. 1. all which propheſied deſtruction to the Kingdome of Iſrael. It conſiſts of fourteen Chapters.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Zanchius, Tremelius, Pareus, Rivet and Livelie. Diu vixit Oſee, & Prophetam egit, ut volunt Hebræi, per annos 90, ita multos habuit Prophetas συγχρόνους. ut Iſaiam, Joelem, Amoſum, Abdiam, Jonam, Michæam, ut notat Hieronymus.

Joel] He propheſied in the time of Hezekiah; it conſiſts of three Chapters, which contain partly exhortation to repentance, and partly comfort to the penitent.

Tremelius, Danæus, Pareus, Druſius, Livelie, and Leuſden, are the beſt Expoſitors of it.

Amos] Of a Shepherd he was made a Prophet, Chap. 1. 1. & 7. 14. He was contemporary to Iſaiah and Hoſea. He propheſied to the Kingdome of Iſrael, or the ten Tribes, Chap. 1. 1. & 3. 1. & 4. 1. & 5. 1. He utters a few things concerning the Kingdome of Judah, c. 2. 4. & 6. 1.

Gnamos, onus, becauſe he is a vehement Prophet, which denounceth a hard burden, that is, moſt grievous puniſhment to the people for their impiety.

It conſiſts of nine Chapters, Danæus, Pareus, Livelie and Druſius are the beſt Interpreters of it; Dr Benfield hath done well on two Chapters.

Obadiah[h]] He was almoſt contemporary to Jeremiah. It is but one Chapter. Dr Raynolds hath well expounded this Prophecy. The deſtruction of the enemies of the Church is handled in the ſixteen firſt verſes, the Salvation thereof by the Miniſtery of Paſtors in the five laſt.

[h] Gnobadeiah ſervus Dei, a Miniſter of God. Jeremy 49. Chapter, and Ezek. 25. tooke many things out of this Prophecy.

[i] Columba, quomodo dictus videtur à manſuetudine & facilitate morum. Jonas ordine quinrus numeratur inter duodecim Prophetas, qui minores vocantur; tempore verò illis omnibus prior & antiquior fuit. Id 2 Reg. 14. 25. liquet, ex eo quod de pace & ſalute Iſraelitarum ſub Jeroboamo futura vaticinatus eſt, ante quam calamitoſam eorum captivitatem denunciaſſet Oſeas & Amos, cum Iſaia. Itaque temporis ratione eum primo loco collocari oportuit. Livelius in Annotat. in Jonam.

Jonah[i]] He propheſied in the time of Jeroboam, 2 King. 14. 25. Jarom proves by the authority of the Hebrews that he was contemporary with Hoſea and Amos. It conſiſts of four Chapters. Abbot and King have both commented well in Engliſh on this Prophecy, and Petrus Baro in Latine.

Micah] Humiliatus, ſic dictus Propheta ab inſigni & miranda humilitate. He propheſied in the times of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah Kings of Judah, as appears by the inſcription, Cap. 1. 1. and was almoſt contemporary with Iſaiah, with whom he agreeth in many things. He exceeds all the Prophets in this one thing, that he determines the place of Chriſts Birth, Chap. 5. 2.

It conſiſts of ſeven Chapters. Danæus and Chytræus have done well on it.

[k] Nomen Hebræum Nachum ſignificat & pœnitentia Doctorem & conſolatorem, quo utroque munere is defunctus eſt, illo erga Ninevitas, hoc erga Judæos. Waltherus in officina Biblica.

Nahum[k]] It is probable that he lived before the Babyloniſh Captivity, and was contemporary to Micah, but ninety years after Jonah. It conſiſts of three Chapters, which contain both a prediction of the deſtruction of the Aſſyrians, ch. 1. and alſo an Explication of the cauſes of it, chap. 2. & 3.

Danæus is the beſt Expoſitor of this Book. The Hebrews think that both Nahum and Habakkuk wrote in the times of Manaſſeh. Both the order in which theſe Books were anciently placed, and the things themſelves which are contained in their writings do intimate as much. Grotius.

Habakkuk, Luctator.

It is probable that he lived about Jeremiahs time, or a little before.

It conſiſts of three Chapters. Grynæus and Danæus have done well on him.

[l] Tſepha Secretarius vel Speculator Domini.

Zephany[l]] He propheſied in the times of Joſiah King of Judah, and was contemporary to Jeremiah. He propheſieth eſpecially of the overthrow of the Kingdome of Judah.

It

It consists of three Chapters. Daneus hath done well on this Prophecy.

Haggi[m]] Chag signifieth a Feast in Hebrew, his name signifieth Festivus & lætus, aut festum celebrans, vel diligens, quod Templi Hierosolymitani ædificationem post Captivitatem maximè curarit.

He began to prophesie after the Babylonish Captivity in the second year of Darius King of Persia, Ezra 5. 1. Haggai 1. 1.

Grynæus and Daneus have done well on him.

[m] He excites and earnestly exhorts the people to the restoring of the Temple.

Zachary[n]] He prophesied after the Babylonish Captivity, and followed Haggai within two moneths; he handleth the same Subject; it consists of fourteen Chapters. His Book is more large and obscure then any of the twelve Prophets.

Daneus hath done well on the whole, and Mr Pemble on nine Chapters.

[n] Zechareiah memoria Domini, fortassis quia per ipsum Deus sui memoriam populo suo reficare voluerit, & testari seipsum quoque meminisse ejusdem; aut quia & ipse Domus chorus extitit, & quasi in recenti memoria.

Malachi] Nuncius seu Angelus meus, Mal. 4. 4, 5. He was the last Prophet of the Old Testament. See Grotius of him. Tremelli. n cals him the Limit and Landmark of both Testaments, Limes inter Vetus & Novum Testamentum.

It consists of four Chapters: Daneus, and Polanus, and Stock have commented well on this Book.

So much concerning the severall Books of the Old Testament.

Chap. IV.

Of the New Testament.

THe New Canon is that which the Christian Church hath had written in Greek, from the time of Christ and his Apostles; and it summarily containes the Word published by Christ, and his righteous acts.

None of the New Testament was written, till after Pentecost, nor all of it untill John, a matter of sixty years after Christs death. Capel's Remains, p. 49.

The History of which is in the four Books of the Evangelists, the Examples in the Acts of the Apostles, the Exposition in the one and twenty Epistles, and lastly, the Prophecy in the Revelation.

All the Books of the New Testament were written in Greek [a] for divers Reasons:

[a] Lingua Græca tunc temporis in orbe terrarum maximè erat communis, quam tamen ob Ebraismorum mixturam eruditi Hellenisticam, quod ea Judæi Hellenistæ uterentur, vocare amant. Amama Antibarb. Bib. l. 1. C. 1. Qui dubitat stylum novi Testamenti esse Hellenisticum, is Scepticum mihi videtur agere in Philologia sacra, h. e. Apostolorum vel per transennam adspexerunt, ac cum stylo purè Græco contulerunt. Mayerus. Vide Salmasium de Hellenistica.

First, Because that Tongue in the time of Christ and his Apostles was the most excellent of all, among the Languages of the Gentiles.

Secondly, Because it was then most common, as Latine now is. Tully shews, Orat. [b] pro Archia Poeta, how far the Greek Tongue spread.

[b] Græca leguntur in omnibus fere gentibus, Latina suis finibus exiguis sanè continentur.

Thirdly, Because in this Tongue all the Philosophy and Sciences of the Gentiles were written. The Greek Tongue by the Writing of Philosophers, Orators, Historians and Poets, was fraught with the best learning, which Heathenism afforded.

It came to pass by the singular providence of God, that this Testament was written in one Tongue only; for what Nation else would have yielded to another, that the Scriptures in their Tongue were Authentick, and so the seeds of debate might have been sown amongst them. All almost agree in this, That all the Books of the New Testament were written in the Greek Tongue; it is only doubted concerning three of them, the Gospel of Matthew, Mark, and the Epistle to the Hebrews. Many affirm that the Gospel of Matthew was written by Matthew in Hebrew; or rather in Syriack, the Language used by Hebrews in the time of Christ and his Apostles, that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written in Hebrew, and Mark in Latine.

Rivet. Isagog. ad Scrip. Sac. c. 8. Novum Testamentum Græcum esse non dubium est, excepto Apostolo Matthæo, qui primus in Judæa Evangelium Christi Hebraicis literis edidit. Hieron. Præfat. in quatuor Evangelia. Matthæus quidem Hebraicè scripsisse traditur à magnis authoribus, & per Jacobum Apostolum in Græciæ sermonem translatus. Bibliander de optimo genere explicandi Hebraica. Matthæus Ebraicè scripsit, id est, Syriacè, seu lingua in quam Ebraica post captivitatem degenerasset, quia & Syriaca dicta est & Ebraica: Græcam autem versionem alii Jacobo, alii Joanni Apostolo, ipsi Matthæo alii tribuunt. Selaeni uxor Ebraica, l. 3. c. 23.

All the New Testament is penned from God in Greek. The Reporters that St Matthew wrote in Hebrew, or St Paul to the Hebrews, never marked the Greek styles of both in Attique formes of speech, that Salem hath not. And the holy Ghost never translated Books, but kept still the original of all that he would have translated. Here be four Dialects, the Attique, Judean, Thalmudique and Apostolique. By ingorance of which much darkness covereth dealers with the New Testament. Broughtons Lords Family.

Vide Horæ Hebraicas Dris Lightfoot in Matth. 1. vers. 23. p. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17.

It is certain that the Primitive Church from the first times, used the Gospel of Matthew written in Greek[c] and counted it Authentical. If any one say, That the Latine Edition of Mark, in the vulgar is not a version, but the first Copy, he may easily be refuted from the uniform style in it with other Latine Gospels, and it will appear to any Reader, that the Gospell of Mark, which the Roman Church useth, is later then the Greek, and that the Latine was made from it. For the Epistle to the Hebrews, though many among the ancient thought it was Written in Hebrew, yet all agree that the Greek Edition was in use thence from the first times of the Church. Glassius saith, Matthew wrote his Gospel first in Greek, for his style agrees with Mark. Writers acknowledge that there is an Ancient Hebrew Copy of Matthew, but upon good ground deny that it is the original truth; for besides that by received Tradition, it is held otherwise, Matth. 1. 23. and other such like places do evince it; for why should he writing in Hebrew, interpret Hebrew words, to them which understand that Language. Hieron. in quatuor Evangelia, and Salmasius hold, that Matthew was Written in Hebrew, Evangelium Matthæi Hebraicè ab auctore scriptum esse, nemo non veterum tradidit. Hebræum illud Syriacum esse, quod in usu tunc temporis in Judæa fuit, Hieronymus docet, qui Evangelium Matthæi scriptum fuisse testatur Chaldaico Syroque Sermone. Salmas. de Hellenistica. Erasmus, Cajetan, Calvin, Junius, Whitaker, Gomarus, Causabone, Gerhard, deny that Matthew was Written in Hebrew. Chamier. de canone l. 12 c. 1. saith, we have the New Testament in Greek; for although some contend that the Gospel of Matthew and the Epistle to the Hebrews was written in Hebrew; yet (saith he) it is very uncertain, and so propius falso. I think (saith Rivet[d]) that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written in Greek, a Tongue then most common, and which was used by many Hebrews, which were called Hellenists.

[c] Memorabilis est de lingua, qua Evangelium Matthæi ab ipso conscriptum est, controversia; quidam enim Hebræam, alii Græcam esse contendunt. Ac prior quidem sententia, si plurium auctorum consensum spectemus primas obtinet, sin verò rei veritatem, posterior amplectenda, ut examen demonstrabit. Gomarus de Evangelio Matthæi. Cajetanus initio suorum Commentariorum verè monet Evangelium Matthæi non fuisse scriptum Hebraicè argumento non inepto ab interpretatione vocum Hebraicarum, ut capite primo Emanuel, quod est si interpreteris, Nobiscum Deus Mat. c. 27. 46. non poterat in Hebraica editione sic interpretari. Smidius before his Notes on the New Testament gives seven reasons to prove that Matthew and the Author of the Epistle to the Hebrews wrote in the Hebrew. Vide Huting. Thes. Philol. l. 2. c. 2. §. 2.

[d] In Exo. 24. 8.

That Mark[e] should be written in Latine originally is improbable; many of the reasons alledged to prove that Matthew was not Written in Hebrew are of force here also; the Jews at that time of the Writing of the New Testament did speak Syriack riack [f] and not Hebrew, which Language is mixt, consisting of Hebrew and Chaldee; therefore (saith Whitaker) it is more probable that Matthew and he which wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews wrote in Greek, because the Greek Tongue was not unknown to the Jews, which were Hellenists, Acts 6. 1. and other Apostles wrote in Greek, which wrote peculiarly to the Jews, as James and Peter. Matthæum Hebraicè scripsisse convenit inter antiquos. Citat Irenæum, Origenem, Athanasium, Epiphanium, Chrysostomum, Hieronymum Vossius de genere Christi dissertat. Scripsit Hebræa lingua quia præcipuè Judæorum, quos viva voce hactenus docuisset, haberet rationem. Id. ibid. Vide Grotium in libros Evangel.

[e] Sixtus Senensis saith expresly that Mark wrote in Greek Bibl. Sanct. l. 1.

[f] Lingua Syriaca Servatori nostro, & Apostolis vernacula fuit. De Deo. Vide Whitakeri controversiam primam de Scripturis, quæstionis secundæ capite quinto.

Cum legimus in Actibus Apostolorum Paulum allocutum esse Judæos cap. 21. 40. Lingua Hebræa, intelligendum est de Hebraica lingua, quæ tunc in usu erat apud Judæos, id est, Syriaca. Nam & Dominus noster ea usus est, ut apparet ex omnibus locis Evangeliorum, in quibus aliquid prolocutus est lingua vernacula. Salmasius de Hellenistica ad quartam quæstionem.

When they are called four Gospels, four Book, are understood by a metonymie of the Subject, which relate the Gospel which is indeed one, viz. doctrina de salute æterna hominibus electis partâ per Christum, the doctrine concerning eternall salvation, purchased for the elect by Christ, that glad tidings in which the salvation procured by Christ is published. Piscat. exeg. Aporis.

It was needfull that the Gospel should be Written by many. First, for the certainty. Secondly, for the perfection of it.

Princeps & caput & regula divinorum oraculorum, & salutiferæ ac necessariæ veritatis est Christi Evangelium, quo cæteri sacri

Amongst all the Evangelists there is a general Agreement, and a special difference; they all agree in the main scope and subject, Christ; they differ in the special Argument and Order. All describe the life of Christ, some more largely, some more briefly, some more lofully, some more plainly, yet because all were inspired by the same Spirit, they all have equal Authority. The difference of Evangelists in some smaller matters proveth their consent in the greater to be the voice of Truth; for had they conspired all together to have deceived the world, they would in all things have more fully agreed.

libri omnes censentur, & precium accipiunt, tam veteris instrumenti, quam novi. Lod. Viv. de ver. Fid. Christ l. 2. c. 9. Parvæ interdum in Evangeliis diffidentiæ argumentum præbent veritatis, ne ex composito videantur scripsisse, si per omnia consentirent. Chrysostomus. Ex omnibus iis qui acta Christi & doctrinam literis mandarunt, antiquissima illa & prima Ecclesia illorum temporum pene æqualis, solos quatuor tanquam sacro sanctos & firmissimæ fidei ac veritatis approbavit, ac retinuit: Matthæi & Joannis qui rebus omnibus interfuerunt; Marci, ex relatione Petri: Lucæ, tum ex Pauli revelatione, tum relatu aliorum qui erant cum Domino versati. Lod. Viv. de verit. fid. Christ. l. 2. c. 8.

The Doctrine of the Covenant of Grace is more plainly expounded; the will of God and way to Salvation more plentifully set down in the New Testament, then ever it was in the dayes of Moses or the Prophets; and in these books of the New Testament all things are so established as to continue to the end, so that we must not look for any new Revelation.

Libri novi Testamenti in duas Classes dividi possunt, nempe in eos, de quibus nemo dubitavit, & in eos, de quibus aliquando dubitatum fuit. Primi ordinis sunt, 4 Evangelia, Actus Apostolorum,

All these Books we receive as Canonical, because they are Divine for matter and form, divinely inspired by God, sanctified and given to the Church for their direction, Written by the Apostles or Apostolical men, sweetly consenting with other parts of holy Scripture, and with themselves; received alwayes by the greatest part of the Church of God. They were Written after the death of Christ, by the direction of the holy Ghost; the Apostles by lively voice first preached, because it was needfull that the Doctrine of the Gospel should by their preaching, as also by signs and wonders be confirmed against the contradictions and cavils of the Jews and Gentiles, and be allowed by the assent of believers generally before it was committed to Writing, that we might be assured of the certainty of those things which were Written.

Tredecim Epistolæ Pauli, prima Epistola Johannis, & prima Petri. Euseb l. 3. c. 25. & l. 6. c. 18. Secundi ordinis sunt duæ posteriores Epistolæ Johannis, secunda Petri, Epistola Judæ, Epistola Jacobi, Apocalypsis Johannis, & Epistola ad Hebræos. Euseb. l. 3. c. 3. & c. 25. in eodem libro, & l. 6. c. 18. Posteà verò re diligentiùs explorata & cognita, universæ ecclesiæ hos posteriores agnovit. Testis. Athanas. in Synop. Cyprian, in Symb. & Hieron. in Prolog. Galeato. Lubbertus de Princip. Christian. Dogm.

These

These Books are acknowledged Canonical both by us and the Papists; so that touching this matter there is no controversie between us and them.

Among the consest writings of the Scriptures attested by all, and not contradicted by any; The four Gospels are first to be placed, and then the Story of the Acts of the Apostles. See Euseb. Eccles. Hist. lib. 3. cap. 3, 4. & lib. 5. cap. 8. & lib. 6. cap. 18.

[g] Sunt sane in eo, quo nunc utimur, volumine, libri aliquot non ab initio pariter recepti, ut Petri altera, ea quæ Jacobi est, & Judæ, duæ sub nomine Joannis Presbyteri, Apocalypsis, & ad Hebræos epistola: sed ita tamen ut à multis Ecclesiis sint agnitæ. Grotius l. 3. de verit. Relig. Christ. p. 143. vide plura ibid. The Book of Esther and Canticles were doubted of by some. Vide Bellar. de verb. Dei l. 1. c. 17, 18, 19. & Brochm. System. Theol. Artic. 2. De sac. Script. c. 1.

The Inscriptions and Titles prefixed before the Epistles are no part of holy Scripture written by the Apostles, but added to the Epistles by some others.

The Subscriptions and Post scripts also of divers Books are false, counterfeit and erroneous; not written by the Apostles, but added afterward by the Scribes which copied out the Epistles.

The Subscriptions of the later Epistle to Timothy, and also to Titus, are suppositious; they are neither found in the Syriack nor in all Greek Copies, [k] nor yet in the vulgar Latine translation; these additions were made some hundred years after the Apostles.

Joh. 8. See in the Annotat. in loc.

[h] Vide Calvin in loc. & Chamier. Tom. 1. l. 12. c. 7. Sæpe falsissima sunt Epistolarum Paulinarum subscriptiones. Capellus.

[i] Vide Scultetum & Bezam.

[k] Timothy is expressly by the Apostle called an Evangelist, 2 Tim. 4. 5 therefore Titus having the same charge in Crete, as he had in Ephesus, they were both Evangelists. Cartw. on the Title of the Epistle to the Romans. See him also on the Title of the first Epistle to Timothy.

The Canonical Books of the New Testament are either Historical, Doctrinal or Prophetical.

1. [l] Historical, containing matters of fact, the History of

1. Christ exhibited in the four Evangelists or Gospels, as they are styled by God himself, Mark 1. 1. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, called Gospels, because they contain a message of joy and gladness. They all treat of one subject, Christ Jesus incarnate; are most true Historians, Luke 1. 2. John 21. 24.

2. His Apostles, in the Acts written by Luke, thirty years after Christs Ascention, so termed of the principal subject of the History, though the acts of others not Apostles, are there recorded.

[l] We call them Historical in which is contained an Historical narration of things done: for although in them there be many things pertaining to doctrine, yet the chiefest thred and scope of the speech containeth a narration of an History done, hence they are called Historical.

2. Dogmatical or Doctrinal, such as were written by the Apostles for the instruction of the Church of God in faith and manners, commonly called Epistles, and that by warrant of the Scriptures, 1 Thes. 5. 27. 2 Pet. 3. 1, 16. because they were sent to them who had already received and professed the Gospel of Christ. The Apostles being oft times unable to instruct by their personal Presence, supplied that by writing Epistles. These are one and twenty, written.

The Grecians call the Letters sent from one to another ἐπιστολὰς, Epistles. Wotton. on 1 John 1.

- 1. By Paul,
  - 1. To whole Churches.
    - 1. Gentiles,
      - To the Romans,
      - Corinthians.
      - Galatians,
      - Ephesians,
      - Philippians,
      - Colossians,
      - Thessalonians.
    - 2. Jews. To the Hebrews.
  - 2. To particular persons.
    - 1 Timothy.
    - 2. Titus.
    - 3. Philemon.
- 2. James, one.
- 2. Peter, two.
- 4. John, three.
- 5. Jude, one.

3. Prophetical, wherein under certain resemblances, the state of the Church of Christ till the end of the world, from the time of John the Evangelist, is most truly and wonderfully described, and receiveth its name Apocalyps of the Argument.

The holy Ghost stiles it a Prophecy, Rev. 1. 8. & 22, 7, 10, 18, 19. See Rev. 1. 19.

Beza, Piscator, Erasmus, Grotius, Smidius, Dr Hammond, have done well on all the New Testament: Calvin on all save the Revelation; Zanchy very well on some of the Epistles, Balduinus Walæus hath written a famous Philological Commentary on the New Testament. Of the Papists Jansenius hath done well on the Harmony; of the Lutherans, Chemnitius and Gerhard; of the Protestants, Calvin. Maldonate and De Dieu. Cameron, Scultetus, and Grotius have done well likewise on the Evangelists.

Ex Lutheranis satis commendari nequit Harmonia à Chemnitio ad stuporem usque dexterrimè capta, à Lysero fideliter continuata, & à Gerhardo dexteritate & fidelitate pari consummata, ex Pontificiis, Jansenius. ex Calvinianis Calvinus.] Walcheri officina Bibl.

Matthew and John were Apostles of the twelve; Mark and Luke Evangelists. Apostle [m] is a name of Office or Dignity. It notes one sent from another with command; in special, certain famous Embassadours of Christ. The Evangelists were Comites & vicarii Apostolorum, they accompanied the Apostles in preaching the Gospel, and had curam vicariam omnium Ecclesiarum, as the Apostles had curam principalem. The Title Evangelist is taken, 1. For such as wrote the Gospel. 2. For such as are taught the Gospel; and these were of two sorts, either such as had ordinary places and gifts, or such whose places and gifts were extraordinary, such Evangelists were Timothy and Titus. Smectymn. Answ. to an Humble Remonstrance, sect. 13.

[m] Apostle when it is properly taken, extendeth it self not only to all the Ministers of God, being sent of God, but to the Embassadour of any Prince or Nobleman, or that is sent of any publick Authority, and it is used in the Scripture by a Synecdoche for the twelve that our Saviour Christ appointed to go thorowout all the world to preach the Gospel, unto the which number was added S. Paul, and as some think Barnabas. These were, 1. Immediatly called by God. Gal. 1. 1. 2. They saw Christ, 1 Cor. 9. 1. 3. They had the field of the whole world to till, they were sent into all the world. Cartw. Reply to D. Whitgift in Defence of the Admonition, p. 45, Apostolatus erat functio, quæ post fundatas semel Ecclesias successionem non admisit; sed cum ipsis Apostolis desiit. Down. Diatr. de Atich. Vide Lod. Viv. de verit. Fid. Christ. l. 2. c. 19.

He was an Evangelist, which taught the Evangell or Gospel of Christ, whether by preaching, or also by writing: In the latter sence, there are four only called Evangelists. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; who though they all preached, yet for the penning of the Gospel are peculiarly called Evangelists. In the former sense the word is taken, either generally to signifie any one that doth evangelize or preach the Gospel, or specially, signifying the extraordinary function of those in the primitive Church, who went up and down preaching the Gospel, being not affixed to any certain place. These seem to have been of two sorts; For either they were immediatly called of Christ, and by him sent to preach the Gospel, as the 72 Disciples ciples, or they were assumed by the Apostles, to be their companions in their journeys, and assistants in the Ministery: Of the former sort was Philip, Act. 21.8. Of the latter sort were Timothy and Titus. B. Downams Defence of his Sermon, *lib.*4. *chap.*4.

In the Scripture the word is used with reference as well to the parties to whom, as to the party from whom the Apostle is sent, Rom. 11.33. Gal. 1.7,8. So Angels have relation, not only to the sender, who is God, but to the parties to whom they are sent, and are called their Angels, *Mat.*18.10. Apostoli absolutely used is a Title of all Embassadours sent from God with authority Apostolical, Rom. 16.7. though κατ' ἐξοχὴν, given to Paul and Barnabas, and the twelve Apostles; but used with reference to particular Churches, doth signifie their Bishops. And in that sence Epaphroditus is called the Apostle of the Philippians. B. Downams Defence of his Sermon, *l.*4.*c.*3.

Matthew] There was never any in the Church which doubted of its Authority. Some say he wrote in hebrew, as Grotius, but that is uncertain (as hath been already declared.) He interprets the hebrew name Emanuel, Chap.1.23. and those words *Chap.*27.46. therefore it is likely he wrote not in hebrew; for why should one that writeth in hebrew interpret hebrew words to such as understand hebrew? And how came this Authentical Copy and Prototype to be lost? for it is not now extant. However the Greek edition is Authenticall, because it came forth when the Apostles were living, and was approved by them, which the Ancients confirm. Of the time when Matthew wrote, Authours agree not; Eusebius [n] saith, that he wrote in the third year of Cains Cæsar; others say he wrote after Claudius. He wrote his Gospel in the fifteenth year after Christs Ascension, saith Nicephorus [*]; the one and twentieth, saith [o] Irenæus, in the eighth year, saith Theophylact [p].

It [q] consists of twenty eight Chapters, in which the person of Christ, and his three Offices of Prophet, Priest and King, are described.

The best Expositors of it are Hilary, Musculus, Paræus, Calvin.

n In Chronico. Vid. Seldenum de jure naturali

* *Lib.*7. c. 12.

o *Lib.*2. c. 24.

p *Lib.*3. c.1.

q Tertullian cals Matthew, Fidelissimum Evangelii Commentatorem. De serie annorum, quibus scripti sunt libri novi Testamenti, satis est curiosum animos contendere. Tamen video apud veteres non esse unam eandemque sententiam. Chamierus.

Aquinas was wont to say, That he desired but to live so long, till he might see the golden-mouthed Father S[t] Chrysostome his imperfect work upon Matthew finished. D[r] Featleys Preface to his Strictura in Lyndo mastigem.

Mark] He was the Disciple of Peter, and wrote his Gospel from him, in the fourth year of Claudius Cæsar, say some. He wrote not in Latine (as Bellarmine saith) but in Greek. Concerning the Archetyphall Language in which the Gospels of Mark and Luke were written; See M. Selden in Eutychii orig.

It consists of sixteen Chapters, in which Christs three-fold Office is also explained.

The best Expositors of it are Calvin, Beza, Piscator, Maldonate, Iansenius.

Luke] He was for Countrey, of Antioch; for profession a Physician; there is mention made of him, *Col.*4 14. 2 *Tim.*4.11. *Philem.v.*24. he was companion to Paul the Apostle in his travels, and in prison, Act.20.6. & 21.15. & 27.2. & 28.16. he only makes a Preface before his Gospel, that he may briefly shew the cause which induced him to write.

The best Expositors of it are Calvin, Beza, Piscator, Maldonate, Iansenius.

John] In hebrew signifieth the grace of God; he soareth higher then the other Evangelists to our Saviours Divinity; and therefore (as Nazianzen among the Fathers) he is called the Divine, by an Excellency, because he hath so graphically and gravely described the Divinity of the Son, and hath written also of things most Divine and Theological.

Melancthon called Calvin a Divine by an Excellency, and then when Calvin being but a young man did most gravely treat of divine matters.

He hath the Eagle for his Ensign assigned him by the Ancients. He was called Presbyter, Presbyter, by reason of his age, being the longest liver of all the Apostles. He wrote the last of all when he returned from the Isle Patmos; therefore there is something more in every Chapter of John then any other of the Evangelists. He alone describeth the admirable Sermon which our Saviour made at his last Supper, and his Prayer.

It is generally thought, and I think not untruly, that the blasphemous heresies of Ebion and Cerinthus (who denied that our Saviour was God, or had any being before he took flesh of the holy Virgin his mother) was one especial occasion of writing this Gospel. M. Wotton Serm. 2. on 1 Joh. 1. 2.

It consists of one and twenty Chapters, in which the Person of Christ, consisting of the Divine and humane Nature, is described.

In his Gospel is described: first, Christs person; in the first Chapter. 2. His Office; in the second Chapter, to the twelfth. 3. His death, from the twelfth to the end.

The best Expositors of him are Calvin, Beza, Piscator, Rollock, Tarnovius, Musculus.

Acts q] Luke in the Proem of it makes mention of the Gospel written by him, that he might professe himself to be the Authour of both. It consists of eight and twenty Chapters. Luke calleth his History, The Acts of the Apostles, though it be specially of their sufferings; because even their passions were actions, they enlarged the Kingdom of Christ by their sufferings.

Vide Sixti Senensis Bibliothecam sanctam. Walther. in officina Biblica. Postremus omnium Evangelistarum scripsit, ut colligeret quæ aliis erant omissa, vel brevius perstricta. Chamier. de Œcharistia. l. 11, c. 4. Hoc peculiare habet quòd multos Christi sermones à reliquis omissos quibus ille de persona & officio suo accuratè disseruit, accuratè commemorat nec non miracula nonnulla de quibus reliqui prorsus tacent. Piscat. exeg. Aphoris. John in his Epistles was an Apostle, in his Apocalyps a Prophet, in his Gospel an Evangelist. In his Gospel he writes more expressly then the rest of the Deity of Christ, and in the Revelation of the coming of Antichrist. q Acta Apostolorum sunt Chronica quædam primæ Ecclesiæ in Novo Testamento. Sic dicuntur quia res primis Ecclesiæ Christianæ temporibus maximè ab Apostolis gestas describunt. Martinius in memoriali Biblico.

The best Expositors of it are Brentius, De Dieu, Calvin, Sanctius, John Malcolm, a grave, godly, and learned Scotch Divine.

The thirteen Epistles of Paul; one to the Romans, two to the Corinthians, one to the Galatians, one to the Ephesians, one to the Philippians, one to the Colossians, two to the Thessalonians, two to Timothy, one to Titus, and one to Philemon, the Primitive Church unanimously received into the Canon, and never doubted of their being Apostolical. They have their name Epistles à forma Epistolari quia conscriptæ sunt. An Epistle is a writing sent to absent friends, wherein is declared that which concerns them to know.

Paulus ad Roman. undecim capitibus fidem fundat, & quinque cap. deinde mores superadificat. Ad Galatas quinque fidem, uno & sexto mores docet. Sic in aliis quoque Epistolis facit. Lutherus Tomo. 2. In S. Pauls Epistles this order is kept: those Epistles are set first, which were written to whole Churches, and then those which were written to particular persons. In both these sorts the compiler of them seemeth manifestly to have had respect of setting the Epistles in order, according to their length. Cartw. Ordo Epistolarum Paulinarum respectu scriptionis alius est, quam respectu positionis in Bibliis. Waltherus in officina Biblica. Ludovic. Capel historia Apostolica illustrata. Epistolæ Paulinæ non temporis ordine locatæ sunt ab iis qui eas primi in unum volumen compegerunt; sed pro dignitate eorum ad quos scriptæ sunt. Ideo præcedunt quæ ad Ecclesias; sequuntur quæ sunt ad singulos. Grotius.

A Lapide. Estius, Grotius and Vorstius have done well on all the Epistles, Imprimis Estius ex Pontificiis, saith Voetius. Dickeson also a Scotch Divine hath interpreted them well in Latine and English.

The Epistles are for the most part written in this order; they have

1. An Inscription: wherein is the name of the Writer, and of them to whom he writes, and his wish.

2. The matters of the Epistle, which are sometimes meerly religious, concerning certain Articles of faith or piety of life, or about the use of things indifferent; or else familiar things, witnessing their mutuall good will.

3. The Conclusion: in which are Exhortations, Salutations, Wishes, or other familiar matters.

There are 21 Epistles, fourteen written by Paul, and seven more written by Peter, John, James and Jude.

Concerning the time and place in which the severall Epistles were written, it is not easie to determine. I will premise something about the order of the Epistles, before I speak of them particularly.

Some of Pauls Epistles were written before his imprisonment; some in his bonds, both former and later. Before his imprisonment, the first of all that was written, were both the Epistles to the Thessalonians; they were written from Corinth the 8th or 9th year of Claudius.

Titus was written by Paul in those two years that he stayed at Ephesus.

Galatians] At the end of the two years that Paul was at Ephesus, the Epistle to the Galatians seem to be written, 1 Cor, 16.2. by which words the Apostle seems to intimate, that this Epistle to the Galatians was written before that to the Corinthians.

Corinthians] Paul living two year at Ephesus, in the 11th and 12th year of Claudius, the Corinthians wrote to him, 1 Cor. 7.1. and that by Stephanus and Fortunatus, which they sent to him (Chap. 16.17.) by whom Paul seemeth to Cha.16.15.18 have written back the first Epistle to the Corinthians; for in that he exceedingly commends them of Corinth. It was not written from Philippi, (as the Greek superscription hath it) but from Ephesus, as the Arabick interpreter hath it; as is manifest, Chap.16.8.

The second Epistle to the Corinthians, and the first of Timothy strive for priority, Ex sub judice lis est. Both of them were written a little after Paul departed from Ephesus, and while he departed to Macedonia, but it is not manifest which was the first.

First Epistle to Timothy] Some think that this Epistle was written by Paul in Capellus ibid. his bonds, but not rightly; for he makes no mention of his bonds in it. It is probable that it was written from Athens, as it is in the Arabick subscription, when he came from Macedonia to Greece; and so it was written after the first Epistle to the Corinthians.

Romans] The Epistle to the Romans was written at Corinth, when Paul having Act.20.2. spent three moneths in Greece, sailed to Jerusalem, that there he might gather the Collections of the Churches of Achaia, Asia and Macedonia. This is manifest from Rom.15,2,4.

These are the Epistles which seem to be written by Paul out of imprisonment; the other were written in his bonds. Pauls bonds were two-fold; former and later. One only, viz. the later to Timothy seems to be written in the later bonds of Paul, a little before his Martyrdome; the others were written in his former bonds.

Epistle to the Philippians.] This seems to be the first of them all, which Paul Capellus ubi supra. wrote in his bonds. When Paul was Captive at Rome, the Philippians being carefull for him, sent Epaphroditus thither, who visited Paul in his bonds, and ministred to him necessary helps for the preserving of his life, as appears by the second Chapter, and 25 verse of that Epistle, and the fourth Chapter, 10. and 18. Verses. Paul sent him back again to the Philippians, and commends him to them, Chap. 11. 28. That the Epistle was written in his bonds, is manifest from the first Chapter, ver.7,13,14. and from Rome, not Jerusalem, Chap.4.22.

The Epistles to the Colossians, Ephesians, Philippians, and Philemon, were at the same time written from Rome, and sent by the same, viz. Tychicus and Onesimus. First, That the Epistle to the Colossians was written by Paul in his bonds, it is manifest from Chap.4. v.3. and 18. but it was sent by Tychicus and Onesimus, Chap.4. v.7,8,9.

Capelli historia Apostolica illustrata. That to Philemon was written at the same time with that to the Colossians, since he salutes Philemon in their name in whose he saluted the Colossians, viz. in the name of Epaphras, Aristarchus, Mark, Luke, Demas, as is manifest by comparing the fourth Chapter of the Epistle to the Colossians, v. 10, 12, 14. with the 22. and 24. of the Epistle to Philemon. For this and other reasons Capellus supposeth they were both written at the same time.

That the Epistle to the Ephesians was written also at the same time, it may be thus confirmed: 1. Because it was written by Paul in his bonds, viz. from Rome, as is manifest, Chap. 3.1. and 4.1. 2. It was sent by Tychicus, Chap.6.21,22. by which also that to the Colossians was sent. That these three Epistles were written also alſo by Paul in his former not later bonds, it is hence manifeſt, becauſe Phil. 1. 25, 26. & 2. 14. alſo in the 22. verſe of Philemon, Paul ſheweth that he had a moſt certain hope, that he ſhould be freed ſhortly.

The Epiſtle to the Hebrews was written by Paul from Rome, toward the end of his former bonds. He expreſly mentions his bonds, Ch. 10. 34. and ſheweth, that he hopes ſhortly to be ſet free, Chap. 13. 19.

The later Epiſtle to Timothy was the laſt of all Pauls Epiſtles, written by him in his latter bonds, of which he writes, Chap. 1. 8. & 2. 9. and from Rome, Chap. 1. 17. a little before his Martyrdom, which he ſeems to intimate, Chap. 4. 6, 7, 8.

Thus having by the help of Capellus ſomething cleared the order of Pauls Epiſtles for the time of their writing, I ſhall ſpeak of them now according to the method wherein they are commonly diſpoſed in our Bibles.

Romans] That Epiſtle is firſt, not in time of writing, but in dignity, becauſe of the Majeſty of the things it handleth, Juſtification and Predeſtination. It is rightly called Clavis Theologiæ, or the Epitome of Chriſtian Religion. It conſiſts of ſixteen Chapters.

Inter Epiſtolas quæ ſunt ad Eccleſias, prima eſt quæ ad Romanam ob urbis ejus majeſtatem. Grotius.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Dr Sclater on the firſt three Chapters, and Pareus with Peter Martyr, and Par on the whole. Voetius ſaith, Willetus eſt inſtar omnium.

First to the Corinthians] * How much Authority the Epiſtle to the Romans hath in eſtabliſhing Controverſies of Faith; ſo much the firſt of the Corinths hath in eſtabliſhing Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline; therefore Antiquity hath placed it next the other. It conſiſts likewiſe of ſixteen Chapters.

* The City of Corinth was a famous Metropolis in Achaia, notable for wiſdom; one of the ſeven Wiſemen is celebrated for and for pride,

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Pareus, Peter Martyr, Morton, Dr Sclater.

The ſecond to the Corinthians[a]] conſiſts of thirteen Chapters.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Muſculus and Dr Sclater.

a Corinthian. Tully calleth it, Lumen Græciæ. a great ſumme It was famous alſo for riches and merchandize; luxury, luſt: whence the Proverb, Non cuivis homini contingit adire Corinthum. Lais there asking of money of Demoſthenes for a nights lodging with her, he anſwered, Non emam tanti pœnitere.

Galatians] St Jerom taketh the Argument of the Epiſtle to the Galatians, to be the ſame with the Argument of the Epiſtle to the Romans; wherein the Apoſtle proveth, that by the works of the Law, whether Ceremonial or Moral, no fleſh can be juſtified before God; uſing the ſame words in both, Rom. 3. 20, 28, & Gal. 2. 16. It conſiſts of ſix Chapters.

The beſt Expoſitors of it are Mr Perkins and Pareus.

Epheſians] Epheſus was a Mother-city in the leſſer Aſia, famous for Idolatry, and the Temple of Diana, as the [b] Acts of the Apoſtles teſtifie: ſo given to all riot that it baniſhed Hermodore, becauſe he was an honeſt ſober man; yet here God [c] had his Church. It conſiſts of ſix Chapters.

[b] Act. 19. & 20. 16, 17.
[c] Bayne. See Epheſ. 5. 18.

The beſt Expoſitor of it is Zanchius; Mr Bains hath done well on the firſt Chapter, and Dr Gouge on ſome part of the two laſt Chapters. There is a large and learned Comment by Bodius (Boyd) a Scotchman, on it. in Latine.

Philippians] The Apoſtle had planted a Church at Philippi, which was the Metropolis of Macedonia, Act. 16. 12. In this Epiſtle he commends their godly ſtudy. It conſiſts of four Chapters.

Zanchy and Dr Airie have done well on this Book.

Coloſſians] Coloſſe was the chief City of Phrygia in leſſer Aſia; the Apoſtle directs this Epiſtle to the Inhabitants of that City. It conſiſts of four Chapters.

Biſhop Davenant, Biſield and Elton, have done beſt on this Book.

Theſſalonians 2.] Theſe were written to thoſe which dwelt at Theſſalonica; it is a chief City in Macedonia, whither, how the Apoſtle came, we may ſee Act. 17. The firſt Epiſtle conſiſts of five Chapters, the ſecond of three. It was written firſt before any other Epiſtle, or indeed before any Book of the New Teſtament. Iren. l. 3. c. 1. Euſeb. hiſt. l. 5. c. 8.

See Phil. 4. 16.

Zanchius and Dr Sclater have done well on both theſe Epiſtles; Jackſon and Bradſhaw alſo on the ſecond.

Timothy 2.[d]] Signifieth the honour of God, or precious to God. He honoured God, and was precious to him. The firſt Epiſtle conſiſts of ſix Chapters.

Barlow hath done well on three of them, and Sculterus on the whole.

The ſecond of Timothy] This conſiſts of four Chapters.

Sculterus hath done well on it, and Eſpenſæus on both thoſe Epiſtles.

Titus] Titus to whom this Epiſtle was written, was a faithfull Miniſter, and beloved friend of the Apoſtle, 2 *Cor.*2.13. & 7.6. & 8.23. Paul ſent his Epiſtle to him out of Macedonia, which is of the ſame ſubject with the firſt to Timothy. It conſiſts of three Chapters.

Sculterus, Eſpenſæus and Dr Tailor have done beſt on this Book.

Philemon[e]] He was the Miniſter of the Church at Coloſſe, verſ. 17. It is but one Chapter.

Sculterus and Dike have well interpreted it.

Hebrews] The Epiſtle to the Hebrews was rejected by ſome Hereticks, as Marcion and Arius; it is now received as Canonical, becauſe it was inſpired of God, doth in all things fully agree with all other parts of Prophetical and Apoſtolical writings, and was received of the greateſt part of the ancient Church, though upon weak and ſlender grounds the Latine Church for a time did not receive the ſame.

Hieron. in Catalogo Scriptorum Eccleſiaſticorum, after he hath recited all the Epiſtles of Paul, at length he cometh to this Epiſtle; [f] but the Epiſtle to the Hebrews (ſaith he) is not thought to be his, for the difference of the ſtyle and ſpeech, but either written by Barnabas, as Tertullian holds, or Luke the Evangeliſt, or Clemens. Some aſcribe it to Tertullian, ſaith Sixtus Senenſis.

The diverſity of the ſtyle, and inſcription of this Epiſtle, and manner of reaſoning, makes ſome doubt of the Writer thereof; and alſo ſomething in the Epiſtle ſhews, that it was written not by Paul, as the beginning of the ſecond Chapter, *v.*3. the Doctrine of Salvation is confirmed to us by them which heard it, which ſeemeth to agree with the profeſſion of Luke in the beginning of his Goſpel; whereas St Paul denieth, Gal. 1. 12. that he received it of man. An ancient Greek Copy (whereof Beza ſpeaks) leaves out the name of Paul in the Title, and alſo divers printed Books. Auguſtine ſpeaks often of this Epiſtle, as if it were of doubtfull Authority, as you may ſee in his *Enchirid. lib.*1. *c.*8. & *lib.*10. de Civitate Dei, *c.*5. Beza, Hemingius, Aretius, leave it in medio. Calvin and Marlorat deny that it was Pauls.

Sit Author, quàm quis ſit Author. Cameron. Tomo tertio prælect. in Epiſt. ad Hebr. ubi multis rationibus probare conatur Paulum non fuiſſe illius Authorem. Tantum vellemus Epiſtolam ad Hebræos non adſcribi Paulo, quam firmis Argumentis perſuaſi ſimus alium eſſe Auctorem. Calvin. in Epiſt.

The reaſons (ſaith Cartwright in his Confutation of the Rhemiſts) moving us to eſteem it none of Pauls, are firſt, that his name is not prefixed, as in all the Epiſtles undoubtedly known to be his. Another reaſon is, that this Writer confeſſeth that he received the Doctrine of the Goſpel, not of Chriſt himſelf, but of thoſe which heard it of Chriſt, Heb. 2. 3. whereas Paul received his Doctrine immediately from Chriſt, and heard it himſelf of Chriſt, and not of them that heard it from him.

To the firſt Objection by Fulk it is eaſily anſwered, The diverſity of ſtyle doth not prove that Paul was not the Author of this Epiſtle. For as men have written divers things in divers ſtyles in reſpect of matter and perſons to whom they wrote; as Tully his Offices, Orations and Epiſtles; ſo the Spirit of God could and might inſpire one and the ſame man to pen in a different manner. 2. The other Argument alſo againſt its being Pauls, becauſe his name is not prefixed, hath but little

It hath pleaſed the Spirit of God in wiſdom to conceal from us the names of the Authors of ſome Books, both in the Old and New Teſtament: God would have us believe his Word, though we know not the Authors; it is written by the Spirit of God, though we know not whoſe hand God guided. Dr Halſworth on Luk. 22.11,12.

force

[d] à τιμάω honoro, & Θεὸς Deus, q. d. cultor Dei vel honorans Deum. Sic τίτος à verbo τίω magni æſtimo, in pretio habeo, honoro. Paſor.

[e] Plena roboris & lacertorum eſt tota epiſtola, & ſingulis ejus verbis mirifica quadam argumentandi vis latet recondita. Sculterus.

[f] Duplex dubitatio de hac Epiſtola fuit, una de auctore, altera de authoritate ejus. Bellarm. *L.*1. de verb. Dei, *c.*17. Vide Druſium ad Titulum ad Hebræos. De fide eſt, Epiſtolam ad Hebræos eſſe Scripturam Canonicam. Cornel. a Lapide. Dr Fulk againſt Martin. Multo facilius dicere, quis iſtius Epiſtola non force in it. 1. If it be not Pauls, becauſe his name is not prefixed, then it is nones, becauſe no mans name is prefixed; ſo Jerom, and from him Beza and Bellarmine both thus anſwer. 2. The Author of this Epiſtle did conceal his name, that thereby he might not offend the weak Jews to whom he wrote, with whom he knew his name was hateſull. 3. Beza ſaith, he found Pauls name added to this Epiſtle in all ancient Greek Copies, one excepted. Other Books have no name prefixed, as the firſt Epiſtle of John hath not his name prefixed, and yet certainly believed to be his.

g Sciebat nomen ſuum inviſum Hebræis eſſe, quamvis ad fidem jam converſis, propterea quod ipſe præ cæteris legem veterem eſſe abrogatam acerrimè diſputabat: cujus legis illi adhuc æmulatores erant. Actorum vigeſimo primo. Bellarminus ex Hieronymo hæc citat. l. 1. de verbo Dei. cap. 17. Vide Bezam in titulum illum, Epiſtola Pauli Apoſtoli ad Hebræos. Certè non panca ſunt in hac Epiſtola quæ alibi apud Paulum totidem penè verbis ſcribuntur. Beza. Compare 2 Pet. 3. 15. with 1 Pet. 1. 1.

For the laſt Objection, Beza anſwers, that he reckons himſelf among the hearers of the Apoſtles, to avoid the envy of Apoſtleſhip. See 1 Pet. 4. 3.

All the Grecians, and many of the more famous of the ancient Latines, as Auguſtine, Ambroſe, Gregory, and many modern Writers of note, as Beza, Bellarmine, Gerhard, Capellus, Martinius, Hoornbeck, Walter, Cornelius a Lapide hold it was written by Paul, and for divers reaſons: 1. The Author of this Epiſtle commends a certain famous Diſciple Timothy, [Chap. 13. 23. but none had ſuch an one but Paul. 2. He remembers his bonds, Chap. 10. 34. which is a uſual thing with Paul, Phil. 1. 7. Col. 4. 18. 2 Tim. 2. 9. Philem. v. 9. & 10. 3. He hath many of the ſame Axioms with Paul, compare Heb. 1. 2. & 3. with Col. 1. 14, 15, 16, 17. Heb. 5. 12. & 13. with 1 Cor. 3. 1. & 2. and divers other places. Paul ſaith, by that ſign his Epiſtles may be known and diſtinguiſhed from others, viz. that ſubſcription, The grace of our Lord, 2 Theſſ. 3. 18. which clauſe is found in the end of this Epiſtle, Chap. 13. 4. Pauls zeal for the ſalvation of the Hebrews, Rom. 9. 3. makes it probable that he would write unto them. Some think it may be gathered from that place, 2 Pet. 3. 15. Beza having alledged four reaſons urged by ſome why this Epiſtle ſhould not be written by Paul, ſaith, Opponitur his omnibus quæ ſcribuntur, 2 Pet. 3. 15. quæ certè videntur hanc Epiſtolam velut intento digito monſtrare.

The Arabick puts this Queſtion out of doubt; for it doth not only in the Title and Inſcription thereof call it the Epiſtle of S^t Paul, but doth expreſſe it to be in number the fourteenth of his Epiſtles, as it is ſtiled in the beginning thereof. And ſo alſo doth the Syriack Tranſlation without any ſcruple aſcribe it plainly to S^t Paul. M^r Nettles Anſwer to the Jewiſh part of M^r Seldens Hiſtory of Tithes, Sect. 1. Other Books have no name prefixed, and yet they are certainly believed to be Canonical, as Job, Judges, Ruth, Chronicles.

Beza conludes the matter very modeſtly: Let the judgments of men, ſaith he, be free; ſo we all agree in that, That this Epiſtle was truly dictated by the holy Ghoſt, and preſerved as a moſt precious treaſure in the Church. Vide Waltheri officinam Biblicam, & Whitakeri controv. 1. Quæſt. jam de Script. c. 16. & Hoornbecks Antiſocinianiſmi, l. 1. c. 1. centrov. Sect. 3.

Some think (as I have touched it before) that this Epiſtle was originally written in [h] Hebrew, but the ſtyle and phraſe of this Epiſtle doth Græcam redolere eloquentiam, non Hebræam. 2. If it was written in Hebrew, the Hebraiſms would appear in the Greek verſion, which yet are rarer here than in other Epiſtles. 3. The Scriptures of the Old Teſtament are cited in it, not according to the Hebrew fountains, but according to the verſion of the Seventy. 4. The Apoſtle Chap. 7. [i] interprets the Hebrew name Melchiſedech, King of righteouſneſſe; and Salem, peace; which he would not have done, if he had written in Hebrew. Junius [k] in his parallels holds it to be Pauls, and written in Greek.

Ribera and Ludovicus a Tena, two Papiſts, have written on this Epiſtle. Pareus and Dixon have done well on the whole Book, and M^r Deering on ſix Chapters. Voetius much commends Gomarus. But D^r Gouge hath commented beſt on this Book.

Thoſe ſeven Epiſtles written by James, Peter, John and Jude, have unfit Titles prefixed before them, in that they are called ſometime Canonical, ſpecially of the h Epiſtola Pauli ad Hebræos Hebraico, id eſt, ſermone tunc in Syria uſitato ſcripta fuit, & ab alio verſa, quem quidem Clementem fuiſſe volunt, alii alium. Salmaſius de Helleniſtica.

i Waltherus in officina Biblica, & Bellarminus ubi ſupra. k Jun. Parallel. lib. 3. cap 9. pag. 466. Vide Waltheri officinam Biblicam.

Latine

Latine Church; and ſometimes Catholick[1], chiefly of the Greek Church: neither of which were given them by any Apoſtle or Apoſtolick Writer. Yet though this Title Catholick cannot be defended, it may be excuſed and tolerated as a Title of diſtinction, to diſtinguiſh them from the other Epiſtles. Alſo they may have this Title Canonical ſet before them, (as ſome Books of the Old Teſtament were termed Hagiographa by the Jews) not becauſe they were of greater Authority than other holy writings, but to ſhew that they ought to be eſteemed of, and imbraced as Divine, howſoever in former times they were unjuſtly ſuſpected. Vide Bezam.

[1] Epiſtolæ aliorum Apoſtolorum Catholicæ dicuntur, quia generatim ad omnes fideles & in omnes quaſi mundi partes miſſæ ſunt, & iſta inſcriptione à Paulinis diſtinguuntur, quæ vel ad certas Eccleſias, vel ad certos homines miſſa fuerunt. Rivetus in Catholico Orthodoxo.

The ſecond Inſcription of Catholick is as unfit as the former; therefore the Rhemiſts unjuſtly blame us for leaving out that Title in our Engliſh Bible; for it is well known that that Title is not given by the holy Ghoſt, but by the Scholiaſt who took it from Euſebius. General, is a meer Engliſh term, and of no doubtfull ſignification; Catholick is both Greek, and (by their ſaying) of double, and therefore doubtfull ſignification.

The Syriack Interpreter hath this Inſcription of theſe Epiſtles (as Tremellius ſheweth) Tres Epiſtolæ trium Apoſtolorum, ante quorum oculos Dominus noſter ſe transformavit, id eſt, Jacobi, Petri, & Joannis. For the Syrians do not eſteem the ſecond of Peter, nor the ſecond and third of John, nor the Epiſtle of Jude, Canonical.

Hieron. Epiſt. Fam.

The Apoſtles James, Peter, John and Jude have publiſht ſeven Epiſtles as myſtical as ſuccinct; both ſhort and long; ſhort in words, long in ſenſe and meaning.

James] For the difference which ſeems to be between *Iam.*2.21,22. & *Rom.*4.2. & 3.28. moſt likely this Book was doubted of in ancient times, as Euſebius and Ierom witneſſe. But yet then alſo publickly allowed in many Churches, and ever ſince received in all, out of which for the ſame cauſe Luther, and other of his followers ſince him, would again reject it. Eraſmus aſſents to Luther, and Muſculus agrees with them both in his Comment upon the fourth of the Romans; both they of the Romiſh, and we of the Reformed Church [m] with one conſent admit this Epiſtle for Canonical. Vide Polani Syntagma.

Mr Pemble of Juſtification, Sect.6.c.1.

[m] This may be ſeen in the Harmony of Confeſſions.

I light upon an old Dutch Teſtament of Luthers Tranſlation (ſaith Whitaker againſt Raynolds) with his Preface, wherein he writeth that Iames his Epiſtle is not ſo worthy as are the Epiſtles of S[t] Peter and Paul, but in reſpect of them a ſtrawen Epiſtle; his cenſure I miſlike, and himſelf (I think) afterwards, ſeeing theſe words in a later Edition are left out.

It is no where found in Luthers Works, that he called the Epiſtle of James, Inanem & ſtramineam. Edmund Campian was convicted of falſhood about that in England, where when he had objected that, he could find no ſuch thing at any time in the Books he [n] produced. Some in the Preface of the German Edition ſay that Luther wrote, that it cannot contend in dignity with the Epiſtles of Paul and Peter, but is ſtrawy, if it be compared with them. Which judgement of Luther we approve not of, and it is hence manifeſt that it was diſliked by him, becauſe theſe words are found in no other Edition from the year 1526. Luthers Diſciples now hold, That it is Canonical and Apoſtolical; and they anſwer the Arguments of thoſe that are oppoſite thereto, as we may ſee in the Expoſition of that Article concerning the Scripture, by that moſt learned and diligent man John Gerard. Gravitatem ac zelum Apoſtolicum per omnia præ ſe fert, ſaith Walther.

[n] Rivet. Jeſuita vapulans c. 9.

Waltherus in officina Biblica.

Sect.281. Waltherus alſo in officina Biblica holds it Canonical.

We may reply againſt the Papiſts, who often object this opinion of Luthers, that Cajetan their Cardinal [o] denieth the Epiſtle to the Hebrews to be Canonical; yea (which is farre worſe) he affirmeth that the Author thereof hath erred, not onely in words, but in the ſenſe and meaning of the Scripture. Nay, Cajetan (ſaith Whitaker) rejected Iames, ſecond of Peter, and ſecond and third of John and Jude.

[o] Rainoldus *de lib. Apoc. tom.*1. prælect. quarta. Vide etiam prælectionem tertiam.

It

It consists of five Chapters. Paræus, Laurentius, Brochmanne, and M. Manton have done best on it.

First of Peter.] This Epistle is called in the Title Catholical, because it is not written to any one person, as that of Paul to Timothy, Titus and Philemon: nor to any one particular Church, as those of Paul to the Romans, Corinths: but to the converted of the Jews dispersed here and there, as appears by the inscription. It consists of five Chapters.

Gerhard, Laurentius, Gomarus and D. Ames have expounded both these Epistles. Bifield hath interpreted part of the first Epistle.

Second of Peter.] Some in the Primitive Church doubted of its [p] authority, and the Syriack hath it not; but the Church generally allowed it, and many reasons may perswade that it is Apostolical, and was written by Peter. 1. Because the Authour of it expresly calleth himself Simon Peter, the Apostle of Jesus Christ. He wrote it in his old-age to confirm them in the doctrine which before he had taught them. 2. Its inscription is to the same Jews (that the former) viz. dispersed by the Roman Empire, and converted to Christ, whose Apostle Peter was. 3. It shews an Apostolical spirit. 4. Its stile and composition is agreeable to the former Epistle. 5. The Authour of this Epistle witnesseth, that he was a spectator of the Transfiguration in the Mount; *Chap.*1. *ver.*16. now Peter, together with James and John were present with Christ. 6. He makes mention of the Former Epistle, *Chap.*3. *v.*1. 7. He cals Paul his dear Brother, *Chap.*3. v. 15. It consists of three Chapters.

[p] As Eusebius and Jerome witnesse.

Chap.1.11,13.

First of John consists of five Chapters.

Second and third of John.] They were also in times past doubted of by some, as Erasmus, Cajetan: but there are good reasons to prove them Canonicall; 1. Their Authour cals himself an Elder; so doth Peter; 1 Pet.5.1. by which name an Ecclesiastical Office is often signified, but here age rather; now it is manifest that John came to a greater age then the rest of the Apostles. 2. The salutation is plainly Apostolical, Grace, mercy and peace. 3. In sentences and words they agree with the first Epistle. 4. The Fathers alledge them for Johns [*], and reckon them among the Canonical Books.

Each of these Epistles is but a Chapter.

*Eusebius l.*2. 24. & 3.21. Zanchy hath done well on the first Epistle, Calvin on all three.

[*] Irenæus, Tertullian, Athanasius. Vide Euseb. *l.*2 *c.*23. *l.*3. *c.*22. Erasm. in Annotat.

Jude] This Epistle also in times past was questioned by some; but that it is Apostolical, first the inscription shews; the Authour expresly cals him a servant of Christ, and brother of James. 2. The matter, it agreeth both for words and sentences with the second of Peter; of which it contains as it were a brief summe and recapitulation. That the writer of the Epistle doth not call himself an Apostle is of no moment to infringe the authority thereof; for the judgement of the writer is free in that case; that title was specially used by Paul and Peter; James and John quit the same Title, yea Paul in his Epistle to the Philippians, Thessalonians and Philemon doth not call himself an Apostle, and yet those Epistles were never doubted of. It is but one Chapter. Willet, M. Perkins, M. Manton and M. Jenkins have done well on it.

It is reckoned among the canonical books, and cited by Athanasius, Tertullian, Cyprian, Origen, Jerom, under Judes name. John neither in his Epistles nor Revelation cals himself an Apostle. This short (yet general) Epistle was written the last of all the Epistles, and is therefore called by some Fasciculus. It was written by Jude the brother of James, and Kinsman of Christ, he lived longer then all the rest of the Apostles save John. Besides the Dedication and preface, it contains two things, 1. Warnings of the Church against false Doctors. 2. Woes against false Teachers.

Revelation [q]] It is called according to the Greek Apocalyps, and according to the Latine Revelation; that is, a discovery or manifestation of things which before were hidden and secret, for the common good of the Church.

[q] Vocatur iste liber Apocalypsis seu Revelationis, quia in eo continentur

*Eusebius l.*3. *c.*17. saith, Domitian cast John the Evangelist into a fornace of scaldea quæ Deus revelavit Joanni & Joannes Ecclesiæ. Ludov. de Tena. Sixtus Senensis idem ferè habet Bibliothecæ sanctæ *l.*7. Apocalypsis Johannis tot habet Sacramenta quot verba. Hieron. epist. Fam. lib.2. epist. 1. Nomen ἀποκάλυψις teste. Hieronymo soli scripturæ est proprium & apud Ethnicos non usitatum, sonat revelationem earum rerum, quæ prius, non quidem Deo, nobis autem occultæ & minus manifestæ fuerunt.

ing

ing Oyl, but when he saw he came forth unhurt, he banished him into the Isle Patmos, where he writ this Revelation.

This Book describeth the state of the Church from the time of John the last of the Apostles, until Christs coming again; and especially the proceedings, pride and fall of Babylon, the great Whore, with all the Kingdoms of Antichrist. The subject of it is two-fold: 1. The present state of the Church: 2. The future state of it, The things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter, Revel. 1.19. The three first Chapters of this Book contain seven severall Epistles to the seven severall Churches of Asia, the other following Chapters are a Propeticall History of the Church of God from Christs ascension to his second coming.

The holy Ghost foreseeing what labour Satan and his instruments would take to weaken and impair the credit and authority of this above all other Books (wherein he prevailed so far, as some true Churches called the truth and authority of it into question) hath backed it with a number of confirmations more then are in any other Book of Scripture.

First, The Authour of it is set in the fore-front or face of it, The Revelation of Iesus Christ, Chap.1. vers.1. who professeth himself to be the first and the last, *vers.*11. so in the severall Epistles to the Churches in several stiles he challengeth them to be his. Thus saith he, 1. That holdeth the seven stars in his right hand. 2. He which is first and last, which was dead, and is alive. 3. Which hath the sharp two-edged sword. 4. Which hath eyes like a flame of fire, and his feet like brasse. 5. Which hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars. 6. He who is holy and true, who hath the key of David. 7. He who is Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creatures of God.

Secondly, The Instrument or Pen-man, his servant John the Evangelist, the Apostle, the Divine, who for the farther and more full authority of it, repeateth his name at least thrice, saying, I John, Chap. 1.9. and 21.1,2. and 22.8. whereas in the Gospel he never maketh mention of his name; there he writes the History of Christ, here he writes of himself, and the Revelations declared to him.

Peculiare est Johanni pra reliquis librorum N.T. Scriptoribus Filium Dei vocare Λόγον, confer *Joh.*1.1. and 14. *Jam verò eandem appellationem tribuit Filio Dei in hoc libro Apoc.*19. v.13. Gerardus, Waltherus.

Thirdly, In the last Chapter are five Testimonies heaped together, ver. 5,6,7,8. 1. Of the Angels. 2. Of God himself, the Lord of the holy Prophets. 3. Of Jesus Christ, Behold I come shortly. 4. Of John, I John heard and saw all these things: 5. The Protestation of Jesus Christ, *v.*18.

Fourthly, The matter of the Book doth convince the Authority thereof, seeing every where the Divinity of a Prophetical Spirit doth appear; the words and sentences of other Prophets are there set down: part of the Prophecies there delivered are in the sight of the world accomplished, by which the truth and authority of the whole, is undoubtedly proved; there are extant many excellent Testimonies of Christ and his Divinity, and our redemption by Christ.

Vide Beza Prolegomena in Apocalypsin.

Fifthly, The most ancient Fathers, Greek and Latine ascribe this book to John the Apostle. Theophylact, Origen, Chrysostome, Tertullian, Hilary, Austin, Ambrose, Irenaus.

To deny then the truth of this Book is contra solem obloqui, to gainsay the shining of the Sun it self.

Non illud receptum est quod ex verbis Apoc. cap. 20. colligerunt Chiliasta, qui ab Ecclesia explosi sunt ut Haretici, Sanctos nempe in terris cum Christo regnaturos annis mille. Reinold. de lib. Apoc. *Tom.*2. Praelect. 131.

The Chiliasts abuse many testimonies out of this Book, but those places have been cleared long ago by the Learned, as bearing another sense. See Dr Reynolds Conf. with Hart. c.8. p.406.

This book is a book full of wonder and mystery, there is scarce any one of the Ancients that hath expounded it. That the Church of Rome hath great cause to suspect ſuſpect her ſelf, to fear leſt ſhe have a great part in the Prophecies of that book, I think the moſt partiall will not deny. M. Hales his Sermon on 2 Pet. 3. 16.

Calvin being demanded his opinion, what he thought of the Revelation, anſwered ingenuouſly (ſaith one [r]) He knew not at all what ſo obſcure a Writer meant. Se penitus ignorare quid velit tam obſcurus ſcriptor.

[r] M. Selden of Tithes, cap. 1. ex Bodin. Meth. Hiſt. See Mountag. againſt him. c. 1. p. 291. See Broughton on Apoc. p. 244. Apocalypſin Johannis Commentationibus intactam ſe relinquere fatetur Lutherus, quod dubia ſit interpretationis & arcani ſenſus; in qua etſi periculum ſui multi habiemus fecerint, nihil certi tamen in medium protuliſſe. Zepperus.

Cajetane at the end of his Expoſition of Jude, confeſſeth that he underſtands not the literal ſenſe of the Revelation, and therefore Exponat (ſaith he) cui Deus conceſſerit.

It conſiſts of two and twenty Chapters; the beſt Expoſitors of it are Ribera, Brightman, Paræus, Cartwright, Fulk, Dent, Forbes, Mede, Simonds, Foord, Iames Durham a Scotch Divine. M. Perkins on the firſt three Chapters.

The Scriptures written by Moſes and the Prophets ſufficiently prove that Chriſt is the Meſſiah that was to come; The Old Teſtament may convince the Jews (which deny the New Teſtament) of this truth, Ioh. 5. 39. They, that is, thoſe parts of Scripture written by Moſes and the Prophets; there were no other Scriptures then written. The 53 of Iſaiah is a large Hiſtory of his ſufferings. We have alſo another book (or Teſtament) more clearly witneſſing of Chriſt; The Goſpel is the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, Eph. 3. 8. Conſectaries from the books of Scripture. See Luk. 1. 69, 70. Act. 3. 18. & 10 43.

So much may ſuffice to have ſpoken concerning the Divine Canon; the Eccleſiaſticall and falſe Canon follow.

CHAP. V.

Of the Books called Apocrypha.

SOme Hereticks utterly aboliſht the Divine Canon, as the Swenckfeldians and Libertines who contemned all Scriptures; the Manichees and Marcionites refuſed all the books of the Old Teſtament (as the Jews do thoſe of the New) as if they had proceeded from the Devil. Totum vetus Teſtamentum rejiciebant Manichæi, tanquam à Deo malo profectum Duos enim illi Deos impiè fingebant, quorum unus bonus, malus alter eſſet. Whitakerus de Scripturis. Libri digni qui abſcondantur magis quam qui legantur. Athanaſ. in Synopſ. ſac. ſcript. Dicuntur libri occulti, qui palam omnibus non proponebantur, ſive qui publicitus non legebantur, ſed privatim ac domi, pro ſuo cujuſque animo. Mayeri Philol. Sac. c. 6. Hi libri Apocryphi dicuntur, i. e. abſconditi, ab ἀποκρύπτω, propterea quod non ſolerent publicè in Eccleſia legi, ſed domi tantùm ac privatim, & quaſi clam, unde etiam appellationem ſunt ſortiti. Baronis Præfat. ad Præcell. in Jonam.

Some diminiſh this Canon, as the Sadduces, who (as Whitaker and others hold) rejected all the other Prophets but Moſes; ſome enlarge it as the Papiſts, who hold that divers other Books called by us Apocrypha (i. e. hidden) do belong to the Old Teſtament, and are of the ſame authority with the other before-named; and they adde alſo their traditions and unwritten Word, equalling it with the Scripture, both theſe are accurſed, Rev. 22. 18.

But againſt the firſt we thus argue: Whatſoever Scripture, 1. Is divinely inſpired: 2. Chriſt commandeth to ſearch: 3. To which Chriſt and his Apoſtles appeal and confirm their Doctrine by, that is Canonical and of equal Authority with the New Teſtament: But the holy Scripture of the Old Teſtament is divinely inſpired, 2 Tim. 3. 16. where he ſpeaks even of the Books of the Old Teſtament, as is gathered both from the univerſall, all writing, viz. holy, in the 15. verſe; and from the circumſtance of time, becauſe in the time of Timothies infancy little or nothing of the New Testament was published. 2. Christ speaks not to the Scribes and Pharisees, but to the people in generall, to search it, John 5.39. this famous Elogium being added, That it gives testimony of him, and that we may finde eternall life in it. 3. Christ and his Apostles appeal to it, and confirm their doctrine by it, Luk. 24.27. *Rom.*3.21. *Act.*10.43. and 17.11. and 20.43. and 26.20. The New Testament gives testimony of the Old, and Peter, 2 *Pet.*1.19. of Pauls Epistles.

*Steven Act.*7. 42. cites a book of the twelve lesser Prophets, and so confirms the authority of them all, being in one volume. Luk. 16.29. Vide Whitakeri *controv.*1. quæst. 3. c.3. p.210.

The Ecclesiasticall Canon (which is also called the second Canon) followeth, to which these books belong, Tobit, Iudith, first and second of the Maccabees, Wisedom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, Additions to * Daniel and Esther; for these neither contain truth perfectly in themselves; nor are sanctified by God in the Church, that they may be a Canon of faith; and although abusively from custom they were called Canonical, yet properly in the Church they are distinguished from the Canonical by the name of Apocryphal.

The false Canon is that which after the authority of the Apocrypha encreased was constituted by humane opinion; for the Papists as well as we reject for Apocryphal the third and fourth book of Ezra, the prayer of Manasses, the third and fourth of Maccabees, as Themas Aquinas, Sixtus Senensis, Bellarmine; and so the Councel of Trent confesse, when they omit these and reckon up the whole Canon.

& Gerh. Confes. Cathol. l.2. c.1. artic.1. * The History of Susanna, Dan.13. and Bel, cap.14. and the song of the three children, Dan.3. Ezra is accounted by some as the Apocrypha of the Apocrypha, because it was never owned for Canonical, either by the Jews, Romish Church in general, or Protestant Writers.

Without doubt, all the world could not recompence the losse of the Books of Maccabees, and the use of them, to the understanding of the Prophets, so inestimable is the benefit of them to that purpose. Ecclesiasticus though first penned in Hebrew, yet was translated into Greek in Ægypt, as the Preface witnesseth. M.Thorndikes 32 chap. of the Principles of Christian Truth. See him of the Laws of the Church, chap.22.

The Apocryphal books are either purer, as Syrach, Wisedom, Baruch, the first of Maccabees, and the prayer of Manasses; or more impure, as the rest, Toby, Judith, the second of Maccabees, the supplement of Esther and Daniel.

The state therefore of the controversie betwixt us and the Papists is, whether those seven whole books with the Appendices, be Sacred, Divine, Canonical. We do not deny but many of these, especially Wisedom and Ecclesiasticus are very good and profitable, and to be preferred before all humane Tractates, but that they are properly, and by an excellency Canonical, and of infallible truth, out of which firm arguments may be drawn; that we deny.

Nos quidem non negamus horum librorum plerosque, Sapientiam præsertim & Ecclesiasticum esse valdè bonos & utiles, & omnibus Tractationibus præferendos; sed propriè & per excellentiam Canonicos esse, & infallibilis veritatis, è quibus firma ducantur argumenta, id verò inficiamur. Rainold. *de lib. Apoc. prælect.*6. Quis sit author Ecclesiastici, titulus libri indicat. stylus autem recentioris est, nec Hebræa linguæ gravitas, aut Salomonis sapientia cum ecclesiastici prolixis repetitionibus convenit. Cyprianus, & alii veteres, ex consuetudine Salomoni tribuunt Ecclesiasticum. Goulartius in Cyp. l.2. adversus Judæos, D.Hieronymus. Præfat. in libros Salomonis Salomoni tres tantum, qui etiam in Canone Hebræo reperiuntur, tribuit; Proverbia, Ecclesiasten & Canticum Canticorum: cum Hieronymo consentiunt veteres plerique omnes & recentiores. Goulart. in Cyp, Epist.65.

See M.Ligh-foot on Luk. 1. 17. p.5. & 6. Act.6.1. & 9. 29. & 11.20. Solebant pueri præparari & excoli (ad audiendas sacras Scripturas) libris Sapientiæ & Ecclesiastici, quemadmodum qui purpuram volunt, prius lanam inficiunt, ut inquit Cicero *Rainold. de lib. Apoc. tom.*1. *prælect.*18.

Those Books which the Jews of old, and the Reformed Churches now reckon for truly Canonical in the Old Testament, are received all even by our Adversaries for Canonical without any exception; 2. For the Canonicall Books of the New Testament, there is no controversie between us, and so far we agree; but in the Old Testament whole books are reckoned by them for Canonicall, which we hold Apocryphall.

The reason why these books at first were added to holy Writ, was this: The Jews in their later times, before and at the coming of Christ were of two sorts; some properly and for distinction sake named Hebrews, inhabiting Jerusalem and the holy Land; others were Hellenists, that is, the Jews of the dispersion mingled with the Grecians. These had written sundry books in Greek which they made use of, together with other parts of the Old Teſtament, which they had in Greek of the Tranſlation of the LXX, when they now underſtood not the Hebrew; but the Hebrews receive only the two and twenty books before-mentioned. Hence it came that the Jews delivered a double Canon of Scripture to the Chriſtian Church; the one Pure, unqueſtioned and Divine, which is the Hebrew Canon; the other in Greek adulterate, corrupted by the addition of certain books written in thoſe times when God raiſed up no more Prophets among his people. Druſ. præterit. l.5. Annotat. ad Act. Apoſt. c.6. Jun. Animad. in Bell. cont. 1. lib. 1. ca. . l. 2. c. 15. ſect. 21. Tertul. in Apolog. c. 19.

together

They are called Apocryphal (i. ſecret and hidden) not becauſe the names of the Writers are unknown (by that reaſon Judges and Ruth ſhould be Apocryphal) but becauſe they were not wont to be read * openly in the Church of God as the Canonical books, but ſecretly and in private by private perſons, or becauſe their Authority was obſcure aud doubtful with the Ancient.

* Chamier. de Canone, l.4.c.2. Muſculus, Waltherus.

Theſe books our Church rejecteth as not written by divine inſpiration for theſe reaſons.

All the Canonicall Books of the Old Teſtament were written by the Prophets; [a] but none of theſe Books were written by any of the Prophets; for [a] Becauſe they were the Scriptures of the Prophets, Rom. 16. 26. A Prophetical ſpeech, 2 Pet. 1. 19, 20. & Luk. 1. 70.

1. The laſt of the Prophets of the Jews was Malachi, Mal. 4. 4, 5. between whom and John Baptiſt came no Prophet. Mark begins with the ſame words almoſt with which Malachi ended; a good argument to prove that the New Teſtament is next to the Old. But theſe Books [b] were written by ſuch who lived moſt of them after Malachi.

& 16. 39. & 24. 27, 44, 45. [b] Theſe Books in queſtion were never admitted into the Canon of the Jews, they are not comprehended under Moſes and the Prophets, as Joſephus (contra Ap. l. 1.) Hieron. in Prolego. Gal. Origen. (in Pſal. 1.) Epiphanius (de pond. & menſ.) teſtifie, as Sixtus Senenſis and Bellarmine confeſſe. Sapientia quæ vulgo Salomonis inſcribitur, & Jeſu filii Sirach liber, & Judith & Tobias, non ſunt in Canone. Hieron. præfat. in lib. Reg.

2. All the Prophets wrote in Hebrew, the language which the Jews underſtood; but the Fathers affirme, and Papiſts acknowledge that moſt of theſe Books were written in Greek; Ergo, being not written by the Prophets, they are not Canonical. All the Books of the Old Teſtament were committed to the Jews and ſafely kept by them, Rom. 3. 2. our Saviour Chriſt which reproved the Jews [c] for corrupting the ſenſe of the Scripture, did yet never reprove them for rejecting thoſe Books which were divinely inſpired, which ſacriledge he would not have concealed; yea our Saviour ſendeth us unto the Scriptures, as they received them, Joh. 5. 39. Ezra after the Captivity is reported to have gathered all the Books of holy Scripture, and ſafely to lay them up. If the Jews ſhould have rejected or not received any Books being Canonical, they had grievouſly erred, which the Papiſts themſelves will not affirm. Yea there ſhould have been ſome Canonical Books, which no Church received; for beſides the Church of the Jews at that time there was none in the world. The Canonical Books of the Old Teſtament were divided into Moſes, [d] the Prophets and Pſalms; with which agreeth the old diſtribution of the Hebrews, into the Law, Prophets and Hagiographa.

[c] Euſ. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 10. Aug. epiſt. 3. & 59.

Euſeb. Eccleſ. hiſt. l. 5. c. 8.

Whit. de Scrip. controver. 1. q. 1. c. 5, 6.

[d] Luk. 24. 44.

3. There are two wayes to know a Book to be Canonical; one by the teſtimony of ſome Prophet or Apoſtle: the other by the certain Teſtimony of them which did live when the Book was publiſhed, who did witneſſe that the Book was written by ſome Prophet or Apoſtle. But theſe Books are known to be Canonical neither of theſe wayes, they were rejected by the Jews, who lived in the times when they were written; our Saviour Chriſt nor his Apoſtles never commend theſe Books unto us as endited by the Spirit. They are cited by Chriſt and his Apoſtles for the confirmation of their Doctrine. All the Canonical Books in general, Joh. 5. 39. &

Auguſt. cont. Fauſtum. lib. 33. c. 6. Bellar. de verbo Dei, lib. 1. cap. 10. Joſephus, Jerom, Origen.

Benedictus Arias Montanus in Bibliis Hebraïs cum interlineari interpretatione, excuſis & approbatis à Lovanienſibus Theologis, novi Teſtamenti titulo, de libris ſapientiæ, Tobiæ, Judith, Machabæorum, & reliquis ſimilibus loquens, ait eccleſia orthodoxa Hebræorum Canonem ſecuta inter Apocryphos recenſet. Gomari Anticoſterus, l. 2. c. 9. Vide Eſſenij Syſtema. Theol. Diſputat. 3. De ſacra Scriptura.

10. 35. Rom. 16. 26, Luke 16.29,31. & Chap. 24.25, 27, 44. The moſt of all in ſpecial, Geneſis, Matth. 19. 4, 5, 6. Exodus, Mat. 5. 21, 27, 33, 38. Leviticus, Gal. 3.12. Numbers, Joh. 3.14. Deuteronomy, Act. 3. 22. Joſhua, Heb. 11.30, 31. Judges, Heb. 11. 32. Ruth, Mat. 1. 3. Firſt of Samuel, Matth. 12. 3. Second of Samuel, Heb. 1. 5. Firſt of Kings, Mat. 12. 42. Second of Kings, Luk. 4. 27. Firſt of Chronicles, Mat. 1. 3, 7, 10, 13. Second of Chronicles, Act. 7. 48. Ezra, Matth. 1. 12, 13. Job, 1 Cor. 3. 19. Pſalmes, Act. 4. 25. Proverbs, Heb. 12. 5, 6, 7. Iſaiah, Mat. 1. 23. Jeremiah, Heb. 10. 16, 17. Ezekiel, Mat. 25. 35. Daniel, Mat. 24. 25. All the leſſer Prophets, Acts 7. 42. & 15. 15, 16. Hoſea, Mat. 12. 7. Joel, Act. 2. 12. Amos, Act. 15. 16. Jonah, Mat. 12. 40, 41. Micah, Mat. 10. 35. Nahum, Rom. 10. 15. Habakkuk. Rom. 1. 17. Haggai, Heb. 12. 26. Zachary, Matth. 21. 5. Malachi, Luke 1. 16, 17. Theſe Books were not cited by Chriſt and his Apoſtles for confirmation of their Doctrine. See Dr Coſins excellent Scholaſtical Hiſtory of the Canon of the holy Scriptures, c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. where this argument is ſolidly diſcuſſed. He hath irreparably battered and ſhaken the Papiſts Apocryphall Babell, by ſolidly proving the Church of Rome to be erroneous and pertinacious in that point. Dr Gauden's Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ Suſpiria. l. 4. c. 23. See ibid. l. 3. c. 16.

Object. If they be not Canonical therefore becauſe they are not cited; then Nahum and Zephany are not Canonical. Aratus, Menander, and Epimenides prophane Poets, are Canonical, becauſe they are cited, Acts 17. 28. 1 Cor. 15. 33. Titus 1. 12.

Anſw. They are not therefore not Canonical only, becauſe they are not cited, but eſpecially becauſe they have not the characters of Divine Scripture. 2. Nahum and Zephany are implicitely quoted, when the Books of the Prophets are mentioned, Acts 7. 41. & 15. 15, 16. The Poets are not cited as Canonical, but the Apoſtle applied himſelf to his hearers, who did much eſteem their authority. Some have well concluded from Act. 10. 43. that the Apocrypha are not to be received as Canonical Scripture, becauſe they teſtifie not of Chriſt.

Duo genera cauſarum ſunt ob quas libri Apocryphi ſunt à Canone rejecti; unum externum, alterum internum. Externa cauſa ſunt, authoritas Eccleſiæ decernentis, tum ipſorum autorum qualitas; quippe qui ejuſmodi non fuerint ut fidem mererentur. Interna ſunt, quæ ab ipſorum librorum examine diligenti deſumuntur; primum ſtylus, deinde res ipſa, nempe vel fabuloſa vel impia. Chamier. de Canone, l. 7.

4. Thoſe Books which contain manifeſt untruths contrary to the Word of God, and the Books of holy Scripture, were not inſpired of God; for as God is true, ſo is his Word, Joh. 17. 17. ſweetly agreeing with it ſelf, and every part with other; theſe Books commend falſe things as true, and approve things evill as right. Judith, c. 9. v. 2. commends killing the Sichemites againſt Gen. 49. 6, 7. 2 Maccab. 14. 42. Razis is commended for killing himſelf, the fact is not only related but commended alſo in theſe words, nobly, manfully; and this commendation doth plainly ſhew, that the Author thereof was not inſpired [c] of God. When the Donatiſts out of this Book urged that it was lawfull for them to kill themſelves, as Razis did, Auguſtine [f] then was forced to acknowledge, That the Authority of this Book was uncertain and queſtionable, and proves it by the judgement of the Jewiſh Church, Chriſt, and the Chriſtians. Manifeſt Fables are told in ſome of them for true Hiſtories, as that of [g] Toby, Judith, Bel and the Dragon.

[c] He craves pardon of his Reader, which is not fitting for the holy Ghoſt.

[f] Aug. controv. 2. Epiſt. Gaudentii. c. 23.

[g] Chap. 6. 9. That the heart and liver of a Fiſh broiled upon coals, doth drive away the Devil from man or woman, that he ſhall trouble them no more, contrary to Matth. 17. 21. See Euſeb. l. 4. hiſt. c. 26. & l. 6. c. 25.

If any deſire a particular confutation of the ſeverall Books of the Apocrypha, I commend to his reading that learned Treatiſe of Dr Raynolds de libris Apocryphis, who hath ſo exactly handled this ſubject, that to write of it after him were to write Iliads after Homer, or to draw a line after Apelles.

[h] Cartw. in his Preface to the Confutation of the Rhemiſh Teſtament.

5. The moſt ancient Fathers, and Councels which lived the beſt and firſt five hundred years after [h] Chriſt, rejected the ſame Books which we do. Jerome on Matth. 23. ſaith concerning a Teſtimony cited out of the Apocrypha, Hoc quoniam niam ex Scriptura nihil habet authoritatis, eadem facilitate rejicitur, qua profertur. Becauſe this hath no authority out of Scripture, it may as eaſily be rejected as it is offered.

All that the Papiſts object for theſe Books in the general, is, That the third Councel at Carthage, the Florentine Councel, and that of Trent do approve the ſaid Books to be Canonical, as alſo Auguſtine and Innocentius.

To which it may be anſwered, 1. That the Councel of Carthage was but a Provincial Councel, and therefore it cannot bind the whole world. Moreover in that Councel there are divers things which the Papiſts will not endure; as in the 26 Canon, there is a Decree that no Biſhop ſhall be called chief or univerſal Biſhop, no not the Biſhop of Rome; how ſhould the Papiſts bind us with the authority of that Councel, with which they will not bind themſelves? 2. The Latine * Fathers judged theſe Books fit to be read for example of life and inſtruction of manners, but not for confirmation of faith, or eſtabliſhing any Doctrine. 3. Theſe Books are not Proto-canonical, truly and properly Canonical, inſpired by God, containing the immediate and unchangeable truth of God, ſanctified by him, and given to the Church to be a perfect rule of ſound doctrine and good life; but Deutero-canonical or rather Eccleſiaſtical, as they are ſtyled. In this ſenſe Auguſtine and Innocentius are to be taken, when they reckon theſe Books among the Canonical. 4. No Councel hath Authority to define what Books are Canonical, what not, ſeeing Books truely Divine receive Authority from God himſelf, and are to be eſteemed of undoubted truth, although all the world ſhould bark againſt them.

Eſt duplex Canon, fidei, morum: The Jews rejected the Apocrypha à Canone fidei, the Church admits it into Canonem morum. They are given us to be read, Non cum credendi neceſſitate, ſed cum judicandi libertate. Auſtin.

* Jerom and Auguſtine.

Theſe two Councels [i] are of too late ſtanding to oppoſe againſt the other ancient Councels, which reject theſe Books. The Councel of Trent was gathered and kept againſt all Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Right; neither was there any form of juſtice obſerved in it. 1. It was not kept in a lawfull place; for whereas it was intended againſt the Proteſtants, and the Germans were the parties accuſed, it ought to have been kept in Germany, according to the requeſt exhibited by the body of the States of Germany aſſembled at Noremberg; this equity was not obſerved, the parties accuſed being called into Italy. 2. In that Councel matters were concluded, and the ſentence paſſed, the adverſary not being heard ſpeak, nor ſo much as preſent; for the Proteſtants might not be admitted to hearing, neither could they obtain to propound their opinion in the Councel, much leſſe to avouch it by lawfull reaſoning, Sleidan. fol. 29. and yet were condemned, againſt Divine and Humane Law; for they both forbid the condemning of any before he have lawfull liberty granted him to plead for himſelf. 3. In that Councel the Accuſer and Judge were the ſame: for the Pope did accuſe the Proteſtants of Hereſie, he did convocate the Councel, he by his Delegates was Preſident and Moderator in it, and ſo together was Accuſer, Judge and Witneſs, whereas the reformation of the Pope was the thing in queſtion.

[i] Florentinum & Tridentinum concilium ne mihi objeceris, quibus ego nec teneri nec urgeri volo: antiquiora, ſaniora, ſanctiora deſidero. Whitak. cont. Stapl. Florentinum concilium habitum eſt ante annos 150. & Tridentinum ætate noſtra, cujus habendi ea ratio ac conſilium fuit, ut omnes Eccleſiæ Papiſticæ errores ſtabiliret. Erant hæc duo non legitima Chriſtianorum concilia, ſed Tyrannica Antichriſti conventicula ad oppugnandam Evangelii veritatem inſtituta. Whitak. controv. 1. q. 1. c. 4. de Scripturis. Reus extra provinciam producendus non eſt; ibi enim cauſa agenda ubi crimen admiſſum eſt. See the Review of the Councel of Trent, l. 1. c. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. and B. Jewels Epiſtle concerning the Council of Trent at the end of that Hiſtory, and Dr Featleys Caſe for the Spectacles, c. 1. p. 23, 24. Rex Chriſtianiſſimus negabat ſe habere hunc conſeſſum (viz. Conc. Triden) pro Oecumenica & legitimè congregata Synodo, ſed magis pro conventu privato. Thuanus Tom. 1. hiſt. l. 2. p. 601. Concilium tot acclamationibus ebuccinatum & ſub annulo Piſcatoris tam ſolenniter firmatum, non admiſerunt Galli, nec magni fecerunt doctiores è Pontificiis: aliqui refutarunt, Kemnitius, Gentiletus, Calvinus ex parte; Hiſtoriam ejuſdem edidit Paulus Suavius Venetus, technas aperiit Gallus, à D. L. anglicè redditus. Orationes in eo habita uno proſtant volumine, è quibus pateat, non ad lites componendas, ſed ad Chriſtianis imponendum conductos & ſeductos fuiſſe tot doctos à Pontificibus, in hoc ultimo ab illis probato Oecumenico. Dr Prid. Concil. Snyopſ. c. 5.

Laſtly, All Councels ought to be free; but in this, Proteſtants might not propound their cauſe, nor defend it [k], neither might any thing be propoſed but according to the mind of the Legates, or otherwiſe then they approved; no man had any voice in the Councel, but ſuch as were ſworn to the Pope, nothing was there determined which was not firſt concluded of at Rome by the Pope in the Colledge [k] Sleidan. l. 23.

This Councel was not Generall, divers Kings and Nations protested against it, viz. The King of England, and the French King, and would not send their Bishops and Embassadors to it. B. Carleton. See Dr Cosins his Scholasticall History of the Canon of the holy Scripture. c. 18. B. Bramhall in his Replication to the Bishop of Chalcedon, c. 9. §. 3. proves that the Councel of Trent was neither generall, free, nor lawfull.

edge of Cardinals, and sent from Rome to Trent; whereupon this Proverb arose, Spiritum Sanctum Roma per veram mitti Tridentum, The holy Ghost came to Trent packt up in a Cloke-bag.

We hope therefore since the Apocrypha are justly rejected out of the Canon, that hereafter they will neither have the honour to be bound with our Bibles, nor read in our Churches.

The Apocrypha was never received by the Church of the Israelites, before Christ his coming; nor of the Apostolick and Primitive Church, for more then three hundred years after, as both Eusebius out of Origen, and the Councel of Laodicea, Can. 59. confirmed afterward by the sixth general Councel of Constantinople sheweth for the Greek Church, and S^t Jerom for the Latine.

In Prolog. Galeato, l. 6. c. 18.

Chap. VI.

Of the Authentical Edition of the Scripture.

NOw we must enquire which is the Authentical Edition of holy Scriptures, it being necessary that this heavenly truth committed to writing, should be delivered in some form of words, and in some language which may be understood, Lawyers, from whom the use of the word Authentick [a] seemeth borrowed, do call those instruments and wtitings Authentick which have a certain and just authority in themselves.

A Book or writing is Authentick either by Divine or humane institution; those are by Divine Appointment and Institution authentical, which have from God sufficient and absolute Authority to command and approve themselves worthy credit and faith, in as much as God himself doth approve them; by humane Institution such writings are held authentical, which by the opinion and sentence of learned men in their several professions may be esteemed worthy credit and belief for themselves, and for the truth in them.

[a] Authenticum est quod ex se fidem facit, sua authoritate nititur, ab iis de quorum authoritate constat comprobatur. To be authentical is to have authority of it self.

Respectu materiæ in sacris illis libris contentæ, cælestis nimirum doctrina, versiones omnes fideliter & cum accuratione factæ dicit possunt authenticæ, non respectu formæ, seu verborum & phraseon quibus doctrina illa fuit primùm scripto tradita; hoc enim respectu soli textus originarii Græcus & Hebraus sunt revera Authentici, divini, authentici, quia illi soli sunt à Spiritu Dei immediatè Prophetis & Apostolis dictati. Capel. Crit. Sac. l. 6. c. 5. Superat is (Morinus) fator, communem Monachorum sortem, volvit, revolvit prima, media & ultima ætatis Theologos, Rabbinos, Historicos, sed omnia, quibus authentica Hebræa veteris, & Græca N. T. ex omnium seculorum scriptoribus, editio illustrari potuisset, callidè, ut felicius quod fovit monstrum proferret & probaret, suppressit. Noverat Justinum Martyrem, Eusebium, Origenem, Hieronymum, Augustinum, Ambrosium, Lyram, Acostam, Gratianum, Johannem Isaacum Proselytum Christianum, Ariam Montanum, Ludovicum Vivem, Salmeronem, Erasmum, Hieronymum ab Oleastro. Inquisitorem Lusitanum, Philippum Gamacharum, Nicolaum Serarium, Andream Vegam, Simeonem Muissum, Cæteros, viros tam in Orthodoxa, quàm Pontificia ecclesia celebres, non alio quàm ad fontes Græcos & Hebreos, ubi sit versionum discrepantia, nos rejicere. Hotting. Præfat. ad exercit. Antimor.

There is a great diversity of Editions of holy Scripture; all cannot be simply and perpetually Authentical, in, of, and for themselves, without reference unto another, no more then many draughts of the same Lease or Deed, or copy of one pardon can be. Some amongst many are authentick, when the others are transcribed;

Editio primaria & formaliter authentica, est, qua non solum materialiter secundum rem contentam, ejusque methodicam dispositionem Divina auctoritate pollet; sed etiam formaliter ratione Idiomatis, seu Linguæ. Essenii System. Theol. Disput. 5. De sacra Scriptura.

ſcribed; yea it cannot be that there ſhould be many; but although there may be many counterpanes of the deed, yet there is but one or two principal Deeds: ſo, amongſt this great variety of Editions one, or more ought to be as principal and authentical.

There is a Queſtion betwixt the Church of Rome, and the Reformed Churches about the Authentick Edition of Scriptures. They ſay, That the Edition of the Bible in Hebrew and Greek is not authentical, but rather the Vulgar Latine. We hold, that the Vulgar Latine is very corrupt and falſe; that the Hebrew [b] for the Old Teſtament, and the Greek for the New is the ſincere and authentical writing of God; therefore that all things are to be determined by them; and that the other verſions are ſo farre to be approved of, as they agree with theſe fountains.

[b] Hebraïs Græciſque textibus conceditur utilitas maxima, laus maxima, exemptio de malignis corruptelis abſolutiſſima: id vehementer approbo. Morinus in Epiſt. ad Diatriben.

The Tridentine Councel thus [c] decreeth, That in all Sermons, Readings, Diſputations, Controverſies, the Vulgar Latine Tranſlation ſhould be taken for authentick before the Hebrew or Greek, and that no man ſhould preſume upon any occaſion to reject it, or to appeal from it. When the Councel of Trent ſaith the Vulgar Latine is authentical, it compares it with other Latine Tranſlations, not with the Hebrew. Muis de Heb. Edit. Author. ac ver. Vide illum ibid.

[c] Latina vetus vulgata editio in publicis lectionibus, diſputationibus, prædicationibus, & expoſitionibus pro authentica habeatur, & nemo illam rejicere quovis pretextu audeat, aut præſumat. Concil. Trident. Seſſ. 4. decreto 2^do^. Prodigioſum certè decretum & cujus cordatiores Pontificios & tunc cum illud cuderetur puduerit, & etiamnum diſpudet, Amama Antibarb. Bibl.

Andradius (the chiefeſt of the Divines at the Councel of Trent) thinketh that the Councel of Trent did not mean either to condemne the Hebrew truth (as he calleth it) or to acquit the Latine Tranſlation from all errour, when they called it Authentical; but only that the Latine hath no ſuch error by which any peſtilent opinion in faith and manners may be gathered. This ſaith Rainolds againſt Hart, cap. 6. pag. 202. and Chamier. Tom. 1. lib. 12. cap. 2.

The Rhemiſts in their Preface to the New Teſtament, tranſlated by them, prolixly extoll this Latine Edition, and contend that it is not onely farre better than all the Latine verſions, but than the Greek it ſelf, which is the Prototype.

Before we come to defend our own or diſprove that opinion of the Papiſts, it is neceſſary firſt rightly and fully to ſtate the Queſtion, and to premiſe ſome things concerning the ſeverall Verſions and Tranſlations of the Scripture.

We deny not that part of Daniel and Ezra which was written in the Chaldee Dialect to be Authentical, becauſe we know the Lord was pleaſed that in that language as well as the Hebrew ſome of his Divine Truth ſhould be originally written.

1. For the more credit of the Stories, the Lord bringeth forth forraigne Nations and their Chronicles for witneſſes, leaſt any of them ſhould doubt of the truth thereof. 2. The Lord would have ſome part of thoſe Stories come to the knowledge of the Heathen, and it was requiſite that the Chaldeans ſhould know the ſinnes and impieties of that Nation, and the judgements that ſhould befall them, to teſtifie unto all the truth of God; therefore in generall the alteration of the terrene States and Kingdomes is ſhadowed forth and publiſhed in the Chaldee Tongue, that the Gentiles might take knowledge thereof; but the particular Hiſtories of the comming of the Meſſias, of his Office and Kingdome, and of the calamities and afflictions which ſhould befall the People of God, are ſet forth in the Hebrew Tongue, as more eſpecially concerning them. Likewiſe it pleaſed God for the better credit of the Story, Junius.

that

that the Hiſtory of thoſe things which were ſaid and done in Chaldea ſhould be written in the ſame Language wherein they were firſt ſpoken; and therefore the Epiſtles and Reſcripts of the Kings are delivered in the Chaldee ſpeech, as taken out of their publick Acts and [d] Records; and that the Hiſtory in Daniel ſet forth in the Chaldee ſpeech gaining him reſpect with the Chaldeans, might ſtirre up the Jews to receive Daniel as a Prophet of God whom the Heathens admired. If there be any footſteps of the Chaldee and Arabick in Job, as ſome learned ſay; we do not exclude them from authentick Authority; for we ſay the whole Old Teſtament for the moſt part in Hebrew, and few parcels in Chaldee, are the authentick Edition of the Old Teſtament.

Nec obſtat, quædam in Jeremia, Daniele & Ezra, idiomate Chaldaico conſignata eſſe; ea enim lingua ab Hebraâ inflexione ſaltem differt, & ab eadem tanquam matre naſcitur, ac demum poſt captivitatem Babylonicam Judæis cœpit eſſe familiaris. Waltherus in officina Biblica. Sciendum quippe eſt Danielem maxime, & Ezram Hebraicis quidem literis, ſed Chaldaico ſermone conſcriptos, & unam Hieremiæ pericopen; Job quoque cum Arabica lingua pluriman habere ſocietatem. Hieron. Præfat. in Dan. Qui omnes ſcripſerunt Hebraicè, præter Danielem, qui ſecundo & deinceps quinque capitibus Chaldaicè exponit res in Chaldæa geſtas: præterque Ezram, qui capite quarto ac deinde uſque ad octavum decreta regum Perſicorum Chaldaicè refert. Una etiam ſententia verbis Chaldæis exprimitur Hierem. 10. cap. per mimeſin Aſſyriæ dialecti. Paucula quoque dictiones in Job ponuntur Syris & Arabibus concedendæ. Bibliander de optimo genere explicandi Hebraica. Sylloge Capitum & Textuum Chaldæorum in ſacris Bibliis, Daniel, cap. 2. à verſu 4. ad fin. capite 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. integra, Ezra cap. 4. à v. 8. ad fin. cap. 5. integrum. cap. 6. ad v. 19. cap. 7. à v. 12. ad v. 27. Jerem. cap. 10. v. 1. Gen. 31. 47, 41, 43. Job & alibi Jameſii Iſagoge In ling. Chald

[d] Jun. in Dan. 7. & prolog. in Dan.

The Greek Copies of the New Teſtament are alſo from God immediately, the very dialect wherein thoſe Prototypes were; which the Pens of the Evangeliſts and Apoſtles did write. For the Goſpel of Matthew, and the Epiſtle to the Hebrews being written in Hebrew, and Mark in Latine, we have refuted that opinion already; the Greek Edition of thoſe three Books, as well as of all the other of the New Teſtament is Authentical.

The Verſions of the Scripture are either the Chaldee and Greek of the Old Teſtament, the Syriack and Arabick of the New; the Latine, Italian, French and Engliſh of both Teſtaments. See of the French verſion, Ravanellus his Bibleotheca Sacra, p. 558. B.

By the benefit of tranſlation, In linguas vernaculas (ſaith Hottinger, Diſſertat. De Tranſlationibus Bibliorum,) the ſound of the Word of God came unto the ears of the Scythians, and Barbarians, that it may be truly ſaid of them, the ſound of them went forth into all the earth.

[e] Singulæ verſiones habent ſuas laudes, ſuas labes. Amama Antibarb. Bibl. Verſiones vocantur non tantum ex una lingua in aliam, verum etiam ex una dialecto in aliam, tranſlationes. Hornii Deſeſ. Diſſertat. De Ætate mundi

All the Verſions [e] of the ſacred Scripture have ſo farre Divine Authority as they agree with the originall tongue; and to ſay that any Tranſlation is pure and uncorrupt, and that the very fountains are muddy, is both a fooliſh and impious blaſphemy. The tongue and dialect is but an accident, and as it were an argument of the Divine truth, which remains one and the ſame in all Idioms; therefore the faith of the unlearned depends on God, not on men; although the Tranſlations, by benefit of which they are brought to believe, be perfected by the labour of men. Gods providence and care of the Church is ſuch that he would never let it be long deſtitute of a fit Tranſlation [f], which being publiſht by learned men, and approved of by the Church, however it failed in ſome things, yet following the truth conſtantly in the more principal and neceſſary things, might be ſufficient to all for wholſome inſtruction.

Defenſ. 5. Non ſunt contemnenda verſiones Chaldaica, Græca, Latina, non veteres, non novæ Pagnini, Vatabli Clari & aliorum, ſuus cuique deferendus honor. Jac. Capel. Hiſt. Sac. & exot. l. 1. Verbum Dei tranſlatum in alias linguas non habet quidem eandem authoritatem originariam, habet tamen authoritatem derivatam. Maccovii Diſtinctiones, c. 1. Verſionum tum inter ſe tum cum textu primævo collatio, earum præſertim quæ apud priſcam eccleſiam obtinuerunt, & in linguas Orientales tradutæ erant, optima ſunt media, tum ratione cognationis cum linguis Orientalibus, tum uſus & auctoritatis per eccleſiam, quibus verus in obſcuris locis ſenſus elici & lectio, genuina in dubiis vel depravatis reſtitui poſſit. D. Waltoni Præfat. In Biblia Polyglotta. Multo purior (inquit ipſe Hieronymus) manat fontis unda, quam fluit rivuli aqua. See Mr Vines on 2 Pet. 2. 1. p. 67, 68. [f] The accurate inſpection of the Hebrew Bible teacheth which Tranſlation hath moſt exactly expreſt the meaning of the holy Ghoſt.

The

The Verſions differ often much among themſelves; Arias Montanus differs much from Pagnin a learned Tranſlator, and Vatablus from both; from all theſe Luther, and from him again the Vulgar. Oſiander. The L X X varie.

The Chaldee Edition of the Old Teſtament is not a Tranſlation done word for word, but a Paraphraſe, and ſo called; the Chaldee Paraphraſe, by the Jews Targum, though ſome conceive that there is ſome kind of diſtinction (to ſpeak accurately) between the Chaldee Paraphraſe and Targum. Targum being a general word, ſignifying an Interpretation or Paraphraſe, though it uſually now by an excellency denoteth the Chaldee Paraphraſe. There were three Authours of it (as it is reported,) according to the three-fold difference of the Hebrew Books.

[a] Targum Chaldaicè ſignificat Interpretationem, item Paraphraſin, quando non tam verba quam ſenſus ex alia lingua redditur.

Significatio hujus vocis eſt generalis, ad omnes linguas ſe extendens, ſed tamen uſus jam obtinuit, ut per Targum κατ' ἐξοχὴν intelligatur ſolum Chaldaica Bibliorum Vet. Teſtamenti tranſlatio. Helvicus de Chald. Pharaph. Nomine Targum non ſignificatur ſemper Chaldæus Paraphraſtes, verum eo vocabulo Interpretem in genere notant. Raimoldus de libris Apocryphis tomo 1. cap. 82. Et Capel. Critic. Sac. l. 5. c. 1. Iſta Targum 1. Tranſlatio, eſt tanta auctoritatis apud Judæos quod nefandiſſimum eſt eis ei contradicere. Porcheti victoria adverſus Hebræos, parte 1. c. 2. Abrahamus princeps Patriarcharum, natione Chaldæus, omni diſciplinarum genere, præſertim verò Mathematicarum, non tantum excelluit, ſed eas quoque Ægyptios in lingua Chaldæa docuit. Daniel & Eſdras magnam partem Chaldaicè conſcripti erant. Waſerus Præfat. ad Grammaticam Syram. Vide plura ibid. Lingua Chaldaica Hebreæ omnium vicinißima, Teſte Mercero & Waſero. Poteſt Targum ſpectari 3. pliciter. Primo, Reſpectu librorum, quos interpretatur & vertit. Et ſic eſt triplex, ſcilicet Pentateuchi, Prophetarum, & Hagiographorum. Secundo, Reſpectu ſtyli, quo ſcriptus eſt, ſicque duplex Targum, Babylonius, & Hieroſolymitanus. Tertio, Reſpectu authorum ipſius, & ſic eſt triplex, ſcilicet, Targum, Onkeli, Targum Jonathæ, & Rabbi Joſeph cæci. Serarij Prolegom. Bibl. c. 14. Quæſt. 3. Vide ibid. Quæſt. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. & Rabbini l. 1. c. 16.

Rabbi Achilam or Aquila, who is vulgarly called Onkelos upon the five Books of Moſes; Rabbi Jonathan the ſon of Uziel upon the former and later Prophets; Rabbi Joſeph cæcus (or as ſome will, a certain Anonymus) upon ſome of the Hagiographa. Thoſe Paraphraſes of Onkelos and Jonathan are the ancienter and certioris fidei; that upon the Hagiographa is far later and leſs certain, it being doubtfull, both who was the author, and in what age it was made. The common opinion concerning Onkelos and Jonathan is, that Jonathan wrote a little before Chriſt, the other a little after him. Capellus lib. 1. de punctorum Hebraicorum antiquitate cap. 1. Helvicus de Chaldaicis Paraphraſibus cap. 2. Vide Paulii Fagii Prefat. in Paraphraſt. Chald. & Buxtorf. de punctorum Antiquitate & origine, parte 1. c. 10. Rabbi Joſeph cæcus (ſaith Galatinus de Arcan Cathol. verit. lib. 8. cap. 17.) flouriſhed almoſt 340 years after Chriſt ſuffered. Jonathan (ſaith Broughton) was no leſſe ancient than the holy Apoſtles.

Vide Buxtorf. de Abbreviat. Heb. p. 106, 107.

Vide Schickardi Bechinath Happeruſchim Diſputat. 2. Hotting. (de Tranſl. Bibl. in ling. vernac.) ſaith that the Chald. Para. began in the Babyloniſh captivity, when the uſe of the Chaldee tongue was more frequent. Ea lis adhuc ſub judice hæret, Ebraane an Chaldæa ſit reliquarum mater; & certè Chaldæi pro ſua non levibus militant argumentis. Erepnius. Obſerva quæſo pie & Chriſtiane lector, à Paraphraſte noſtro expreſſe hic poni nomen Meſſiæ, qui per vocem Hebraicam Schilo intelligitur, quod certè multum facit pro tutanda confirmandaque fide ac religione noſtra Chriſtiana, contra impudentes quoſdam Judæos, qui impiè contendunt hunc locum non eſſe de Meſſiah ſeu Chriſto intelligendum. Idcoque variis ſtultis, frivolis, tortis & impiis expoſitionibus conantur nobis eum obſcurare. Fagius Annotat. in Paraphraſ Chald. in Pentateuch. Vide plura ibid.

These Paraphraſes among the Jews (ſaith Helvicus) ſunt autoritatis planè æqualis ipſi Scripturæ Hebraicæ, neque fas habent illis contradicere. Quorum Paraphraſin nemo doctus non ſuſpicit, ſaith Capellus of Onkelos and Jonathan.

The Jews write that Jonathan received his Doctrine of the Targum from Zachary, Haggai and Malachy the Prophets: Onkelos his from Rabbi Elieſer and Rabbi Joſhua, which alſo themſelves received from the Prophets. They write that Jonathan interpreting the Scripture, all Paleſtina was ſhaken with an Earthquake, and a voice heard from heaven; Quis eſt iſte, qui filiis hominum Arcana mea revelat? Alſo that if by chance a fly or any other flying thing ſhould have fallen upon him or his paper, whilſt he was writing this work, they would preſently have been burnt from heaven without hurting him or the paper.

The uſe of theſe Paraphraſes is very great.

1. To illuſtrate the Hebrew Text by circumſtances or a more full explication of it.

2. To confirm the integrity of the Hebrew Text, Gen. 3. 15.

3. In controversies against the Jews, In controversiis Judaicis præcipuum robur obtinent *, saith Helvicus. The Chaldee Paraphrasts Gen. 49. 10. both of them most excellently expound the place, which themselves understood not: being like therein to Virgils Bees, which make Honey for others, and not themselves. First, Onkelos interpreteth it in this manner: A Magistrate exercising authority of the house of Judah, shall not depart, nor a Scribe of his Posterity for ever, till Christ come, to whom the Kingdom pertaineth, and him shall the people obey. The other called the Interpreter of Jerusalem, thus: Kings of the house of Judah shall not fail, neither skillfull Law-teachers of his posterity, unto the time wherein the King Christ shall come: unto whom the Kingdom pertaineth, and all the Kingdoms of the Earth shall be subdued unto him. If Christ came when authority was gone, and authority went away at Jerusalems fall, needs must one coming of Christ be referred to the overthrow of that City. The Talmudici and later Rabbins, Rabbi Sal. Jarchi. Rabbi Dav. Kimchi, expound it of the Messiah, as Buxtorf shews.

There are many profitable explications in that Paraphrase on the Pentateuch *, but it is too late to be of authentick Authority; and the other Chaldee Paraphrases (that excepted) are besprinkled with Jewish Fables and * Thalmudique toys. The third Paraphrase hath not expounded all the Hagiographall books: For there was never seen any Targum upon Chronicles, nor Daniel, nor Ezra; peradventure because much of the Chronicles was expounded in the books of the Kings, and a great part of Daniel and Ezra were written in Chaldee, that there was no need of a new Paraphrase.

* Illud solum considera, terrori Judæis eos Christianos esse, qui in Thargum & Rabbinis mediocriter versati sunt; non enim ignorant, pleraque hodierni Judaismi fulcra in iis vehementissimè concuti, imò convelli. Quo magis doleo hæc utilissima studia adeo iis in locis jacere, ubi Judæi catervatim habitant. Animum consilium de studio Ebraico bene instituendo.

1 Livelie in his Chronology of the Persian Monarchy. Chaldaica lingua in Vet. Test. perinde ut & Syra in Novo, purior longè est, quàm ea quibus Paraphrases Chaldaicæ conscriptæ sunt. Walcherus. Talmud propter ejus magnitudinem nunquam legit Hieronymus, sicut nec Targum ob Syræ linguæ imperitiam. Wakfeld. orat de laudibus & utilitate trium linguarum Arab. Chald. & Heb. The Rabbins generally however they interpret Shilob, confesse it notes the Messiah. Joh. Isaac, l. 2. contra Lindanum. * Targum, hoc est Paraphrasis Onkeli Chaldaica, in quinque libros Mosis ex Chaldæo à Paulo Fagio versa; quibus adjecit breves doctasque annotationes. Melchior Adamus in vita Fagii. * Rainoldus de lib. Apoc. Helvicus.

Onkelos his Paraphrase seldom merits that name, being indeed commonly nothing but a rigid version. D. Cudworths Discourse concerning the notion of the Lords Supper, Chap. 3.

The third Targum of the Pentateuch is named Hierosolymitanum, either from the City whence it came, or from the Tongue in which it was written, Schickardi Bechinath. Happerus schim. Disput. 2.

The Greek Translation of the Old Testament.

There is a most ancient rare Parchment [1] MS. copy of the Bible in Greek in the late Kings Library at S[t] James's, sent to his Majesty that then was by Cyrillus then Patriarch of Alexandria. The Postscripts of the second Epistle to Timothy, and that to Titus in that Manuscript agree in the main with the Syriack Testament.

The Second to Timothy written from Laodicea to Titus, written from Nicopolis.

[1] Extat in Bibliotheca Serenissimi & Potentissimi Regis magnæ Britanniæ, alia ab ea quam habemus translatio Græca V. T. propediem edenda uti speramus. Voet. Biblioth. Theol. lib. 2. That Copy of the Septuagint in the late Kings Library at S[t] James's I confesse to have wherewithall to bear out some repute of antiquity, especially if it should be, as the Patriarch, who sent it over, pretended, written by the hand of Tecla, a Disciple of S[t] Pauls. Gregory on Luk. 3.36.

There be divers [m] Greek Translations of the Old Testament; that of all the rest is the most famous and Ancient, of which the Seventy-two Interpreters in Ægypt (obeying King Ptolomeus Philadelphus his Commandment) were the Authors. It was made not a whole hundred years after the death of the Authour of Nehemiah, and three hundred years also before Christ. They are said to be 72 Elders chosen out of every Tribe; they are commonly called Seventy, although they were Seventy two, as Bellarmine sheweth, where he speaks of their Edition, as the Centumviri, which were an hundred and five. Ptolomeus Philadelphus the most learned of all the Ptolomies, had made a Library at Alexandria which he stored with many thousands of books, and understanding that the Divine Books of the Prophets full of all good doctrine, were kept amongst the Jews, written in their Tongue, by the motion of Demetrius Phalereus the best Grammarian of that age, whom Ptolomy had appointed the Library-Keeper, he requested of Eleazar the High-Priest of the Jews those Books and Interpreters: then Seventy two Elders of all the Tribes of Israel were sent unto him. All the Latine Translations of the Bible (except that of Jerom) were made from it. The Evangelists [n] followed the version of the Seventy in many things, which was in the hands of many, and of great Authority amongst the Hellenists, when they might do it without much swerving from the sense of the Prophets, both to shew their Liberty; and that in things indifferent and of little consequence, they would not give occasion of cavil to the wicked, nor of scandal to the weak. Rainold. in lib. Apoc.

[m] Græca multæ fuerunt versiones Scripturarum à variis authoribus edita. Illa autem est omnium sine controversia longè nobilissima ac celeberrima, cujus Septuaginta duo interpretes in Ægypto, Ptolomæi Philadelphi pia voluntati morem gerentes, authores extiterunt. Whitakerus de Scriptura. See D[r] Browns Enquiries l. 6. c. 1. & Capel. Critic. Sac. l. 4. c. 6.

was

[n] Non sequitur; Apostoli usi sunt ea editione, Ergo est authentica, sive divina. Nam Paulus usus est etiam prophanorum librorum testimoniis, qui tamen propterea non sunt Divini. Caterum quia scripserunt Graecè Apostoli, facilè usi sunt ea editione, quæ tum sola Graecis erat cognita. Chamier. Non ideo Apostoli in citationibus suis vulgatam LXX. translationem Graecam sequuti sunt, quod eam existimarent esse divinam, & à Dei Spiritu immediatè profectam, sed quòd eam ad fidei & morum Doctrinam quod attinet, sinceram satis esse nossent, quodque ea esset maximæ apud Judæos auctoritatis, quam repudiare nulla specie, nulloque colore aut praetextu possent, utpote à viris Judaeis, trecentis fermè ante Christum natum annis, magna cum pompa & aparatu, procurante summo Judæorum Pontifice adornatam. Capel. Critic. Sac. l. 4. c. 18. Vide Brochm. System. Theol. Artic. 2. De Sac. Script. c. 2. Quæst. 11. Quanta sit versionis LXX interpretum auctoritas.

The LXX Interpreters do manifestly swerve from the Hebrew truth in reckoning of years, for *Gen.*5. they say that Methuselah was more then 167 years old, when he begat Lamech; so that of necessity, they make him live fourteen years after the floud, which is false: for then were nine souls saved contrary to *Gen.*7. Vide Capel. *Critic. Sac. l.*4. *c.*14.

Versio 70. in multis discrepat à fonte Hebraeo praesertim in Psalmis. Gerhardus. 2 Pet. 2. 5.

Illustrissimus Scaliger, ut ingeniosus fuit artifex, sic aptissimè phrasin versionis Graecæ Hellenisticam vocandam primus fuit ratus. Insecuti mox fuerunt alii, qui ambabus, ut aiunt, manibus, vocem hanc amplectebantur. Hotting. Thes. Philolog. Sect. 3. Quæst. 14. Vide plura ibid.

The Syriack Translation of the New Testament [o] comes next to be considered: it is ancient, yet it is not certain who was the Authour thereof, nor in what time it was made; though Chamier thinks a little after Christs time: the great eleganey and purity of speech, doth shew that it is ancient. It is probable that it was made about the beginning of the Christian Church, because the second of Peter, with the second and third of John, Jude, the Revelation, are left out, which though they were written by inspiration, yet they were questioned by Ecclesiastical Writers, because they were omitted by the Syriack Translator.

[o] Autorem versionis malumus ignorare, quam incertum affirmare. Walth. in offic. Biblica. Syriaca lingua quasi proles quadam est Hebraica & Chaldaica lingua. Hebraei siquidem, qui usque ad captivitatem Babylonicam Hebraicè solum, i. e. lingua sua loqui consueverant, cum abducti essent in Babylonem, caperunt oblivisci linguam propriam, & addiscere alienam, i. e. Chaldaicam, quia tamen non perfectè eam pronunciare poterant, & semper aliquid ex Hebraica retinebant, factum est, ut lingua quædam tertia nasceretur, Syriaca dicta, à regione. Bellarminus. Modum in scribendo à dextra versus sinistram introrsum omnes Populi orientales sequuntur exceptis Æthiopibus, qui à sinistra dextram versus scribunt: Walcherus.

It is very profitable for the understanding of the Greek Testament. It well interprets those Greek words, *Matth.*6.10. ἄρτον ἐπιούσιον per panem indigentiæ nostræ, and that word μαραναθὰ, 1 *Cor.*16.22. The Syriack hath two words, Maran Atha, which signifie, our Lord cometh. The Papists endeavour to establish their Administration of the Lords Supper under one kinde from the word φαγεῖν, 1 Cor. 11.20. but that word is generally used for the whole action of the Sacrament, viz. the distribution of the Bread and Wine. The Syriack so renders it, Comedentes vos & bibentes. See M. Thorndikes 33. Chap. of his Principles of Chriſtian Truth. Andreas Maſius in his Syriack Grammar ſaith, That the Syrians do not write Siniſtrorſum toward the left hand, as the Hebrews, nor Dextrorſum toward the right hand, as the Greeks and Latines, but Deorſum downward; which manner of writing (it is probable) was then obſerved by Chriſt, Joh. 8. 6. [p] becauſe at that time the Iews uſed the Syriack tongue.

[p] Piſcator. Schol. in loc. & Walther. in officina Biblica. Novi Teſtamenti Syram editionem magni faciunt omnes docti. Chamier. Lingua Syriaca ſervatoris noſtri ore ſanctificata eſt, cui, dum in terris verſaretur, vernacula fuit atque domeſtica. Waſer. Præfat. ad Grammaticam Syram. Lingua Syra hodiè Antiochena & Maronitica dicitur, à locis, ubi ea creberrimi inter incolas eſt uſus. Eſt enim hac ex Hebræa & Chaldæa conflata, cœpitq; circa Cyri, Perſarum Monarchæ tempora, aut non ita multo poſt, regnante videlicet Dario Hiſtaſpis F. Poſt ſervatoris ætatem primo ſtatim naſcentis Chriſtianiſmi ſæculo, vel ab Apoſtolis ipſis, vel à Diſcipulis eorum, Paraphraſis Syra in Novum Teſtamentum erat conſcripta. Cujus præſtantiſſimæ Paraphraſeos antiquitatem cum incorrupta ſermonis elegantia, tum defectus Epiſtolæ Petri II, Johannis II, & III, Sancti Judæ, Apocalypſeos, & accuſationis adulteræ apud Johannem, quæ ipſa apud Chryſoſtomum quoque, Theophylactum & Nonnum deſideratur, ſatis ſuperque confirmant. Waſer. ubi ſupra. Antiquiſſimum illud monumentum, nec unquam ſatis laudatum, verſio Syriaca. Fuller. Miſcel. Sac. l. 3. c. 16. Vide Fuller. Miſcel. Sac l. 3. c. 20. Hæc lingua Theologis eſt ſummè neceſſaria, quia Hebraicæ vicina eſt, & Apoſtoli non paucas locutiones ex illa mutuantur: ut Chaldaicas veteris & Syriacas utriuſque Teſtamenti paraphraſes taceam; quæ vetuſtæ ſunt & magni uſus, ut quotidie experimur. Syriaca lingua hodie nullibi eſt vernacula, præterquam, in paucis vicis circa Libanum. Bocharti Geograph. Sac. l. 1. c. 15.

The New Teſtament in Syriack is in Latine of Troſtius his Edition; the Revelation was De Dieu's Edition; the latter Epiſtle of Peter, and two Epiſtles of John, and that of Jude, are Mr Pococks Edition.

It is manifeſt that Chriſt and his Apoſtles ſpake in the Syriack tongue, ſince Talitha Kumi; Eloi, Eloi, Lammaſabachthani; Bethesda, Gabbatha, Golgotha, Akeldama, are meer Syriack; yet the Evangeliſts often call it Hebrew, becauſe it was the language of the Hebrews, Joh. 5. 2. and 19. 13, 16. Act. 21. 40. and 22 2. and 26. 14.

The Arabick Tranſlation.

The Arabick Teſtament was ſet out by Erpenius. Erpenius ſaith, the Arabick is ancienter than the Syriack. Walther. in officina Biblica.

It is uncertain by whom it was made, or when; ſure it is, they had the Scriptures in their own Tongue; and it were to be wiſhed that that Tongue were more common, and better underſtood; that Religion might be ſpread amongſt the Saracens, which for the moſt part ſpeak that Language.

In the year 1592. the New Teſtament in Arabick, was firſt divulged at Rome.

The Arabick Tongue (ſaith Walter) is thought to be a branch of the Chaldee and Syriack proceeding from both, but that it exceeds them in ſix letters, there being eight and twenty in the Arabick Tongue. It was in uſe anciently with the Iſhmaelites and Hagarens, who drew their original from Abraham, and afterward would rather be called Saracens from Sarah. It is now uſed thorow all Aſia and Africa. Mahumed who deſcended from the Iſhmaelitiſh Nation, wrote his wicked and blaſphemous Alcoran in this Tongue.

[q] Orat. 1. de ling. Arab. dignitate. De lingua Arabica agitur, Act. 2. 11. Arabiſmis referti ſunt Scripturæ libri Poetici, Jobi maximè, ut pridem obſervavit Hieronymus. Bochartus Geogr. Sac. par. 1. l. 1. c. 15. Ex eâdem linguâ ſcientiis omnibus, medicinæ præſertim & Geographiæ & Matheſi multum lucis accederet, ſi ederentur libri Arabici qui paſſim in tota oriente habentur Manuſcripti. Id. ibid.

Erpenius [q] (who was excellently skill'd in this Tongue) ſaith, it is more neceſſary and excellent than either the Syriack, Æthiopick, Perſian, or Turkiſh Language; he extols it for its Antiquity, Largeneſſe, Elegancy and Profit.

The Arabians (ſaith he) have many more accurate for Geography than Ptolomy, Avicenna and other famous Phyſicians have written in this Tongue. He ſaith thirty two thouſand of Arabick Books were to be had in one Library in Mauritania.

Joſeph Scaliger, Raphelengius, Iſaac Caſaubone, Emmanuel Tremellius, and Franciſcus Junius, all learned men of ſpeciall note, much eſteemed this tongue, and promoted the ſtudy of it, as their Writings ſhew. Mercer, who was moſt verſed in the Hebrew and Chaldee tongues, in his old-age, a little before he dyed, thought to have travelled into the eaſt, only out of a deſire to learn the Arabick tongue.

The

The Latine translations were so many, that Augustine[s] saith, they could not be numbred. Erpenius orat. prima & secunda de Ling. Arab. dignitate. Dr Cudworth cals Mr Selden the glory of our Nation for oriental learning.

[s] Qui ex Hebræa lingua Scripturas in Græcam verterunt numerari possunt. Latini autem nullo modo. August. de doctrina Christianâ. l. 2. c. 11.

That new version of Tremellius and Junius both, is best for the old Testament, and that of Erasmus and Beza for the New Testament. See in Chamiers first Tome, l. 12. c. 1. his censure of all three.

There is a great use also of the Interlineary version put forth by Arias Montanus, for the finding out the sense and genuine signification of all the Hebrew and Greek words.

Amongst many and divers Latine Translations, there was one more common than the rest of the Old and New Testament, usually called the vulgar, because it was of vulgar use, and received by many. Who was the Authour of this Edition, it is not manifest; Some say it was more ancient than that of Jerome. Jerome wrote pure Latine, being skillfull in the Latine tongue; but the vulgar Translation is barbarous in many places; therefore Pagnine, [t] Maldonate, Estius, Sixtus Senensis, Burgensis, Valla, Lindan, deny it to be Jeromes; that was translated from the Hebrew by the Greek, and not by Jerome, but by some uncertain and unknown Authour, saith Whitaker.

[t] Maldon. ad Luc. 16. 1. & Estius ad 1 Cor. 5. 6. & ad Ephes. 1. 10.

[u] Hieronymus Latinitatis auctor est non contemnendus, qui in omnibus scriptis suis sermone utitur grammaticæ puro. Quam barbarè contra sit versio vulg. res ipsa loquitur, ut mirum sit Jesuitas elegantiæ Latinæ aliis studiosissimos, vulgatam illam translationem vel hoc nomine non improbasse. Waltherus in officina Biblica. Vide Brochm. System. Theol. Artic. 2. De sac. Script. c. 2. Quæst. 12.

Bootius in the Index of his sacred Animadversions, ascribes it to Jerome.

Vide Whitakerum de Scripturis Quæst. secund. controversiæ. Cap. sexto. & Waltheri officinam Biblicam.

The Geneva Translation for the French, and our last translation for the English, and Deodate for the Italian are the best, which is now set out in English, though Dr Casaubon wisheth more care had been taken both in the version and printing. Orig. Cause of Temp. Evils, p. 28. Deodatus noster in eximia Bibliorum Italicorum versione, saith Spanhemius.

Dr Gell in his Preface to his Essay, (though he dislike many things in our last English Translation) yet prefers it before that new one of the low Dutch so highly extolled.

The question betwixt us and the Papists, now cometh to be considered, which of these Editions is authentical, that is, which of it self hath credit and authority, being sufficient of it self to prove and commend it self, without the help of any other Edition, because it is the first exemplar or Copy of divine truth delivered from God by the Prophets and Apostles. This in respect of the Old Testament, is the Hebrew, and in some Chapters of Daniel and Ezra the Chaldee, and in respect of the New Testament is the Greek; all other Editions are but of humane authority.

This proposition true in it self, is [illegible] divers ways opposed by the Papists, whose opinions may be set down in three propositions:

1. That the Hebrew and Greek Text are corrupt, and therefore not [n] Authentical, for the fountain is to be preferred before the streams, if it come unto our hands uncorruptly. The book of Moses [x] which by Gods Commandment was preserved in the Ark, and that very Gospel written by Matthew: Those autographs (saith Morinus) are certainly the rule of all versions, [n] Clarissimus vir Joh. Diodati in aureis suis Annotationibus, quas versioni suæ Italicæ (operi profecto nunquam satis laudando) Bibliorum annexuit. Ved. Rationale. Theol. l. 2. c. 6. [n] Bellarm. l. 2. de verbo Dei c. 2. and Rhemists Preface before the New Testament. [x] Fateor equidem & à me dissentiet opinor, nemo, Apostolorum & Prophetarum autographa regulam esse & amussim, ad quam versiones omnes exigenda sint. Morinus exercit. Bibl. l. 1. exercit. 1. c. 1.

The second proposition is, That the 70 Translators were not so much Translators as Prophets, who wrote by divine inspiration; so that their translation had been been authentique, if it had come to our hands and had not perished.

The third is, That the vulgar Translation is of authentique authority, and ought so to be received; neither may any man presume to reject it upon any pretence. They say it hanged between the Hebrew and Greek, as Christ did between the two Theeves.

To these three Propositions, we oppose three which are most true, and shall prevail.

y Scriptura Hebraa in V. T. & Græca in N. T. ab Hieronymo rectè vocantur fontes veritatis.

1. The Hebrew of the Old Testament y, and the Greek of the New, is the authentique Edition, and the pure fountain of divine truth.

2. The 70 were not Prophets, but Translators.

3. The vulgar translations neither is authentique nor perfect, neither ought it in any case so to be esteemed.

Reasons proving that the Hebrew of the Old Testament, and the Greek of the New, are authentical and pure.

To prove our first proposition, these Arguments may be brought.

z In Ecclesia Christiana nulla unquam fuit Editio authentica, excepta Hebraica veteris, & Græca Novi Testamenti. Nam id opinor in ecclesia catholica dicendum est authenticum, quod apud omnes authoritatem habet, Chamierus.

4. The Hebrew of the Old, and Greek z of the New Testament, are the very Scriptures which came immediately from God; the very particular and individuall writings, both for Character and stile of speech, yea, the dialect as well as the matter of them is immediatly by inspiration from above, and written by holy men, as they were moved by the holy spirit; what Edition therefore is worthy to be compared to this?

When we speak of the original and authentique Text of the holy Scripture, that is not to be so understood as if we meant it of the Autographs written by the hand of Moses, or the other Prophets or Apostles, but only of the original or the primogenial Text in that tongue, out of which divers versions a were derived according to the variety of tongues.

a Rivetus in Catholico orthodoxo. Scriptura dupliciter intelligitur; vel enim significat ipsam literarum picturam & sic accipitur Exod. 32. 16. vel res ipsas, quæ significantur per eas voces ut Mat. 22. 25. Æque Biblia Sacra nuncupantur codices illi, qui passim circumferuntur Latinè, Gallicè, Chaldaicè, Syriacè; ac qui Hebraicè & Græcè, etsi longè alii sint literarum ductus & syllabarum compositiones. Chamierus de Canone l. 9. Vide Broshmand. Systema Theol. de Sac. Script. c. 2. Quæst. 7. An textus Hebraus librorum Veteris Testamenti adeò corruptus sit, ut in controversiis religionis tutò consuli non possit. Vide Prolegomena 7. Sect. 15, 16. ad Biblia Polyglotta.

2. For a long time before the Birth of Christ, the Hebrew was not onely the alone Authentique Copy, but the only Edition which was extant in the world. In the dayes of Moses, the Kings of Israel and the Prophets before the Captivity, what Edition of Scripture had the Church but the Hebrew? what did the Jews read in their Synagogues, and in their Solemn meetings, but only this Hebrew Edition?

After the time of Christ, for the space of 600 years, the Hebrew Edition of the Old Testament, and the Greek of the New, were held Authentique, and no other.

3. If any thing be erroneous, doubtful, [illegible]ise emphatical or improper, or if in the Articles of Religion any doubt or difficulty arise, which cannot be decided out of Translations, we must necessarily then have recourse to the Hebrew of the old, and the Greek of the New Testament, as Augustine b witnesseth, and Jerome in lib. contra Helvidium.

b De doctrina Christiana l. 2. c. 11. Si translatio ab originali differat, ei linguæ potius credendum est unde in aliam per interpretationem facta est translatio. Augustinus l. 15. de Civitat Dei c. 3.

Bellarmine grants, that sometimes we must have recourse to the Hebrew and Greek fountains, 1. When in the Latine Edition there be any errors of the Scribe. 2. When there are divers readings. 3. When there is any thing doubtful in the words or sentence. 4. To understand the force and Energy of the word, because all things are more emphatical in the Original.

4. If the authority of the authenticall Copies in Hebrew, Chaldee and Greek, fall, then there is no pure Scripture in the Church of God, there is no High Court of Appeal where controversies c (rising upon the diversity of translations, or otherwiſe) may be ended. The exhortation of having recourſe unto the Law, and to the Prophets, and of our Saviour Chriſt asking how it is written? and how readeſt thou? is now either of none effect, or not ſufficient.

c Hieronymus & cæteri ei Augustinum difficultatibus obortis, jubent in versionibus nos recurrere ad ipsos fontes. Erpenius.

wise)

The Papiſts differ among themſelves in this controverſie [d] about the corruption of the originals. Some of them ſay, That the Hebrew of the Old, and the Greek of the New Teſtament, is not generally corrupted, and yet is not ſo very pure a fountain, that whatſoever differs from it, is neceſſarily to be corrected by it.

[d] Bellarm. lib. 2. de verbo Dei cap. 7. Morinus exercit. Bibl. l. 1. exercit. 1, c. 2, 3, 4.

Others [e] ſay, That the Jews in hatred of the Chriſtian faith, depraved and much corrupted the Hebrew Text of the Old Teſtament. Which opinion as abſurd is rejected by Bellarmine, and is eaſily refuted.

[e] As Canus l. 2. c. 13. de locis Theologicis Lindanus. l. 1. c. 11. de optimo genere interpret.

I ſhall firſt lay down ſome reaſons againſt the groſſer opinion, and alſo that of Bellarmines, before I come to Anſwer the particular Objections of the Papiſts.

1. Jerome and Origen thus argue, If the Jews corrupted the Hebrew Text of the Old Teſtament, then they did this before the coming of Chriſt, or after it. Not before his coming, for there was no cauſe why the Jews ſhould do it, and our Saviour Chriſt would never have ſuffered ſo groſſe a crime to have paſſed without due reproof, when he was not ſilent for leſſer faults. On the contrary, our Saviour ſendeth us to the Scripture to learn the doctrine of ſalvation, Luke 16.29. and proveth his Doctrine out of Moſes and the Prophets. Not after Chriſts coming, then the Teſtimonies cited by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, would have been expunged by them, and the ſpeciall prophecies concerning Chriſt; but they are all extant. The Jews have, and yet ſtill do keep the holy Text [f] of Scripture moſt religiouſly and carefully, which may appear, ſince (Johannes Iſaac contra Lindan, l. 2. a learned Jew writeth) that there are above 200 Arguments againſt the Jews opinion, more evident and expreſſe in the Hebrew text of the Old Teſtament, than there be in the Latine tranſlation. From the dayes of our Saviour Chriſt until this time, the Jews keep the Scripture with ſo great reverence (ſaith the ſame Iſaac) ut jejunium indicunt ſi illa in terram ceciderit, they publiſh a faſt if it fall upon the ground. This teſtimony of Iſaac Levita is the more to be eſteemed, becauſe he was Lindans own Maſter, and profeſſor of the Hebrew tongue in the Univerſity of Colen, and hath written three Books in the defence of the Hebrew truth, againſt the cavils of his Scholar. Arias Montanus for his rare skill of tongues and Arts, was put in truſt by King Philip to ſet forth the Bible in Hebrew, Greek and Latine, wherein he hath reproved that Treatiſe of Lindan, and diſcloſed his folly. Muis (who hath written a Commentary on the Pſalms) a great Hebrician and learned Papiſt, hath written againſt Morinus about this ſubject. The moſt learned Papiſts, Senenſis, Bannes, Lorinus, Pagnine, Marinus Brixianus, Valla, Andradius, Bellarmine and Genebrard hold, That the Jews did not maliciouſly corrupt the Hebrew Text.

See Mr Thorndikes 33. ch. of his principles of Chriſtian truth.

[f] Notiſſimum eſt, nullam in re fuiſſe Judæos tam curioſos, pios & religioſè obſervantes, quam ut Biblia ſua casta, pura, inviolataq; conſervarent. Nam illud mandatum Dei, quod Deut. c. 4. v. 2. legitur, non ſolum de quinque Moyſis libris dictum eſſe interpretantur, ſed in univerſum de omnibus libris & verbis quæ per Spiritum San- ctum Prophetæ Judaïs Communicarunt, intelligunt. Inſuper multis ab ipſis Judaïs ſancitum eſt legibus, eum, qui aliquid in Bibliis mutet, peccatum committere inexpiable. Quin & hoc adjecerunt: ſiquis vel ex ignorantia & impietate unum vocabulum mutet, ne totus propterea mundus pereat, & in יהוה יהוה vertatur, periculum eſſe. Hos autem ſententiæ ſuæ cauſas adduxerunt, quod credant Deum Opt. Max. propter ſolam Scripturam ſacram (quam ipſi opinionem variis modis probant) hunc mundum creaſſe. Johannes Iſaacus contra Lindanum l. 2. p. 66, 67, 68. Vide Wakfeld. Syntagma de Hebræorum codicum incorruptione. Ab hac mendæ præſervavit Deus locum Gen. 3. 15. ubi primum de Chriſto Evangelium, ubi in omnibus Ebraicis Bibliis, nullo omnino codice excepto, manſit maſculinum הוּא cum vau e manet ergo Deo ſolida Laus, & fontibus debitum æſtimium. Amama diſſerta. de Keri & Khetib. Tu illos accede, & urge diſputatione; ducenta tibi argumenta ex Bibliis contra illos ſuppetunt, quæ in textu Hebræo clariora & dilucidiora quam ulla converſione inveniuntur. Id. ib. p. 77.

Joſephus l. 1. contra Appian (who lived after our Saviour) ſaith, That the Jews did keep the holy Scripture with ſo great fidelity, that they would rather dye than change or alter any thing in it. Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. l. 3. cap. 10. teacheth the ſame thing. The Stupendious diligence of the Maſſorites, in numbring of

R. Ben. Maimon ſaith, If in the copying of the Hebrew Bible, one letter were written twice, or if one but touched another, that Copy was not admitted into their Synagogues, but only allowable to be read in Schools and private families.

the

the words and letters, with the variations of pointing and writing, leſt any place or ſuſpicion ſhould be given of falſifying it, ſeems to be a good plea alſo againſt the Jews wilfull depraving of Scripture: Paulo poſt Hieronymum confecta eſt Maſora, quam utiliſſimum theſaurum Arias appellat. Chamierus. Maſora opus immenſum, & Herculeo labore elaboratum, quo omnia Scripturæ vocabula, ſyllabæ, litteræ, apices, numerantur: illud Rabbinis uſitata appellatione, Legis vocant ſepimentum Dilher. Elect. l. 1. c. 22. Vide Muis de Heb. edit. Author. ac verit.

Maſora eſt doctrina critica, à priſcis Hebræorum ſapientibus, circa textum Hebraum ſacræ ſcripturæ, ingeniosè inventa, quâ verſus, voces, & litera ejus numerata, omniſque ipſarum varietas notata, & ſuis locis cum ſingulorum verſuum recitatione indicata eſt, ut ſic conſtans & genuina ejus lectio conſervetur, & ab omni mutatione aut corruptione æternum præſervetur, & valide præmuniatur. Buxtorfii Tiberias, c. 2. Eſt omninò, quamobrem maſoretis pro concatenato labore agamus gratias ſingulares. Fecere illi ſepem legi, atque ita fecere, ut quod animo volvebant, ſatis ſint conſecuti, etſi pro beneficiis interdum peſſimè audiant. Hackſpan. tractat de uſu librorum Rabbinicorum c. 2. ſect. 2. Vide plura ibid.

[g] Pauciſſimi ex Antiquis patribus Lingua Hebraica periti fuerunt, Græci Græce, Latini Latinè ſcripſerunt: Et omnes, exceptis Origene & Hieronymo, Lingua Hebraica imperitiſſimi, Græcis & Latinis interpretationibus, quas ad manus habuerunt, contenti fuere, adeo ut D. Hieronymus de Origene ſcribat, illum Hebræam linguam contra omnis gentiſqs ſuæ naturam didiciſſe. Buxtorf. de Punctorum Antiquitate & origine parte prima c. 11.

If Origen or Jerome (the two chiefeſt Hebricians among the Fathers) had had the leaſt ſuſpicion of this, they would never have beſtowed ſo much time in the learning of this tongue, nor have taken ſuch indefatigable pains, in tranſlating the Bibles out of Hebrew. Yet Morinus would ſeem to give anſwer to this, viz. That we might convince the Jews out of their own books. Jerome doth in a thouſand places call it the Hebrew truth, & fontem limpidiſſimum, and prefers it before the Tranſlation of the Septuagint, and all other verſions whatſoever. He cals the Hebrew in the Old, and Greek in the New Teſtament, Fontes veritatis. Farther, if the Jews would have corrupted the Scripture, they could [h] not, for the Books were diſperſed throughout the whole world; how could the Jews then, being ſo far diſperſed themſeves, confer together, and corrupt them all with one conſent? The books were not onely in the hands of the Jews, but of Chriſtians alſo, and in their cuſtody; and they would never have ſuffered the Books of the Old Teſtament (which are the foundation of faith and life) to be corrupted. Adde, if the Jews would have corrupted the Scripture, they would have corrupted thoſe places which make moſt againſt them, concerning Chriſts perſon, and office; as that propheſie of Dan. 9. of the Meſſiahs coming before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; that Hag. 2. 9. which ſetteth out the glory of the ſecond Temple, to be greater than the glory of the firſt, in regard of the preſence of the Lord in it; that Gen. 49. 10. Who is ſuch a ſtranger in the Jewiſh controverſies, as to be ignorant how ſtoutly and pertinaciouſly many of the Jews deny, that by Shiloh there, is underſtood the Meſſias? but the threefold paraphraſe there, hath expreſly added the word Meſſias, and ſtops the mouths of the Jews, who muſt not deny their authority; ſo that they fear nothing more, than to [i] conteſt with thoſe Chriſtians, who reade and underſtand the Chaldee Paraphraſes, and interpretations of the Rabbines. See Mr Mede on that Text.

[h] Non potuerunt Judæi Scripturas corrumpere. Auguſtinus ex exemplarium Bibliorum multitudine id probat l. 15. de Civitate Dei cap. 13. Abſit (inquiens) ut prudens aliquis Judæos cujuſlibet perverſitatis atque malitiæ tantum potuiſſe credat in codicibus tam multis, & tam longè latèque diſperſis. Potiſſima ratio à ſingulari providentia divina deducitur. Glaſſius l. 1. Tract. 1. de textus Heb. in V. T. puritate. ſect. ſecunda, [i] Amama Antibarb. Bibl. 1. Joh. Morin. in exercit. ſuis Bibl. omnem movet lapidem, ut cum cæteris ſervidioribus Papicolis Judæos nefandi ſacrilegii, corrupturorum videlicet ex Chriſtianiſmi odio ſanctum poſtulet; timent nempe boni illi viri, multum Papiſticis deceſſuram ſuperſtitionibus, ſi ad amuſſim & normam fontium Hebræorum ſua exigere deberent dogmata, quibus in multis Latina vulgata verſio patrocinatur. Hotting. Theſ. Philol. l. 1. c. 2. Quæſt. Vide plura ibid.

[i] Ipſe Bellarminus fatetur, ex Textu Hebræo Judæos fortius conſtringi & vexari ſæpius poſſe, quam ex verſione latina. Judæi reliquerunt in ſuis libris quæ maxime pro nobis contra ipſos faciunt, i. e. Quæ myſterium Trinitatis comprobant, quæ cum Judæi nihil habent commune, & de Chriſto teſtimonium perhibent, Hieron. Si falſandi aliquem locum Judæis Cauſa unquam fuit, certè Eſaiæ c. 53. in quo ita de Chriſti Domini noſtri morte ac paſſione Eſaias vaticinatus eſt, ut ejus coram Spectator fuiſſe videatur. At totus iſte locus integer relictus eſt, habetque in Hebræo codice prorſus, quomodo in Græco & Latino, Muis de Heb. Edit. Author ac ver.

Pſa. 2. 12. where the vulgar Latine hath apprehendite diſciplinam (quæ lectio nihil magnificum de Chriſto prædicat) the Hebrews reade oſculamini filium, which is more forcible to prove the myſtery of Chriſts Kingdom, and celebrate his ample dominion over all.

That

That place Iſa. 53. contains both the prophecy, and whole paſſion of Chriſt in it ſelf. Yet what is wanting there in the Hebrew Text? is there a letter taken away or altered, to violate the ſenſe of the myſteries? Iſaac Levita[k] ſaith, That this Chapter converted him, that he read it over more than a thouſand times, and compared it with many tranſlations, and that more of the myſtery of Chriſt is contained in it, than in any tranſlation whatſoever.

He addeth further, that diſputing with five Rabbines at Frankford, he urged this Chapter againſt them, and thereby brought them into thoſe ſtreights, and ſo ſtopped their mouths, that they could not reply to his arguments. We have the ſecond Pſalm, the 21. the 110. and all others entire and compleat, in which there are moſt manifeſt[l] prophecies concerning Chriſt.

[k] Lib. 2. contra Lind. p. 82.

[l] Quid illuſtrius de Chriſti Meſſiæ noſtri dici poteſt exhibitione, quam iſtud Eſa. 5. 7. Eſa. 9. 6? Quid de paſſione ejus acerba & reſurrectione gloriosâ ſplendidius dici poteſt, quam quod in Eſa. 53. cap. dicitur itemq; in Pſal. 22? Nec tamen corruptelam vel his, vel permultis aliis Scripturæ locis ullam fuiſſe à Judæis illatam deprehendere poſſumus. Glaſ. Philol. Sac.

There are many beſides the Papiſts, who have ſtood for the uncorrupt truth of the fountains, and have defended the Jews faithfulneſſe in preſerving the Hebrew Copies, as Whitaker, Lubbertus, Junius, Ames, Rivet and others. But none hath performed more for the vindicating of particular places, which are either ſuſpected, or openly charged of corruption by certain Papiſts, than Solomon Glaſſius, a moſt learned man, who in his Philologia ſacra hath vindicated ſeventy two places of the Old Teſtament, and twenty of the New.

All know, that that place in the 7th of Eſay. A virgin ſhall conceive, was conſtantly objected to the Jews from the beginning, and yet they have left it untouched. Chamier de Canone l. 12. c. 4.

Objections of the Papiſts againſt the purity of the Hebrew Text in the Old Teſtament.

Bellarmine[m] onely produceth five places of the Scripture, in which he endeavors to prove, not that the Hebrew Text is corrupted by the labour or malice[n] of the Jews (that opinion he evidently and ſolidly refutes) yet that it is not altogether pure and perfect, but hath its errors brought in from the negligence of the Scribes, and ignorance of the Rabbines.

[m] L. 2. de verbo Dei c. 2.

[n] Aliis occurrendum videtur, qui zelo quidem bono, ſed neſcio an ſecundum ſcientiam, omnino contendunt, Judæos in odium Chriſtianæ fidei ſtudioſe depravaſſe & corrupiſſe multa loca Scripturarum. Bellar. de verbo Dei l. 2. c. 2. If the Old Teſtament be corrupted, God gave it not, for Gods providence would keep pure all Books, he would have continued. Broughton.

Coton ſaith, The originals are miſerably corrupted; and that there is a multitude almoſt incredible of depravations and falſifications, made by the Rabbines and Maſorites.

But Bellarmine, who was more learned than he, and from whom he hath ſtollen a great part of his Book againſt the Genevah Tranſlation, doth ſufficiently confute him.

Object. Pſal. 22. 16. There is no Chriſtian, but he readeth כָּארוּ Caru, they have pierced my hands and my feet, yet it is in the Hebrew כָּאֲרִי Caari, as a Lyon.

Anſ. This is the onely Argument[o] which Lindan hath of any ſhew, to prove that the Jews have corrupted the Hebrew Text, ſaith Rainolds againſt Hart. Whitaker ſaith, Hoc unum poſſe ab illis probabile in fontibus Hebraicis corruptolæ indicium inveniri. The ſame ſay John Iſaac againſt Lindan, Muis againſt Morinus, Turretinus againſt Coton. The Jews (they ſay) corrupted that word pierced, becauſe they ſaw that it propoſed that manifeſt prophecy of the crucifying of Chriſt.

[o] Nullum habet Lindanus argumentum, quod vel faciem quandam veritatis habeat præter hoc. Ut veritatem fateamur, hoc vocabulum ab annis decem non parum nos torſit, maximamq; ſuſpicionem præbuit, ut omnino corruptum eſſe crederemus. Iohannes Iſaacus contra Lind. l. 2. p. 102. Ego profectò auſim præſtare præter locum Pſalmi 22. in tot. Hebræis Codicibus inveniri nihil, quod optimam, Cohærentem, Piam & Chriſtiana fidei prorſus congruentem non habeat ſententiam. Muis de Hebraica editionis authoritate ac veritate. Voici l' unique lieu, en tout l' Hebeicu, qui ſemble avoir apparence de raiſon, pour ſhire penſer à une malicieuſe entreprinſe de Juifs. Benedict. Turretin reſponſe à la Preface de Coton. Nullus, Deum teſtor, veteris inſtrumenti ſeu doctrinæ codex Hebraicus, quem variis in regionibus videre potui, ſive is vetuſtiſſimus ac integerrimus, Scriptus ac membranaceus fuerat, ſive impreſſus & papyraceus, etiam regulatus, & artificioſo judicio ſeu ſubtili conſideratione caſtigatus ac correctus, Caru, id eſt foderunt, habebat, ſed omnes ad unum uſq; Caari, id eſt, quaſi Leo, Wakfeild. Syntag. de hebræorum codicum incorruptione. Caari bis extat, & ſub duplici ſignificatione, ſemel Pſal. 22. 17. & iterum Iſa. 38. 13. ubi cum abſq; ullo dubio & contradictione propriam ſignificationem, Sicut Leo, obtineat, neceſſario in Pſalmo aliam ſignificationem habebit, quod invictum eſt contra Judæos argumentum, aliquid peculiare ibi in iſta voce latere, & aliter illic omnino explicandum eſſe quam in Iſaia. Buxt. Clav. maſ. c. 1. vide Hotting. Theſ. Philol. l. 1. p. 190. c. 2. Queſt. 4.

But it is eaſie (ſaith Whitaker) to vindicate this place from their calumny. For firſt, Learned men witneſſe, that Caru is read in many Hebrew Books. John Iſaac a Popiſh Jew, in his ſecond Book againſt Lindan witneſſeth, that he ſaw ſuch a Book. Hoc idem ego Johannes Iſaac ipſa veritate & bona conſciencia teſtari poſſum, quòd hujuſmodi Pſalterium apud avum meum viderim, ubi in textu ſcriptum erat כארו & in margine כארי Et ita omnia olim exemplaria habuiſſe, haud dubito. Hinc itaque manifeſtum eſſe puto, cur ſeptuaginta & alii tranſtulerint, foderunt. Siquidem illi non Keri ſed Ketiſ ſunt ſecuti. The Maſſorites ſay, it was written Caru in many exact Copies. It is not therefore a corruption, but a divers reading in certain Copies by the miſtake of the Scribes, as Bellarmine himſelfe confeſſeth. Apparet (ſaith he) imprudenter quoſdam, dum ſe Hebræos oppugnare credunt, Eccleſiam ipſam oppugnare. Si enim illæ correctiones Scribarum ſunt Hebraici textus corruptiones, ſequitur apertè, vulgatam quoque editionem eſſe corruptiſſimam : quam tamen nobis Eccleſia pro verſione authentica tradidit. Bellarm. l. 2. de verbo Dei. c. ſecundo.

Genebrard the Kings Profeſſor of Hebrew in Paris on the place, concludes that the Jews did not corrupt this word. Vide ſis in loc. & Hulſii Annot. in loc. & Pocock. Not. Miſcel. in Portam Moſis. c. 4.

Mr John Foord (who hath written an Expoſition of the Pſalms in Latine) gives divers reaſons to prove that Caru is a true reading; one is this; The Hiſtory of the Goſpel witneſſeth, that Chriſts hands and feet were pierced by the Souldiers with nails. Secondly, The Vulgar Latine, the Seventy, Jerom, Auguſtine, Pagnine, and Vatablus, Tremellius and Junius, Arias Montanus, and ſome other Tranſlators ſo read it. The moſt learned Hebricians teach in their Hebrew Lexicons, that it is ſo to be read.

Readings are eight hundred fourty eight in the Hebrew, where the Text and the Margent are both pure and from God. Our Lords Family by Broughton. Vide Leuſdeni Joelem explicatum, c. 1. de variis lectionibus. N. T.

The Chaldee Paraphraſt hath joyned both readings together, q. d. They have digged or pierced my hands and my feet, as a Lion is wont to dig with his teeth.

Elias Levita writes, That he obſerved all the words which are otherwiſe read and otherwiſe written, (the Hebrews call them Keri and Ketib) and that he numbred eight hundred fourty eight, ſixty five of which are in the Law, four hundred fifty four in the Prophets, three hundred twenty nine in the Hagiographa. But Buxtorf in his Maſoretical Commentary, c. 13. obſerved many more words which differ in the reading and writing.

Morinus a learned Papiſt hath written nine exercitations on the Bible, and labors to prove from Beza, Amama, De Dieu and other Proteſtant Writers, that there are many faults in the Hebrew and Greek Copies which we now have. Muis a learned Papiſt alſo hath anſwered him.

Object. Pſal. 19. 4. [p] The Hebrew Books have, In omnem terram exivit linea eorum, Their line is gone forth thorow all the Earth, but the Septuagint turn it φθόγγος αὐτῶν, Hierom, Sonus eorum, Their ſound; and St Paul approved of this verſion, Rom. 10. 18.

[p] Vide Rivet. in Comment. & Glaſſium in Philol. Sac.

The Chaldee Paraphraſt agrees with the Hebrew. Profectò hæc res, ut ingenuè fatear, me quoq; aliquando torſit. Amuſſis, quæ funiculo conſtat, non omnino voce caret, ſiquidem architecti & alii artifices, quando aliquid ſignare aut metiri volunt, dum amuſſim vel funiculum extendunt, & deinde mittunt, ſonum quendam edere conſueverunt. Iſaacus Levita lib. 3. contra Lindanum. Illa Cœlorum linea, vel ut Tremellius tranſtulit, Delineatio, id eſt, illa Machina, ſtructuraque orbium Cæleſtium, quadammodo ad amuſſim expolita, infinitam artificis Potentiam, ſapientiamque prædicat. Whitakerus.

Anſw. Whitaker in his Anſwer to this Objection, follows Genebrard in his Scholia upon the place, and Genebrard follows Beza on Rom. 10. 18.

The Hebrew word (ſay they) truly ſignifieth a Line, but the Septuagint Interpreters reſpected the ſenſe, and the Apoſtle followed them. The Scope of the Pſalm is, That Gods people may ſee what documents are given unto them of God, whereby whereby they may be brought and led to the true, certain and saving knowledge of God: to the seventh verse, it sheweth how they were taught by the works of God: thence to the end, how they were instructed by his word; the Apostle alledgeth this Psalm to prove that the Jews might come to know God by his Word, and thereby might have faith in Christ Jesus; the sense therefore is, not only the delineation and constitution of things created, but also the Word of God, and the Doctrine of the Gospel, long since propounded to the Jews, and so propounded as they could not but hear, because it was published openly to all the whole world by the mystery of the holy Apostles out of the Predictions of the Prophets. Paul interprets the comparison propounded by the Prophet, and teacheth, That as certainly as the lines of Heaven run forth into all the earth, so certainly in these last times, the Doctrine of the Gospel came forth into all the earth by the Apostles preaching; and therefore the Apostle did not rashly change the word of the Prophet, because the Hebrew Text in the Prophet was corrupt, but purposely in stead of delineation the Apostle put in sonus, having respect to the present accomplishment of the promise, whereby God had fore-told, that all the Gentiles should be converted to the communion of the Gospel; and to this end he did foreshew that he would give unto them Preachers.

Cotton urgeth two other places, to shew that the Hebrew Text is corrupted, Mat. 2. 23. & Mat. 27.

Object. Mat. 2. 23. He shall be called a [q] Nazarene, is no where found, though the Evangelist say, that it is written, therefore it followeth (saith he) that the Hebrew original which we have is imperfect.

Answ. Saint Jerom saith, That this place was objected to him above a hundred times, and that he hath as often answered it, viz. That if the Hebrew be imperfect having no such passage, then is also that of the Septuagint and the Vulgar; so that the Objection is not against the Heberw, but against the Scripture in what language soever it be. Maldonat, after he had well weighed divers opinions, holds that of Jeroms for the most sure, which is to draw Nazarene from Netzer a branch, Isa. 11. 1. Junius in his Parallels; Piscator, Dr Taylor, Mr Dod goe the same way. Chrysostom and Theophylact, because they cannot undo this knot, cut it, thus, saying that many of the Books of the Prophets are lost. Bucer thinketh that place Jud. 15. 5. is here noted, Samson being a Redeemer as he was a figure of Christ, and the Book of the Judges was composed by divers Prophets. Calvin, Marlorat, Beza, Sculletus, and Mr Perkins seem to incline to this opinion

The last large Annotations mention both these Interpretations, but adhere rather to the former.

Object. The second place urged by Coton, to prove the corruption of the Hebrew, is Mat. 27. 19. The Evangelist cites Jeremiah for that which is to be found only in Zachary.

Answ. Junius in his Parallels, and Dr Taylor on the temptation bring six answers to reconcile these places.

[q] Vide Rivet. in Comment. & Glassium in Philol. Sac. Isaiæ undecimo est in Hebræo vox Netzer quæ alludit ad Nazaræum, imo est ab eadem radice; proinde poterit, si quis velit, eo referri, nut certè non erit versio sed allusio. Itaque melior eorum videtur sententia qui indicatum potiùs censent decimum tertium caput Judicum, ubi prædicitur Samson futurus Nazaræus: fuisse enim Illum typum Christi. Commodissimè

sti nemo dubitat. Chamier. Tom. 1. de Canone. lib. 13. cap. 8. & Isal. 11. 1. & Zach. 6. 12. videtur posse exponi. Causab. in exercit. [r] Omnes Interpretes locum illum à Matth. citatum ad ea quæ scripsit Zacharias retulerunt, nec aliqui eorum de omisso aliquo Jeremiæ Prophetico libro cogitarunt. Nisi quod unus est inter Jesuitas qui locum existimat ex duobus conflatum, nempe ex Jeremiæ cap. 32. & Zach. cap. 11. & hoc esse usitatum in Scriptura, exemplis probat, ut cum verba & testimonia duorum sunt, aut altero omisso alterius tantum nomen exprimatur, aut totum testimonium, quasi unius tantùm esset, significetur. Hac Jesuita Sanctius (in Zach. cap 11.) Hieronymo hæc maximè placet solutio, quam Baronius amplectitur, ut & Jansenius, Maldonatus, & Suarez, Matthæum supmore tantum posuisse quod dictum est per Prophetam, ab aliquo autem in margine scriptum fuisse Jeremiam, quod postea Scriptorum incogitantia in textum irrepserit. Ad hoc facit quod in Syra versione nomen Prophetæ omittitur. Rivetus in Catholico Orthodoxo. Citantur sub nomine Jeremiæ, vel quia Zacharias ea à Jeremia, cujus discipulus fuerat, acceperat, vel quia idem binominis fuit, præsertim, cum utriusque nominis sit eadem significatio. Id. ibid.

1. Some say it joyns together both, one place in Jeremiah, Chap. 18. 1, 2, 3. and that of Zachary; but there is little or no agreement between them. 2. Some say, that it is not in Jeremiahs writings which are Canonical, but in some Apocryphal Writings of Jeremiah which the Jews had, and which Chrysostom confesseth he saw, wherein theſe words were; but it is not likely, that the holy Evangeliſt would leave a Canonical Text, and cite an Apocryphal, or give ſuch credit to it, or ſeek to build our faith upon it; and by our rule, that Book ſhould be Canonical, which is cited by Chriſt or his Apoſtles. 3. Some ſay that Matthew forgat, and for Zechary put down Jeremiah; ſo Auguſtine and Eraſmus, but with more forgetfulneſſe, for holy men wrote as they were moved by Gods Spirit. 4. Some think it the errour of heedleſſe Writers, who might eaſily ſo erre; but all the oldeſt Copies, and the moſt Ancient Fathers have the name of Jeremiah. 5. Some ſay that Zachariah being inſtructed and trained up with Jeremiah did deliver it by tradition from Jeremiah, and ſo Jeremiah ſpake it by Zachariah, which might be true, becauſe it is ſaid in the Text, As was ſpoken by Jeremiah, not written. But ſixthly, the moſt compendious and likely way of reconciling is this, that Zachariah and Jeremiah was the ſame man having two names, which was very uſual among the Jews, as Salomon was called Jedidiah; Jehoiachim, Jeconias and Coniah; Simon Peter, Cephas and Barjona; Matthew, Levi. So far Junius and Dr Taylor. See Mr Robert Baily on Zach. 3. 1. p. 11. and laſt large Annotat.

Jeremiah and Zechariah differ not much in ſignification, one ſignifieth the commemoration of God, the other the exaltation of God.

The beſt of the Popiſh Writers cannot deny, but that the name Jeremiah the Prophet is put for Zachary, either through the negligence of the Scribes, or elſe it was inſerted into the Text out of the Margent, the Evangeliſt ſaying no more, But that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, as both Janſenius and Maldonate in loc. do confeſſe.

Hic nodus vetuſtiſſimos quoſque interpretes torſit. Beza. In literarum compendiis facile potuit ζῳ in ιῳ mutari. Rivet. Aliqui dicunt eſſe errorem calami & librariorum indiligenter oſcitanterque exemplaria ſibi propoſita aut legentium aut exſcribentium, ut ſi quis hic Ιω pro ζοῦ legerit, id eſt, Ιερεμιου pro Ζαχαριου quam ſententiam Syrus & Arabs videntur confirmare. Sed vetuſtas ipſa conſenſus omnium & exemplarium, quæ jam olim verſata ſunt in Patrum Orthodoxorum manibus, videtur nobis meritò hoc defenſionis genus extorquere; quod etiam agnovit memoria ſua Hieronymus. Jun. in Paral. Vide Sixti Senenſis lib. 6. Annotat. 131.

Chamier diſtinguiſheth of a twofold depravation; one of Interpretation, herein we excuſe not, nor defend the Jews. Second of the letter, herein they are to be patroniz'd againſt the Papiſts, who thorow their ſides, ſtrike at the very Scriptures, and labour to overthrow their Authority.

Non exhibetur nobis ſemper & ubique in hodierno textu Hebræo prima atque vetuſtiſſima, quæ in ipſis S. Scriptorum ſuis autographis codicibus lectio, ſed quæ fuit omnium omnino in univerſum librorum ſors & conditio) humana fragilitate in tranſcriptione tot exemplarium qua alia ex aliis, tam longo tot ſæculorum curriculo, deſcripta ſunt ab hominibus errori & lapſui obnoxiis, irrepſit in ſacros codices, qui jam exſtant, multiplex varia lectio, quæ manifeſtam arguit Codicum, tùm in locis, in quibus invicem diſcrepant, à primis Autographis diſſenſionem atque diſceſſionem. Capel. Critic. Sac. lib. 6. cap. 1. Vide l. 5. cap. 11. Sect. 6. Et Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 2. De Sac. Script. c. 2. Qu. 10. An textus Græcus Novi Teſtamenti ad nos pervenerit integer, & à corruptionis labe intactus.

The Hebrew Edition then (notwithſtanding theſe and ſuch like frivolous Objections) is ſincere and uncorrupt, and if any errours crept in through negligence or ignorance of the Penmen, which copied out the Books; yet Bellarmine himſelf granteth they are of no great moment; In matters pertaining to faith and manners (ſaith he) there is nothing wanting in the integrity of the Scripture. Vide Capel. Critic. Sac. l. 6. c. 2. Haud negare auſim, & temporum injuria & deſcriptorum incuria errata quædam & ſphalmata in textum Hebraum irrepſiſſe. Amama Antiharb. Bibl. l. 1. c. 1. What reaſons can the Jeſuites alledge, why the Hebrew and the Greek which kept their integrity four hundred years together after Chriſt, amidſt as bitter Enemies as ever they had, as troubleſome and tempeſtuous times as ever were ſince, ſhould after in time of leſſe danger, and greater quiet, loſe not their beauty only, but their chaſtity alſo! And we marvel that the Jeſuites are not afraid to ſuffer this blot to fall upon their Popiſh government; which boaſteth and ſaith, It is the pillar of truth, and yet hath had no better care to preſerve the truth.

Objections of the Papiſts againſt the Purity of the Greek Text in the New Teſtament.

Object. They inſtance in Rom. 12. 11. to be corrupt; the Greek hath ſerving the time, Καιρῷ, for ſerving the Lord, Κυριῳ.

Anſw.

Anſw. Many of the ancient Greek[s] Copies and Scholiaſts have alſo Κυρίῳ, as Salmeron the Jeſuite confeſſeth, Serving the Lord, and it appeareth in the Syriack Tranſlation: and who ſeeth not, that it might rather be an overſight of the Writer taking one word for another, rather than a fault in the Text; and the cauſe of the miſtake (ſaith Beza) was the ſhort writing of the word Κῦ, which was taken by ſome for Καιρῷ, whereas they ſhould have taken it for Κυρίῳ. If we ſhould admit the other reading, we muſt not underſtand the Apoſtle as if he commanded us to be Temporizers, or to apply our ſelves to the corrupt cuſtoms and manners of the times; but to keep time in all our actions, and do them in the fitteſt ſeaſon, as Col. 4.5. Epheſ. 5.16.

[s] The Greek Scholiaſt, Oecumenius, ſo read Chryſoſt. Theophylact. and Baſil. See Par. in loc. Franciſcus Lucas teſtatur ſe ſex Græcos codices vidiſſe in quibus eſſet Κυρίῳ, & Beza aſſerit ita legi in probatiſſimis quibuſque. Arias Montanus, non tantùm in textu poſuit Κυρίῳ, ſed etiam in Apparatu nullam adnotavit lectionis varietatem, quo ſatis oſtendit ſe nullos legiſſe codices Græcos, in quibus eſſet Καιρῷ: alias non omiſſurus opinor, qui longe leviora collegit. Chamier.

Object. Eraſmus the beſt Tranſlator of all the later (by the judgement of Beza) ſaith, That the Greek ſometimes hath ſuperfluities corruptly added to the Text of holy Scripture, as Matth. 6. the Doxology, For thine is the Kingdome, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. He calleth theſe words trifles, raſhly added to the Lords Prayer, and reprehends Valla for blaming the old vulgar Latine, becauſe it hath them not. Tertullian, Cyprian, Ambroſe, Jerom and Auguſtine do expound the Lords Prayer, and yet make no mention of theſe words. Beza confeſſeth it to be Magnificam illam quidem & longè ſanctiſſimam, a moſt high and holy forme of expreſſion, Sed irrepſiſſe in contextum, & quæ in vetuſtiſſimis aliquot codicibus Græcis deſit, it is not to be found in that vetuſtiſſimus codex by Beza to the Univerſity Library of Cambridge; that Copy perhaps was corrupted by the Hereticks.

See Mr Gregory his Obſervations upon ſome paſſages of Scripture, cap. 38.

It is not preſently trifles, whatſoever Eraſmus, or any other man ſhall reject out of the Greek Copy under that name: and yet they do Eraſmus wrong, to ſay that he called that part of the Lords Prayer trifles abſolutely; for he ſtiles it ſo conditionally, if it be not part of the ancient Text.

2. If Eraſmus had underſtood that that paſſage had been taken out of the Book of Chronicles written by the pen of the holy Ghoſt, he would no doubt have taken heed how he had called this concluſion of the Lords Prayer Trifles; for it appeareth manifeſtly, that this ſentence was borrowed from David, 1 Chro. 29. 11. with ſome abridgment of the Prophets words.

Cartw. in his anſwer to the Rhemiſts Preface.

3. That cannot be ſuperfluous without the which we ſhould not have had a perfect form of Prayer; for ſince Prayer ſtandeth as well in praiſing of God and thankſgiving, as in petitions and requeſts to be made unto him; it is evident that if this Concluſion had been wanting, there had wanted a form of that Prayer which ſtandeth in praiſe and thankſgiving.

Coronis precationis Dominicæ, Quia tuum eſt regnum, &c. Etſi in multis Græcis codicibus & apud Syrum quoque interpretem reperitur, tamen Beta referente, in vetuſtiſſimis aliquibus Græcis codicibus deeſt, & à nemine exponitur, præter à vulgato & à Chryſoſtomo. Deeſt quoque in verſione Arabica, nec in ullis Latinorum exemplaribus viſitur: ut non immeritò Eraſmus conjectet, ex ſolemni conſuetudine à Græcis adjectam, & poſtea in Textum ipſum fuiſſe tranſlatam. Scultetus in loc.

4. If to give a ſubſtantial reaſon of that which goeth before be ſuperfluous, than this concluſion may be ſo.

5. For confirmation of this reading, we may alledge beſides the conſent of the Greek Copies, the Syrian interpretation, which is very ancient, Chryſoſtom, Theophylact and Euthymius expound it. The Lords Prayer in Luke is perfect in reſpect of the Petitions, yet nothing hindereth but that in Matthew might be added the confirmation and concluſion; Matthew hath many other things in his Goſpel, which Luke hath not.

Salmeron reproves Cajetan for calling this Multiloquium, ſince there is a notable confeſſion of four Properties of God, his Kingdome, Power, Glory and Eternity.

I ſhould now ſhew, That neither the Tranſlation of the Seventy, nor of the Vulgar gar Latine are Authentical; but there are two Queſtions of great moment firſt to be diſcuſſed.

The firſt is, Whether any Books of the Scripture be loſt?

The ſecond, Whether the Scripture of the Old Teſtament was punctata from the beginning.

To the firſt Queſtion, That we may give a right anſwer, we muſt diſtinguiſh of the Books of Scripture; ſome were Hiſtorical, Ethical or Phyſical, [t] others Dogmatical. The former might periſh and fall away, but not the later. Therefore that common Objection of divers Books mentioned in the Old Teſtament, whereof we find none ſo entituled in the Canon thereof, is eaſily anſwered. Either they were Civil and Commonwealth ſtories, whether the Reader is referred, if it like him to reade the Stories more at large, which the Prophets touched ſhortly; or elſe they are contained in the Books of the Kings, which are manifeſtly proved to be written by divers Prophets in their ſeveral ages, wherein they propheſied. Salomons Books which he wrote of general Philoſophy, fell away, but all the other Books of the Scripture do ſtill remain. Cartw. in his Anſwer to the Preface of the Rhem. Teſt.

[t] Spanhem. Dub. Evang. parte tertia Dub. 130. Codices ſacros in excidio Hieroſolymitano prorſus interciditſe commentum eſt, non veritas. Id. parte ſecunda Dub. 89.

That was too confidently ſpoken by Whitaker (though otherwiſe a worthy Writer) Canonica quædam periiſſe, credo eſſe, neminem qui dubitet. Nego Canonem, id eſt, numerum librorum ſacrorum, ex quo confectus eſt, unquam fuiſſe majorem, quam ſit hodie. Chamierus. Ut ut ſit, nec in Novo, nec in Vetere Teſtamento paſſus eſt Deus ſacros veritatis fontes mendis ullis inſici, neque malitiâ, neque negligentiâ hominum, aut injuriâ temporum, in iis quæ fidem mores ve ſpectant. Jacobi Capelli Hiſt. Sac. & Exotica. Vide Hotting. Theſ. Philol. l. 2. c. 2. Sect. 2.

Firſt, They are all of God, all whoſe works remain for ever; therefore the holy Scriptures being not only his handy-work, but as it were the chief and Maſter-work of all other, muſt have a continual endurance.

Pſal. 111. 8.

Secondly, They all are written generally for our inſtruction, and more particularly for Admonition and Warning, for Comfort and Conſolation, unleſſe we will ſay, that God may be deceived in his Purpoſe and End wherefore he ordained them; it muſt needs be, that it muſt continue whatſoever hath been written in that reſpect.

Dr Gouge on Heb. 11 35. Sect. 243. gives four reaſons to prove that no part of Canonical Scripture is loſt. See Goodwins Divine Authority of the Scriptures, p. 15.

Thirdly, If the Lord have kept unto us the whole Book of Leviticus, and (in it) the Ceremonies (which are aboliſhed, and whereof there is now no practiſe) becauſe they have a neceſſary and profitable uſe in the Church of God; * how much more is it to be eſteemed, that his providence hath watched over other Books of the Scripture, which more properly belong unto our times?

* Vide Alting. problem. Theol. partem 1. & 6. Druſium de queſtis per Epiſtolam epiſt. 101.

Fourthly, Let us hear the Scripture it ſelf, witneſſing of its own Authority and Durableneſs to all Ages; Moſes thus writeth of it; The ſecret and hidden things remain to the Lord our God, but the things that are revealed to us and our children for ever. David alſo profeſſeth, That he knew long before, that the Lord had founded his teſtimonies for evermore. But our Saviour Chriſts teſtimony is of all other moſt evident: That Heaven and Earth ſhall paſſe, but that his Word cannot paſſe: And yet more vehemently, That not one jot, or ſmall letter [u] of his Law can paſſe untill all be fulfilled, Rom. 15. 4. therefore none of thoſe which were written for that end, are loſt.

See B. Ushers Body of Divinity, p. 17. Deut. 29. 29. Pſal. 119. 152. Mat. 24. 35. Mat. 13. 32. Mat. 5. 18. Luk. 16. 17.

[u] Cui ignorata non ſcrupuloſa tantùm ſed & ſuperſtitioſa prorſus Judæorum anxietas, non in libris tantùm ſed in apicibus librorum ſacrorum numerandis, conferendis, caſtodiendis? & tantum abeſt ut volumen ſacrum integrum interverſum volucrint, ut contra profiteantur totum mundum ruiturum in Tohu va Bohu antiquum, ſi vel una vox in Scriptura mutetur. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. part. 2da. Dub. 89.

Origen in Præfat. in Cant. Canticorum. Auguſtin. lib. 18. de Civitate Dei. cap. 38. thought it could not neither ſtand with the Divine Providence, nor with the honour of the Church, that any Canonical Books, and given for ſuch to the Church, ſhould be loſt. Of this opinion are many worthy modern Divines. Junius, Chamierus Tom. 1. l. 9. c. 5. Polanus, Wendelinus, Waltherus, Spanhemius, Cartwright, Gerardus dum in exegeſi loci primi de Scriptura ſacra, cap.6. Joh. Camero Tom. 3. in Prælectionibus de verbo Dei.cap.15. Rivetus in Iſagoge ad S.Script. cap.6. & in ſumma Controverſiarum Tom.1. Tract.1. Quæſt.1. Altingius. But Chryſoſtom and Whitaker, alſo Bellarmine l.4. de verbo Dei. c.4. Gretzerus and Becanus hold, that ſome Canonical Books are loſt. I rather ſubſcribe to the judgment of the former Reverend Divines who held the contrary.

The ſecond Queſtion is, Whether the Scripture of the Old Teſtament was punctata * from the beginning? Or, Whether it be a late invention of the Hebrews. Controverſiam de punctorum antiquitate vel novitate, inter viros eruditos diſceptatam, non attingo. * Sententia utraque ſuos habet aſſertores, & magni quidem nominis.

* Apices vocalium Chriſti tempore nondum adſcripti erant, ac ne hodie quidem ſcribuntur cum lege.

Qui viderunt volumen legis in Synagogis Judæorum; ſciunt me verum dicere. Druſ. Præterit. in Luc. 16 17. * Spanhem. Dub. Evangel. par.3. Dub. 129. Vide D. Prid. *Lect.*12. de punctorum Hebraicorum origine. Et Broch. *Syſtem. Theol. Art.*2. *De Sacra Scriptura. c.*2. Quæſt. 9.

Cevalerius, Buxtorfius, Marinus, Junius, and other very godly and learned men have defended the Antiquity of the pricks, which to the Hebrews are in ſtead of vowels, and ſay, that the Bibles were punctata in our Saviour Chriſts time, and that he approved of the ſame *Mat.5. 18. Others hold, That the invention of the pricks, and the Maſſoreth is to be aſcribed to the Tyberian Maſſorites, who flouriſhed about five hundred years after Chriſts birth: This opinion divers learned men have defended with moſt weighty reaſons, Martinius in Technologia, Luther, Mercer, Scaliger and Druſius, Calvin upon *Zech.*11. Zuinglius in his Preface on Iſaiah. Raynolds in his cenſure of the Apocryphal Books. But above all Capellus in his Book entituled, Arcanum punctationis revelatum, hath ſo ſtrongly confirmed that opinion, and hath ſo ſolidly confuted the reaſons which are commonly brought to the contrary, that he hath drawn ſome learned Divines to his opinion, which before did ſtifly adhere to the contrary opinion, and left others very doubtfull: He hath well anſwered that place, *Mat.*5.18.*l.*2.*c.*14. This Book is now anſwered by learned Buxtorf.

Buxtorfius punctorum patronus fortiſſimus. Capellus. * Piſcat. in loc. Puncta iſta Hebraica à Maſorethis ſunt excogitata, & textui ſacro addita circa Chriſti annum 500. aut ſaltem poſt 400. Capel, de punctorum Heb. Antiq.l 2. A-mama diſſertat de Jehova. Vide Rivet. *Iſag.c.*8.

See Dr Waltons Conſiderator conſidered about this controverſie of the Hebrew Punctation, *Chap.*10,11,12.

But (as Amama ſaith) if any will not be moved from the other opinion, that the Puncta were invented by the Prophets (which many godly Divines do out of a good zeal ſtand for) Suum cuique liberum ſit judicium.

Altum in omnium antiquorum Patrum Græcorum & Latinorum ſcriptis, de punctis ſilentium, ut ne minimus quidem apex de illis apiculis in iis extet. Capellus *lib.*1. cap. 9. Sciendum quod nec Moyſes punctavit legem, unde Judæi non habent eam cum punctis, i. cum vocalibus ſcriptam in rotulis ſuis; nec aliquis ex Prophetis punctavit librum ſuum; ſed duo Judæi, quorum unus dictus eſt Nephtali. Alter verò Ben Aſcher, totum vetus Teſtamentum punctaſſe legunter; quæ quidem puncta cum quibuſdam virgulis ſunt loco vocalium apud eos. Raymundi Pugio fidei adverſus Judæos part. 3. Diſt. 3. cap. 21. Vide Voſſium de orig. & progreſ. Idol. lib. 2. cap. 3.

Vide Fulleri *Miſcel. Sac. lib.*4. *cap.*4. Mercerum ad Geneſ. 16. 13. & Druſium ad difficiliora loca Geneſ. Buxtorfii diſſertationem de Ebræorum literis, & librum de punctorum Antiquitate & origine. Our Saviour ſaith, Matth. 5. 18. That not one jot or prick of the Law ſhall periſh; whereby it ſhould appear that the Law and the Prophets (for of both he ſpeaketh immediately * before) had vowels and pricks: whereunto alſo belong all thoſe places of Scripture, which teſtifie of the clearneſſe and certainty of the Scripture, which could not at all be now, if it lacked vowels. Yet this is not B. Ushers judgement, as he himſelf told me.

Hoc tam certum eſt, quam quod certiſſimum, nullos Hebræorum antiquius ſentire de punctorum antiquitate & origine, quam Cabaliſtas. Buxtorf. *de punctorum antiquitate & origine. part.*1. cap. 5. * B. Ushers Body of Divinity, pag. 13.

The Jewes thought there was abundance of myſteries in every one of thoſe tittles of the Law: Chriſt alludes to this opinion, though he allows it not.

Non

[x] Christus eo loco proculdubiò respicit non ad puncta, vocalia & accentus, qui tum nulli fuerunt; sed (uti rectè observat Hieronymus) ad figuram literarum, & ad cornicula illa, quibus literarum capita in hodierna Scriptura (quâ in scribendo Legis volumine utuntur Judæi) armantur: hocque duntaxat vult, Se non venisse (quod de eo falsissimo calumniabantur Judæi) ad evacuandam & abolendam Legem, ut contra potius venerit ad eam perfectissimè implendam. Capelli Diatrib. de literis Ebr. Apicibus & accentibus nec vetustissimi Græcorum nec vetustissimi Hebræorum usi sunt. Hujusmodi virgularum apicumque nota, quibus Hebræi nunc pro vocalibus & accentibus utuntur, non in illa primæva sanctæ linguæ origine excogitatæ fuerunt, imò nec extiterunt ab initio legis, sed novicia sunt, atq; ad ejus integritatem usquequaq; pertinent minimè. Wakfeld. Syntag. de hebræorum codicem incorruptione.

Non est improbabile argumentum ex Mat. 5. 18. [x] Luc. 16. 17. ubi per Κεραια puncta & accentus commodè intelligi posse docti opinantur: inter quos Broughtonius in Daniel, p. 45. & Polanus Syntagm. l. 1. c. 37. quamvis argumento illi nolimus insistere. Voetius Tom. 1. Disp. de authoritate Scripturæ.

See Mr Thorndikes 33. Ch. of his principles of Christian Truth.

Buxtorf in his Answer to Capellus saith, That there are three degrees in general of Antiquity, the chiefest, those which referre the original of the points to Adam, middle of those which referre them to Moses, lowest those which referre them to Ezra. Buxtorf. de punctorum Antiquitate & origine par. 2. cap. 2.

Sine punctis legere (saith Drusius) paucis hodiè concessum. Serarius de Rabbinis, saith, Elias Hutter a Lutheran writes thus, è mille Prædicantibus ne unum quidem esse, qui etiam punctatissima possit Hebræa legere, nedum absque punctis.

An impudent Jesuite came to Conradus Graserus, to confer with him about the Hebrew Text of the Bible, which he said was corrupt and could not be held Authentick; to whom desiring the original Text, Graserus gave the Hebrew Bible without pricks; he took the Book and turned over the leaves, and the Book upside down, and was so ignorant or little skilled in the Original, that he could not distinguish betwixt the right and wrong end of the Book: which his arrogance a young scholar of Graserus's perceiving, he could not forbear laughter, and Graserus himself had much ado to conceal it. Melchior. Adam in vita Conradi Graseri, p. 845.

Chap. VII.

Of the Seventy and Vulgar Translation.

[a] In editione Græca librorum Mosis, Psalmorum & Prophetarum, nihil fermè est quod peregrinum non sonet, & quod Hebraicam non oleat loquendi rationem. Croii observ. Augustinus hanc versionem ait esse factam divina dispensatione, eamque apud Ecclesias peritiores maximi fieri, cum tanta Spiritus sancti præsentia hi interpretes adjuti esse dicantur in interpretando, ut omnium unum fuerit.

NOw I proceed to shew, that neither the Translation of the Seventy, nor the Vulgar Latine are Authentical.

1. The Greek Translation of the Old Testament, which is commonly ascribed to the Seventy Interpreters, is not Divinely [a] inspired.

Vide Capel. Critic Sac. l. 4. c. 18.

The chief Pillars of the Primitive Church ran into this errour, whence sprung many other errours. The Greek Fathers, who were generally unskilfull both in Hebrew and Latine (some few excepted) were the lesse to be blamed here, since they made use of no other Editions, therefore they more confidently affirmed their own to be Authentical. Augustine, Tertullian, and many of the Latine Fathers (whom divers Divines follow) ascribed too much to the Seventy Interpreters. Yet there was a controversie between Augustine and Jerom concerning their Authority, as is evident by both their Epistles. Bellarmine [b] is large in commending this version, saying, That it is most certain, that those Interpreters did very well translate the Scripture, and had the holy Ghost peculiarly assisting them, least they should erre in any thing, so that they may seem rather to be Prophets than Interpreters. Gretzer bestoweth beſtoweth a prophetick ſpirit upon them, becauſe they did ſo agree, and abſolved their task in ſo ſhort a ſpace of time, viz. in 72 [c] dayes.

[b] Lib. 2. de ver. Dei, c. 6.

Of this Tranſlation, ſee B. Uſhers Epiſt. to Capellus, and Prolegom. 9. to the Biblia Polyglotta, and Dr Waltons Conſiderator conſidered, ch. 9.

[c] Valido ſtomacho opus eſt, ut concoqui poſſit narratio de LXX. cellulis, de conſenſu illo miro, & de exiguo temporis intervallo, quo totum opus confectum fertur. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. part. 1. Dub. 22.

They are ſaid to have been put a part in 72 Cels, and to have all agreed in their Tranſlation, and the ruines thereof were (as is reported) ſhewed a long time after at Alexandria.

But Hierom, and many of the * Papiſts held this to be a Fable of the 72 Cels, ſince neither Ariſtæus, who was a chief man about King Ptolomy, that ſet the Seventy Interpreters on work; nor Joſephus (who was moſt deſirous of the honour of his Nation) maketh any mention thereof. And as touching the Interpreters themſelves, Jerom ſaith, Aliud eſt vatem agere, aliud Interpretem. It is one thing to be a Prophet, another to be an Interpreter. And as for the Tranſlation, he ſaith, Germana illa & antiqua tranſlatio corrupta & violata eſt.

* Maſius præfat. in Grac. edit. Joſuæ & Bellarm. lib. 2. de verbo Dei. cap. 6.

That ancient and true Tranſlation [d] of the Septuagint is corrupted and violated, which (as Hierom ſaith) was agreeable to the Hebrew, but ſo is not the Greek Copy now extant, which is full of corruptions, and ſeemeth to be a mixt and confuſed Tranſlation of many.

[d] Diſtinguimus nos inter verſionem LXX. primævam purioremque, & inter poſteriorem corruptam. Hæc Auctoritatis eſt perexiguæ; Illa autem meruit quidem quondam auctoritatem aliquam. Waltherus in officina Biblica.

If the Seventy, as well as the Hebrew, had been Authentical, the Lord would have been carefull to have kept it pure and untorrupt unto our dayes, as well as he hath done the Hebrew. There is indeed a Greek Edition extant, which goeth under the name of the Seventy; but Whitaker [e] ſaith, That the true Seventy is loſt, and that this which we now have is mixt and miſerably corrupted.

[e] De Script. Controverſia prima quæſt. ſecunda c. tertio. Aut hæc Græca verſio, quæ ad noſtra tempora pervenit, non illa eſt quam Septuaginta Judaici ſeniores ediderunt, aut eſt tam infinitè fœdèque depravata, ut authoritatis perexiguæ nunc ſit. Nam ne ipſe Hieronymus puram habuit tranſlationem Græcam Septuaginta interpretum. Illam enim, quam habuit, corruptam vitioſamq; eſſe, ſæpe in Commentariis conqueritur. Whitak. ibid. Vide Bez. in Mat. 17. 9.

The original Greek Copy of the Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament was, the learned think, (and I think they think well in it) burned by Julius Cæſar's Army, when they fired Alexandria, and the famous Library there. Capels Remains, p. 11. Verſio Græca quæ hodiè extat & quam ſplendido LXX. Interpretum titulo venditant, non eſt primæva illa juſſu Ptolomæi confecta, ſed incerti & recentioris authoris, ut prolixè probant Editores Bibliorum Pariſienſium. Hornii Præfat. ad Diſſertat. De vera Ætate mundi.

Voſſius in his Epiſtle prefixed before his Caſtigationes ad Scriptum Hornii, ſaith, Sic ituque ſentio, ſi quid in rebus mortalium ſit quod à quoquam poſſit adfirmari, jam quoque audere me abſque ulla cunctatione affirmare & certo ſtatuere, verſionem Pentateuchi Græcam, qua hodiè etiamnum extat, totiès recuſa, illam ipſam eſſe genuinam LXX. Interpretum verſionem. Vide plura ibid.

Danda LXX. Interpretibus venia, ut hominibus; juxta Jacobi ſententiam Multa peccamus omnes. Hieron. ad Pamach. The Apoſtles and Evangeliſts writing in Greek, often followed the verſion of the Septuagint, then common amongſt the Grecians; and cited it ſometimes where there is a moſt manifeſt difference from the Hebrew Text, but yet they did not alwayes uſe that Tranſlation, which they would have done, if they had eſteemed it Divine and Authentical.

Spanhemius Dub. Evang. part. 1. Dub. 23. and Amama Antibarb. Bibl. l. 2. both think that conjecture of Heinſius (in his holy Ariſtarchus) very probable, viz. that the fable of the number and conſent of the Interpreters, took its original from Exod. 24. Hence (ſaith Heinſius there) without doubt the Hiſtory concerning Ptolomy; hence thoſe famous Cels which Jerome ſcoffs at; hence that Invention, that none of all that number differed in their Interpretations.

Therefore since that version when pure was but an humane, not divine work, and proceeded from Interpreters, not Prophets; it could be neither Authentical, nor fide digna, any further than it agreed [f] with the Hebrew Text.

[f] Græci ab Hebræis sæpè recedunt. Mercerus ad Job 15. 32. Vide Drusium in Gen. 6. & Fulleri Miscel. Sac. lib. 2. cap. 6. pag. 201. Mendas in Chronologicis numeris habet complures. See Dr Willet on Gen. 47. and Chamiers first Tome de Canone, lib. 13. cap. 8, 9, 10. Libri Mosis omnium sunt optimè translati: & Psalmi omnium deterrimè. Chamierus ib. cap. 8. Psalmo primo λοιμοὶ pestilentes pro irrisoribus & οὐ ἀναστήσονται ἀσεβεῖς ἐν κρίσει non resurgent impii in judicio: Periculosa amphibolia, ne fortè videantur à resurrectione excludi impii; debuit autem verti, non consistent in judicio, nimirum quia condemnabuntur. Chamierus ibid. Vide Capel. Critic. Sac. l. 4. c. 18. Et R. Episcopi Ussherii ad illum Epistolam. Hebræorum magistri editionem Græcorum Interpretum magno odio sunt prosecuti, qui cum ægrè ferrent sibi non licere, nisi publicè in Synagogis Sabbatis Hebraicè sacram Scripturam legere, omnia quaquè sunt tum primum Commenti adversus septuaginta interpretum versionem, ut è suorum manibus excuterent, ne tandem è fugi sacrarum literarum lectione hujus editionis, à religione Judaica ad fidem Christianam desciscerent. Petitii Var. Lect. lib. 2. cap. 1.

The Ancients themselves Commenting upon Scripture, used not the Septuagint, Edition as Authentick, from which it would not have been then lawfull to depart, but rather often correct it, as Origen and Jerom from the Hebrew fountains: which every one knoweth that is versed in their works.

They are most bold in changing numbers without any reason, as Genes. 5. to Seth, Enos, Cainuan, Malaleel, they give each a hundred years beyond the Hebrew truth. In the 46 Chapter of Genesis for Seventy souls they say Seventy five.

Quod ipsi Ario, ut ait Epiphanius, erroris principium.

The Seventy read Prov. 8. 23. In the beginning God created me; for, In the beginning God possessed me, whether because they mistook the Hebrew word Chava for Cava, upon their likeness in the Hebrew Characters, or their Translation was at the first ἔκτισεν possedit, possessed, and the Copies slipping in one letter, made it ἔκτισεν creavit, created, as Bellarmine after Zanchy thinketh.

2. The vulgar Edition is not Authentical.

[g] De vulgata latina translatione, Vide collationem Rainoldi cum Harto, cap. 2. pag. 23. & cap. 6. pag. 201, 202. & cap. 8. pag. 447. & Drusium in Num. 1. cap. 8. & cap. 96. Cl. Gatak. Adversaria Miscel. cap. 39. & Dissertat. Doctoris Walton de linguis Orientalibus, pag. 137. Hotting. Thes. Philol. lib. 1. cap. 3. Sect. 3. Quest. 1, &c. Rivetus in Catholico Orthodoxo. Wendelin. in Christiana Theologia. Geth. loc. prim. de Script. Sac. with learned Papists hold that it was not Jeroms Translation. Capel. Crit. Sac. lib. 5. cap. 7. saith it was. De latina Editione longè animosissima Catholicis est & Papistis controversia. Cham. Tom. 1. l. 14. c. 1.

We are now come to shew, that the vulgar Latine Edition [g] is not Authentical, a thing of it self manifest, but yet to be proved by some Arguments, because our Adversaries stand upon it. Our Arguments are these:

The vulgar Latine is faulty enough, yet it is so sound, that I think many have been led by it, to their conversion, why may I not think that those many who have been converted from Popery in the Church of Rome, and joyned themselves to our Church, have been beholding for the most part of them (next to God) to their vulgar Translation, as Martyr, Zanchius, Luther, Oecolampadius, and many others. Capels Remaines, pag. 31, 32.

1. It was not Divinely inspired in respect of Matter, Form, Speech, as the Hebrew of the Old Testament, and the Greek of the New were, but was translated by humane endeavour, and therefore it is against both Religion and reason to say it is Authentical; a work of men cannot in perfection be equall with a work of God; for as Jerom saith, Aliud est esse vatem, aliud est esse Interpretem.

It is the office of an Interpreter, to translate the Authentical Scripture, not to makes his Translation Authentical; for both Jerom and every other Interpreter might erre, so did not the Prophets and Apostles; the Councel of Trent first decreed that this Translation should be Authentical: before it many learned Papists themselves did disallow that Translation, as Paulus Brugensis, Valla, Eugubinus, Isidorus Clarius, Johannes Isaacus, Cajetan, Erasmus, Jacobus Faber, Ludovicus Vives, and divers others.

2. The

2. The vulgar Tranſlation doth oft change the ſentence of the holy Ghoſt, yea, it doth dangerouſly and heretically deprave the ſenſe of holy Scripture, and tranſlate ſenſleſly many times, therefore it is not to be held Authentical.

Gen. 3. 15. ipſa for ipſe, viz. Chriſt, or ipſum, viz. ſemen, which place it ſeemeth was corrupted idolatrouſly to extoll the praiſes of the Virgin Mary, and to prove her patronage and protection. This reading drew Bernard into this opinion, Maria abſtulit opprobrium matris Evæ, & patri pro matre ſatisfecit quod promittitur, Gen. 3. 15. ipſa conteret; & cui ſervanda eſt victoria niſi Mariæ? Bern. See Bedels Anſwer to Wadeſworths Letters, ch. 6. Vide Capel. Crit. Sac. l. 5. c. 11.

Hebraici libri conſtanter legunt Hu, Gen. 3. Septuaginta habent αὐτὸς, Chaldaica Paraphraſis hanc lectionem confirmat: Denique quidam codices vulgatæ Editionis retinent ipſe, quidam ipſum. Poſtremò pondus ipſum ſententiæ poſtulat, ut hoc de ſemine mulieris, non de muliere intelligam. Whitak.

Hoc conteret, Termel. & alii, that is that ſame ſeed, rather he, viz. that one perſon. Hier. Ipſe conteret caput tuum, accordingly in the Septuagint and our Tranſlation.

Gen. 4. 13. Major eſt iniquitas mea quam ut veniam merear, a corrupt Tranſlation ſerving to countenance the errour touching merit de congruo. In the Hebrew there is nothing which hath the leaſt ſignification of merit; it ſhould be tranſlated Ut feram vel ſuſtineam, vel remiſſionem conſequar. Tranſlatio iſta poteſt tolerari ſi ſumatur mereri pro conſequi, ut ſapiſſimè olim apud veteres. Chamier.

Exod. 34. 29. The vulgar hath Videbant faciem Moſis cornutam, [h] for radiantem which the Hebrew word ſignifieth; the 70 Tranſlate it (the Apoſtle Paul approving of it, 2 Cor. 3. 7, 10.) was glorified. This interpretation of the vulgar is reprehended by Valla, Vatablus, Arias Montanus, Steuchus, Cajetan, Ferus, Oleaſter, Tho. Aquinas and Bellarmine himſelf De Eccleſia triumphante, l. 2. c. 4. which is alſo confirmed by the Text it ſelf, for the Scripture witneſſeth, That the people could not behold the face of Moſes for the brightneſſe thereof, Exod. 34. 30. and therefore his whole face, not the higheſt part of his forehead, or his head was covered with a vail, v. 33. of that Chapter, 2 Cor. 3. 3.

[h] Ex voce Hebræa poteſt emendari prava vulgi conſuetudo, qui duobus Cornubus pingunt Moſen; rident igitur nos & execrantur Judæi quoties Moſen in templis cornuta facie depictum aſpiciunt, quaſi nos eum diabolum quendam, ut ipſi ſtultè interpretantur, eſſe putemus. Sixtus Senenſis Biblioth. Sanct. l. 5. Annot. 116. Vide Grotium in loc.

Job 5. 1. The vulgar Latine hath, Voca ergo ſi eſt qui tibi reſpondeat, & ad aliquem ſanctorum convertere; Hence the Papiſts would prove Invocation of Saints, whereas it ſhould be tranſlated Voca quaſo, ſeu voca jam an ſit qui reſpondeat, & ad quem è Sanctis reſpicies? q. d. ad neminem. The vulgar makes it a ſimple ſpeech without any interrogation, the meaning of Eliphaz is, q. d. Go to I pray thee, call or bid any one appear or come, that by his conſent approves of thy opinion, try whether any one is of thy mind, which acknowledgeſt not that great calamities are inflicted by God for great ſins; To which of the Saints that ever have lived, or yet do live in the earth, wilt thou turn, by whoſe teſtimony thou ſhalt be helped in this thy comglaint againſt God?

Pſal. 2. 12. The vulgar hath Apprehendite Diſciplinam, apprehend Diſcipline or Inſtruction, whereas in the Hebrew it is, Oſculamini filium, [i] Kiſs the Sonne. Thus an evident place againſt the Jews for the ſecond Perſon in Trinity is obſcured and overthrown, by the corrupt Latine Text. To ſay the ſenſe is the ſame, is in vain; for an Intrrpreter ought not to change the words, and then ſay he hath kept the ſenſe; neither is the ſenſe of the words the ſame; Who will ſay, to kiſs the Sonne is the ſame with lay hold of Diſcipline? We muſt needs imbrace the Doctrine of Chriſt, if we acknowledge him to be our Meſſiah; but hence it doth not follow, that theſe two are the ſame, for then all things which agree ſhould be one and the ſame, which will not ſtand. The Chaldee Paraphraſt favouring that reading, Δράξασθε παιδείας, LXX.

[i] Invictum in hoc loco prout in Hebræo extat, contra Judæos pro Deitate Chriſti argumentum ſitum eſſe agnoſcunt Pontificii.

Amama Antibarb. Bibl. l. 3. Proculdubio ex diro illo erga Chriſtum Dei filium odio, profecta eſt illa Ebræi textus detorſio, potius quam interpretatio; ringi enim videbat Judæos, cum audiunt, Meſſiam Dei eſſe filium. Mayerus in Philologia Sacra. Illuſtre eſt vaticinium de Chriſto ſadiſſimè obſcuratum à Græco & Latino interprete à quibus nostra vox eſt expreſſa. Chamierus de Canone, l. 13. c. 9.

doth it to defend the errour of the denying the Deity of the eternall Sonne of God.

Sæpe Codices Hebræi magis Judæos vexant quam Græci, aut Latini. Certe in Psal. 2. Latini & Græci habent, Apprehendite Disciplinam, ne irascatur Dominus, ex quo nihil apertè contra Judæos deduci potest : at in Hebræo est נַשְּׁקוּ בַר Osculamini Filium ne irascatur, id est, reverentiam exhibete filio Dei, ne ipse irascatur, &c. qui locus est invictissimus contra Judæos. Bellarminus. de verbo Dei. lib. 2. cap. 2.

Psalmi videntur data opera versi in contumeliam Latini Sermonis. Chamier.

Jerom præfat. in Prov. saith, That he had allotted himself but three dayes for the translating of the three Books of Salomon, viz. the Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Canticles; which yet a man will hardly be able to read over well and exactly in a moneth, by reason of the great difficulties he will there meet withall, as well in the words and phrases, as in the sense. And nevertheless (if the pretences of the Church of Rome be true) this little three dayes work hath been so happy, as to be not only approved and esteemed, but even canonized also by the Councel of Trent. Now whether the will of God be that we should receive this Translation of his, as his pure word, or not, I shall leave to those, who have a desire and ability to examine : However I dare confidently affirme, that S^t Jerom himself never had any the least thought or hope that ever this piece of his, should one day come to this honour, it being a thing not to be imagined, but that he would have taken both more time, and more pains in the thing, if ever he had either desired or foreseen this. Daille du vrai usage des Peres, l. 2. c. 3.

The vulgar Latine of the New Testament is no lesse corrupted than of the Old.

Supersubstantialem, id est, Ad substantiæ nostræ Conservationem necessarium. Eman. Sa.

Mat. 6. 11. The English Papists at Rhemes (who translated the New Testament into English, not out of the Greek Text, but out of the vulgar Latine) read, Give us to day our super-substantial bread, the Latine hath it, Panem super-substantialem for Quotidianum, Daily bread. The Rhemists note upon the same is, By this Bread so called here according to the Latine and Greek word, we ask not onely all necessary sustenance for the body; but much more all spirituall food, viz. the blessed Sacrament it self, which is Christ the true Bread that came down from Heaven, and the Bread of life to us that eat his Body. Our Saviour Christ which condemned vain repetion, and by a form of prayer provided against the same, is made here of the Jesuites to offend against his own rule : for that which is contained in the second Petition, they teach to be asked in the fourth. Secondly, They lodge in one Petition things of divers kinds, and farre removed in nature, spiritual and corporeal, heavenly and earthly; yea the creature and the Creator. Thirdly, Hence it should follow, that he taught them expressely to ask that which he had neither instituted, nor instructed them of, and whereof his Disciples were utterly ignorant. Salomon, from whom our Saviour seemeth to have taken this Petition, confirms that exposition of things tending to uphold this present life, Prov. 30. 8. Lechem Chukki, The Bread which is ordained for me. The Jesuites will never be able to justifie the old Interpreter, which translateth one word the same both in syllables and signification, in one place Supersubstantial, and in another, viz. in Luke, Quotidianum or Daily, against which interpretation of his, he hath all Antiquity before that Translation, and some of the Papists themselves retained the words of Daily Bread.

Omnes veteres Latini Scriptores panem quotidianum legerunt, itaque incautè quidam nostro tempore in vulgata Editione pro quotidiano Supersubstantialem posuerunt, quod corporis Cibo quem à nobis peti probavimus, minimè convenit. Maldonatus, & Jansenius idem ferè habet Harm. cap. 41.

Their own Dictionaries and Doctors expound the Greek word Κεχαριτωμένη

Bellarm. l. 1. de bonis operibus, c. 6, prefers Quotidianum, and defends it against the other. Tostatus applieth it to temporall things.

The Syriack saith Panis indigentiæ, vel sufficientiæ nostræ.

Luke 1. 18. Plena gratia for gratis dilecta, as Chrysostome renders it, Hail Mary gratified or undeservedly accepted, or whom Gods singular favour had made acceptable.

full

full of grace, for freely beloved. The word ſignifieth not any grace or virtue inherent in one, but ſuch a grace and favour as one freely vouchſafeth and ſheweth to another; the word retained by the Syriack in this place is Taibutha, and ſignifieth happineſs, bleſſedneſs, goodneſs, bountifulneſs. Tremellius turneth it gratia, which may and ought to be Engliſhed favour, as the Greek word ſignifieth, and is expounded by the Angel and the Virgin Mary themſelves, the Angel adding in the ſame verſe, The Lord is with thee, meaning, by his ſpeciall favour; and in v. 30. ſaying, She had found favour with God. The Virgin in her thankfull ſong magnifying the mercy of God toward her, that he had ſo graciouſly looked on her in ſo mean eſtate, as to make her the mother of her own Saviour, after ſo marvellous a manner.

They fooliſhly ſalute her, who is removed from them by infinite ſpace, and whom their Hail cannot profit, being in Heaven, as the ſalutation of the Angel did and might do, whilſt ſhe was here in the vale of miſery. Their Alchymie alſo is ridiculous, to make that a prayer unto her, which was a prayer for her; to make it daily, that ſerved in that kind for one onely time; to make it without calling, which the Angel durſt not do, unleſs he had been ſent.

Who was he that corrected the place in Luke, which ſpeaketh of a woman, who having loſt a groat, ſwept the houſe to find? who put evertit domum, ſhe overturned the houſe, inſtead of everrit domum, ſhe ſwept the houſe? but he who had read over ſo many Claſſick Authors, that in ſome blind corner he met with evertit in ſtead of everrit. They have alſo ſerved the place in the Acts of the Apoſtles with the ſame ſawce. For inſtead of demiſſus per ſportam, they have put demiſſus per portam. In honour of which Correction, theſe four Verſes were made by one that heard a Popiſh Preacher follow that Tranſlation in his Sermons.

Par ici paſſa devant hier
Un treſ-notable Charpentier,
Qui beſongna de telle ſorte,
Que d' un panier fit une porte.

That is,

This way the other day did paſſe,
A jolly Carpenter as ever was:
So ſtrangely skillfull in his trade,
That of a Basket a doore he made.

World of wonders, Part 2. Chap. 29.

Epheſ. 5. 32. [a] Vulg. Sacramentum hoc magnum eſt, and the Rhemiſts, This is a great Sacrament, for great myſtery. Sacraments are myſteries, but all myſteries are not properly Sacraments. How can it be a Church Sacrament, which hath neither element, nor word of promiſe? Secondly, Sacraments are the peculiar and proper poſſeſſion of the Church of Chriſt; how can that be a Sacrament, which is (and lawfully may be uſed) out of the Church, amongſt the Turks and Jews, to whom the benefit of Matrimony cannot be denied? The old Interpreter, Col. 1. 27. tranſlateth the ſame word a myſtery or ſecret.

Chemnitius reckons this place among thoſe which the Papiſts abuſe, not among the corrupted; for [b] Saerament is the ſame with the Ancient Latine Divines, that μυςηριον is with the Greeks. Chamier.

[a] Non habet ex hoc loco prudens lector de Paulo, conjugium eſſe Sacramentum, non enim dicit Sacramentum ſed myſterium hoc magnum eſt. The Apoſtle ſaith, he ſpeaketh not of corporal marriage of a man and his wife, but of the ſpiritual marriage of Chriſt and his Church.

[b] Eraſmus dicit an ſit ſacramentum olim dubitatum erat à ſcholaſticis, Certè ex hoc loco non poſſit effici; nam particula adverſativa ego autem ſatis indicat hoc myſterium ad Chriſtum & eccleſiam pertinere, non ad maritum & uxorem. Marc. 6. 8. Vide Salmeronem & Riberam in loc. Dr Fulk againſt Martin. Vide Whitakeri Controverſiam primam quæſt. ſecundum cap. 10, 11, & 12. de Scripturis. Sixtinus Amama cenſuram vulgatæ verſionis in Pentateucho cœpit, telam pertexturus niſi morte fuiſſet præventus. Waltherus in officina Biblica. Sixtinus Amama Hereticus, & verſionis Sixtinæ inimiciſſimus, ut proinde merit dici poſſit Anti-Sixtinus Tract. Joan Dr Eſpieres de Text. Heb. Diſput. 2. Dub. 2.

Heb. 11.

Heb. 11, 21. The vulgar hath, & Jacob adoravit fastigium virgæ, the Rhemists adored the top of his rod; whereas the words are, He worshipped upon the top of his staff, and not as they have falsely turned it; so also doth the Syrian Paraphrast read it. The word ῥάβδος used elsewhere in the New Testament for a walking-staff, agreeth fitly unto Jacob, who being both old and sick, had need to stay himself thereupon, whilst he praised God. Joseph was no King, and therefore had no Scepter to fall down before. In the Hebrew, Gen. 47. for top we read head, which by a metaphor, signifies the top, because the head is the end and highest part of man, and consequently of any thing else. And for staff we now read in the Hebrew bed, which fell out, because the word mitteh there extant, pricked with other vowels, signifieth a staff, for in the Hebrew matteh is a staff, and mitteh a bed. The Septuagint whom the Apostle follows, read it matteh, and so translated it staff, otherwise then we now read it in the Hebrew Text. If we follow the Hebrew Text, as it is now extant, the sense will be, That Jacob, because he could not raise his body out of his bed, therefore he bowed his head forward upon his beds head, and so worshipped God.

Beza speaking of the divers Latine Translations of the New Testament onely, he saith of the vulgar Latine, That he followeth it for the most part, and preferreth it before all the rest. Maxima ex parte amplector & cæteris omnibus antepono. He speaks of the New Testament onely, and of that Latine Translation of the New Testament, in comparison of all other Latine Translations which were before him, as Erasmus, Castalio, and such like.

These places may serve to shew, that the vulgar Latine is corrupt, no Book being entire or free from error. Isidore Clarius Brixianus (præfat. in Biblia) a great learned man of their own affirmeth, That it hath 8000 places, in which the sense of the Holy Ghost is changed. Since the Councel of Trent, two Popes have set forth this vulgar Edition diversly; which of these shall be received as authentical? How often do the Papists leave the vulgar in all their controversies, when it is for their advantage so to do? it is a matter ordinary with them, and needlesse to be proved.

There is no Edition Ancienter than the Hebrew; if the Latine hath been used a 1000 years in the Church, the Hebrew hath been used almost 3000 years; the Chaldee, Arabick, Syriack and Greek Editions also have been used above a 1000 years, and so should be authentique by the Papists Argument.

Having spoken of the authority of the Scriptures, the Canonial Books, and the Authenticall Editions; I now go on to treat of the end of the Scripture, its adjuncts or properties fitted to that end, and the Interpretation of Scripture.

The end of the Scripture comes next to be considered, of this I have spoken somewhat afore, but shall now inlarge my self.

The end of the Scripture is considered, 1. In respect of God. [c] 2. In respect of us.

[c] God in Christ or God and Christ is the object of Christian Religion; without knowledg of Christ we cannot know God savingly, Joh. 11. 37. In Judah only is God known.

In respect of God, the end of the Scripture is a glorifying of him, John 7, 18. 2 Cor. 4. 6. by it we may learne to know, love and fear him, and so be blessed, Hos. 6. 3. Psal. 9. 14. The glory of God is the chief end of all things, Prov. 16. 4.

In respect of us, The end of the Scripture is, to convert the soul, Psal. 19. 7. it serves to humble us for sin, Jer. 23. 20. to cleanse the heart, Psal. 119. 9. it comforts and binds up the broken heart, Job 33. 35.

Its end is,

1. Intermediate, Temporall Edification, which is fitly referred to five [d] princi-

No man cometh to the Father but by me. The ultimate object of faith is God, 1 Pet. 1. 21. [d] 2 Tim. 3. 16. Rom. 15. 4. The word of God is profitable five wayes: 1. For confirmation of true Doctrine, or teaching men the truth. 2 Tim. 3. 16. the Apostle tels us of four ends of Scripture: The first two are commonly referred to Doctrinals; the last two to Practicals: If any of these be wanting, a Christian is not perfect, so much as in the perfection of parts; he is but half a Christian, who is an Orthodox believer, if he be not practicall also; and he is but half a Christian, who is practical, if he be not an Orthodox believer. Mr Gillesp. miscel. c. 12. See Bynians Groans of a damned soul on Luke 19. 29, 30, 31.

pal

pall uſes : The two firſt reſpect the mind, the other three the heart, will and affections.

It is profitable for Doctrine, it ſerves to direct to all ſaving truth; nothing is to be received as a truth neceſſary to ſalvation, but what is proved out of Scripture. Where that hath not a tongue to ſpeak, I muſt not have an eare to heare : Hoc quia de ſcripturis non habet autoritatem, eadem facilitate contemnitur, qua probatur, Hieron.

2. Reproof or Confutation, to refute all errors and heterodox opinions in Divinity. By this ſword of the Spirit, Chriſt vanquiſhed Satan, Matth. 4. 7, 10. by the Scripture he oppoſed the Jews, John 5. 45, 46, 47. & 10. 34. by this he refuted the Scribes and Phariſees, Matth. 9. 13. and 22. 1. Luke 10. 25, 26, 27. Matth. 19. 34. and 21. 12, 13. the Sadduces, Matth. 22. 29. Thus Apollo convinced the Jews who denied Jeſus to be the Chriſt. Acts 18. 28. Thus the Apoſtles convinced thoſe which urged Circumciſion, and the obſervation of the Jewiſh Law, Acts 15. 15. Hereticks are to be ſtoned with Scripture-Arguments, Lapidandi ſunt Hæretici ſacrarum literarum argumentis. Athanaſius. By this Auſtin refuted the Pelagians, Irenæus the Valentinians, Tertullian the Marcionites, Athanaſius the Arians.

2. Reproof of error, 1 Tit. 9. Rectum eſt index ſui & obliqui. Quibus principiis veritas aſtruitur, iiſdem principiis falſitas deſtruitur. Tertullian calls the Scripture Machæra contra hæreſes. Auſer hæreticis quæcunque Ethnici ſapiunt, ut de ſcripturis ſolis quæſtiones ſuas ſiſtant : Et ſtare non poterunt. Tertul. de reſurrectione carnis. In comitiis Vindelicorum, cum Epiſcopus Albertus, aliquando legeret Biblia (referente Lutnero in Sermon. Convival.) & interrogaſſet quidam è Conſiliariis, quid libri hic eſſet : Neſcio equidem (reſpondet) qualis ſit liber, ſed omnia quæ in eo lego, noſtræ religioni planè ſunt contraria. Dr Prid. orat. octava de vocatione miniſtror. Ces grands Heros, que Dieu à faict lever des le Commencement de Ceſte bien-heureuſe reſtauration de l' Evangile, ont travaillé ſi avantageuſement, par l' eſcriture, qu' ils ont cauſe tout ce qui ſe void aujourd', huy de deeſpoir en nos adverſaires, quand en les attaque par ce coſté. La concluſion Des Diſputes Papiſtes Par Chamier. l. 2.

3. Correction of iniquity, ſetting ſtraight that which is amiſs in manners and life. 3. Correction of ill behavior.

4. Inſtruction to righteouſneſs, Inſtruunt Patriarchæ etiam errantes. Baſil ſaith, The Pſalms are a common Store-houſe and Treaſury of good Inſtruction. The Title of the 32 and ſome other Pſalms is Maſchil, that is, A Pſalm of Inſtruction. 4. Inſtruction in a good behavior.

One great benefit by the word of God is counſell, how to direct our affairs according to Gods will, Pſal. 119. 24.

1. God is the ſcope and end of our lives, we are to give an account to him, 2 Cor. 5. 9, 10. all the ſucceſſe of our actions depends on his concurrence and bleſſing, Job 5. 13. Eſay 44. 25.

2. We need direction in all our wayes, in regard of the darkneſs of our underſtandings, Prov. 12. 15. & 28. 26.

3. The only good counſell we can have, is from God in his Word, Pſalme 73. 2.

4. The counſell God gives us in his Word, is ſufficient for all our neceſſities, Acts 20. 27. to guide us in all our actions, Pſal. 119. 105. in dark and doubtfull caſes, it will informe us in our duty, 2 Tim. 3. 17. it will teach us to go to God for wiſdome, and obſerve the anſwer, to ask Gods leave, counſell, and bleſſing.

5. Comfort in all troubles, Pſal. 19. 8. and 119. 50. the Greek word for Goſpel, ſignifieth glad-tidings. David calleth the word his delights in the plurall number, Pſal. 119. 24. 92. 145. The Promiſes are the Chriſtians beſt Cordials; as Gods Promiſes are the rule of what we muſt pray for in faith, ſo they are the ground of what we muſt expect in comfort. 5. Conſolation in troubles. Rom. 15. 4. Pſal. 119. 29. Vide Zepperi Artem habendi & audiendi concionem, l. 1. c. 3. p. 34, 35.

The Scripture reſts us of the pardon of ſinne, the peace of Conſcience, the favour of God, the joyes of another life; when David was almoſt dead in affliction, this word raiſed him up, Pſal. 119. 6. verè verbum eſt vox ſuſcitantis è mortuis, Luther. It comforts againſt the ſting of ſinne, the accuſations of conſcience, and a broken Law, the rage of Satan, the feare of wrath and vengeance, it is a proper cure for ſpirituall troubles, Pſal. 119. 49. an univerſall cure, a full remedy, Pſal. 56. 10. See Eſay 57. 16, 17, 18. 1 Cor. 10. 13.

cure

It workes, 1. A reall joy, 2 Cor. 6. 10.
2. A cordiall joy, Pſal. 4. 7.
3. A great joy, 1 Pet. 1. 8.
4. A pure joy.
5. It is a joy that ends well.
6. It is a delight that overcomes the ſenſe of our afflictions, Heb. 6. 1. 1 Theſ. 1. 5.

The word affords this joy,
1. Becauſe it requires it from us, Matth. 5. 12. Rom. 5. 3. James 1. 2.
2. It miniſtreth it to us, Rom. 15. 4. Heb. 12. 5.
3. The uſuall comforts it gives in affliction are theſe.
1. In regard of the Author, our Father, John 18. 11. Heb. 12. 5.
2. The neceſſity of them, 1 Pet. 1. 6.
3. The nature and uſe of them, they are a medicine, not poiſon, Eſay 27. 9. Heb. 12. 12.
4. It is in meaſure, Eſay 27. 8. 1 Cor. 10. 13.
5. He helps us to bear affliction, Heb. 5. 13.
6. From the fruite and finall iſſue of them, 2 Cor. 4. 17.

All things which belong to the Goſpell are comfortable: 1. God the Author of the Goſpel, and revealed in it, is the God of all comfort, 2 Cor. 1. 3. 2. Jeſus Chriſt the Subject of the Goſpel, is called Conſolation in the abſtract, Luke 2. 25. 3. The holy Ghoſt, which breathes in the Goſpel, is called The Comforter, John Chap. 15. 16. 4. The Miniſters or Ambaſſadors of the Goſpel, are the Meſſengers of peace and comfort.

2. The ultimate and chiefeſt end of the Scriptures is, our Salvation and Life eternall, John 5. 39. and 20. 31. 2 Tim. 3. 15. It will ſhew us the right way of eſcaping Hell, and attaining Heaven: It will ſhew us what to believe and practiſe, for our preſent and eternall happineſſe.

This was Gods aime in cauſing the Scripture to be written, and we ſhall finde it fully available and effectuall for the ends for which it was ordained by God.

Chap. VIII.

Of the Properties of the Scripture.

The properties which the Scripture muſt have for the former end, are theſe:

It is,
1. Of Divine Authority.
2. True and Certain.
3. The rule of Faith and Manners.
4. Neceſſary.
5. Pure and Holy.
6. Sufficient and Perfect.
7. Perſpicuous and Plain.

1. Its of Divine Authority, [4] we muſt believe it for its own ſake. It is Divine.

[4] Divina auctoritas Scripturæ eſt Infallibilis veritas in verbis & ſenſibus, ab quam omnes fidem ei & obedientiam debent. Altingius. Exod. 32. 16. 2 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 21. Heb. 11, John 12. 14, 26.

1. In

1. In its Efficient cause and original, which is God the Father dictating, in his Son declaring and publishing, by his holy Spirit confirming and sealing it in the hearts of the faithfull. He wrote the Decalogue immediately with his own finger, and commanded the whole System, and all the parts of Scripture, to be written by his servants the Prophets and Apostles, as the publick Actuaries and Penmen thereof; therefore the authority of the Scripture is as great as that of the holy Ghost, [e] who did dictate both the matter and words: Those speeches are frequent, The Lord said; and, The mouth of the Lord hath spoken.

[e] Divina auctoritas suam trahit originem una ex parte ex immediato Spiritus S. afflatu, & ex alterâ ex sublimitate rerum quas exponit. Waltherus in officina Biblica. Restituerat initio Lutherus pulcherrimam illam, ex solo Dei verbo testimonia petendi, consuetudinem: qua ratione, suos adversarios in maximas angustias brevi tempore adduxerat: ita eos verbi authoritate premebat. Baronis Præfat. ad Prælect. in Jonam Prælect. 3.

2. In the subject matter, which is truth according to godlinesse, certain, powerfull, of venerable antiquity, joyned with a sensible demonstration of the Spirit, and Divine presence, and with many other things attesting its Divine Authority.

Whence it follows, that the Authority of the holy Scriptures is,

1. Infallible, [f] which expresseth the mind and will of God, to whom truth is essential and necessary.

2. Supream and Independent into which at last all faith is resolved, from which it is not lawfull to appeal.

By which singular Authority the Scripture is distinguished, both from all prophane and sacred Writings; and Paul honours it with this Elogy, A faithfull saying, and worthy of all acceptation, 1 Tim. 1. 15. A more sure word, 2 Pet. 1. 19. the Comparative for the Superlative, in which there is no doubting and uncertainty, but all things firm.

[f] Mat. 5. 18. Scriptura est αὐτόπιστος & καθ' ἑαυτὸ & propter se credenda, quia Θεόπνευστος & est Divinitus inspirata. Hic illud Pythagoricum valet αὐτὸς ἔφα. We must take heed of believing Scripture to be the word of God, because there is the greatest reason for it, but for its divine Authority. Mat. 24. 35.

As God is Jehovah of himself, so is his word Authoritative of it self, and is true, and to be obeyed, whether thou think it Scripture or no. There is no higher Authority for thee to appeal to, it is above opinions of men, conscience, and therefore it must determine all controversies.

2. It is true [g] and certain, verity is affirmed of the Scriptures primarily, internally, and by reason of it self, which is called the truth of the object; which is an absolute and most perfect agreement of all things delivered in the Scripture, with the first truth or divine will, of which the Scripture is a symbole and lively Image, so that all things are delivered in it as the holy Ghost hath dictated, whence those honourable Titles are given to it, the Scripture is called, A sure word, 2 Pet. 1. 19. Psal. 19. 7. The Scripture of truth, Dan. 10. ult. Words of truth, Eccles. 12. 10. Jam. 1. 18. Col. 1. 5. yea, Truth it self, John 17. 17. See Revel. 22. 6. having the God of truth (Psal. 31. 5.) for the Author, Christ Jesus the truth for the witness; the Spirit of truth for the Composer of it, and it worketh truth in the hearts of those which hear it, 2 Pet. 2. 2. The Apostle prefers the Scripture, before the revelation made by Angels, Gal. 1. 8. Christ commends the certainty of it above all other sorts of revelation, 1 Pet. 1. 19. above information from the dead, Luke 16. 31.

[g] The material parts of Scripture are true. Historical narrations; all the Histories there related, are undoubtedly true, that of the Creation, Fall, of Christ. 2. Threatnings, the eternal torments in hell are sure, as if thou wast already in them. 3. Promises, the Scripture cals them the sure mercies of David. 4. Predictions and Propheſies, in Daniel. Revelation, as the downfall of Antichrist, they speak therefore of things to come in the present tense, to note thereby the certainty of the accomplishment, Isa. 9. 6. Apocal. 18. 2. Veritas est conformitas rei cum Archetypo, that is a great excellency of the word of God, to be the word of truth, Ephes. 1. 13, Jam. 1. 18. Act. 26. 27. It is so called, 1. In opposition to the shadowes and types in the Law, John 1. 17. 2. By way of exclusion of all falshood, it comes from the God of truth. 3. It contains all needfull and transcendent truths. Christ fullfilled some Scriptures sensu literali, as John 19. 28, 29. some sensu mystico, as that a bone of him shall not be broken, that was literally spoken of the Paschal Lamb. 3. Sensu accommodativo, by way of allusion, as that I calld my Son out of Egypt. He made it his businesse to fulfill the Scripture in all that he did and suffered, Joh 5. 30. & 6. 38. and all the Scripture, not this or that, the propheſies, types, ceremonies, and all the commandments which God commanded him, Joh. 10. 18. & 12. 49, 50. and with delight, Psal. 40. 8. Joh. 4. 34.

The word of God is not only true, but eminently true, truth it self, Prima veritas, and pura[b] veritas.

[b] Ego in hujusmodi quorumlibet hominum scriptis liber sum quia solis Canonicis scripturis debeo sine ulla recusatione consensum. August. de natura & gratia. c. 6.

The Scripture hath a twofold truth:

1. Of Assertion, it containeth no errour, Psal. 19. 8.

2. Of Promise, there is no unfaithfulnesse in it, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Tit. 3. 8. In the promise by God of the Messiah, in that promise by Christ of the Spirit.

The first truth refers to the matter which it signified, properly called Truth or Verity.

The second refers to the intention of the Speaker, which is properly called Veracity or Fidelity; the latter is implyed, Psal. 19. Thy testimonies are sure, 2 Pet. 1. 19 and so, The sure mercies of David; the former is implyed, in that the Word is purer than gold seven times refined.

The essential form of the word is truth informing the whole and every part, all divine truth is there set down. There is, 1. Veritas speculativa, the divine judgement of things. 2. Veritas practica, as God judgeth things fit to be done, or not to be done, Isa. 25. 1. Deus est prima veritas essentialis, verbum Dei prima veritas normalis. Maccovii Distinct. Theol. c. 1.

There are two signs of truth in the Scripture:

1. The particularity of it, it names particulars in Genealogies, Dolosus versatur in generalibus.

2. Impartiality toward friends and their adversaries; the most holy men have their faults described, they give due commendation to their adversaries.

The truth of Scripture is, 1. More than any humane truth of sense or reason. 2. Above all natural reason; as the Doctrine of the Trinity, the Incarnation of Christ, Justification by faith in Christ. 3. A truth which evidenceth it self. 4. The standard of all truth; nothing is true in Doctrine or Worship, which is not agreeable to this.

3. The Scripture is the Rule of faith and manners. It is termed Canonical generally by the Fathers of the word Canon, [i] which signifieth a Rule, because it contains a worthy Rule of Religion, Faith and Godlinesse, according whereunto the building of the house of God must be fitted.

[i] Scriptura sancta appellatur Canonica, & totum ejus corpus Canon.

Rationem nominis aut omnes, aut ferè omnes, esse testantur, quia sit regula fidei. Chamierus. The Scripture is therefore called Canonical, because it prescribes a rule of our faith and life, Phil. 3 16. Gal. 6. 16. Tertullianus appellat Scripturam regulam veritatis. Augustinus de doctrina Christiana. l. 2. c. 8. ait in Scripturis invenii omnia quæ continent fidem moresque vivendi.

These properties (saith Suarez) are required in a Rule. 1. That it be known and easie; the Scripture is a light. 2. That it be first in its kind, and so the measure of all the rest. 3. It must be inflexible. 4. Universal.

It is a perfect Rule of Faith and Obedience, able to instruct us sufficiently in all points of Faith or Doctrinals, which we are bound to believe, and all good duties or practicals, which we are bound to practise. What soever is needfull to believe or to do to please God, and save our souls, is to be found here; whatsoever is not here found, is not needfull to believe and practice for felicity.

Christ proveth the Resurrection of the dead, being an Article of our Faith against the Sadducees, Mat. 22. 32. and the use of the Sabbath being a Rule of life against the Pharisees, by an inference made from the Scripture, Mat. 12. 7.

The heads of the Creed and Decalogue, are plainly laid down in Scripture, therefore there we have a perfect Rule of faith and manners.

It is a Rule, 1. For Faith. Jerome in his controversie with Helvidius saith, Credimus quia legimus, non credimus quia non legimus. We believe, because we read; we do not believe, because we do not read. Christ often saith, Have ye not read, is it not written, what is written in the Law? Luke 10. 26. Faith and the word of God must runne parallel. This we first believe, when we do [k] believe Adverf. Helvid. c. 9. Sacra Scriptura regula credendi certissima tutissima; est. Bellarm. de verbo Dei. l. 1. c. 2.

[k] Hoc primum credimus, cum credimus, quod nihil ultra credere debemus. See Mr Anthony Burgesse on Mark 1. 2, 3. Deut. 5. 29. Isa. 8. 20.

lieve (ſaith Tertullian) that we ought to believe nothing beyond Scripture. When we ſay all matters of Doctrine and Faith are contained in the Scripture, we underſtand, as the ancient Fathers did, not that all things are literally and verbally contained in the Scripture, but that all are either expreſſed therein, or by neceſſary conſequence may be drawn from thence. All controverſies about Religion are to be decided by the Scripture, *Deut.*12.32. & 4.2. Joſh. 1.7. Franciſcus de Salis a Popiſh Biſhop ſaith, The Goſpel was honoured ſo much, that it was brought into the Councel, and ſet in the midſt of them, and to determine matters of faith, as if Chriſt had been there.

Eraſmus in his Epiſtles, tells us of a Dominican, that when in the Schools any man refuted his concluſion, by ſhewing it contrary to the words of Scripture, he would cry out, Iſta eſt argumentatio Lutherana, proteſtor me non reſponſurum, This is a Lutheran way of arguing, I proteſt I will not anſwer to it.

2. It is a perfect Rule for our lives and practice, *Pſal.*19.11. & [1] *Pſal.*119.9. In Scriptures there are delivered remedies againſt all vices, and means are there laid down for the attaining of all vertues.

Luk.16.31. Joh.5.39. & 20.31. Act.26.22. & 1 Cor.4.6.

[1] Verba Scripturæ non ſunt legenda ſed vivenda. Doctrinæ ſanitas ſervatur confirmando verum, refellendo falſum, vitæ ſanctimoniafugiendo malum, faciendo bonum. Satis habet Scriptura quo veritatem doceat, errorem redarguat, iniquitatem corrigat, inſtituat ad juſtitiam. Nec hæc utiliter præſtat ſolummodo, quæ ſophiſtarum cavillatio, ſed etiam ſufficienter, nempe ut perfectus ſit homo, &c. Rainoldus. Scriptura ſacra eſt fidei & ſupernaturaliter credendorum, actionum item moralium, quâ ex parte ſpirituales ſunt, & ad finem ſupernaturalem ordinantur, adæquata regula, eſt etiam conſcientiæ lex & agendorum regula præcipua & ſuprema. Dr Sanders. *De obligat. conſc. Prælect.*4.

The Word is,

1. An Antidote againſt infection, 2 Pet. 1.4.
2. A Cordial to cheer us up and ſtrengthen us, Pſal. 119.54.
3. A Guide to direct us in the right way, Pſal. 119.105.

We muſt follow the Scriptures exactly, and not ſwerve to the right hand or left; a metaphor taken from a way or Rule, ſaith Chamier. When Linacer a learned Engliſhman, heard the beginning of the fifth of Matthew read, Bleſſed are the poor in ſpirit, &c. he broke forth into theſe words, Aut hoc non eſt Evangelium, aut nos non ſumus Chriſtiani; Either theſe ſayings are not Chriſts, or we are not Chriſtians.

In our whole courſe we ſhould walk by this Rule:

1. In ſpiritual things, we muſt pray, hear, faſt by Rule.
2. In our ordinary callings, in civil duties.
3. In our natural actions, eat and drink by Rule; ſleep, ſpeak, think, affect by Rule; rejoyce, grieve, love, hate.

Directions to walk by Rule:

1. Be humbled for all your ſtraying from the Rule, *Pſal.*119.59.
2. Be afraid leaſt you miſſe the Rule.
3. Study the Rule in the compaſſe of it, *Pſal.*119.9. *Pſal.*37.3.
4. Pray to God that you may walk by Rule, *Pſal.*17.5.
5. Set your ſelves ſtill in Gods preſence, Pſal. 16.8.

1. It is a perfect, not a partial and inſufficient Rule, as the Papiſts make it: As God is a perfect God, ſo his Word is a perfect Word; if it be but a partial Rule, then it doth not perfectly direct, and he that ſhould perfectly do the will of God revealed in Scripture, ſhould not yet be perfect. Secondly, if the Scripture be a partial Rule, then men are bound to be wiſe above that which is written; that is, above the Law and Goſpel. Regula fidei debet eſſe adæquata fidei, aut Regula non erit. Whitakerus. It teacheth us how to enjoy God, live with man, and govern our own ſouls, *Tit.*2.12.

1. All addition and detraction are forbidden to be made by any man to the Word, *Deut.*4.2. & 12.32. *Deut.*5.32. *Gal.*1.8.

2. The Scripture is ſaid to be perfect, to beget heavenly and ſaving wiſdom, Pſal. 19.8. 2 *Tim.*3.15,16,17.

[n] Deut. 17. 18. Isa. 8. 20. Luk. 16. 29. Act. 24. 14. Christians shall be judged by that hereafter, Joh. 12. 48. 2 Thess. 1. 8.

3. Men in the matter of Faith [n] and Religion are sent to the Scripture only. Quakers bid us, Look to the light within us; there is a light of reason that is perverted, and cannot be our Rule; Papists speak of the rules of S^t Francis, Dominick; but we must look after the Rule of the Spirit, the light without us, Isa. 8. 20. Zuinglius preached for many years this Doctrine, That the Scripture was a perfect Rule for faith and life, and so converted the Helvetians to the Protestant Religion.

2. The Scripture is an infallible Rule, Luke 1. 4. of which thou hast had a full assent. Regula rectè definitur mensura infallibilis quæ nullam vel additionem vel detractionem patitur.

3. It is a just Rule.

Lastly, It is an universal and perpetual Rule, both in regard of time and person; ever since the Scripture hath been, it hath been the onely Rule. In the Old Testament, To the Law and the Testimony. In the New, they confirmed all things by the Old, it directs in every case. 2. To all persons; this is able to make a Minister, yea a Councel, a Church wise to salvation; to reform a young man whose lusts are unbridled, Psal. 119. 9. to order a King, Deut.[n] 17. 29, 30. Vide Theod. l. 10. c. 70.

[n] Judæi decem ex hoc loco docuerunt regem suo manu sibi legem describere, etiamsi alias cum privatus esset, descripsisset. Chamierus.

We are all agreed, that the will of God revealed, must be, and is the Catholick Rule of Faith and Life. But we are not all agreed, which is the Revelation of the will of God. That the Book of the Creatures, and the principles of Nature doe reveal much natural moral verity and duty, we are agreed: but the doubt is of supernatural Revelation. And of this we are agreed, That whatsoever is certainly delivered to the Church by Prophet or Apostle, or any person infallibly proving a Divine Inspiration or Command, to deliver what he speaks, must be received as from God. And whatsoever is so revealed concerning faith or duty, by way of imposition, is our Rule; and if revealed to all, it is the Rule of all. M^r Baxters True Catholick, p. 214, 215. See more there.

Christians should frequently consult this Rule:

1. They should walk according to it, Psal. 119. 30. 2 Cor. 3. 2. should be walking Bibles.

2. A general good intention sufficeth not for a holy life, Eccles. 12. 13, 14. We must keep close to the Rule in every action, Ephes. 5. 15. See then how circumspectly you walk. We shall never walk accurately, unless we regard the Rule. It is so exact that one may easily swerve from it, Matth. 7. 14. and we are ignorant of many things in relation to faith and manners, Prov. 14. 8. Ephes. 5. 17. weak and easily overborne; and the Devil is subtill in his temptations, covers his foul designs with plausible pretences, Luke 9. 54, 55. therefore we should diligently read the Scripture, Josh. 1. 7, 8.

Regula fidei est quasi causa exemplaris fidei, quam videlicet fides in omnibus sequi, & cui se conformare debet.

Formale objectum fidei est causa objectiva fidei, seu est

Object. Faith was before the Scripture, therefore the Scripture is not the Rule of Faith.

Answ. The word of God is two-fold. 1. Revealed, that preceded faith. 2. Written, that did not.

Though it be a Rule, yet first, It doth not exclude other Ministerial helps, as Prayer, Preaching, the knowledge of the Tongues, and the Ministry of the Church: these are means to use the Rule, and subordinate to it, we need no more Rules: Therefore it is a vain and absurd Question of the Papists, Let a man be lockt up in a study with a Bible, what good will he get by it, if we cannot read?

principium propter quod formaliter & principaliter credimus. Baron. contra Turnebul. Nos discamus ex verbo non tantum sapere sed etiam loqui. Beza Epist. 7. David, Psal. 119. desires that all his counsels, thoughts, manners, actions, might be directed according to Gods word. The Scriptures contain, 1. A necessary Doctrine, viz. of the Law and Gospel, Matth. 22. 37. John 13. 16. without which we cannot be saved, Romans 7. 7. It is, 2. Necessary in respect of the efficient Cause. 3. Of the Forme, Matthew 22. 29. 4. The End, John 20. 31.

2. There

2. There must be reason and judgement to make use of it, and apply it: Judge what I say, saith Paul, 1 Cor. 10.15. We acknowledge the Scripture to be a perfect Rule of faith and manners, yet not as excluding the use of Reason; but supposing it. Dr Sandersons Preface to his 34. Sermons, Prælect. 4. de obligat. Conſ. Sect. 17. he makes that a most dangerous errour, Nihil licitè fieri posse, nedum præcipi, quod non est à Deo in Scriptura aut præceptum, aut laudabili saltem exemplo comprobatum.

The Scripture should rule our hearts, thoughts and inward cogitations, our words and actions; we should pray, hear, receive the Sacrament according to the directions of it, buy, sell, cloathe our selves, and carry our selves toward all, as that bids us. 2 Sam. 22.23. the people of God wrote after this copy, followed this Rule, Psal. 119.5, 59, 111. because they desired in all which they did to please God (now God is pleased when his own will is done) and to glorifie him in their lives, and therefore they framed themselves according to his statutes. We cannot better express an high esteem of God and his excellencies, than by following him in all things. Every one esteems that person most excellent, to whom he gives up himself most to be ruled and ordered. We must not give up our selves to the examples of the best men in all things, 1 Cor. 11.1. they are subject to errour, much lesse of the worst, the multitude, Ephes. 2.2. We must take heed also of walking by false rules; our own reason, Jer. 44.16, 17. the light within, unlesse it be a reflexion from that without, is darkness.

The Gospel is,

1. The purest Rule:

1. Subjectivè, In the matter of it, there are exact rules for sobriety, righteousness, holiness, Tit. 2.12.

2. Effectivè, In the power of it, none are made so pure as those which live by Gospel-rules.

2. The noblest Rule, it calls for, and brings to a willing service, Psal. 110.3. & 51.12.

All professions among men have their rules of life; the Philosophers, Stoicks, Peripateticks; the Jews, Sadduces, Pharisees, Essenes; the Mahometans, though such as nurse up all ungodlinesse; the Papists, amongst them, the Jesuites, Friers, their special orders; so Christ hath his Disciples, and the Gospel hath its Rules. Vide orationem Patricii Cockburni Scoti, De utilitate & excellentia verbi Dei.

The Scripture is necessary. Jude 3.

In respect of the substance thereof it was alwayes necessary; in respect of the manner of revealing it is necessary, since the time that it pleased God after that manner to deliver his Word, and shall be to the worlds end. It is not then absolutely and simply necessary, that the word of God should be delivered to us in writing, but only conditionally, and upon supposition. God for a long time, for the space of 2400. years, unto the time of Moses, did instruct his Church with an immediate living voice, and had he pleased still to go on in that way, there had been no necessity of Scripture now, more than in that age; there was a continual presence of God with them, but now there is a perpetual absence in that way; and the word of God was written. Scripturæ Sacræ Divina eminentia & efficientia.

Necessitas non absoluta, sed divina ordinationi, ac Ecclesiæ statui congrua. Bisterf.

1. For the brevity of mans life. See the 5th and the 11th Chapters of Genesis. The Patriarchs were long lived before and after the flood, to the times of Moses; they lived some Centuries of years, therefore afterward the purity of the Word could not fitly be preserved without writing. By writing we have the comfort of the holy word of God, which from writing receiveth his denomination, it being called Scripture, which is nothing else but writing°.

° Writing doth a larger good to a greater number, and for a longer time, than speaking, Psal 102.19.

Vox audita perit, litera scripta manet. To shew how much a more faithfull keeper, record is, than report, those few miracles of our Saviour which were written, are preserved and believed; those infinitely more that were not written, are all lost and vanished out of the memory of men.

2. That

2. That the Church might have a certain and true Rule and Canon, whereby it might judge of all Questions, Doubts and Controversies of Religion, * Luke 1.4. Every mans opinion else would have been a Bible, and every mans lust a Law.

3. That the faith of men in Christ which was to come, might the better be confirmed, when they should see that written before their eyes, which was done by the Messias, and see all things that were foretold of him, verified in the event.

4. That the purity of Gods worship might be preserved from corruption, and the truth propagated among all Nations.

5. To take off excuses from men, that they did not know, *Rom.*10,18. Civil Laws are written and published that offenders may be inexcusable.

The Penmen had a command from God. 1. A publick and outward command, as *Jer.*30.2. & 36. 2. Moses, Exod.17.14. & 34.17. and John was commanded twelve times in the Revelation to write, *Rev.*1.11. & 2.1,8,12,18. and 3.*Cha.*1.7. & 14. & 14.13. & 19.v.9. & 21.5,2. an inward command by private inspiration and instinct, 2 *Pet.*1.21.

5. The Scripture is Pure and Holy, it commands all good, and forbids, reproves and condemnes all sinne and ℘ filthinesse; it restraines not onely from evil words and actions, but thoughts, glances. Those are frequent adjuncts of the word of God, holy, pure and clean, Psal.12.6. & 18.31. & 119.40. *Prov.*30.5. It is pure in its narrations, it speaks purely of things evil and unclean.

It is termed ℘ holy, 2 Tim.3.15. in Latine, Litera sacræ, & Scriptura sacra. 1. From its efficient principal cause, God who is the holy of holies, holinesse it self, *Isa.*6.3. *Dan.*9.24. He is the Author and Inditer of it, Luke 1.67. 2. In regard of the instrumental cause, the Penmen of it were holy men, 2 *Pet.*1.21. Prophets and Apostles. 3. From its matter, the holy will of God, Acts 20.27. the Scripture contains holy and divine Mysteries, holy precepts of life, holy promises, *Psal.*105.42. holy Histories. 4. From its end or effect, the holy Ghost by the reading and meditation of the Scripture sanctifieth us, John 17.17. it sanctifieth likewise all the creatures to our use, so as we may use them with a good conscience, 1 *Tim.*4.5. By this Epithete it is distinguished from all other writings, *Rom.*1.2.

From the purity ℘ of it, the Scripture is compared to a glass, *Jam.*1.23. to fire, Jer. 23.29. to light, *Psal.*119.105. The reason of it is, because God himself is pure, most pure, *Psal.*92.ult. *Hab.*1.13.

℘ Among the Turks Polygamy is lawfull, Theft was permitted among the Spartans.

℘ Litera sacræ dicuntur Κατ' ἐξοχὴν Scriptura, ut non solùm à sæcularibus & profanis literis, sed etiam à quibuscunque, quæ de sacris rebus agunt, discernantur.

℘ Mahomet said his doctrine came from God, but the blasphemy and villany therein contained, sheweth, it came from Satan, whereas the purity and perfection of the Doctrine contained in the Scripture, sheweth that it is from above. Mahomet puts in some ingredients of the flesh, gives them liberty to revenge themselves, and to have as many wives as they would. There is in the precepts of Philosophers, little condemning of fornication, and of the desire of revenge.

It is pure, It begets grace, James 1.18. 1 *Pet.*1.23. and preserveth, and increaseth it, Acts 20.32. *Eph.*4.11,12.

The assertory part is pure; what it affirms to be, is; and what it denies to be, is not; *Psal.*19.7. & 93.5. James 1.18. 2. What it promiseth shall be performed, and what it threatneth shall be executed, *Num.*23.19. 1 *Sam.*2.30. *Zech.*1.6.3. What it commandeth is good, and what it forbiddeth is evil, *Deut.*4.8. *Psal.*119.108. & 19.8,9. *Rom.*7.12.

The Law is a copy of Gods holinesse: The Doctrine of the Gospel also is holy.

1. In its design and contrivance:
   1. To set forth the righteousnesse, mercy, wisdome, truth and power of a holy God in reconciling sinners to himself without impeachment of his mercy or justice.
   2. To restore lapsed man to his primitive integrity and holiness, *Eph.*4.23,24 *Colos.*3.10.

2. In

2. In the precepts of it, which have an exact consonancy to the Law.
3. In its use and tendency.
   1. The promises conduce to holiness. 2 *Cor.*7.1. 2 *Pet.*1.4.
   2. The invitation and call of it is to holiness, 1 *Thess.*5.7. 2 *Tim.*1.9.
   3. The peculiar graces of the Gospel are both parts and principles of holiness.
      1. Repentance, *Luk.*24.47. 2 *Cor.*7.11. Hatred of sinne is one principal work of repentance.
      2. Faith, *Gal.*5.21. *Jude v.*22. See *Act.*15.9.
      3. Hope, 1 *Thess.*5.8. 1 John 3.3.
      4. Love, *Gal.*5.22. See *Rom.*13.10. 2 *Cor.*5.14. John 14.21. 1 *Joh.*5.3.
   4. In its vertue and proper operation, *Ephes.*6.10. *Heb.*12.2. *Tit.*2.10,11.
   5. In the spiritual manner, it requires our obedience to be performed, James 2.10. It requires truth and sincerity in all our duties, *Psal.*10.3. Constancy and perseverance in well-doing, Heb. 3.6,14. & 10.36. *Jam.*1.12,25.
   6. The teacher of it is the holy Spirit of God, *Rom.*11.4. *Ephes.*3.5. *Joh.*6.45.
   7. Sets Christ before us for our imitation, 1 *Pet.*2.21. & 4.1,2.

In other Books some truth is taught, some good commended, some kind or part of happiness promised: But in the inspired Oracles of God, all truth is taught, all goodness commanded, all happiness promised; nay, we may invert the words with Hugo de Sancto Victore, and say, Quicquid ibi docetur est veritas, quicquid præcipitur bonitas, quicquid promittitur felicitas. All that is there taught is truth, all that is there commanded is goodnesse, all that is there promised is happinesse. D^r Featleys Preface to Newmans Concordance.

It is a wonderfull thing, that all the particulars which the Canticles contain, being taken from marriage, are handled so sincerely, that no blemish or spot can be found therein. [f] The general view of the holy Scriptures.

Notatur verecunda & casta scripturæ loquutio ex genere per Synecdochen, designantis specialem congressum, sic 1 Cor.7.1. Non est bonum tangere, & Gen.6.2. ingredi ad filias hominum. Quo major est spurcities eorum, qui ex sanctis Scripturæ loquendi formulis ansam arripiunt sermonis impuri. Cartw. in Harm. Evang. in Mat.1.18. Quidam Hebræorum linguam Hebraam, linguam sanctam dici putant, eo quod nulla propria vocabula in ea inveniantur, quibus pudenda utriusq; sexus Egestio, aliaq; obscena significantur. Paulus Fagius Annot. in Deut.23.11.

Therefore the Scriptures should be preached, read and heard with holy [t] affections, and should be reverently mentioned. [t] Sancta sanctè.

The Jews in their Synagogues will not touch the Bible with unwashed hands, they kisse it as often as they open and shut it, they sit not on that seat where it is laid, and if it fall on the ground, they fast for a whole day. The Turk writes upon the outside of his Alcoran, Let no man touch this Book, but he that is pure: I would none might meddle with ours (Alcoran signifieth but the Scripture, you need not be afraid of the word) but such as indeed are, what other men do but think themselves. M^r Gregory in his preface to observations upon some passages of Scripture.

6. The Scripture is Perfect [u].

The perfection of the Scripture is considered two wayes:

1. In respect of the matter, or the Books in which the holy Doctrine was written, all which (as many as are usefull to our salvation) have been kept inviolable in the Church, so that out of them one most perfect and absolute Canon of Faith and Life was made, and this may be called the integrity of the Scripture. [u] Luk.16.29. Joh.5.39. Psal.19. & 119. Augustinus affirmat, omnia quæ continent fidem & mores, in illis inveniri, qua apertè posita sunt in Scriptura. Chrysostomus manifesta itidem in divinis Scripturis esse perhibet, quæcunque necessaria. Tertullianus adorat Scripturæ plenitudinem, Et va denunciat Hermogeni si quid iis quæ scripta sunt vel detrahat, vel adjiciat. Rainoldus 1. Thesi. Deut. 4. 2. & 12. 32. Perfectionem Scripturarum probamus: 1. Ab earum Authore, Deo scilicet; à quo nihil imperfectum ullo modo, multo minus respectu finis, cui opus quodcunque destinat, procedere potest. 2. A Natura librorum Sacræ Scripturæ, 2 Cor. 3.14. Novi Testamenti eadem est ratio, ver. 6. Jam verò omne Testamentum quamvis humanum sit, perfectum est. 3. Ab expresso Testimonio, *Psal.*19.8. 4. A materia; quæ est omne Dei consilium, Act. 20.22. 5. A fine, qui est fides, Joh. 20. 31. Sapientia ad salutem, 2 Tim. 3.15. Institutio perfecta ad bona opera, 2 Tim. 3.16. Acquisitio vitæ æternæ, Joh. 20. 31. D. Oweni Exercit. pro San. Script. exercit. 3. *Sect.*29.

2. In

2. In respect of the form, viz. of the sense or meaning of these Canonical Books, or of divine Truth comprehended in them, which Books contain most fully and perfectly the whole truth necessary and sufficient for the salvation of the Elect; and therefore the Scriptures are to be esteemed a sole adequate, total and perfect measure and rule both of faith and manners, and this is the sufficiency of the Scriptures, which is attributed to it in a two-fold respect.

De Scriptura plenitudine & perfectione, quid sentiat Maldonatus. Vide ad Joan. 7. 4.

1. Absolutely in it self, and that in a threefold consideration. 1. Of the principle; for every principle, whether of a thing or of knowledge, ought to be perfect, since demonstration and true conclusions are not deduced from that which is imperfect, therefore it is necessary that the holy Scripture, being the first only immediate principle of all true Doctrine should be most perfect.

De Scriptura integritate. Vide Estium ad Act. 20 27.

2. Of the subject, for it hath all Essential parts, matter and form, and integral, Law and Gospel, and is wholly perfect: Both

See Bishop Ushers Body of Divinity, pag. 18, 19, 20, 21, 2 Tim. 3 16, 17. Joh. 15. 15. Bene habet, ut iis quæ sunt Scripta, contentus sis. Hilar.

1. Absolutely, because for the substance, it either expresly or Analogically contains the Doctrine concerning faith and manners, which is communicable and profitable for us to know, which may be proved also by induction, that all necessary opinions of faith, or precepts of life, are to be found in the holy Scripture.

In every age there was revealed that which was sufficient to salvation, and yet now no more than is sufficient; the Word it self is not now, but the revelation only is more perfect. The Old Testament was sufficient for the Jewes, but both the New and Old make but one compleat Body for the Church now. Singuli libri sunt sufficientes sufficientia partium ad quam ordinati sunt; tota verò Scriptura est sufficiens essentiali sufficientia per Libros singulos fusa. Jun. Animad. in Bellarm. Controv prima, capite quarto.

2. Relatively, because as it hath a perfection of the whole, so of the parts in the whole; that perfection is called essential, this quantitative. For all the Books are sufficient with an essential perfection, although integrally they have not a sufficiency of the whole, but onely their own, yet so that at distinct times every part sufficed for their times; but all the parts in the whole are but sufficient for us.

3. In its effect and operation it makes men perfect, 2 Tim. 3. 16, 17. Rom. 15. 4. Joh. 2. ult. & 5 39.

2. As opposed to unwritten Traditions, all which it excludes by its sufficiency; but we doe not understand by Traditions generally a Doctrine delivered in Word and Writing; but specially all Doctrine not written by Prophets or Apostles, whether Dogmatical, Historical, or Ceremonial; for a perfect reason of the primary opinions belonging to Faith and Manners, is delivered in Scripture; and those things which are out of, beside, or against the Scripture, do not bind the Conscience. 2. Historical, the Sayings and Deeds of Christ and the Apostles, are perfectly contained in the Scriptures, as many as suffice us for our salvation, John 20. 20, 31. Those things which are delivered out of Scripture, are to be esteemed mans writings. 3. Ceremonial or secondary opinions concerning Ecclesiastical Rites and Customes are for Essentials, Substantials and Fundamentals, generally contained in the word of God; the accidentals, accessories, and circumstantials are free and mutable. If Traditions agree with the Scripture they are confirmed by it; if they oppose it, they are disproved by it.

The perfection of the Scriptures is not,

First. Infinite and unlimitted: That is an incommunicable property of God; every thing which is from another as the efficient cause, is thereby limited both for the nature and qualities thereof.

Secondly, We do not understand such a perfection as containeth all and singular such things as at any time have been by Divine Inspiration revealed to holy men, and by them delivered to the Church, of what sort soever they were; for all the Sermons of the Prophets, of Christ and his Apostles, are not set down in so many words words as they uſed in the ſpeaking of them; for of twelve Apoſtles, ſeven wrote nothing, which yet preached, and did many things; neither are all the deeds of Chriſt and his Apoſtles written, for that is contradicted, John 20.30,31. & 21.25. but we mean only a Relative perfection, which for ſome certain ends ſake agreeth to the Scripture as to an inſtrument, according to which it perfectly comprehendeth all things which have been, are, or ſhall be neceſſary for the ſalvation of the Church.

The Scriptures are a perfect rule for matters of Faith, but not a perfect regiſter for matters of fact. Mr Geree.

Whitakerus de Script. cap.6. quæſt.6. Stapleton and Serrarius are more wary than ſome other Papiſts; We are abuſed (ſay they) when we are ſaid to hold, that the Scripture is not perfect; for (ſay they) a thing is ſaid to be imperfect, not when it wants any perfection, but when it wants a perfection due; as a man is not imperfect, if he have not an Angels perfection, becauſe this is not due unto him; they ſay, it is not a perfection due to the Scriptures, to teach us every thing neceſſary to ſalvation.

Thirdly, The ſeveral Books of Scripture are indeed perfect, for their own particular ends, purpoſes, and uſes, for which they were intended of the Lord; but yet not any one Book is ſufficient to the common end; the whole Scripture is compleat in all the parts thereof, one ſpeaking of that which another doth wholly paſs over in ſilence, one clearly delivering what was intricate in another. Paul ſpeaks much of Juſtification and Predeſtination in the Epiſtle to the Romans, nothing of the Euchariſt or Reſurrection.

Fourthly, Since God did reveal his will in writing, thoſe writings which by divine hand and providence were extant in the Church, were ſo ſufficient for the Church in that age, that it needed not Tradition, neither was it lawfull for any humane wight to adde thereto, or take therefrom; but when God did reveal more unto it, the former onely was not then ſufficient without the latter.

Fifthly, The holy Scripture doth ſufficiently contain and deliver all Doctrines which are neceſſary for us to eternal ſalvation, both in reſpect of faith and good works, and moſt of theſe it delivereth to us expreſly, and in ſo many words, and the reſt by good and neceſſary conſequence. The Baptiſm of Infants, and the conſubſtantiality of the Father and of the Son, are not in thoſe words expreſſed in Scripture, yet is the truth of both clearly taught in Scripture, and by evident proof may thence be deduced. That Article of Chriſts deſcent into Hell, eodem verbis, is not in the Scripture, yet it may be deduced thence, Acts 2.27. Some Papiſts hold, That we muſt not uſe the principles of Reaſon or Conſequences in Divinity, and require, that what we prove be expreſt in ſo many words in Scripture. Theſe are oppoſed by Vedelius in his Rationale Theologicum. l.1.c.3,4,5,8. and *l.*2. *c.*5,6. and alſo by Daille in his Book entituled, La foy fondee ſur les Saincles Eſcritures, 1. Partie, he ſhews there, That Chriſt and his Apoſtles, and the Ancient Fathers in diſputing againſt their Adverſaries, uſed conſequences drawn from the Scripture, *Mat.*12.32. *Act.*17.23. & 18.2,3. Act. 17.3. Opening and alledging. S[t] Luke there uſeth two words very proper for this ſubject; the firſt ſignifies to open, the other to put one thing neer another, to ſhew that the Apoſtle proved his concluſions by the Scriptures, in clearing firſt the Prophecies, and in ſhewing the true ſenſe, and after in comparing them with the events; the figures with the things, and the ſhadows with the body, where the light of the truths of the Goſpel of it ſelf ſhined forth, Mat. 22. 29, 31, 32. He blames them for not having learned the Reſurrection of the dead by this ſentence of the Scripture; therefore they ought to have learned it: Now the ſentence which he alledgeth, ſaith nothing formally and expreſly of the Reſurrection of the dead, but infers it from what he had laid down, Hic Dominum uti principiis rationis & naturæ adeo manifeſtum eſt, ut ne Veronius quidem Magiſter Artis negandi, negare illud poſſit. Vedel. *Rat. Theol. l.*2. *c.*6. Vide plura ibid. & c. 5.

Perinde ſunt ea quæ ex Scripturis colliguntur atque ea quæ ſcribuntur. Greg. Nazian. l. 5. Theol. Mat.28.29.

The ancient Fathers prove by conſequences drawn from Scripture, that God the Father is without beginning, againſt the Sabellians; and that the Sonne is conſubſtantial with the Father, againſt the Arians; that Chriſt hath two Natures, againſt the Eutychians. The Papiſts will not be able to prove their Purgatory, and many other of their corrupt opinions by the expreſſe words of Scripture.

We ſhall now lay down ſome Propoſitions or Theorems about the ſufficiency of Scripture.

Catholici in perfectione Scripturæ, Papiſtæ in imperfectione, totius cauſæ, id eſt, omnium controverſiarum de Religione, prorsum & puppim conſtituunt. Chamierus Tom. 1. de Canone, lib. 8. cap. 1.

First, In every age of the Church, the Lord hath revealed ſo much ſupernatural truth, as was for that age neceſſary unto ſalvation: his wayes he made known to Moſes, Pſal.103.7. and his ſtatutes to Iſrael, Deu.4.6. Pſ.147.20. Heb.1.1. Therefore that is an erroneous opinion, that before the Law written, men were ſaved by the Law of Nature, and in the time of the Law, by the Law of Moſes, and ſince in the time of the Goſpel by the Word of grace.

Secondly, The ſubſtance of all things neceſſary to ſalvation, ever ſince the fall of Adam hath been, and is one and the ſame, as the true Religion hath been one and unchangeable.

1, The knowledge of God and Chriſt is the ſumme of all things neceſſary to ſalvation, *Joh.*17.3. *Col.*2.2. but this knowledge was ever neceſſary, *Jer.*9.23. *Act.*4.12. the Fathers indeed ſaw Chriſt more obſcurely and ænigmatically, we more clearly, diſtinctly and perſpicuouſly, but yet they knew him, and believed in him unto ſalvation, as well as we, John 8.56.

1 Cor.10.1,2, 3.

2. The Covenant of Grace which God made with man is an everlaſting Covenant, therein the Lord hath revealed himſelf to be one and unchangeable; as in nature ſo in will, *Heb.*13.8. *Rom.*3.29. ſhewing that as God is one in nature, truth and conſtancy, and that as well toward the Gentiles, as toward the Jews, ſo he would juſtifie both the Circumciſion and Uncircumciſion, the Jew and the Gentile by one way of Religion; that is to ſay, through faith and belief in his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt.

3. Chriſt and his Apoſtles profeſſed and taught no new Religion, but the ſame which the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament did before inſtruct, *Mat.*5.17. *Joh.*5.39. *Act.*10.43. Luk. 24.25,26,27,44,45. Act. 18.28. & 17.7. & 26.22. & 28.23. Rom. 6. 26. Therefore the believing Jews, and the converted Gentiles are ſtiled the children of faithfull Abraham, being juſtified by faith as Abraham was. Whence we may conclude, that before, under, and after the Law, ſince the fall of Adam, there was never but one true Catholick Religion, or way to Heaven and Happineſſe.

Mat.8.11. Luk.19.9. Gal. 3.7,8,29. Rom.4.15,16.

Thirdly, The word of God being uttered in old time ſundry ways, was at length made known by writing; the Lord ſtirring up, and by his holy Spirit inſpiring his ſervants, to write his will and pleaſure.

Fourthly, So long as there was any truth in any age, neceſſary to be more fully and clearly known, than was already revealed in the Books of Moſes, it pleaſed God to ſtir up holy men, whom he divinely inſpired, and ſufficiently furniſhed to make the truth known unto the Church; thus after Moſes, during the time of the Law, the Lord raiſed up Prophets, who opened the perfect way of life unto the Church of the Old Teſtament more clearly, than it was before manifeſted in the Books of Moſes, the time and age of the Church requiring the ſame. The Church of the Jews in the ſeveral ages thereof was ſufficiently taught and inſtructed in all things neceſſary to ſalvation by the writings of Moſes and the Prophets, which appears:

Some Papiſts ſay the Scriptures are not imperfect, becauſe they ſend us to the Church, which is the perfect Rule, and therefore they are perfect implicitè, though not explicitè: but ſo I might ſay every ruſtick were a perfect Rule of Faith, becauſe he can ſhew me the Pope, who is the infallible Judge. If the Scripture ſend to the Church to learne that which is not in the Scripture, by this ſending ſhe confeſſeth her imperfection. See Moulins Buckler of Faith, pag. 45.

1. In that our Saviour being asked of one, What he ſhould do that he might inherit eternal life? anſwered, What is written in the Law and Prophets? How readeſt thou? Luk. 10.25,26. and out of the Scripture he declared himſelf to be the Saviour of the world, fore-told and promiſed, *Mat.*21.44.& 26.31. Luk. 4. 21. & 24,25,26, 27,44. Joh. 3.14.

the

2. The anſwer of Abraham to the rich man, ſending his friends to Moſes and the Prophets, ſheweth that they ſufficed to inſtruct the faithfull Jews in all things neceſſary to ſalvation, *Luk.*16.29,30. by them they might learn how to obtain Life and eſcape Death, when he ſaith, Let them hear them, he meaneth them only, as that place is meant, *Mat.*17.5.

The Jews themſelves acknowledged the ſufficiency of thoſe writings, to lead them unto life and happineſs, Joh. 5. 39.

Fifthly, The Prophets did expound the Law of God, and ſpeak more plainly, preciſely and diſtinctly touching the coming of the Meſſias, than Moſes did; but the laſt full and clear Will of God touching the Salvation of man was not manifeſted by them; that was together, and at once to be publiſhed and taught by the Meſſias, who alſo at his coming did eſtabliſh that order in the Church of God, which was to continue therein for ever: For

1. Chriſt was ordained of the Father to be the great Doctor of his Church, a Prophet more excellent than the reſt that were before him, both in reſpect of his Perſon, Office, Manner of receiving his Doctrine, and the excellency of the Doctrine which he delivered.

2. This was well known, not only among the Jews, but alſo among the Samaritans, inſomuch that the woman of Samaria could ſay, I know when the Meſſias is come, he will tell us all things,. Joh. 4. 25. John 1. 18. & 3. 22. Iſa. 61. 1,2. Heb.1.1.&2.3. Acts 1. 3. Mat.11.29,27.

3. The time wherein God ſpake unto us by his Sonne, is called the laſt dayes or the laſt time, Heb. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 20. to note that we are not hereafter to expect or look for any fuller or more clear Revelation of Divine Myſteries than that which was then delivered.

4. Chriſt is called a Mediator of the New Teſtament, or the New Covenant, Heb. 9. 15. becauſe all things are eſtabliſhed by him as they ought to continue for ever; for that which is old decayeth and is ready to vaniſh, but that which is new abideth, Heb. 8. 13.

5. It pleaſed the Lord in great wiſdome to reveale the Covenant of grace to the Church, that ſhe might not deſpaire; but obſcurely at the firſt, that ſhe might earneſtly long for the coming of that Meſſiah, who was to make known what he had heard and ſeen of the Father, which diſpenſation was needfull, that the grace of God might not be contemned, as haply it would have been, if God had fully revealed and made known his bounty unto man, before he had ſeen his miſery, and the neceſſity thereof. Our Saviour Chriſt for ſubſtance of Doctrine neceſſary to Salvation, taught nothing which was not before in ſome ſort contained in the writings of Moſes and the Prophets, out of whom he confirmed his Doctrine; but that which was in them more obſcurely, ænigmatically and briefly, he explained more excellently, fully and clearly; the Apoſtles proved their Doctrine out of the Book of Moſes and the Prophets, Acts 17.11. and 26. 22. Luke 24.27. *Rom.*1.2. Act. 28.23. Matth. 22.32. John 5. 46. Luke 24. 44, 45.

Sixthly, All things neceſſary in that manner as we have ſpoken, were taught and inſpired to the Apoſtles by our Saviour Chriſt, and there were no new inſpirations after their times; nor are we to expect further hereafter; which we prove, Montanus held that there was no ſufficient inſtruction given by the Apoſtles unto the Church, but that there were only certain Principles of Religion given by them, being unperfect. and were afterward to be finiſhed and poliſhed by the Comforter, which himſelf did ſerge. Tertullian was a Montaniſt, he often likeneth the Church of God in the Apoſtles time unto a Tree whoſe fruit was not bloomed, and unto one which is in his baſe age. Cartw. Reply to Whitgifts 2d Anſwer 79.

1. By places of Scripture, John 14. 26. he that teacheth all things, omitteth nothing; Chriſt ſaid all things to his Apoſtles, as appears, John 15. 15. and 17. 8. John 16. 13.

2. By reaſons drawn from thence, 1. The plentifull pouring forth of the Spirit was deferred till the glorifying of Chriſt; he being glorified, it was no longer to be delayed, Christ being exalted on the right hand of God, obtained the Spirit promised, and that was not according to measure, and poured the same in such abundance, as it could be poured forth and received by men, so that was fullfilled which was fore-told by Joel 2. 28. Acts 2. 33. John 3. 34, 35. Acts 2. 16, 17. 2. The Scripture and the Prophecies of the Old Testament do teach and delare, That all Divine Truth should fully and at once be manfested by the Messias who is the only Prophet, high-Priest, and King of his Church; there is no other Revelation promised, none other needfull besides that which was made by him, Isa. 11. 9. Acts 3. 23, 24. Joel 2. 23. Vide Mercerum in loc. therefore the last inspiration was made to the Apostles, and none other to be expected. The Doctrine of the Law and the Prophets did suffice to Salvation; yet it did send the Fathers to expect somewhat more perfect, 1 Pet. 1. 10. but to the preaching of the Gospel nothing is to be added, we are not sent to wait for any clearer vision.

3. So long as any truth needfull to be known, was unrevealed or not plainly taught, the Lord did stir up some Prophet or other, to teach the same unto the Chrch; therefore the Lord surceasing to speak since the publishing of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the delivery of the same in writing, is unto us a manifest token, that the whole will of God is now brought to light, and that no new Revelation is to be expected.

Our seventh Proposition is, Christ and his Apostles were able to propound and teach by lively voice, that Doctrine which pertains to perfection, John 1. 18. and 11. 11, 32. John 8. 26. and the Apostles perfectly taught all things which are or shall be necessary for the Church, Acts 20. 27. Gal. 1. 7, 8, 9. The Doctrine of repentance and remission of sins in the name of Christ, doth summarily contain all things necessary to salvation, Acts 5. 31. and 11. 11. but this Doctrine the Apostles preached, Act. 13. 38, 39. Luke 24. 47.

The Word of God is not only Milk for Babes, but strong Meat for men of ripe years, 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. Heb. 5. 14. and 6. 1, 2. therefore it containeth not only matter of preparation, but of perfection.

Our eighth Proposition is, The summe and substance of that heavenly Doctrine which was taught by the Prophets and Apostles, was by them committed to writing, the holy Ghost giving them a commandment, and guiding their hands therein, that they could not erre, so that the Word preached and written by them is one in substance, both in respect of matter, which is the Will and Word of God, and inward forme, viz. the Divine Truth immediately inspired, though different in the external form and manner of delivery.

Our ninth Proposition is, That nothing is necessary to be known of Christians over and above that which is found in the Old Testament, which is not clearly and evidently contained in the Books of the Apostles and Evangelists.

Our last Proposition is, that all things which have been, are, or shall be necessary to the salvation of the Church to the end of the world, are perfectly contained in the writings of the Prophets and Apostles, long since divinely inspired, written and published, and now received by the Church of God, so that no new Revelation or Tradition beside * those inspired, published and comprehended in the Scripture, are necessary for the salvation of the Church.

* Additio ad Scripturam sit tripliciter.
1. In quo additum est contrarium, & est errorum.
2. In quo additum est diversum, & est præsumptionis.
3. In quo additum est consonum, & est fidelis instructionis.

Heb. 1. 1, 2. Gods speaking by his Sonne is opposed to his speaking by the Prophets, he spake piece-meale by them, and at severall times, but he spake once for all by his Son, Rev. 22. 18. Post consignatum Canonem non sunt expectandæ novæ revelationes. My opinion is, that it is no lesse than absolute renunciation of the Gospel, and faith of Christ, and the ready way, I am sure, to bring in Mahometisme, or if any thing can be worse, after the Gospel, and faith of Christ once delivered, to pretend to new Lights, and to seek after Revelations in matters of faith and doctrine. God make me constant to that profession of Tertullian, falling from which himself, he became an Heretick, and a persecutor of the Catholick Church by his writings: Nobis curiositate opus non est post Christum Jesum, nec inquisitione post Evangelium. Cum credimus nihil desideramus ultra credere: hoc enim prius credimus, non esse quod ultra credere debeamus. Tertul. adverſ.

adverſ. hereſ. cap. 4. Dr Cauſab. of Enthuſ. cap. 3.

The are three opinions, 1. Of the Papiſts who altogether deny it. 2. Of the Socinians which would have all things expreſly contained in Scripture, and if it be not totidem verbis they reject it. 3. Of the Orthodox, who ſay it contains all things expreſly, or by conſequence.

Crocius in his Antiweigelius, cap. 1. Quæſt. 8. ſhews, that private Revelations, Dreams, Conferences with Angels are not to be deſired and expected in matters of faith, the Canon of the Scripture being now compleat. The Weigelians talk of a Seculum Spiritus Sancti, as God the Father had his time, the time of the Law, Chriſt his time, the time of the Goſpel; ſo (ſay they) the holy Ghoſt ſhall have his time, when there ſhall be higher diſpenſations, and we ſhall be wiſer than the Apoſtles. See Matth. 24. 14. and 28. 20. 1 Cor. 11. 26. See Mr Gelleſp. Miſcel. cap. 10. and Brochmands Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 6. De Spiritu Sancto, cap. 2. queſt. 12. An ſeculum quoddam Spiritus Sancti reſtet, in quo longe major, futura ſit cognitionis Dei lux, quàm fuerit tempore Chriſti & Apoſtolorum?

Some ſay the Scriptures are but for the training up of Chriſtians during their minority (as Grammer Rules for Boys) and are not able to acquaint the ſoul with the higheſt diſcoveries of God and truth. And moſt corruptly they ſerve themſelves with that expreſſion of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 13. 11. This Glaſſe (ſay they) is the Scriptures; through which we ſee ſomething of God indeed (whilſt we are children in underſtanding) but very obſcurely and brokenly; and therefore (ſay they) if ye would diſcern of God clearly, and ſee him as he is, ye muſt break the Glaſſe, and look quite beyond Scriptures; when ye become men ye muſt put away theſe childiſh things. Blow at the Root, p. 82, 83.

The expreſſe teſtimonies of Scripture, forbidding even Angels to adde * any thing to thoſe things which are commanded by the Lord, do prove the perfection of the Scripture, Deut. 4. 5, 12. and 12. 32. and 30. 10. and 5. 12, 13, 14. and 28. 58. Joſhua 1. 7, 8. Prov. 30. 5. wherefore the Apoſtle commands, That no man preſume above that which is written, 1 Cor. 4. 6. 2 Tim. 3. 15, 16. Divers reaſons may be drawn from this laſt place to prove the perfection of the Scripture.

* That Doctrine of Religion, to which God would have nothing added, and from which he would have nothing taken away, muſt needs be perfect. Illud perfectum in ſuo genere cui nihil in eo genere aut addi, aut diminui poteſt, Pſal. 19. 8. the Hebrew word ſignifieth that perfection cui nihil deeſt. Quam aſſertionem licet Scriptura innumeris locis validè firmet, inſtar omnium tamen eſt παλιβρύλλητον; illud D. Pauli dictum, 2 Tim. 3. v. 14. 15. 16. Quo quid quæſo afferri potuit aut plenius aut potentius, pro aſtruendâ Scripturarum Sacrarum conſummatiſſima perfectione? nam ſi tota Scriptura planè comparata eſt, & ſapientem reddere ad ſalutem, & ad omne bonum opus plenè inſtruere; quid quaſo ulterius requires? Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Tom. 1. Artic. de Sac. Script. c. 1. vide etiam c. 2. ibid. Quæſt. 14. & Quæſt. 17.

1. The Apoſtle teacheth, That the Scriptures are able to make a man wiſe to ſalvation: therefore there needeth no further counſel nor direction thereunto, [a] but out of the Scriptures.

2 King. 5. 8.

2. The Scriptures are able to make the man of God, that is the Miniſter of the Word, perfect and compleat unto every work of his Miniſtry, whether it be by teaching true Doctrine, or confuting falſe, by exhorting and putting forward to that which is good, or dehorting from that which is evill.

2 Tim. 3. 15, 16, 17.

[a] Salus noſtra Chriſtus eſt, ſalutis via fides viæ dux, Scriptura. Raynoldus.

Paul would not have us think that all and every writing, viz. of Plato, Ariſtotle, is divinely inſpired, for in verſ. 15. he not only uſeth the plural number, calling them the holy Writings; thereby to note the Word of God, and not one ſentence or Book, but all the ſentences and Books of the Scripture, and alſo uſeth the Article, which hath force of an univerſal note, therefore the Greek words, the whole Scripture, ſignifieth the whole altogether, and not every part ſeverally in this place. 2. No one part of holy Scripture is able to make the Miniſter perfect, therefore it muſt needs be underſtood of the whole body of holy Scripture, wherein this ſufficiency is to be found. The Ancient Fathers and other Divines, have from this place proved the perfection and ſufficiency of the Scripture in all things neceſſary to ſalvation.

τὰ ἱερὰ γράμματα. It is taken collectivè not diſtributivè. Si πᾶσα non totam ſed omnem ſignificaret, eo fortius futurum argumentum noſtrum: nam ſi partes ſingulæ ſufficerent, tum multo magis omnes. Chamierus.

We

We do not reaſon thus (as the Papiſts charge us) it is profitable, therefore it is ſufficient; but becauſe, 1. The Scripture is profitable for all theſe [b] ends (viz. to teach ſound Doctrine, to refute falſe opinions, to inſtruct in holy life, and correct ill manners) therefore it is ſufficient; [c] or it is profitable to all thoſe functions of the Miniſtery, that a Miniſter of the Church may be perfect; therefore much more for the people. Argumentum non nititur unica illa voce (utilis) ſed toto ſententiæ complexu. Chamierus.

[b] Nullus Papiſta aptè & plenè huic argumento unquam reſpondit, aut reſpondebit. Whitak.

Hitherto of the perfection of the Scripture abſolutely conſidered, now followes the ſufficiency thereof in oppoſition to unwritten traditions or verities, as the Papiſts ſpeak.

[c] Is not the Scripture (ſaid Hawks the Martyr) ſufficient for my ſalvation? Yes, ſaith one of Bonners Chaplains, it is ſufficient for our ſalvation, but not for our inſtruction. Hawks anſwered, God ſend me the ſalvation, and take you the inſtruction. Fox Martyrol.

Epiſc. Daven. de Judice Controverſ. c. 5.

Dr Davenant premiſeth theſe things for the better underſtanding of the ſufficiency of the Scripture.

1. We ſpeak of the State of the Church (ſaith he) in which God hath ceaſed to ſpeak to men by the Prophets or Apoſtles divinely inſpired, and to lay open new Revelations to his Church.

2. We grant that the Apoſtles living and preaching, and the Canon of the New Teſtament being not yet ſealed, their Goſpel delivered Viva Voce, was no leſſe a rule of Faith and Worſhip, than the Writing of Moſes and the Prophets.

3. We do not reject all the traditions [d] of the Church; for we embrace certain Hiſtorical and Ceremonial ones; but we deny that opinions of faith or precepts of worſhip can be confirmed by unwritten traditions.

[d] Notandum hoc loco verbum Dei, Scripturis ſeu ſcripto verbo definiri: quod enim prius Dei verbum ſeu ſermonem, nunc Scripturas appellat, adverſus Pontificios, qui verbum Dei ad non Scripta Traditiones, & Pontificum eteam decreta transferunt. Sed verbum Dei Scripturis cingi & terminari apparet, Rom. 1. 2. deinde 2 Tim. 3. 17. Denique ex hoc loco, cum vitam æternam conferat, eamque in ſe incluſam habeat Scriptura, quid eſt quod ad eam accedere aut adjungi poteſt? Hanc enim Judæorum, de vita æterna Scripturis comprehenſa, opinionem, Chriſtus ipſe comprobat. Cartw. in Harm. Evangel. in Joh. 5. 39.

4. We call that an opinion of Faith; to ſpeak properly and ſtrictly, when a Propoſition is revealed by God, which exceeds the capacity of nature, and is propounded to be believed, as neceſſary to be known to Salvation. Fundamentall opinions are thoſe which by a uſuall and proper name are called Articles of Faith.

5. What is not in reſpect of the Matter an Article of Faith, may be a Propoſition to be believed with a Theological Faith, if you look to the manner of revealing, as that the Sun is a great light, the Moon a leſſe, Gen. 1. 16. that Rachel was beautifull, Leah blear-eyed.

The Papiſts do not ceaſe to accuſe the Scripture of imperfection [e] and inſufficiency, as not containing all things neceſſary to ſalvation. The Councel of Trent, Seſſ. 4. decret. 1. ſaith, That the Truth and Diſcipline is contained in libris ſcriptis, & ſine ſcripto traditionibus. The Papiſts [f] generally divide the Word of God into the word written and traditions. They affirm, that there are many things belongings to Chriſtian faith, which are neither contained in the Scriptures openly nor ſecretly. This opinion is maintained by the Papiſts, but it was not firſt invented by them. The Jewiſh Fathers did uſe the traditions of the Elders, and it hath been ſaid of old, Mark 7. 5. Matth. 5. 21. for their errors and ſuperſtitions, yea, at length they affirmed that God gave to Moſes in Mount Sinai the Scripture and the Cabala, or a double Law, the one written, the other

[e] Minima veritatis particula in Scripturis continetur. Charronens.

[f] Bellarm. de verbo Dei, lib. 4. cap. 3. Rhemiſts Annotat. in Joh. 21. ſect. 3. & Annotat. in 2 Theſſ. 2. 16. & Annotat. in Act. 15. ſect. 3. & in Apoc. 20. ſect. 1.

8 unwritten. The Tridentin Fathers, Seſ. 4. do command Traditions to be received with the ſame reverend affection and piety with which we embrace the Scripture; and becauſe one Biſhop of the Councel of Trent refuſed this, he was excluded. In the mean ſpace, they explaine not what thoſe Traditions are which muſt be ſo regarded, none of them would ever give us a Liſt and Catalogue of thoſe Ordinances, which are to be defended by the authority of unwritten Traditions, not of the Word committed to writing; only they affirme in generall, whatſoever they teach or do, which is not in the Scripture, that it is to be put into the number of Traditions unwritten. The cauſe of it ſelf is manifeſt, That at their pleaſure they might thruſt what they would upon the Church, under the name of Traditions. Vide Whitak. de Script. contro. Quæſt. 6. c. 5. See alſo Moulins Buckler of Faith, p. 51.

g Aſſerimus in Scripturis non contineri expreſsè totam doctrinam neceſſariam, ſivè de fide ſivè de moribus & proinde præter verbum Dei ſcriptum requiri etiam verbum Dei non ſcriptum, id eſt, Divinos & Apoſtolicas traditiones. Bellarm. lib. 4. de verbo Dei non ſcripto. Omnes libros veteris & Novi Teſtamenti, nec non traditiones ipſas tum ad fidem tum ad mores pertinentes, tanquam vel ore tenus à Chriſto, vel à Spiritu Sancto dictatas, & continua ſucceſſione in Eccleſia Catholica conſervatas pari pietatis affectu ac reverentia ſuſcipit ac veneratur. Tridentina Synodus, ſeſſ. 4. ſect. 1. Quanquam error hic communis fuit hæreticis penè omnibus, Lutherani tamen quaſi proprium uſurparunt, quantaque maxima potuerè vi aſtruere niſi ſunt, nihil præter Scripturas ſacras apoſtolicam habere auctoritatem. Melch. Can. De loc. Theol. l. 3. c. 1. Vide plura ibid. & c. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

Lindan the Papiſt was not aſhamed to ſay, That it had been better for the Church, if there had been no Scripture at all, but onely Traditions. For (ſaith he) we may do well enough with Traditions though we had no Scripture; but could not do well enough with Scripture, though we had no Traditions.

The Jewiſh Caballiſts would reproach thoſe that were given unto the Scriptures with this nick name of Karaim, as Roman Tradition-Mongers call us Scripturarians, but the Fathers never accounted it an error. Puttocks Rejoynder to Fryer Malone, Sect. 9. See of the other Jews hatred againſt the Karæi in Hornbeck's Prolegom. to his Books againſt the Jewes, and l. 1. c. 1. his Arguments againſt their Orall Law or Kabala. The Doctrine of unwritten Traditions doth either croſs the verity of the Scriptures, and ſo they are contra Legem, or elſe they croſs the perfection of them, and ſo are præter Legem, Id. ib. Sect. 7.

Baldwin ſaith, a Teſtament may be either Scriptum or Nuncupativum, ſet down in writing, or uttered by word of mouth. But a Nuncupative Teſtament, or Will made by word of mouth without writing, muſt be proved by ſolemne witneſſes. The ſolemn witneſſes of Chriſts Teſtament are the Prophets and Apoſtles. Let Papiſts, if they can, prove by them, that part of the Teſtament of Chriſt is unwritten.

Any indifferent Reader will conceive, that the Scriptures make moſt for them, who ſtand moſt for their Authority and perfection, as all the reformed Divines do, not only affirming, but alſo confirming, that the Scripture is not only a moſt perfect, but the only infallible rule of faith, Titus 1. 2, Rom. 3. 4. God can not lie, and Let God be true, and every man a liar, that is, ſubject to errour and falſhood. Every Article of Divine Faith muſt have a certain and infallible ground, there is none ſuch of ſupernatural truth but the Scripture.

Becauſe our Adverſaries h do contend for Traditions not written hotly, and zealouſly, againſt the total perfection of the Scripture, that they might thruſt upon us many points (by their own confeſſion) not contained in Scripture; and uſurp to themſelves irrefragable authority in the Church, it ſhall not be amiſs largely to conſider of this matter: And firſt to enquire of the ſignification of the words Greek and Latine, which are tranſlated Tradition; and then to come to the matter which is controverted between us and the Papiſts.

h Bellarmine hath a whole Book De verbo Dei non ſcripto, of the word of God unwriten.

Hæc eſt igitur Papiſtarum confeſſio, non poſſe ſe ſuas traditiones in Scripturis invenire nec per Scripturas probare. Rolloc. de vocatione, cap. 14. Non opus habent Pontificii, in Controverſia de Traditionibus, de eo laborare ut verbum Dei non Scriptum pari eſſe authoritatis, cum verbo Dei ſcripto. Id enim nos ultrò largimur: modò, ut de ſcripto nobis conſtat, conſtare poſſet pariter de non ſcripto, quod ſit indubiè verbum Dei. Dr Sanderſon, De obligatione, Conſc. par. 4. Pontificii docent, non eſſe ſolum Dei verbum, quod in Sacra Scriptura continetur, ſed etiam patrum traditiones, licet hæ nullo utantur teſtimonio Scriptura, pro certo Dei verbo habendas eſſe. Tilemanni Heſhuſii errores Pontificiorum de Sacra Scriptura. 1. loc.

The Greek word ſignifying Tradition, παράδοσις, which in the New Teſtament is uſed only in theſe places, Matth. 15. 2, 3, 6. Mark 7. 3, 5, 8, 9, 13. 1 Cor.

11. 2.

Do we not allow of all the Apoſtolicall Traditions, which agree unto the Scriptures? Nay more, Do we not tranſlate the word Traditions in the Scripture, when the Text will bear it, according to the Greek Original? Look upon Mat. 15. and in three ſeverall verſes, 2, 3, 6. we uſe the word Tradition. Look upon the 7th of Mark, and in four ſeverall verſes, verſ. 3, 8, 9, 13. we tranſlate Traditions. Look upon St Paul to the Coloſſians, 2. 8. Gal. 1. 14. and upon St Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 18. and in all theſe in the Tranſlation joyned with your Rhemiſh Teſtament, you ſhall find the word Traditions. Dr Featley's Caſe for the Spectacles, ch. 8.

11. 2. Gal. 1. 14. Coloſ. 2. 8. 2 Theſ. 2. 15. and 3. 6. and in the vulgar Latine is rendred Traditio, Mat. 15. 2, 3, 6. Mark 7. 3, 5, 8, 9, 13. Gal. 1. 14. Col. 2. 8. 2 Theſ. 2. 15. and 3. 6. and Præcepta, 1 Cor. 11. 2. Whereto the Rhemiſts tranſlation (which ſeemeth to be but a bare tranſlation of the Vulgar Latine) doth wholly agree, uſing the word Tradition every where, excepting 1 Cor. 11. 2. where they uſe the word Precepts, but ſet in the margin the word Tradition. Arias Montanus in his interlineal Tranſlation doth render it Traditio, Beza doth commonly expreſs it by the word traditio. In the Engliſh Geneva Bible, we tranſlate it by the word Inſtruction, Tradition, calling mens precepts Traditions, the Apoſtles Doctrine, Ordinances or Inſtructions, not that we feared the word Tradition, but becauſe we would not have the ſimple deceived, as though the unwritten verities of the Papiſts were thereby commended, or as though we had ſome honourable conceit of them; and what we did herein, the ſignification of the word doth give us free liberty to do; in our laſt Engliſh Tranſlation we uſe the word Tradition, as often as the Vulgar Latine or the Rhemiſts have done; not that we were driven by fear or ſhame to alter what was done before, but becauſe we would cut off all occaſion of carping at our Traſlation, though never ſo unjuſt.

Tradere, quaſi trans dare, propriè quidem de rebus uſurpatur, quæ de manu in manum dantur, & transferuntur. Metaphorice autem ſignificat docere; ſive vivâ voce id fiat, ſive ſcripto. Sic correlativa ſunt Tradere & Accipere, 1 Cor. 11. 23. & 15. 3. Eſſenii Syſtem. Theol. Diſput. 4. De Sacra Scriptura

[1] The word originally may import any thing which is delivered howſoever, either by word or writing. Thus whatſoever we have received in the Scriptures, was firſt Tradition as delivered by word, and ſtill is tradition becauſe it is delivered in writing. But though the word in it ſelf have this generall and indifferent ſignification of any thing that is delivered, yet in our diſputation it is reſtrained to one only manner of delivering by word and relation only, and not by Scripture. We deny that either in the Law or Goſpel there was any thing left unwritten, which concerneth us to know, for attaining of true Faith and Righteouſneſſe towards God. Abbot againſt Biſhop. We cavill not at the uſe of the word Tradition: we find it both in Scripture and in the Fathers. And the generall ſenſe of Traditio with the Latines, of παράδοσις with the Greek, of Maſoreth with the Hebrews, is the ſame, namely a Delivery, or any thing delivered, as well by Epiſtle, as by word of mouth, 2 Theſſ. 2. 15. Puttocks Rejoynder to Malone about Traditions, Sect. 1.

First, We contend not about the name [1] Tradition, the word may lawfully be uſed, if the ſenſe affixed thereto be lawfull. 2. All Traditions unwritten are not ſimply condemned by us. 3. The Apoſtles delivered by lively voice many obſervation diſpenſable and alterable, according to the circumſtances of time and perſons, appertaining to order and comlineſs; only we ſay, that they were not of the ſubſtance of Religion, that they were not generall concerning all Churches. 4. We receive the number and names of the Authors of Books Divine and Canonical, as delivered by Tradition; but the Divine Truth of thoſe Books is in it ſelf clear and evident unto us, not depending on the Churches Authority. The Books of Scripture have not their Authority (quod nos) from the approbrtion of the Church, but win credit of themſelves, and yield ſufficient ſatisfaction to all men of their Divine Truth, whence we judge the Church that receiveth them to be led by the Spirit of God; yet the Number, Authors and Integrity of the parts of thoſe Books, we receive as delivered by Tradition. 5. The continued practice of ſuch things as are neither expreſly contained in Scripture, nor the example of ſuch practice expreſly there delivered, though the Grounds, Reaſons, and cauſe of the neceſſity of ſuch practice be there contained, and the benefit and good that followeth of it, we receive upon Tradition, though the thing it ſelf we receive not for Tradition. Of this ſort is the Baptiſm of Infants, which may be named a Tradition, becauſe it is not expreſly delivered in Scripture, that the Apoſtles did baptize Infants, nor any expreſs precept there found that they ſhould ſo do; yet is not this ſo received by bare and naked Tradition, but that we find the Scripture to deliver unto us the ground of it.

[k] In Matth. 15. Bellarmine and Maldonat [k] both do confeſs, That the Baptiſm of Infants may be proved by the Scripture; and therefore Maldonate concludes, Nobis verò tradi- tio non eſt. Bellarmine[1] (as Whitaker ſhews) contradicts himſelf; for firſt, he ſaith, That the Baptiſm of Infants is an unwritten Tradition; and after, That the Catholicks can prove Baptiſm of Infants from the Scriptures.

tio

[1] Vide Whitakerum de Script. c. 9. Quæſt. 6. p. 405. & 406. In his Book De verbo Dei ſtanding for unwritten Traditions, as a part of the Word of God, he will have Baptiſm of Infants to be one; but when he diſputes for Baptiſm of Infants againſt Anabaptiſts, then he heaps up Texts of Scripture. Mr Blakes Birth-Priviledge.

To this head [m] we may referre the obſervation of the Lords-day, the precept whereof is not found in Scripture, though the Practice be. And if for that cauſe any ſhall name it a Tradition, we will not contend about the word, if he grant withall, that the example Apoſtolical hath the force of a Law, as implying a common equity concerning us no leſſe than it did them.

[m] Exſtat nomen diei Dominicæ, Mat. 28. Mar. 16. Apoc. 1. Exſtat exemplum Apoſtolicæ Eccleſiæ quæ cum diem ſolennem habuit celebratione Cœnæ, prædicatione verbi Dei. Collectione Eleemoſynæ, Acts 20. 1 Cor. 16. 1. Quod exemplum ſuum & Eccleſiæ praxin cum Apoſtoli nobis repræſentant in ſuis ſcriptis, quis non videt eos præcipere imitationem ſui? Vedel. exercitat Epiſt. Ignatii ad Magneſios, c. 7. Vide plura ibid.

If any man ſhall call the ſummary comprehenſion of the chief heads of Chriſtian Doctrine contained in the Creed, [n] commonly called The Apoſtles Creed, a Tradition, we will not contend about it. For although every part thereof be contained in Scripture; yet the orderly connexion, and diſtinct explication of thoſe principal Articles gathered into an Epitome, wherein are implyed, and whence are inferred all Concluſions Theological, is an Act humane, not divine, and in that ſenſe may be called a Tradition. But let it be noted withall, that we admit it not to have that credit as now it hath, to be the Rule of Faith; for this is the priviledge of holy Scripture. The Creed it ſelf was gathered out of Scripture, and is to be expounded by the Scripture; therefore it is not given to be a perfect Canon of faith and manners.

[n] Symbolum Apoſtolicum ex traditione eſt ſecundum formulam rationemque verborum; at ſecundum ſubſtantiam eſt Scriptura ipſiſſima. Junius Animad. in Bellarm. controv. 1. l. 4. Negamus ullum eſſe in toto Symbolo vel minimum articulum, qui non diſertè conſtet, ac totidem penè dixerim verbis, in Scriptura ſancta: adeò ut merito dici poſſit opus teſſellatum, utpote conſtans ex variis locis hinc inde excerptis, atque in unum collatis, artificioſéque compoſitis. Chamier.

By Tradition is noted, 1. Whatſoever is delivered by men divinely inſpired and immediately called, whether it be by lively voice, or by writing. 2. In ſpeciall it notes the word of God committed to writing, 1 Cor. 15. 3. 3. It ſignifies Rites expreſly contained in writing, Act. 6. 14. 4. It betokens that which is not committed to writing but only delivered by lively voice of the Apoſtles. 5. It ſignifieth that which is invented and delivered by men not immediately called. In Scripture Tradition is taken, 1. In good part, for any Rite or Doctrine of God delivered to his Church either by word or writing, whether it concern faith and good works, or the external Government of the Church, 2 Theſ. 2. 15. 1 Cor. 11. 15. & 23. 2. In ill part, it noteth the vain idle and unwarrantable inventions of men, whether Doctrine or Rites, Mat. 15. 3. Mark 7. 8, 9.

2 Theſſ. 2. 15. Hoc fuit primum Phariſæorum dogma, quòd negarunt omnia quæ pertinent ad Religionem ſcripta eſſe. Joſeph. Antiq. l. 13.

When the Fathers ſpeak reverently of Traditions, by the word Tradition, either they underſtand the holy Scripture, which alſo is a Tradition, it is a Doctrine left unto us; [o] Or by Traditions, the underſtand obſervations touching Eccleſiaſtical policy. Du Moulin.

[o] Traditiones iſtæ non Scriptæ Phariſæorum nunquam in N. Teſt. dicuntur ſimpliciter & abſolutè Traditiones, ſed notantur ſemper aliquo elogio, ut quum dicuntur, Traditiones ſeniorum, Traditiones humanæ; ſiquando Traditionis vox ponitur ſimpliciter, ſumitur in bonam partem, & ipſum Dei verbum Traditio eſt. Cameron. in Mat. 15.

Reaſons confirming the ſufficiency of Scripture againſt Popiſh Traditions.

1. The whole Church is founded upon the Doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles; which were not true if any Doctrine was neceſſary to Salvation not revealed by the Prophets and Apoſtles.

Epheſ. 2. 20. Apoc. 21. 24. Vide Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 2. de Sac. Script. cap. 2. Quæſt. 15.

Christ taxeth the ignorance of Scripture, commends the knowledge of it, was carefull to fulfill the Scripture, did interpret it, and gave ability to understand it.

* Deut. 4. 2. and 12. ult.

2. The Prophets, Christ and his Apostles condemn Traditions, Isa. 29. 13. Mat. 15. 3, 6. Col. 2. 8. Therefore they are not to be received; Christ opposeth the Commandment and Scriptures to Traditions, therefore he condemns Traditions not written.

If the Jews might not adde to the Books of Moses,* then much less may we adde, to the Canon of Scripture so much increased since.

3. Those things which proceed from the will of God only, can be made known to us no other way but by the Revelation of the Scripture; all Articles of Faith and Precepts of Manners, concerning substance of Religion proceed from the will of God only, Mat. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10, 11.

† Gal. 1. 8. As in this place, the Apostle would have nothing received besides that which he preched, so 1 Cor. 4. 6. He will have nothing admitted above or more than that which is written. See Act. 26. 22.

‖ Locus est egregius, eoque nostri omnes utuntur, qui contra Papisticas Traditiones aliquid scribunt, Whitakerus. Longè illustrissimus locus est. Chamier.

John 20. ult. Whence it is manifest, that all necessary things may be found in Scripture, since full and perfect Faith ariseth from thence, which eternal salvation followeth.

Bellarmine saith, John speaks only of the miracles of Christ, that he wrote not all, because those sufficed to perswade the world that Christ was the Son of God. Those words indeed in ver. 30. are to be understood of Christs miracles, but those in ver. 31. rather are to be generally interpreted; for the History only of the miracles sufficeth not to obtain Faith or Life.

¶ Nobis adversus Papistas non de quibusvis traditionibus controversia est, sed duntaxat de traditionibus dogmatum, quibus continentur fides & mores, hoc est, de ipsa Doctrina. Chamierus lib. 9. de Canone cap. 1.

The Question betwixt the Papists and us is, De ipsa Doctrina tradita, ¶ non de tradendi modo, touching the substance of the Doctrine delivered, not of the manner of delivering it, and of Doctrine delivered as the Word of God, not of Rites and Ceremonies. They maintain that there be doctrinal Traditions, or Traditions containing Articles of Faith, and substantial matters of Divine Worship and Religion, not found in the holy Scripture, viz. Purgatory, Invocation of Saints, Adoration of Images, Papal Monarchy.

Bellarmine (and before him ‡ Peresius) distinguisheth Traditions both from the Authors and the Matter.

From the Authors, into Divine, Apostolical and Ecclesiastical.

From the Matter into those which are concerning Faith, and concerning Manners, into perpetuall and temporall, universall and particular, necessary and free.

‡ Vir & ob ingenium laboremque, & ob Episcopatus dignitatem inter Papistas non postremi nominis. Chamier. Vide Maldonat. ad Joan. 16. 12. & Estium ad Rom. 16. 17.

Received from Christ himself teaching the Apostles.

Divine Traditions, that is, Doctrines of Faith, and of the Worship and service of God, any of which we deny to be but what are comprized in the written Word of God.

Apostolick Traditions (say they) are such Ordinances as the Apostles prescribed for ceremony and usage in the Church, as the observation of the memorial of the Nativity, Death and Resurrection of Christ, the alteration of the seventh day from the Jews Sabbath, to the day of Christs Resurrection.

The Jesuite Petau in the first Chapter of his first Book, De la Penitence publique shews, that publick repentance is no Apostolick Tradition, because it hath not been used in the Church from the Apostles times. He saith also there, that Irenæus among the Fathers hath best set forth the nature and force of Tradition in his Book, De ecclesiastica Hierarchia, c. 1. Baptismi formam hanc esse necessariam, qua personarum trium appellationes expressas continet, certa est, & Apostolica traditio; de qua hodie Christianus nemo dubitat.

Ecclesiastical, ancient Customes which by degrees through the Peoples consent obtained the force of a Law.

Traditions

Traditions concerning Faith, as the perpetuall Virginity of Mary the Mother of Chriſt, and that there are only four Goſpels; of Manners, as the ſign of the Croſſe made in the Fore-head, Faſts and Feaſtings to be obſerved on certain dayes.

Illud erat explicandum, quo diſcrimine iſta Traditiones tam multiplices graduque habenda ſint.

Perpetual, which are to be kept to the end of the world.

Nullum diſcrimen faciunt, forſan ergò volunt, Eccleſiaſticas etiam Traditiones parem cum Divinis Scripturis Authoritatem habere. Whitakerus de Script. cap. 3. Quæſt. 6.

Temporall for a certain time, as the obſervation of certain legall Ceremonies, even to the full publiſhing of the Goſpel.

Univerſall Traditions, which are delivered to the whole Church to be kept, as the obſervation of Eaſter, Whitſontide and other great Feaſts.

Particular, which is delivered to one or more Churches, as in the time of Auſtin faſting on the Sabbath-day, which was kept only at Rome.

Neceſſary Traditions, which are delivered in the form of a Precept, that Eaſter is to be celebrated on the Lords Day.

Traditionum janua pernicioſa eſt, hac ſemel aperta nihil eſt quod non inde erumpat in eccleſiam. Cham.

Free, which are delivered in the form of a Councel, as ſprinkling of holy Water.

Object. The Scripture is not perfect with a perfection of parts, becauſe many parts are either defective or exceſſive.

1. Some labour with a defect, as Geneſ. 11. 12. a perſon is omitted in the Genealogy of Canaan, which was the Sonne of Arphaxad, but it is reckoned in Luke in Chriſts Genealogy, not in the Old Teſtament, therefore there is a defect.

1 Chro. 1. 18.

Luk. 3. 36.

Anſw. Luke reckons it according to the vulgar opinion of the Jews; Junius in his Parallels would have the fault to be in the Septuagint, whom Luke followed, not approving of their errour, but yielding to the time, leaſt the Goſpel otherwiſe ſhould have been prejudiced; but Beza's opinion is rather to be approved of, that this word is inſerted from the Ignorance of thoſe who undertook to correct this Text, according to the Tranſlation of the Seventy Interpreters. For in an Ancient Manuſcript which Beza followed, this word Canaan was not to be found, therefore he omitted it in his Tranſlation, and ſo hath our great Engliſh Bible.

Eorum mihi videtur ſententia ſanior, qui negant vel à Lxx. vel à Luca nomen Cainani fuiſſe inſertum, exiſtimantes, potiùs aliunde irrepſiſſe poſt Evangelium à Lucâ conſcriptum, cujus ſuæ conjecturæ rationes habent non leves, ut videre eſt apud Cornelium à Lapide in cap. 11. Geneſ. Rivet. Iſag. ad Script. Sac. cap. 10. Vide plura ibid.

Object. There is ſomething found in the Scripture againſt the Commandment of God, Deut. 4. 2. therefore there is exceſs as well as defect; for many Books which we believe to be Canonical, are added.

Anſw. He doth not forbid adding by Gods Command, but from the will of man, for God himſelf added afterward.

The Papiſts Arguments for Traditions anſwered.

Object. Bellarmine ſaith, Religion was preſerved for two thouſand yeares from Adam to Moſes onely by Tradition; therefore the Scripture is not ſimply neceſſary.

Lib. 4. de verbo Dei, cap. 4.

Anſw. By the like reaſon I might argue, That Religion was long preſerved, not only without the Pope of Rome, but alſo without Baptiſme and the Lords Supper, with the like Inſtitutions, therefore they are not ſimply neceſſary; yet none of us hold the Scriptures ſimply neceſſary. 2. It is falſe, that Religion was preſerved all that while by ordinary Tradition only; for the living voice of God founded moſt perpetually in the Church, and the Doctrine of Religion was conveyed ſucceſſively from the Father to the Son; which living voice of God by little and little ceaſing, writing afterward ſucceeded, and hath the ſame neceſſity now which Gods living voice had before.

Vix ullum videas de Traditionibus agentem, qui non hic magno faſtu immoretur. Chamierus. Diſtinguenda ſunt & tempora & perſonæ; Non erant neceſſaria Scripturæ ante legem, Ratio eſt, quid ergo ne quidem poſt legem, non erant neceſſaria Apoſtolis, ergo ne nobis quidem: negatur conſequentia. aliter Iſraelitæ doceri voluit poſt legem Deus, aliter ante legem: Aliter Chriſtus Evangelium voluit Apoſtolis revelatri, aliter nobis praedicari. Chamierus.

Object. Whatsoever things are commended from Scripture are necessary, but so are Traditions, Ergò, They are necessary. John 16. 12. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now; therefore (say they) the Lord spake many things which are not written.

Answ. 1. He saith not, that he had many things to tell them, which he had not taught them before, but which they were not now so well capable of. For it appeareth that he taught them that which they understood not, and therefore they needed to be further taught of them by the Holy Ghost, which should not teach them any new thing that Christ had not taught, but onely make them understand that which they had been taught of our Saviour Christ.

John 2. 22. Jansenius affirmat, hæc multa non fuisse diversa ab illis, quæ hactenus docuerat, sed illustriorem illorum explicationem; & huc adducit illud appositè, quod habetur, 1 Cor. 3. Christus testatur se discipulis suis omnia tradidisse, Joan 15. 15. nihil ergo tacuit.

2. If the holy Ghost did teach them any thing which our Saviour Christ had not before spoke unto them of, yet that makes nothing for Traditions; seeing that which the holy Spirit taught them, he taught them out of the Scriptures.

3. If the holy Ghost should have taught the Apostles some things which neither Christ had told them of, nor the Scriptures had taught them, yet this is rather against the Papists. For that which the holy Ghost taught them, they undoubtedly left in record unto the Church, as being faithfull stewards, and revealed the whole counsel of God unto the people.

4. It hath been the practice of Hereticks (as Augustine affirmeth) at all times to cover their dreams and phantasies, with this sentence of our Saviour Christ.

Lastly, If it be asked, What were those grave and great mysteries, which the Apostles could not for their rudeness bear; they are forsooth oyl and spittle in Baptism; Candles light at noon dayes (which was not in the darker time of the Law) baptizing of Bels, and such like gue-gaws, as the grossest and carnallest men are fittest to receive.

Hic locus omnium celeberrimus est, Papistisque nostris inter primos in deliciis. Chamierus.

Object. 2 Thess. 2. 15. Therefore Brethren, stand fast, and hold the Traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our Epistle. From these words (say our Adversaries) it appears that all things were not written, Et nullum Papista in Scripturis locum probabiliorem invenisse, saith Whitaker.

The Hereticks (say the Rhemists on this place) purposely, guilefully, and of ill conscience refrain in their Translations, from the Ecclesiastical and most usual word Tradition, evermore when it is taken in good part, though it expresse most exactly the signification of the Greek word; but when it soundeth in their fond phantasie against the Traditions of the Church (as indeed in true sense it never doth) there they use it most gladly. Here therefore and in the like places, that the Reader may not so easily like of Traditions unwritten, commended by the Apostle, they Translate Instructions, Constitutions, Ordinances, and what they can invent else, to hide the Truth from the simple or unwary Reader, whose Translations have none other end, but to beguile such by Art and Conveyance.

Vide Grotium in loc.

Thus farre the Rhemists.

Paul taught the Thessalonians some things by word of mouth, which he taught them not in his two Epistles which he wrote unto them; therefore he taught some Doctrins which he wrote not, as if that Paul wrote no more Epistles than these two; whereby that which he thought needless in writing unto them, he taught them by writing unto others.

2 Tim. 3. 15, 16. Luk. 16. 29, 31.

Secondly, How followeth this Argument? Paul wrote not all the Doctrines of God unto the Thessalonians, therefore they are not all written in the Prophetical and Evangelical writings: whereas it is plainly testified, that the Old Testament containeth a perfect Rule of the Doctrine of salvation; the New being written for a Declaration of the fulfilling and further clearing of that in the Old Testament.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, It appeareth manifestly in the Acts, what was the summe of that which Paul taught the Thessalonians by word of mouth. For there it is witnessed, that Paul taught out of the Scriptures, that it behoved Christ to suffer and rise again from the dead, and that Jesus was Christ; this teaching then by word is there limited to the Scriptures of the Law and Prophets. Neither ought it to seem strange, that this was the summe of all which the Apostle taught at Thessalonica, where he tarried so small a while, when amongst the Corinthians (where he remained longest of any place, and consequently taught most) he sheweth that he taught nothing but Christ and him crucified.

Acts 17. 3. What the tradition was he preached, is expressed, 2 Thess. 3. 6.

1 Cor. 2. 2.

Fourthly, The Apostle himself, in this very place, calling (vers. 14.) whatsoever he taught by word, or wrote by the name of the Gospel, doth declare evidently, that he taught nothing but that which is contained in Scripture, seeing the Apostle defineth the Gospel which he preached, to be that which is contained in the Scriptures.

Fifthly, That the Thessalonians had some part of Christian Doctrine, delivered by word of mouth; that is, by the Apostles preaching at such time as he did write unto them, and some part by his Epistles, the Text enforceth us to grant. But that the Church at this day, or ever since the Testament was written, had any Tradition by word of mouth necessary to salvation, which was not contained in the Old and New Testament, we will never grant. The Papists [f] do commonly abuse the name of Tradition, which signifieth properly a delivery, or a thing delivered; for such a matter as is delivered only by word of mouth, and so received from hand to hand, that is, never put in writing, but hath his credit without the holy Scripture of God, as the Jewes had their Cabala, and the Scribes and the Pharisees their Traditions besides the Law of God. For the justifying of our Translation, it is true, that we alter according to the circumstances of the place, especially considering that the word Tradition, which of it self is indifferent, as well to that which is written, as to that which is not written, hath been of us and them, appropriated to note forth onely unwritten Constitutions, therefore we must needs avoid in such places as this, the word Traditions, (though our last Translation useth it) where the simple might be deceived, to think that the Holy Ghost did ever commend any such to the Church, which he would not have committed to writing in the holy Scriptures, and in stead of the word so commonly taken (although it do not necessarily signifie any such matter) we doe use such words as doe truely expresse the Apostles meaning, and the Greek word doth also signifie; therefore we use these words Ordinances, or Instructions, Institutions, or the Doctrine delivered, all which being of one or near sense, the Greek word παράδοσις doth signifie, and the same doth Tradition signifie, if it be rightly understood.

Dr Fulk against Martin in his Preface.

[f] Papistæ maximi, qui unquam fuerunt Traditionarii. Cham.

Syrus interpres habet præceptcepta sive mandata.

Object. 1 Timothy 6. 20. O Timothy, Keep that which is committed to thy trust.

By the name of pledge (saith Bellarmine) not the Scripture, but the treasure of unwritten Doctrine is understood. Depositum (say the Rhemists) is the whole Doctrine of Christianity, being taught by the Apostles, and delivered their Successors.

Answ. Though other learned men interpret this pledge or gage to be the gift of the Holy Ghost, yet we willingly acknowledge, that it is to be understood of the Doctrine of Christianity, as that which hath best ground both by circumstance of this, and conference of other places. Whence we inferre, That the Doctrine of truth is not the Churches Decrees, but the Lords; given to the Church to keep only, wherewith the Title of a pledge cannot stand, unlesse one may lay to pledge a thing in his own hands, since in Popery the Church her self maketh the Doctrine which her self taketh to pledge. Herein they handle it like a pledge, that they lock it up fast, where the people of God, for whose use it is given to be kept, cannot come unto it.

Cartw. Annot. on the Rhem. Test.

What

What had become of the Law of God, if others had not been more faithfull keepers of it than the Priests, to whom the principal Copy thereof written with the finger of God himself was committed?

Hic Achilles est Papistarum magno fastu ostentatus ab omnibus & singulis, qui versantur in hac controversia. Chamier. de Canone, lib. 9. cap. 8.

There are some points of faith not contained in the Scripture, neither in the Old nor New Testament; therefore it is not perfect. In the Old Testament, no doubt but the females had some remedy, whereby they might be purged from original sin as well as the males; circumcision was instituted only for the males, the Scripture mentions not what was instituted for the females.

In the New Testament, the perpetual Virginity of Mary the mother of Christ.

[t] Circumcisio fœminarum continetur sub illa masculorum.

Two things are considered in Circumcision[t], 1. Signum. 2. Res signata, or the end and use of the sign.

Signum in solis masculis erat, pro utrisque tamen faciebat, si finem & usum ejus spectes. Mariæ perpetua Virginitas non est fidei articulus, ideo libenter amplectimur eam sententiam, quæ jam ab initio inter Christianos videtur invaluisse, ut Virgo fuerit, hoc est, pura à coitu viri, non tantum in toto Christi generationis mysterio, quod sanè ut credamus necesse est, sed etiam toto deinceps vitæ tempore. Chamier. de Can. l. 9. c. 9.

Ans. The thing signified, or efficacy of the outward sign of Circumcision, was common both to Males and Females; the very Institution of Circumcision teacheth that; for it was a sign of the Covenant, the Covenant belonged to all which were of the seed of Abraham, if they renounced it not.

Although there were no decision of the other point out of the Scripture, yet would it not thence follow which the Jesuites pretend, that some necessary point of Christianity wanted the ground of holy Scripture, it being sufficient for us to know, that she was a Virgin, when our Saviour Christ was born of her, as the Prophets did foretell. Yet (as Chamier said well) we believe that she continued a Virgin all her life time, for in those things (said he) which are not properly de fide, we hold the Authority of the Church is great, if it contradict not Scripture, or produce no other absurdity. Vide Riveti Apologiam pro Virgine Maria, lib. 1. c. 15.

[u] Quam pertinaciter ludebat Helvidius in primogenito Mariæ & fratribus Christi: ut negaret perpetuam Virginitatem? Chamierus.

Helvidius would gather from those words, Matth. 1. 25. Until, and first-born, that Mary after [u] had children by her husband. The word till doth not import so much. See Gen. 8. 7. & 28. 15. 1 Sam. 15. 35. 2 Sam. 6. 23. Mat. 28. 20. He is called the first-born in Scripture, which first opens the womb, whether others follow or not.

7. The Scripture is plain and perspicuous.

The Perspicuity of the Scripture is a clear and evident manifestation of the truth delivered in it.

It is Perspicuous [x] both in respect of it self and us.

1. In respect of it self, as appears:

[x] Augustinus dicit, nihil ad fidem necessarium obscurè in Scripturis doceri, quin idem apertioribus locis aliis explicetur. Non est traditum Evangelium obscurè, nec difficile ad intelligendum, tanquam paucissimis profuturum, sed facile, dilucidum, apertum, expositum omnibus, ne quis esset quin petere illuc posset, & tanquam de fonte haurire, qua salutis sua expediret. Lod. Viv. de verb. Dei. Christ. lib. 2. cap. 9. Vide plura ibid. Vide Brochm. Syst. Theol. Art. 2. De sac. Script. cap. 2. Quæst. 15.

1. In the things delivered, which although they seem obscure for their Majesty and Dignity, yet they carry the light of truth before them, [y] therefore the Scripture is frequently termed a light, Psal. 19. 8. & 119. 105. Deut. 30. 11. Prov. 6. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 9. 2 Pet. 1. 19. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4, 6. Tit. 2. 11. The Scripture is a most bright light.

[y] Verbum Dei collatum cum luce, analogia multiplex; Lucis est dissipare tenebras, omnia manifestare, alios lucere, non sibi; luce nihil purius, illustrius, gratius, utilius, fœcundius, cœlestis ejus origo, odio habetur sæpe à malis, est bonum Commune plurium, penetrat sordes, illuminat. Spanhem. Dub. Evangel. parte tertia. Dub. 94. Scriptura se claram profitetur tum formaliter tum effective, luminosam & illuminantem. Id. ibid. Isa. 59. 21. Jer. 32. 40. & 31. 31.

It hath all the effects of light:

1. Light refresheth and comforteth the spirits, Eccles. 11. 7. Isa. 61. 1, 2.

2. Omne

2. Omne lumen eſt manifeſtativum ſui, it diſcovers it ſelf, and all things elſe, Epheſ. 5. 13. It diſcovers ſinne, the vileneſſe of it, and our danger by it; truth from errour, pure worſhip from Idolatry, ſuperſtition, will-worſhip.

3. Awakens; a noiſe and light awaken ſuch as ſleep; the Goſpel awakens ſinners out of a dead ſleep, Rom. 13. 11. Epheſ. 5. 14.

4. The light hath heat with it, therefore ſometimes light and heat are put for the ſame thing, Luk. 24. 32.

5. It is like light in the freeneſſe of it, it is communicated abundantly to many.

The Goſpel is the beſt light; artificial light is good, natural better, ſpiritual beſt of all, and a help againſt the worſt darkneſſe.

1. Of ignorance, Act. 26. 18.

2. Affliction; the Goſpel bears up the ſoul in the greateſt affliction, Unto the righteous ariſeth light in darkneſſe.

3. Of divine Deſertion, Iſa. 50. 10.

4. Of Damnation, Tit. 2. 11.

There are two things in Gods revealed will, Verbum rei, the Word, and res Verbi, the myſtery. The Scriptures are hard, if we look to the myſtery, but not if we look to the Word: As for example, the Scripture teacheth, that there is one God in three Perſons, the words are plain and eaſie: every man underſtands them, but the myſtery contained in thoſe words paſſeth the reach of man; we may well diſcern theſe things to be ſo, though we cannot fully conceive how theſe ſhould be ſo.

2. In the manner of delivering, or kind of ſtile, which is fitted to the things and perſons, ſhewing the greateſt ſimplicity both in words, either proper or figurative; and in the clear ſenſe and moſt perſpicuous propriety of ſignification, viz. that one which is called Literal and Grammatical.

2. In reſpect of us, becauſe the Scripture is to us the principal means and inſtrument of faith; every Principle ought to be by it ſelf, and in its own nature known and moſt intelligible; and there being three degrees of faith, knowledge, aſſent, and full aſſurance, theſe cannot conſiſt without the perſpicuity of the Scripture; the divine promiſes alſo of writing the Law in our hearts, and concerning the ſpreading abroad, and clear light of the Goſpel, ſhould be to no purpoſe, if the Scriptures ſhould not be plain in things neceſſary to ſalvation.

All difficulty [z] in underſtanding the Scripture, ariſeth not from the obſcurity of it, but from the weakneſſe of our underſtanding, corrupted by natural ignorance, or blinded by divine puniſhment and curſe, John 3. 12. therefore it no more follows from thence, that the Scripture cannot be an infallible and onely Rule of Faith and life, (becauſe ſome obſcure things are found in it, not underſtood of all) than that the Books of Euclide are not perfect Elements of Geometry, becauſe there are ſome abſtruſe Theoremes in them, which every vulgar Geometrician can not demonſtrate; or that Ariſtotles Organon is not a perfect Syſteme of Logick, becauſe a freſh Sophiſter underſtands not all its ſubtilties. More diſtinctly we ſay, that the Scriptures are plain, and obſcure in a threefold reſpect.

[z] Difficultas aut a rerum ipſarum natura eſt quæ percipiuntur, aut ab ipſis percipientibus, aut ab iis quæ intercurrant mediis. Res quæ percipiantur natura ſua intellectu difficiles ſunt, aut per obſcuritatem, ut res futuræ, aut per Majeſtatem ipſarum, ut Myſterium S. Trinitatis. Sic quid Sole clarius? quid difficilius aſſectu? Nam hebeſcit acies oculorum noſtrorum vi radiorum illius. A percipientibus difficultatem eſſe quis ſanus negat? Nam res quæ ſunt Spiritus Domo naturalis non poteſt capere: à mediis quæ Deus ipſe Eccleſiæ obtulit, id eſt, à Scriptura, negamus difficultatem eſſe. Junius.

1. They are plain and eaſie to be underſtood by all men in Fundamentals, and the ſpecial points neceſſary to ſalvation, as the Decalogue, the Apoſtles Creed, the Lords Prayer, and the like, unleſſe by thoſe whoſe minds the God of this world hath hath blinded; if they be obſcure in ſome leſſe principal and circumſtantial matters, there is need of interpretation, that the meaning may be more clearly unfolded.

Some truths are neceſſarily to be known to ſalvation, ſome are not. Some things being written Ad neceſſitatem ſalutis; and ſome Ad uberiorem cognitionis. Nothing which is neceſſary is obſcure. Dr Ingelo on Luke 16. 29. See more there.

2. A difference of perſons is to be conſidered, either more generally, or more ſpecially.

The fundamentals in Scripture are plain to the Elect, who are all taught of God ſo much as is neceſſary for their ſalvation, *Joh.*6.45. the leaſt as well, as the greateſt. See Mr Thorndikes Epilogue to the Tragedy of the Church of England, l.1. Chap.5.

1. More generally, as they are elect and regenerate, or reprobate and unregenerate; to thoſe the Scripture is plain and perſpicuous, to whom alone it is deſtinated, and whoſe minds the holy Ghoſt will enlighten by the Scripture, *Joh.*7.17. *Rom.*12.2. 1 *Cor.*12.15. *Pſal.*19.7. *Matth.*11.5. & 25.25. *Pſal.*9.10,12,13,14. Yet the fleſh and unregenerate part in them puts in impediments, but that ignorance is removed at laſt, *Luk.*8.10. The reprobates continue involved in perpetual darkneſs, and blinded with ignorance, hypocriſie, covetouſneſs, pride and contempt of divine learning, even ſeeing they ſee not, *Pſal.*36.3 *Iſa.*29.9. *Jer.*5.21. *Iſa.*6.9. 2 *Cor.*3.14. there is a vail over their hearts, 2 *Cor.*4.3,4. which is the cauſe why in ſo many ages under the Papacy, the Scriptures were not underſtood, becauſe they preferred a lie before the love of the truth, 2 Theſſ. 2. 10. whoſe ignorance is a deſerved puniſhment of that contempt, which they ſhewed to the Scriptures and their Authority.

2. More ſpecially, the perſons are diſtinguiſhed according to the diverſity.

1. Of Conditions of life and vocations, for ſo many places of Scripture are hard to this ſort of men, which are more eaſie to another, neither is it required that all things be underſtood of all men; the knowledge of more places is neceſſary in a Miniſter, than a Tradeſ-man and Husbandman; yet it is an infallible Rule to every one in his vocation.

I believe that toward the evening of the world, there ſhall be more light and knowledge ſhall be encreaſed, *Dan.*12.4. and many things in Scripture better underſtood, when the Jews ſhall be brought home, and the ſpirit of grace and illumination more abundantly poured forth. Mr *Gilleſp. Miſcel.*c.10. See *Rev.*22.10.

2. Of capacities and wits, for every one hath his meaſure of Gifts; ſo among Miniſters ſome underſtand the Word more obſcurely, ſome more plainly, yet it is to all a perfect Rule according to the meaſure of Gifts.

3. Of Times, all things are not equally obſcure or perſpicuous to all Ages; many things are better underſtood now than in times paſt; as the Prophecies and Predictions of Chriſt, and the times of the Goſpel: ſo in the Myſteries of the Revelation, the expoſition rather of moderne Interpreters than Fathers is to be received; becauſe in our times, not theirs, there is an accompliſhment of thoſe Prophecies, and many things were more clearly known by them in thoſe dayes, the Ceremonies and Types of Moſes his Law, were better perceived by the Jews than us.

In the firſt times of the Church, there were no Commentaries upon the Scriptures, the Fathers had them without, and yet then the Scriptures were underſtood. Origen (who lived two hundred years after Chriſt) was the firſt that wrote any Commentary upon Scripture. The pure Text of Scripture was ever read to the people, and never any Commentaries, and yet was underſtood by them. *Apocal.*1.3.

God the Author of the Scripture could ſpeak perſpicuouſly; for he is wiſdom it ſelf, and he would ſpeak ſo, becauſe he cauſed the Scripture to be written to inſtruct us to our eternal ſalvation, *Rom.*15.4. and he commands us to ſeek in the Scripture eternal life.

We do not account the Prophecie of Iſaiah touching Chriſt, which the Eunuch read, to be a dark and obſcure prediction; but we know it was clear and plain enough, though the Eunuch, a raw Proſelyte, underſtood not the meaning of it.

The Fathers proved their opinions out of the Scriptures, therefore the Scriptures are more clear than the writings and Commentaries of the Fathers.

*Soler obſcuritas lectores abſterrere: quo modo aiunt olim quendam dixiſſe, Autorem obſcurum à ſe removentem, Tu non vis intelligi, neq; ego te intelligere.

To every one which readeth (with humility and invocation of God) the Book of the Apocalypſe, the obſcureſt * and hardeſt Book to underſtand of all other, bleſſedneſs is promiſed, when it cannot befall to any that underſtandeth nothing, it is manifeſt that the promiſe of bleſſedneſs includeth a warrant of underſtanding of it, ſo much as is neceſſrry to ſalvation.

neſs

We affirme, That many places [a] in the Scripture are very obſcure, and that either from the obſcurity of the things, as in the Prophecies of future things, the event muſt interpret them, as Daniels Prophecies of the four Monarchies were in times paſt very dark, but eaſier ſince, when all things were fullfilled. So the coming of Antichriſt in the New Teſtament, drew the Fathers into divers opinions; ſo even yet there are many things obſcure in the Revelation [b], which are not accompliſhed. So thoſe things which are ſpoken of the Meſſiah in the Old Teſtament are either not underſtood, or not fully without the New Teſtament. Sometimes the ambiguity of words breeds a difficulty, As I and the Father are one: the Arians underſtood it of an union of will; as when Chriſt prayed, *Joh.*17. that the Diſciples might be one. Hitherto may be referred thoſe places which are to be underſtood allegorically, as the Canticles, the firſt Chapter of Ezekiel. 3. Some places are obſcure from the ignorance of ancient Rites and Cuſtoms, as that place, 1 Cor. 15. 29. * of Baptizing for the dead is diverſly explained by Interpreters, both old and new. There are ſix Interpretations of it in Bellarmine, l. 1. de purgatorio, cap. 8. Viginti præter hujus loci expoſitiones deprehendo, ſaith one in a Theological Diſputation, De Baptiſmo veterum. Ambroſe ſaith, Paul had a reſpect to that cuſtome of ſome, who baptized the living for the dead. Piſcator and Bucane ſay, The cuſtom of the ancient Church is noted here, who baptized Chriſtians at the Graves, that ſo it might be a ſymbole of their belief, and confeſſion of the Reſurrection of the Dead. Tarnovius proves, That that Rite was not in uſe in the Apoſtles time. Calvin interprets it of thoſe who were baptized, when they were ready to die: But Beza thinks by Baptizing is underſtood the Rite of Waſhing the bodies before the Burial, that ablution uſed upon the dead, as if the Apoſtle ſhould thence confirm the Reſurrection of the Dead, q. d. that that is a cold, vain and fooliſh Ceremony, if the Dead ſhould not riſe again. And truly it is certain, that thoſe words ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, being conſidered in themſelves, may as well be ren-

[a] Eſpecially in Geneſis, Job, Canticles, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Revelation. In regard of the manner of writing, there are many abſtruſe phraſes in Scriptures, as divers Hebraiſmes, which perhaps were familiar to the Jews, but are obſcure to us. All the skill of all the men in the world (from the beginning to the end thereof) will not be able to find out all truths contained in Scripture, either directly, or by conſequence; the full opening of the Book of Scripture, and of providence, will be a great part of the Saints worke and happineſſe in Heaven. Dr Drake in his Preface to his Chronol. Mr Bolton hath almoſt the ſame in his four laſt things. There, diſcerning how exquiſitely the ſeveral parts of Scripture are fitted to the ſeveral Times, Perſons and Occurrences, wherein their all-foreſeeing Author intended moſt to uſe them, we ſhall diſcern not onely a Reconcilableneſſe, but a Friendſhip, and perfect Harmony betwixt thoſe Texts, that here ſeem moſt at variance, and ſhall diſcover not only the ſenſe of the obſcurer paſſages, but the Requiſiteneſſe of their having been written ſo obſcurely. That ſtrange and peculiar, as well as otherwiſe cryptical method and ſtile of Scripture, which often coſts us ſo much ſtudy to find it Rational, we ſhall there diſcover to be admirable, and worthy of its Omniſcient Author. When once Gods whole plot (if I may ſo ſpeak) and conduct in the adminiſtration of the world ſhall come to be diſcloſd; all thoſe Revolutions and Occurrences of Empires, States, Families, and particular Perſons, which men are here ſo prone to quarrel with, will there appear ſo juſt, ſo requiſite, and ſo ſeaſonable, that thoſe very things, which here tempted us to deny God, ſhall there ingage us to praiſe him; and we ſhall not ſo properly be ſatisfied with his providence, as raviſht. Mr Boiles Seraphick Love. There are many things very difficult and hard to be underſtood in the Prophecy of Ezekiel, and eſpecially in thoſe Chapters, which are written of the Temple; as Hierome obſerveth on Chap. 45. and the Jewes themſelves confeſſe, that there are many things here expreſſed, which they conceive not; but ſay, That Eliah when he comes ſhall expound them; as R. Kimchi notes on Ezek. 40. 13. & 42. 3. & 45. 18. Aben Ezra thus writes, Urim & Thummim quid fuerunt, ignoramus. Et certe difficile eſt definire quod Scriptura, proculdubio non ſine certo conſilio, reticuit. Buxtorf. Exercit. ad Hiſt. Urim & Thummim. cap. 11. [b] The 20th Chapter eſpecially. Chamierus de Canone l. 5. *c.*4. Plato, Ariſtotle, Euclid. have their nodos, and the Scriptures have their δυσνόητα, 2 Pet. 3. 16. in them are dark ſayings, Pſal. 78. 2. Riddles, Ezek. 17. 2. Parables, Mat. 13. 35. Myſteries, Mat. 4. 13. Mr Greenhill. That is a very difficult place, 1 Cor. 3. 15. See Laurentius. Auguſtine ſaith, This is one of the places of which Peter ſpeaketh, 2 Pet. 3. 16. and that Heb. 6. 4. 1 Pet. 3. 19. The laſt, Luther and Beza ſay, is one of the obſcureſt places in the New Teſtament. Vide Tarnovium in exercitat. Bib. & Cameronis Myroth. Evangel. * See Laurentius and Dr Featly on the place in the laſt large Annotations on the Bible. Non deſunt primarii apud Judæos Scriptores, qui dicant inſaniæ finitimum eſſe ſperare cognitionem certam in animalibus immundis, in qua tamen obſervatione mordicus hæret Judæorum ſuperſtitio. Bibliander de optimo genere Grammaticorum Hebræorum. De hebdomadibus Danielis agitur: quæ cum ſint ſcopulus tam doctorum, quam imperitorum hominum, nemo illas prætervehi potuit ſine naufragio. Scalig. Elench. primæ orat. Chronol. par. 1. See Mr Hales his Sermon on 2 Pet. 3. 16. neat the end.

dred ſuper mortuos, as pro mortuis. Andreas Hyperius ſheweth in a particular Tract what various opinions there are about this place. Voetius hath written a Tract De inſolubilibus Scripturæ. Eſtius and Dr Hall on the hard places of Scripture. Divers reaſons may be rendred, why God would have many things in the Scripture obſcure and difficult.

Locus ſanè obſcurus ſiquis alius & explicatu difficilis, qui multos torquet & viciſſim ab illis torquetur. Auguſtinus de Doctrina Chriſtian. l. 2. c. 6.

1. To make us diligent both in prayer to him, to open to us the meaning of the Scriptures, and likewiſe in Reading, Meditating, ſearching and comparing the Scriptures.

2. To remove diſdaine from us; we quickly ſlight thoſe things that are eaſie.

Ita Scriptura dicit à Deo temperata, ut locis apertioribus fami occurreretur, obſcurioribus faſtidia detergerentur. Idem Auguſtinus ait, Nos apertis Scripturæ locis paſci, obſcuris exerceri.

3. That we might more prize heavenly Truths gotten with much labour.

4. To tame our arrogance and reprove our ignorance, Joh. 16. 12.

5. God would not have the holy myſteries of his Word proſtituted to dogs and ſwine; therefore many a ſimple godly man underſtands more here than the great Rabbies.

6. That order might be kept in the Church, ſome to be Hearers, ſome Teachers and Expounders, by whoſe diligent ſearch and travel, the harder places may be opened to the people.

Here the Lamb may wade, and the Elephant may ſwimme, ſaith Gregory. The Scriptures have both Milk for Babes, and ſtrong Meat for Men, ſaith Auguſtine.

Apoc. 5. 1, 4, 5. Mr Burroughs on Iſa. 66. 10.

It is a Note of a learned Interpreter, That Chriſt before he was ſlain, knew not the Prophecies concerning the Church ſo well as after his death; it was the purchaſe of the blood of Chriſt to have thoſe things opened.

Bellarm. l. 3. de verbo Dei. c. 1.

We do not therefore hold, That the Scripture is every where ſo plaine and evident, that it needs no interpretation, as our Adverſaries do ſlander us, and here they fight with their own ſhadow. We confeſſe, That the Lord in the Scriptures hath tempered hard and eaſie things together. But this we affirm againſt the Papiſts.

1. That all points of Faith neceſſary to Salvation, and weighty matters pertaining to Religion are plainly ſet forth in the Scriptures.

2. That the Scriptures may with great profit, and to good edification be read of the ſimple and unlearned, notwithſtanding the hardneſſe of ſome places, which in time alſo (uſing the means) they may come to the underſtanding of.

Therefore I might ſave that labour in anſwering the Arguments of our Adverſaries, ſince they are of no force againſt us, nor indeed touch our cauſe, proving only that ſome places in the Scripture are difficult, which we deny not: But I ſhall firſt take off their Anſwers, whereby they would evade the ſtrength of our Reaſons for the perſpicuity of the Scripture, and then refute their own Objections.

Pſal. 19. 9. & 119. 115. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

Firſt, When we urge divers places to prove the Scripture to be a Light, the uſe of which is to diſpell darkneſſe, which it would not, if it ſelf were obſcure.

Bellarmine anſwereth, That thoſe places are not to be underſtood of all the Scripture, but only of the Commandments: and that theſe alſo are called a Light, not becauſe they are eaſily underſtood (although that be true) but becauſe being underſtood and known, they direct a man in working. 2. If it be underſtood of all the Scriptures, they are called Light, not becauſe they are eaſily underſtood, but becauſe they illuſtrate the mind when they are underſtood. But the Apoſtle Peter ſpeaks not only of the Precepts of the Decalogue, but of all the Scripture of the Old Teſtament: which, if it be Light, much more ſhall the Scripture of the New Teſtament, and therefore the whole body of Scriptures which the Chriſtians now have, ſhall be Light.

Secondly,

Secondly, That place, Pſal. 119. 130. doth not ſpeak of the Precepts alone, [Of thy words] by which is ſignified the whole [c] Scripture. In Pſal. 19. David ſpeaketh of the word of God in general, which he adorneth with many Titles, The Law, or, Doctrine of the Lord, The Teſtimony of the Lord, The Statutes of the Lord, The Precepts of the Lord, The Fear of the Lord. It is ſo called Metonymically, becauſe it teacheth us the Fear and Reverence of the Lord: he ſaith, this Doctrine is perfect, converts the ſoul, and makes wiſe the ſimple, therefore he underſtands the whole Scripture, the teacher of true and perfect wiſdome. 2. It is called a light, becauſe it hath light in it ſelf, and becauſe it illightneth others, unleſſe they be quite blind, or willingly turn away their eyes from this light.

[c] Genebrardus teſtatur aliquos de tota Scriptura locum interpretari, nec loquitur de noſtris, ſed aut ſuis, aut antiquis, Hieronymus quidem à parte eſt ejus opinionis, & Lyranus, & alii multi. Whitak.

Thirdly, If the Commandments be eaſie, the reſt of the Scriptures is likewiſe, as the Prophets and Hiſtorical Books, being but Commentaries and Expoſitions of the Decalogue.

That evaſion of the Papiſts will not ſerve their turns, That the Scripture is a Light in it ſelf, but not Quoad nos (as if the Scripture were a light under a Buſhel) for that the Scripture is Light effectivè, as well as formaliter, appears by the addition, Giving underſtanding to the ſimple. It was a ſmart anſwer, which a witty and learned Miniſter of the Reformed Church of Paris gave to a Lady of ſuſpected Chaſtity, and now revoked; when ſhe pretended the hardneſſe of the Scripture; why, ſaid he, Madam, what can be more plain, than Thou ſhalt not commit adultery?

Mr Durant.

Dr Halls Peace-maker. Sect. 15.

The Scriptures and Reaſons anſwered, which the Papiſts bring for the obſcurity of the Scripture.

Object. 2 Pet. 3. 16. Peter ſaith there, That in the Epiſtles of Paul there are ἀνοήτα τινα, Some things hard to be underſtood, which they that are unlearned and unſtable wreſt, as they do alſo the other Scriptures unto their own deſtruction.

Anſw. 1. Peter reſtraineth the difficulty of Pauls writings to that point himſelf then wrote of, touching the end of the world; therefore it is unreaſonable that for one hard point in the Epiſtles, the people ſhould be debarred the reading of all the reſt.

He ſaith not in which Epiſtles, but in which points and heads of Doctrine, i. thoſe things which are obſcurely ſet down in Sr Pauls Epiſtles, may be, and are elſwhere in holy Scripture more perſpicuouſly delivered.

Secondly, Even in that point he affirmeth, That ſome things only are hard, and not all.

Thirdly, The underſtanding of the Scriptures dependeth not principally on the ſharpneſſe of mens wits for their learning, but on the Spirit of God which is given to the ſimple that humbly ſeek it by prayer; therefore though the whole Scripture were hard to be underſtood, yet that is no good cauſe to bereave the people of God from reading of his Word.

Fourthly, Peter aſſigning the true cauſe of error, and abuſe of the Scripture, to be the unſtability and unlearnedneſſe of ſuch as deal with them, cannot thereby be underſtood to ſpeak that of the body of the Church, and of the people. Laurentius in his Book entituled, S. Apoſtolus Αυτοβλῶ, hoc eſt, Explicatio locorum difficilium in Epiſtolis Paulinis, reckons up fourty hard places in Pauls Epiſtles. Rom. 1. 19, 20, 28. & 2. 12, 13, 14, 15. & 4. 5. & 5, 6, 12, 13, 14, 15, 20. & 7. 9, 14. & 8. 3, 4, 19, 20, 21, 22. & 9. 3, 11, 12, 13, 18. & 11. 25, 26, 1 Cor. 2. 15. 1 Cor. 3. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. 1 Cor. 4. 9. & 5. 11. & 6. 2, 3. 1 Cor. 7. 1, 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. 1 Cor. 11. 7, 10. & 15. 29. 51. 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. & 3. 6, 15, 16. Gal. 1. 8. & 2. 14. & 3. 10. 1 Theſſ. 4. 15, 16, 17. 1 Tim. 1. 9. Heb. 6. 4, 5, 6. & 10. 26.

They ſay the Scriptures are difficult alſo in the manner of writing as well as in the matter.

Act. 8. 31.

The Hebrew and Greek have hard fortune to lie under contrary charges: As to ſay that the Hebrew is obſcure, becauſe it is ſcarce; and the Greek is obſure, becauſe copious; and the Scripture being written in the one, and in the other is therefore obſcure. Mr Thorndikes Principles of Chriſtian Truth, Ch. 31.

matter, for which they alledge *Pſal.*119.18. the Eunuch, Act. 8. and *Luk.*24.45. alſo the divers Expoſitions of old and new Writers.

The firſt place is directly againſt them: for teaching that it is the gift of Gods holy Spirit obtained by prayer to underſtand the Scripture, the Spirit through prayer, being as well obtained by the ſimple as learned ſort, yea rather by them than the others, it followeth that the reading of them belongeth to the ſimple as well as unto the learned.

The like anſwer ſerveth for the place of Luke 24.45. for by that abuſe of the place, they may wring the reading of the Scriptures from all men, even Miniſters of the Word commanded to attend the reading of them, ſince they of whom they ſay, that they underſtood not the Scriptures, were Miniſters of the Word, and that in the higheſt and moſt excellent degree of Miniſtry in the world, which was the Apoſtleſhip. The cauſe of want of underſtanding then was this, the Spirit of God was not given, becauſe Chriſt was not glorified, which can have now no place. Beſides that, in ſaying they underſtood not the Scriptures concerning the ſuffering and glory of Chriſt, it muſt needs be underſtood comparatively, that they did not clearly, particularly, and ſufficiently know them. For that place *Act.*8, it is to be underſtood comparatively, viz. That a man faithfull and already gained to the truth, as this Eunuch was, cannot underſtand the Scriptures by the bare reading of them, ſo well and throughly, as when he hath one to expound them. The Lord which helped the endeavour of the Eunuch ſearching the Scriptures by ſending of Philip, will never ſuffer thoſe which ſeek him in carefull reading of his Word, to go away aſhamed without finding that which they ſeek for, in directing unto him ſome lawfull and ſufficient Miniſtry to inſtruct him. The Myſtery of the Goſpel then (indeed) fulfilled, remained notwithſtanding unpubliſhed to the world by the Apoſtles, which is now by their preaching and writings laid open and made more manifeſt. The Eunuch which profeſſed that he could not underſtand the Scripture without an Interpreter, did notwithſtanding buſie himſelf in reading of it.

* There was a time when the Scriptures were read without Commentaries, and there was a time when they were hardly underſtood with Commentaries. Dr Ames.

The multitude of Commentaries * was not ſo neceſſary (becauſe the Scripture might have been underſtood without them) although they deſerve ſingular reſpect amongſt all thoſe that are deſirous to underſtand the Scripture, who write learned and elaborate Expoſitions on the Scripture.

That was a witty ſpeech of Maldonates on *Luk.*2.34. Neſcio an facilior hic locus fuiſſet, ſi nemo eum expoſuiſſet; ſed fecit multitudo & varietas interpretationis, ut difficilis videretur.

Secondly, Theſe Commentaries are publiſht, that the Scriptures may better and more eaſily be underſtood.

Thirdly, The Papiſts confeſſe that the Articles of the Apoſtles Creed being neceſſary for all, are eaſie: Yet there are many Commentaries of the Ancients upon the Creed, as Ruffinus, Auguſtine, Cyril, Chryſoſtome, Chryſologus; and of Papiſts alſo.

Cartwrights Letter to Mr Hilderſham for the ſtudy of Divinity.

Some Scriptures are hard for the matter which they handle, as are the Books of Daniel, Ezekiel, Zechary; or throng of much matter in few words, as are in the Old Teſtament the Poetical Books, wherein no doubt the verſe hath cauſed ſome cloud, and amongſt them the Proverbs from the tenth Chapter, and the Prophecy of Hoſea.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Interpretation of Scripture.

THis [a] Queſtion divides it ſelf into three parts.
Firſt, Concerning the divers ſenſes of the Scripture.
Secondly, To whom the chief Authority to expound Scripture is committed.
Thirdly, What means muſt be uſed in the Interpretation of Scripture.

[a] The interpretation of the Scripture is neceſſary in the Church of God. 1. Becauſe it is commanded by Chriſt, John 5. 39. 2 Cor. 4. 1, 39. 2. It is commended to the faithfull by the holy Ghoſt, 1 Theſſ. 5. 19, 20. 3. It conduceth much to the edification of the Church, 1 Cor. 14. 3. 4. It was uſed by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, Luke 4. 16. & 24. 26. Marke 4. 34.

1. Of the divers ſenſes of Scripture.

The Interpretation of Scripture is two-fold,

One of the words, which is called Verſion or Tranſlation; this hath been handled already.

2. Of things, which is called Explication, the finding out of the meaning of any place, which is more Theological, the other being rather Grammatical. And this ſignification of the thing they commonly call the ſenſe, Neh. 8. 9. Interpreting Scripture is, 1. Ancient, Neh. 8. 8. 2. Honourable, Mar. 4. 34.

The Scripture hath often two ſenſes, one of which the later Divines call Literal, Grammatical or Hiſtorical, another Myſtical or Spiritual.

The ſenſe of the Scriptures is that which God the Author of the Scripture in [b] and by the Scriptures gives to men to know and underſtand. Ratio divina in medulla non in ſuperficie. Tertul. de reſurrectione carnis. Nec putemus in verbis Scripturarum eſſe Evangelium, ſed in ſenſu, non in ſuperficie ſed in medulla, non in ſermonum foliis, ſed in radice rationis. Hieron. in Epiſt. ad Gal. 1. 11.

[b] Glaſſius Phil. Sac. lib. 2. par. 1. Tract. 1.

The right expounding of Scripture conſiſts in two things. 1. In giving the right ſenſe. 2. In a right application of the ſame, 1 Cor. 14. 3.

The Literal ſenſe is that [c] which the letter it ſelf, or the words taken in their genuine ſignification carry. And becauſe the genuine ſignification of the words is that, in which the Author uſeth them, whether ſpeaking properly or figuratively, therefore the literal ſenſe is ſubdivided into plain and ſimple, and figurative, which ariſeth from the words tranſlated from their naturall ſignification into another, as where Chriſt ſaith, Joh. 10. 16. I have other ſheep which are not of this fold; whereby he underſtandeth other people beſides the Jews.

[c] Literalis ſenſus eſt is, quem Spiritus Sanctus autor Scripturæ intendit. Chamier. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Eſt ille literalis ſenſus qui proximè per ipſa verba ſive propria, ſive figurata ſunt ſignificatur, vel ut Glaſſius, quem intendit proximè Spiritus Sanctus. Amama.

The myſticall or ſpirituall [d] ſenſe is that in which the thing expreſt in the literall ſenſe ſignifieth another thing in a Myſtery, for the ſhadowing out of which it was uſed by God. The waters of the Floud, with which the Ark was upheld, ſignified Baptiſm, by which the Church is ſaved under the New Covenant, as the Apoſtle teacheth, 1 Pet 3. 21. that Hiſtory Exod. 12. It is a Paſſeover unto the Lord, is ſpoken figuratively, the other words properly. The myſtical ſenſe is, the bones of Chriſt were no more broken then of the Paſchal Lamb, which did ſignifie Chriſt.

[d] Senſus ſecundarius, diverſus à literali, ſimilis tamen. Chamier. Not the Letter but the right ſenſe and meaning of the Scripture is Gods Word, Joh. 19.

The Papiſts ſay, The literall ſenſe is that which is gathered immediately out of the words, the ſpirituall which hath another reference than to that which the words do properly ſignifie. The laſt they ſubdivide into Allegorical, Tropological, Anagogical, they ſay that the Scripture beſide the literal ſenſe, may have theſe alſo.

The

The Allegorical ſenſe is, when the words of the Scripture beſides the plain Hiſtorical, and literall meaning, ſignifie ſomething in the New Teſtament, which belongs to Chriſt or the Church, as Gal. 4. beſides the truth of the Story of the bond and free-woman, S^t Paul applieth it unto the two Teſtaments. It is a Rule in Divinity, that in Allegoricall Texts, the meaning of the Allegory is the literall ſenſe of the place.

Tropological when the words and deeds are referred to ſignifie ſomething which belongs to manners; as Paul 1 Cor. 9. teacheth from that place, Deut. 25. Thou ſhalt not muzle the mouth of the Ox that treadeth out the corn; that things neceſſary are to be allowed to Paſtors.

Anagogical, when words or deeds are referred to ſignifie eternal life, as Pſal. 94. I ſware unto them they ſhould not enter into my reſt, this is literally underſtood of the reſt in Canaan, but applied by Paul, Heb. 4. to life eternal.

Of which there are theſe vulgar Verſes,

Litera geſta docet, quid credas allegoria.
Moralis quid agas, quo tendas anagogia.

Becanus [c] ſaith, As there are three Theological Virtues, Faith, Hope and Charity, ſo there are three myſtical ſenſes. The Allegoricall Anſwers to Faith, the Anagogical to Hope, the Morall to Charity. Jerome (ſaith he) excelled in the Literal ſenſe, Ambroſe in the Allegoricall, Auguſtine in the Anagogical, Gregory in the Moral.

The Papiſts erre three wayes in this ſubject.

1. In that deſcription which they make of the literal ſenſe.
2. In that they hold there are divers literal ſenſes of one place.
3. In their diviſion of the myſtical ſenſe into Allegoricall, Tropologicall, Anagogicall.

1. That is falſe which Bellarmine ſaith, Literalis ſenſus eſt quem verba immediatè præ ſe ferunt. What then ſhall the literall ſenſe of thoſe words be, Pſal. 91. 13. Let them ſhew the Lion which Chriſt did tread on, and what ſhall be the literall ſenſe of thoſe places, Iſa. 11. 6, 7, 8. & 65. ult. And what literal ſenſe ſhall thoſe words of Chriſt have, Matth. 5. 29. Origen [f] (though otherwiſe he allegorized much) interpreted that place according to the letter, but fooliſhly. That therefore is rather the literal ſenſe which ariſeth from the words, whether properly or figuratively taken; as for example, this is the literal ſenſe of thoſe words, The ſeed of the woman ſhall break the Serpents head, viz. Chriſt ſhall overcome Satan and ſubdue all his force and power, although the Devill neither be a Serpent nor hath a head.

Secondly, We hold that there is but one true proper and genuine ſenſe of Scripture, viz. The Literall or Grammatical, whether it ariſe from the words properly taken, or figuratively underſtood, or both. For that there ſhould be divers Literall ſenſes of one and the ſame place, is againſt the truth, the Text, [g] and reaſon.

1. The truth, becauſe of one and an Individuall thing there is one conſtant truth and not various; verum & unum convertuntur.

2. The Text, becauſe it draweth away from its one true ſenſe.

3. And laſtly reaſon, becauſe this is the chiefeſt reaſon in explaining the Text, that the true literall ſenſe of it may be found our.

The literall ſenſe then can be but one in one place, though a man may draw ſundry conſeqences [h] à contrario, à ſimilibus.

Ab anagogicis interpretationibus mihi temperavi, quòd illa non ſine labefactanda Scripturarum autoritatis periculo ingerantur, ſi id temere fiat: deinde quòd cognita hiſtoria, quiſque ipſe, ſubducente Spiritu, illas ſibi facilè formet. Buceri. Enarr. In Pſal. Præfat.

[c] In Manuali Controverſ. cap. 1. de Script. Queſt. 3.

[f] Origenes ſic Paradiſum terreſtrem allegorizat, ut hiſtoria auferat veritatem, dum pro arboribus Angelos, pro fluminibus veritutes Cæleſtes intelligit, & tunica pelliceas Adæ & Evæ, corpora humana interpretatur. Bellarm. ex Hieronymo. Concedit Bellarminus ex ſolo literali ſenſu peti poſſe argumenta efficacia. To prove any matter of faith or manners, no ſenſe muſt be taken, but the literall ſenſe. Aquinas. [g] Chamier. Tom. 1. de Scriptura ſenſu, lib. 15. cap. 3.

[h] Confundunt Pontificij ſenſum Scripturæ cum applicatione ſenſus, & accommodatione ejus ad uſus Apoſtolicos. 2 Tim. 3. 16. dum vel cum literali & myſtico ſenſus alios introducunt, vel myſticum ſubdividunt in Allegoricum, Tropologicum, & Anagogicum, & totidem diverſos ſenſus in Scriptura dari contendunt, confundendo heterogenea, ſenſum & applicationem ſenſus. Spanheim. Dub. Evangel. par. 3. Dub. 66.

3. We

3. We do not altogether reject the third, for we hold there are Allegories, Anagogies and Tropologies in the Scriptures, yet these are not many and divers senses of the Scripture; but divers collections from one sense, or divers Applications and accommodations of one sense. Besides the Tropologies and Anagogies are unfitly opposed to an Allegory, since they are certain kinds of it.

Hac nominum curiosa distinctio, ex Scholarum potius morosiuscula diligentia, quam ex ulla eorum vocabulorum necessitate. Itaq; Salmero agnoscit esse quid novum, & à posterioribus patribus traditum. Chamierus Tomo de Sensu Literali & Mystico. lib. 15. cap. 1.

Gal. 4. The Apostle saith not that there is a double sense; but that it may be Allegorically applied, which is Historically set down. There is then but one sense of the place; part whereof consisteth in the Story, part in the Allegory: So that the whole sense is contained in them both.

So for the second example of the Tropological: There is not a two-fold sense of that place, but one generall sense, that as the mouth of the Ox was not to be muzled, so the Minister of the Gospel must be provided for. Likewise of the Anagogical kind. It is not one sense to understand the rest of Canaan, another the Kingdome of God: But there is one whole sense, that as they for their Idolatry were deprived of the Land of promise, so we should take heed least by our disobedience we lose the hope of the Kingdome of Heaven. So we conclude that those are not diverse senses, but one sense diversly applied.

The literal sense is the only sense of the place, because out of that sense only may an argument strongly be framed: wherefore seeing Allegories and Tropes do not conclude, they are not the senses of the place; and Allegories devised beside the sense prove not, though they may illustrate. It is manifest that is alwayes the sense of the holy Ghost, which is drawn from the very words. But we are not so certain concerning any mystical sense, unless when the holy Ghost himself teacheth us; as for example, it is written Hos. 11. 1. Out of Ægypt have I called my Sonne; and Exod. 12. 46. Ye shall not break a bone of him. It is evident that the first place is understood of the people of Israel, the later of the Paschal Lamb. Who durst have applied those things to Christ, unless the holy Ghost had first done it, and declared his mind and meaning to us? viz. That Son in the first place doth not only signifie the people of Israel, but Christ also, and by bone in the later place, not only the bone of that Lamb, but of Christ also is understood.

Theologia Symbolica non est argumentativa. This is good reasoning, the Oxes mouth must not be muzled, ergò The Minister must be maintained, because it is part of the sense. The Fathers were too much addicted to Allegories. Jerome sometimes went out of the way through a liking of Allegories, as a great reader and follower of Origen, who handled the Scriptures too licentiously. Rainolds against Hart, Sess. 4. Cajetans sticking close to the literal sense was that alone, which made him to shake many of those Tenets, upon which the Church of Rome and the Reformed Churches differ. Mr Hales his Sermon on 2 Pet. 3. 16. See more there.

Secondly, To whom the chief Authourity to expound Scripture is committed.

It was decreed in the Councel of Trent, That Scripture should be expounded, as the Church expoundeth it, and according to the common and unanimous consent of the Fathers. If the Fathers agree not, the matter is referred to a generall Councel: If there it be not determined, we must have recourse to the Pope and his Cardinals.

We say also that the Church is the Interpreter of Scripture, and that this gift of interpreting resides only in the Church, but we deny that it belongs to certain men, or is tied to a certain place or succession of men.

The Ministry of judgement[1] the Lord hath given to his Church, 1 Cor. 2. 15. and 10. 15. 1 Joh. 4. 1. Act. 15. 16. 2 Cor. 14. 29, 31, 32. but the Soveraignty of judgment he hath reserved to himself.

[1] Judicium est triplex. 1. Directionis quale habet Minister. 2. Jurisdictionis quale habet Ecclesia. 3. Discretionis quale habet privatus, at Acts 1. 10. Dr Prid. There is Judex Supremus, and Judex Ministerialis visibilis but not Supremus, and Judicium practica discretionis, which is left to every one. Br Downam. L' interpretation est es mains de tous fideles, selon que Seigneur leur en a departi le don: mais la vocation d' interpreter avec charge publique n' appartient qu' à ceux qui y sont appellez, Comme Aaron Heb. 5. Confrontation de verité, par Franzois Du Jon. l. 3. c. 3.

The

The holy Scripture knows not, the ancient Fathers acknowledge not, as long as we have the Scripture there needs not any such standing Judg in the Church. These three things Mr Down proves in his not consent of Fathers, but Scripture the ground of faith, p. 261. to 266.

The holy Ghost is the Judge, and the Scripture is the sentence or definitve Decree.

We acknowledge no publick Judge except the Scripture, and the holy Ghost teaching us in the Scripture. He that made the Law should interpret the same, 1 Cor. 1. 12. 1 Joh. 2. 27.

There can be but two certain and infallible Interpreters of Scripture: either it self; or the holy Ghost the Author of it. It self doth then expound it self, when the words and circumstances do sound unto us the prime, naturall and principall sense. But when the place is obscure, involved and intricate, or when there is contained some secret and hidden mystery, beyond the prime sense; infallibly to shew us this, there can be no Interpreter but the holy Ghost that gave it. Besides these two, all other Interpretation is private. Mr Hales his Sermon on 2 Pet. 3. 16. The Canonists say wickedly, Non fuisset discretus Dominus Deus nisi constituret unum universalem judicem.

There are two Interpreters of Scripture.

1. Internall, God alone, Esay 54. 13.

2. External.

1. Immediately called and infallible, as the Prophets and Apostles, 1 Pet. 2. 21. 2 Tim 3. 16. Acts 2. 4.

2. Mediately called and fallible, all other Ministers, Acts 20. 28. 1 Pet. 5. 2. Lubbertus De Principiis Christianorum Dogmatum, lib. 6. cap. 12. Vide etiam cap. 11. & 13.

Arguments brought by the Papists for their opinion.

Primo non sequitur à lege ad Evangelium. Secundò non sequitur à Mose ad Episcopum Romanum, qui hic non eundem locum tenet inter Christianos, quem Moses inter Judæos. Chamier.

Object. 1. They object that place, Exod. 18. 13, 26.

Answ. Moses was a Prophet indued with singular wisdome, adorned by God with extraordinary gifts, sent immediately by him, and commended by Divine Testimonies to the people, the Pope is not so. He had chiefest Authourity from God over all the Israelites; but the Pope hath not so over all Christians. Moses his Authority was extraordinary, no man succeeded in his place; Joshuah was a Captain only, or Judge in Civil things. Aaron only a Priest to administer in things sacred, but Moses exercised both functions.

Object. 2. They urge that place, Deut. 17. 9.

Answ. Here the Civil Magistrate and the Judge are joyned together, as vers. 12. If it will follow hence that the Pope must be Supreme Judge in all Ecclesiastical matters, the Emperor ought to be as well in Civil.

2. The Pope doth not hold the same place among Christians, that the high-Priest did among the Jews. For he was the chiefest, having all the rest of the Priests subject to him; but the Pope is one amongst all, having collegues, many Bishops as at first, or a few Patriarchs as after.

Object. 3. Eccl. 12. 11. If the chief Pastor in the Old Testament had such authority, much more the chief Priest in the New.

Answ. This one Pastor [k] signifieth neither the High-Priest in the old Law, nor the Pope in the New; but Jesus Christ the high Shepherd for our souls.

[k] Hieronymus in locum ait: Etsi plures verbum Dei doceant, unus tamen est illius Doctrinæ Author, nempe Deus; ubi Manichæos refellit, qui unum statuerunt Authorem Veteris Testamenti, alterum verò Novi. Alii Spiritum volunt esse hunc unum Pastorem, ut Vatablus. Alii Christum, ut Mercerus; Papam nulli, præterquam insulsi Papistæ, Whitakerus. Interpretes omnes de Deo exposuerunt, cum veteres tum recentes, etiam Papistæ. Chamierus. Vide Gier. Comm. in Coh. in loc.

Object. Matth. 6. 19. Christ saith to Peter, To thee will I give the Keyes of the Kingdome of Heaven, Therefore the Pope hath Authority to expound Scripture.

Answ. First, By the Keyes here is meant Commission to preach the Gospel; not not Authourity of interpreting the Scriptures. When the Goſpel is preached, the Kingdome of Heaven is opened to the Beleevers, and ſhut to the unbeleevers.

Secondly, That Authourity of the Keys was not committed to Peter only, but to the other Apoſtles alſo, Mat. 28. 18, 19.

There is a two-fold Judgement, 1. Of Diſcretion, 1 Cor. 10. 15. 2. Of Authourity, as the Parliament judgeth capital crimes. If the Papiſts underſtand the word Judge to ſignifie Diſcerning (as when we judge of meats by the taſte) every faithfull perſon ought to pray unto God for grace to judge, to diſcern, and to know the true ſenſe of the Scripture. But if by judging they underſtand to pronounce Decrees, definitive and infallible Judgements, touching the ſenſe of the Scriptures, thereby to bind other mens conſciences; there is no man in the world that hath that power. See Moulins Buckler of Faith. We have a more compendious way, to come to the underſtanding of the Scripture. It were too long when we doubt of any place, to ſtay till we have the generall conſent of the Paſtors of the Church, or to expect a generall Councel, or to go up to Rome. But the Word of God is amongſt us; the Scriptures themſelves, and the Spirit of God opening our hearts, do teach us how to underſtand them. And yet we ſay not (as the Papiſts falſly charge us) that we allow every private mans Interpretation of Scripture, refuſing the judgement of the Paſtors of the Church. [l] Panormitan ſaith, [m] the opinion of one godly man ought to be preferred before the Popes, if it be grounded upon better authourity of the Old and New Teſtament, 2 Pet. 1. 20. No prophecy of the Scripture is of any private Interpretation. Stapleton ſaith, Interpretation is private, either Ratione perſonæ, when the man is private, or Ratione medii, when it is not taken out of the Context and Circumſtances, or Ratione finis, when it is for a falſe end. Now private Interpretation in regard of the perſon, if it be publick in regard of the meanes, is not forbidden; for it is lawfull for one man with Scripture Toti reſiſtere mundo, ſaith the Gloſs of the Canon-Law; the meaning of this place is, That the Prophets were no Interpreters or Meſſengers of their own mindes, but Gods. The Catholicks hold (ſaith Chamier, meaning ſtill by that Title the Proteſtants) that the Scripture is to be interpreted by private labour and induſtry, viz. of Auſtine, Jerom, Chryſoſtome, but not in a private ſenſe, that is, in a ſenſe ariſing from the brain of the Interpreter.

[l] Cap. ſignificaſti de Elect. Review of the Councel of Trent, l. c. 8. p. 45.

[m] Deum atque homines teſtamur, cum plurima nobis in Papiſmo diſplicean̄t, tum hoc omnino intolerandum videri, quod Scripturas quilibet apud eos dolioculus, ita ſibi in manum tradi & arbitretur ut eas ſurſum deorſum verſare queat, quid libet inde confecturus ſuo arbitrio; ſuo inquam arbitrio, ſuo marte, quid libet excogitans & commentans. Ita enim evenit, ut qui maximè præ ſe ferant deteſtari privatum ſpiritum, ij huic ipſi indulgeant omnium maxime. Enimverò quis docuit prophetiam illam ex Pſalmo 72. Adorabunt eum omnes reges terræ, omnes gentes ſervient ei, impletam eſſe in Leone decimo? Chamier. Tom. 1. de Scriptura interpretatione; l. 16. c. 1. Vide Cameron. ad 2 Pet. 1. 20. Matth. 23. 8, 9, 10. The uſe of Divine Illumination. 1. To give us a clear ſight of the truths of God, Heb. 8. 7. 2. To give us an applicative ſight, Prov. 8. 12. Joh. 5. 28. 3. An affective ſight, Prov. 2. 10. 4. A transforming ſight, 2 Cor. 4. 10. 5. Gives us ſuch a ſight of truths, as prevailes to deſtroy luſts, 1 John 2. 3, 4. & 3. 11.

It is true (ſaith Cartwright againſt the Rhemiſts) that the Scriptures can not be expounded of every private ſpirit, nor (which is more) of any private ſpirit, nor yet of all private ſpirits together, but only of thoſe which are inſpired of God, viz. the Prophets and Apoſtles, which are here oppoſed unto private Interpretation. And therefore it is evident, That the Expoſition of the Scripture, ought not to be fetched from Eccleſiaſtical either Fathers or Councels, which ſpeak not by Inſpiration, but from the Scriptures themſelves; what he meaneth, he declareth in the next verſe, where he ſheweth the reaſon of his ſaying; namely, that it muſt be interpreted, as it was written, and by as high Authority. Seeing therefore it was firſt ſpoken by holy men, which ſpake as they were led by the holy Spirit, and were inſpired of God, it followeth, that it muſt be interpreted by the ſame Authority. The Interpretation therefore that is brought out of the Apoſtles and Prophets, is not private, although it be avowed by one man only. On the other ſide that Interpretation which is not brought from thence, although it have the allowance

Ejus eſt interpretari cujus eſt condere. It is dangerous to ſet on the ſtudy of the word in the ſtrength of wit and humane helps. We ſhould magnifie Gods power, 1 Cor. 4. 26. 2. Make uſe of Chriſt, Col. 2. 6. 3. Mourne over our ignorance. 4. Waite for light in the uſe of the meanes, Pſal. 119. 18. Pſal. 25. 9.

lowance of whole general Councels, is but private.

This is a principal meaning of our Saviour Christ, when he willeth that we should call no man Father or Master in the earth, that is, in matter of Doctrine, we should depend upon the Authority of no man, nor of all men in the earth, but only upon Christ, and upon God. Matth. 17. 5.

Our reasons by which we prove, that the chiefest Judgment and Authority of interpreting Scriptures is to be given not to the Church, but to the Scriptures themselves and the holy Ghost.

Soli Scriptura vel Spiritui in Scriptura loquenti competunt requisita summi Judicis, quæ tria sunt; 1. Ut certo sciamus, veram esse sententiam, quam pronunciat. 2. Ut ab illo ad alium judicem non liceat provocare. 3. Ut nullo partium studio ducatur. Wendelinus in Prolegom. Christ. Theol. cap. 3.

1. That which only hath power to beget faith, that only hath the chiefest Authority of interpreting Scripture, and of determining all Controversies concerning Faith and Religion; but the Scriptures onely and the Holy Ghost have this power, Rom. 10. 17. The Holy Ghost only can infuse saving Faith into our hearts, which is called by the Schoolmen Infusa Fides. The Faith which we have from the Church is acquired, and sufficeth not to a certain perswasion.

2. The Scriptures cannot be interpreted but by the same Spirit wherewith they were written; [a] that Spirit is found no where but in the Scripture; whosoever have promises from God to understand the Scripture may interpret it, but so have all the faithfull.

[a] Cathedram in cœlo habet qui corda docet. Aug. Luke 10. 21, 22. Jer. 31. 33, 34. Convenit inter nos & adversarios, Scripturas intelligi debere eo Spiritu quo factæ sunt, id est, Spiritu Sancto. Bellarm. lib. 3. de verbo Dei, cap. 3, 11.

3. Christ himself makes the Scripture a Judge, John 12. 48. and still appealed to it.

4. Although the Fathers were men indued of God with excellent gifts, and brought no small light to understanding of the Scriptures. Yet learned men in our dayes may give a right sense of sundry places thereof which the Fathers saw not, yea against the which perhaps they consent. There is certainly excellent use of the Fathers of the Church, to evidence the consent of truth and unity in severall ages. Mr Frost on Heb. 4. 2.

Hath any man living read all the Fathers? Nay, have all the men living read them? Nay, Can they shew them? Can they get them? I had almost said, Can they name * them.

* Dr Rainolds against Hart. The number of Ancient Fathers (whose Works are yet extant) who lived within six and seven hundred years after Christ, are recorded to have been about two hundred. Bishop Morton of the Masse, l. 7. c. 6.

Nos in hoc Romanenses absque iniquitate summa culpare non possunt, qui quâ non libertate, sed temeritate Patrum authoritatem rejiciant, quoties ea ipsis contrariatur, non jam dicam, cùm id antea à viris Doctissimis, nominatim à Cl. Rivero in Tractatu de authoritate Patrum, & viro Doctissimo Jacobo Laurentio in Conscientiâ Jesuitica cauteriatâ præstitum abundè sit. Vedelii Rationale Theologicum, l. 3. c. 6.

In the Exposition of those words, Tu es Petrus, & super hanc petram, almost every one of the Fathers, at least the most part of them, and the best expound it of Peters faith; yet the Papists understand it, non de fide sed de persona Petri. Here they disagree themselves from the Fathers.

John 10. 16. By the title of one Shepheard, Augustine, Chrysostome, Jerome, Cyril, Theodoret, Theophylact, Euthymius, Rupertus, Cyprian, and other Fathers agree, that Christ is there designed; but Stapleton saith the Pope is there meant.

The Fathers wrote some things ἀργυμενικῶς to confute the adversaries with whom they had to deal, and in these they erre sometimes; some things ἐγκωμιαστικῶς to praise the Saints of God, and stir up others to their virtue, wherein they overlash. Rainolds against Hart.

In the Division of the Law, they go clean contrary to the greatest part of the Fathers: for they divide the Commandments as we do, but the Papists make the two first one, and the tenth two. 2. They have no father to countenance them in this, but Austin. Rivet. de Authoritate Patrum, c. 5, 6, 7.

There

There were no writings of the Fathers for a time, many of them wrote 400 years after Christ, but some 500 and 600 years after Christ; what rule had they before that time of interpreting Scriptures.

The Fathers were given too much to allegorizing; Cajetan therefore in the Preface of his Commentaries upon the Books of Moses, saith; That the exposition of the Scripture is not tied by God to the sense of the Fathers; therefore he admonisheth his Readers not to take it ill, if he sometime dissent from the stream of the Fathers.

4. The Doctrine of the Church must be examined by the Scriptures, Acts 17. 11. If Pauls doctrine, much more may the decrees of the Pope, Church, Councels be examined by the Scriptures.

5. The interpretation of the Scripture is a gift freely given by God, for the edification of the Church, Rom. 12. 6. 1 Cor. 12. 10. therefore it is not tied to a certain kind of men, but common to the faithfull.

6. The faithfull are commanded diligently to try and examine every doctrine, 1 Thess. 5. 21. 1 John 4. 1. which cannot be altogether done without interpretation.

What means must be used in the interpretation of Scripture:

Mr Needler after his Expository Notes on the fifth Chapter of Genesis, laies down good Directions for the right understanding of the Scriptures in thirty six Rules.

The end of the Scripture (we heard) was to direct the Church to all saving truth.

The meanes to be used for the attaining of that end, by the Minister, is diligent study and humble Prayer; by the People, attentive reading, hearing, prayer and meditating.

First, The Teachers must pray earnestly to God for his Spirit to inlighten them, Mat. 7. 7, 8, 9. Rom. 15. The Scriptures are understood by that Spirit that dictated them.

Secondly, The Pastors and Teachers of the Church must diligently and painfully study the Scriptures, giving themselves to read, compare place with place,[a] Joh. 5. 39. Search the Scriptures, it is a metaphor taken from such as search for Gold and Silver-Oar in the earth, who will search and sift, and break every clod to find out the gold. Solomon useth the same metaphor, Prov. 2. 4. and to this diligence in searching doth the Apostle exhort Timothy, 1 Tim. 4. 13. This diligence is often expresst in Scripture in the Old Testament, by the phrase of meditating in the word, Josh. 1. 8. Psal. 1. 2.

Thirdly, They must labour for a competent knowledge in the originall tongues the Hebrew and[b] Greek, in which the Scripture was written, that so they may consult with the Hebrew Text in the Old, and the Greek in the New Testament; and see with their own, not anothers eyes; as Gen. 3. 15. The Papists read it corruptly, She shall break, here the original soon determines the controversie, wherein the pronoun Hu, can signifie nothing but He, or It, both which are all one in effect in this place. See Esay 28. 9, 11. 1 Cor. 14. 21, 22. & 2. 13. 1 Pet. 4. 11. Mr Thurman in his Defence of Humane Learning, gives five reasons to prove, that a Minister should be skild in Hebrew and Greek, that he may the better interpret the Scriptures.

Fourthly, They should likewise be expert in all the liberall Arts, especially in Grammer, Logick, Rhetorick, generall Philosophy and History. All the Treasures[c] of wisdom and knowled are hid in the Scriptures; the Treasures of natural Philosophy in Genesis, of Moral Philosophy in Exodus, Deuteronomy and Ecclesiastes; of the Politicks in the Judicials of Moses, and the Proverbs of Solomon; of Poetry in the Psalms; of History in the Books of Chronicles, Judges and Kings; of the Mathematicks in the dimensions of the Ark, of the Temple, of the Metaphysicks, in the Books of the Prophets and Apocalyps.

Of the meanes to find out the true sense of the Scripture.

Orationi lectio, lectioni succedat oratio.

Ἐπευχὴ τῆς χάριτος.

[a] There must be a comparing of obscure places with such as are more evident, Gen. 11. 35. with Gal. 3. 16. of like with like, Exod. 12. & 1 Cor. 11. 24. unlike with unlike, John 6. 53. with Deut. 5. 23.

[b] Contrà ignota signa magnum est remedium linguarum cognitio, & Latina quidem lingua homines duabus aliis ad scripturarum cognitionem opus habent Hebraica & Graca Aug. 2 Tim. 2. 15. Tit. 1. 9.

[c] Dr Featley in a Sermon on Psal. 2. 10. Logick teacheth the Preacher to Analize and divide his Text. It teacheth to collect true and proper Doctrines from it, assisting him in confuting of Heresies, and in resolving all questions. Rationis circa Scripturam duplex potissimum est usus. 1. Collativus, ut nempe diversa Scriptura loca diligenter conferamus. 2. Illativus ut eruta è verborum proprietate, contextu & scopo, documenta debitè & artificiosè inferamus. Dr Sanderson. Prælect. 4. de obligat. Conse.

Fifthly, They must consider:

1. The several words.
2. The phrases.

In the several words they must consider:

1. Whether the word be taken properly or tropically, and that they may the better understand the words, an inspection,

1. Of Lexicons is needfull, some of which observed the order of the Alphabet, but so as they distinguished between the roots, and the Derivatives, as Pagnine hath done for the Hebrew, and Stephanus for the Greek.

The best Lexicons for understanding the Hebrew Text, are Buxtorf,[d] Avenarius, Forster, Schindler, Mercer on Pagnine, and Marinus Brixianus his Arca Noæ; for the Greek, are Stephanus, Budeus, Scapula; my own two Criticæ (I hope) may be usefull for understanding both Testaments.

2. Of Concordances [e] some much extoll Buxtorf for the Hebrew, Kirchers is a very usefull one both for the Hebrew and the Septuagint, Stephanus and Smidt for the Greek are the best. Cottons Concordance (as it is now inlarged by Newman) is esteemed the best for the English. See Dr Featlies and Dr Gouges Preface to it, commending it, and shewing the use of Concordances in general.

They must,

1. Consider the Text exactly in it self, the Grammer of it must be sifted, the nature of every word by it self and the alteration it admits in diversity of construction. 2. The Rhetorick, whether any word leaving the proper signification receiveth a borrowed. 3. Above all the Logick, as to know what he proveth, and by what.

2. Compare parallel places, and obscure with plainer. To interpret that place, This is my body, [f] make use of that other, The Bread which we break, is the communion of the body of Christ, because both places are not onely concerning the Eucharist, but also one and the same kind. Illyricus eals the conference of places, Ingens remedium & felicissimam expositionem Sanctæ Scripturæ. Paul is much in this, compare Heb. 3. 7, 11, 15, 17. with Chap. 4. 4, 5, —— 9. ye shall see he makes out the sense of Psal. 95. 7. by comparing it with other Scriptures.

3. Make use of Paraphrases and Versions, among which the Chaldee and the Septuagint for the Old Testament, the Syriack and the Arabick for the New excell.

4. For the knowledge of the phrase, they must proceed the same way; and to understand the better both the words and phrases, they must diligently consider of the scope and circumstances of the place, as the coherence of that which went before, with that which follows after, and of the matter whereof it doth intreat.

5. All Expositions ought to agree with the Analogie of faith, [g] Rom. 12. 6.

Analogy is either of faith, comprehended in the Doctrine of the Creed, Lords Prayer, Commandements, Sacraments, and gathered out of evident places of Scripture, or of the Text, by the coherence of Antecedentia & Consequentia, by the propriety of the phrase.

6. The Jewish Expositors, the ancient Fathers, and other Interpreters, ancient and modern, Popish and Protestant, are useful for the right understanding of the Scripture, if they be read with judgement.

[d] Lexicon Chaldaicum, talmudicum, & rabbinicum, opus immensi laboris atque fructus, & incomparabili multorum annorum industria patris atque filii Johan. Buxtorfii elaboratum. Bootius.

[e] Concordantiæ Bibliorum hebraicæ, editæ à Joa. Buxtorfio juniore, magni patris majore filio. Arnoldus Bootius. Henrici. Stephani maximæ & absolutissimæ Concordantiæ.

[f] This Bread is my body, i. the communion of my body. The Prophets explain the books of Moses, and the New Testament interprets the Old.

[g] Analogia fidei nihil aliud est, quam constans & perpetua sententia Scripturæ, in apertis & minimè obscuris Scripturæ locis: quales sunt articuli fidei in symbolo, quæque continentur in oratione Dominica, in Decalogo. Whitakerus. Many things are required to render a man capable to expound the holy Scriptures, some absolutely, some respectively, As first, To know the right Analogy of Faith, to which all interpretations of Scripture must be of necessity conformed. Secondly, To know the practice and tradition of the Church, and the received Expositions of former Interpreters, in the successive ages, which gives a great light to the finding out of the right sense. Thirdly, To be able to compare Texts with Texts, Antecedents with Consequents, without which one can hardly attain to the drift and scope of the holy Ghost, in the obscurer passages. Lastly, It is something to know the Idiotisms of that Language, wherein the Scriptures were written. Dr Bramhal's Answer to Monsieur De la Militiere his Epistle.

Ferdinando,

Ferdinando, De Eſcalante in his Clypeus Concionatorum verbi Dei l. 7. c. 6. gives ſeveral reaſons to prove, that the Rabbins who wrote after the Paſſion of Chriſt, are of no authority, becauſe they are deadly enemies to Chriſt and Chriſtians, are ignorant of Hiſtories, and the liberall arts, becauſe they retain not the properties and idiotiſmes of the Hebrew tongue, yet cap. 8. he ſaith the Rabines which preceded Chriſt are to be eſteemed.

That ſaying of Coch. Tit. Talmud. tract. Gem. Sanhedrim. not c. 11. is good. Non eſt fidendum interpretationibus quamvis doctorum virorum. Non enim ſemper adeſt interpretibus induſtria, ſtudium, attentio, ſcientia, exprimendi felicitas, quam oportet ad interpretationis abſolutæ & cumulatè perfectæ confectionem adeſſe.

Not many, but a few, and thoſe the beſt Commentaries, are to be conſulted with: of the Hebrew Interpreters and Rabbins; two were moſt learned, R. David Kimki, and Rabbi Aben Ezra, ſaith Dr Rainolds. There was one Rabbi Eliezer ſonne in law to Gamaliel, Pauls Maſter. His Book called Capita Rabbi Eliezer, is the ancienteſt of all the Jewiſh Books which are extant. So Morinus, But Petitus oppoſeth him, Var. Lect. l. 2. c. 4. Hottinger in his Theſ. Philol. l. c. 2. Sect. 7. ſhews how uſefull Rabbinicall Commentaries are for a Chriſtian Divine, and in his Promtuarium or Bibliotheca Orientalis, c. 1. reckons up theſe Jewiſh Expoſitors on all the Bible, or a greater part of it, R. Salomon Jarchie, who is obſcure and fabulous, R. Abraham, Aben Ezra, R. David Kimchi, an excellent Interpreter of the literal ſenſe, R. Levi, Ben Gerſon, a famous Philoſopher, R. Saadias. Abarbinel.

The pure Maſters of the Hebrews (ſaith Mayerus in Philologia Sacra) are ſpecially Maymonides, Rabbi David Kimchi, Aben Ezra the Wiſeman, Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, although the laſt two much favor Talmudical dreams.

Habent Judæi inter alios, duos, Abrahamum filium Ezra, & Davidem Kimchi, qui germanam vocum proprietatem, & dictorum ordinem genuinum (exceptis locis, ubi urgentur vaticiniis de ſpirituali regno Chriſti, ac interna ſolidaque juſtitia, quæ fide conſtat Servatoris) magno ſtudio proſequuti ſunt: nihil ferè abſque autoritate Conſonantium locorum interpretantes: quas etiam, præter aliorum Hebræorum morem, magna proprietatis obſervatione citant. Ab his fateor (cujus donum eſt quicquid utile) me in enarratione Pſalmorum plurimum eſſe adjutum: quod & paſſim judicavi, neque enim Candidi ingenii eſt, diſſimulare per quos profeceris. Bucerus Enarr. in Pſal. Præfat. Vide Hotting. Smegmatis Orient. c. 3. De uſu Ling. Orient. in Genere, p. 47.

The Cabaliſts and many of the Rabbines are very fabulous, and men in a burning fever cannot dreame of things more ridiculous, than ſome of the Rabbines have ſeriouſly written and taught, ſaith [b] Muis againſt Morinus. Vide Spanhem. Dub. Evangel. parte tertia. Dub. 21. & Dub. 129. Glaſſ. Philol. Sac. l. 2. partem primam. Tract. 1. Thalmud liber fabuloſiſſimus. Chamierus.

Rainoldus de lib. Apoc. Hujuſmodi eſt ſtyli Rabbinici peritia: ſine qua ſolidam veteris Teſtamenti intelligentiam ſe aſſequuturos fruſtra ſperant plurimi. Etenim Rabbinis, quamvis à dogmatum multorum veritate deviantibus, lingua Hebræa vernacula eſt. Multa quoque ſubſidia habent qua linguæ exactiorem cognitionem promovent, per totam vitam in ea occupantur L. Emp. Epiſt. Dedicat. ad Kimchi Hodoiporian. Plura Rabbinis debemus nos præſertim qui accuratum iſtud interpretandi genus ſectamur, quam quiſquam exiſtimet. Druſ. obſerv. Sac. l. 15. c. 6. [b] Cenſura in exercitat. 4. Morini c. 80. Doctiſſimus Hebræorum Grammaticus idemque interpres Kimchius. Fuller Miſcel. l. 5. c. 8. vide l. 2. c. 3. & l. 3. c. 12. & l. 4. c. 18. David Kimchius, è cujus Grammatica & Lexico ſive radicum libro, tanquam ex equo Trojano prodiit, quicquid Grammaticorum & Lexicorum Hebraicorum ubique videmus. Morinus l. 1. exercit 6. c. 4. Ebræorum Interpretum Coryphæus Kimchi, Amama Antib. Bibl. R. David Kimchi, ſive Kamius, ſcriptor terſus & ſtyli Biblici amulus, ſcriptor Cordatior & à Talmudicis fabulis alienior. Amama conſilium de ſtudio Ebraico feliciter inſtituendo. Ingenioſiſſimus ille Hebræorum doctorum David Kimchi Hiſpanus, dictionario ſuo Hebraico nunquam ſatis laudato, quod inſcripſit Sepher haſchurſchim. Librum radicum. Waſerus de num. Heb. l. 1. c. 1. Aben Ezra meritò audit ſapientiſſimus Ebræorum, Mayerus in Philol. Sac. R. Aben Ezra Hiſpanus, Chacâm, ſapiens ſeu doctus cognominatur. Waſerus de num. Heb. l. 1. c. 1. vide Buxtorfium Abbreviat. de Heb. p. 34. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, Campenſis Gallus, tanta eſt apud Hebræos authoritatis, ut cognomentum evaluerit Raſchi, quaſi capitis tribum Iſrael, ac univerſa Biblia Hebraica doctiſſimis quidem, ſed arguis admodum Commentariis illuſtravit. Waſ. ubi ſupra. One of ſpecial credit among the Jews, and therefore uſually ſtiled with an Epithet, Aben Ezra the wiſe man, Nettles Anſwer to the Jewiſh part of the Hiſtory of Tythes. Sect. 5.

Abarbanel hath done well on the greateſt part of the Old Teſtament. Scriptor famoſiſſimus, ſaith Buxtorf of him in Decalogo Judæorum doctiſſimus L'Empereur on Dan, Author eſt perquàm ſolidi ingenii & Doctrinæ, Muis, Aſſert. 3. veritat. Heb.

Heb. Yet he was unknown (it ſeems) to Mercer, for he doth not mention him. The moſt curious that ever handled the Tongue, though not the ſoundeſt, ſaith Broughton.

The Jews ſay of Rabbi Moſes Ben-Maymon, that, From Moſes to Moſes there aroſe not ſuch a *Moſes. He was the firſt of the Rabbines that ceaſed to dote. Maimonides antiquus & celeberrimus inter Judæos Scriptor. Capellus de literis Ebr. Mr Gregory ſtiles him, the very learned Maimon.

* A Moſe (Prophetâ) ad Moſen, (hunc Ægyptium) non ſurrexit ſicut Moſes, qui ſcilicet doctrina & eruditione Moſi legiſlatori eſſet æquiparandus. Dilherus Elect. l.1.c.5. Ebræorum communi judicio, doctiſſimus Rabbi Moſes Ægyptius, ſaith Rivet. of him. Exam. Animad. Hugon. Grot.

It is true, that ſome of the Jewiſh Rabbines are fabulous and ridiculous in their Expoſitions of Scripture. See *Buxtorfs Syntag. Jud. cap.*36. And Mr *Gataker's Adverſaria Miſcellanea. cap.*8.

Yet the Church of God is much beholding to the Hebrew Rabbins, being great helps unto us for underſtanding holy Scripture in many places, as well of the New Teſtament, as the Old. Vide Capel. *Critic. Defenſ. pag.*59. Et Cartw. Præfat. ad Annotat. in Geneſ. There are divers places both in the Old and New Teſtament, which cannot be well underſtood, unleſſe we borrow Candle-light from the Hebrew Doctors, as Exod. 6. 3. Ruth 4. 7. Iſa. 1. 29. & 12. 13. Jer. 16. 7. Ezek. 8. 14. & 9. 4. Matth. 5. 22. & 21. 9. & 23. 7, 8. & 26. 23. Mark 7. 11. Rom. 5. 7. John 7. 37. & 3. 20. 1 Tim. 3. 8. Revel. 4. Calverts Annotat. on the Demonſtrat. of the true Meſſias.

Is annis abhinc amplius quadringentis ſcripſit. Fuller. In Ægypto educatus & ſtudiis conſecratus, unde vocatur Moſes Ægyptius. Buxtorf. de Abbreviat. Hebraic. Rabbi Ben Maimon (commonly called Rambam) the moſt judicious Rabbin that ever was known to the Chriſtian world. Dr Caſaubones Treatiſe of Uſe and Cuſtome. R. Moſe Ben Nachman, quem Ramban per Nun in fine, qui & Moſes Gerundenſis, cum alius. R. Moſe Ben Maimon, qui Rambam, per Mem in fine vocatur, ſit; qui R. Moſes Ægyptius dicitur; uterque vir inſignis. Mercer. in Gen. Ralbag, that is, Rabbi Levi Ben Gerſon, he wrote Commentaries upon all the Bible, and Radak, that is, Rabbi David Kimchi; Raſhi, that is, Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, he hath commented upon all the Bible, and almoſt all the Talmud. Solent Judæi ad hunc uſque diem, cum notantur initialibus literis quædam vocabula, ex illis vocem unam conficere, ut quia primariæ literæ Rabbi Solomon Jarchi ſunt רש"י, ſolent appellari Raſhi, & Rabbi Moſes Ben Maimon, quoniam quatuor hæ voces incipiunt à רמבם Judæum appellant Rambam. Rainold. *de lib. Apoc. l.*4. prælect. 150.

Munſter in his Preface to the Bible tranſlated by him, denies, that any one can rightly interpret Scripture without the help of the Rabbins. Jerome did not undertake his verſion of the Bible without the help of a Jew.

2. The Fathers, Doctores ſcil. probati antiquæ Eccleſiæ qui ſcriptis ſuis Fidem illuſtrarunt, as Voetius ſpeaks, not one of them but hath his errour, becauſe God would have them known to be but men. Of the right uſe of the Fathers, ſee Daille's excellent Treatiſe.

En allegation des Peres ſur nous controverſes nous auons ce deſavantage, qu' nous n'avons les Peres que par les mains de nos adverſaires. Car toutes les impreſſions qui en ont eſté faites, ont eſté faites ſur les manuſcrits qui ſe ſont trouves es monaſteres, eſcrits par des moines, qui ont eu beau ieu à les changer, & rogner, & à mettre de vieils tiltres ſur de liures nouveaux, compoſez par eux Meſmes. Anatomie De La Meſſe par Pierre Du Moulin. l. 1. ch. 25.

They are called Fathers in reſpect of their age, they preceding our times many hundreds of years, and in reſpect of their Doctrine, which they diligently inculcated and endeavoured to propagate to thoſe that then lived; many of their worthy labours being tranſmitted to poſterity. Rivet. de Patrum Authoritate. cap. 1.

There was an eminency of Office and Dignity in them, becauſe they were Paſtors and Teachers in the Church; of Time, becauſe they were nearer to the Apoſtles; of Science, becauſe they were more learned than many of thoſe that ſucceeded; and of Conſcience, becauſe they were of an unblameable life, leſſe ſubject to ambition, coveteouſneſſe, envy, and other evil affections, with which the ſucceeding generations were too much tainted.

That is an excellent paſſage in the Apology for M. De Balzac. I' honore l' antiquité, & defere beaucoup à ces premiers hommes, qui nous ont donné ce qu' ils n'avoient receu de perſonne, & ont eſté ſcauans ſans auoir eſté enſeignez que de la nature.

And

And again, L' age apporte je ne ſoay quel reſpect aux Choſes, que nous conſiderons avec attention les ruines meſmes des vieux baſtiments.

Patres libenter amplector, & recipio: Doctrina enim ex veteri memoria plena antiquitatis, plena dignitatis exiſtit: ſed recipio patres, ut ipſi jubent ſe recipi, hoc eſt, ſi contineant ſe in ſua ditione, & non migrent in poſſeſſionem verbi Dei, Apolog. Rog. Aſchami pro cœna Domini.

Patres numero plurimi, dignitate ampliſſimi, authoritate graviſſimi, vetuſtate antiquiſſimi, pietate ſanctiſſimi, literis & linguis floreniſſimi. Tob. Mat. Concio Apologet.

The Ancients were ſo far the beſt, as they were both neareſt the fountain of primitive purity, and remoteſt from the paſſions, prejudices and parties of our later and worſer times. Dr Gaudens Memorials of Biſhop Brounrig.

Thoſe Fathers[a] of the firſt ſix hundred years we reverence more, and rather admit than thoſe of the thouſand years following, becauſe they were freer from error, as living neerer the Apoſtles, and before the firſt diſcovery of Antichriſt, which was about the ſix hundred and ſeven, when Boniface the third purchaſed of that bloudy Tyrant Phocas the Title of Univerſal Biſhop, and with it the Supremacy over all Churches.

Eraſmus (Accuratiſſimus Patrum vetuſtiorum cenſor,) was much exerciſed in the writings of the Fathers, and hath beſtowed great pains in reſtoring and illuſtrating *Jerome, Auguſtine, and others of them.

See Moulins Anatomie, De la Meſſe, l.1.c.24. & 25.

[a] Neque enim negans adverſarii ipſi, qui patribus aliquando videntur nimium tribuere, quo magis Apoſtolorum vicini fuerunt, eo etiam majoris eſſe authoritatis. Quo plus enim homines ab Apoſtolorum temporibus receſſerunt, eo plus ſumpſerunt audacia. Apud omnes autem orthodoxos in confeſſo eſt, ſignum publicè erexiſſe Antichriſtum poſt ſexcentos à nato Chriſto annos, regnante Phoco, à quo, Pontifici Romano Tyrannica in omnes Epiſcopos poteſtas eſt confirmata, &c. Jure igitur Joannes Juellus Anglus, Epiſcopus Sariſburienſis, qui ad patrum authoritatem Pontificios provocavit, edito ſcripto, in præcipuis horum temporum controverſiis enodandis, non egreſſus eſt ſexcentorum à nato Chriſto annorum limites, quibus negavit probari poſſe authoritate antiqui alicujus patris receptos fuiſſe viginti ſeptem articulos, in quibus hoc tempore Pontificii rei Chriſtianæ ſummam conſtituunt. Rivet. de patrum authoritate, cap. 1. * Neque verebor illud vel jurejurando confirmare, minoris ipſi Hieronymo conſtitiſſe ſuos ſcripſiſſe lucubrationes quam nobis reſtituiſſe & illuſtraſſe. Eraſm. l.2. Epiſt.1. Leoni decimo. The Fathers had their Navi, their errors, as Daillé du vrai uſage des Peres, & Rivet. de authoritate patrum. & Laurentius in Rev. Eccl. Rom. erga Pat. Subdola ſhew. Summi erant homines, ſed tamen homines erant. Gook in his Cenſura quorundam Scriptorum veterum; and Rivet. in his Crit. Sac. ſhew which of their works were ſpurious and ſuppoſititious. Qui auroit eſté des autres de Cyprian, d' Ambroiſe, de Hieroſme, d' Auguſtin, & d' Athanaſe les fauſſes ſuppoſez, diminueroit les eſcrits de ces Peres de plus d' un tiers. Anatomie De La Meſſe. l.1. c.25. De Eccleſia primitiva Patribus hoc eſt obſervandum, quòd vel ex Hebræorum, vel Gentilium ſebolis decedentes nomen dederint Chriſto: Initiatis autem Chriſtianorum dogmatis, ſubinde aliquid veteris ſuperſtitionis, ſive Judaicæ, ſive Gentilis hauſerint. Hotting Diſſertat. Miſcel. de abuſu Patrum. Vide plura ibid.

For the Fathers, Jerom among the Latines, and Origen among the Greeks were learned in the Hebrew, ſaith Chamier.

Jerome[b] was the chiefeſt among them, for skill in the Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, Latine Tongue, and the moſt diligent ſearcher of the Jewiſh affairs, he ſpared no labour, coſt nor time, that he might attain to skill in thoſe Tongues. He made uſe of the Jews for that purpoſe, and the skilfulleſt amongſt them, whoſe labour he purchaſed with a great deal of money, this he often witneſſeth of himſelf; five times, ſaith Morinus, he made uſe of them.

That one labour of his deſerveth eternal praiſe, that he tranſlated the Scripture out of the Hebrew into Latine.

See Burrh. on Hoſ. 3.4.

[b] Vix ullum habet & ipſa docta Græcia, quem cum hoc viro queat componere. Quantum in illo Romana facundia? Quanta linguarum peritia? Quanta omnis antiquitatis, omnium hiſtoriarum notitia? quàm fida memoria, quàm fœlix rerum omnium mixtura? quàm abſoluta myſticarum literarum cognitio? ſuper omnia quis ardor ille, quam admirabilis Divini pectoris afflatus? Ut unus & plurimum delectet eloquentia, & doceat eruditione, & rapiat ſanctimonia, Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 2. Leoni Decimo Pontifici. In cognitione ſacrarum literarum adeo præſero Hieronymum Auguſtino, ut vehementer impudens arbitrer, alterum cum altero conferre. Eraſm. Eckio. l. 2. Epiſt. Vide plura ibid. Dexterrimus ille literarum ſacrarum interpres. Glaſſius. Hieronymus ſolus inter Patres fuit doctus Hebræas literas, quas quia reliqui ignorabant, ſæpè in V. Teſtamento explicando lapſi ſunt. Tarnov. exercit. Bib.

That was a moſt laborious work* of Origens in gathering together divers Edi-

* Opus laboriosum & divinum, maximo Eccleſiæ damno amiſſum, cujus operis jacturam deplorare poſſumus, compenſare nunquam poſſumus. Whitak. Vid. Whitak. de author. Script. l.2.c.1. Et Ferdinando De Eſculante Glyp. Concionat. verbi Dei. l.7.c.11.

tions

tions of Scripture. 1. The Greek of Aquila, Symmachus, the Septuagint and Theodoſion into one Volume diſtinguiſht by four Columns, called Tetrapla, to which he after added two more, one in Hebrew, the other in Greek Characters, and called it his Hexapla; at laſt he joyned two other Editions, and then called it Octapla; by them one might have compared the ſeveral Greek Editions together, and with the Hebrew Text. Vide Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 28. p. 1155. It is manifeſt (ſaith Buxtorf) that the moſt and beſt of his writings are loſt.

It was ſaid of him, Ubi benè nemo melius, Ubi malè nemo pejus.

Quod attinet ad Origenem, meâ certè nihil interest quid ille ſenſerit: quem ſcio Theologum fuiſſe audaciorem, quam ſaniorem. Chamier. Tom. 2. de S. Trinitate, cap. 8.

Salmaſius, Whitaker, Sixtus Senenſis, and others ſay, Origen [b] was skilfull in the Hebrew. He wrote ſo many Books, that Jerom ſaith, Quis noſtrum tanta poteſt legere, quanta ille conſcripſit.

[b] Inter antiquos Eccleſiaſticos auctores Græci generis non tantùm primus, ſed ferè ſolus Hebraicè fuit doctiſſimus. Salmaſ. de modo uſurarum. Autor non parvus, ut vix unquam nominari poſſit in rebus fidei abſq; præſatione. Chamier.

Vir tantæ fuit eruditionis & ingenii, ut ei parem doctiſſima Græcia fœliciſſimorum ingeniorum parens, nunquam habuerit. Sixtus Senenſis Bibliotheca ſancta, lib. 4.

He ſaith much more there in his commendation. Tantum in Scripturas divinas habuerit ſtudium, ut etiam Hebraam linguam contra ætatis Gentiſque ſuæ naturam ediſceret. Hieronymus de viris illuſtribus. He lived a little after the year two hundred.

Auguſtine [c] for the Latine Church, and golden mouth'd Chryſoſtome for the Greek Church, were moſt famous. He is abridged by Theophylact.

Oecumenius and Theophylact both ſo follow Chryſoſtom, that all three make but one witneſſe only.

[c] Magnus Auguſtinus ingenio, eruditione, ſanctitate, zelo, &c. Quæ res tantam illi meritò authoritatem conciliarunt, ut nemo ſit antiquorum qui in ſcholis noſtris aut Pontificiis pluris æſtimetur aut æſtimari debeat. Rainoldus de libris Apoc. Tom. 1. prælect. 29. Auguſtinus habitus Theologorum veterum acutiſſimus, neque immerito. Id. Quid habet ubi Chriſtianus Aurelio Auguſtino vel magis Aureum vel Auguſtius? Ut ipſa vocabula nequaquam fortuito, ſed numinis providentia videantur indita viro. Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 2. Leoni Decimo Pontifici. Vide plura ibid. Joannes Chryſoſtomus, mellitiſſimus ille concionator Chriſtique præco indefatigabilis, cui jure optimo ob ſapientiſſimam eloquentiam & eloquentiſſimam ſapientiam, oris aurei cognomen tributum eſt. Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 28. pag. 1332. Vide etiam pag. 1333, &c. Græcorum diſertiſſimus Chryſoſtomus. Fullerus.

A Father ſo ancient, ſo learned, ſo godly, ſo ſkilfull in the Scriptures, ſaith Rainolds of Chryſoſtome. Auguſtine for diſputations, Jerom for the tongues, Gregory for Morals.

Auguſtine.

Vir ſupra omnes, qui ante eum & poſt eum huc uſque fuerunt mortales, admirabili ingenii acumine præditus, omnibus liberalibus diſciplinis inſtructus, Divinis Scripturis longè omnium eruditiſſimus, & in earum explanatione ultrà quam dici queat, incomparabili ſubtilitate ſublimis, omnes Latina Eccleſia Scriptores ſcribendi labore, & lucubrationum multitudine ſuperavit. Sixtus Senenſis Bibl. Sanct. l. 4.

Subtiliſſimus Patrum Auguſtinus. Dr Prideaux lect. 4.

This Father is he out of whom our later Writers have had (next after the ſacred Scriptures) moſt of the excellent, ſolid, deep Divinity which they have. Full of humane learning; but in the divine Scriptures by far the moſt learned of all others. Dr Rogers his Proteſtants Faith profeſſed in all Ages, Ch. 5.

Tulit eadem ferme ætas aliquot ſumma facundia parique Doctrina ac pietate viros, Athanaſium Alexandrinum Epiſcopum, Gregorium Nazianzenum Baſilii Pyladem, ac ſtudiorum ſodalem Joannem Chryſoſtomum & ipſum Baſilio familiarem, ac fratrem Gregorium Nyſſenum Epiſcopum. Horum ſuis quiſque dotibus ſummis erat: Athanaſius ad docendum accommodatiſſimus. Nazianzenus floridum & argutum orationis genus amplexus videtur. Chryſoſtomus licet pulcre ſuo cognomini reſpondens, alicubi verbis redundat, & in digreſſionibus videtur immodicus. Nyſſeno placuit pia ſimplicitas. Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 28. pag. 1157. Vide plura ib. de Baſilio.

Gregory Nazianzen the learnedeſt of all the Greek Fathers, and ſirnamed the Divine. Dr Featleys Tranſubſtantiation exploded. He lived about the year 375.

Chryſoſtomus

Chryſoſtomus habet neſcio quid ſubmoleſtæ πολυμυθίας, Gregorius Nazianzenus nonnihil affectatæ argutiæ in verbis; in Baſilio nihil eſt quod offendat. Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 24. Reginaldo Polo.

Irenæus (ſaith Capellus) was almoſt the ancienteſt of all the Fathers, whoſe genuine writings are extant, he was Polycarpus his Diſciple, and lived about the 172 year after Chriſt.

Magnus ille Eccleſiæ propugnator, ac pro ſui nominis augurio pacis Eccleſiaſticæ vindex. Spirant illius ſcripta illum Evangelij vigorem, ac phraſis arguit pectus martyrio paratum. Fuit victus Apoſtolorum temporibus, quum adhuc martyrum triumphis floreret Eccleſia. Nam puer audivit Polycarpum in Aſia. Polycarpus autem Joannis Evangeliſtæ fuit Diſcipulus: hujus viri de Chriſto deque Chriſti Diſcipulis ſermones, Irenæus puer avidiſſimis imbibit auribus, ac penitus inſcripſit cordi ſuo, ſic ut ſenex etiam horum omnium vividam ac præſentem retinet memoriam. Eraſm. Epiſt. l. 28. p. 1145.

Tertullian was one of the Latine Fathers moſt ancient, and very near the Apoſtles, flouriſhing in the Reign of Severus the Emperour, about two hundred years after Chriſts birth, and not paſt one hundred after the death of John the Evangeliſt. Jerom being urged with his Authority, ſaid, De Tertulliano nihil aliud reſpondeo, quam Eccleſia hominem illum non fuiſſe.

See a great commendation of Tertullian in Jacksons Raging Tempeſt, pag. 8.

Vir profectò acris ac vehementis ingenij, multo latino eloquio eleganter ſcripſit, ſed ſtylo nimium elaborato ac duro, & propter inuſitatam vocum novitatem obſcuro. Sixtus Senenſis. Vide Vincent Lyrin. cap. 24. Verſor nunc in Tertulliano emendando & illuſtrando, duro quidem Scriptore, nec ubique orthodoxo, ſed plane inter omnes, tum Græcos, tum Latinos Theologos admirando. Beza Exiſt. 67. de patribus. Septimus Tertullianus fuit omni genere literarum peritus, ſed in eloquendo parum facilis, & minus comptus, & multum obſcurus fuit; ergo ne hic quidem ſatis celebritatis invenit. Lactant. l. 5. de Juſtitia.

In Græcia celebres agnoſco Patres, Clementem, Athanaſium, Cyrillum & Damaſcenum. Montacutius Analect. Eccleſ. Exercit. 1. Sect. 6.

Cyprian the Martyr was of great Authority amongſt all for his holineſſe of life.

Cyprianus unus eſt multorum inſtar veterum habendus, ſive ſpectes eloquentiam, ſive doctrinam, ſive paſtoris dignitatem, ſive pectus Apoſtolici ſpiritus vigorem ubique fragrans, ſive Martyrij gloriam. Pectus ardet evangelica pietate, & pectori reſpondet oratio: loquitur diſerta, ſed magis fortia quam diſerta: neque tam loquitur fortia quam vivit, ut ipſe meminit alicubi. Eraſ. Epiſt. l. 28. p. 1148, 1149, &c. Unus præcipuus & clarus extitit Cyprianus, quoniam & magnam ſibi gloriam ex artis oratoriæ profeſſione quæſierat; & admodum multa conſcripſit in ſuo genere mirabilia. Erat enim ingenio facili, copioſo, ſuavi, & (quæ ſermonis maxima eſt virtus) aperto; ut diſcernere nequeas, utrum ornatior in eloquendo, an facilior in explicando, an potentior in perſuadendo fuerit. Lactant. l. 5. de Juſtitia. Auguſtinus copioſus eſt, Hieronymus ſuccinctus: Lactantius Ciceronem imitatur, Tertullianus obſcuritatem amat: Chryſoſtomus ornatus & apertus eſt, Nazianzenus preſſus & acutus. Whitak. de Script.

Sententious Tertullian, grave Cyprian, reſolute Hierome, flowing Chryſoſtome, divine Ambroſe, devout Bernard, heavenly Auguſtine. Biſhop Halls 4th Decade of Epiſt. Epiſt. 3. Vide Hieron. Epiſt. ad Paulinum de Inſtitutione Monachi.

In Athanaſio ſuſpicimur ſeriam ac ſedulam docendi perſpicuitatem. In Baſilio præter ſubtilitatem, exoſculamur piam ac mitem ſuaviloquentiam. In One ſaith, He that looks upon the Fathers Workes would think they did nothing but Write; he that looks on their Devotions would think they did nothing but Pray; he that looks on their Learning would think they did nothing but Reade.

huius ſodali Chryſoſtomo ſponte profluentem orationis copiam amplectimur. In Cypriano ſpiritum veneramur Martyrio dignum. In Hilario grandi materiæ parem grandiloquentiam, atque ut ita loquar, Cothurnum admiramur. In Ambroſio dulces quoſdam aculeos, & Epiſcopo dignam amamus verecundiam. In Hieronymo divitem Scripturarum penum optimo jure laudamus. In Gregorio puram nulloq; fuco picturatam ſanctimoniam agnoſcimus. Eraſm. l. 28. Epiſt. Præfat. in Aug.

Bernard was a worthy man in the corrupt age in which he lived, but Bernardus non vidit omnia, ſay the Papiſts.

Patrum Latinorum propè ultimus. Bernardum.

Bernardum non admitto, utpote recentiorem, & longè poſt confirmatam Romani Pen-tificis tyranidem, ſcribentem ex more & errore ſui temporis. Chamier. de Canone l. 3. *cap.*3. & cap. 5.

Mercer. in Gen. Danda venia bonis illis & ſanctis patribus, qui ignorantia linguarum multa ſæpe aliena à germana Scripturæ ſenſerunt, pia alioquin attulerunt.

3. For Proteſtant Interpreters.

To ſay truth, the literal ſenſe of holy Scripture was never ſo clearly opened, as in theſe our times. Dr *Heylins Theologia veterum, part.*1. cap. 6.

Eſt Theologia recentioris indoles, eo certè nomine commendanda, quòd ea didicit & evoluit, quæ apud antiquos compreſſa & involuta latebant. Petavius de Incarnat. lib. 6. cap. III.

Ex Scriptura ipſa Calvinus ita Scripturam interpretatus eſt, ut inter æquos verum judices, doctiſſimi interpretis nomen jure meritus ſit. Rivet. in Catholico Orthodoxo. Calvin is not only commended by our own Writers, but by the very Papiſts.

I would content my ſelf among the new Writers with Mr Calvin, who performeth beſt of all others that, which he of himſelf profeſſeth, that a man in reading his Expoſitions reapeth this benefit, that for the ſhortneſs he uſeth, he departeth not far from the Text it ſelf. Cartw. letter to Mr Hilderſham.

Calvin was the notableſt inſtrument that the Lord hath ſtirred up for the purging of his Churches, and reſtoring of the plain and ſincere interpretation of the Scriptures, which hath been ſince the Apoſtles times. Cartw. Reply to Dr Whitgift, in Defence of the Admonit. *p.*19.

Name me one Papiſt who preached ſo often, and wrote ſo accurately upon the holy Scriptures, as Calvin. Dr Featleys Strictura in Lyndo-Maſtigem cap. 14.

I ſo honour the judgement of reverend Calvin, that I reckon him amongſt the beſt Interpreters of Scripture, ſince the Apoſtles left the earth. Dr Hals Revelation unrevealed, *p.*33.

Moſt of the late Writers do but deſcant upon his plain ſong, and the Jeſuites are very Plagiaries, who will firſt rob him, and then rail at him. Dr Harris his life.

Piſcator hath done well in his Scholia on all the Bible. He follows Junius for the Old Teſtament, and Beza for the New; and in his Aphoriſmes he follows Calvins Inſtitutions. Pia & venerabilis memoriæ propter eruditionem textualem ſingularem, & ſanctitatem famam, Joan. Piſcator, ſaith Dr Twiſſe.

[d] Quo nemo ætate ſua ſolidior & nervoſior Theologus. Whitak. in concione ultima. Bucer [d] alſo was an excellent Divine. He hath written a two-fold Expoſition on all the Pſalmes, one more large and Paraphraſtical, the other briefer and ad verbum.

Non immeritò aliquando magnus Scaliger dixit, Ab Apoſtolorum temporibus hactenus parem Theologum nullum vidiſſe ſeculum. Innumera loca primus illuſtravit. L'Empereur in Dan. 2.45.

[e] Incomparabilis illa editio Tremelliana, opera & cura doctiſſimi Theologi Franciſci Junii elucubrata & expolita, pluribuſque Scholiis locupletata, ſuoris præfixo, cantilo, tum annotando. Francis Junius [e], the very Oracle of textual and ſcholaſtical Divinity, as Dr Hall cals him, *Ep.*7. *Dec.*1. But ſome learned men like Tremellius alone, printed before his death, better than Tremellius and Junius together, ſince Junius after the others death took too much liberty of altering ſome things in Tremellius.

Vatablus his Annotations upon the Old Teſtament, and Beza's on the New, are commended by Ainſworth in his Miſcellanies: But Arnoldus Boot in his Index Autorum before his Animadverſiones Sacræ, ſaith Robert Stephens, and not Vatablus was the Author of thoſe Scholia which are in Vatablus his Bible.

Fuller. Miſcel. Sac. lib. 2. cap. 1. Vide Bootii cenſuram in Indice Autorum Animadverſionibus In Novi Teſtamenti laboravit Eraſmus Roterodamus non inutiliter, cum vertendo, tum paraphraſi explicando, tum annotando. Chamier. *de Canone l.*18. *c.*1.

Doctus Vatablus præ cæteris, quos adhuc videre contigit omnibus, abſtruſa quæque in Pſalmis explicuit; partim ſuo ſano judicio, partim doctiſſimorum Hebræorum teſtimonio: quem etiam admirandus Calvinus ſtudiosè ſequitur ferè ubique, quaſi à ſententia Vatabli non tutum eſſet diſcedere. Foord in Pſal.45.1.

*Quid hac phraſi denotetur optimè expoſuit D.*Beza ſuis in Novum Teſtamentum nunquam ſatis laudatis notis. Conſtantin. L'Empereur in Dan .2.8.

See more of him in Zanchies Epiſtles.

Amama, Paulus Fagius, Druſius, Ludovicus Capellus, Lively, Cameron, Ludovicus dovicus De Dieu, have been great Lights, and by their skill in the Tongues, have excellently interpreted Scripture.

Peter Martyr, Lavater, Muſculus, Zanchy, Paræus, Rollock, Rivet are found Expoſitors.

Ex omnibus antiquis & recentioribus medullam variarum interpretationum, & circa eos diſceptationem collegit Willetus in hexaplis ad Geneſin, Exodum, Leviticum, Danielem, Epiſtolam ad Romanos (in libros Samuelis ſibi diſſimilis eſt, & compendio atque alia plane methodo commentatur) optandum eſſet telam illam à Willeto tam fœliciter cœptam, eadem methodo in reliquos Scripturæ libros pertexi. Voetius Biblioth. Theol. l. 1. c. 14.

4. For Popiſh Expoſitors.

Aquinas [f] is eſteemed by the Papiſts as the Oracle of the Romiſh School, [g] whom for his profound learning and ſearch into the myſteries of all Divinity they ſirnamed [*] Angelical.

[f] Papa Innocentius primum locum tribuit Thomæ poſt Scripturas, & meritò; nam melius de Papatu meruit quam omnes Patres. Rainoldus. Biſhop Mortons Appeale, lib. 2. cap. 2. Sect. 22. Papiſtarum Homerus, Thomas Aquinas. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. [g] Rainolds againſt Hart. Thomas Aquinas adhuc infans chartam verſans, imò comedens, ſignificabat quam ſtudioſus foret adultior factus. Cornel. a Lapide in Gen. 25. 22. [*] Omnium Pontificiorum quaſi communis quidam pater eſt, & propter profundam eruditionem atque eximiam pietatem Divus Thomas, Doctor Seraphicus, Doctor Angelicus, vulgo ſalutatur. Quicunq; Beati Thomæ Doctrinam impugnat, ſemper fuerit de veritate ſuſpectus. Salmer. Laurent. Rever. Eccleſ. Rom. erga Pat. Subdola. Artic. 7. Sect. 2.

He was the firſt thorow-Papiſt of name that ever wrote, and with his rare gifts of wit, learning and induſtry did ſet out Popery moſt. Dr Rainolds.

Maximo & altiſſimo ingenio vir, cui ad plenam abſolutamque totius tam divinæ, quam humanæ eruditionis gloriam ſolùs defuit linguarum & eloquentiæ uſus, quem eruditi iſtius ſæculi, utpote ſublimioribus ſtudiis intenti, neglexere. Sixtus Senenſis. Vide plura ibid.

Luther on Geneſ. 9. chiefly commends Lyra for following the literal ſenſe. Nicolaus Lyranus, Vir tanta tamque pura, vera & germana Sacræ Scripturæ ſcientia præditus, ut in illa exponenda nullum habeat illius temporis parem. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Tom. 1. prælect. 21. Vide plura Tom. 1. prælect. 42. He was a Jew converted.

Ex antiquioribus tanquam univerſales & communes Commentatores habiti fuerunt Lyranus & Gloſſa. Voetius in Biblioth. Theol.

In his third part of Select Theological Diſputations, De Docta Ignorantia, he ſaith, Commentaria Pontificiorum, imprimis Jeſuitarum in libros Scripturæ poſt Bucerum, Mercerum, Bullingerum, Lavaterum, Bezam, Calvinum, Martyrem, &c. Edita, ſatis oſtendunt, bene dicta maximam partem ex noſtris deſumta: quorum tamen nunquam aut rariſſimè meminerunt, niſi cum eos perſtringunt.

Janſenius eruditus & moderatus [a] Interpres. Neque Pontificiorum quiſquam doctius interpretatus eſt Evangelicam Hiſtoriam. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Tom. 2. Prælect. 194.

[a] Spanhem. Dub. Evang. part. 2. Dub. 34. Vide ibid. Dub 5. p. 132, 133.

Cajetane went over all the Scripture, [b] ſaving the Canticles and Prophets, which dying he left begun, and the Revelation, Quam de induſtria attingere noluit.

He was both a learned and moderate Papiſt, as Chamier and Whitaker both ſhew. He was chiefly intent on the literal ſenſe, [c] and that according to the Hebrew truth, of which Tongue he had little knowledge, but had by him thoſe that were skill'd in the Hebrew, who would interpret ad verbum, not only exactly, but ſu-perſtitiouſly, and often abſurdly, which often drew the like Expoſitions from the Cardinal.

[b] Chamierus.

[c] Cardinalis Cajetanus omnes Epiſtolas Novi Teſtamenti & Actorum librum recenſuit ad veritatem Græcam & Annotationibus illuſtravit, intra ſpatium circiter decem Menſium. Chamierus To. 1. de Canone, lib. 13. cap. 4. Vir meo judicio quamvis Papiſta, tamen candidus plurimumque diſtans ab ea pertinacia, quam in reliquis deplorare cogimur. Idem de Canone. lib. 12. cap. 1. Vide Whitakerum de Scripturis, pag. 16, 17. & 196. Andradius mentione Cajetani facta ſubjungit, omnes illum ætatis ſuæ longe ſuperaſſe.

Toſtatus was admirable for his deep skill and almoſt incredible pains in interpreting holy Scripture.

There are now five Papiſts joyned together in ſeveral Volumes on the whole Scripture, Immanuel Sa, Eſtius, Gagneius, Tirinus and Menochius; the laſt of which Grotius commends in his Preface to his Annotations on the Old Teſtament. Eſtius doth excellently on all the Epiſtles.

The Commentaries of Immanuel Sa the Jeſuite upon the Bible, are ſhorter than the Text it ſelf.

Familiam ducant inter Commentatores Janſenius & Maldonatus. Montac. Analect. Exercit. 6. Sect. 4.

Maldonate doth well on the Evangeliſts, but was a moſt ſupercilious Writer; and no marvel, ſince he was for his Countrey a Spaniard[d], and his Profeſſion a Jeſuite.

Maſius[e] hath written learnedly on Joſhua.

[d] Maldonatus Hiſpanus, qua gente nulla gens confidentior ſui; & Jeſuita, qua ſecta nulla ſecta magis deſpiciens aliorum. Chamier. de Euch. l. 10. c. 10. quidem, ac ſanior & dexterrimus Scripturæ ſacro ſanctæ interpres. Glaſſius Onomat.

[e] Andræas Maſius Papiſta

Quanta vir ille lingua Græca, ſed præſertim Hebraica, Rabbinica, & Syriaca cognitione fuerit imbutus, nemini docto opinor incognitum. Morinus l. 1. exercit. 9. c. 6. & exercit. 1. c. 4. Andræas Maſius lingua Hebraica & Syriaca peritiſſimus, atque in lectione Rabbinica egregiè exercitatus.

For the ſeveral Caſuiſts, ſee Brochmands Syſteme of Divin. Tome 1. cap. 3. Quæſt. 1.

Poſtilla voce Barbara ſignificant faciles & breves expoſitiones. Rainold. de lib. Apoc.

The Popiſh Poſtils are the burden of many Camels (as Lipſius ſpeaks of the Books of the Law) and are fitly ſtiled by godly Divines, Pigrorum pulvinaria. Vide Zepperi Artem Habendi & Audiendi conciones ſacras. lib. 1. cap. 4. pag. 38, 39, &c.

Nomen ex eo, quia qui ſua diſcipulis dictarent, identidem in ore haberent, poſt illa puta, ad hæc, vel iſta auctoris verba adſcribere. Voſſius De vitiis Sermonis. l. 3. c. 36.

Miniſters to all the means formerly mentioned for the interpreting of Scripture, muſt adde a conſcionable practice of what they know, and muſt in all humbleneſſe of mind ſeek the peoples edification.

The means to be uſed by the people, to underſtand the Scripture, and find out the ſenſe and meaning of it.

1. If they be learned, they may make uſe of moſt of the former means preſcribed to Miniſters.

2. Such as are unskilfull, and know not how to make uſe of thoſe means, are

1. Diligently to read the Scripture; in which are to be conſidered,

1. Antecedent Preparation, that they come to the reading and ſtudy of the Scriptures with Prayers and greateſt Reverence, relying on the Divine Promiſes for the enlightening of their minds by the holy Ghoſt. The Scripture may well be called, The Revelation of Chriſt, Revel. 1. 1. See Revel. 5. 5.

One well obſerveth that there are three Starres to direct us in reading a Book of Scripture; the Perſons, Time and Place; of the Diſcourſe.

the more one obſerves theſe three, the better he will be able to carry on the ſeries

2. The Adjuncts of Reading, which are,

Prov. 4. 13.

1. Chiefeſt Attention in reading, and a pious diſpoſition and ſpiritual frame of the heart, that they may not underſtand only, but cordially affect what they underſtand.

Joh. 7. 17.

2. Application of all things to the Examination, Correction and amendment of their own lives.

3. Diligent

3. Diligent Meditation.
4. Conferring of it with others, and catechizing. Deut. 6. 6, 7.

2. They ought to have recourſe to thoſe that are more skilfull than themſelves, and to conſult with the beſt Commentaries and Expoſitions of the Scripture, and read them judicionſly.

We teach concerning our Means, that they all together do make a perfect way, whereby we may find the right ſenſe of the Scripture.

Our Adverſaries preſcribe this method and courſe to be taken in expounding of Scripture, which conſiſts in four Rules: The general Practice of the Church, The Conſonant Interpretation of the Fathers, The Decrees of general Councels; Laſtly, The Rule of Faith conſiſting partly of the Scriptures, partly of Traditions unwriten. Praxis Eccleſiæ, Patrum conſentiens interpretatio, Conciliorum præſcripta & decreta, Regula fidei. The cuſtome of the Church is but the cuſtome of men: the ſentence of the Fathers is but the opinion of men: the determination of Councels, but the judgements of men, what men ſoever. Whitaker.

In all theſe means the Pope is implicitely underſtood; for the Rule of Faith is that which the Pope approves: The Practice of the Church is that which the Pope obſerves; the Interpretation of the Fathers is that which the Pope follows; the Determination of Councels, what the Pope confirmes: So that the Pope muſt interpret all Scripture. But divers Reaſons may be alledged to ſhew that the true Interpretation of Scripture is not to be ſought for from the Popes of Rome. More credit in matters controverted betweene Rome and Us, is to be given to the Churches and Fathers of that firſt Age after Chriſt, then of the later, when the myſtery of iniquity (riſing by degrees) had gotten too great both height and breadth. Robinſ. Eſſayes Obſerv. 9.

1. Becauſe the Popes of Rome have frequently and groſly erred in interpreting of Scripture, as in Rom. 8. 8. Thoſe that are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God; that is, Thoſe that are married, ſaid Siricius the Pope. Innocent ſo expounded thoſe words, John 6. Unleſſe you eat the fleſh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blond, you ſhall have no life in you; that he thence concluded, That there is no ſalvation without receiving the Euchariſt, and that it is to be given to Infants. Pope Boniface interpreted Luke 22. 38. of the Temporall and Spirituall Sword delivered to the Pope.

2. Becauſe the Popes of Rome do differ among themſelves in interpreting of Scripture, as Matth. 16. 18. Some Popes ſay rightly, that by the Rock, Chriſt, or the Confeſſion of Faith given by Peter concerning Chriſt, is meant; others interpret it of the Perſon of Peter the Apoſtle, others expound it to be the Roman Seat or Chair.

3. Becauſe many of the Popes of Rome have not only erred, but been groſſe and wicked Hereticks. Liberius the Pope about the year 350 was an Arian, and ſubſcribed to the unjuſt condemnation of Athanaſius, and afterwards as an obſtinate Heretick was depoſed. Honorius the firſt was a Monothelite, he held that Chriſt had but one will, and ſo but one nature, and for this Hereſie was condemned in three General Councels. Some Popes were Atheiſts, as Leo the tenth, who called the Goſpel, Fabulam de Chriſto. Inter Pontifices Romanos multi fuerunt ſcelerati, ex quorum improba vita plus rediit ad Chriſtianos ſcandali, quam ex eorum authoritate ædificationis. Non potuit vir humani ingenii non fremere, cum legenti Pontificum Romanorum vitas tot occurrerent monſtra ſcelerum. Chamier. de Canone, lib. 3. cap. 6. Vide plura ibid. Abſit ut unius homuncionis, & quidem infirmiſſimi, arbitrioſſare credamus vel cadere veritatem Dei. Chamierus ibid. cap. 7.

One cals the Pope that great Heteroclite in Religion: Another ſaith, The Pope is the worſt of Cardinals, who are the worſt of Prieſts, who are the worſt of Papiſts, who are the worſt of Chriſtians.

That the general conſent of Fathers is no good Rule for interpreting Scriptures. Vide Baronii Præfat. ad Prælect. in Jon. Prælect. 3. pag. 17, 18.

See

See Jacobus Laurentius his ſingular Tractate entituled, Reverentia Eccleſ. Rom. erga S. Pat. veteres ſubdola Artic. 2. & Propoſ. 9.

In his Auctarium he proves, that the Proteſtants do more eſteem the Fathers than the Papiſts and Jeſuites.

For Councels.

Gregory the Pope equallizeth the four firſt General Councels to the four Goſpels, not in reſpect of Authority, but in reſpect of the verity of the Articles defined in them: He ſaith not, They could as little erre, but they did as little erre in their deciſions; or to ſpeak more properly, That their Doctrine was as true as Goſpel, becauſe the Determinations in thoſe firſt General Councels againſt Hereticks, are evidently deduced out of holy Scriptures. Dr Featleys Strictura in Lyndomaſtigem concerning the 7 Sac.

For if theſe four General Councels be of equal Authority with the four Goſpels, the Popes Authority (as Papiſts ſay) being above the Authority of the Councels, it followeth, That his Authority is greater than the Evangeliſts; then which what can be more blaſphemouſly ſpoken?

We ſay, The true Interpretation of Scripture is not to be ſought from General Councels.

g Plus credendum eſt ſimplici laico Scripturam proferenti, quam toti ſimul Concilio. Panormitanus.

Firſt, Becauſe even univerſal Councels have erred; the Chalcedonian Councel, one of the four ſo much magnified by Pope Gregory, in raſhly preferring the Conſtantinopolitane Church before that of Alexandria and Antioch. Thoſe that condemned Chriſt were then the univerſal viſible Church; Matth. 26.65. John 11.47. See Act. 4.18.

Secondly, General Councels have been oppoſite one to another, that of Conſtance to the other of Baſil; whereof one ſetteth down, That Councels could erre, and ſo alſo the Pope; and that a Councel was above the Pope: the other affirmeth the quite contrary.

Thirdly, There were no General Councels after the Apoſtles for three hundred years till the firſt Councel of Nice, when yet the Church had the true ſenſe of the Scriptures.

Fourthly, The General Councels interpreted Scripture by Scripture, as Athanaſius and Ambroſe teach concerning the firſt Councel of Nice.

Fifthly, Becauſe they cannot be ſo eaſily celebrated to declare any doubtfull ſenſe of Scripture. They have expounded but few places of Scripture, neither is it likely the Pope will aſſemble them to expound the reſt.

The Papiſts ſay, That the Scripture ought to be expounded by the Rule of Faith, and therefore not by Scripture onely. But the Rule of Faith and Scripture is all one.

As the Scriptures are not of man, but of the Spirit; ſo their Interpretation is not by man, but of the Spirit likewiſe.

h Mr Greenhill on Ezek. 3.14. p. 316.

Let Councels, Fathers, h Churches, give their ſenſe of the Scripture, its private, if it be not the ſenſe and interpretation of the Spirit. Let a private man give the true ſenſe of the Scripture, its not private, becauſe its Divine; the ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt: and private, in 2 Pet. 1.20. is not oppoſed to publick, but to Divine; and the words are to be read, No Scripture is of anhans own Interpretation; that is, private, contrary to Divine.

Ἰδίας ἐπιλύσεως. Analyſis 1. Grammatica qua propriam. 2. Rhetorica qua tropicas dictiones excutit. 3. Logica qua ſcopum, qua antecedentium & conſequentium ſeriem probationumque vim indicat. Altingius.

The Word is interpreted aright, by declaring, 1. The Order, 2. The Summe or Scope. 3. The Senſe of the words, which is done by framing a Rhetorical and Logical Analyſis of the Text. In giving the ſenſe, three Rules are of principal uſe and neceſſity to be obſerved.

1 The literal and largeſt ſenſe of any words in Scripture, muſt not be imbraced further, when our cleaving thereunto would breed ſome diſagreement and contrariety between the preſent Scripture, and ſome other Text or place, elſe ſhall we change the Scripture into a Noſe of wax.

riety

2. In caſe of ſuch appearing diſagreement, the holy Ghoſt leads us by the hand to ſeek out ſome diſtinction, reſtriction, limitation, or figure for the reconcilement thereof, and one of theſe will alwayes fit the purpoſe; for Gods word muſt alwayes bring perfect truth; it cannot fight againſt it ſelf.

3. Such figurative Senſe, Limitation, Reſtriction, or Diſtinction muſt be ſought out, as the word of God affordeth either in the preſent place or ſome other, and chiefly thoſe that ſeem to differ with the preſent Text, being duly compared together.

The End of the firſt Book.

THE

THE SECOND BOOK. OF GOD.

Chap. I.

That there is a GOD.

HAving handled the Scripture, which is principium cognoscendi, in Divinity, I now proceed to Treat of God, [a] who is principium essendi; or thus, The Scripture is the rule of Divinity, God and his works are the matter or parts of Divinity.

This Doctrine is,

1. Necessary,

1. Because man was made for that end, that he might rightly acknowledge and worship [b] God, love and honor him.

2. It is the end of all Divine Revelation, Joh. 5. 39.

3. To be ignorant of God is a great misery; Being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them.

2. Profitable,

Our welfare and happiness consists in the knowledge of God, Jer. 9. 23. John 17. 3. the knowledge of God in the life to come, is called the Beatifical vision.

3. Difficult,

[a] Idum Græce Θεὸν vocant, Latini post eos, & ab iis Deum dixere: Galli, Itali, Hispani, mutato a Latinis nomine, Dieu, Dio, Dios, appellant. Germani, Angli, Belgæ Got. vel God eum nuncupant.

[b] Acts 17. 27. Rom. 1. 20, 21. Ephes. 4. 18. There is no equal proportion between the faculty and the object. Deum dignè æstimamus dum inæstimabilem dicimus, Cyprian, de Idol. vanit. De Deo etiam dicere vera periculosum est. Ruffin. in exposit. Sym. Lod. Viv. de verit. fidei l. 1. c. 8. Things that excel in Scripture phrase, usually are said to be things of God, Psal. 36. 6. and 80. 10. Jon. 3. vers. 3. Quicquid est summum, excellens, sublime & illustre, adde & gravissimum, id solent Hebræi exprimere appositione nominis Dei, Gen. 23. vers. 6. chap. 30. vers. 8. chap. 25. vers. 5. 1 Sam. 14. vers. 15. Job 1. vers. 16. Psal. 68. vers. 16. Esa. 53. vers. 4. Ezek. 28. vers. 2, 13, 14, 16. Cant. 8. vers. 6. 1 Chron. 12. vers. 22. 2 Chron. 28. vers. 13.

God being infinite, and our understanding finite; betwixt which two there is no proportion; who knows the things of God, save the Spirit of God? A created understanding can no more comprehend God, then a vial glass can contain the waters waters of the Sea. His wisdome is unsearchable, Rom. 11. Job 11. 7. & 26. 13. The Holy Fathers thought no word lawfull concerning God, which he hath not in his holy word granted us to use. Euclide answered very fitly to one asking many things concerning the gods, Cætera quidem nescio, illud scio, quod odêre curiosos. Simonides being asked by Hiero, What God was, required some dayes time to be given him to think of it, and as many more at the end of them, still doubling his time for inquiry; till at last being by Hiero asked a reason of his delays, he answered him, Because (saith he) quò magis inquiro, eò minus invenio, how much the more I inquire, the less I understand. The glorified Saints in Heaven, though they know God to their own perfection, being spirits of just men made perfect, yet they shall never know God to his perfection: None but God himself can know God perfectly, John 1. 18. 1 Tim. 6. 16. Tunc enim dicitur aliquid comprehendi, quando pervenitur ad finem cognitionis ipsius, & hoc est quando res cognoscitur ita perfectè, sicut cognoscibilis est. Aquinas, part. 1. Quæst. 14. Art. 3. qui piè infinita prosequitur etsi non contingat aliquando, tamen proficiet prodeundo. Hil. de Trin. l. 2.

Vide Voet. Theol. natural. Reform. c. 4. See Dr Arrowsmiths Chain of Principles Aphorism 3. Exercit. 1. All excellencies are originally, essentially and infinitely in him.

There is,

1. A comprehensive knowledg of God, when he is known so farre as he is knowable; so God only knows himself.
2. An apprehensive knowledge of him, when we know him so farre as to make him an object of our love.

This is also twofold,

1. By the light of grace, when we know him by his Word and Works, 1 Cor. 13. 6. compared with 12.
2. By the light of glory, 1 John 3. 2.

The sight of God here by the light of grace is two fold,

1. Speculative and Historical.
2. Operative and Experimentall, which workes the heart to the feare of God, Jer. 22. 16.

We know God, per viam eminentiæ, negationis, causationis.

1. All perfection which we apprehend must be ascribed unto God, and that after a more excellent manner than can be apprehended, as that he is in himself, by himself, and of himself; that he is one, true, good, and holy.
2. We must remove from him all imperfections whatsoever; he is Simple, Eternal, Infinite, Unchangeable.
3. He is the Supreme cause of all, Jer. 2. 13.

There is a threefold knowledge of God.

1. An implanted knowledge, which is in every mans conscience, a natural ingrafted principle about God, O anima naturaliter Christiana! said Tertullian, Apologet. c. 17. Quid est totus mundus nisi Deus explicatus?
2. An acquired knowledge by the Creatures, Psal. 19. 1. that is the great Book, in every page thereof we may behold the Deity.

Præsentemque refert quælibet herba Deum.

There is nothing in the world, in which there are not some footsteps of Gods goodness or power, which is the cause, why in the Scriptures God oftentimes compares himself to the Creatures, to the Elements, to the Fire, Wind, Starres, the Sun, to the Stones, Plants, and other living Creatures.

Remotiores similitudines Creaturæ ad Deum dicuntur vestigium; propinquiores verò Imago, say the Schoolmen. Mr Smiths Select Discourse 9. of True Religions.

3. Revealed knowledge of faith, spoken of Heb. 11. 6. (of which Text see the 2d Sermon Preacht at St Giles in the fields) and this is onely sufficient to Salvation.

The Heathens had the knowledge of God in a confused manner, they might know there was a God, and that he was to be worshipped, but could not learn who God was, or what kind of God he was, and how to be worshipped, 2 Tim. 1. 10. Rom. 1. 19, 21. and 2. 14. a practical knowledge, vers. 15. Which shew the work of the Law written in their hearts, not the gracious writing promised mised in the Covenant; the light of nature is not sufficient to bring men to salvation; Onely in Judah is God known, Psal. 76. 1, 2. and 147. 19. See John 14. 6. and 11. 27. Ephes. 2. 11, 12. The Heathens might know Gods Nature and Attributes, that he was the Creator of the world, that by his providence he did preserve and rule all things, but they could not by the most industrious use of all natures helps, attain unto any the least knowledge of God, as he is mans Redeemer in Christ; they knew not the truth as it is in Jesus, Ephes. 4. 21. Vide Burlow exercitat. Metaphil. de Deo exercit. 4. See also Mr Toombs his True Old Light exalted above pretended New Light, Serm. 5. Sect. 4.

Some urge this, What Moses was to the Jews, Christ in the New Testament, that was Philosophy to the Heathens: enough to save them.

Erasmus had much ado to forbear saying, Sancte Socrates, ora pro nobis: but omnis doctrina Philosophorum sine Capite, quia Deum ignorabant, Lactantius, & Extra ecclesiam nulla salus. Vide Montag. Analect. eccles. exercit. 1. Sect. 4. See Matth. 4. 16. 1 Cor. 4. 3. and Dr Prideaux in his eighth Lecture de Salute Ethnicorum. To believe there is a God, is the foundation of all Religion. Caput est primum Divinæ legis, ipsum Deum nosse. Lactantius. It is a question, whether a man by the light of nature may know that there is a God. Though this be denied by the Socinians, yet those Scriptures, Rom. 1. 19. and Psal. 19. beg. seem to prove it. Cardinal Perron having in an excellent Oration before Henry the 3d King of France, proved, that there was a God, and his auditory applauding him, he offered (if it pleased the King) the next day to prove the contrary; whence (saith Voetius de Atheismo) He was commanded to depart the Court; Because (saith Vedelius in his Rationale Theologicum, lib. 1. cap. 3.) He favoured that opinion of not admitting the principles of reason in arguments of faith: Hence it was easie for him, from that foundation to plead for Atheism, since it is impossible to prove that there is a God, without the principles of Reason.

In God we will consider:

1. His Nature.
2. His Works.

In his nature two things are considerable.

1. That he is.
2. What he is.

That God is, is the most manifest, clear, evident, ungainsayable truth in the world. It is the first verity, and the principal verity; from which all other truth hath its original; and it is the foundation of all true goodnesse and Religion truly to believe it; so saith the Author to the Hebrews, He that cometh to God, to do him any service, or to receive any benefit from him, must believe, that is, be firmely and undoubtedly perswaded, that God is. Some think this is a needless subject to treat of, but it is necessary:

1. Because the most universall and incurable disease of the world is Atheism, Psal. 14. 1. fond surmises are wont to grow in the hearts of all, where Religion is not setled: Foundation-stones indeed cannot be guarded so much by argument as divine testimony.

2. Supreme truths should be laid up in the greatest certainty; if the principles of Religion were firmly assented to, confidence would follow of its own accord.

3. It is good often to revive this truth of the being of God: the forgetfulnesse of God is a kind of denial of him, Psal. 9. 17 and 10. 4.

If a man do respicere look backward to the Creation of the world, prospicere look forward, to the rewards and punishments to be dispensed in another world, suspicere, look upward to good and evill spirits, despicere, look downward to things below himself, Job 12. 7, 8, 9. inspicere, look within himself, either to the composition of his body, or to the dictates of his conscience, circumspicere, look round about him, to the various occurrents of the world, he can not but acknowledge that there is a God. Dr Arrowsmiths Chain of Principles, Aphor. 3. exercit. 2.

By a God, we mean an essence better than all other things, and before all other things, and of whom all other things are; such a first essence is God, and such an essence there must needs be; neither is any thing of absolute necessity but this one thing, even the Divine essence.

Reasons to confirme this, that there is a God, are taken from authority or Testimony, and reason.

Principles can onely be demonstrated testimonio, effectis, & absurdis, shewing the absurdities that will else follow.

The Testimonies are,

1. Of God himself,
2. The Creature.

1. General

1. General of all men.
2. Particular of each mans conſcience.

Reaſons may be drawn from two chief places; viz. The effects and the contrary.

The effects are either,

1. Ordinary, and thoſe:
   1. Natural, both General, the making and preſerving of the world; and Special, the framing or maintaining of each man or other like creature in the world.
   2. Civill, the upholding and altering the States of Kingdomes, and particular Countries.
2. Extraordinary, miracles.

Arguments from the contrary are two:

1. The Being of the Devils.
2. The ſlightneſſe of the reaſons brought to diſprove this truth or to ſhew the Contrary.

There are two kinds of Demonſtrations or proofs. 1. A demonſtrating of the effects by their cauſes, which is a proof à priori. Principles cannot be demonſtrated à cauſa and à priori, becauſe they have no ſuperior cauſe. 2. A demonſtrating of cauſes by Though no man can prove à cauſa, why there ſhould be a God, yet every man may collect, ab effectis, that there is a God: By that wiſdome, which we ſee to have been in the making; that Order in the Governing, and that Goodneſs in the preſerving and maintaining of the world. All which prove as effectually, That there needs muſt be a God; as either warming or burning, that the fire muſt needs be hot.

their effects, which is a proof drawn à poſteriori. So principles may be demonſtrated. All principles being Prima and Notiſſima of themſelves, are thereby made indemonſtrable, Vide Aquin. part 1. Queſt. 2 Artic. 2. & 3.

That there is a God, is proved.

1. By Teſtimony.
2. By Reaſon.

1. By the Teſtimony of God [d] himſelf, he that teſtifieth of himſelf, either by word or writing, is. God hath written a Book to us, in which he affirms of himſelf that he is; every page almoſt, and line of Scripture point to God. He begins his Book with himſelf, ſaying, In the beginning God made Heaven and Earth. He concludes this Book with himſelf, ſaying, If any man ſhall take ought from this Prophecie, God ſhall take away his part out of the Book of life. In every particular prophecie, he teſtifieth the ſame thing, ſaying, Thus ſaith the Lord.

[d] The weightieſt Teſtimony that can be brought to prove there is a God, is to produce the Teſtimony of God ſpeaking in his word. None other in the world can have equal authority, John 8. 13, 14. Yet this Teſtimony is not allowed by the Atheiſts. For as they deny that there is a God, ſo they deny likewiſe that the Scripture is his Word. Atheomaſtix. l. 1. c. 2.

2. By the general Teſtimony of all men, by the univerſall and conſtant conſent of all Nations in the world, Rom. 2. 15. It is called a Law written in their hearts; all publikely confeſs and profeſs their belief of God; we never read nor heard any ſo barbarous and uncivil, which acknowledged not a Deity. There is no Hiſtory which ſheweth the manners of any people, but ſheweth alſo their Religion. All Commonwealths had alwayes ſomething which they worſhipped, and called in their language God; this principle is written by God himſelfe in the Table of every mans ſoul. That which is written in the hearts of all men, which with one mouth all acknowledge, muſt needs be a truth, ſeeing it is the voice of reaſon it ſelfe. All men (ſaith Ariſtotle de Cœlo) have an opinion concerning God.

See Rom. 1. 20. Every Nation owns ſome Deity. Micah. 4. 5.

Munſter in his Coſmography, and Ortelius in his Theatrum Orbis, have delivered unto us not only a Coſmographical deſcription of all Countries, but alſo a Topographical deſcription of their manners, yet neither of them hath noted any Nation to be without all Religion, [f] none to be profeſt in Atheiſm. Though the Nations differed in the number of their Gods and manner of worſhip, yet they all agreed that there was a God. Idolatry it ſelf (as Calvin obſerves in his Inſtitutions) is hujus conceptionis amplum documentum, a ſufficient Teſtimony of a Deity, men will rather have falſe Gods than none, and worſhip any thing than nothing. Hinc, quod homines naturaliter hanc propoſitionem tenent, Deus eſt, nata eſt omnis idololatria, qua ſine cognitione divinitatis non veniſſet in mundum, Lutherus in cap. 4. ad Galat. See Iſa. 44. 15, 17. Jonah 1. 6.

Porrum & Cepe nefas violare ac frangere morſu.
O ſanctas gentes, quibus hac naſcuntur in hortis Numina —— Juvenal. Satyr. 15.

Pythagoras, Plato, and all the Poets began their works with Gods name. A Jove principium muſa.

[f] Nulla gens tam effera ac barbara quæ non cognoſcat eſſe Deum. Cicero de natura Deorum. Epicurum ipſum, quem nihil pudendum pudet, tamen Deum negare pudet. Mornæus. Numen eſſe aliquod ſumitur à manifeſtiſſimo conſenſu omnium gentium, apud quos ratio & boni mores non planè extincta ſunt indulta feritate. Grotius de rel. Chriſt. l. 1. Inveniuntur qui ſine rege ſine lege vivunt, qui ſub dio degunt, qui nudi ferarum inſtar ſylvas oberrant, avia quæque & obvia depaſcuntur. Qui religionis ſpecie, qui ſacris, qui numinis ſenſu planè carerent, nulli inventi ſunt, nulli etiamnum inveniuntur. Mornæus de veritate Chriſtiana relig. c. 1.

That light which reaſon affords, is duskiſh and confuſed, ſerving for little more than in generall to ſhew there is a God, it will never tell, who, or what this God is, they knew not God in Chriſt. One muſt have a divine revelation to believe this principle lavingly, that God is. Reaſon may yield a moral tranſient aſſent to this truth, but not a ſpiritual and ſaving fixed aſſent without faith.

Socinus affirms, that there are whole Countries found at this day, which have no ſenſe or ſuſpition of a Deity; which is very falſe, for God never ſuffered the Gentiles ſo to walk in their own wayes, as to leave himſelf without all witneſſe among them. Acts 14. 16, 17. The very Canibals are found to believe the immortality of ſouls, and highly to prize their Prieſts. The Heathens lifted up their eyes and hands to Heaven in any diſtreſſe that came upon them. See 1 Joh. 6. Vide Lud. Viv. de ver. Fid. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 1. & Voſſ. de orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. l. 1. c. 2. Rom. 1. 19, 21. Acts 7. 28, 29.

3. By the particular Teſtimony of each mans conſcience. Gen. 42. 21, 22. Conſcience * proclaims a Law in every heart, and denounceth a puniſhment for the breach of Gods Law. Conſcience is a natural ability of diſcerning the condition and ſtate of our Actions, whether good or bad; and that not alone in reſpect of men, but of ſome other thing above men; for when one hath done things unlawfull, though ſuch as no man can accuſe us of, becauſe no man doth know; yet then he is accuſed and tormented, then he hath ſomething in him threatning, arraigning, accuſing and terrifying; a Deputy of God, ſitting within him, and controlling him; A man muſt therefore confeſſe, there is a higher power and Supreme Judge, to whom that conſcience of his is an Officer. That which the conſcience of every man beareth witneſſe unto, is ſure a truth, for that is a thouſand witneſſes. The fears of an ill conſcience, the joy and ſecurity of a good conſcience proves this, that there is a God, a revenger of ſins, and a rewarder of virtues, Nero having killed his Mother Agrippina, confeſſed that he was often troubled with her Ghoſt. Caligula at the leaſt thunder and lightning would cover his head, and hide himſelf under his bed; whence Statius ſaith —— Primus in orbe Deos fecit Timor: Wicked men (as the Devill himſelf) draw ſtill their chains after them, in reſpect of the juſtice of God, and the French Proverb ſaith, Celuy n' eſt eſchappé qui traine ſon lien. On the contrary Paul and Silas could ſing, and Peter could ſleep ſecurely in priſon; David could triumphantly rejoyce in God,

* The moſt pregnant and undeniable proof of the God-head with the Heathen, was the voice of conſcience. The Scripture ſheweth, that the wicked were much terrified in their conſciences, after the committing of hainous ſinnes, Rom. 2. 15. Iſa. 57. 20, 21. Mark 6. 14, 16. So doth common experience teach in Murtherers, Theeves, and the like. Richard the third, after his murthers, was full of horror and fear; the night before he was ſlain, he dreamed that the Devils were tormenting him, Credo non erat ſomnium, ſed conſcientia ſcelerum. Polyd. Virgil. Wicked men may be without faith, they cannot be without fear, Iſa. 33. 14. they are afraid after committing of ſinne, though in ſecret, becauſe they know there is a Supreme Judge, who can call them to account, Pſal. 53. 5, 6. Quid refert neminem ſcire ſi tu ſcias. Vide Grot. de relig. Chriſtiana lib. 1. The office of conſcience is to terrifie and accuſe to another, and that muſt needs be God. See Gen. 42. 21, 22.

in

in the greateſt dangers, 1 Sam. 30. 6. Auſtin cals peace of conſcience, The Souls Paradiſe; and Solomon a continual Feaſt, Prov. 15. 15. —— *Hic murus aheneus eſto, Nil conſcire ſibi, nulle palleſcere culpa.

2. Divers reaſons may be brought to prove that there is a God, from the effects and the contrary.

* Acts 16. 25. and 12. 6. Pſal. 3. 6. and 46. 1, 2. Si fractus illabatur orbis impavidum ferient ruinæ Horat.

1. From his effects { Ordinary. / Extraordinary.

1. Ordinary. { Natural. / Civil.

1. Natural.

1. General, The Creation and preſervation of the world.

1. Creation, or making all things. Zach. 12. 1. Heb. 3. 4.

The world muſt needs be eternal, or muſt be made by it ſelf, or by ſome thing which was before it ſelf; and therefore alſo was far better than it ſelf; but it could not make it ſelf, for what maketh, worketh; what worketh, is; but what is made, is not till it be made: Now nothing can be, and not be at the ſame time; for both the parts of a contradiction can never be true together; neither could it be eternal, for a thing compounded of parts, muſt needs have thoſe parts united together by ſome other thing beſide it ſelf, and above it ſelf; and if they be compounded wiſely, artificially, ſtrongly and excellently, by ſome wiſe, ſtrong and excellent worker, it is inimaginable how each of theſe parts, being not reaſonable, ſhould come together of themſelves; therefore ſure there was ſome worker, which did ſo handſomly diſpoſe and order them; and this worker muſt needs have a being, before he could ſo work, and therefore alſo before the conjunction of them; and ſo things in ſuch ſort made by compoſition of parts, could not be eternal, for that neither hath, nor can have any thing before it; therefore it muſt needs be made by ſome thing which was capable of being from Eternity. What is Eternal is of it ſelf, what is of it ſelf is God; the world is not God, becauſe the parts of it are corruptible, therefore it is not eternal; and what is finite in quantity, cannot be infinite in continuance. It could not be made by any creature in it; for the part cannot poſſibly make the whole, becauſe it is of farre leſſe vertue than the whole, and becauſe it hath its being in and of the whole; wherefore it muſt needs be made by ſome thing better than it ſelf, which is no part of it ſelf, and that is no other than God; ſo the making of the world proves a God. What created the world, is, and is better than the world, and before the world, and above all creatures in the world: God created the world. When we ſee the glorious frame of Heaven and Earth; the excellency, magnitude and multitude of natural things, the beautiful order and harmony, ſo great variety, we cannot but conclude that there is a God, who made and ordereth all theſe things.

Every effect hath its cauſe, whatſoever is wrought or done, is wrought or done by ſome thing, which hath ability and fitneſs to produce ſuch an effect; ſeeing nothing can do nothing, and what hath not ſufficiency to produce ſuch and ſuch effects, cannot produce them. Of whom there be works and effects, he is; of God there be works and effects, therefore there is a God. As God is to be felt ſenſibly in every mans conſcience, ſo is he to be ſeen viſibly in the Creation of the world, and of all things therein contained. Man, the beſt of the Creatures here below, was not able to raiſe up ſuch a Roof as the Heavens, nor ſuch a floor as the Earth, Doctor Preſton, Job 12. 9. Serviunt omnia omnibus, uni omnia. Mundi Creatio eſt Dei Scriptura, cujus tria ſunt folia, Cœlum, terra, mare. The Sun, Moon and Stars move regularly; yea, the Bee and Ant according to their own ends wonderfully. The Creatures which have no reaſon, act rationally; therefore ſome ſupreme reaſon orders them. Finis in ſagitta determinatur à Sagittante, ſay the Schoolmen. Vide Bellarm. de Gratia & libero arbitrio. lib. 3. cap. 14. Voſ de orig. & Progreſ. Idol lib. 3. cap. 31. It puzled the Heathens to find out the firſt cauſe. Plutarch Diſputes, which was firſt, the Egge or the Hen, the Acorn or the Oake.

2. The Preſervation and Continuance of the world in that order which we ſee, maketh it manifeſt, that there is a God which preſerveth and ordereth it, Heb. 1. 3. Job 12. 7, 8. For either it muſt be preſerved, ruled and ordered by it ſelf; or by ſome more excellent thing than it; not by it ſelf; for what could not

All contingent beings depend on ens neceſſarium, many-things ſo exiſt, as they might not have been, ſome thing muſt bring them into a preſent being:

make make it ſelf, cannot of it ſelf keep and uphold it ſelf, ſeeing no leſſe power is required to its continuation than to its conſtitution; for it could not continue, if each of the parts did not ſo work as to help and uphold the other in ſome reſpect or other. Now theſe ſeveral parts could not ſo work for one common end, if they were not guided thereto by ſome common and underſtanding guide, which were acquainted with, and had power over each of them, therefore it hath one Ruler and Upholder. That which is effected by the conſtant, orderly and ſubordinate working of innumerable particulars for one common end, whereof no one of them hath any knowledge or acquaintance, muſt needs be wrought by ſome common Ruler and Governour, which knows the motion and working of each, and rules all, and each to that end in their ſeveral motions. What upholds the world is: but God upholds the world, therefore he is.

The preſerving and ordering of the world, and humane ſocieties in it; the planting and defending of the Church.

A number of wheeles in a Clock, doe worke together, to ſtrike at ſet times, not any one of them knowing the intention of the other; therefore they are ordered and kept in order by the care of ſome wiſe perſon, which knows the diſtance and frame of each, and of the whole. An Army of men could not meet together at one time, and in one place, to fight for, or againſt one City, if the wiſdome of one General did not command over all. A number of Letters cannot all fall orderly together, to make perfect ſenſe, without ſome Compoſer. Protogenes by the ſmalneſſe of a line drawn in a Table, knew Apelles the chiefeſt Artificer. He that ſees but the ſhape and effigies of a man, preſently thinks of a Painter. Nec terram propter ſe vel Sol calefacit, vel nubes irrigat; nec terra vel tepefacta à Sole, vel madefacta à pluvia, ſui gratiâ herbas ac fructus producit, ſed propter muta animantia, ac hominem imprimis, qui mentis alta capax in Cætera dominatur. Non ſuo id conſilio faciunt. Alius igitur eſt qui dirigat univerſum. Voſſ de Orig. & Progreſs. Idol. lib. 1. par. 1. cap. 1. Ex effectis, & iis, quæ poſteriora ſunt; atque etiam iis ex incommodis quæ in contradicentium parte altera cernuntur, argumenta licet colligere, quibus Deus eſſe monſtretur. Petav. *Theol. Dog. de Deo. l.*1. *c.*1. Vide plura ibid. &c.

1. This is Aquinas his reaſon, Natural bodies which want knowledge, work for a certain end, becauſe they frequently work after the ſame manner; therefore there muſt be a minde, underſtanding, and governing all things, and directing to that ſpecial and chiefe end. The whole world doth aptly conſpire together for the attaining of one end, the good and benefit of man. All creatures encline to their proper operations, the ſtone downward, the fire upward, the ſeaſons of the year conſtantly follow each other.

Pulchra ſunt omnia faciente te: Et ecce tu inenarrabiliter Pulchrior, qui feciſti omnia. Aug. Confeſ. l. 13. *c.*20.

2. Particular Effects, the framing and maintaining of each creature in the world; the Heavens and man eſpecially; theſe two were moſt artificially made, as the Scripture ſhews. The Pſalmiſt calls the Heavens, The works of Gods fingers, Pſal.8.4. becauſe they were made with greateſt eaſe, and with exquiſite Art, *Heb.*11.10. whoſe builder (τεχνίτης, Artifex) is God, ſpeaking of the Heavens.

David ſpends the 139. Pſalme, in admiring Gods goodneſſe to him, in the framing of his body, there is a multitude of members, and they have diſtinct offices, and one member ſympathizeth with another, I am fearfully and wonderfully made, verſ. 15. curiouſly wrought in the loweſt parts of the earth. The Hebrew word is very emphatical, it ſignifieth imbroidered, or wrought with a needle, that is, cunningly wrought with Nerves, Veins, Arteries. Galen upon the contemplation of the admirable workmanſhip in the body of man, breaketh out into an Hymn, in the praiſe of him that made g him. The infuſing of the ſoul, *Eccleſ.*11.5. and ſuſtaining the Infant in the womb (where it cannot breath) and the taking it out of the womb, are wonderfull, Pſal. 22.9. & 71.5.

g Hic compono canticum, in Creatoris noſtri laudem.

Si Humani corporis admirabilem conſtructionem intus extráque conſpicimus, & ut omnia ibi etiam minima ſuos uſus habeant, nullo ſtudio, nulla induſtria parentum, arte verè tanta, ut Philoſophorum ac medicorum præſtantiſſimi nunquam eam ſatis poſſint admirari. Oſtendit hoc opificem naturæ eſſe mentem excellentiſſimam: Quæ de re videri poteſt Galenus, præſertim qua parte oculi & manus uſum examinat. Grotius *de Relig. Chriſt. l.*1.

1. The Creation of the Heavens proves, that there is a God.

The largeneſſe, roundneſſe, pureneſſe, ſolidneſſe, the continual and conſtant stant motion of the Heavens, doth excellently declare the glory of God. The very name of Astronomy (whose object is the motion of the heavenly Orbs and Starres) in exact signification importeth, that the Starres observe a * Law in their motion; which Law is given unto them only by God himself, who is their true Law-giver.

* Astrology is Ἀστρων λόγος, the speech of Stars, Astronomy ἀστρονόμος, the Law of the Stars. The Sun is moved by another, by whom he is tied unto such a strict and unalterable motion, that Astronomers can surely tell (unto the very minute) all the Eclipses, that shall ever fall out so long as the world it self shall last.

Suidas affirmeth, that even Abraham himself was first occasioned to seek after God by considering the motion of the Starres; for he being by Nation a Chaldean (who, as Aristotle observeth, are naturally given to that kind of contemplation) and observing in their motion a wonderfull order and variety, and yet no lesse a constancy, he presently collected that these strange revolutions were directed and guided by some God. The Sun is a representative god, the brightnesse of his beams shews the Majesty of God; his influence, the Omnipresence of God; his indefatigable motion, the Eternity of God.

2. The Creation of man proves this truth, that there is a God.

1. A man may reason from his own framing in the womb, and preserving in the world. Man is framed in the womb, by some most noble, wise, and excellent Workman. The Parents frame him not there, for they know nothing of his framing, neither when, nor how he was so formed; therefore some more excellent thing than a man did frame him there, and doth daily and hourly frame other men; and that is a wise worker, which is alike wise and potent in all places of the world at all times; seeing there is something more excellent than man, which hath set down this order for producing of men, and so a God.

Quicquid producitur ab alio producitur, the body of man is generated and produced. Therefore there must be some first man who is the parent of all mankind.

2. The Nobility and Excellency of the soul, sheweth plainly, that it is of Divine Original; [b] it being spiritual and incorporeal, could not but proceed from that which is incorporeal. The effects cannot be toto genere better than the cause. Divers works are done by man, Arts invented, Zech. 12. 12. The immortality of the soul proves that there is a God; the soul is quick and lively, when the body is sick and dying. The desires of the soul prove a God, it desires an infinite good, God only is so. See Exod. 33. 18. Verum in genere is the object of the understanding, and Bonum in genere of the will. The Image of God is in the soul, by it we have communion with God.

[b] The Heathens called the soul of man, Divinæ particulam auræ, a parcel of the divine Essence; but that speech must be taken cum grano salis.

3. The being and preservation of each particular man. Each particular man in the world may reason from his own being thus; Either there must be an infinite number of men, or else there must be a first man, which was the beginning of all men; but an infinite number of particular men is not possible, seeing there can be no infinite number at all; for every number begins with an unity, and is capable of being made greater by the addition of an unity; therefore there cannot be an infinite number of particular men. Therefore we must come to some first man, and that first man could not make himself, nor be made by any inferiour thing to it self, therefore it must be made by some thing more excellent than it self, viz. One infinite thing, from which all particulars had their original.

All men had a beginning, no one man was from eternity, for he is not now in being.

4. God is manifested in the consciences of men, as was touched before:

1. By the Ministry of the Word, by which he powerfully worketh on their consciences, 1 Cor. 14. 25.
2. By the inward Checks of conscience after sin committed.
   1. In the godly, 1 Sam. 24. 5. & 2 Sam. 24. 10.
   2. In the wicked, Matth. 27. 3, 4, 5.
2. Civil Effects.

Civil Effects. Politia & Leges probant

States and Kingdoms consist, and are governed by a few Magistrates and Rulers.

unum esse divinam intelligentem, illa hominibus tum monstrantem, tum conservantem, ne Diaboli & impiorum odio, & machinationibus dissoluta corruant; Deus enim est Deus ordinis.

lers. There are innumerable more men, that wiſh and deſire the overthrow and ruine of the State, than that would live under Government, and be ſubject to Order.

This effect muſt have ſome cauſe, either the wiſdom and goodneſſe of the governed, or of the Governours, or of ſome higher cauſe than they both. Now it cannot be attributed to the wiſdom of the Governors, as being often times fooliſh, and men of mean underſtanding, at the beſt, ſuch as cannot prevent the conſpiracies of thoſe under them: Nor yet doth it ariſe from the goodneſſe of the perſons governed, moſt of which moſt times are wicked, and unwilling to come under Government: Therefore it muſt be of God; that is, a common Superiour which holds all in awe.

Miraculous Effects.

2. Extraordinary Effects, Miracles.

There is a work of miracles, for all ſtories both of Scripture, and other Countreys, do agree in relating divers Miracles. Now the worker of a miracle, is he that can lift nature off the Hinges, as it were, and ſet it on again, as ſeemeth beſt to himſelf; and therefore is above the courſe of nature, and the Commander of the courſe of nature, and ſo is the Author of all things under himſelf, under nothing; and that is none but God. The certain and plain predictions of future Contingents long afore, whoſe events could by no wit of man, be either gathered from their cauſes, or conjectured from their ſigns. Miracles are wrought beyond, and above the courſe of nature; therefore ſome ſupreme power muſt work them.

Exod. 15. 11. Pſal. 72. 18. & 136. 4. Iſa. 41. 23.

A Miracle is a work of infinite ſtrength or omnipotency, ſurpaſſing the whole power of created nature, as to turn water into wine, to multiply ſeven loaves to the feeding and

A miracle is named of the Hebrews Niphlah, Pſal. 139. 14. or Niphlath, Pſal. 118. 23. from Nalah or Niplah, that is, vailed, obſcured, quite hidden, difficult. The Grecians entitule it Θαῦμα of Θαυμάζω, to admire, marvel, or wonder. According to the notation of the Latine word Miraculum, from whence the Engliſh word Miracle is taken; it ſignifieth ſuch a thing as cauſeth wonder, or is in it ſelf wonderfull. It is a viſible, wonderfull work, done by the Almighty power of God, above, or againſt the courſe of nature, to confirm ſome divine truth. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 2. 4. Sect. 30. & 33.

ſatisfying four thouſand men, to give the uſe of ſight to one born blind, to raiſe up a man indeed dead, to cure a leproſie with a word. Miraculum propriè dicitur quod fit præter ordinem totius naturæ creatæ. Aquin. part. 1. Quæſt. 114. Artic. 4. & ibid. Quæſt. 110. Artic. 4.

Secondly, Arguments may be drawn from the contrary, to prove that there is a God.

Reaſons,

From the contrary are two:

1. From the being of Devils.

There is a Devil, an Enemy to God, which ſets himſelf againſt God; and deſires, and ſtrives, and prevails in many places, to be worſhipped as God; therefore it muſt needs be there that is a God, to whom the ſervice and honour is due, of being confeſſed and adored as God; which theſe doe unduly affect and ſeek. Again, the Devil is a Creature for ſtrength, wiſdome, nimbleneſſe, able to deſtroy all mankind quickly, and out of his malice and fury very willing to do it. Yet he cannot do it, it is not done; of this reſtraint there is ſome cauſe, therefore there muſt be ſomething, which over-commands, and over-rules him, and that can be no other than a God; that is, ſomething of higher Power, and in Wiſdome farre beyond him. Now there are Devils, it is apparent by the horrible temptations, which are caſt into the hearts of men, quite againſt and beyond their natural inclinations, as Blaſphemous ſuggeſtions, and as appeareth by the practices of Conjurers and Witches, who practiſe with the Devil; and of thoſe Countreys which worſhip him in ſtead of God. Vide Lod. Viv. de Ver. Fid. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 16.

The bridling of wicked ſpirits and men. Plutarch ſaith, ſome men were converted from Atheiſm, by ſeeing of Ghoſts and Apparitions.

Were we to argue the caſe by Scripture, the buſineſſe would ſoon be at an end; there being no one controverted point among men, that I know of, that can receive a more ample, full, clear and ſpeedy determination, than this buſineſſe of

Spirits

Spirits and Witches, and Apparitions may, if the word of God might be Judge. Dr Casaubones Preface to the Relat. of Dr Dees Confer. with Spirits. Now if any opinion, whereof question is made can justly pretend to a general assent and consent of all people, places, ages of the world; I think, nay, I know, and it will be proved, that this of Witches, Spirits, and Apparitions may. Id. ibid.

Antiquissima de Daemonibus disputatio, & si primam de Deo excipias, secunda est. Gaulmini Praefat. ad Psellum. De operatione Daemonum.

See Dr Pordage his Innocency appearing through the dark mists of Pretended Guilt, pag. 25, 26, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72, 73. And Mr Fowlers 7th Animadversion in his Daemonium Meridianum of Angelical Apparitions.

2. From the slightnesse of the Reasons brought to disprove this truth, or to shew the contrary.

The Reasons produced to shew there is no God, are fond and weak; and what is opposed alone by weak and false Reasons, is a truth.

1. If there were a God, some man should see him, and sensibly converse with him.

This is a brutish Reason; What cannot be seen is not, then man hath no soul: God is above sense, more excellent than to be discerned by so poor, weak and low a thing as sense is.

2. God daily makes himself, after a sort, visible to men by his Works.

2. If there were a God, he would not suffer wicked men to prosper, and oppose better men than themselves; nor himself to be so Blasphemed as he is.

Attende totum & laudabis totum. Aug. Non est judicandum de operibus Dei ante quintum actum. Pet. Mart.

Those things that to us seem most unjust and unfit, if we could see the whole tenor of things, from the beginning to the ending, would appear just and wise. Look on the whole story of Joseph, and then it is a rich piece.

The Atheists third objection, that Religion is but an humane invention.

All Divine Religion (say the Atheists) is nothing else but an Humane Invention, artificially excogitated to keepe men in awe; and Scriptures are but the device of mans braine, to give assistance to Magistrates in Civil Government.

This Objection strikes at the root and heart of all Religion, and opposeth two main principles at once: 1. That there is a God. 2. That the Scripture is the word of God, which though it be but a meer idle fiction, yet it prevailed too much with some learned men. Tully and Seneca were the chief Patrons of that conceit, That Religion is no better than an humane invention.

It is the actual acknowledgement of God which preserveth his respect in the world. Gen. 3. 3.

1. Religion is almost as ancient as man; when there were but three men in the world, we reade that two of them offered up their Sacrifices unto God.

2. The Universality of Religion, declareth that it is not an humane Invention, but a divine Impression; yea, and a Divinity-Lesson of Gods own heavenly teaching. Lactantius accounteth Religion to be the most proper and essential difference between a man and a Beast.

Solus homo sapientia instructus est, ut Religionem Solus intelligat, & haec est hominis atque mutorum, vel praecipua, vel sola distantia. Lactantius de Ira Dei.

3. The perpetuity of Religion proveth also that it was planted by God.

For the second part of the Objection about the Scriptures: I answer,

Nothing is more repugnant to prudence and policy.

What policy was it in the Old Testament, to appoint Circumcision, to cut a poor child, as soon as he comes into the world? Two and twenty thousand Oxen, and a hundred and twenty thousand Sheep were spent by Solomon, at the Dedication of one Altar. To slaughter so many Oxen and Sheep (such usefull creatures) was enough to bring a famine. They were to give away the seventh part of their time to God.

Christ was not the Son of the Emperour Augustus, to commend him to the Grandees of the world, but the supposed Son of a poor Carpenter; a Star leads the Wisemen to a stable, though that shined gloriously without, yet there was nothing within, but what was base and contemptible.

Christ fell on the Pharisees, the great Doctors, *Mat.*23. called them fools and blind, and threatned them with hell; he cried down the Ceremonial Law, the Ministry which had been practised divers hundred years; the Jews were naturally tenacious of their customes; Christ chose silly unlearned men to propagate the Gospel.

Nothing crosseth humane wisdom more, than the whole Scripture from the beginning to the end.

[1] He spends his whole second Book about this Reason.

Martin Fotherby[1] Bishop of Salisbury, (who wrote Atheomastix) adds another reason, to prove that there is a God, and it is taken from the grounds of Arts. There is no Art (saith he) neither liberal nor illiberal, but it cometh from God, and leadeth to God.

The Greeks insinuate, that all Arts come from God, in making Minerva the Daughter of Jupiter, and to have had her generation in his Divine brain: as God the Sonne is called λόγος; so Grammer, Logick, Rhetorick, carry upon them the same name. There is λόγος verbum, that is Grammer; λόγος Ratio, that is Logick; λόγος Oratio, and that is Rhetorick.

The Sea is bound up in a sandy girdle.

1. From Metaphysicks, he urgeth, That the bounding of all natural bodies, is the work of God; to be unlimited and boundlesse, is onely the Prerogative of the Maker of all things. Every finite body being thus limited, must needs have those bounds prescribed unto it by some other thing, and not by it self. For every thing by nature, seeking to enlarge it self, as farre as it is able; if it had the setting of its own bounds, it would set none at all, but would be as infinite as God himself is, who hath the setting of limits unto all things. Who could circumscribe all things within their limits, but onely God himself, who is both the Maker and Ruler of all things? Psalm 33. 7. Job 38. 11.

All second causes depend on the first, and we cannot proceed in infinitum.

2. From Philosophy. Every thing that is, must needs have a cause, and nothing can be the cause of it self; and among all the causes, there can be but one first and principal cause; which is the true cause of all the rest, and of all those effects which proceed from all of them: Then the first cause can be nothing else but God; for what can that be, which giveth being unto all things, but onely God?

All the Reasons of the Natural Philosopher for this purpose, may be reduced to three principal heads, viz. Ex Motu, ex Fine, & ex Causa Efficiente; Arguments drawn from the Motions, Ends, and the Efficient Cause of Creatures. Bunnys Resolut. part. 2. Ch. 2.

Quicquid movetur, ab alio movetur.

2. All motion depends on some mover, the motion of sublunary things depends on the motion of the Heavens, and their motion must needs be caused by some supreme first mover. Therefore we must necessarily come at last to some first mover, which is moved of no other, and that is God. This was the common argument of Plato, Aristotle, and all the best Philosophers.

Some derive Deus from δέος, fear, because the feare of him is planted in the very natures and consciences of all reasonable Creatures. Others à dando: In English, God, quasi good; his daily mercies and blessings shew that there is a God, Acts 14. 17.

Every thing hath a peculiar end appointed, whereunto it is directed by nature (as the Bird to build her nest, and the Fox to make his den) the Director of nature her self herein must be something above nature, which is God.

3. Others adde these Reasons to prove that there is a God.

1. The Heroick motions and prosperous success of some famous men in undertaking and acting those things which exceed the common capacity of humane nature; the gifts of mind in Aristotle, Achilles, Alexander.

2. The hainous punishments inflicted on particular men, families and Kingdoms for great offences, some of which were wonderfully brought to execution, when by their power and subtilty they thought they could escape the Magistrates Sword.

3. There

3. There are vertues and vices, therefore there must be some Law: There can be no eternal reason in the things themselves.

This principle, that there is a God, is not so much an Article of Faith, as that which is presupposed to the Articles of Faith. Aquinas. It is an errour to hold, we must know, that God is by the Word and divine Revelation only. Reason receives this principle, because it sees rational grounds and arguments; faith, because it submtis to the authority of God, Heb. 11.6.

If we speak of Atheists strictly and properly, meaning such as have simply denied all Deity, and denied it constantly, Tullies sentence is most true, that there was never any such creature in the world, as simply and constantly to deny God. The name of an Atheist in this sense, is Nomen otiosum; a name without a thing. If we speak of Atheist in a larger sense, for such as have openly (though not constantly) denied the Divinity, of such professed Atheists, there have not been past two or three. If we speak of Atheists in the largest sense, meaning such as denied Gods providence, justice, goodness, though they have done it but weakly, rather upon some suddain passion, than any settled resolution, their number hath scarcely amounted to a score, I mean of such open Atheists, as have made any publick profession of their Atheism, though but even in these secondary points.

The pure Atheist (according to the propriety of that name) is he, which generally and constantly denieth all Deity, and believeth as he saith. The stoutest Atheist that ever lived, can not resolutely and constantly believe there is no God.

Those Atheists that denied a God, spake what they wished, rather than what they thought, or else they opposed the Heathenish gods, or to shew their [a] wit. Diagoras (the chiefest of them) did [b] Potius Gentilium Deos ridere, quam Deum negare: He rather derided false gods, than denied the true; that he was not a meer Atheist, appeareth in that he thus began his Poeme, Quod à numine summo reguntur omnia. It is reported of him, that at the first he was very devout, and a great worshipper of the gods, but having committed some certain money unto a friends keeping, and afterwards demanding it again, his friend loath to foregoe such a booty, forswore that he had received any; whom when Diagoras saw, notwithstanding his horrible perjury, to thrive and prosper, and no divine judgement to fall upon him, he presently turned Atheist, and enemy to the gods, and then laboured by all means to bring other men to like impieties.

[a] Diagoras made a very eloquent Oration, that there was no God; but the people coming to him, applauded him, saying, that in his Oration he had almost perswaded them, but he did it so eloquently, that they thought he was the god. [b] Morneus c.1. de verit. Relig. p.16. Anonymus quidam, qui præsente Calvino in Hospitio omnem Dei cultum, spem melioris vitæ deridens, subinde nefariè ingeminabat, blasphemam Scripturæ detorsionem Atheis usitatam, Cœlum Cœli Domino, terram autem dedit filiis hominum. A Deo diris torminibus repente percussus est, quo factum, ut subinde magno boatu vociferaretur, ô Deus, ô Deus, cui [illegible] ex hospitibus homo probus, sed facetus: Tune Deum invocas? An Philosophiæ tuæ oblitus es? Cur non in suo [illegible]o finis Deum quiescere? Et quoties ille tonabat, ô Deus, hic alter subsannans regerebat, ubi nunc est illud tuum, Cœlum Cœli Domino? Sic Calv. Comment. in Psal. 115. Voet. Thes. de Atheismo part. 2.

I have heard of some learned Atheists met together to discourse of the power of nature, to prove there was no God. A poor shepherd present, asked, How the rain came then? They bid him look upon a Still, and he might know that vapours were drawn up by the Sunne, and let fall again, as moisture in a Still. He replied, I never yet could see a Still work, unlesse some man put fire to it. This so wrought on one of the company, that he gave glory to God, and forsook his companions. M. Taylour on Prov. 6. v. 7.

Athenians also condemned Protagoras for an Atheist; yet not for denying God, but for seeming to doubt of him: Because in the beginning of his Book he propoundeth this Probleme, De diis quidem statuere nequeo; neque an sint, necne. For this the Athenians banished him, and decreed, That his Books should be publickly burned. Theodorus (who for his notable prophaneness was sirnamed Atheos) though at the first he was noted of [c] Atheism, yet at the last he fell into

[c] When he wanted fire, he took one of Hercules wooden Images, and made a fire of it, saying, Go to, Hercules, thou shalt now go thorow thy thirteenth labour.

Autotheiſm, profeſſing himſelf a god, as Laertius reporteth; though carrying God in the name; he was an Atheiſt in his opinion, ſaith Fuller in his prophane State of this Theodorus. A Pope * dying ſaid, Now I ſhall be reſolved of three things, 1. Whether there be a God. 2. Whether the ſoul be immortal. 3. Whether there be an Heaven and Hell.

Some indirectly deny God, by denying his providence, as Epicurus, who denied not Gods Eſſence, but only his Providence. He granted that there was a God, though he thought him to be ſuch a one as did neither evil nor good. But God ſitteth not idle in Heaven, regarding nothing that is done upon the Earth (as the Epicure conceiteth) he is a moſt obſerving God, and will reward and puniſh men according to their actions.

Firſt, This ſerves to blame and condemn the miſerable corruption of our evil hearts, which are ſo farre over-runne with Atheiſm; though this be the very firſt Truth which God hath engraven into the ſoul of a man, That there is a God, yet we weakly hold this Concluſion; for all ſinne may and muſt be reſolved into the ignorance of God and Atheiſm. Hæreticus diſputat contra fidem, malus Chriſtianus vivit contra fidem. Auguſt. We ſhould be humbled for our thoughts of Atheiſm, for ſaying in our hearts that there is no God, denying of providence, *Pſal.*73.22. The Devil in judgement never was an Atheiſt, becauſe of the ſenſe he hath of Gods wrath, *Jam.*4.19. we ſhould take notice of, and bewail this foul vice.

There are few Atheiſts in opinion, more in affection, and moſt of all in life and converſation, *Tit.*1.16. We ſhould beware of opinions and practices that ſtrike at the being of God:

1. Opinions that tend directly to Atheiſm:
   1. To think men may be ſaved in all Religions, *Epheſ.*4.4. Micah 4.4. ſo they walk not againſt conſcience.
   2. To deny the particular Providence of God, and exempt humane actions from his determination.
   3. To hold the mortality of the ſoul.
   4. Popery, it being a pompous and formal Religion, and ſuited to policy and temporal ends.
2. Practices which ſeem moſt contrary to the being of God,
   1. Hypocriſie, that is a real blaſphemy, *Rev.*2.9. *Pſ.*10.11,12,13. an hypocrite denies Gods Omniſcience and Omnipreſence.
   2. Epicuriſme and Libertiniſme, this comes from and tends to Atheiſme, *Pſal.*14.2.
   3. Scoffing in matters of Religion, and applying of Scriptures to prophane occaſion, 2 *Pet.*3.1. as Julian, Lucian.

Secondly, We ſhould oppoſe this Atheiſm, and labour to grow more and more in the knowledge of God, and to ſtrengthen our Faith in this principle, That God is; meditate and ponder of his Works, and be perfect in thoſe Leſſons which the common book of Nature teacheth; pray to God to clear the eye of our mind, and to imprint a right knowledge of himſelf in us. The Papiſt is a make-god, and the Atheiſt is a mock-god. The Papiſt deludeth his conſcience, and the Atheiſt derideth his conſcience. Popery comforteth the fleſh, and Atheiſme ſuppreſſeth the ſpirit.

As the Heathen Emperors took upon them the Title [d] of God, ſo doth the Pope, Dominus Deus noſter Papa. His Decrees and Canons are called Oracles; Oracle ſignifieth the anſwer of God, *Rom.*3.2.& 11.4. And his decretal Epiſtles are equalled to the Canonical Epiſtles.

Deal with thy heart, as Junius his Father dealt with him: he ſeeing his Son was Atheiſtical, he laid a Bible in every room, that his Sonne could look in no rooms but behold a Bible haunted him, upbraiding him, Wilt thou not reade me Atheiſt? Wilt thou not reade me? And ſo at laſt he read it, and was converted from his Atheiſme.

We

* Clement the ſeventh.

Pſal.14.1.& 53.1. So Genebrard and Mun expound that Pſal.14. of indirect Atheiſts, who deny Gods Providence, *Heb.*11.6. It is not only innatum, ſed etiam in animo inſculptum, eſſe Deos. Cic. *l.*2. de natura Deorum.

No Atheiſts almoſt can be named, neither in the holy Scriptures, nor in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtories, nor in Heathen writings, which came not unto ſome fearfull end, Iſal.9.16.& 58.10,11. See *Athcomaſtix. l.*1 c.15.

Atheiſme, to think that there is no God, is a ſin.
1. Connatural to us.
2. Cloſe and almoſt incurable.
3. Common and univerſal. The Saints of God have ſtill ſtuck to principles, *Pſ.*73.1. & *Jer.*12.1.

* Marbury on Gen.9.27.

[d] So Domitian, Dominus Deus noſter, ſic fieri jubet. Suetonius Edictum Domini Deiq; noſtri. Martial. More Caligulæ, Dominum ſe, Deumq; vocari cogit. Aurelius Victor.

We ſhould,

1. Beware of ſuch Books as have the ſeeds of Atheiſm ſcattered in them, and of familiar converſe with men of atheiſtical ſpirits.

2. Of bringing the truths and wayes of God to our own reaſon.

3. Nouriſh a holy fear of God in our hearts continually, *Prov.*23.17,18.

4. We ſhould labour for a more familiar and experimental acquaintance with God in our own ſouls.

The often meditating in the Scriptures, will (through Gods bleſſing) ſettle us in theſe two great principles, 1. That there is a God: 2. That the Scripture is the Word of God: That God which made Heaven and Earth is the onely true God; we muſt believe that this God which we read of in Scripture is the only true [e] God; ſo it is not enough to believe there is a God, but that [f] the Scripture of the Old and New Teſtament, is the word of God.

[e] Pſal.48.14.
[f] Iſa.40.5,8.

We ſhould,

Firſt, Strengthen our faith in this principle, touching the exiſtence of God. Supreme truths ſhould be laid up with the greateſt certainty:

1. Becauſe Satan is moſt buſie to ſhake and weaken our faith in this great principle.

2. There is much Atheiſm in our own hearts, Pſal. 14.1. The knowledge of God is much obſcured ſince the fall, and we were never in greater danger of being aſſaulted with temptations of Atheiſm than now, by reaſon of the various opinions, the atheiſtical principles and practices, the revolutions and ſtrange providences amongſt us, 2 Tim. 2.1,2,3,4,5.

3. The firm belief of this principle is of greate[ſt] influence to matters of faith, all ſecondary truths depend on the firſt principles and fundamental truths. Eſtabliſh this principle, that God is, and it follows, he is to be feared, loved, ſerved, worſhipped, if Chriſt be God, his merits and ſatisfaction muſt needs be infinite.

4. It is of great uſe to us in the difficulties of our lives temporal, death will bring me (if I be godly) to a ſight of God, *Heb.*11.26.

Secondly, We ſhould improve this principle,

1. To a dependance on God, who is the firſt and moſt perfect Being.

2. We ſhould love, fear and obey him, count his favour the greateſt good, and his diſpleaſure the greateſt evil.

3. We ſhould thinke nothing too much to doe or to ſuffer for him. We ſhould glorifie him in all our wayes, and be ſatisfied with him, and deſire to enjoy him.

4. We ſhould often converſe with him in our thoughts. Forgetfulneſſe of God is a kind of denial of him, Pſal. 19.17. & 40.4.

5. We ſhould be frequent in ſecret and publick acts of worſhip, in admiring and honouring God.

6. We ſhould count Religion a real thing, and neither unneceſſary nor unprofitable, and walk up to the principles of it, count afflictions good, and believe an Heaven and glory hereafter.

7. We ſhould believe the Day of Judgement; if he be God, he muſt needs be righteous.

8. We ſhould believe there is a difference between godlineſſe and ungodlineſſe.

Chap. II.

What GOD is.

Quid ſit Deus.

IN him conſider,
First, His Nature.
Secondly, His Works.
In his Nature two things are conſiderable:
First, His Eſſence.
Secondly, The Diſtinction of Perſons in that Eſſence.

1. Of Gods Eſſence.

God is an Infinite Eſſence which is of Himſelf[a], and gives being to all other things. Or thus, He is a Spirit, in, and of himſelf, Infinite in Being, Glory, Bleſſedneſſe and Perfection, All-ſufficient, Eternal, Unchangeable, Incomprehenſible, every where Preſent, Almighty, Knowing all things, moſt Wiſe, moſt Holy, moſt Juſt, moſt Mercifull and Gracious, Long-ſuffering, and abundant in Goodneſſe and Truth. So the Aſſembly in their larger Catechiſme.

[a] Cùm dicunt multi ex antiquis pariter, & recentioribus Deum eſſe à ſeipſo: hoc intelligendum eſt negativè, ad excludendum principium externum: ita ut Deus dicitur eſſe à ſeipſo, hoc eſt, ab alio nullo habeat eſſe: non autem poſitivè, ſeu affirmativè, ponendo principium internum, quaſi revera in ſe haberet unde duceret originem: cùm manifeſtum ſit Deum eſſe abſolutè, & initium omnino nullum habere poſſe, vel à ſe, vel ab alio. Arlo. exercit. 5.

Some things have their being wholly in another, as accidents, whiteneſſe in the Wall, Wiſdom in the mind.

2. Some things have a being by themſelves, not inhering in another, as ſubſtances, which are of two ſorts:

1. Bodily Subſtances, which have dimenſions, length, breadth and thickneſſe, poſſeſſing a place by commenſuration of parts.

2. Spiritual, freed from dimenſions and from all circumſcription of place; God is not an accident, that is the moſt weak and imperfect being, neareſt to a not being, and moſt eaſily reduced into nothing, as if the graſſe and flower fade, than the colour and faſhion of it cometh ſoon to nothing. God is not in any other thing, but all things are in him.

God is a Spirit, a being void of all Dimenſions, Circumſcriptions and Diviſibleneſſe of parts. Other Spirits are compounded of Subſtance and Accidents at leaſt, and exiſt in a place by limitation of Eſſence, by which they are here and not there; but God is an Eſſence altogether ſimple and immaterial, utterly free from all manner of compoſition any way, in whom are no qualities, nor any limitation of Eſſence. He is a Spiritual, Simple, and Immaterial Eſſence. His Eſſence is ſubſtantial, an Eſſence which hath a being in it ſelf, not in another, ſimply and wholly Immaterial (He is one moſt Pure [b] and meer Act) but Incomprehenſible goes quite beyond our knowledge; ſo that we cannot comprehend his Eſſence, nor know it as it is. He onely perfectly knows himſelf, but he may be knowne in ſome ſort.

[b] Intelligences are acts, not pure acts, becauſe it may be ſaid, Potuerunt eſſe. Job 11. 6. & 26. 14. Prov. 30. 6.

1. By his Names.
2. By his Attributes.

Fit admirabili quadam ratione, ut quo magis intelligibilis eſt Deus, eo minus intelligatur. Petavius de Deo. lib. 7. cap. 1.

The word God is attributed.

First, Properly to him who is eſſentially God, Iſa. 42. 8. 1 Cor. 8. 6. and either perſonally, commonly, without a determination of a certain perſon, John 4. 24.

Or

Or singularly to some one person by a Synecdoche, John 3. 16. Acts 26. 28. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Secondly, Improperly to those which by nature are not God, 1 *Cor.*8.5.*Gal.*4.8. and that Name is given to these, either from Gods Ordination, for the Dignity and Excellency of their Office, as to Angels, *Psal.*8.6. to Magistrates, *Psal.*82.6. to Moses, Exod.4.16. or from their own unjust usurpation, as to the Devil, who is called, The God of the world, 2 Cor.4.9. or from the erroneous perswasion of men, as to Idols, 1 *Cor.*8.4,5.

For the ten Hebrew Names of God (having handled them in another* place) I shall say but little of them here. The Name Jehovah, Jah, Ehejeh signifie Gods Perfect, Absolute and simple Being, of and by himself. 2. Such a Being as giveth Being to other things, and upon whom they depend. 3. Such a God as is true and constant in his Promises, ready to make good whatsoever he hath spoken. His Name El, Elohim, Schaddai, Adonai, signifie a God All-sufficient in himself, strong and powerfull, able to blesse, protect and punish.

* In the Epistle to my Hebrew Critica Sacra, and in the Book it self. Being is Gods Excellency. The being of the creatures is no being compared with God, *Isa.*40.17. The creature is much indebted to God for its being: 1. Simple being is better than no being. 2 All superadded perfection depends on the creatures being. 3. Being is the foundation of happinesse, therefore the creature abhorres annihilation. 4. The creature had its being entirely from God.

The Jews in pronouncing or writing the Names of God were reverent even to superstition. Dr Fulk against Martin.

Judaei in legendis & scribendis nominibus Dei oppidò quam superstitiosi sunt, interpretantur tertium præceptum, nomen Jehovæ non esse pronunciandum & librum in quo integrè scriptum est, nudis manibus non esse contrectandum.

In the New Testament Gods most frequent Names are Θεὸς and κύριος, God and Lord.

The Title of Lord so often given to Christ in the New Testament, doth answer to the Title of Jehovah in the Old Testament. Some Reverend Divines conceive the Apostles did purposely use the Title of Lord, that they might not offend the Jews with the frequent pronouncing of the word Jehovah. Compare *Deut.*6.13. with *Matth.*4.10. & *Deut.*6.5. with *Matth.*22.37. Dr Cheynels Divine Tri-unity.

He is also called the Father of lights, *Jam.*1.17.

The Essential Names of God are, 1. Proper,* which agree to no Creature not Analogically. 2. Common, which are applied to others, but agree to God principally by way of excellency, as God, King and Good.

Of those two Greek names, see my Greek Critica Sacra. * As Jehovah, Jah, Ehjeh, Exod.13.19. Of God the most high, see Dr Gouge on *Heb.*7. v.1. Sect.6.

The Name of God is used five wayes in Scripture:

First, Essentially for God himself, *Isa.*30.27.

Secondly, For the Power and Efficacy which comes from God, *Ps.*118.10,11,12.

Thirdly, For the Command and Authority of God, 1 *Sam.*17.45.

Fourthly, Passively for those actions whereby he is acknowledged by us, Matth. 18.19. that is, nothing but worshipping and calling upon the Father, Son and holy Ghost, for assistance.

Lastly, For that word whereby he is distinguished from creatures, and by which we are to have our thoughts directed about him.

2. God may be known by his Attributes and essential Properties, of which some shew, 1. What he is in himself, 2. What he is to us.

They are called Attributes,* because they are rather said to be attributed to God

* Vocantur Attributa quia ea sibi attribuit Deus nostrâ causâ. Zanch. *de Attributis l.*2. *c.*11. Attributa illa Dei dicuntur, vel negativa, ut immensus, immutabilis, &c. vel relativa, orta ex Dei variis extra se tendentibus actionibus, ut Creator, Salvator, &c. vel denique absoluta & positiva, Deo extra relationem & ordinem ad creaturas semper convenientia: qualia esse sapientem, bonum, &c. Hoornbeck. *Amisocin.l.*2.*c.*4. Attributum est Divinæ simplicissimæ essentiæ pro diversa agendi ratione, diversa, & vera habitudo, & conceptio nobis expressa. In quo duo sunt extrema vitiosi erroris ei, qui recte sentire velit, peraque vitanda. Alterum eorum, qui nihil ne cogitatione quidem, & intelligentia nostra: alterum qui nimium: hoc est reipsa, differre volunt, cùm à se invicem proprietates istas; tum ab natura & essentia. Petav. *Theol.Dog. de Deo, l.*1.*c.*8. *Vide plura ibid. & c.*9,10.

(that

(that we might by them better conceive what he is) then to be in him in such a way. They are that one most pure Essence diversly apprehended of us, as it is diversly made known unto us, *Isa.*43.25. 1 *Joh.*4.16. or they are those divine perfections whereby he makes himself known unto us. They are called Properties, because they are peculiar to his Majesty, and are so in him, as they are not in any creature.

The Divine Attributes of God, are not divers vertues, or qualities in him, as they are in the creatures, but really one and the same with the Divine Essence, and among themselves. They are attributed to God to supply the defect of our capacity, who are not able to understand that which is to be known of God, under one name, or one act of the understanding. Bishop Bramhall of Liberty, Necessity and Chance.

Some do distinguish of Gods Attributes and Properties. Attributes are those which belong to the Essence, and Properties to the Persons themselves.

[a] Proprietates Divinæ Naturæ, seu Essentiæ, sunt Attributa Dei essentialia, quibus essentia Divina veritas ac Majestas nobis innotescit, & ab aliis distinguitur. Wendelinus.

[a] A Property in God is an essential Attribute in him, whereby his Nature is known in it self, and is distinguished from all other things. They are called Attributes, because God attributes them to himself; Properties, because we conceive them as proper unto God, and such as can be predicated only of him.

God revealed his Simple undivided Essence under several Attributes, because he would be honoured in every Attribute.

Some Rules are to be observed in attributing these to God:

These Attributes differ not among themselves, nor from the Divine Essence.

First, They are all Essential to God; for in him is no accident at all; whatsoever is in God, the same is God. Gods wisdome is Himself, and his Power is Himself. God punishing the wicked, is the Justice of God; God compassionating the miserable, is the Mercy of God. All these are also one in Him; His Mercy is His Justice, and His Justice is His Mercy. and each are His Essence, onely they differ in our own apprehension, and in regard of their different objects and effects.

Isa.43.5. For my self, not for my Mercy; to teach us, that his Mercy is himself, and not different from his Essence, as it is with us.

Secondly, They are all Absolute Properties in God, and so distinguished from those respective Properties whereby every Person in the Trinity hath his own subsistence.

These Divine Properties are most perfect in their kind, Ergo, Equal in perfection.

Thirdly, They are all equal to all the three Persons, and alike affirmed of all. The Father Eternal, most Holy, Almighty, Merciful; so is the Sonne and Holy Ghost.

2. They are all one and the same real and individual divine Essence.

God is so light that in him there is no darknesse at all. 1 Joh. 1.5. Joh.8.12. Joh. 4.16.

Fourthly, These Attributes are altogether in God alone, and that in the highest degree and measure, yea above all degree and measure; they are Eternal and Infinite in him. He alone is good, *Matth.*19.17. and onely wise, Rom. 16.27. and King of Kings, 1 Tim.6.15. They are affirmed of him, both in the concrete and abstract; He is not only wise and good, but wisdom and goodnesse it self, Life and Justice it self.

Fifthly, They are all actually and operatively in God. He doth know, live, and will; his holinesse makes us holy. Every Attribute in God, as it is an excellency in him, so it is a principle to conveigh this to us. Gods wisdome is the fountain of wisdome to us: We are to seek Eternal Life from his Eternity, *Rom.*6.23.

6. All these are in God objectively and finally; our holinesse looks upon his holinesse, as the face in the Looking-glasse on the man, whose representation it is; and our holinesse ends in his.

The

The Attributes of God are Everlasting, Constant and Unchangeable, for ever in him, at one time as well as another. Psal. 105. 8. Jam. 1. 17. Psal. 136. 1. & 100. 5. Psal. 117. 2. Numb. 23. 10.

The Qualifications of every service we perform ought to be taken from the Attribute of God which we would honour. He is a great King, Mal. 1. 14. therefore great service is due to him.

The Attributes of God are the objects of our Faith, the grounds of our Prayer, and the matter of our Thankfulnesse. If one cannot pitch upon a particular promise in prayer, yet he may bottome his Faith upon an Attribute, 2 Chron. 20. 6. John 17. 17.

The Scripture represents Gods Attributes:

1. So as to curb our curiosity, so it expresseth divers of them negatively; it is easier for us to know what God is not, then what he is.

2. So as to help our infirmities.

3. So as to prevent our misapprehensions.

4. So as to raise our esteem of God. Dr Arrowsmiths Chain of Principles Aph. 3. Exercit. 4. See more there.

This may minister comfort to Gods people; Gods Attributes are not mutable accidents, but his very Essence: His Love and Mercy are like himself, Infinite, Immutable and Eternal.

In the midst of all Creature-comforts, let thy heart rise up to this; But these are not my portion. 2. If God at any time take away the comforts from thee, say, Satis solatii in uno Deo; his aim is when he takes away Creature-comforts, that you should enjoy all more immediately in himself, Matth. 6. 21, 22. This shews, that the Saints self-sufficiency lies in Gods All-sufficiency, Gen. 17. 1. Prov. 14. 14. exercise Faith therefore upon every Attribute, that thereby thou maist have the use and improvement of it, Ephes. 6. 10. and give unto God the praise of every Attribute, Psal. 21. 13.

2. We should imitate God, and strive to be immutably good and holy as he is, Levit. 11. 44. Matth. 5. 48.

These Attributes are diversly divided:

They are affirmative, Good, Just; and negative, as Immortal, Infinite.

Proper and Figurative; as God is Good, Wise; Members and humane affections are also attributed to him.

Absolute and Relative, without any Relation to the creatures; as when God is said to be Immense, Eternal; he is likewise said to be a Creator, King, Judge.

Some describe God, as he is in himself; he is an Essence Spiritual, Invisible, most Simple, Infinite, Immutable and Immortal. Some as he is to us, he is Omnipotent, most Good, Just, Wise and True.

Some declare Gods owne Sufficiency; so he is said to be Almighty, Infinite, Perfect, Unchangeable, Eternal; others his Efficiency, as the working of his Power, Justice and Goodnesse over the Creatures; so he is said to be Patient, Just, Mercifull.

Some are Incommunicable and agree to God alone; as when he is said to be Eternal, Infinite. Others are Communicable in a sort with the creatures, as when he is said to be Wise, Good.

Proprietates Dei sunt primi vel secundi generis. Primi generis proprietates sunt, quæ ita Deo competunt, ut earum contraria, omni insint creaturæ. Cujusmodi sunt Independentia, Simplicitas, Immutabilitas, Immensitas, Æternitas. Secundi generis sunt, quæ ita Deo competunt, ut earum expressa imagines in creaturis reperiantur. Wendelinus Christian. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 1. Quædam Attributa ita propria sunt Dei, ut neque creaturis communicari, ulla ratione possint: neque ullum ad ea habere respectum, ac proinde, quæ meram duntaxat Dei naturam, qualis sit, prædicant. Ut est vera simplicitas, æternitas, immensitas, & alia, id genus. Alia verò Attributa sunt, quæ licet simpliciter, & quatenus in Dei sunt, communicari nequeant: Ut summa sapientia, summa bonitas, summa potentia, & alia de reliquis: tamen ex parte, & per similitudinem fieri horum participes potuerunt, & possunt res creatæ ut Angeli & homines. Zanch de Natura Dei l. 2. c. 1.

The communicable Attributes (of which there are some resemblances to be found in the Creature) are not so in us as in God, because in him they are Essential. The incommunicable Attributes are communicable to us in their use and benefit, though not in their Nature; they are ours, Per modum dum operationis; the others, Per modum imaginis, his Omnipotency acts for us 1 Pet. 2. 9

These Properties in God differ from those Properties, which are given to men and Angels.

In God they are Infinite, Unchangeable and Perfect, even the Divine Essence it self; and therefore indeed all one and the same; but in men and Angels they are finite, changeable and imperfect, meer qualities, divers, they receiving them by participation only, not being such of themselves by nature.

God doth some great worke when he would manifest an Attribute: when he would manifest his Power he created the World, when he would manifest his Holinesse he gave the Law, when he would declare his Love he sent his Son, when he would shew his Goodnesse and Mercy he made Heaven, when he would discover his Justice and hatred of sinne he made hell, Psal. 63. 2. & 106. 8. Arminians and Socinians endeavour to corrupt the Doctrine of God in his Essence, Subsistence, and Decrees.

Under the first Covenant three Attributes were not discovered, 1. Gods pardoning Mercy, that was not manifested till the Fall: 2. His Philanthropy or love to man, Heb. 2. 16. 3. The Patience and Long-suffering of God, he cast the Angels into Hell immediately after their sinne. All the Attributes are discovered in the second Covenant in a higher way, his Wisdom was manifested in making the world, and in giving a Law, but a greater Wisdome in the Gospel, Eph. 3. 10. the truth and Power of God were more discovered under the second Covenant.

It is hard to observe an accurate method in the enumeration of the Attributes. Zanchy, Dr Preston, and Mr Stock have handled some few of them, none (that I know) hath written fully of them all.

The people of God have sometimes a sight of God:

First, In his Attributes, Job 42. 5, 6.

1. Of his Immensity and Greatnesse.
2. Of his Infinite Purity and Holinesse.
3. Of his All-sufficiency and Blessednesse.
4. Of his Soveraignty and Supreme Dominion.

Secondly, In his Providence; see the wisdom and equity of his dispensations.

Thirdly, In the face of Christ, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

Yet this Vision,

1. Is not adequate to the beatifical Vision in Heaven.
2. Not meerly rational, which a man of parts may attain to, John 14. 22.

At some seasons especially, God manifests himself to his Saints:

1. After some great exercise of grace, and some special service, Act. 23. 11.
2. When he is about to put them on some great service, Exod. 3. 2, 6. & 4. 10, 11.
3. After some great trial or exercise of affliction, Isa. 48. 10. He was with the children in the fire.

The clearer knowledge of God raiseth a man thoughts greatly touching the sinfulnesse of sinne. To see God in his infinite Purity, and sinne in its turpitude, to apprehend God in his infinite Perfection and All-sufficiency, and that sinne alienates the heart from God. See Psal. 73. 22. Prov. 14. 9. God sees the sinfulnesse of our hearts, our vain thoughts, our evil and selfish aims, Job 42. 2.

A man by this also sees how little he knows, Prov. 30. 12. Job 11. 7. and the imperfection of his grace and holinesse, 1 John 3. 5. and the insufficiency of the creature, Psal. 73. 25. Anima videns Creatorem angusta est omnis Creatura, Heb. 10. 34.

The sight of God fils a man with large affections toward him, and makes a man desire greater friendship and familiarity with him, and also brings a man to submit to the will of God.

CHAP. III.

That GOD is a Spirit, Simple, Living, Immortal.

GOD inreſpect of his Nature is a Spirit, that is, a Subſtance or Eſſence altogether Incorporeal. This the Scripture expreſly witneſſeth, *Joh.*4.24. 2 *Cor.*3.17.

An underſtanding Spirit is either created or uncreated:

Created Spirit, as the ſoul of man, or an Angel, *Pſal.*104.4. 1 *Cor.*6. ult. uncreated, God.

Whatſoever is affirmed of God, which is alſo communicable to the creatures, the ſame muſt be underſtood by a kinde of Excellency and Singularity above the reſt.

He is a wiſe Judge, a gracious Father, a glorious King.

Angels are Spirits, and the ſouls of men are ſpirits, but God is a Spirit by a kinde of Excellency or Singularity above all ſpirits, the God of Spirits, Numb. 16.22. the Father of Spirits, *Heb.*12.9. the Author of Spirits, and indeed the Spirit of ſpirits.

The word Spirit in Greek πνεῦμα, in Hebrew Ruach, is uſed chiefly of God, and ſecondarily of the creatures; when it is uſed of God, it is uſed either properly or metonymically; properly, and ſo firſt eſſentially, then it ſignifieth the Godhead abſolutely, as *Joh.*4.24. or more reſtrictively, the Divine Nature of Chriſt, Heb. 9.14. 1 Pet. 3.18. Secondly, Perſonally for the third Perſon in the Trinity, commonly called the holy Spirit or Ghoſt, 1 *Cor.*2.11. If the word be taken metonymically, it ſignifies ſometimes the effects of grace, either the common graces of Gods Spirit, prophetical, 1 *Sam.*10.6,10. miraculous, or the ſanctifying graces, *Epheſ.*5.18.

God is called a Spirit,
1. Negatively, becauſe he is not a body.
1. Analogically, or by a certain likeneſſe, becauſe there are many perfections in ſpiritual ſubſtances, which do more ſhadow forth the Divine Nature, than any bodily thing can.

dul. Theol. At enim quem colimus Deum nec oſtendimus, nec videmus. Immò ex hoc Deum credimus, quod eum ſentire poſſumus videre non poſſumus. Minut. Fel. Octav. Dr Ames Me-

Angels and mens ſouls are created ſpirits, but God is an infinite Spirit, the Word is not applied to God in the ſame ſenſe, Nihil de Deo & creaturis univocè dicitur, ſay the Schoolmen. God is not ſimply Inviſible, but in reference to us: Angels and Saints above ſee him, they behold his face. He is Inviſible to a mortal eye, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

Reaſons.

Firſt, God is a Spirit, becauſe a Spirit is the beſt, higheſt, and pureſt Nature; God being the moſt excellent and higheſt Nature, muſt needs be a Spirit too.

God is of a pure and ſpiritual Nature.

Secondly, God is a moſt ſimple and noble being, therefore muſt needs be incorporeal; Angels and ſouls have a compoſition in them; their Eſſence and Faculties are diſtinguiſhed; they are compounded of Subject and Accidents, their Nature and Qualities or Graces; but Gods Holineſſe is his Nature.

To be a Spirit implies,
1. Invifibility.
2. Efficacy and activity, Ezek. 1.20.
3. Simplicity.

Thirdly, God is inſenſible, therefore a Spirit. Spirits are not ſubject to ſenſes, John 1.18.

God is inviſible, Luk. 24.39 Col. 1.15. John 1.18.

We are doubtfull about the reality of ſeveral things which are not ſubject to ſenſe.

1. The being of God, becauſe he is Inviſible and remote from the eye of ſenſe, though he be viſible to the eye of faith and reaſon, Rom. 1.19,20. See Pſal. 14.1.

2, The Immortality of the ſoul, becauſe it is not ſeen.

3. The ſtate of the world to come, whether there be a Heaven and a Hell after this life is ended.

4. The happineſſe of the godly notwithſtanding their afflictions.

It appears that men have ſuſpicious thoughts about the truth of theſe things:

1. Becauſe men preſer a finite and temporal good which is viſible before an infinite and eternal good which is inviſible.

2. In that men chooſe ſinne rather than affliction, and hazard the undergoing of eternal torments, to avoid momentany troubles.

3. Our great unwillingneſſe to die, when we have ſome perſwaſion that we are the children of God.

4. In that we can no more live upon the ſpiritual and inviſible comforts, when ſenſible comforts are taken from us.

Conſectaries.

This confutes, 1. Tertullian [a] who held God to be corporeal, then he ſhould conſiſt of matter and form.

[a] Lib. adverſ. Prax. & de anima.

2. The Anthropomorphites who aſcribed to God the parts and members of a man; they alledge that place, *Gen.*1.27. But ſome think the ſoul is the onely ſubject and ſeat, in which the Image of God is placed; grant that it was in the body likewiſe, it being capable of Immortality; yet a man was not ſaid to be made after the Image of God in reſpect of his corporal figure, but in reſpect of Knowledg, Righteouſneſſe and Holineſſe, *Eph.*4.23. *Col.*3.10. not in reſpect of his Subſtance, but Qualities.

Rom. 1.23. Anthropomorphites, a ſort of Hereticks ſo called, becauſe they miſconceived that God had a bodily ſhape like man.

Pſal.34.16. Zech. 4.10.

Object. God is ſaid to have Members, Face, Hands, Eyes, in ſome places of Scripture, and yet in others he is ſaid not to be a body, but a Spirit; and conſequently to have no hands nor eyes.

Quod de Deo dicitur ἀνθρωπομόρφως intelligi debet ἀνθρωπικῶς. Dextra Dei ſignificat potentiam & majeſtatem Dei: Oculi & Aures Omniſcientiam.

Anſw. The word Hand and Eye is taken figuratively, for the power of ſeeing and working, which are actions, that men peform with the hand and eye, as an Inſtrument; and ſo it is attributed to God, becauſe he hath an ability of diſcerning, and doing infinitely more excellent than can be found in man. Sometimes again, thoſe words are taken properly for members of the body of ſome ſuch forme, faſhion, making; ſo they are not to be attributed unto God; who becauſe he hath no body, cannot have an hand, an eye. A body is taken three wayes, 1. For every thing which is oppoſite to a fancy and notion, and ſo whatever hath a being, may be called a body: in this ſenſe Tertullian attributes a body to God. 2. For that thing which hath ſome compoſition or change; ſo God onely is incorporeall. 3. More ſtrictly for that which conſiſts of matter and forme; ſo ſome ſay Angels are incorporeal.

The Scripture referring Eyes to God, by them intends, 1. Knowledge, and notice of things, *Pro.*15.3. 2. His Care, *Pſal.*34.15. 3. His Direction, Pſal 42.8.

3. This ſhews the unlawfulneſſe then of painting the God-head; Cajetan diſliked it. Bellarmine [b] argues thus, Man is the Image of God: But man may be pictured: Therefore the Image of God may be pictured.

[b] Lib. 2. de Imag. Sanct. cap.8.

Man is not the Image of God, but in the faculties of his ſoul, which cannot be pictured: Therefore the Image of God cannot be pictured. Although the whole man may be ſaid Synecdochically to be pictured; yet is not man called the Image of God in his whole, but in a part, which is his reaſonable and inviſible ſoul, which can not be pictured.

Conſectaries from Gods being a Spirit and inviſible. See Joel 2.13. Phil 3.3. Rom.1.20.

1. We muſt call upon God, and worſhip him with the Spirit; our Saviour Chriſt teacheth us this practical uſe, John 4.24.

To worſhip God in Spirit is,

1. To worſhip him with underſtanding and knowledge, 2 *Cor.*3.13. To know that God they worſhip, and the nature of the ſervice they performe, Mat. 15.9. To conſider we have to do with God, *Pſal.*23.22.

2. To

2. To worſhip him out of choice, where a mans ſpirit is, he comes freely, Exod. 25. 2. Joſh. 24. 14, 15.

3. With delight and joy, Phil. 3. 3.

4. To have ſome ſpiritual aim and deſigne in every Ordinance, to meet with the Lord there, Pſal. 42. 1. and ſome ſpiritual excitation to look for ſome comfort and quickning, Pſal. 90. 6. Bleſſe the Lord, O my ſoul, Pſal. 103. Whom I ſerve in the Spirit, ſaith Paul. The very Heathen made this inference,

Si Deus eſt animus, ſit pura mente colendus.

1. The Lord chiefly cals for the heart, 2 Chron. 28. 9. Prov. 23. 26. Jer. 4. 4. His eye is upon it, 1 Sam. 16. 7. Ezek. 33. 31.

1. Becauſe it is Gods peculiar Subject.

2. It ſwayes the whole man, as long as that is right God accepts of a man though there be failing in the life, Rom. 9. 8. See Rom. 2. 28, 29. 1 Pet. 3. 4. Rom. 12. 1. The entrailes and fat of the ſacrifices were Gods. The principles, motives, the graces, comforts, ſealings, Communion with God and Chriſt; theſe are all inward.

2. He abhors all ſervices done without the heart, Mat. 5. 8. See 2 Chron. 25. 2. Jer. 4. 14.

3. It hath been the great care of Gods people to bring their hearts to theſe ſervices, Phil. 3. 3.

1. It is the beſt and nobleſt part, every man is what his heart is, Animus cujuſque, is eſt quiſque.

2. The diſtinguiſhing part, diſtinguiſheth our intereſt in Chriſt, here the hypocrite and true believer part. See Pſal. 40. 8. & 140. 2, Col. 3. 23.

Motives to excite us when we draw near to God to bring our hearts:

1. It is this onely which will make the ſervice honourable, Gal. 4. 9.

2. This onely makes it acceptable, Eſay 66. 3. 1 Pet. 2. 5. Hoſ. 14. 6.

3. This only makes it profitable, 1 Tim. 4. 7. Heb. 9. 9. Rom. 6. 22.

4. This only will make it comfortable, all true comfort flows from the ſweetneſs in fellowſhip with God and Chriſt, Revel. 3. 24. See Eſay 38. 3.

5. Elſe in every ſervice we tempt God, Acts 5. 9. Iſa. 29. 13.

How to know when I ſerve God in my heart, or worſhip him in Spirit:

1. Such a ones great care in all ſervices will be to prepare his heart before-hand, 2 Chron. 30. 9.

2. Then the inward man is active thorowout the duty, Rev. 3. 3. 2 Pet. 1. 5.

3. Then one keeps his thoughts intent throughout, Mat. 6. 21.

4. The grief after the duty done will be, that the heart was ſo much eſtranged from God in duty.

2. God though inviſible in himſelf, may be known by things viſible: He that ſeeth the Son hath ſeen the Father, Joh. 14. 9. We ſhould praiſe God, as for other Excellencies, ſo for his Inviſibility, 1 Tim. 1. 17.

2. Learn to walk by faith, as ſeeing him who is Inviſible, Heb. 11. 27.

3. [c] Labour for pure hearts, that we may ſee God hereafter. The inward man is chiefly eſteemed by God, 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Pet. 3. 5. the everlaſting welfare of the whole perſon depends on the flouriſhing of the inward man, Rom. 6. 9. the life and ſtrength of the inward man is more noble than that of the outward man, it draws near to the life of God, Epheſ. 4. 18. and is the beginning of our life in glory, it muſt have nobler ſupports, 3 [d] Epiſtle of Joh. 2.

[c] Matth. 5. 12.

4. [d] Here is comfort againſt inviſible Enemies, we have the inviſible God, and inviſible Angels to help us.

[d] Inviſibile aliquid dicitur dupliciter, inquit Chamier; Primò, per ſe, & ipſa ſui natura; Ut Deus, ut Spiritus ſunt inviſibiles. Secundò, per accidens; cum quid in ſe tale eſt quidem ut poſſit videri: ſed aliqua externa ſuperveniente cauſa, fit inviſibile iis à quibus vel alias potuit, vel etiam debuit videri: quomodo iis qui ſunt ad Septentrionem inviſibiles ſunt ſtellæ ad Auſtrum, quomodo ſtella quædam minutiſſima ſunt inviſibiles.

God hath immediate power over thy Spirit, to humble and terrifie thee. He is

Gods greatest judgements in this life are inflicted on the heart, Psal. 81. 12. Lam. 3. 65.

Soul-plagues are greater than bodily, because,
1. Invisible.
2. Insensible.
3. There is more of Gods wrath in these, bodily miseries are often the fruite of his love.
4. Often the marks of reprobation.
5. Because Gospel-plagues are greater than legall, as well as Gospel-sinnes.

Preferre spiritual excellencies, privileges and comforts, be spiritual in duties and performances. 2 Cor. 4. 18.

The Divine Essence is simple and altogether uncompounded. Simplex propriè dicitur quod compositum ex diversis non est. Et quò quid minus est compositum eò etiam simplicius est, & appellatur. Zanch. De natura Dei. l. 2. c. 2. Vide Petavii Theol. Dog. de Deo, Deique proprietatibus l. 2. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

is the Father of Spirits, he cannot only make thee poor, sick, but make thy conscience roar for sin: it was God put that horrour into Cain, Judas, Spira's spirits. He is a Spirit, and so can deal with the Spirit.

Lastly, Take heed of the sins of the heart and spirit, ignorance, pride, unbelief, insincerity, 2 Cor. 7. 1. 1 Thess. 5. 23. such as not only arise from, but are terminated in the spirit. These are first abhorred by God. He is a Spirit, and as he loveth spiritual performances, so he hates spiritual iniquities, Gen. 6. He punisht the old world, because all the imaginations of the thoughts of their hearts were evil. 2. Most contrary to the Law of God, which is chiefly spiritual. 3. Sin is strongest in the spirit, as all evil in the fountain, Mat. 15. 19. 4. Spiritual evils make us most like the Devils, who are spiritual wickednesses. All sin is from Satan, per modum servitutis, these per modum imaginis.

We should therefore also take heed to our own spirits, because of the danger we are in from these spiritual adversaries:

1. They are malignant spirits, 1 Joh. 5. 18. & 2. 13, 14.
2. The spirit of a man is most maligned by Satan, all he did to Jobs name, estate, posterity, was to enrage his spirit.
3. The spirit of a man is frequently and very easily surprised, few men are able to deny temptations that are suitable.
4. When the spirit is once surprised, one is ready to ingage with, and for the Devil, Mat. 12. 30.
5. The spirit will then bring all about for the service of sin, the excellent parts of the mind, wit, memory, strength, Rom. 8. 7. & 6. 13, 19. James 3. 15. Matth. 23. 15.
6. It is hard for such a sinner to be recovered, Prov. 27. 1.

God is most Simple, Ens simplicissimum, Simplicity is a property of God, whereby he is void of all composition, mixtion and division, being all Essence; whatsoever is in God, is God. Simpleness is the first property in God, which cannot in any sort agree to any creature.

God is Simple, because he is free from all kindes of composition, which are five.

1. Of Quantitative parts, as a body.
2. Of essential parts, matter and form, as a man consists of soul and body.
3. Of a genus and difference, as every species.
4. Of subject and accidents, as a learned man, a white wall.
5. Of act and power, as the spirits.

Every creature is subject to composition, and consequently to division. All things which are created, are made by joyning together more things than one in one, and so they consist of divers things.

Comparatione alia dicuntur simplices substantiæ, alia compositæ. Angeli & anima nostra, simplices sunt substantiæ respectu elementorum. Elementa comparatione eorum quæ ex iis sunt, Compositæ. Zanch. ubi supra.

Some have a more gross and palpable composition of parts, both essential and integral, as a man of soul and body, and the body of flesh, bloud, bone, and such parts. The Spirits which have not so plain a composition, are yet compounded of substance, and accidents sustained by that substance, and inherent in it; for the substance of an Angel and his faculties, and qualities are different things; his Life is one thing, his Reason another, his Will another, his Power, Wisdome, Nimbleness, other things. So the soul of a man, and all created things, are made up of many things joyned together.

God is absolutely Simple, he is but one thing, and doth not consist of any parts; he hath no accidents; but himself, his Essence and Attributes are all one thing, Et Deo, Deique proprietatibus l. 2. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. 2 Cor. 12. 3. The Gospel and the wayes of it are not Simple as Simplicity is opposed to the depth of wisdome, (For therein is made known the manifold wisdome of God, Ephes. 3. 10.) But as Simplicity is opposed to mixture. Every thing the more simple (in this sense) the more excellent. In Deo idem est esse & essentia, vivens & vita, quia Deus non vivit per aliud essentiæ superadditum, sed vitam habet in seipso, & est ipsa vita, vivit à seipso & per seipsum.

though by us diverſly conſidered and underſtood. If he did conſiſt of parts, there muſt be ſomething before him, to put thoſe parts together; and then he were not Eternal, Iſa. 43. 10. In God to be, to will, and to do are the ſame, John 15. 26. compared with John 14. 6. and 1 John 1. 7. compared with 1 John 1. 5. where to have life, and be life; to be in the light, and be light, are the ſame. God is therefore called in the Abſtract Light, Life, Love, Truth, John 14. 6. 1 John 4. 8.

This is one reaſon why God is ſo perfect, becauſe he is Ens Simpliciſſimum, In every kinde a thing is ſo much perfect, by how much it is more Simple and Pure. Whence the ſame [c] Hebrew word ſignifieth both Simple and Perfect.

Unum quodque quo ſimplicius eo Deo ſimilius, ſay the Schoolmen.

[c] תם

2. No Accidents are in God; when we affirm that God is good and gracious, we mean it not as when we ſay ſo of men; in men they are Qualities, Virtues, in God they are his Eſſence.

Conſectaries of Gods ſimpleneſſe. Simplex quaſi ſine plicis. Sincerus ſine cera. See Prov. 11. 20. * A great French Peer is called Le bon Chreſtien, the good Chriſtian, becauſe (they ſay) it never rots in the core. Mat. 22. Chriſt oppoſeth a ſingle eye and corrupt one, an Iſraelite in whom is no guile, is worth an Ecce, a rare man. Miſtreſſe Elizabeth Sutton ſaid, She had nothing to comfort her but poor Sincerity. Lactantius obſerves that the Heathens counted it the greateſt honouring of their gods to be like unto them, one would be drunk, becauſe he would be like Bacchus.

1. We ſhould be ſimple as Doves, Mat. 10. 16. Simplicitas Columbina, non Aſinina. Carthuſian. Eph. 6. 5. 2 Cor. 1. 12. It is called godly ſincerity, which God worketh, and which is pleaſing to him. Simpleneſſe and Simplicity of heart is the main thing in * Chriſtianity, Eph. 6. 5. Col. 3. 22.

2. Here is matter of joy and comfort to the good; Mercy and Love are Gods Eſſence, Iſa. 54. 8. and of Fear and Terror to the wicked, becauſe Gods Anger and Juſtice are his Eſſence, and he is Unchangeable.

God is Living.

He is often called the living God in oppoſition to dead Idols; Turn from Idols to ſerve the living God, Gen. 16. 14. & 24. 62. & 25. 11. Deut. 5. 26. Ruth. 3. 23. Jud. 8. 19. Iſa. 3, 10. Jer. 10. 10. Ezek 3. 11. Dan. 4. 34. Matth. 16. 76. Acts 14. 15. He is called Life, 1 John 5. 18. The fountain of Life. Pſal. 36. 9. He hath his name in Greek from life; He ſaith often of himſelf, I live; as if he ſhould ſay, I alone do truly live, and he often adds for ever, Deut. 32. 40. The Oath which the Fathers uſed, is moſt frequent, The Lord liveth, Jer. 5. 2. and 12. 16. for they ſwore by him, who truely and alwayes lives. He himſelf ſwears by nothing but by his Life and Holineſs, Jud. 8. 24. Ruth. 3 3. This Oath is uſed fourteen times in Ezekiel, Zeph. 2. 9. Jer. 46. 18, 22, 24. Iſa. 49. 18. Deut. 32. 40. Numb. 14. 21, 28. God is called the living God.

1 John 5. 20, 21. Pſalm 115. 4, 5. Pſalm 42. 2. Rom. 9. 26. Græci Deum vocant Ζῶνα à vivendo, quoniam ſolus verè vivit & omnia vivificat, ut merito ſicut vocatur à quo ita appellari poſſit à ζάω. Jer. 10. 10. See Doctor Gouge on Heb. vivo à vi, ut

1. To diſtinguiſh him from the falſe gods of the Gentiles, which were dead and ſenſleſs ſtocks, Acts 14. 15. 1 Theſſ. 1. 9.

2. To repreſent unto us the [f] active Nature of God, he is all life.

3. To direct us to the Fountain or Well of Life, from whom all Life is derived unto the creature by a threefold ſtream.

9. 12. Sect. 138, 139. [f] Vivere eſt eſſe alicujus in ſe per ſe, ſingulari vi; unde & Latinis Græcis βίος à βίω dicitur. Deut. 30. 20.

1. Nature, God is the Author of the life of Nature, Gen. 2. 7. Acts 17. 28. We could contribute nothing to natural life.

2. Grace, he is the Author of that life, John 1. 2. Epheſ. 4. 18.

3. Glory, he is the Author of the life of glory, Rom. 2. 7.

A reaſonable life (to which God reſembleth his) is a power to perform variety of regular and limited actions, to a certain known end, and that out of choice and councel. Gods life is his power of working all things according as ſeems good to himſelf after his own councel for his own glory; to ſay he liveth, is to ſay he doth perpetually work.

The life of God is an eſſential Property of the Divine Nature, whereby it is

and

and is conceived of us to be in perpetual action, living and moving in it self, and of it self.

The life of God lies principally in three things. 1. In his perfect knowing and understanding of himself. 2. In his perfect resting in himself. 3. In his willing himself as his own end.

Life in things bodily ariseth from the union of the body and the soul together; and in things that be not bodies but spirits, from the perfection of the matter and qualities of them.

Our own life is a power, by which we are able to produce lively actions; Gods life is that power, whereby he is fit to work or produce all sorts of actions suitable to the perfect Essence of his Divine Majesty; Or it is that whereby he knoweth, willeth and affecteth, and can do all sorts of actions, beseeming his excellent Nature.

Reasons given by Zanchius.

Act. 17. 28.

First, From the effects of life, God understands, wils, loves, therefore he truely lives; for these are all the Properties of livers, therefore Aristotle often concludes from this, that because God understands all things, he lives a blessed Life.

Secondly, Those things live which move and stir themselves; God doth all things by himself, he is the first and perfectest cause of all; therefore he most properly lives, and that a most blessed life.

Gen. 2. 7. God lives because life is originally in him, Psa. 36. 9. John 1. 4. In him was life.

Thirdly, From his Name Jehova, he is Jehovah, who is by himself and most perfectly, and of whom all things are which are and live; God therefore so lives, that he is the author of all life to all livers, and therefore he is called our life, Deut. 30. 20. John saith of Christ, in him was the Author of life, and Acts 3. Ye have killed the Author of life.

Amongst the creatures which are subject to our sense, there is a threefold kind of life: Two more imperfect; the third more perfect.

The former is the life of Vegetation or growth; by which things are able to doe what is requisite for the attaining and maintaining of their full strength and Nature, and the propagating of their kinde, according to their severall kindes.

The second is the life of sense, whereby things are inabled to discern things hurtfull to them, and things good for them; to shun the one, and to seek the other.

These are imperfect kindes of life, because they are inherent after a sort in the bodies of things, accompanying a corporall being, which is the meanest being.

A man hath four kinds of faculties in the exercise of which he liveth; and life in him is an ability to exercise them. He hath understading, will, affections, and a power to move and work outwardly. The living God sees it fit to ascribe all these to himself.

But thirdly, there is a more worthy and noble kind of life called reasonable, such as is seen in men and in Angels, which is an ability to proceed reasonably and understandingly in all actions, for the attaining of good and shuning of evils, fit for the welfare of the person endued with reason. Now we must not conceive in God any such imperfect thing as growth or sense, for he is a spiritual, a simple and immaterial Essence; but his life is to be understood by the similitude of the life of reason, for he is a perfect understanding. To the being then of God adjoyn reasonableness in our conceiving of him, and we conceive his life somewhat aright.

Gods life differs from the life of the creature:

1. His life is his Nature or Essence, he is life it self; theirs the operation of their Nature, he is life, they are but living.

Their life hath a cause, his none.

2. His life is his own, he liveth of, and by, and in himself; their life is borrowed from him, in him we live and move, Act. 17. 25, 28. He is life, and the fountain of life to all things.

3. His life is Infinite, without beginning or ending; their life is finite, and had a beginning, and most of them shall have an end.

His life consisteth in rest, and he possesseth all his life in one instant, our life is a flux and succession of parts.

4. His life is entire altogether and Perfect, theirs imperfect, growing by addition on of dayes to dayes. He liveth all at once, hath his whole life perfectly in himself, one infinite moment.

5. He liveth necessarily, they contingently, so as they might not live.

6. His life is Immutable, theirs mutable and subject to many alterations.

First, This serves to blame those which carry themselves no otherwise to God, than if he were a very dead Idol, not fearing his threats, or seeking to obey him. Consectaries from Gods life.

Secondly, to exhort us all often to revive in our selves the memory and consideration of his life, by stirring up our selves, to fear his threats, respect his Promises, obey his Commandements, decline his displeasure, and seek his favour. Let us serve, fear, and trust in him, which liveth for evermore. Provoke not the Lord by your sinnes; For it is a fearfull thing to fall into the hands of the living God, Heb. 10. 31. Dan. 6. 27. Heb. 9. 14, 15. Rev. 4. 9, 10.

Thirdly, Here is comfort to all the faithful servants of this God, which desire to please him; for they have a King which liveth and hath lived for ever, a King Eternal, Immortal, Invisible and only Wise; in his life they shall enjoy life, though friends die, God ever liveth. His life is the preserver, upholder and comforter of your life. God living of himself, can bless you with natural, spiritual and eternal life, Joh. 14. 10. Rom. 8. 10, 17. Life is better then all the comforts of it. Men will give skin for skin, and all that they have for life. It is reported of one, that he offered to redeem his life, thrice his weight in Silver, twice in Gold, once in Pearl. But we do little for the living God, and communion with him in the life of grace, and for obtaining eternal life. Psal. 18. 46. This upheld Luther amidst his opposition, Christus vivit, vincit, regnat. Vide Dieterici Analys. Evang. Dom. in partem 2. p. 40.

The life of God is,

The object of our faith, 1 Tim. 4. 10. hope and rejoycing, Rom. 8. 24. of our love and obedience, Heb. 12 9. all life and salvation is in the living God, Joh. 14. 19. we should not fear a mortal man, Esay 51. 12. S^t Augustine prefers a flie before the Sun, because a flie hath life, and the Sun hath not.

It were better we had never had any life at all, than only the life of nature, Mat. 26. 24. and 18. 5. Eccles. 6. 2. The service and honour of Christ should be the scope of a Christians life, Phil. 1. 21. Acts 20. 24. Rom. 14. 7, 8.

God is Immortal and Incorruptible, he liveth for ever in like perfection.

The Scripture confirms this:

1. Negatively, when it removes mortality and corruption from God, Rom. 1. 23. 1 Tim. 1. 17. & 6. 16.

2. Affirmatively, when it giveth life to God, Genes. 16. 14. Deuter. 5. 26. Jer. 2. 13.

The propriety of Gods life is, it is Endlesse, Incorruptible, Deut. 32. 40. Life is essential to God, he is life it self, but the life of other things is accidental. His life is also effective, he gives life to all living creatures.

2. God is of himself Eternal, of himself, and absolutely Immortal and Incorruptible. He only hath immortality, 1 Tim. 6. 16. Angels are not immortal in and of themselves, they have not original or absolute immortality, their immortality is dependent and derivative.

3. Because he is void of all composition, therefore he is free from corruption.

4. Because he is simply and every way Immutable.

5. This is proved from the Nobility and perfection of the Divine Essence. Living bodies are more perfect than such as do not live, but God is the most perfect and noble being, John 5. 26.

6. Because he is blessed, therefore he is Immortal, Ezek. 37. 14.

1. This comforts all Gods people, who have the living God for their friend; who liveth for ever, and they shall live eternally with him, the life of God comforted Job 19. 25. Let them trust in the living God. This should comfort us against spiritual weaknesse and deadnesse, though we be dull and dead in Prayer, God is life, and will quicken us.

2. We miserable men for sin are all subject unto death, 2 Sam. 14. 14. Psalm 144. 4. Psal. 90. 6. Job 14. 1. Job describes there the brevity, frailty, instability, and manifold miseries of this life, therefore let us place all our confidence and g The Latine word for men, is mortales, Ipso vocabulo sua conditionis admonentur. Erasm. in Colloq. Psal. 17. 19.

hope in God, who is Immortal and Incorruptible; our soul is immortal, and made for immortality; it is not satisfied with any thing, nor resteth but in God, who is Immortal and Incorruptible. A thing may be said immortal two wayes: First, Simpliciter, absolutè, per se, suaque Natura, so that there is no outward, nor inward cause of mortality; so only God. Secondly, which in its own nature may be deprived of life, yet ex voluntate Dei, neither dies, nor can die; so the soul and Angels are immortal.

Zanch. de immortal. l. 2. c. 3.

Chap. IV.

That GOD is Infinite, Omnipresent, Eternal.

GOD is truly Infinite in his Nature and Essence, actually and simply by himself, and absolutely he is Infinite. It is a vain conceit, that there cannot be an infinite thing in Act. God is Infinite in Act, yea an Infinite Act, saith Zanchy.

Col. 1. 17. Exod. 40. 32, 35, 37. Psal. 145. 3.

Spiritus infinitus, non corpore; non aliquam quantitate, magnitudine, mole, sed qualitate, virtute, bonitate, & si quid præstantius ab homine de Deo dici vel cogitari potest. Moranus cap. 4. de veritate Relig. Christ. Infinitus absoluta est essentia Dei proprietas quæ neque causa neque mensura ullius terminis finitur. Gomarus. Dupliciter potest aliquid dici infinitum. Primò, In ratione entis, sic Deus est absolutè infinitus, quia Scriptura Divina tribuit ipsi absolutam infinitatem, Psal. 145. 3. & 147. 5. Secundò, In certo genere. Estius.

He is not Infinite,

1. In corporal quantity and extension, but in Essence and Perfection.
2. Not privative, but negative, he hath simply no end.
3. He is Infinite not according to the Etymon of the word, which respects an end only; for he is both without beginning and end; although the word be negative, yet we intend by it a positive Attribute and Perfection.

Privativè Infinitum dicitur, quod finem quidem non habet, sed potest habere. Negativè autem dicitur infinitum, quod simpliciter nec habet, nec habere potest finem ullum. Zanch. de Natura Dei, lib. 2. cap. 6. Quæst. 1.

The Scripture demonstrates God to be Infinite:

1. Affirmatively, Psal. 145. 3.
2. Negatively, in the same place.
3. Comparatively, Job 11. 8. Isa. 40. 12, 15. Dan. 4. 32.

Reason proves this:

The Perfection of God, whatsoever thing hath not an end of its perfection and vertue, that is truly and absolutely Infinite. Infiniteneſſe is to be without bounds, to be unmeasurable, to exceed reason or capacity, it is opposed to Finite.

Infiniteneſſe is that whereby God cannot be limited, measured, or determined of any thing, being the first cause from whom, and the end wherefore all things are made.

Infiniteneſſe is such a property in God, that he is not limited to any time, place, or particular nature and being; or, it is that whereby God is free altogether from all limitation of time, place, or degrees.

God hath no limits of his Essence or Perfections.

[b] All his properties are infinite.

He hath all good things in him in all fulnesse of perfection, above all measure and degrees, yea above all conceivable degrees by us. He hath all wisdom and power, above all that all creatures can conceive and think, Ephes. 3. 20. thus goodnesse which is in him is Infinite, [b] his Love is Infinite, his Mercies are Limitatio est duplex, in natura & natura.

Limitatio in natura in Deum solum non cadit. Omnes enim creaturæ in natura terminum habent. Limitatio vero naturæ, est ad summum hæc in creaturis corporeis locum habet. Sanford. de Defensa Christi ad inferos, l. 2. p. 103.

Infinite

Infinite, and ſo is his Anger. That which is of it ſelf cannot be limited by any thing. Every creature is limited, and hath certain bounds ſet to it by its cauſes, eſpecially the efficient and the matter; but God is no way limited, he hath not any bounds of any kinde, but is altogether Infinite or boundleſſe, Iſa. 40. 12, 15, 17.

Every creature hath a three-fold limitation:

1. Of Kinds of being.
2. Of Degrees of its being.
3. Of Circumſtances of its being.

Firſt, Each thing is ſet in its own rank or order with other things, ſome being of one kind, ſome of another; ſome things are ſimple, ſome compounded, ſome corporeal, ſome incorporeal, ſome things living, ſome things void of life, ſome things ſenſible, and ſome things ſenſleſſe, and ſo in the reſt. The maker of all things hath as it were ſorted them into divers kinds, for the greater beautifying [i] of the whole, and demonſtration of his wiſdom in this variety.

Duplex affectio rem omnem exiſtentem naturaliter ſequitur, locus & ætas, quam durationem noſtrates philoſophi vocant.

Quippe tum alicubi eſſe id quod eſt oportet; tum aliquando. Petavius de Deo. l. 3. *c.*7. [i] Nature triumpheth in nothing ſo much as in diſſimilitude.

Again [k] things of the ſame kind, and of other kinds too, differ in the degrees of being; ſome have lower, ſome higher degrees of what they have, ſome a more lively life, ſome a quicker ſenſe, ſome more power, ſome leſſe, ſome greater degrees of wiſdom.

[k] All creatures have ſuch a meaſure and degree, as the author of them would communicate unto them.

God is not limited to any kind of being, but hath in himſelf all kinds of being, not ſubjectively, but eminently. He [l] hath a being beyond all degree and meaſure, whence all his Properties are Infinite, All-ſufficiency, Omnipotency, Omniſcience, infinite Wiſdom and Truth, and all in him Incomprehenſible and Infinite.

[l] Infinite power is that whereby God can doe more than all creatures can do, yea more than all creatures can conceive he can do; infinite underſtanding by which he knows more than all creatures do know, or can conceive that he doth know.

He is unlimited in regard of Time or Duration, and ſo is Eternal; in regard of place, and ſo is Immenſe or Omnipreſent, in regard of degrees of all things that are in him, and ſo is Perfect. Infinite in ſtability, Immutable in his Power, Omnipotent.

Gods Infiniteneſſe makes all wonderfull, his Mercies are Infinite, his Love Infinite, his Goodneſſe and Excellencies Infinite.

A thing may be ſaid to be Infinite, either abſolutely and in the whole kind of being, ſo God, all good is in him formally or eminently. 2. In ſome certain kind only; as if there were Infinite Quantity, it were only Infinite in the way of a body, it would not contain all other things in it.

From Gods Infiniteneſſe ariſeth his All-ſufficiency, he is enough for himſelf and all things elſe, to make them happy and perfect in their ſeveral kinds; his All-ſufficiency is that whereby God is of himſelf All-ſufficient for himſelf to make himſelf moſt bleſſed, and to ſatisfie all other things, and make them happy in their ſeveral kinds; God hath therefore taken this Name upon him, and by the commemoration of it did comfort Abraham, and encourage him to be his ſervant. Gen. 17.

This one Attribute of Gods All-ſufficiency may anſwer all the ſcruples of a Chriſtian.

But Dr Preſton hath written ſo largely and well of this Attribute, that I ſhall need to ſay but little of it.

His All-ſufficiency conſiſts in three things:

1. He poſſeſſeth all that good which is in any particular creatures at once, and farre more.
2. Hath all good that is imaginable, deſirable, poſſible.
3. He hath goodneſſe enough for himſelf and the creatures too.

God is an All-ſufficient good, becauſe he is a Perfect good. He hath enough in him to supply all the wants, and satisfie all the desires of his people both in this life and that which is to come.

1. To supply wants:

1. He that hath God for his God hath all things, Mark 10. 13. Revel. 21. 7.

2. There could not be a self-sufficiency in the Saints, if there were not an All-sufficiency in God, 2 Cor. 3. 5. but there is a self-sufficiency in them, Phil. 4. 11. 1 Tim. 6. 6.

3. There is enough in God to supply all our wants here:

1. For Provision, he may have all in God, and he needs none else, Jer. 2. 13.

2. Protection, He is a shield, Zech. 9. 12, 13. Psal. 62. 7. Zech. 2. 5.

3. For Pleasure, Job 22. 26. Psal. 37. 4.

4. For Glory and Honour, Psal. 3. 3. Jer. 2. 31, 32.

5. For Society, 1 John 1. 3.

6. For a patern to imitate, Ephes. 5. 1.

7. For reward, Gen. 15. 1.

Secondly, To satisfie all your desires, 1. Here, Jer. 31. 14. 2. In the life to come, Psal. 17. ult.

God in Covenant makes over himself as All-sufficient:

1. He promiseth himself to his people in his All-sufficiency, Psal. 84. 11. & 34. 10. Hos. 14. 5, 6, 7.

2. The people of Israel in the wilderness had neither bread nor water, provision nor protection, yet having an All-sufficient God, they wanted none of these, Deut. 33. 26, 27, 28.

Reasons,

First, His Love, which is the ground and bottome of the Covenant, and of all mercies: Love is bountifull, John 3. 35. 2 Thess. 2. 6. Gods great end in the Covenant of Grace was, his manifestative Glory; if he will have the highest glory, he must make out the highest manifestation, therefore he made over himself, and his All-sufficiency, because he had not a better to bestow.

Secondly, In regard of the insufficiency in all things else for supply, Jerem. 2. 33.

Thirdly, Because God would have the happinesse of the Creature concentred in himself alone, Isa. 26. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 13.

Object. The Angels and Saints see the Essence of God, therefore it is not Infinite, Mat. 18. 10. 1 Cor. 13. 12. 1 John 3. 2.

Answ. 1. We must distinguish between vision and comprehension, God is seen of the Angels and Saints, but not comprehended.

2. The finite understanding knoweth God beatifically, not by the force of Nature, but by a supernatural Illumination of the holy Ghost, and benefit of grace.

Consectaries from Gods infiniteneſſe.

1. This is a terrour to wicked men, his anger and hatred are Infinite, therefore his anger is compared to all things terrible. 2. Serves to reprove their folly who will lose God to get any pleasure or profit, infinite glory and happinesse, for finite things.

2. Exhorts us not to pronounce rashly of his Decrees and Attributes, for this onely can be comprehended of God, that he cannot be comprehended; we must not measure Gods infinite Power and Wisdome by our shallow capacities: The endeavouring to measure the Nature and Decrees of God by our humane reason, hath been one main cause of many desperate errours in the world; therefore Paul, Rom. 11. silenceth high and inquisitive Disputes by this Exclamation, Oh the depth of the Wisdome and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his wayes! See Gen. 18. 17. Isa. 6. 2.

3. What is a sinfull mortall man in comparison of God? Isa. 40. 15, 16, 17. therefore he should humble himself before him, and acknowledge his nothingnesse.

All

All the whole world compared to the Infinite God is but as a point; let us therefore ſtand amazed at the conſideration of this Infiniteneſſe, and ſay with David, Pſ. 8.5. & 86.8.

[a] We ſhould love God intenſively with our chiefeſt affection, and extenſively above all things. He is an infinite Ocean of all Joy and Happineſſe; he is a continual object of Joy and Delight to the Saints and Angels in Heaven, they are not weary of him; our Deſires are fully ſatisfied with him alone that is infinite.

[a] God is infinitely good, therefore deſerves all our love and obedience; the beſt Angel in Heaven cannot love God according to his excellency; we ſhould love him with a love, 1. Of Union. 2. Complaceney. 3. Friendſhip. 4. Dependance.

[b] God is Immenſe or Omnipreſent, Pſal. 139.7,8,9,10. Joſh. 2.11. Job 11.8. Jer. 23.23,24. Immenſity is taken, 1. Largely, ſo it is the ſame with Infiniteneſſe, ſignifying that God is neither meaſured by place or time, nor by any other thing, but is in his own Nature and Eſſence Infinite and Immenſe. Immenſum proprie eſt quod non poſſis metiri. 2. Strictly, ſo it differs from Infiniteneſſe, as the Species from the Genus, there being two kinds of Infiniteneſſe, Immenſity and Eternity.

[b] This Attribute of Gods being every where, is called Immenſity, Omnipreſence or Ubiquity.

[c] Immenſity is ſuch a property of God, by which he cannot be meaſured nor circumſcribed by any place, he fills all places without multiplying or extenſion of his Eſſence.

[c] Immenſitas eſt proprietas Dei qua omnes eſſentiæ terminos excludit, ubique quoad eſſentiam, ſimul in Cœlo & in Terra, imo & extra Cœlum eſt: abſque ulla tamen expanſione vel multiplicatione. Wendelinus Chriſt. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 1.

He is neither ſhut up in any place, nor ſhut out from any place, but is Immenſe, he is without place, and above place, preſent every where, without any extenſion of matter, but in an unſpeakable manner.

He is above all, in all, and through all, Epheſ. 4.6. over all (men) by his power, in all the (Saints) by his Spirit; and through all (the world) by his providence.

[d] The Jewiſh Doctors call God מָקוֹם that is, place, as containing all things himſelf, being not contained of any thing. Rabbini Hamakom cum articulo ה præpoſito numerant inter nomina Dei Leuſdeni Philol. Hebr.

God is every where (ſaith Gregory) by his Eſſence, Preſence and Power, which the Schoolmen have comprized in a barbarous Verſe, Enter, præſenter, Deus hic, & ubique potenter.

1. By his Eſſence, becauſe he fills [d] all places and ſpaces with his Immenſity, 1 King. 8.27. Iſa. 60.1. Acts 17.27.

2. By his Preſence, becauſe all things are preſent to him, and he preſerves and governs them.

3. By his Power and Operation, becauſe he works all in all, 1 Cor. 6.26.

& quidem per antiphraſin, quaſi illocalis, infinitus, qui nullo loco comprehenditur ſed omnibus creaturis locum dat. Leuſdeni Philol. Hebr. explicatum. Deus non ſolum eſt infinitus ratione Eſſentiæ & perfectionis: ſed etiam ratione præſentiæ (ut loquuntur) immo Eſſentiæ ejus nullo ſpatio finito limitari poterat, & hic gradus infinitatis divinæ dicitur Immenſitas. Barl. exerc. l. 6.

Beſides the general way of Gods preſence, there are alſo other ſpecial manners of his preſence, by which he is in a peculiar way onely in ſome creatures. There was a miraculous preſence of the Godhead in the Prophets and Apoſtles, by whom he wrote divers miracles. There is a gracious preſence of him in all his Saints. There is a relative preſence of him in his Church viſible, and in his Ordinances, Exod. 25.8. Numb. 5.3. & 35.24. Deut. 32.12. Pſal. 9.11. & 135.21. Iſa. 8.18. Ezek. 29.45. Joel 3.21. Zech. 2.10,11. & 8.3. Pſal. 74.7. There is a glorious preſence of the God-head in Heaven, 2 Chron. 6.21, 39. 1 Kings 8.30.

This Immenſity and Omnipreſence of the Divine Eſſence, is proved to be eſſential to God.

1. From Scripture, and that

1. Affirmatively, when he is ſaid to be every where preſent. David proves it by a particular enumeration of places, Heaven and the grave, the fartheſt parts of the earth, earth, yea, all things, Pſal. 139.7,8,9,10. He compares places moſt oppoſite together, and ſhewing that God is preſent in them, he underſtands, that he is preſent in the places between, Amos 9.2. Jovis omnia plena.

2. Negatively, When he is denied to be concluded and comprehended in a certain place, 1 King. 8.27. 2 Chron. 2.6. & 6.18. Acts 7.48. & 17.24,27.

3. Symbolically, *Iſa.66. 1. Acts 7.49.

* Deus Comparat ſe Regi, qui tam vaſto ſit corpore ut ejus ſedes ſit in Cœlo: & ſcabellum pedum, in Terra. Zanchius.

2. From Reaſons,

1. From the ſimplicity of the Divine Eſſence, God is a pure act; therefore altogether indiviſible, and therefore he is in every thing, and in every part of every thing, whole and undivided.

2. Whatſoever is in its Eſſence Infinite, that alſo is every where preſent, elſe it ſhould be terminated in place. God is Infinite in his Eſſence and Being, therefore alſo of an infinite preſence.

Deus aut nuſquam eſt & nunquam, aut ubique & ſemper: aut eſt alicubi, & alicubi non, & aliquando, & aliquando non. Sin nuſquam dicitur eſſe & nunquam, oportebit eum nihil omnino eſſe: Si vero tantum alicubi, & aliquando; ergo definitur loco & tempore, ſed quia horum omnium falſitas manifeſta eſt à ſufficiente diviſione; Sequitur quod Deus ubique, & ſemper eſt. Raim. Pug. Fid. Adverſus Jud. 3 part. Diſt. 3. c. 5.

† The Angels are in an ubi though not in a place properly, in Engliſh we cannot ſo well diſtinguiſh theſe words: they are limitted, and confined to ſome ſpace, an Angel cannot be at the ſame time in Heaven and Earth.

k Each creature is limited by place, though ſpirits do not fill up a place by Commenſuration of parts, yet they have a certain compaſs (as I may call it) beyond which their Eſſence extendeth not: they are ſo here, that they are not there; ſo in Heaven, that they are not the ſame time on earth. But God is altogether above place, he is Omnipreſent, not by any material extenſion, but after an incomprehenſible and unexpreſſible manner. He is quite above all place, wholly without, and within all and every place, and that without all local motion or mutation of place. He is every where totally and equally, he was as well in the Jewiſh Synagogues, as in the Temple of Jeruſalem, or Holy of Holies, as well in earth or hell, as in the Heavens in reſpect of his Eſſence.

Spirits are not properly in place (ſay the Schooles) per occupationem, but per operationem, they are there where they act.

Deus ubique eſt ſecundum modum ineffabilem Nazianzenus in orat. ſua 2. de Theol. dicit diſquiſitionem de modo quo Deus ubique eſt, quaſi ſtultum arboris veſtra, eſſe nimis curioſam putat, Sanſordus de deſcenſu Chriſti ad Inferos, l. 2. p. 112.

Gods being in every place, is not firſt by multiplication; there is not a multiplication of his being, as ſoaves were multiplied, ſo that they held out to do that which otherwiſe they could not, for then there ſhould be many Divine Eſſences; nor ſecondly by diviſion, as if part of his nature, were in one part of the world, and part in another; but he is wholly whereſoever he is. Nor thirdly, by commixtion, as if he came into compoſition with any creature. He is not the air or fire, but he is every where effectively with his Eſſence and Being, repletively he fills all places, heaven and earth: Yet he fills not up a place as a body doth; but is preſent every where, by being without limitation of place; ſo that he coexiſts with every creature. He is every where ineffably; where any creature is, there is he more than the creature; and where no creature is, there is he too: All the ſins that we commit, are done in his preſence, and before his face, Iſa. 65.3. Pſal. 51.4. as if a Thief ſhould ſteal, the Judge looking on. We ſhould ſet the Lord therefore alwayes before us, as David, Pſal. 16.8. We ſhould be comforted in troubles, and patient, *Phil.*4.5. a child will not care ſo long as he is in his fathers preſence, Pſal. 23.4

There is a threefold preſence of God.

1. Natural, Jer. 23.24.

2. Gracious, Pſal. 34.18. and *Pſal.*42.2. and 57.15.

3. Glorious, Pſal. 16.11.

The main thing to be looked after in Ordinances, is Gods preſence in them, Pſal. 63.1,2.

Reaſons:

1. This is the end of Ordinances, that the Saints may have fellowſhip with God in them, 1 John 1.3.

2. The

2. The Lord mainly commands this, Pſal. 105. 4.

3. He promiſeth this chiefly, Exod. 20. 24.

4. This is the main thing the Saints have propoſed to themſelves in Ordinances; Pſal. 27. 4, 8.

5. This is the chief thing threatned by God to deprive them of, Ezek. 8. 6. Hoſ. 9. 12.

6. This is the main thing the Saints have lamented and deſired to be reſtored to, Eſay 53. 1.

In the word preache, Acts 10. 33. heard 1 John 3. 4. meditated of, Pſal. 1. 2. compared with Pſal. 104. 34. conferred of, Luke 24. 14, 15. in the Sacraments, Baptiſm, Luke 3. 15, 16. Lords Supper, 1 Cor. 11. 25, 26, 29. prayer; therefore it is called a ſeeking of Gods praiſes, Pſal. 92. 2. diſcipline or Church-order, Col. 2. & 1 Cor. 14. 33.

Of Gods ſpecial, gracious, comfortable preſence in his Church. See Dr Rainolds on Hoſ. 9. 12.

Object. God is ſaid to deſcend and aſcend.

God is ſaid to deſcend and aſcend two wayes.

Anſw. This hinders not his being every where.

1. He is ſaid to deſcend, as often as by any viſible ſhape objected, he teſtifieth his preſence, as Gen. 18. 21. Exod. 3. 8. when God withdraws that preſence, he is ſaid to aſcend, as Gen. 35. 13.

2. When God by the deſtruction of his Enemies, and deliverance of his own, teſtifieth to his Church that he is with it on earth, Iſa. 64. and the contrary, Pſal. 68. 19.

Cameron prælect. in Pſal. 68. 19.

Object. If God be every where, how is he then ſaid to dwell in Heaven? Pſal. 2 4. From thoſe places, Iſa 66. 1. Mat. 6. 9. Vorſtius thus argues, The Scripture placeth God there, therefore he is there onely.

Anſw. In reſpect of his Eſſence, God is every where, and in every thing, as well as in Heaven; but he doth more manifeſt his glory, wiſdome, power and goodneſs, and beſtows his grace more liberally on his Angels and Elect in Heaven, than he doth here below.

Pſal. 103. 49. and 115. 3. Matth. 6. 9. John 14. 2. Acts 7. 49.

Cùm Scriptura dicunt Deum eſſe in Cœlo, hoc intelligendum eſt poſitivè ſolum & affirmativè, quod ibi ſit: Non excluſivè, quaſi alibi non ſit, 1 Reg. 8. 27, 2. Deus eſt in Cœlo ſecundum excellentiam, nempe modo eminentiori, Angelis & Sanctis revelatus. Barlow exercit. 6. Vide Perav. De Deo, l. 3. c. 7, 8, 9, 10.

Object. How can God be ſaid to depart from man, if he be every where.

Anſw. He departs not in reſpect of his Eſſence, but in reſpect of the manifeſtation of his preſence.

The Schoolmen ſay, God is five wayes in the Creatures:

1. In the Humanity of Chriſt, by hypoſtatical union.
2. In the Saints, by knowledge and love.
3. In the Church, by his eſſence and direction.
4. In Heaven, by his Majeſty and glory.
5. In Hell, by his vindicative juſtice.

1. This may teach the godly to be ſincere and upright, becauſe they walk before God. Gen. 17. 1. he is preſent with them, underſtands their ſecret thoughts and imaginations, Pſal. 139. 7, 8. Jer. 23. 23, 24. This ſhould curb them from committing ſecret ſins, and incourage them to perform private duties, Mat. 6. 6. approving themſelves to their father, who ſeeth in ſecret. Solitarineſs ſhould not imbolden us to ſin, nor hinder us from well-doing. It was Joſephs reaſon to his Miſtreſs, How can I do this great evil? though they were alone, God was preſent.

Conſectaries from Gods Immenſity, or Omnipreſence. Job 31. 14.

Two Religious men took two contrary courſes with two lewd women, whom they were deſirous to reclaim from their ill courſe of life; the one came to one of the women, as deſirous of her company, ſo it might be with ſecrecy, and when ſhe had brought him to a cloſe room, that none could prie into, then he told her, that all the bolts and bars which were, could not keep God out. The other deſired to accompany with the other woman openly in the ſtreet, which when ſhe rejected jected as a mad request, he told her, It was better to do it in the eyes of a multitude, than of God.

Nos Protestantes omnes dicimus contradictionem esse inter has duas propositiones, Datur purgatorium, & Solus sanguis Christi purgat nos ab omni peccato: illam propositionem Romanenses contradicere huic quæ est verbi Dei.

2. This serves to confute the Lutherans, who hold Ubiquity to be communicated to Christs Body, and therefore they say his Body is in the Sacrament, and every where else, because it is assumed by God; but this is false; for the reason of Gods Omnipresence is the infiniteness of his Nature, and therefore it can be no more communicated to the Body of Christ than the Godhead can; for his humane nature might as well be eternall as every where. Christs Body is a finite Creature, and though it be glorified, yet it is not deified. It is an incommunicable Attribute of the Deity, to be in many places at one and the same time, Totus Christus est ubique, but not totum Christi, whole Christ is every where, but not the whole of Christ, Totus Christus est homo, sed non totum Christi, whole Christ suffered, dyed and rose again, but not the whole of Christ; that is, both Natures.

Sic nos Reformati dicimus Enunciationem hanc Corpus Christi est ubique, non solùm ideo falsam esse, quia ibi contradictio in adjecto in vi Enunciationis, sed etiam quia ista Enunciatio Corpus Christi est ubique contradicat multis Enunciationibus Scripturæ, quæ quidem non formaliter ei, sed tamen contradicunt, ut Christus ascendit in Cælum, Christus est venturus, &c. Vedel. Ration Theol. lib. 3. cap 7. Some when they hear God is essentially every where, and in every Creature, labour to comprehend this great mystery, and inferre, that every Creature is God; but God is not divided nor mixed with any Creature: All Creatures compared to him are as nothing.

3. Let us esteem God a greater good than any Creature; friends are distant one from another, God is with us in our journies and families. He onely is the object of Prayer, for he is every where to hear thee, and so are not Angels. God himself comforts his people, by promising his gracious presence, Gen. 46. 4. Exod. 3. 12. Josh. 1. 9. Isa. 43. 1.

4. No man by wit or policy, flight or hiding himself, can escape the hand of God, for he is every where present, Amos 9. 2.

5. This is a terror to the secret devisers of wickedness, their plots are discovered.

God is Eternal. That is propperly called Eternal which is alwayes the same.

[f] Boetius defines Eternity to be Interminabilis vitæ tota simul & perfecta possessio. l. 5. de consol. pros. 6.

Eternity [f] is a being without limitation of time, or a being without beginning, ending, or succession. Time is the continuance of things past, present and to come, all time hath a beginning, a vicissitude, and an end, or may have, but Gods Essence is bounded by none of these hedges. Time is Nunc fluens, but Eternity is Nunc stans, a standing moment.

Zanchius saith, Æternum propriè illud dici, quod principio, & fine omni carens, idem semper est. The Schoolmen define it to be Duratio interminabilis, indivisibilis & independens; interminabilis quia excludit terminum à quo & ad quem; indivisibilis quia excludit omnem successionem temporis; independens quia excludit omnem imperfectionem & mutationem. Philosophi distinguunt inter æternitatem, ævum & tempus: Et æternitatem principio & fine carentem tribuunt soli Deo; Ævum solo fine carens, creaturis nunquam defuturis: Tempus nec principio nec fine carens creaturis aliquando defuturis. Wendelinus. Est duratio semper præsens, est unum perpetuum Hodie, quod non transit in præteritum aut futurum, Dyrell. de Æternitate Considerat. 1. Sect. 1. Vide Basilium Exercitat 5. & Dr Prid. Lect. 18. de Christi debitu. Isa. 43. 13. Job 36. 26. Simpliciorum vel æternum propriè dicitur, quod neque initium ut esset habuit, neque cessare unquam potest esse: Pezavius ex Origene De Deo, lib. 3. cap. 3. Vide plura ibid. & cap. 4, 5, 6.

He made time it self, he is therefore before all things, and so with out beginning, therefore he is called the first and the last.

First, He is without beginning, he is before time, beyond time, behind time, as it were, and above all circumscription of time. From everlasting to everlasting thou art God. He is what he is in one infinite moment of being, as I may speak. I am Alpha and Omega, Rev. 1. 8. In the beginning God made all things, and he that made all things could not have a beginning himself. What hath no beginning, can have no succession nor end. We cannot properly say of God, that he hath been, or that he shall be, but he is. To him all things are present, though in themselves they have succession.

He is an everlasting King, everlastingly powerful and glorious; as the conclusion of the Lords Prayer sheweth.

He

He is called the King eternal, 1 Tim. 5.17. and the eternal God, Rom. 16.26. the Maker of times, Heb. 1.2. he inhabiteth eternity, Isa. 67.15. God onely is properly and absolutely eternal: Angels and mens souls are said to be eternal, à posteriori, or à parte post, God à priori & à posteriori, ex parte ante & post, since he hath neither beginning, succession, nor end.

The Scripture confirms this Eternity of God divers wayes:

1. With a simple and plain asseveration, Gen. 21.33. Isa. 40.28 & 57.15. Dan. 6. 26. Rom. 16.26.

2. By denying to him time and succession, Job 36.26. Isa. 43.10. Psal. 90.5. 2 Pet. 3.8.

3. By Attributing to him eternal properties and operations; his mercy is said to endure for ever, Psal. 103. 17. & 136. His purposes are eternal, Ephes. 3. 11.

Eternal counsel is attributed to him, Psal. 133.11. Eternal Kingdome, Exod. 15.18. Eternal power, Dan. 6.26. Rom. 1.20. Eternal glory, 1 Pet. 5.10. his Dominion is an everlasting dominion, Dan. 7. 14. his Righteousnes is everlasting, Psal. 119.142. and his truth.

4. By a metaphorical description, days and years are attributed to him; but most distinct from our days and years, Job 10 5. Dan. 7.9,22. He is called The ancient of days, Psal. 102.28. thy years are not consumed.

1 Sam. 15.29. he is called eternity it self; Christ is called The father of Eternity, Isa. 9. 6. most emphatically, to signifie that he is Eternity it self, and the Author of it. The French stile God in their Bibles l' Eternel, because he onely is perfectly Eternal. Heb. 9. 14. Thou Lord remainest for ever, say the Scriptures often, Prov. 23. 25. he was said to be before the world, Psal. 90. 2. Eph. 1. 4.

Reasons.

1. God is the best that is, therefore it must needs follow that he is an eternal Essence; for that which is eternal, is better than that which is not.

2. Else he should depend on some other thing, if he were not eternal, and then he were not God.

3. If he were not eternal, he must have a beginning, and then something else must give it him, and so be better than he.

4. God created all things, even time it self, Heb. 1. 2. he is therefore before all things, and without beginning, Rom. 1. 2. and whatsoever was before time, must needs be eternal. Of necessity there must be a first cause, and therefore must be something without a beginning.

5. He is the Author and Giver of eternal life to those that have it, therefore he must needs be eternal himself; for whatsoever can give eternity, that is eternal.

Object. If God were eternal, where was he before the world was? and what did he before he made all things? * and why did he make the world no sooner than a few thousand years since? * Vide Augustini Confess. l. 11. c. 12.

Answ. These are curiosities, but for answer, as he was of himself, so was he in and with himself. He is that himself, to and in himself, which to us our being, time and place are found to be. 2. He injoyes himself, and his own happinesse. 3. He made the world no sooner, because it did not please him. Agebat ante mundum, & sine mundo, quod nunc cum mundo, in sua fœlicitate seipso contentus, & sufficiens, plenus bonorum omnium, & ab æterno constituit mundum procreare, atque ea condere quibus beatitudinem communicaret suam: sed tunc, non antea, nec post, quia sic illi est visum, Ludov. Viv. de veritate Fidei Christianæ, lib. 1. cap. 10.

Object. Is not the Creation of the world past with God, when he made it in six dayes, and the day of judgement to come?

Answ. Gods acts are twofold:

1. Immanent, terminated in himself, Eph. 1. 9. these have no succession, God plotted not, nor devised one thing after another. Compare Gods Eternity with the duration of the creature, 1 Tim. 6.10. Psal. 7. 27.

2. Outward, in and upon the Creature, as Creation, Providence, Vocation, Sanctification, Glorification, Phil. 1. 6. there we must distinguish between the action it self, and the work. Gods act in Creating is the act of his will, that such a Creature ſhould ſtand up in time, Creatio is but Eſſentia Divina relatione ad Creaturam, Aquinas. But if we conſider opus, the work it ſelfe, ſo the Creatures have a being one after another.

Fore & fuisse non est in eo, omnia sunt præsentia, cui hoc esse nostrum vix competit, Ludov. Viv. de verit. Fid. Christ. lib. 2. cap. 24.

The Creature is limited by the circumſtance of time, by which it hath its being meaſured out [illegible]ere by parcels, paſt, preſent and to come; it had beginning, hath ſucceſſion, and may have an end. The moſt glorious Angel, as well as a worm, is th[illegible] limited by time; once he was not, then he began to be; that which is paſt, is gone, and that which is to come is not yet, and he hath but a little time preſent. But Gods eſſence hath no beginning, hath no ſucceſſion, can have no end. We cannot ſay of it properly, It was or ſhall be, but alone It is, Exod. 3.14. John 8. 58. he hath his whole being at once; not ſome after, ſome by parcels, one following another, Gen. 21. 13. and 23. 33. Pſal. 90. 2, 24. Iſa. 57. 15. Eternity is the continual exiſtence and duration of the Divine Eſſence. The Creatures being is a flux or perpetual flowing from one moment to another. God is a being above time, hath his being meaſured by time, but is wholly eternal.

Gnolam from Gnalam, becauſe the beginning and end of eternity lieth hid.

Conſectaries from Gods eternity.

1. Gods love and election are alſo eternal, and he will give eternal life to all believers. That which is eternal, is perfect at once, therefore he ſhould be adored and obeyed, his counſel followed. Old men are honoured for their wiſdome. God ſaith to Job, Where waſt thou when I laid the foundation of the earth?

Who can ſpeak of eternity, without a Soleciſm, or think thereof, without an extaſie, Browns Religio Medici. 1. We ſhould aſcribe Eternity to God, Job 36. 30. Deut. 32. 3. Pſal. 68. 34. 2. Endeavour to make it known to others, Pſal. 145. 12, 13. 3. We ſhould make it the ground of our confidence, Iſa. 26. 4.

Pſal. 48. 13, 14. Iſa. 46. 4. Hab. 1. 12, 13.

2. Let it be a foundation of comfort to us, as Pſal. 102. 12. though friends dye, goods be taken away, God remains for ever, he fails not.

3. It muſt incourage the people of God to ſerve him, and do his will faithfully, for he will recompence it; whatever we hazard or loſe, he liveth for ever to requite, Iſa. 54. 8. 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18.

Zeuxis the Painter, was exact and curious, becauſe he did pingere aeternitati. Meurſius writes upon all his Books, Æternitatem cogita, think of eternity. We are to pray, live, ſpeak, and do all for eternity. Crede ſtulte, we æternitati. Cornel. à Lap. in Evangel. Drexelius a Jeſuite hath written well of Eternity. Pſal 117. 2. and 146. 6. Heb. 13. 8. Precious are the ſerious thoughts of eternity; the treaſures of eternity are opened in the times of the Goſpel. 2 Tim. 1. 10.

4. It is a terror to the wicked, he ſhall be ever to make them everlaſtingly miſerable; as Heaven is an eternal Palace, ſo Hell is an everlaſting Priſon. He whom thou diſhonoureſt, is an eternal God, then all thy ſinnes are alwayes preſent before him, no ſinne paſt or to come. When Chriſt was made a Curſe for us, God looked on him as bearing all the ſinnes paſt, preſent and to come of all his Elect, Iſaiah 53. 6. and he chargeth the guilt of all ſinnes at once upon the damned in Hell: He looks on your ſinnes now, as he will hereafter, chargeth them all on thee at once, as on Chriſt, and the damned, there is nothing to come to him. 2. His preparations of wrath have been from eternity, as of glory for his people, Mat. 25. 41. how dreadfull will the execution be, Iſa. 30. 33. and God bears with the ſins of men ſo long, becauſe he hath eternity to reckon with them in.

5. We muſt carefully and earneſtly ſeek him, place our happineſſe in him that is everlaſting, all other things are fleeting; if we get his favor once, we ſhall never loſe it, he will be an everlaſting friend, his truth and mercy remaines for ever.

6. Every one ſhould reſolve in his own thoughts, and covenant with God, to ſpend but one half quarter of an hour every day, in meditating of eternity; renew theſe thoughts every day, This body of mine, though frail and mortal, it muſt live for ever; and this ſoul of mine, it muſt live eternally, Nulla ſat is magna ſecuritas ubi periclitatur aeternitas, mind ſuch things that are eternal, Col. 3. 2. 2 Cor. 4. 18. 1. Upon this inch of time eternity depends, Eccl. 9. 10. Joh. 9. 14. 2. God ſent you into the world for this end, that you might provide for eternity, Luke 16. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 19. Eternal life is one of the principall Articles of our Creed, 1 Tim. 1. 16. Leſſius in his Divine Perfections ſaith, That Æternitas efficit bonum infinitè melius, & malum infinitè pejus. Duration and Æviternity do make a good infinitely better, and an evill infinitely worſe.

CHAP. V.

Chap. V.

That GOD is Immutable.

GOD is in himself, and in his own Nature Immutable, Numb. 23.19. 1 Sam. 15.29. His immutability (saith Petavius, De Deo, l. 3. c. 1.) depends on his simplicity and unity. See more there, and Chap. 2d.

Immutability is that whereby any thing in its essence, existence or operation is unchangeable. Gods unchangeableness is that whereby God in his essence, properties and decrees, is unchangeable.

The Scripture proves the Immutability of God, both affirmatively, Exod. 3. 6. Psal. 102. 29. and negatively, Mal. 3.16. James 1.17.

Immutability is twofold:

1. Independent and absolute, and that is onely in God.
2. Dependent and Comparative, this may belong to some creatures, which they have from God, but yet infinitely different.

1. God is unchangeable originally and of himself, these from him.
2. In the manner, Gods is in his essence Immutable, that and his being are all one, therefore he is both potentially and actually so; the creatures are onely actually.
3. God is so from eternity, they onely from their first being.

Est Deus, quantus quantus est (si ita loqui licet) omnino & sua natura immutabilis: idem semper manens Zanch. De natura Dei, lib. 2. cap. 4. Dicamus Deum immutabilem non modo mutatione substantiali, quia esse, & vivere, non modo nunquam desinet, (quod & Angelis competit, & animabus rationalibus) sed & fieri non potest, ut desinat. Dicimus etiam ne accidentalis mutationis capacem esse, quia transferretur à potentia ad actum aliquem accidentalem Twis. Animadvers. in Collat. Arm. cum Jun. proposit. 6. Sect. 3. Vide Aquin. part. 1. Quæst. 9. Artic. 1, 2. Quæst. 9. Art. 7. Mutari propriè id dicitur, quod aliter se habet, atque habebat antea: vel quod status sui vicissitudinem patitur. Petavius De Deo Deique proprietatibus, lib. 3. cap. 1.

All other things are subject to change and alteration, they may lose what they had, and attain something which before they had not; even the immortall Spirits are thus mutable, they may fall into sin, be annihilated; but in God there is no change, he is what he is, alwayes the same, void of all mutation, corruption, alteration, and local motion, Psal. 90. 2. & 102. 26, 27. 1 Tim. 1. 17. Psal. 110. 4. Heb. 1. 11. & 6. 2.

John 4. 18. And his Angels he charged with folly, the good Angels with possible, though not actuall folly.

A reasonable Creature may be changed five wayes:

1. In respect of existence, if it exist sometimes, and sometimes not.
2. In respect of place, if it be moved from one place to another.
3. In respect of accidents, if it be changed in quantity or quality.
4. In respect of the knowledge of the understanding, as if it now think that to be true, which before it judged to be false.
5. In respect of the purpose of will, if it now decree to do something, which before it decreed not to do.

* Gerh. loc commune Martinius de Deo, & Wendelinus Christ. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 1. Ps. 120. 27, 28.

God is not changed any of these wayes:

Not the first, because he is eternal, neither beginning nor ever ceasing to exist.

Not the second, because he is present every where, not newly beginning to exist in any place.

Not the third, because God is a Simple Essence, and there is no accident in him.

Not the fourth, because he is Omniscient, and cannot be deceived in his knowledge. Heb. 4. 13.

Not the fifth, because he changeth not his decrees, since he most wisely decrees all things.

God is unchangeable every way:

Scholæ Porſtianæ judicio, Deus non quidem eſſentia, ſed voluntate mutabilis eſt.

1. In Eſſence or Being, Exod. 3. 14. he cannot be changed into another nature, neither can that nature which he hath, be corrupted and decay.

2. In eſſential properties, his mercy endureth for ever, Pſal. 103. 17. in his power, Eſay 26. 4. in his love, Jer. 31. 3. he doth not love and after hate.

Periculoſum Thema, adversâ fronte pugnans cum Scriptura, Num. 23. v. 19. Prov. 19. 21. Brochm. Syſt. Theol. Artic. 3. de Deo & S S. Trin. cap. 3. Quæſt. 3. Vide plura ibid.

Iſa. 46. 10.

3. In his will and counſel, Pſal. 33. 11. Rom. 11. 29. The counſel of the Lord ſhall ſtand, Prov. 19. 21.

4. In place, the Sun runs from one place to another, but God doth not remove from one place to another; but is alwayes where he was, and ſhall be alwayes, viz. In himſelf.

5. In his Word and Promiſes, Iſa. 14. 24. Numb. 23. 19. Luke 21. 33. 2 Cor. 1. 24. Rom. 4. 6. In his Oath and Covenant, Heb. 6. 17, 18.

Mat 5. 18.

6. In his Gifts and Graces, Rom. 11. 29.

Reaſons,

First, From his Perfection; all change is a kind of imperfection; there is indeed a change corruptive and perfective; but the perfective alteration ſuppoſeth the ſubject to be imperfect.

Secondly, He is uncompounded, therefore altogether Immutable, a pure act.

Thirdly, He is truly and properly Eternal, therefore Immutable; for he is truly Eternal, who is alwayes the ſame, without beginning, change or end.

Fourthly, If God ſhould change, then either he muſt change for the better, and then he was not beſt and perfect before; or for the worſe, and then he is not beſt now.

If he ſhould be changed, it muſt be from ſome other thing ſtronger than himſelf, and there is none ſuch. Nothing without him can change him, becauſe he is Omnipotent; and nothing within him, for there is no ignorance in his mind, inconſtancy in his will, nor impotency in his power.

Object. God doth repent, Gen. 6. 6. 1 Sam. 15. 11. 2 Sam. 24. 16. Pſal. 135. 14. Jer. 26. 13. & 18. 8. To repent imports a change.

[a] Cum nos pœnitet, deſtruimus quod fecimus. Sic Deus pœnituiſſe dicitur ſecundum ſimilitudinem operationis, in quantum hominem quem fecerat, perdiluvium à terra facie delevit. Aquinas Quæſt. 19. Artic. 7. parte prima.

Anſw. God is not ſaid properly to repent; but after the manner of [a] men, not affectivè, but effectivè. God doth that which men uſe to do when they repent, they forbear to do what they have done, and do the contrary, change their actions; Gods repenting of the evil in thoſe places, is a putting on a reſolution not to do the evil he had threatned, or not to perſiſt in doing that which he had begun to do. There is a change in the creature, but no change in God, either in reſpect of his Nature or Decree, therefore in other places it is ſaid, he doth not repent; that is, not alter or change his mind. God wils [b] a change, but changeth not his will. So the Schools from the Maſter of the ſentences, and he from St. Auguſtine. The change is in us, not God; as houſes and trees ſeem to move to them which are in a Ship, but the Ship moves, and they ſtand firm. One may with the ſame will continuing immutable (ſaith Aquinas) will that now, this thing be done, and after the contrary; but the will ſhould be changed, if one began to will, what he willed not before.

[b] Mutat facta, non mutat conſilia. Greg. Aliud eſt mutare voluntatem, aliud velle mutationem. Aquinas Quæſt. 19. Artic. Septimo parte ult.

Object. God promiſeth and threatneth ſome things which come not to paſſe, 2 Kin. 20. 1. Jonah 3. 4.

[c] Jer. 18. 8. & 26. 2, 3.

[c] Anſw. Thoſe threatnings and promiſes were not abſolute, but conditional; and howſoever the condition was uncertain in reſpect of men, yet it was moſt certain in reſpect of God. His promiſes are made with condition of faith and obedience,

Deut.

Deut. 28. 13. and his threatnings with an exception of converſion and repentance, Pſal. 7. 2.

Object. God is reconciled with men, with whom he was offended before.

Anſw. The object is changed, God is ſtill the ſame; as the Sun which was troubleſom to ſore eyes, is pleaſant to them being healed; the Sun here is not changed, but their eyes.

Object. Why are Prayers or means, if God be immutable? why do I pray or hear?

Anſw. God Immutably wills both the end and the means, and therefore as he wills thy pardon, ſo he wills thy prayer.

Object. God created the world, and ſo Chriſt was incarnate, and made man; now he that was made ſomething he was not before, or did make ſomething he made not before, ſeems to be changed. He is a man, he was not ſo once; he is a Creator, he was not ſo from Eternity.

Anſw. Chriſt did only aſſume and take to himſelf an humane Nature, he was not changed into it. Creation is nothing but Gods will from Eternity, that the world ſhould exiſt in time, ſo that the creature hath ſomething now, which it had not before, but Gods will hath not. Wendelinus Chriſt. Theol. l. 1. c. 1.

God is not changed any way, though he change his actions according to his good pleaſure.

Conſectaries from Gods Immutability. 1 Sam. 15. 18, 19.

Firſt, This is terrible to wicked men, God is unchangeable, which hath threatned to curſe them, and bring deſtruction upon them; they muſt change, or elſe there is no repealing of the curſe. The wicked hope he will change, the godly fear he will change.

Secondly, It comforts the godly, to whom he hath made many promiſes, Num. 23. 23. Heb. 13. 5. He is conſtant and will perform them. He told Adam, That the ſeed of the woman ſhould break the Serpents head. He was long, but ſure, for it was fulfilled at laſt. His Covenant is everlaſting, Iſa. 55. 3. I am God and change not, therefore you are not conſumed, Mal. 3. 6. we ſhould labour for Gods love, it is a freehold, and like himſelf, Immutable; Whom he loves once, he loves for ever. Gods people ſhall never fall from Grace, never be wholly overcome of Temptations. Adam ſupported himſelf with that one promiſe. Gods promiſes are faithfull and firm words. What good thing the Lord hath promiſed, what grace or privilege (as Chriſtians) any ever received, or ſuccour found, the ſame may the faithfull look for.

The world is like to a rolling wheel, Ezek. 10. 13. ſubject to many Changes. Monarchies and Commonwealths are full of rotation; the Inhabitants, their Religion, Policy, Manners, Languages, Cities, Churches, the primitive Churches, the Church of Jeruſalem, the Church at Antioch, the Aſian Churches are all gone. Families and Perſons.

A godly mans life and happineſſe is unchangeable, 1 John 2. 17. It is

1. A freedom from commotions and diſturbances.
2. He enjoyes peace and ſerenity of ſpirit, Iſa. 26. 2. & 38. 17. Phil. 4. 7.
3. He hath ſatisfaction, Prov. 14. 14.
4. He enjoyes an evenneſſe and uniformity in his life.
5. There is a certainty and perpetuity of this life, Prov. 10. 25.

Reaſons,

1. The greateſt happineſſe is the happineſſe of the ſoul; the ſoul makes a reaſonable creature; the ſoul of a godly man is in ſafety.
2. Becauſe the happineſſe of a Saint lies in ſpiritual things, in holineſſe, in the favour of God, Pſal. 119. 45. Communion with him. The happineſſe of the Saints and Angels conſiſts in the operations of their underſtandings and wils.
3. Becauſe a Saint ſo farre as he is a Saint, lives in an immoveable center, the glory of God.
4. All things ſhall work together for good, Jer. 32. 40. Rom. 8. 38. the greateſt good is to promote the ſalvation of the ſoul.
5. He lives upon an unchangeable God, Gen. 15. 1.

6. Becauſe

6. Because of the unchangeable Covenant, 2 *Sam.*23.5. *Jer.*32.40.

7. Because his great hope lies in eternal life, *Col.*1.5. 1 John 2.25. and he hath the beginning of it also here, 1 John 5.11.

Gal.6.9. 2 Tim.3.14. 1 Cor.15.ult. Queen Elizabeths word was Semper eadem.

Thirdly, We should imitate Gods immutability in a gracious way, be constant in our love to God and men, in our promises and good purposes; as the Martyr said, Rawlins you left me, and Rawlins you finde me; we should pray for the establishment of our faith and patience. In our Oaths, Vows, *Eccles.*5.4. In the truths of Jesus Christ, *Heb.*13.4. In the practice of holinesse.

Fourthly, We should admire the glorious Nature of God; for what an Infinite glorious God must he be, which hath had all that happinesse and glory from eternity? 2. Worship the true God, because he is Immutable, and we shall be so hereafter, being made most like to him; *Psal.*102.27.

Fifthly, It confutes the Eutychians and Ubiquitaries, which held, That the God-head became flesh. Can a Spirit be a body, and both visible and invisible?

Sixthly, It may comfort us in the many changes in the world: There is,

1. A beauty and harmony in all Gods providences, *Deut.*32.4. *Psal.*145.17.

2. He is still carrying on his great ends, the glory of his Name, and the good of his people, John 12.28. *Jer.*32.40.

3. God still leaves us himself, his love and all-sufficiency, to live upon. The Saints in Heaven live on these.

We should labour to get a Covenant-interest in the unchangeable God by getting an interest in Christ. I dare not think on God (said Luther) Nisi indutus Christo, and in Christ, by faith and love to him and his members.

Chap. VI.

That GOD is Great in his Nature, Workes, Authority, a necessary Essence, Independent, wholly One.

Deut.32.3. GOD is exceeding Great, 1 Kin.8.42. 2 Sam.7.22. *Psal.*95.3. & 96.4. & 99.2,3. & 145.3. *Tit.*2.13. God is great and greatly to be praised, and who is so great as our God? He is great,

Nihil magnum, nisi magnus Deus.

1. In his Nature and Essence.
2. In his Works.
3. In his Authority.

We read of Alexander and Antiochus and Pompey, and Charles the Great, the Great Turk, and Great Mogol, but what are these in comparison of the Great God?

His name is Great, *Jer.*10.6,11. *Josh.*7.9. his power is Great, Psalm 147.5. his acts are Great, *Psal.*111.1. his judgements are Great, *Exod.*7.4. he is Great in counsel, *Jer.*32.19. and mighty works, *Deut.*32.4.

There is a double Greatnesse,

Of Gods Perfection.

1. Of quantity or bulk, and that is an attribute of a body, by which it hath very large bodily dimensions, as a mountain is a great substance, the Sunne a great body; and this cannot be found in God, who is not a body, but an Immaterial Essence.

2. Of

2. Of Perfection, Worth and Vertue, and that is an abundance of all excellencies and largeneſſe of whatſoever makes to perfection of being, and this is in God. He is ſo perfect every way that he ſtands in need of nothing. God is abſolutely and ſimply perfect, becauſe he hath all things which are to be deſired for the chiefeſt felicity.

Greatneſſe is attributed to God metaphorically, and denoteth an incomprehenſible and immeaſurable largeneſſe of all excellencies. God is that being which is more perfect than all other beings, than whom no thing can be better or more perfect. So the Schoolmen.

The word perfect ſignifies,

1. That which is without ſpot, blemiſh or defect; and thus God and his Law are ſaid to be perfect.

2. They are ſaid to be perfect, who have profited more in the knowledge of Chriſt crucified, than others: And this is a comparative perfection, in reſpect of thoſe young Chriſtians that are newly entered into the ſchool of Chriſt.

3. He is perfect in the phraſe of Scripture, whoſe heart is entire and whole with God, though they be ſtained with ſome imperfections. Thus Noah, Job, Hezekiah, Aſa are perfect. Mr Balls Power of Godlineſſe, lib. 1. chap. 5. See more there.

Gods perfection comprehends all his other excellencies whatſoever. Leſſius entitleth his Book concerning the Attributes, De Perfectionis Divinis.

God is perfect:

Firſt, In the higheſt degree of perfection, ſimply without any reſpect or compariſon.

Secondly, He is perfect in all kinds, 1 John 1.5. John ſaith, He is light, in which there is no darkneſſe, [a] that is, Perfect and pure, without the leaſt mixture of the contrary, the author and cauſe of all perfections in all the creatures, they are all in him, but more perfectly, and in a perfecter manner. God is moſt abſolutely perfect, Job 22.2. Pſal. 16.2. Mat. 5.48.

[a] The Apoſtle by an Hebrew pleonaſm, ſaith the ſame thing twice, illuſtrating it by the contrary. Reaſons of Gods Perfection. 1. That which is the chiefeſt Being and Independent, is moſt perfect. 2. That which is Infinite in Eſſence, can want nothing. 3. The more ſimple a thing is, the more perfect.

The words in Scripture attributed to God, which ſignifie this, are

1. Schaddai, which is as much as one ſufficient to help himſelf, or one that gives nouriſhment to all other things, and therefore (Gen. 17.1.) when God was to make a Covenant with Abraham, to leave all earthly things, and ſo truſt in him only, he brings this argument, that he is ſuch a ſufficient God.

2. Gomer: The Verb is uſed five times in the Pſalms; [b] as much as perfect from the effect, becauſe God doth continually preſerve to the end.

3. Tom, Job 37.16. It ſignifieth both Simple and Perfect.

4. Calil, à Col. omnis, that in which all good things are.

[b] Pſal. 7.10. & 7.6,8. & 137.9. Pſal. 56.3. & 11.1,

God is perfect:

1. Eſſentially, he is perfect in and by himſelf, containing in him all perfections eminently, Mat. 5.48. he hath all needfull to a Deity. Rom. 12.2.

2. Nothing is wanting to him, he hath no need of any other thing out of himſelf, Job 22.2,3. Pſal. 16.2.

Perfect in the general, is that to which nothing is wanting, therefore that is moſt perfect, to which agreeth no imperfection.

3. Originally, he is the cauſe of all perfection; What haſt thou, which thou haſt not received? Jam. 1.17.

4. Operatively, all his works are perfect, Deut. 32.4.

A thing is perfect:

1. Negative, which wanteth nothing which is due by nature to its integrity.

2. Rela-

2. Privativè, which wanteth no perfection, and ſo God onely is Perfect.

Little works of Nature and of Providence have a greatneſſe in them, conſidered, as done by God. 2 Sam. 22.31. All Gods works are perfect, Gen. 1.31. Alphonſus was wont to ſay, If he had been of counſel with God in the making of his works, he ſhould have made ſome of them melius & ordinatius. Ezek. 36.23. Job 38.34,35,37. Iſa. 40.12. Elihu alledgeth Gods works to Job, to ſhew his greatneſſe, Job 36. 27, 28, 29. & 37.1. to 7. Reaſons why Gods works are great: 1. He that worketh moſt univerſally, unlimitedly, ſupreamly, muſt work great things. 2. He that works moſt wiſely, muſt needs do great things, Pſal. 104.24. 3. He that works moſt mightily and powerfully, muſt needs do great things, Iſa. 43.13. 4. He that does all this moſt eaſily, muſt needs do great things, Pſal. 33.6.

2. God is great in his works, Deut. 4.36. Pſal. 111. 2. Job 5.9. Gods perfection ſtands in an infiniteneſſe of goodneſſe, (Matth. 19. 17.) wiſdome, (Rom. 11. 33.) Power, (Geneſ. 17. 1.) perfect Wiſdome, Goodneſſe, Righteouſneſſe, Moderation, Holineſſe, Truth, and whatſoever may poſſibly be required to grace, and commend an action, that is found in the whole courſe and frame of Gods actions; the work of Creation is a perfect work, he made all things in unſearchable wiſdome; no man could have found any want of any thing in the world, which might be reaſonably deſired; no man could have found there any evil thing worthy to be complained of. The work of Providence is perfect; all things are carried in perfection of Wiſdom, Juſtice and Goodneſſe. So is the work of Redemption likewiſe perfect. The perfecteſt meaſure of Juſtice, Wiſdom, Truth, Power, that can be conceived of, doth ſhew it ſelf forth in that work.

Reaſon. Such as the workman is, ſuch muſt the work be; a perfect Artiſts workmanſhip will reſemble himſelf. The perfection of God is his incomprehenſible fulneſſe of all excellencies, he is abſolutely and ſimply perfect.

Object. Why doth God uſe the help of others?

Anſw. Not out of need, as the Artificer his Inſtruments, ſo that he cannot work without them; but out of choice and liberty, to honour them the more. Hence ſometimes he will uſe no means at all, ſometimes contrary means, to ſhew that they help not, and that we ſhould not relie upon them.

Object. Why is there ſinne in the world, ſeeing God needs not any glory that comes to him by Chriſt, and by his mercy in pardoning of ſinne? Why doth he ſuffer it?

Anſw. Becauſe ſinne is not ſo great an evil, as Chriſt is a good, and therefore God would not have ſuffered ſinne, if he could not have raiſed up to himſelf matter of honour; God makes an antidote of this poiſon.

Object. How comes it to paſſe, that God makes one thing better than he did at firſt? As in the Creation, all things had not their perfection at firſt.

Anſw. Thoſe things were perfect, ex parte operantis, he intended not they ſhould have any farther perfection at that time; the eſſence of nothing can be made better than it is, becauſe it conſiſts in indiviſibili; God makes not our graces perfect in us, becauſe he aims at another end.

Gods perfection hath all imperfections removed from it, 2 Tim. 2. 13. Titus 1. 2. James 1. 3. There be ſix imperfections found in every Creature: 1. Contingency. 2. Dependence. 3. Limitation. 4. Compoſition. 5. Alteration. 6. Multiplication.

Now God is free from all theſe. He is, 1. A neceſſary Eſſence. 2. Independent. 3. Unlimited. 4. Simple. 5. Unchangeable. 6. Wholly one. Three of theſe, viz. Gods Simplicity, Unlimitedneſſe in reſpect of time and place, and unchangeableneſſe, I have handled already; I ſhall ſpeak of the other three, when I have diſpatched this Attribute of Gods Greatneſſe or Perfection.

3. God is great in his Authority.

God is great in his Authority. He is King of Kings, the only Potentate

I have ſhewed already that he is great in his Nature and Eſſence, and alſo in his works: Now his greatneſſe in Authority is to be conſidered.

He is a great King, he hath Sovereigne, Abſolute and Unlimited Authority over all things, they being all ſubject and ſubordinate to him; for at his will they were, and are created. This is ſignified by the Title of The most High, ſo frequently given him in Scripture. He is the high and lofty One, Iſa. 57. 15.

moſt

1. In reſpect of place and dwelling, he is in Heaven, Eccleſ. 5. 2. above the Clouds.

God is moſt high. The Greatneſſe of Gods Authority ſtandeth in two things: 1. The Univerſality of it, Gods Authority reacheth to all things; the whole world, and all creatures in it are ſubject to his will and diſpoſing. 2. The Abſoluteneſſe of it, what he willeth muſt be done.

2. In reſpect of Eſſence, he is high indeed, unexpreſſibly high, the high God, *Gen.*14.22. The Lord moſt high, *Pſal.*7.17.

3. In reſpect of Attributes, he hath more Wiſdom, Power, Juſtice, Mercy, than all creatures.

4. In reſpect of State and Dominion; he is exalted in Authority, Power, Juriſdiction; he is above all, as Commander of all.

God hath ſupream Dominion and Power over all creatures, to order them as he pleaſeth, Job 9.12.& 33.12,13.& 34.13,14. *Jer.*16.6. *Iſa.*45.9. *Dan.*6.26. *Rom.*11. the 4. laſt verſes. & 9.15,16,17,18.

Abſolute Dominion is a power to uſe a thing as you pleaſe, for ſuch ends as you think good. God hath a double Power and Authority over the Creature: 1. As an abſolute Lord. 2. As a Judge, according to which double power he exerciſeth two kinds of acts, Actus Dominii, and Judicij. 1. He hath an abſolute Sovereignty over all the Creatures, and hath no rule to governe the Creature by, but his own will, *Dan.*4. 17,32. Epheſ. 1. 11. He can do the Creature no wrong in any of his diſpenſations. Four things he doth to the Creatures, as an act of Sovereignty: 1. He gives the Creature what being he pleaſeth. 2. He appoints it to what end he pleaſeth, *Rom.*9.22. 3. He gives it what Law he will; here come in acts of Juſtice and Mercy. 4. Orders all their actions by his effecting or permitting will. 2. He reſolves to govern theſe Creatures, Modo connaturali, ſuitably to their own Natures: He gives reaſonable Creatures a Law, which they muſt know and approve, and the ſervice they perform to him muſt be reaſonable. Gods Sovereignty here below is ſeen in ordering. 1. Natural cauſes, which act from an inſtinct of nature, and are carried to their end by a natural neceſſity. 1. In acting them according to their natures, for the ends he appointed them. 2. In reſtraining their acting ſometimes, that fire ſhall not burn. 3. In acting them above their natures, the Rock ſhall yeeld water. 4. In acting them contrary to their natures, fire ſhall deſcend. 2. Voluntary cauſes, acting from a principle of Reaſon, and the liberty of will, *Prov.*16.11. *Pſal.*33.15. *Prov.*21.1. in ordering their thoughts, apprehenſions, counſels, affections.

Dominion in the general is two-fold:

1. Of Juriſdiction, whereby he ruleth all ſubject to him, as he pleaſeth.

2. Of Propriety, whereby he having a right to every creature, may order it as he pleaſeth.

The firſt is implied in that of James 4.12. There is one Lawgiver, who is able to ſave and to deſtroy.

The ſecond, in that he is called, The Lord of the earth, and all the beaſts of the field are ſaid to be his.

Gods Dominion is that abſolute Right and Power, whereby he poſſeſſeth all things as his own, and diſpoſeth of them as he pleaſeth, God over all, Rom. 9, 5. Epheſ.4.6.

We are to ſubmit to Gods Sovereignty, Rom. 9. 18. But ſome raiſe this Queſtion, Whether we are bound to be content to be damned if he will, 2 Sam. 16.22. & 1. 3. 18. This is rather forbidden in Scripture, it is againſt the duty of nature which ſeeks its own preſervation; this alſo layes a ground for deſpair. Thoſe places before-quoted ſpeak of yeelding to the Lords pleaſure for temporal bleſſings.

Reaſon. The ſupream excellency of his Nature, whereby he is infinitely above, not only thoſe things which are actual, but likewiſe poſſible.

Gods firſt Dominion of Juriſdiction hath theſe parts:

1. To Command.
2. To forbid; as Adam the eating of the Tree.
3. To permit: thus he ſuffers ſinne to be, being ſupream Lord.
4. To puniſh or reward.

Secondly, His Dominion of Propriety conſiſts in theſe particulars:

Rom.9.17. 1. That he can order every thing as he pleaſeth for his honor and glory, *Pſal.*8.1. the ſtrange puniſhments laid on Pharaoh, were for this, God raiſed him up to ſhew his glory.

Rom.9.20. 2, He is bound to give none account of what he doth; that is true of God, which the Papiſts attribute falſly to the Pope, none may ſay to him, Cur ita facis!

3. He can change and alter things as he pleaſeth, *Dan.*2.21. as when he bid Abraham kill his Son, and the Iſraelites take the Egyptians goods.

4. He can diſtribute his goods unequally to whom, and when he pleaſeth, to one health; ſickneſſe to another.

The Adjuncts of this Dominion:

1. It is Independent on any other; he hath this Dominion of himſelf, as he is God of himſelf, *Dan.*4.17. *Ezek.*21.25,26.

2. Univerſal; it comprehends all places, times; this Kingdom is everlaſting, God rules in Heaven, Earth, Hell, *Jam.*5.4.

3. Full and Perfect, 1 *Chron.*29.11,12. His Dominion is infinitely greater than all others.

Heb.12.9. 4. It extends to the ſoul and heart; God is called the Father of Spirits, the hearts of Kings are in his hand; he can terrifie the conſcience.

Conſectaries from Gods greatneſſe in his nature. We ſhould firſt prefer God above all things: The greateſt perſon in any ſociety is ſet before the reſt. The Sun is reſpected above other Stars, the King above other perſons; we ſhould highly eſteem his favour, *Iſa.*40.12. there is a lofty deſcription of Gods greatneſſe.

There is not one among the Mahumetans (of any underſtanding) which at any time mentions the name of our bleſſed Saviour, called there Hazaret Jeza, the Lord Chriſt, but he makes mention of it with high reverence and reſpect. Mr Terry his voyage to Eaſt-India, Sect. 15.

I knew a Divine who did alwayes put off his Hat, when he named God.

Secondly, We ſhould perform all duties to him with the greateſt care, diligence and reverence, and in the higheſt degree; love him greatly, fear him greatly, praiſe him with all our might, yeeld unto him a ſervice proportionable to his incomprehenſible greatneſſe, Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praiſed, 1 Chron.16.25. Pſal. 145.3. And to be feared, Pſal.76.7,11.

Thirdly, It is a terrour to all thoſe to whom this great God is an enemy. The wrath of a great King is terrible, he muſt needs inflict great puniſhments on ſuch as rebell againſt him.

Fourthly, Here is great conſolation to thoſe to whom he is a Friend and Father; he will doe great things for their good, they ſhall have great happineſſe.

Corollaries of Gods perfection. We ſhould chuſe the Lord to be our portion, for in him alone is true happineſſe and contentednesſe to be found; in our wants we ſhould confidently go to him for help, he being perfect can ſupply them.

We ſhould place all our confidence in God alone, expect all good things from him, ſince he is an inexhauſted fountain of all good things; we ſhould

Deut.18.13. Mat.5.48. imitate him, Be perfect as our heavenly Father is perfect. Let patience have her perfect work. Let us perfect holineſſe in his fear. Thoſe which would be excellent Orators propound to themſelves Cicero and Demoſthenes to follow. Paul preſſed on forward: Labour firſt to be perfect in heart, Pſal. 119.80. then in your wayes. This may ſerve alſo to comfort the godly againſt their weakneſſes; God

Pſal.18.22. will make his works perfect. He that hath begun a good work in them, will perfect it; they ſhould be comforted therefore againſt all their imperfections to which they are ſubject in this life, and ſeek perfection from him. He will ſupply all their wants, bear with them here, and make them perfect in the other life, 1 Cor. 15.28. the underſtanding ſhall have perfect ſight, the will perfect goodneſſe, the heart per-

1 Cor.13.10. fect joy.

We ſhould not mutter under any affliction; for he himſelf cannot do better than he doth, he makes all things perfect, *Eccl.*3.11. Every thing beautifull in its ſeaſon, ſeaſon, this is the moſt perfect ſtate and condition for thee, and ſo account it, God hath perfect Wiſdom, Power, Love.

Let us not be puffed up with any thing we do to him; the Papiſts abound in this, when they maintain merit; for that ſuppoſeth ſome eminency, as if God needed their graces, obedience and ſervice; but let us walk more humbly; Say rather, If I had no corruption in me, if I could do every duty required with as much purity as Angels; yet this would adde nothing to thee; thou art a perfect God, perfectly happy, though I were not at all.

Conſectaries from Gods great works.

Gods works are wonderfull great, farre exceeding the power of all creatures, either to do the like to them, or to ſtop and hinder them. Let all the men on earth lay their hands and heads together; let all Kings unite their counſels and their forces: Can they make an Earth-quake, a Whirlwinde? Can they make the thunder to roar? Can they cauſe the flaſhes of lightning to flame out? It is not a mortal worme to whom the courſe of Nature will ſubmit it ſelf. And if God will that theſe effects be wrought, what can any man, all men do for the hindering thereof?

There is a two-fold greatneſſe in the works of God. 1. In the bulk or quantity of them, as the work of Creation. 2. Of quality or vertue, Gen. 1.16. The Moon is a great light, in regard of light and influence, excellency and uſefulneſſe to the world. See Job 37.38,39.

2. Gods works are unſearchable, and paſt finding out, Job 5.9. Who can dive into the ſecrets of Nature, and tell us the true reaſon of the wind, the earthquake, the thunder, the rain, the ſnow? We cannot dive into the bottom of Gods Works, nor find them out by any ſtudy or wiſdom.

3. We ſhould ſo much the more honour, dread and wonder at God, by how much we can leſſe comprehend his works.

4. Let us learn often to contemplate God in his Works; ſee his Goodneſſe, Greatneſſe, Wiſdom, Power in them, and ſo we ſhall profit much in the knowledge of him.

Conſectaries from Gods being moſt high.

The exaltation of God is a terror to thoſe who will needs be his enemies, and ſlight and diſeſteem him, as the greareſt part of men do. O how unhappy are they, that have ſo high, and ſo great a perſon to be their enemy, ſeeing they have nothing to ſave themſelves from his wrath.

2. We ſhould labour to exalt him now, by ſtriving to form and fix in our ſelves a moſt reverent eſteem of him, and by exerciſing in our ſelves this vertue of honouring God, often reviving in our minds theſe thoughts, How high is God, and making them familiar with us: Oh how excellent is he that hath made and governs all! Why do I not eſteem him more and more! The more we can lift up our hearts to exalt God, the more we ſhall grow in all holineſſe and righteouſneſſe.

3. His friends and ſervants ſhall alſo be exalted at laſt, though for a time deſpiſed and ſet light by.

We ſhould often and ſeriouſly conſider of this great Perfection of Gods Nature, Authority and Works. The very Saints and Angels have a negative or comparative Imperfection, though not a Privative; they are not deprived of that which ſhould be in them, but there are many Perfections which they have not. God is ſimply and univerſally Perfect; and he only hath all kind of Perfection, according to his Eſſence.

God is a Neceſſary Eſſence.

Mihi verò dicendum videtur, Nihil extrà Deum eſſe abſolutè neceſſarium, ſed tantum ex hypotheſi. Attamen eſſe neceſſarium ſecundum quid; viz. ex hypotheſi, rei cuique fatetur, vel contingentiſſimæ poteras accidere. Twiſſ. Animadverſ. in collat. Armin. cum Junt.

Contingency is found in the Eſſence of every creature, it might not have been, as well as have been; it may not be, as well as be; there was once a poſſibility of its not being, as there is now a poſſibility of its not being; yea, there was an equal or greater poſſibility of its not being, then its being.

God is a neceſſary Eſſence; it is abſolutely neceſſary that he ſhould be, and he cannot but be, and be as he is, and his actions upon himſelf are altogether and ſimply neceſſary, they muſt be as they be, and cannot but be ſo.

God is Independent, Isai. 44. 6. Revel. 1. 8. and 21. 6. and 22. 13. Rom. 11. 35, 36.

Independentia est proprietas Dei, qua quoad essentiam, subsistentiam & actiones à nulla alia dependet causa, cum à seipso sit, subsistat & agat. Wendelinus. John 1. 3. Acts 17. 25. Ab independentia Dei non differt sufficientia, qua ipse in se & à se sibi & nobis sat habet, nullaque re indiget: cum omnia alia uti à Deo dependent, ita sibi ipsis minimè sufficiant. Proprietatem hanc indigitat nomen Dei Schaddai.

Every Creature as a Creature, is Dependent, and hangs upon some other thing than it self, and owes its being and continuance to another, Nehem. 9. 6. It hath causes of its being, from which, of which, by which, and for which it is; and further than these causes did, and do contribute to its being, it cannot be. The Angels have an efficient cause and end, and they do as much stand indebted to God for their being and continuance, as the poorest worm; and would no more have been without God, nor continue to be, than the silliest Gnat; but God is altogether Independent of himself, by himself, for himself; he hath no causes, but is to himself in stead of all causes.

He is what he is, without any help from any other thing; as himself shews in his Name, I am that I am.

There are many things which have a beginning from some other thing; there must be something therefore that is of it self, or else we should wander infinitely, a self-essence and subsistence. Gods being is neither ab alio, ex alio, per aliud, nor propter aliud.

We should acknowledg God to be a Necessary and Independent Essence.

Gen. 17. 1. and 35. 11. Wendelinus. ἓν ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη, εἷς κοίρανος ἔστω. Hom. Il. β. Rex unus est apibus, & dux unus in gregibus, & in armentis rector unus; multo magis mundi unus est rector, qui universa, quæcunque sunt, verbo jubet, ratione dispensat, virtute consummat. Cyprian. de Idolorum vanitate. Vide Grot. de Relig. Christ. l. 1. p. 6. Psal. 18. 32. and 86. 10. Deut. 4. 35, 39. and 32. 39. Psal. 18. 31, 45. Isai. 44. 6, 8. Ephes. 4. 5, 6. 1 Pet. 2. 9. Mark 12. 2, 19, 32. 1 Cor. 8. 5. John 17. 3. 2 Sam. 2. 2. Isa. 42. 36. and 44. 1. and 45. 5. and 21. and 48. 11, 12. Hinc disces (inquit Plato Epist. 13. ad Dionysium) scribam ego serio necne: Cum serio, ordior Epistolam ab uno Deo; cum secus, à pluribus. Unde igitur ad homines opinio multorum Deorum persuasióve pervenit? Nimirum ij omnes, qui colunter ut Dii, homines fuerunt, & iidem primi, ac maximi reges: sed eos aut ob virtutem, qui profuerant hominum generi, divinis honoribus affectos esse post mortem; aut ob beneficia, & inventa, quibus humanam vitam excelucrant, immortalem memoriam consecutos, quis ignorat? Lactant. de ira Dei. Ac si diligenter hæreseon antiquarum historias perlustrare volueris, & eorum qui de his Commentati sunt, velut Epiphanij, Theodoreti, aliorum que scripta legere; scies nullam fere illarum extitisse; quæ non plures Deos Constituerat; in iisque præcipuum aliquem, & summum, Conditorem Cæterorum, & moderatorem. Petav. Theol. Dog. De Deo, l. 1. c. 3. Vide plura ibid. & c. 4. & l. 2. c. 8.

3. God is wholly one, Deut. 6. 4. Gal. 3. 20. 1 Tim. 2. 5. Hos. 13. 4. Mal. 2. 10. All creatures are subject to multiplication; there may be many of them, and are many; many Angels, Men, Stars, and so in the rest. Not one of them is singular and only one so; but one might conceive that there should be more; for he that made one of them, can make another and another, and as many as he pleaseth; but God is simply one, singular and sole Essence; there neither is, nor can be more than one God, because he is the first and best Essence; and there can be but one first, and one best. He is Infinite, and there can be but one Infinite, because either one of them should include the other, and so the included must needs be finite, or not extend to the other, and so it self not be Infinite.

There was a first man, and a first in every kind of creature, but not any Absolute first save God: one Eternal, and one Incomprehensible, saith Athanasius in his Creed.

There can be but one chief Good, which we desire for it self, and all other things for it, say the moral Philosophers; and this must needs be God, for no infinite Good can be conceived but He.

In respect of some excellent Majesty, and glory above others, Angels are called gods, Heb. 1. 6. and Psal. 97. 7. and Magistrates, Psal. 82. 6. in respect of usurpation, the Devil, 2 Cor. 4. 4. Primò omnia multitudo revocanda est ad unitatem. Cum igitur in mundo multa sint Creatura, revocari eas oportet ad unum primum Creatorem. Secundò, Res omnes sunt per aliud, ergo reducendæ sunt ad unum per se. Ephes. 4. 5, 6.

Some places of Scripture simply deny other gods, and others exclude all but this one God; Though there be gods many, and lords many; that is, that are so

ſo called, and reputed by men, who deceive themſelves in their own imaginations; yet to us (in the Church) there is but one God, 1 Cor. 8. 4, 5, 6. Zech. 4. 9. after Chriſt ſhall come, the Gentiles with the Jews ſhall all worſhip one and the ſame true God.

That which is perfect in the higheſt degree can be but one; becauſe that one muſt contain all Perfections; that which is omnipotent can be but one; if one can do all things, what need is there of many gods? if there were more gods than one, we might and ought to do ſervice to more than one, to acknowledge them, praiſe and love them, and be at leaſt in mind ready to obey them. If they ſhould command us any thing, we might lawfully ſeek to them for what we need, and give thanks to them, for what we received. But the Lord profeſſeth himſelf to be a jealous God, and cannot endure any Copartner in worſhip. The Romans refuſed Chriſt, becauſe they would have had their gods with him, and he would be worſhipped alone without them.

The Latine phraſe (Si Dis placet) is a more Ciceronian than Chriſtian expreſſion. Mat. 4. 10. We muſt love him only, have one heart for one object.

He is one God, Not

1. By Aggregation, as many Stones make one Houſe, many Sheep one Flock.

2. Nor by Conſent, as Men may be one.

3. Nor in Kind, as any living Creatures.

Not numerically, * as one is a beginning of number (for that is a quantity) but tranſcendently, as Ens and unum are counted only one, ſolely and alone God. He is one in Nature, Eſſence and Being, ſo as it is impoſſible there ſhould be another. There can not be two Infinites in Eſſence, for then one ſhould not have all the other hath in it; God is Infinite, for of his Greatneſſe there is no end.

* Unity here noteth not number but rather a denial of multitude; for unity as it denotes number, leaves alſo a place for a ſecond and third, at leaſt in apprehenſion and conceit; though there be but one Sun, yet we may conceive of a hundred. Eſſentia Dei unica eſt unitate abſolutiſſima, non generis, ſpeciei, ſubjecti, accidentis, cauſæ, conſenſus, ſed numeri quæ unitas eſt reſtrictiſſima. Vide Cornel. à Lapide in Deut. 6. 4.

Secondly, Others would be imperfect or ſuperfluous, he being Infinite and Perfect.

Thirdly, From his Abſolute Lordſhip, and Dominion over all; He is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. My God (ſaith Luther to the Pope) will make your God know, that you are too weak for him. If there were two Gods, there would be a ſtriſe between them (as between Cæſar and Pompey) who ſhould be the greater and chiefeſt of all. God may be ſaid in a ſpeciall manner to be one, two ſeverall wayes.

1. For the Purity and Simplicity of his ſubſtance, which is not compounded with any thing elſe. For that is moſt truly and properly one, which is nothing but it ſelf, and hath no other thing mixed with it. God is ſo pure and ſimple an Eſſence, that he is not compounded ſo much as of parts.

2. From his Singularity, becauſe there are no more Gods but one, God is not only One, but he is alſo the only One. He is ſuch a one as hath no Copartners in worſhip. Both which Titles are expreſſly aſcribed unto God in the Scriptures:

Deut. 6. 4. Iſa. 43. 10. He is God, and there is none elſe, Deut. 4. 35. & 32. 39. Unum non ſuperaddit enti aliquid poſitivum, but notes only Negationem compoſitionis & diviſionis. One God in oppoſition to multitude, there is none beſides him, and to mixture, Quicquid eſt in Deo eſt Deus: So Zech. 14. 9. his Name one, that is, his worſhip ſhall be without humane mixture, one way of worſhip. All Chriſtians, Jews and Turks agree that there is but one God. The Mahometans devout Prieſts five times every day aſcend unto the tops of the high Turrets of their Churches, whence they proclaime as loudly as they can poſſibly ſpeak, their Prophet Mahomet. There is no God but one God, and Mahomet the Meſſenger from God. Tom Coryat upon a time, having heard their Prieſt often ſo to cry, got him upon a high place directly oppoſite to one of thoſe Prieſts, and contradicted him thus, that is, No God but one God, And the Lord Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God, and further added, That Mahomet was an Impoſtor: and all this he ſpake in their own language as loud as poſſible he could, in the ears of many Mahometans, that heard it. But he was taken for a mad man, and ſo let alone. Mr Teory's Voyage to Eaſt India, Sect. 15. Chriſtianus ego ſum, & nullos alios deos, novi, niſi unum & verum Deum, qui creavit Cœlum & Terram, Mare, & omnia quæ in eis ſunt. Paſſio Cypriani per Paulum Diaconum edita.

Both

Both that he is One, and that he is the only One. God is not only Unus, but alſo Unicus, or to uſe S^t Bernards word, Uniſſimus. If that word may be uſed, he is of all things the Oneſt. Socrates and Plato in their definition of God, aſcribe to him Unity, with particular reſpect unto his ſingularity.

Pythagoras his advice to his Scholars was to ſearch the Unity.

* D^r Reinolds againſt Hart.

There is a threefold Unity; * Firſt, of Perſons in one Nature, ſo there is one God, Deut. 6. 4. The ſecond, of Natures in one Perſon, ſo there is one Chriſt, 1 Cor. 8. 6. Thirdly, of ſundry Natures and Perſons in one quality; ſo there is one Church, Cant. 6. 8. The Socinians reject theſe three Unions, becauſe they ſo far tranſcend reaſon, and they receive not thoſe things, which their reaſon cannot comprehend.

Conſectaries from Gods unity. Chriſtians ſhould be one in affection, as God is one in Eſſence. Mal. 2. 10. John 17. 21. Eph. 4. 3. to 7. Acts 4. 32. Rom. 1. 23. 2 Kings 17. 29, 30, 31. and 18. 33, 34.

The more we content our ſelves with God only, the happier we are; he is the only infinite Riches, Wiſdom, Goodneſſe; how happy are they that have him in quo omnia? ſpend all thy pains in getting him.

2. If he be your enemy, there is none elſe to reſcue you; he is God, and there is none elſe; he will deſtroy, and none ſhall be able to deliver out of his hands,

3. It ſhews the wickedneſs of thoſe, which ſet up other gods, beſides the true God. The Epicure makes his belly, and the covetous man Gold his god. Some worſhip ſtocks and ſtones; this is a great diſhonour to him: the Papiſts worſhip the Croſſe, Invocate Saints and Angels, make a god of the Pope.

The Heathens were guilty of Polytheiſm, [a] they worſhipped many gods: they had their Dii majorum, and Minorum gentium. Heſiod reckons up thirty [b] thouſand gods; They had their Dii mortui Idols, Mortales men, and Mortiferi luſts. The Romans had their Capitol full of gods, yet the Geeſe preſerved it; whom Auſtine thus derides, Dii dormiebant, anſeres vigilabant. The Manichees ſaid there were two gods: The Tritheites that there were three.

[a] The Gentiles although they were Polytheiſts, yet they are called Atheiſts, Epheſ. 2. 12. not worſhipping him which is the only true God.

The Heathens multiplied gods, becauſe men cannot be happy without Aſſociates they thought God could not be, Iſa. 55. 8, 9. It was a true obſervation of one, That the gods of the Heathen were good fellows, and liked the company of one another well enough: it was onely the God of Iſrael (whoſe name was Jealous) and muſt be worſhipped alone. M^r Goodwins Divine Authority of the Scriptures aſſerted.

[a] they worſhipped none, Gal. 4. 8. [b] Auguſt. lib. 4. de Civitate Dei. Et Varro lib. 1. de Rebus Divinis.

Exod. 20. 3.

This is the very firſt of all Gods Commandements; Thou ſhalt have no other gods before me. If there were more, for us not to acknowledg, adore and honour them, were a wrong and act of injuſtice againſt them; ſo the firſt and foundation of all the reſt of the Commandements, ſhould be a moſt injurious and unlawfull Command; and therefore we muſt either conceive of him, which gave that Commandment, as a moſt envious, vain-glorious, arrogant and ſelf-ſeeking God, that could not endure that other gods, perhaps his equals, ſhould enjoy their due glory and homage (which were moſt abſurd and blaſphemous) or elſe muſt needs confeſs that which is the truth, That he forbad us to make any other, becauſe there is no other, [c] and he would not have us miſ-place our devotion and ſervice, by tendring it to that which is not god.

[c] Cum præter unum Iſraelis Deum in Scriptura aliorum quoque Deorum ſit mentio, vel fictitij intelliguntur Dii, quales gentilium fuerunt vel impropriè dicti Dij, quales ſunt ſummi Magiſtratus, qui Dei in hiſce terris vices gerunt. Pſal. 82. 6. Wendelinus. Apollinis oraculum apud Porphyrium legitur, quo ait cæteros Deos aereos eſſe Spiritus, colendum autem unum Hebræorum Deum; cui dicto ſi parent Apollinis cultores, jam tales eſſe deſinunt: ſi non parent, ſuum Deum mendacij accuſant. Grotius. Variety is the pleaſure of nature, but unity is the buſineſſe of Nature. D^r Holyday on Ezek. 37. 22.

If

If there be more gods, they cannot be Eternal; for an Eternal being admits not of multiplicity; for that is Eternal which is simply first; and that which is simply first hath nothing of as long a continuance as it self.

God united Heaven and Earth, and made them one world, the Sea and the Land, and made them one Globe; soul and body, and made them one man; Jews and Gentiles, and made them one Church; Adam and Eve, and made them one flesh, nay, God and man, and made them one Christ.

This should stir us up to thankfulnesse, that we are better taught and principled than the Heathens, they were as wise as we, but we have better light. Do not we also multiply gods in some sense? Do not we love the Creatures inordinately? 2 Tim. 3. 4. Phil. 4. 19. place our hope and confidence in them? Some will say to a great man, Sir, I am your Creature, Psal. 49. 6. Job 31. 24. fear them inordinately, Isa. 51. 12. rejoyce and glory in them, Job 37. 25. Jer. 9. 23. ascribe an efficiency to them, Hab. 1. 16. obey them against the mind of God, John 8. 44.

Chap. VII.

Of Gods Understanding that he is Omniscient, and of his Will.

THe next Attribute is God in his Understanding; which is the Divine [a] Essence, Understanding, and knowing all things alwayes, and by one act. It is called also Science, Knowledg and Omniscience. God knows all things, because first he knew himself [b] directly in himself, by himself, and primarily as a most perfect object; which knowledge in God, is of Absolute Necessity (for he could not exist without the knowledge of himself) and infinite, apprehending an infinite object, Psal. 147. 5.

[a] In homine differunt intellectus tanquam facultas, scientia tanquam habitus intellectus, cognitio tanquam actus à facultate per habitum profecti- scens. In Deo omnia sunt unum, & tantùm nostro concipiendi modo distinguntur. [b] Matth. 11. 27. 1 Cor. 2. 10. Vide Aquin. part. 1. Quæst. 14. Art. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. Petavium De Deo Deique proprietatibus, l. 4. c. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. & Strangium De voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum, l. 3. c. 10, 11, 12. & De Scientia media, l. 3. c. 17, 18. Inter divina Attributa, quæ ad extra induunt respectum, intellectio seu scientia Dei primum locum occupat. Divina enim sapientia est principium agendi dirigens; voluntas Dei principium imperans, potentia verò principium exequens. Distribæ Thomæ Aylesbury De Æterno Dei decreto, c. 1. De Scientia Media.

Secondly, Because he knows the creatures all [c] and singular [d] viz. all things which have been, are, or shall be, might have been, and may be; not only the substances, but all the accidents of creatures, not only things necessary, but also contingent, all good things by himself, and all evils by the opposite good; and that infallibly without error.

[c] See Zeph. 1. 12. John 21. 17. Heb. 4. 13.

[d] De singularibus, qualia sunt, hic Angelus, hic homo, hæc planta, olim multi Philosophi dubitarunt an Deus hæc nosset. Sed manifesta veritas est. Creavit enim Deus singularia; judicia sua exercet circa singularia; reddit cuique secundum opera sua, supputat numerum stellarum, & nominibus suis singulas vocat. Psal. 47. 4. Vide Psal. 56. 9. & Matth. 10. 30. Pertinet huc totus Psalmus 147. Wendelinus.

There is,

1. His general knowledge, and the knowledge of his providence, Acts 15. 18.

2. The knowledge of his peculiar grace and special love, Psal. 106. 4. Psal. 1. 6. Job 36. 7.

So God may be said to know a people two wayes:

1. In his eternal purpose of love to them in their Election, Rom. 8. 29. so he knowes them long before they know him.

2. In his actuall dispensation of speciall grace in time toward them, Acts 14. 16.

Cognitio per intellectum, aut est opinio, aut fides, aut scientia. Opinio neque certa est, neque evidens cognitio: sed ita aut affirmativa, aut negativa parti assentitur, ut tamen de altera dubitet. Fides certa est: sed non evidens cognitio, Heb. 1. 11.

For the manner of Divine Knowledg, God knows all things by his Essence, not by Species abstracted from the things; for so things should be before the Divine Knowledge, on which yet they depend. God doth not understand by discoursing from a known thing to that which is unknown, in a doubtfull and successive reasoning; but by looking on them, and by one most simple individuall and eternal Act comprehending all things. He apprehends by one Act of his Understanding, and by himself simple things without Species, compound without composition and division, Syllogisms and consequences without discourse; Lastly, he most perfectly understands all the multitude of things without distraction, and distance both local and temporal, without distinction of former and latter, past or future, according to the beginning, progresse and end, possessing all things together, and alwayes present; which with us are revolved in time, Dan. 2. 21, 22. 1 Cor. 3. 19, 20. Isa. 44. 7. Rom. 11. 33. Heb. 4. 13. Psalm 94. 9, 10, 11.

At vero scientia certa est, & evidens cognitio. Hæc itaque propter utramque conditionem verè & propriè Deo attribuitur. Zanch. De Natura Dei, l. 2. c. 2. Quæst. 1. In divina scientia duo potissimum sunt admiranda, quæ soli Deo propria sunt, nec Creatura ulli communicari possunt. Quod Deus norit intimos cordis nostri recessus & cogitationes omnes antequam se prodant; unde dicitur Καρδιογνώστης. Deinde quod Deus videat è longinquo quæ nondum sunt, Utraque hæc conjungit Psalmes v. 2. Strangius De voluntate & Actionibus Dei. Vide plura ibid.

As knowledge is a most certain, perfect, and evident understanding of things, so farre it is to be given to God, and in a perfecter manner without comparison, than is, or can be in us. But as it is in us a habite, or act perfecting the understanding, or a disposition and thing different from the understanding, and added to it. Lastly, So farre as it contains any thing imperfect in it, so farre also it is to be removed from God.

The Scripture proves Gods Omniscience.

Psal. 139. 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 12. Acts 15. 18. 1 John 3. 20.

1. Affirmatively or Positively, Job 28. 24. 1 Sam. 2. 3. he is called by Hannah in her Song, a God of Knowledg, 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 King. 8. 39. Psal. 94. 11. He knows from eternity, by one simple Act, before all time, before there was a world, secondly, certainly; he cannot be deceived.

2. Negatively, Job 42. 2. Psal. 139. 45. Heb. 4. 13.

3. Metaphorically and Figuratively, for when eyes and ears be given to God, his Omniscience is signified, 2 Chron. 16. 9. Psal. 11. 7. when he is called light, 1 Joh. 1. 5.

2. It is proved by Reason.

1. By way of negation, ignorance is a defect and imperfection, but God is most perfect, therefore all ignorance is to be removed from him.

2. By way of Causality, God governs all things in the whole Universe, and directs to convenient ends, even those things which are destitute of all Knowledge and Reason. Therefore he fore-knows and sees all things, all Creatures are Gods works, and an Artificer knows his work; the Prophet knew what was in Gehezi's heart, God revealing it to him. God made the heart; shall not he know it? Who was his Counceller? He is so wise, that he needs not the councel of any.

Psal. 104. 24.

3. By way of eminency. God hath made Creatures intelligent and full of knowledg, viz. Angels and men; therefore he knows and understands in a farre more perfect and eminent manner, Psal. 94. 10.

He knows.

1. The substantial natures of all other things; as of Angels, Men, Beasts, Plants, Gen. 1. He saw all things which he had made. Matth. 6. He is said to take care of Sparrows, Matth. 10. 29, 30. which would not be without knowledge.

2. There

2. Their accidentals, as actions and passions with the circumstances of them. Hence he is said to know the hearts and try the reyns of men; and there is nothing hid from him. Mat. 6. The Father which seeth in secret.

3. He knows things which are to come, not as if they were to come; for to him all things are present. God makes this an argument of his Divinity, when he bids them see, if their Gentile gods can tell what is to come. He doth not only know what things naturally shall be, but likewise what is possible. By his Prophets, he hath often foretold future things.

4. He is privy to all our actions, Psal. 119. 168. Job 34. 21, 22. Knows with what heart, and with what aimes and ends we do them. 2. Knows our words, 2 King. 6. 12. Psal. 139. 4. Matth. 12. 36. 3. He knows our thoughts, Prov. 15. 11. Job 42. 2, 4. 1 Sam. 16. 7. Psal. 94. 11. God sees and knowes the heart, Gen. 6. 5. Psal. 90. 8. & Rom. 8. 27. Apoc. 2. 23. He made the heart, and will judg men for their thoughts, he gives laws to the heart, saying, Thou shalt not covet thy neighbours house; else God were not Infinite in knowledg, if he knew not the heart. Our purposes, 2 Sam. 7. Davids purpose of building God a house.

1. Our persons are manifest to him.
2. Our state and qualification.
3. Our works and actions.
Psal. 33. 14, 15. & 94. 11. & 73. 9. per totum. Prov. 15. 11. Psal. 139. 2. God is totus oculus quia omnia videt. August. It was said of Christ, He knoweth what is in man.

He pondereth the heart of every man, Prov. 21. 2. He knows, 1. The general bent and inclination of the heart, Deut. 31. 21. 2. What graces are in the heart. 3. What actings of grace there are in the heart. 4. What ends the heart hath in all its undertakings.

Our Understanding differs from Gods many wayes:

1. We have our knowledg from others, from him; he his from himself. He understands by himself without any help; man needs many helpers, his senses, fancy, and intelligible Species.

2. In extent; we know but somethings, he all, general and particular.

3. Our knowledg is simply finite, but Gods infinite.

4. We understand things by Species or Images, abstracted from them: he by his Essence.

5. We understand things successively one after another, with pains of discourse, proceeding from an unknown thing to a known, or from a lesse known to a more known: but God knows all things together, and by one most Simple, Immutable, and Eternal Act of Understanding.

6. He knows himself, and all other things perfectly, all things past, present, and to come, open, secret, certain, contingent, that which shall be, which shall never be; we cannot shew the Causes nor Properties of an Herb, and understand onely those things which are, or at least have been, and we know doubtingly.

He is primus intelligens and primum intelligibile.

There is in God (say the Schoolmen) Scientia visionis & simplicis intelligentiæ. The object of the first is all things which really are, have been, or shall be. Visio enim terminatur ad existentiam rei, non ad solam possibilitatem, saith Bellarmine. Of the second all things possible. Of the Scientia Media, between these two, See Dr Prideaux, Lect. 2. and also Aylesbury Distrib. partem primam De Æterno Dei Decreto, c. 1. and Dr Stearnes Animi Medela, l. 2. c. 18. Which knowledg is a great dishonour to God, as if he knew the futurition of things by the second causes, this makes his knowledg uncertain and dependent on the Creature, Rom. 8. 29. Dr Stearne in his Medela Animi, l. 2. c. 23. Answers Dr Prideaux his Arguments against Scientia Media, he saith there of him, Vir scientia summa mediam asservatur.

Vide Zanch. De natura Dei. l. 3. Quæst. 12. c. 2.

1. This is a terror to the wicked, who is ignorant of God, 2 Thess. 1. 8. The study of the knowledg of God, and our Lord Jesus Christ, is the highest, noblest, the most soul-perfecting and exalting knowledg that can be: all other knowledg

See Ephes. 4. 18. 1 John 2. 21. Knowledg is,

1. A special Article of the New Covenant, Jer. 31. 34. 2. It is a work of the Spirit, John 16. 13, 14. We can not pray or make use of any truth except we know it, nor discover errors, nor preserve our selves from them. We should grow in grace, and therefore should grow in knowledge, 2 Pet. 3. 18. Phil. 1. 9.

without this will nothing advantage us. Ignorance of the juſtice of God and his truth, in fullfilling his threatnings, makes men bold to ſinne, Joſh. 24. 19. Heb. 2. 3. Numb. 32. 23. This is alſo a terror to thoſe that do evill and think to hide it from God, 1 Cor. 4. 5. 2 Kings 9. 26.

2. It is neceſſary for us to be ruled by him, who is ſo full of Knowledg, and to believe all which he ſaith by way of relating, promiſing, threatning.

Againſt worldlineſſe Mat. 6. 30, 32.

3. This may comfort Gods people, who are upright, 1 Cor. 5. 11. Gen. 17. 1. My witneſſe is in Heaven, ſaid Job: If they know not how to expreſſe themſelves in Prayer, God knows their groanes. The good they do though ſecretly, is ſeen, Matth. 6. 2, 3, 4, Heb. 6. 10. Acts 10. 1, 2. What they do well ſhall be accepted and rewarded, 2 Cor. 5. 9. Gen. 4. 7. Iſa. 3. 10. Mat. 6. 4. God keeps an account of all thy ſufferings, duties, 1 Cor. 4. 4.

It is a Caſe of Conſcience, whether we muſt ever carry this thought in our minds, that God is preſent and ſees what we do.

It is,

1. Our duty to revive this thought upon the ſoul, Mal. 3. 16. the oftner we think of God, the more regularly do we act.

2. We muſt actually think of Gods preſence in a time of temptation, Gen. 39. 9.

3. We ſhould actually revive this thought in ſolemne duties, Heb. 4. 13. Acts 10. 33.

4. The more the Lord finds us in our ſecret ſins, the oftner we ſhould think of his all-ſeeing eye.

To Gods Underſtanding are referred his Wiſdome, or Prudence, and Preſcience.

Great in Counſel, Jer. 32. 19. Rom. 11. 33. Job 9. 4.

The Wiſdome or Prudence, and counſel of God, by which God rightly perceives the beſt reaſon of all things which are done. Hence it is that all things are joyned and knit together in a moſt perfect harmony, and beautifull order, ſo that they well agree, both amongſt themſelves and with God.

God is wiſdome it ſelf, Prov. 8.

His Wiſdome is,

1. Infinite, Pſal. 136. 5. and unſearchable Job 11. 7.

2. Eſſential to himſelf. He is the only wiſe God, Rom. 16. 27. 1 Tim. 1. 17. He is wonderfull in counſel, and excellent in working, Iſa. 28. 29.

3. He is perfectly, originally, unchangeably wiſe, Iſa. 40. 13.

4. The fountain of all wiſdom; Was there ſuch wiſdom in Adam, to give names to things according to their natures; and in Salomon to diſcourſe of all things? and is there not much more in God?

The wiſdome of God is ſometime taken perſonally, and ſo the Sonne of God is called wiſdom, Prov. 8. 1. Sometime Eſſentially which is common to all the perſons in the Trinity.

Wiſdom[e] is an ability to fit all things to their ends. He that worketh for a worthy and good end, and fitteth every thing unto it, worketh wiſely.

[e] Wiſdome is a virtue of right underſtanding things to be known, and making right uſe of that knowledge to the ordering of himſelf and his actions for the beſt. Wiſdome is ſuch a knowledge of things, as they are abſolutely in themſelves, and comparatively with others, that a man is thereby perſwaded unto that which will be his own true good for ever. There is a twofold act of wiſdome, and both moſt eminent in God. The firſt is knowledge in the nature of things, which is properly called Science. The ſecond is knowledge how to order and diſpoſe of things, and it is called Prudence.

He is called God only wiſe, Rom. 16. 27.

He is,

1. Eſſentially and originally wiſe, wiſdom it ſelf.

2. Univerſally wiſe, John 21. 17.

3. Unerringly and infallibly wiſe, 1 John 1. 5.

4. Unchangeably wiſe, James 1. 17. although the things he knows may vary. He can have no new objects added to his knowledg, can not forget that which he did know, knows not things by habits, knows all things at firſt in the moſt perfect manner.

5. He knows all things in a moſt holy manner, 1. Knows what ſin is, without any mixture of ſinne. 2. Knows all things ſuitable to their nature, Rom. 2. 2. Pſal. 9. 8.

1. He made them. 2. Suſtaineth them. 3. Actuateth them. 4. Guideth and diſpoſeth them all wiſely; aiming at a noble end, viz. his own glory, content and ſatisfaction.

He hath ſet alſo to each of them ſpecial ends, to which they ſerve in nature, and that end is the mutual preſervation one of another, and common beautifying of the whole workmanſhip, in ſubordination to that high end of his glory; and ſo he hath fitted each thing for that particular end he made it; and all for the univerſal end, to which he intended all. The Sun was made to diſtinguiſh day and night, and the ſeveral ſeaſons, it it moſt fit for that end in its quantity, quality, motion, and all that pertain to it. God made graſſe for the food of Beaſts, it is fit for that end; ſo in the reſt.

Wiſdome hath two principal acts, Fore-ſight and Fore-caſt, by which a man can before-hand ſee what will be after to make his uſe of it; 2. Diſpoſing and ordering things, by taking the fitteſt meanes and opportunities to attain his own good and right ends. This virtue is Infinitely in God, for he doth fore-ſee all things eternally; and in time diſpoſeth of them moſt fitly, by the fitteſt meanes and opportunities for the beſt that can be, to his own glory, which is the higheſt end that he can and ſhould aim at; for to that which is the beſt of all things, muſt all things elſe be referred; therefore God is the only wiſe God. Gods knowledge differs from his wiſdome, in our apprehenſion thus. His knowledg is conceived as the meer apprehenſion of every object, but his wiſdome is conceived as that whereby he doth order and diſpoſe all things. His knowledg is conceived as an act; his wiſdom as an habit or inward Principle; not that it is ſo, but only we apprehend it in this manner.

Gods wiſdom is ſeen in theſe particulars:

It was a blaſphemous ſpeech of Alphonſus, Si ego Deo adfuiſſem mundum meliùs ordinaſſem. Miramur artificium hujus corporis ad vitam, id eſt ad rem temporariam: quantum eſt artificium fœtus in utero ad novem menſes? quantum formicæ & muſcæ, & Papilionum, & floſculi eodem die perituri quo naſcitur. Lud. Viv. de verit. Fid. Chriſt. l. 1. c. 17. Prov. 3. 19, 20. Eccleſ. 3. 11. Prov. 12. 12, 13, 16.

1. In making of this great world, 1 Cor. 1. 21. all things therein are diſpoſed in the beſt Order, Place, Time, by the wiſeſt Architect. How doth David in the Pſalms admire the wiſdom and power of God, in making of the world, Pſal. 136. 5. & 104. per totum. Much wiſdome and art is ſeen in the Sun, Stars, creeping things; Salomon in all his glory was not comparable to one of the Lilies; for that is native and imbred, his adventitious.

2. In particular, in making of man, the little world. David is much affected with this, Pſal. 139. 14, 15.

3. In the Order which is in theſe things, God hath made every thing beautiful in his ſeaſon, ſaith Salomon. He is called The God of order, Pſal. 19. The Heavens are ſaid to have a line, which is likewiſe called their voice, becauſe God by this exact order and art, which he ſhewed in making of them, doth plainly declare to all the world, his Glory and Power.

4. In that nothing is defective or ſuperfluous.

5. In contriving things by contrary meanes. He brings about contrary ends, by contrary meanes; by death he brought life to believers, by ignominy and ſhame the greateſt glory. By terrors for ſin, he brings the greateſt comfort, and leads men by Hell to Heaven.

6. By catching thoſe which are wiſe in their own craftineſſe, Pſal. 59. Job 9. 4.

7. In finding out a way to ſave man by Chriſt, Epheſ. 3. 10. πολυποίκιλος Wiſdome in many curious paſſages, 1 Pet. 1. 12. the very Angels deſire to pry into this Myſtery; and indeed here was ſo much wiſdome, that if the underſtanding of all men and Angels had been put together, they could not have deviſed a poſſible way for mans ſalvation.

1 Cor. 2. 7. Epheſ. 1. 8.

Epheſ.3.10. Rom.11.33. Mat.11.25.

8. In the Church, in the Oracles of Scripture, exceeding all ſharpneſſe of humane wit, in the Original, Progreſſe, Charge, and migration of the Church, and other myſteries of the Goſpel, the profound and immenſe wiſdome of Gods counſels ſhines.

9. In the particular paſſages of his Providence to his Children, about their outward condition; in taking David from the ſheep-fold to be a King, but how much miſery did he undergo before he was ſetled? So to Jacob, Abraham and Paul, in doing them good by their ſins, making them wary.

10. In Heaven, in which the Counſels, Acts, Decrees, and Promiſes of God (all obſcurity being removed) ſhall be moſt clearly unfolded.

Dan.2. Chriſt is made unto believers Wiſdome, 1 Cor.1.30.

Doſt thou want wiſdome, go to this fountain, *Jam.*1.5. *Pſal.*94.10. all the wiſdom of men and Angels comes from him. The godly have a moſt wiſe Teacher, Job 36.22.

He taught us Wiſdome while he was on earth in his own Perſon; now he teacheth us Wiſdome by the written Word of the Old and New Teſtament, Coloſ. 3.16. 2 Tim. 3.15. 2. Makes it effectual to us by his Spirit, John 14. 15. and 16. Chapters. 1. We ſhall underſtand ſo much as ſhall certainly make us happy. 2. We have not a perfection of Wiſdome in this world, 1 Corinth. 13.9. 3. This is the alone Wiſdome, Prov. 4.18.

Secondly, Take heed of truſting in thy own crafty wiſdom, 1 *Cor.*3.18.

Thirdly, Gods wiſdom cals for our fear; the people feared Solomon for his wiſdom, and alſo for our praiſe, *Rom.*16.27.

Fourthly, The order and variety of things ariſeth not from nature, but the Divine working.

Fifthly, We ſhould let God alone to chooſe our condition for us, and be content with the portion that God gives us, that weather which he ſends, thoſe troubles he brings on us; ſince he is wiſeſt, and knows beſt what is fitteſt for us, and when is the beſt time to help us, Job 35.14. We ſhould not deſpair of deliverance, though our caſe be deſperate, *Gen.*18.14. Jonah 2.2.

We ſhould take heed how we confine God to our wiſdome and wayes, Pſal.78.30. Pſal.119.99, 100,101.

Sixthly, Admire that in the workes of God which we underſtand not: Gods wiſdome is unſearchable, and his counſel like unto the great depth.

Seventhly, Be conſtant and diligent in reading and pondering upon the Scriptures; they will make you wiſe to Salvation; to which adde Prayer and Practice.

A holy cloſe Converſation, walking according to the Rule of the Goſpel, is a Chriſtians onely wiſdome, Epheſ. 5. 15, 16. Fifty times in the Proverbs a godly man is called a wiſe man, and every wicked man a fool. See *Prov.*4.7.

Reaſons:

First, Such a converſation is moſt conformable to the Rule of wiſdom, the word of God.

Secondly, All the Properties of wiſdome are to be found in it.

1. A great part of wiſdom is to chuſe that which is a real good, to propound the greateſt good for his end, *Eccleſ.*12.13.

2. A wiſe man ſearcheth into the bottome of things, ſees them inwardly; many things appear good that are not ſo, this is onely found in a holy converſation.

3. Another property of wiſdom is to take a right way to attain his end.

4. He will looſe no opportunity, but purſues the chiefeſt good with all his might, A wiſe mans eyes are in his head. A fool hath a price in his hand, but no heart to it.

5. He will part with a leſſer good for obtaining a greater.

6. Wiſdom acts men by the higheſt principles, and is ſeen in a right judging and eſteeming of things and perſons, *Dan.*4.17. puts men upon the nobleſt actions, Prov. 15.24.

Gods

Gods Prescience or fore-knowledg is that whereby God fore-knew all future things necessarily, certainly, immutably, and from everlasting. Neither fore-knowledge nor remembrance are properly in God, all things both past, and to come, being present before him. Act. 2. 23.

[f] It is called Prescience, not in respect of God but men. Gen. 18. 1. & 15. 16. Prescientia ex nostro captu sic appellatur, rerum respectu, quas ipse Deus futuris temporibus disposuit nobis & Angelis manifestandas; cum Deus ab aterno sciverit omnia cognoverit, quæ nostro respectu futura dicuntur. Diatribæ Thomæ Aylesbury de Æterno Dei Decreto, c. 1.

God hath an exact prescience of all euents that come to passe, Acts 15. 18.

1. The final estate of men, Rom. 8. 29. and the meanes by which they shall come to it.

2. All contingent actions, Heb. 4. 10.

Prescience is often taken in Scripture for that acknowledgment, by which God before the foundation of the world, acknowledged those which he elected for his, and approved of them, and loved them, Rom. 8. 29. Whom he fore-knew, that is, whom he loved and chose according to his purpose, and acknowledged for his, those also he predestinated and pre-ordained to eternal life, Acts 2. 23. By fore-knowledge there, not simply knowledge, but knowledge joyned with will and approbation is signified. So Rom. 11. 2. Fore-knew, that is, acknowledged for his.

Although Gods Prescience bring not a necessity upon events, yet it is necessary for all things to happen so as God hath fore-told, because God so fore-knows, as he hath decreed and will'd it shall be; but his Decree gives existence.

A certain Science and Prediction of future and contingent things, is that first mark by which we are taught to distinguish the true God from Idols, Isa. 41. 23. Vide Voet. Thes. de Scientia Dei, p. 251, 252, 253.

Præscientia Dei est cognoscitiva, non causativa. Act. 2. 23. Rom. 8. 29. 1 Pet. 1. 2.

So much for Gods Understanding; his Will follows; by which God [g] freely, immutably, and efficaciously wils and approves of Good, and that only, both the chiefest and first, viz. himself and his own glory, as the end, Prov. 16. 4. & Rom. 11. 36. John 8. 50. and also the secondary, inferiour and subordinate good, viz. that of the creature, as farre as it hath an Image of that chiefest good, and tends as a mean to that ultimate end.

[g] Voluntas qua Deus seipsum vult per se, & extra se omnia propter se seu suam gloriam.

Wendelin. Iob 9. 12. Psal. 115. 3. & 135. 7. Dan. 4. 25. Exod. 33. 19. Rom. 19. 18, 21. 2 Corinth. 12. 11. God created all things, because he would, he redeemed us of his good pleasure, sheweth mercy to whom he will shew mercy. God is: 1. Most Perfect. 2. Truly blessed, therefore most free. Licet Angelos atque homines agentia libera esse dicamus, Deum tamen solum primum agens liberum (sicut æquum est) pronunciamus; à cujus voluntate sicut omnis creaturæ libertas dependet, ita etiam à motione Dei, omnis libertatis creatæ in actum productio. Twiss. contra Corvinum, cap. 8. Sect. 4.

God wils:

1. Most freely: for as liberty is essential to every will, so it is chiefly proper to the Divine, because it is a will especially: yet God wils good necessarily with a necessity of Immutability, but not with a necessity of coaction: for he is necessarily and naturally Good, and that which he once willed, he always wils immutably, and yet freely.

2. God wils efficaciously: for no man resisteth, nor can resist his Will, Dan. 4. 32. Rom. 9. 19. Voluntas Dei semper impletur aut de nobis aut à Deo in nobis. Augustine.

Zanch. de Natura Dei, l. 3. c. 4 Quæst. 1. Nulla causa datur voluntatis Dei, quoad actum volendi. Aquin. Qu. 1. Art. 2, 3. 45. And this is the opinion of all the Schoolmen, saith Dr Twisse.

Will is taken:

First, Properly.

1. For a faculty or power of the soul whereby we will; so we say, there are these faculties in the soul, the understanding and the will. So for that faculty of willing which is in God, so it is one with Gods Essence.

2. For the act of his willing, called Volitio: so it is one also with his Essence. For as he is Eternal and Immutable, so is also his will.

Second-

Secondly, Metonymically.

For the Object or thing willed, ſo John 6. This is the will of my Father, that is, that which he willeth and hath decreed, Thy will be done, 1 Theſſ. 4. 3. So we ſay, It is the Princes will, that is, that which the Prince willeth; he willeth his own glory chiefly.

[h] The Scripture often aſcribes a will to God, Iſa. 46.10. Rom. 9.19. Joh. 6.39.

Gods will is his Eſſence [h] whereby he freely willeth good, and nilleth evil: or it is a faculty whereby God chuſeth all and onely good, and refuſeth all and onely evil. Voluntas in Deo nihil aliud eſt, quam Deus volens. Zanch. de Natura Dei. l. 3. c. 4. Quæſt. 1.

The will of God is an eſſential Property, whereby the Lord approveth that which is good, and diſproveth the contrary, Mat. 19.17. James 1.17. Pſal. 5.4. Voluntas Dei eſt liberum, æternum, ſapientiſſimum, immutabileque Dei decretum: tum de univerſis & ſingulis rebus, quas condidit, ad certos uſus & fines, per certa media deducendi: tum de malis, quæ non fecit, neque facit, nempè peccatis, fieri permittendis: idq; ad ſuam gloriam. Zanch. de Natura Dei. lib. 3. c. 4. Quæſt. 3. Vide plura ibid.

God wils things wiſely, Epheſ. 1.11.

1. He wils according to an infinite fore-knowledge. Counſel is attributed to God, Non propter inquiſitionem ſed propter certitudinem cognitionis. Aquinas. Acts 15. 18.

2. Wils all things according to an immutable Decree.

3. Wils every thing to a certain end, and to the higheſt and beſt end, himſelf, Prov. 16.4. Rom. 11.35.

The will of God is:

1. Moſt holy, Rom. 12.2. Pſal. 119.137. The rule of juſtice, Lam. 3.37. Epheſ. 1.11. Deut. 29.29. Iſa. 8.20.

2. Eternal, Rom. 9.11.

3. Unchangeable, Mal. 3.6. Rom. 11.1.

4. Free, Liberum id eſt, quod ſui juris eſt. Petavius.

The will of God is one and the ſame, but it is [i] diſtinguiſhed:

[i] Every diſtinction of Gods will, muſt be framed ex parte volitorum, non ex parte volentis. Dr Jackſon. See Dr Prideaux his Sermon on 2 Chro. 32. 24. p. 17.

1. In reſpect of the Object into voluntatem beneplaciti & placiti. God wils good things, and good effects with the will of his good pleaſure, approving them firſt of all, and by himſelf, he intends their end and means, Epheſ. 1.5. but evil, and evil effects as they are evil, he nils, diſapproves and diſlikes. Yet he voluntarily permits evil, and as there is a good end of it, he wils it with the will of his pleaſure, for it is good that there ſhould be evil, Pſalme 81.12. Acts 14.16. 1 Cor. 10.5. Divines thus diſtinguiſh: There is volitio malis & mali, to will ſinne to be, is not ſinfull, it had never come into the world, if God had not will'd it.

2. In reſpect of application to the creature, into [k] Piſcator negat ullam Dei voluntatem eſſe conditionatam. Negat etiam Bradwardinus, demonſtratq; omnem Dei voluntatem eſſe abſolutam. Eſt iſta meo judicio ſententia accuratior. Sed voluntas Dei poteſt diſtingui in voluntatem abſolutam & conditionatam; nimirum non quoad actum Dei volentis, ſic omnis Dei voluntas eſt abſoluta, ſed quoad res hoc Dei actu volitas. Vult enim Deus ut alia abſolutè eveniant, alia verò non ſine conditione, ſic fidem hominis & regenerationem & reſipiſcentiam vult Deus abſolutè electis ſuis, hoc eſt, vult ut iſta iis contingant abſolutè; at ut ſalus eis abſolutè contingat non vult, ſed duntaxat ſub conditione fidei & reſipiſcentiæ, finaliſq; in iiſdem perſeverantiæ. Twiſſ. contra Corvinum c. 8. Sect. 4. Vide plura ibid. & c. 14. Sect. 8. Miro & ineffabili modo non fit præter ejus voluntatem quod etiam contra ejus ſit voluntatem, quia non fieret ſi non fineret, nec utiq; nolens finit, ſed volens. Nec fineret bonus fieri malè, niſi omnipotens etiam de malo facere poſſet bené. Auguſt. Enchir. ad Laurent. c. 100.

1. He wils according to an infinite fore-knowledge. Counſel is attributed to God, Non propter inquiſitionem ſed propter certitudinem cognitionis. Aquinas. Acts 15. 18.

2. Wils all things according to an immutable Decree.

3. Wils every thing to a certain end, and to the higheſt and beſt end, himſelf, Prov. 16.4. Rom. 11.35.

The will of God is:

1. Moſt holy, Rom. 12.2. Pſal. 119.137. The rule of juſtice, Lam. 3.37. Epheſ. 1.11. Deut. 29.29. Iſa. 8.20.

2. Eternal, Rom. 9.11.

3. Unchangeable, Mal. 3.6. Rom. 11.1.

4. Free, Liberum id eſt, quod ſui juris eſt. Petavius.

The will of God is one and the ſame, but it is [i] diſtinguiſhed:

1. In reſpect of the Object into voluntatem beneplaciti & placiti. God wils good things, and good effects with the will of his good pleaſure, approving them firſt of all, and by himſelf, he intends their end and means, Epheſ. 1.5. but evil, and evil effects as they are evil, he nils, diſapproves and diſlikes. Yet he voluntarily permits evil, and as there is a good end of it, he wils it with the will of his pleaſure, for it is good that there ſhould be evil, Pſalme 81.12. Acts 14.16. 1 Cor. 10.5. Divines thus diſtinguiſh: There is volitio malis & mali, to will ſinne to be, is not ſinfull, it had never come into the world, if God had not will'd it.

2. In reſpect of application to the creature, into

1. Abſolute [k], when God willeth and concludeth any thing concerning us without any condition in us.

2. Conditional, when he wils, ſome condition being put in us, ſo God would have all men of years ſaved on the condition of faith. The firſt of theſe is by another name called, Voluntas beneplaciti, the laſt, Voluntas ſigni.

Gods will is:

1. Secret, Voluntas propoſiti, that whereby he hath abſolutely, and freely determined with himſelf what he will doe, permit or hinder, Pſal. 36.7. Acts 1.7.

2. Re-

2. Revealed, Voluntas præcepti, that whereby God hath manifeſted what he would have believed, done or left undone by his reaſonable creatures, Mark 3.35. 1 *Theſſ.*4.3. That diſtinction of Gods will into beneplaciti & ſigni, differs little from this. Signi is the ſame with revealed. Beneplacitum is the decree properly ſo called, which may be either hidden or manifeſt. Pſal.115.3. Epheſ.1.11. Rom.9.18. & 12.1,2. callad the will of God concerning us.

See Dr Gouge on *Heb.*2.4. Sect.37. and Strangius de Dei voluntate, & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum. lib. 1. cap. 3.

It ſerves, First, to comfort us in adverſities: God is a moſt free Agent, therefore he is not bound to ſecond cauſes, ſo as he cannot help without them, Pſalm 115. 3.

Secondly, To exhort us to Sobriety in our judgement of Gods works. He is a moſt free Agent, therefore we ſhould not raſhly exact of him a reaſon of his deeds. Rom. 9.20,21 22.

2. We ſhould labour, firſt to know Gods will, ſo did Eli, 1 Sam. 3.17.

2. Our wils ſhould be pliable to the will of God.

All goodneſſe and truth in the creature is a conformity cum Archetypo, ſay the Schoolmen, of truth to the mind of God, and of goodneſſe to the will of God, the firſt truth and goodneſſe is in him: thoſe paſſages therefore in ſome mens writings had need to be well-weighed, Quædam volita quia bona, & quædam bona quia volita, God wils ſome things becauſe they are good, as if ſome things were antecedently good to the will of God. His will is the rule of all goodneſſe, Non ideo volitum quia bonum, ſed ideo bonum quia volitum. The power of grace mainly conſiſts in a ready ſubmiſſion to the will of God.

Reaſon.

First, Grace is the Law written in the heart, *Jer.*31.33. when there is a diſpoſition there ſuitable to every Commandment, Prebendo vires efficaciſſimas voluntati, ſaith Auguſtine.

Secondly, The higheſt ſubjection of the ſoul to God is the ſubjection of the will.

He will be obeyed as well as worſhipped, as a God:

1. You are his ſervants, his will ſhould be ſubdued to his Maſters ends, he is to have no will of his own.

2. You are ſaid to be married to God, Hoſ. 2. 19. The woman is to ſubject her will to her husband, *Gen.*3.16.

3. Becauſe the act of the will only is the act of the man, Actus voluntatis eſt actus ſuppoſiti, Pſa.119.30. that is an act of a man, which if he were free he would chuſe to do, *Pſal.*40.6.

4. The main power of ſinne lies in the will, the blame is ſtill laid upon that, Iſrael would have none of me, you will not come to me, that you may have life; I would, and you would not: I am bound (ſaith Auguſtine) Mea ferrea voluntate.

5. The main work of the Spirit in the omnipotency of it, is ſeen in ſubduing the will, *Epheſ.*1.19. *Pſal.*110.3.

6. Our ſanctification ſhall be perfect, when our wils ſhall be perfectly ſubjected to God, *Heb.*12.23.

We ſhould be carefull:

1. To do his will cheerfully, ſpeedily, ſincerely, conſtantly; a Chriſtian makes God in Chriſt his portion, that is his faith; and the word of God his Rule, that is his obedience. Pſal.110. Deut. 16.14. Pſal.119. Pſal. 51.8.

2. Be patient under the hand of God in all afflictions; for nothing can befall us but that which is the good pleaſure of our heavenly Father. Revel.2.4. Levit.10.3. Job 1.21.

3. We ſhould not depart from the Word of God, but make that the warrant of all our actions; for there is nothing ſinne, but what God forbiddeth; Pſal.39.19. Pſal.119.6. Prov.30.6. 2 Sa.6.7.&7.7.

Auguſt. Ench. ad Laurent. *cap.*101. Deut.29.29. Rom.9.20 Eccleſ.7.15,16. Mr Pemble, his Vindiciæ gratiæ, pag. 108,109. Apoſtolus 1 Tim.2.4. non intelligit ſingulos homines, ſed quoſvis homines, hoc eſt, omnis generis homines, genera ſingulorum, non ſingula generum.

and

and nothing acceptable, but what he commandeth. A man may with a good will, will that which God nils: as if a good Sonne desire his Fathers life whom God would have die, and one may will with an ill will, that which God wils with a good will; as if an ill Sonne should desire his Fathers death, which God also wils.

4. Pry not into the Lords secrets, they belong not unto thee, but be wise unto Sobriety.

5. We should be afraid to sinne against God, who can punish how he will, when he will, and where he will: God wils seriously the conversion of all men, by the preaching of the Word, Voluntate approbationis, by way of allowance, but not Voluntate effectionis & intentionis, not effectually, by way of full intention to worke it in them. It is one thing to approve of an end as good, another thing to will it with a purpose of using all means to effect it. Gods Commandments and Exhortations, shew what he approves and wils, to be done as good; but his promises or threatnings shew what he intendeth effectually to bring to passe.

Under Gods will are comprehended affections, which are attributed to God, and are divers motions of his will, according to the diversity of Objects. Yet they are not sudden and vehement perturbations of God * as they are in man, rising and falling as occasion serves, but constant, fixed, tranquil, and eternal Acts and Inclinations of the will, according to the different nature of things, either contrary or agreeable to it. There are in man some habitual and perpetual affections, as love and hatred; much more hath the Eternal will of God, Eternal affections, whiles it moves it self to the objects, without alteration, impression and passion. God is so farre affected toward particulars, as they agree or disagree with the universal and immutable notions and Ideas of good existing in God from Eternity: so God hates evil and loves good, both in the abstract and universal Idea, and also in the concrete in particular subject, as farre as it agrees with the general.

* God pleaseth to ascribe to himself our humane affections, not because he hath any perturbation, or passion, or troublesome stirring and working within, as we have; but because he hath an aptnesse to produce such effects, as we out of those passions do accustome to produce, but without any manner of those weaknesses or distempers, which accompany us in such actions.

Chap. VIII.

Of Gods Affections, his Love, Hatred.

The Affections, which the Scripture attributes to God, are

1. Love which is an act [a] of the Divine Will, moving it self both to the most excellent good in it self, and to that excelling in the reasonable creature, approving it, delighting in it, and doing good to it, John 6. 16, 35. Romans 5. 8.

a It is an attribute, whereby God loveth himself above all, and others for himself.

b Amor Dei ipsi, quo se oblectat in eo quod approbat, eiq; bene vult, & sibi unit. Wendelin. God is first affected toward himself and his own glory. Passiones Dei tribuuntur non quoad affectum, sed quoad effectum. Love is not a passion or perturbation in God, as in man, 1 John 1.5.

In which definition two things are to be noted:

1. The Object of Gods Love.
2. The Effect or Manner of Gods Love.

Christ as Mediator, Heb 1.3 He is primum amabile as the natural Sonne of God.

The primary object of Gods Love is himself, for he taketh great pleasure in himself, and is the Author of greatest felicity and delight to himself. The Father, Son and holy Ghost, love one another mutually, Mat. 3.17. & 17.5. John 3.33,35. & 5.20. & 10.17. & 15.9. & 17.24.

Christ

Chriſt is the object of his Fathers Love in two reſpects:

Firſt, As the ſecond Perſon in the Trinity, ſo God loved him before all worlds, *Col.*1.13. *Prov.*8.31.

Two things attract Love:

1. Nearneſſe of relation, John 1.18.
2. Likeneſſe, *Heb.*1.3.

Secondly, As Mediator, ſo conſidered in his humane nature, he was loved,

1. Freely, *Col.*1.19.
2. Upon deſert.

Partly becauſe of the excellency of his Perſon, John 3.23.

Partly becauſe of the merit of his obedience, John 10. 17. God was well-pleaſed with Chriſt ſtanding in our room, Epheſ. 1.6. This anſwers our being unworthy of Chriſts love. 2. It gives us confidence in Chriſts Interceſſion, John 16.26.

The ſecondary Object of Gods Love is the reaſonable creature, Angels and men. For though he approve of the goodneſſe of other things, yet he hath choſen that eſpecially, to proſecute with his chiefeſt Love: for theſe Reaſons,

John 14.23. Ezek.33.11. Amor Divinus eſt. 1. Naturalis, quo Deus neceſſariò amat ſeipſum. 2. Voluntarius, 1. Univerſalis, quo omnes creaturas aliquo modo Deus diligit. Amare enim eſt velle alicui bonum,

1. For the excellency and beauty of the reaſonable creature, when it is adorned with its due holineſſe.
2. Becauſe betweene this onely and God, there can be a mutual reciprocation of love, ſince it onely hath a ſenſe, and acknowledgement of Gods goodneſſe.
3. Becauſe God beſtows Eternity on that which he loves; but the other creatures, beſides the rational ſhall periſh.

Gods Love to Chriſt is the foundation of his Love to us, Matth. 3. 17. Epheſ. 1.6.

Mat.5.45. 2. Specialis, quo Deus inaqualiter amat hos & illos creaturas, reſpectu boni inaqualis, quod in vult; ſic magis diligit creaturas rationales, & inter illas electos, & Chriſtum. Wendelin. Some diſpute, whether God loves all creatures with an equal love? Ex parte actus Divini; he doth not: Ex parte boni voliti, he wills Heaven to ſome.

Chriſt was loved for his own ſake, we for his:

1. God loves us for Chriſts ſake upon the account of his merit, and our intereſt in him, John 3.16. God is holy, and we ſinners, and ſo he was diſpleas'd with us, 2 *Cor.*5.9.
2. Upon the account of our intereſt in him, as one with him, John 16.27.

Secondly, He loves us with a like love.

1. Brings us into a like relation, 1 John 3.4.
2. The Properties of this love of God, to Chriſt his manhood, are
   1. A free Love, conſidered in his whole Perſon, he deſerves Love, Luke 1. 48.
   2. An eternal Love to Chriſt as Mediator, John 17.24. 2 Pet. 1.9.
   3. His Love to us as to Chriſt is unchangeable, *Pſal.*103.17.
   4. A tender and affectionate Love, *Mat.*3.17. *Iſa.*62.5. *Zech.*2.8.
3. There is a reſemblance in the fruits of his Love to Chriſt:
   1. A communication of ſecrets, John 1.18. & 15.15,16,17. & 14.21.
   2. In gifts and graces, John 3.35.
   3. In ſuſtentation and upholding of him, *Iſa.*42.1.
   4. Acceptance, *Epheſ.*5.2. *Cant.*5.1.
   5. In point of reward, *Phil.*2.7. & 3.21.

God loves all creatures with a general Love, *Mat.*5.44,45. as they are the work of his hands; but he doth delight in ſome eſpecially, whom he hath choſen in his Son, John 3.16. *Epheſ.*1.6. *Pſal.*106.4.

God loves his Elect before they love him; his Love is actual and real in the purpoſe of it to them from Eternity. There are four expreſſions in Scripture to prove this:

1. He loves his people before they have the life of grace, *Epheſ.*4.5. 1 John 4.19. *Rom.*5.8.

2. Before they have the life of nature, *Rom.*9.11.

3. Before the exhibition of Chriſt, John 3.16.

4. Before the foundation of the world was laid, *Epheſ.*1.3. 2 Tim. 1.9. Therefore God loves the Elect more than the Reprobate, and our love is not the motive of his Love.

Object. How could God love them when they were workers of iniquity, Hab. 1.13. *Pſal.*5.3,4. He loved their perſons, but hated their works and wayes. God loved Chriſts perſon, yet was angry with him when the guilt of our ſinnes was upon him.

He loves his people:

1. Before Converſion, Amore benevolentiæ, with a love of good-will and of pity, which is properly ſhewed to one in miſery, *Ezek.*16.5.

2. After Converſion: with a love, 1. Of Sympathy, *Iſa.*63.9. *Heb.*4.15. & 5.2. 2. Of Complacency and delight, *Pſ.*16.10,11. that Pſalm is a Prophecy of Chriſt: See *Epheſ.*2.5.

This Love of his delight is diſcovered four wayes:

1. By his valuing of his people, Since thou waſt precious in my ſight thou waſt honourable.

2. By his commendation of his Church and people, as often in the Canticles.

3. By his frequent viſits, Luke 1.68. *Revel.*3.20.

4. By revealing his counſels to them, John 15.15.

1 John 4.16. John 3.35. Rom. 5.8. Mal.1.2.

2. The effect or manner of Gods Love is, that God makes the perſon happy whom he loves. For he doth amply reward that joy and delight which he takes in the holineſſe and obedience of the Elect, while he pours plentifully upon them all gifts, both of grace and glory.

This Love of God to the Elect is:

Epheſ.2.3,4. 1 Joh.4.10,19

1. Free, Hoſea 15.5. he was moved with nothing but his own goodneſſe, Ezekiel 16.8.

His love is an ancient love. Pſal.103.17. Jer.31.3.

2. Sure, firm and unchangeable, *Rom.*5.8,10. 1 John 4.10. John 13.1.& 31.3. Infinite and Eternal, which ſhall never alter, John 3.16. It is without ceſſation, Pſ. 27.10. Diminution, *Cant.*8.7. Interruption, *Rom.*8.35.to the end, or alteration; every created thing is mutable.

3. Effectual, as is declared both by his temporal and eternal bleſſings, 1 John 3.1. Dei amare eſt bonum velle.

There are divers Effects of his Love:

1. Creation, he made thee a man, made thee with counſel. In the body there are as many mercies as limbs. How quick and various in motion is the ſoul, and how comprehenſive?

2. Preſervation, *Iſa.*45.5.

3. Redemption, 1 John 4.10. Some think he might have redeemed us another way, but not oblige us ſo much, and that Chriſt came not onely to ſatisfie Gods Juſtice, but to ſet forth Gods Love to the utmoſt: Redemption was Opus liberi conſilii, Iſa.53.4. & 53.11. Chriſt willingly condeſcended to the eternal Treaty about our ſalvation. The Covenant of Redemption between God and Chriſt is ſet forth, *Iſa.*53.10,11. See *Pſal.*40.6,7. & *Prov.*8.31.

4. Sincere: It is a Love without any mixture, Love, and nothing but Love. This is the motive which perſwades God to communicate himſelf, and act for his people, *Iſa.*63.9. *Rev.*3.19.and hath no motive but it ſelf, *Deut.*7.6,7,8. 1 John 4.8. God hath no need of us, or our love, nor doth not advantage himſelf by loving us, Job 22.2.

Rom. 8.1,2.& 5.5. 1 John 3.1. Pſal.36.7.

5. Great and ardent, John 3.16. & 15.9, 13. Rom. 5.6,7. 1 John 3.1. God beſtows pledges of his love and favour upon them whom he hath choſen, and ſometimes he ſheds the ſenſe of his love abroad in their hearts, transforms us into his own Image, Cant. 4.9. & 6.5. See *Zeph.*3.17.

It is compared to the love of a Father Psalme 103. of a Mother, Isa. 49.15.

We must love God Appretiativè, love him above all things, and in all, Psalme 73.24. *Matth.*10.37. Intensivè and Intellectivè, with all our might and strength. Affectu & Effectu, love him for himself, and all things for the Lords sake: else it is not, 1. A Conjugal Love, 2. Not an equal Love, to love the gifts, and not the Giver.

God is the only immediate and proper object of love, he is diligibilis naturâ.

We should love Christ so as God loved him:

1. So as to put all things into his hands, John 3.3. put our soules into his hands, trust him with our eternal welfare, 2 *Tim.*1.12.

2. So as to make him the Mediator and great Peace-maker between us and Heaven, *Heb.*7.25.

3. God glorifies him in the eyes of the world, John 5. 22, 24, 25. Phil. 1. 21.

We should love:

First, All the Divine Persons in the Trinity:

1. The Father, Ye that love the Lord, hate evil.

2. Christ, for taking our Nature upon him. He gave himself to us, and for us, *Cant.*5.16.

3. The holy Ghost, for drawing our hearts to the knowledge of this great mystery, *Rom.*5.5.

Secondly, All the Divine Properties and Excellencies, whereby God makes himselfe known to the sonnes of men: Love him for his holinesse, Isa. 6. 3. Fidelity, 1 *Cor.*10.13. Omniscience and Dominion, The Scepter of thy Kingdome is a righteous Scepter.

Thirdly, We should love all his Ordinances, *Psal.*27.4. & 84. 1. & 4. and all his discoveries to us in his Word, 2 *Thess.*2.10.

Beatus qui amat te, amicum in te, & inimicum propter te. Aug. *Confes.lib.*4. *cap.*9.

We should expresse our love to him by our care in keeping his Commandments, 1 *John*2.3. John 14.25. & 15.10. and earnest desire of his presence, Psal. 4. 2, 3.

2. Our love should be conformed to Gods, in loving the Saints, *Psal.*16.3. Gal. 6.10. John 3.14. 1 *Pet.*1.21. and Christ above all, desiring to be united to him, 1 *Cor.*5.44. 1 *Pet.*1.8.

Minus te amat, qui tecum aliquid amat, quod non propter te amat. August. *Confes. l.*10. c. 29. Vide Amef. *l.*4. *de conscientia.c.*10.

3. We should admire the love of God, 1 John 3. 1. For the Sureneſſe, Greatneſſe, and continuance of it, it passeth our knowledge, Ephes. 3, 19. He hath given his Sonne for a price; his Spirit for a pledge, and reserves himself for a reward.

That Tantus so great a God, should love Tantillos so little creatures as we before we were, *Rom.*9.11. Talis, when we were enemies, *Rom.*5.10. Tantus, so much.

Mr Bradford when others were merry at Table, fell a weeping, because he could not get his dull heart to love God.

Means to love God:

1. Beg this love much of God in Prayer.

2. Study much to know him, his Nature, Attributes, Excellencies.

3. Labour to enjoy Communion with him.

4. Mortifie other loves contrary to this, inordinate self-love, and love of the world, 1 John 2.15.

There are many promises made to the love of God:

1. Of Temporal blessings, *Psal.*91.14. *Rom.*8.28.

2. Spiritual, all the comforts of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 2. 9.

3. Of heavenly and eternal blessings, James 1.12. & 2.5.

1. God is Maximè amabilis, he is truly lovely.

2. Consider the great benefits we receive from him, Psal. 116.12.

3. He desires us to love him, *Deut.*10.4. Mark 12. 33.

4. This affection only and joy abide for ever, 1 *Cor.*13.ult.

[a] Gods hatred is that whereby he is ready to doe that which we doe when we hate,

The second affection in God, contrary to love, is Hatred, which is an act [a] of the Divine will, declining, disproving and punishing of evil, prevailing and reigning in the reasonable creature.

even to separate a thing from himself, *Ezek.*33.11. Rom. 9.14. *Psal.*45.7. & 5.6. Isa. 1.14. Odium Dei in sacra pagina sumitur trifariam: Primò, pro negatione summi, & extensi amandi gradus, quo aliquis alteri postponitur, & eo honore dignatus non est, quo alius afficitur, Luc. 14. 26. Secundò, Ut importat displicentiam, seu aversationem, qua enim odio habemus nobis summopere displicent, Revel.2.6. Tertiò, Ut ponit voluntatem puniendi, seu actualem ejus punitionem, sic odium sumitur pro vindicta, Psal. 31. 6. Duo posteriora odii specimina versantur circa peccata; Deus enim solum impium, & ejus impietatem odit odio displicentiæ, & vindictæ, illudq; exercet in decreti executione. Prius verò odium, quo negatur alicui speciale bonum, non semper præsupponit peccatum. Diat. Thomæ Aylesbury *de Æterno Dei decreto. c.7. Vide plura ibid. p.*244,245,246,247,248,249.

In which definition three things are to be noted:

1. The object of Gods hatred.
2. The cause and condition of the object hated.
3. The effect of Gods hatred.

Hatred is of things contrary to us, as God hates sin, being contrary to his 1. Nature.

First, The object of Gods hatred is the reasonable creature, for that onely sinnes. He hateth iniquity, Psalme 71.59. Habak. 1.13. Prov. 11.1. and the creature which obstinately and stubbornly persisteth in evil; so that he doth rejoyce in the calamity and destruction thereof, Psalme 11.5. & 5.6. *Prov.*16.5.

2. Law. 3. Honour, *Psal.*45.8. Gods love hath variety of objects, he loves himself, his Son, his Saints, all his creatures; he hates nothing but sin; and his hatred is as infinite as his love: 1. He forbids nothing but sin, and all degrees of it, *Jer.*44.4. therefore it is set forth in Scripture by most odious names, whatsoever is shamefull or hurtfull. 2. All his judgements are denounced against sin.

Secondly, The cause and condition of the object hated, is sinne; for which God abhors the delinquent creature, only the reasonable creature hath left his station, and defiled himself with the filth of sinne; all the rest of the creatures, whether brute beasts, or insensible creatures, persist in the state of goodnesse wherein they were created, although perhaps not in the same degree of perfection and excellency for mans sinne: But although God cannot hate the creature, unlesse as sinfull, yet not every degree of sinne, but a high measure of it, makes the person hated. It is true, that God abhors the least sinne, yet he doth not abhor the persons of the godly, in which are the reliques of sinne, as he doth those of the wicked in whom sinne reigns.

Thirdly, The effect of Gods hatred is to punish the person whom he hates, Psalme 9.11. whom troopes of evil doe invade, when once it is rejected by God, God both permitting and commanding; and this actual hatred, or outward manner of manifesting it, may not unfitly be referred to the Divine Justice. Hatred in God is a vertue and fruit of his Justice, and not a vicious passion.

Consider, 1. The unsupportable horrours of conscience, *Prov.*18.14.

2. The painfull death of little children, *Rom.*5.14.

3. How grievously God punisheth the sins of the Elect in his own Sonne, when he was made sinne he was made a curse.

4. How small sins have been punished: The Angels for one aspiring thought were cast into hell: Uzza struck dead for touching the Ark, fifty thousand Bethshemites for looking into it. Mr Peacock felt a hell in his conscience for eating too much at one meal.

5. The appointing of everlasting torments.

Prov.6.16. Hatred in a reasonable creature is a motion of the will, whereby it flieth from that which it apprehends to be evil, and opposeth it. It ariseth from a disconformity of the object.

We should hate sinne (for God hateth it) and that with the greatest hatred, even as hell it self, *Rom.*12.9. Sinne is the first, principal, and most immediate object of hatred. Paul mentioning divers evils, saith, God forbid. I hate vain thoughts

thoughts, saith David, our affections must be conformable to Gods. He hateth nothing simply but sinne, and sinners for sins sake.

2. Sinne is, as most injurious to God, so most hurtfull to man; therefore it is in it self most hatefull. The ground of hatred of any thing is the contrariety of it to our welfare, as we hate wilde, fierce, and raging beasts, for their mischievousnesse, Toades and Serpents for their poysonfulnesse, which is a strong enemy to life and health. Sinne is the most mischievous and harmfull thing in the world. Just hatred is general of whole kinds, as we hate all Serpents, so we should all sins.

Means to hate sinne:

1. Pray to God, that his Spirit may rule and order our affections, and set the same against evil.

2. Exercise our selves in meditating of the infinite torments of hell, which sinne deserveth, and the fearfull threats denounced against it in the word of God, of all sorts of evils.

3. We should labour to get out of our natural estate, for the unregenerate man hates God, Psalm 81.15. Rom. 1.30. Christ, John 7.7. and good men, eo nomine, as Cain did Abel, 1 John 3.10,12. They hate Gods wayes and Ordinances, Prov. 1.22,29.

There is a two-fold hatred:
1. Odium abominationis, a flying onely from a thing.
2. Odium inimicitiæ, whereby I pursue what is evil. As much of our original corruption is found in this affection as any.

This hatred is:
1. Cansesse, Psalm 69.4.
2. Entire, without any mixture of love.
3. Violent, Psalm 53.3.
4. Irreconcilable, Gen. 3.15.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Affections of Anger and Clemency, given to God Metaphorically.

OTher Affections which are given to God metaphorically, and by an Anthropopathy, are, 1. Anger, * and its contrary, complacency or gentlenesse, which are improperly in God, for he is neither pleased, nor displeased; neither can a sudden either perturbation or tranquillity, agree to God: but by these the actions of God are declared, which are such as those of offended and pleased men are wont to be; viz. God by an eternal and constant act of his Will, approves obedience, and the purity of the creature, and witnesseth that by some signe of his favour, but abhors the iniquity and sinne of the same creature, and shews the same, by inflicting a punishment, not lesse severe, but farre more just then men are wont to do, when they are hot with anger, Exod. 32.10. Now therefore, let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them, and I will make of thee a great Nation.

* Anger is given to God, Non secundum turbationis affectum, sed secundum ultionis effectum, say the Schoolmen. Gods wrath is his revenging Justice; which justice of God, as it simply burns against sinne, the Scripture calls his Anger; when it doth most fiercely sparkle out, it is called his Wrath; the same Justice when it pronounceth sentence, is called his Judgment; when it is brought into execution, it is called his Vengeance. Mr Marshal on 2 King. 23.26. When his anger is boyled up to a height by reason of indignities and injuries, it is called indignation, Isa. 26.20. and in the Psalmes,

God

Gods anger signifieth three things: 1. The eternal decree, whereby God hath purposed in himself to take vengeance upon all evil doers, John 3. 36. Rom. 1. 18. 2. His menacings or threatnings, Psal. 6. 1. Jonah 3. 9. Hos. 11. 9. 3. It is put for the effects of his anger, for punishment and revenge, Rom. 3. 5. Matth. 3. 7. Ephes. 5. 6. Dr Bensields Sermon 10. on Heb. 10. 30. This distinction is taken out of Zanchy, De natura Dei, l. 4. c. 6.

Gods Anger is an excellency of his own Essence, by which it is so displeased with sin, as it is inclined to punish the sinner, or a setled and unchangeable resolution to punish sinners according to their sinnes.

God is greatly moved to anger against all impenitent sinners, especially the unjust enemies of his people, Rom. 1. 18. & 2. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 10. 22. Ephes. 5. 6. & Col. 3. 6. Deut. 32. 21. Psal. 106. 40. because such wrong God: He cannot be hurt, for that were a weaknesse, but he may be wronged, for that is no weaknesse, but a fruit of excellency, seeing nothing is more subject to be wronged than an excellent thing or person: for wrong is any behaviour to a person not suitable to his worth. And the more worthy a person is, the more easie it is to carry ones self unseemly.

Sinne wrongs God,

Consider: 1. The power of this wrath, Psal. 90. 11. 2. The certainty of it, Ephes. 5. 6. 1 Cor. 6. 11. 3. The suddainnesse of it, Thou foole, this night shall thy soul be taken from thee. 4. The increase of it. Rom. 2. 5. See Nehem. 9. 32. Heb. 10. 17. Rev. 6. 16, 17. See those words, Zagnam, Zaguath, & Charad in my Hebrew Critica.

1. In his authority; when a just and righteous Governor hath made just and right Laws; then it is a wrong to his authority, a denying and opposing of it, to neglect, dis-regard, and infringe those Laws. Sinne is a transgressing of Gods Law, and impenitent sinne, doing it in a very wilful manner, with a kind of careleseneſſe, and bold dis-respect of the Law-maker. God should not have shewed himself wise, just, good, careful of mankind; that is to say, of his own work, if he had not made his Law; for it is a rule tending to guide man, to order his life most fitly for that which was the main end of it, the glory of his maker, and that which was the subordinate end of it, his own welfare.

2. It wrongs him in his honor, name and dignity; it is a denying of his perfect wisdome and justice.

3. In his goods, abusing them.

4. In his person, sin being offensive to the purity of his holy person.

Lastly, The opposing of Gods people, wrongs him in those that are nearest him.

The properties of Gods anger.

1. It is terrible: He is called Bagnal Chemah, the Lord of anger, Nahum. 1. 5. His wrath is infinite like himself, Rom. 9. 22. if we consider it, 1. In regard of its intension, for God is called A consuming fire, Heb. 12. 29. it pierceth the soul, and the inmost part of the Spirit. 2. In respect of its extension, it comprehends in it all kinds of evil, Corporeal, Spiritual, * in life, death, after death; it reacheth to Kingdoms, as well as to particular persons or families; to the posterity, as well as to the present generation. 3. In respect of duration, it continueth to all eternity, Job. 3. 36. it is unquenchable fire.

* To this belongs the Catalogue of curses repeated, Deut. 28. it is said to be full mixed in one place, and unmixed in the other: there is a mixture of all kind of evils, and yet no mitigation.

and Levit. 26. compare Deut. 29. 20. with Deut. 28. 61. and Psal. 78. 49. with Rev. 14. 10.

God is infinitly just, & perfect hater of sinne.

2. Irresistible, compared to a whirlwind.

God is most wise, of great and perfect understanding. He is slow to anger, never moved till there be great cause; therefore he holds out in his anger. Great persons inflict great punishments on those with whom they are displeased.

Object. Fury is not in me, Isa. 27. 4.

Answ. Take fury * for unjust, undue and excessive anger, which riseth too soon, worketh too strong, and continueth too long; so it is not in God, but a discreet and well advised motion against any offendor, by which one is moved to punish him according to his offence, anger so taken is in him.

* The word Chamath in the Original is rendred excandescentia, burning or fiery wrath, which the last Translation fitly cals fury. This is a remarkeable place (saith Luther) for those that are under temptations.

Anger

Anger, wrath, and rage, [a] (or fury) are ſometimes promiſcuouſly put one for another, and ſometimes diſtinguiſhed. Anger is a boyling of the bloud about the heart, cauſing a commotion of the ſpirits that are near. Wrath is the manifeſtation of that inward diſtemper by looks, geſtures or actions tending to revenge; but rage is the extremity of both the former, Prov. 27.4.

[a] Dr Burges on Pſal. 76. 10.

This may humble and aſtoniſh impenitent ſinners, Hoſ. 8. 5. Pſal. 90.11. We much quench Gods wrath as men do fire at the firſt, by caſting in water, and taking away the fewel; by repentance and reformation; pour out water, 1 Sam. 7. 8. Jer. 4.14. Pſal. 6.8. pray earneſtly to him, Zeph. 3. 3. Moſes by prayer turned away Gods hot anger from Aaron and Iſrael.

Conſectaries from Gods anger.

2. Let us take heed of ſinning, and ſo provoking God to anger; and let us be angry with all ſin, as he is. He is angry ſometimes with the beſt people, Iſrael his peculiar treaſure, Judges 2. Numb. 11. 2. At the beſt of his people, with Moſes, Aaron, and Miriam, Mic. 6. 4. Exod. 4. 14. 3. At the beſt of their performances, their prayers, Pſal. 80. 4.

Deut. 9. 9.

Though all ſinne provokes God to anger, yet ſome ſinnes more ſpecially.

In the firſt Table:

1. Idolatry, Exod. 20. 4, 5. Rom. 1. verſ. 21, 22, 23, 24. Deut. 32. 21 1 Cor. 10. 7.

2. Tempting God, Pſal. 78. 17. 1 Cor. 10. 9.

3. Murmuring againſt God, 1 Cor. 10. 10. complaining of his providence and expoſtulating as it were with him.

4. Rebellion againſt God, Pſal. 2. 3.

5. Blaſphemy againſt God, eſpecially that againſt the holy Ghoſt, as the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory reports of Arius.

In the ſecond Table.

1. Diſobedience to Parents, Exodus 21. 15, 17. Deuter. 27. 16. Prov. 30. 17.

2. Effuſion of innocent bloud, Gen. 4. 10.

3. Oppreſſion, Exod. 22 22.

4. Filthy and inordinate luſt.

Gods Meekneſſe or Clemency is a property in him, whereby he doth ſo moderate his anger, that it doth not exceed, yea it doth not match the hainouſneſſe of the offence; or, it is a property, whereby the Lord in judgment remembreth mercy, not laying ſuch grievous puniſhments, or of ſo long continuance upon his creatures, as their ſins deſerve, no not when he doth correct them, 2 Sam. 7.14. Jer. 3.5. Joel 2. 13. Joh. 3. 9, 10.

Pſal. 103. 10. God commandeth meekneſs in his word; Chriſt paterneth it in his life and death; the holy Spirit produceth it in our hearts.

Queen Elizabeth ſaid, next the Scripture ſhe knew no Book did her ſo much good as Seneca de Clementia. Her clemency was ſuch, that her brother King Edward was wont commonly to call her, His ſweet ſiſter Temperance.

Magiſtrates and Miniſters, and all Chriſtians ſhould labour for this grace, they ſhould be ſlow to anger, and moderate wrath. Magiſtrates ſhould rule, and Miniſters inſtruct in meekneſs. No virtue is ſo generally commended, 1 Tim. 6.11. Tit. 3. 2. Jam. 3. 17, 18. Humbleneſs of mind, and meekneſs of ſpirit, are often in Scripture ſet down together, Epheſ. 4. 2. Coloſſ. 3. 2.

Matth. 5. 5.

God takes to himſelf alſo grief and joy. Gods grief is his aptneſs to be diſpleaſed with a thing, as a man is with that which grieves him. Joy is the excellency of his nature, by which he is well pleaſed with other things.

So God attributes to himſelf deſire and deteſtation, hope and fear. Deſire is that whereby he uſeth fit means to effect any thing. Deteſtation is that whereby he uſeth fit and due means to prevent any thing.

God is ſaid to expect or hope for that which he hath uſed due means to effect, and therefore requireth that it ſhould be. To fear what he hath uſed due means to prevent, and ſo will order the means that it may not be.

Much what the ſame with deſire and deteſtation.

CHAP.

Chap. X.

Of GODS Virtues, Particularly of his Goodneſſe.

SO much concerning the affections attributed to God, his virtues follow; which as they have their ſeat in man, in the will and affections; ſo it is not inconvenient for methods ſake to refer them to the ſame in God. Gods virtues * are his eſſence conſidered, as it alwayes worketh orderly, fitly, and agreeably to perfect reaſon. They are not things differing from his eſſence as in us, but we muſt conceive of them according to our capacity, and handle them diſtinctly.

* Virtues in men are certain excellent and confirmed habits, by which they are made apt and prompt to uſe their faculties well and orderly. Deus eſt ſummum bonum ſimpliciter; & non ſolum in aliquo genere, vel ordine rerum. Aquinas.

By virtues we underſtand firſt in general the idea of virtue, or the chiefeſt moral perfection, by which God is in himſelf abſolutely the beſt, and in reſpect of which, all the virtues of Angels and men are only ſlender ſhadows and repreſentations. For God is Summum bonum, the chiefeſt good, and moſt perfect goodneſſe, both metaphyſically and morally; ſo that his nature and will is the firſt rule of goodneſſe and rectitude, with which, as far as things agree, ſo far they are, and are called good. 2. He is the cauſe of all goodneſſe in the creatures, which have ſo much goodneſſe as God works and keeps in them.

Luke 18. 19. Matth. 19. 17. Some ſay God comes from Good, for God onely is eſſentially and perfectly good. Nos Germani uſque à majoribus noſtris (præclarius profectò & pulchrius quam ulla alia lingua) Deum à bonitatis vocabulo, ſermone nobis vernaculo vocamus, quippe qui fons perennis ſit & perpetuo ſcaturiens, affluentiſſimis bonis exundans, & à quo omne quicquid uſpiam boni eſt dicitur & emanat, Lutherus in Catechiſmo majore. God is alſo an allſufficient good, an univerſal good, virtually and eminently what ever is good in the creature, and a permanent and everlaſting good. Vide Petav. De Deo, lib. 6. cap. 1, 2, 3.

Exod. 33. 19. Pſal. 34. 8, 9. and 73. 1. and 117. 2. Rom. 2. 4.

Gods Goodneſſe is an eſſential property whereby he is infinitely, and of himſelf good, and the author and cauſe of all goodneſſe in the Creature.

Gods goodneſſe is conſidered as he is good in himſelf, yea, goodneſſe it ſelf, Exod. 34. 6. Pſal. 119. 68. or as he is good to his creatures, which is his bounty, which being referred to his creatures, either as having goodneſſe communicated to them, is his love; or as being in miſery, is his mercy, or as having deſerved no good thing at the hands of God, but rather the contrary, is his Grace.

* Bonum eſt id quod omnes appetunt, Ariſtotle Seu, quod natura ſua appetibile eſt. But Petavius ſaith this is not a proper definition of good, becauſe a thing is good before it be deſired, and it is therefore deſired, becauſe it is good; that rather is counted good (ſaith he) Quod eſt rei alicui conveniens, & conſentaneum. De Deo, l. 6. c. 1. which (ſaith he) is the opinion of Durand, Non ignobilis de Shola Magiſtri. Goodneſſe is a property of things by which they are fit to produce actions requiſite for their own and the common welfare. David ſeemeth to give us this deſcription of Gods goodneſſe, Pſalm 119. 68. Bonitas Dei eſt, qua Deus in ſe maximè perfectus & appetibilis, omniumque extra ſe appetibilium & bonorum cauſa eſt. Wendelinus. Goodneſſe is the fitneſſe of every thing for its own end, and for the actions which for that end it ought to perform. Whatſoever thing is excellent in the creatures, is much more in God, James 1. 17.

Goodneſſe * is the perfection of things for which they are deſirable; good and appetible are convertible: What is good is to be deſired. Appetibilitas eſt de formali ratione boni, ſay the Schooles, Gen. 3. 6. God is to be deſired of all, he is the chiefeſt good, becauſe all perfection of good, both extenſive and intenſive is in him alone.

The goodneſſe of a thing conſiſts in debita rectitudine.

The properties of the chiefeſt good are theſe:

1. It is propter ſe amabile, to be deſired for it ſelf; ſo only God.

God is good in and of himſelf, Matth. 19. 17. originally good, Jer. 2. 13. the chief good, infinitely good, a durable eternall good, Pſal. 73. 26.

2. It

2. It is able to satisfie the soul, and that satisfaction which it gives is perpetual. In God there is both satiety and stability; satisfaction of the appetite, and continuance of that satisfaction.

2. God is causally good, worketh all goodnesse in the creature, and doth good to them, Psal. 33. 5.

3. Eminently and absolutely good, the only good, Omne bonum in summo bono. There is a goodnesse in the creature, its nature is good, but goodnesse is not its nature; so there is none good but God; viz. Essentially, Originally.

Our Saviour Matth. 19. 17. reproved one for calling him good; not that he is not so essentially, but because he thinking him to be no more than a Prophet, did yet call him so. God is onely good essentially, independently; comparatively to God the creature is not good.

The Scripture proveth Gods goodnesse,

1. Affirmatively, when it affirmeth that God is good, and commends his goodnesse. Psal. 25. 8.

2. Negatively, when it denieth that there is any evill in him, Psal. 92. 16. Deut. 32. 4.

3. Symbolically, when it celebrateth the riches of his goodnesse, Romans 2. 4.

4. Effectively, when it affirms that all the works of God are good, Gen. 1. 31. It was said of every thing particularly when it was made, The Lord saw that it was good; and in the conclusion of the whole Creation, God saw all his works that they were good, yea, very good; that is, commodious for the comfort of man, and all other creatures. He made all things good, therefore he is good himself. This may be proved by the goodnesse which still remains in the creatures; each creature hath yet remaining in him a power and fitnesse to do much good, and bring much comfort to man, as daily experience proves; therefore he, that notwithstanding the rebellion of man hath continued yet much good in the world, is surely good; the beasts do good to their yong, man to his children; this power they received from God.

There are naturally the good Heavens, the good Sun, and Moon, good Food and Raiment; Spiritually, good Angels and Men, because there is a good God.

5. God is to be loved, honoured, praised, and served by man, therefore he is good; or else he were not worthy this respect from the creature.

God is abundant in goodnesse, Exod. 34. 6.

The goodnesse of God is either considered ad intra and absolutely, or else ad extra and respectively. For the first, God in himself is good.

This will appear by considering, 1. The various kindes or sorts of his goodnesse, in giving, James 1. forgiving, forbearing, and mitigating evil, Psal. 78. 38. 2. The freenesse of it, he gives where there is no obligation, nay, a disobligation, Mat. 5. 45. 3. His multiplying the acts of goodnesse, often giving, forgiving, many times sparing, mitigating evils. 4. The continuance of it, it is a lasting, nay, an everlasting goodnesse, Psal. 52. 1.

This appears:

1. In reckoning up all the kinds of good things that are; for there is, 1. Bonum utile, the profitable good; now how happy must they needs be who have him, which can command all things; if thou hast him, thou hast all things else in him. 2. There is bonum jucundum, taste and see how sweet he is, At thy right hand are pleasures for evermore. 3. Bonum honestum, he is the holy God, the Author of all holinesse, and the exemplar of it. Psalme 34.

2. This goodnesse of his cannot be increased, it being his essence, it cannot be made better; for God hath in him, not onely all the actual, but all the possible goodnesse that is in the creatures; any creature still may be better; thy riches, honours, comforts may be better, but thy God cannot be a better God; therefore we should infinitely affect him more than all creatures.

3. It is independent goodnesse, he is omnis boni bonum; hence he is said to be only, that is, essentially and immutably good.

4. It is essential; the essence and goodnesse of the creatures is different; good-neſſe in the Angels the perfecteſt creatures, is a ſuperadded quality to them, they may be good, but ille bonus ſuo bono eſt, He is good with his own goodneſſe, he cannot be God, if he be not good.

5. It is illimited goodneſſe, infinite, without all bounds, above all that can be conceived, he being eſſentially ſo, and not limited to this or that being, neither is his goodneſſe.

6. It is unmixed goodneſſe, 1 Joh. 1. 5. he is light, and there is no darkneſſe in him, not the leaſt evil of ſinne.

7. It is the ſamplar and form of all goodneſſe in the creatures: So far a thing is good as it doth reſemble him.

All the good of a creature is in God alwayes:

1. Eminently, as you conſider it in its kind, without imperfection.

2. Efficiently, as he is the Author and cauſe of all the good the creature hath.

3. Exemplarily, as he is the rule and pattern of all goodneſſe.

4. Finally, as he is the chiefeſt good of all creatures, ſo that all terminate their deſires in him.

Secondly, God is good reſpectively in what he doth to the creature: that appeareth in the good things beſtowed upon them. He gives to all liberally, eſpecially the rational creatures, as men and Angels, partake of his goodneſſe, being made capable of enjoying him for ever. 2. In the evil he keeps off from the Elect; as he will withhold no good things, ſo he will let no evil befal them.

James 1.

Object. God is infinitely good (ſay the Arminians) therefore he cannot but naturally will good to the creature.

Sol. It doth not follow; for out of his goodneſſe he made the world, his goodneſſe freely communicated, not out of neceſſity, then it will follow that he naturally made the world. 2. God is infinitely juſt, therefore he alſo naturally wills the perdition of all ſinners, which they will not admit. 3. He is infinitely good in himſelf, not therefore ſo to his creatures, for ſo he ſhould will all good to them, and actually communicate it, and ſo ſhould ſave all. Notwithſtanding Gods goodneſſe of nature, he ſuffered man to fall; but yet he was ſo good that he would not have ſuffered it, unleſſe he could have ſhewed as much goodneſſe to man another way; and indeed Chriſt is a greater good to us by faith, than Adams innocency could have been; but yet ſince that evil is come into the world, how many calamities might befall thee, did not Gods goodneſſe prevent it? that the earth ſwallows thee not up tis Gods goodneſſe. The goodneſſe of God is ſo great, that no creature ſhould ſuffer puniſhment, but that the juſtice of God doth require the ſame, or elſe ſome greater good may be drawn from thence, Ezek. 33. 11.

Rhetor-fortis.

Bonitas Dei erga creaturas eſt meré voluntaria atque arbitraria, niſi quum eſt aliquid in creatura quod referat Dei imaginem qua ſanctius eſt. Fieri non poteſt ut creaturam ſuam non amet in qua reſulgere videt imaginem ſuam, at cum aliquid eſt in creatura ab illa imagine abhorrens & ei repugnans, tum ſapientia moderatur bonitatem. Cameron prælect. in Matth. 16. 20.

Object. How doth it agree with Gods goodneſſe, that it is ſaid, Pſal. 18. 27. With the froward he will ſhew himſelf froward?

Anſw. In the general, the meaning is onely, that Gods judgements ſhall agree with mens manners, and David ſhews not how God is in himſelf, but relatively how he is to us.

Conſectaries from Gods goodneſſe.

Two things make men happy in Heaven.

1. Becauſe they will nothing but what is good.

2 They enjoy what they will,

We ſhould,

1. Love God becauſe of his goodneſſe, for it is the proper object of love. That which is the chief good, ought to be the principal object of all the powers of our ſouls. God is the principal good: O that we could account him ſo, and accordingly carry our ſelves toward him. Sine ſummo bono nil bonum, there is nothing good, without the chiefeſt good, Pſal. 73. 25, 26. Love is a ſenſible affection, do

Gal. 5. 22. Paul calls it The riches of Gods goodneſs, Rom. 2. 4. and maketh this uſe of it, that it ſhould lead us to repentance, to conſider, 1. What we were originally, good, the Creator being ſo, the creature muſt needs be; 2. What we are now, unlike him.

we

we find an earneſt panting of the ſoul after him, an high eſteem of him. One being askt what the love of God was, ſaid, I cannot define it, but I can feel it.

2. Imitate him, be good as he is good, be like our heavenly father, good to all, Summa religionis eſt imitari quem colis, Aug. de Civ. Dei, l. 8. c. 27. It is a chief point of Religion to imitate him whom we worſhip, Rom. 12. 9. Cleave to that which is good, we ſhould ſtill be doing or receiving good.

Goodneſſe in genere morum, is moral virtue, in genere gratiæ holineſſe.

3. Gods goodneſſe will ſupport his children in their calamities, Nehem. 1. 7. and arm them againſt poverty, and the fear of death it ſelf. I do not fear to dye (ſaid Ambroſe) becauſe we have a good Lord. Nec pudet vivere, nec piget mori, quia bonum habemus Dominum.

We are much to be blamed for ſleighting, deſpiſing or neglecting him the fountain of all goodneſſe. Man is a moſt loathſome creature that hateth, and fooliſh, that ſlighteth this chief good. Iſa. 5. 29.

Here is a ground of thankfulneſſe to Gods people, which enjoy the goodneſſe of God in part here in the creature, and ſhall hereafter immediately and fully. God is good to all in beſtowing upon them gifts of nature, of body or of minde, but he is eſpecially good to ſome, whom he hath choſen to life eternal. Luke 6. 36.

We may ſee the great evill of ſinne; nothing is ſo oppoſite to this attribute of Gods goodneſſe as ſinne; the Devils are not evill as creatures, but as ſinnefull.

CHAP. XI.

Of Gods Grace and Mercy.

SO much in general of Gods virtues.

Secondly, in ſpecial, the virtues which imply not imperfection in the reaſonable creature, are attributed to God.

The principal of which are,

Gods bounty. God is like a moſt liberal houſholder, which takes order that nothing in his houſe or about it ſhall want that which is neceſſary, farther than the fault is in it ſelf.

1. Bounty or Graciouſneſſe, by which God ſhews favor to the creatures freely, and that either commonly or ſpecially: 1. Commonly, when he exerciſeth beneficence and liberality toward all creatures, pouring upon them plentifully all goods of nature, body, minde and fortune, ſo that there is nothing which taſteth not of the inexhauſted fountain of his bleſſings and goodneſſe, Mat. 5. 44, 45. Pſal. 36. 5, 6. Gods bounty is a will in him to beſtow ſtore of comfortable and beneficial things on the creature in his [illegible]d. This bounty he ſhewed to all things in the creation, even to all Spirits, all men and all creatures, and doth in great part ſhew ſtill, for he opens his hand, and filleth every living thing with his bounty, he gives all things richly to enjoy.

He gives more than we ask, and before we ask, Uberior gratiâ quam precatio. 2 Chron. 20. 7. Iſa. 41. 8. James 2. 23.

2. Specially toward the Church, by which he beſtoweth eternal life on certain men fallen by ſinne, and redeemed in Chriſt, Tit. 2. 11. & 3. 4. As this is exerciſed toward the whole Church, ſo in a ſpecial manner towards ſome members of it, as toward Enoch, Moſes, Jacob, Paul, and eſpecially Abraham, who is therefore often called The friend of God; he made with him and his ſeed a perpetual League of friendſhip, and he conſtantly kept his Laws and Statutes, John 15. 14, 15.

Gods Graciouſneſſe is an eſſential property, whereby he is in and of himſelf moſt gracious and amiable, Pſal. 145. 8. God is onely gracious in and of himſelf, and whatſoever is amiable and gracious is ſo from him.

Gods Graciousnesse is that [a] whereby he is truely amiable in himself, and freely bountiful unto his creatures, cherishing them renderly without any desert of theirs, Psal. 86. 15. & 111. 5. Gen. 43. 29. Pelagius taught, that grace is given to men in respect of their merits, Gratia Dei datur secundum merita nostra, he said that Gods will had respect to merits foreseen, for this Pelagius was condemned for an Heretick in three Synods. St Austin refuteth this error, and referreth the matter to Gods will and purpose only. Bp Carleton against Montague, Ch. 3. Vide Bellarm. de Gratia & lib. arbitrio l. 6. c. 4, 5, 6. John Scotus was the greatest Pelagian that lived in his time, for it was he that brought in the doctrine of Meritum ex Congruo, he teacheth that Faith, Charity, Repentance, may be had ex puris naturalibus, which some of the most learned Papists do confesse to be the true Doctrine of Pelagius. Vide Bellarminum de Gracia & libero arbitrio, l. 6. c. 2.

[a] Gratia est, qua Deus in ipso est amabilis, suaque creatura favet & bene facit, unde hoc respectu gratia Dei est favor quo creaturas suas & imprimis homines prosequitur. Wendelinus. Gratia Dei duobus modis sumitur, nempe vel pro attributo Dei quod est in Deo, vel pro dono Dei quod est à Deo. Priori modo gratia Dei est gratuita Dei benevolentia, qua peculiariter favet & benefacit creaturæ suæ: à qua Deus dicitur gratiosus, (ut loquuntur Theologi) id est gratia præditus, ut à justitia justus, & à bonitate bonus. Dona Dei quæ sunt effecta gratiæ quæ est in Deo, metonymice etiam gratiæ nomine appellari solent præsertim extraordinaria aut peculiaria Dei beneficia quæ alijs præ alijs tribuuntur. Strangius De voluntate & actionibus Dei Circa peccatum, l. 11. c. 27. Vide plura ibid.

The Arminians speak much of Gods offering mercy, all giving Christ and faith, is with them, but an offering of Christ and faith, if we will receive them. God doth not only conditionally offer them, upon such performances of ours, but actually gives them to his people, 2 Pet. 1. 3. and he gives them absolutely, he sees no lovelinesse in us to invite him therennto.

God is gracious to all, Psal. 145. 8, 9, 10. but especially to such whom he doth respect in his well-beloved Son, Jesus Christ, Exod. 33. 19. Isa. 30. 19. Luk. 1. 30 Gen. 6. 8. 1 Cor. 15. 10. Gods free favor is the cause of our salvation, and of all the means tending thereunto, Rom. 3. 24. & 5. 15, 16. Ephes. 1. 5, 6. & 2. 4, 8. Rom. 9. 16. Tit. 3. 5. Heb. 4. 16. Rom. 6. 23. 1 Cor. 12. 4, 9. The Gospel sets forth the freenesse, fulnesse, and the powerfulnesse of Gods grace to his Church, therefore it is called The word of his grace, Acts 14. 3. & 20. 32. The Gospel of the grace of God, Acts 20. 24. Deus expandit gratia immensum Cœlum, Luther. All Gods dispensations from Election to Glorification are from free grace.

1. Because God would advance grace, the Cherubims lookt with their faces toward the Mercy-Seat.

2. That the reward might be sure, Rom. 4. 16. & 3. 7. being founded on Gods free-grace.

Gods Graciousnesse is firm and unchangeable, so that those which are once beloved can never be rejected, or utterly cast of, Psal. 77. 10.

Schoolemen distinguish Grace diversly, there is preventing and subsequent Grace, exciting, helping, grace operating, and cooperating, sufficient and efficacious Grace.

God bestoweth, 1. Good things. 2. Freely. 3. Plentifully, Psal. 111. 4. 4. In a special manner he is gracious toward the [illegible]

His grace is,

1. Given to persons that are most undeserving, Isa. 55. 7.

2. To many, Titus 2. 11. to all Nations, all sorts of persons.

Love is,

1. Grounded often on something which may deserve it; the grace [b] of God is that love of his which is altogether free.

2. Grace is such a kind of love as flows from a superiour to an inferiour; love may be in inferiours toward their superiours.

[b] Dr Jackson of Gods Attributes, l. 1. c. 14.

We should be also liberal in our services toward God, in our prayers and good works.

Consectaries of Gods graciousnesse.

We should desire and strive to obtain the grace and favour of God. David often calleth on God to cause his face to shine upon him, and to lift up the light of his countenance upon him. The holy Patriarchs often desired to find grace in the eyes of the Lord. It is better than life to him that hath it; it is the most satisfying content tent in the world, to have the ſoul firmly ſetled in the apprehenſion of Gods goodneſſe to him in Chriſt. It will comfort and ſtabliſh the ſoul in the want of all outward things, in the very hour of death. 2. It is attainable, Thoſe that ſeek Gods face ſhall find him.

It is, 1. A ſpiritual bleſſing.

2. A ſubſtantial bleſſing, *Prov.*8.21.

3. A fruit of preſent, and a pledge of eternal Communion with God, *Heb.*6.9.

4. It is peculiar to the Elect, *Pſal.*106.4.

Take heed of hazarding Gods favour, Pſal 63.3. Seek it above all things, Pſal. 106. 5, 6.

2. Be carefull to keep it above all things, *Gen.*39.9. Grieve chiefly for the loſſe of it, *Pſal.*30.6.

Grace is free:

1. Becauſe God requires no valuable conſideration for his mercies.

2. Though he requires qualifications in us, yet it is not for the worth of theſe that he doth ſhew mercy, theſe are but neceſſary diſpoſitions in the ſubject to fit him to receive grace.

3. In that he exacts nothing from us, but what he works in us.

We ſhould ſeek Gods favour:

1. When we are under fears, *Pſal.*80.1.

2. When we have loſt it by ſinne, *Pſal.*80.17.

3. Should be contented with him, though kept bare for outward things.

Reaſons:

1. From the worth of the thing it ſelf, *Pſal.*63.3.

2. Our buſineſſe mainly lies here, *Pſal.*91.9.

Means of purchaſing Gods favour:

1. Take notice that your ſins have worthily deprived you of his favour, and preſs theſe thoughts upon you till you feel your miſery; meditate on the Law, to ſhew you your curſedneſſe.

2. Conſider of the gracious promiſes of the Goſpel, and ſee the grace of God in Chriſt. His grace was exceeding abundant, ſaith the Apoſtle, fill you with all joy and peace in believing.

3. Confeſſe and bewaile your ſinnes, with a full purpoſe of amendment, and cry to God for grace in Chriſt. Keep your affection pure for God, Mat. 5. 3.

4. This ſtayes our hearts, when we apprehend our own unworthineſſe; God is gracious, and ſhews mercy to the undeſerving, the ill-deſerving. Pſal.103.8,9. 1 Pet.5.16. Nehem. 9.17, 31. Rom.5.20,21.

We ſhould acknowledge that all grace in us doth come from him the fountain of grace, and ſhould go boldly to the throne of grace, and beg grace of him for our ſelves and others, Heb. 4. 16. Paul in all his Epiſtles ſaith, Grace be unto you. The Apoſtle, Epheſ. 1. 3. and ſo on, ſpeaks of Redemption, Vocation, Juſtification, Glorification, And all this, ſaith he, is to the praiſe of his glory, and 12, 14. verſes, we ſhould give God the praiſe of all: He is the firſt cauſe, and laſt end. The Arminians will ſeem to ſay, That all comes from grace, and that faith is the grace of God, but they ſay, it is a power given to all, and that God hath done alike for all, onely ſome improve the power of reaſon, and will, better than others, without any ſpecial diſcriminating grace from God; then God is not the firſt cauſe, that I believe it is the free working of God within me. We ſhould take heed of encouraging our ſelves in ſinne, becauſe God is gracious, this is to turn Gods grace into wantonneſſe. We ſhould frequent the Ordinances where God is graciouſly preſent, and ready to beſtow all his graces on us. The Word begets grace, Prayer increaſeth it, and the Sacraments ſeal it.

It refutes, 1. The Papiſts, which boaſt of their own merits. (Vide Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 13. de Gratia cap. 2. Queſt. 2.) By the grace of God I am that I am, 1 Cor.15.10. Rom.11.6. By grace we are ſaved, Epheſ. 2. 8. They diſtinguiſh grace into that which is gratis data freely given, as the work of miracles, the gift of propheſying, and that which is gratum faciens, making us accepted,

All boaſting is here excluded Rom. 3.27. & 4.2,4,5. That was a curſed ſpeech, Free-grace, 1. A liberalitate, becauſe God gives it freely, Iſa. 55.12. 2. A liberatione, becauſe it frees us from ſin. *Luk.*1.71.. Rom. 6.17,18, 22.

Da mihi æternam vitam quam debes. Quid meritum eſt, niſi bonefium quoddam & laudabile factum, cui merces & compenſatio aliqua debetur?

ed, as faith and love are graces making us accepted; but the grace which maketh us accepted, is freely given, therefore they are not oppoſite members. The firſt of theſe are in the Scripture called Gifts, 1 Cor. 12, 4, 8, 9, 10. The later are called Fruits, by the ſame Apoſtle, Gal. 5. 22, 23. Graces belong to every man for himſelf, gifts are for the benefit of the Church in common. There is χάρις and χάρισμα, Grace and the gift of Grace, they differ as the cauſe and the effect, as Lux in ſole, and Lumen in aëre; one is in God ſubjectivè, the other in man objectivè.

Petav. Diſſertat. Eccleſ. l. 2. c. 4. Mr Thorndike in his book of the Covenant of Grace, Ch. ult. after a ſort defends that diſtinction of the Schoolmen, concerning merit of condignity, and congruity. Epheſ. 2. 9. 2 Tim. 1. 9. Bona mea dona tua, Auguſt. l. 10. confeſſ. c. 4. Every one is born with a Pope in his belly; men had rather be ſaved by ſomething of their own, than to be beholding to Chriſt for ſalvation. Ignorant people ſay, they hope to be ſaved by their good deeds and meaning.

Auſtin, to prove that a man can do nothing of himſelf in things truly good, but that the beginning, progreſſe and conſummation of all good ought to be wholly aſcribed to God, divided Grace into preventing, operating, cooperating and perſevering. Quanquam voces hæ totidem apicibus non inveniuntur traditæ in litteris ſacris: res tamen ipſa in monumentis ſacris planiſſimè invenitur. Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 13. De Gratia Dei. cap. 1. Sect. 5. Vide plura ibid.

It is five times together called the Gift, the free Gift, the Gift of Righteouſneſſe, Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17.

Gratiæ nomen ex viſa, propriâque notione hoc habet, ut gratuitum quoddam, nec pretio aliquo, vel merito redemptum beneficium ſignificet: ac mercedi, & compenſationi ex juſtitia debitæ ex adverſo reſpondeat. Sic enim apud Juriſconſultos gratis, & mercede data, aut conſtituta opponi cenſentur, & Apoſtolus Rom. 4. 4. & 12. 8. Atque hoc paſſim contra Pelagianos ſcribens inculcat Auguſtinus: ut cum ait, lib. de grat. Quæſt. 3. Quomodo eſt gratia, ſi non gratis datur? Quomodo eſt gratia, ſi ex debito redditur? Petavius de Incarnat. lib. xi. cap. vi. Vide plura ibid.

2. The Arminians, (the Patrons of mans free-will, and enemies of Gods free grace) who ſay, That a man may ſo farre improve naturals, as to merit grace, and that God gives effectually grace to the wicked which [a] ſhall never be ſaved, to Judas as well as Paul. How is that effectual, which moving men unto faith and repentance, doth never bring them to one nor other? It ſeems theſe Remonſtrants never learnt this Leſſon, Arminio præceptore; for he defines effectual grace to be that quæ ſortitur effectum, which obtains the effect. They ſay, That a man without Gods grace may keep all the Commandments, whereas Chriſt ſaith not (as Auguſtine [b] notes) John 15. 5. Without me you can do little, but, Without me you can do nothing. Never had the Church of God (ſaith Dr Fearley in his Pelagius Redivivus, 2d Parallel.) ſince the Apoſtle St Paul, a more valiant and reſolute Champion of Grace than St Auguſtine. Pelagius would change himſelf into divers forms, as is manifeſt by the Hiſtory of him; although ſometimes he ſeems to reſtrain the whole operation of grace to external perſwaſions; yet being preſſed by Auguſtine and others, both he and his Diſciples have often been compelled alſo to confeſſe the inward gifts of grace and the holy Ghoſt. Vide Brochm. Syſtem.

[a] Dr Twiſſe in a Manuſcript.

[b] In Johannem Tract. 1. Vide Aquin. part. 1. Quæſt. 3. Art. 1. Quamvis auctoris (meritò ſuo Pelagius, gratiæ inimicus) ſubinde tamen gratia mentionem fecerit, incitaverit, nec à verbis orthodoxis abſtinuit, quamvis ſenſum contrarium occultarit, ſæpè etiam aliis verbis expreſſerit, & re ipſa docuerit. Rivetus Diſput. 9. de efficacitate gratiæ & converſionis modo. Vide plura ibid. St Auguſtine preciſely in that time and place delivered the Orthodox Doctrine of Grace, when and where Pelagius began to ſpread his Hereſie. Gratia prædeſtinatus uſque ad gloriam perducet. Auguſt. We ſhould learn of Auſtin (who may truly be ſaid to have written rather ex gratia, than de gratia, ſo graciouſly doth he write of Grace) Totum Deo dare, qui voluntatem hominis bonam & præparat adjuvandam, & adjuvat præparatam. Enchir. ad Laurent. Pauls heart was ſo full of the apprehenſions of Gods free-grace, that he could not hold on his diſcourſe begun, Epheſ. 2. 4. without mentioning Gods grace, verſ. 5. & verſ. 8. Tanquam filius gratiæ, ſaith Bradwardine, he alwayes commends it. It was a proud ſpeech of Vega, Cœlum gratis non accipiam. Fruſtra nititur, qui non innititur, the voice ſaid to Auſtin, In te ſtas, ideo non ſtas. By the firſt helps of grace, we can deſire him, if we will. By vertue of the ſecond, we can obey him, if we will. And by vertue of the third, if we will, we can perſevere in him. Mr Pierce his Sinner Impleaded, 2d part. Chap. 3.

Theol. Artic. 13. de Gratia Dei, cap. 2. Quæſt. 1. Et Montaltii Epiſt. 2. per Wendrockium.

It comforts us againſt ſin, and fear of eternal death, Rom. 5.20,21. Paul and Silas ſung in priſon.

We ought to love and reverence God above all; and return praiſe to him for his free goodneſſe. The Goſpel offers, 1. Good things: 2. Great good things; 3. Freely. Gracious and amiable men win love and reverence from others. Some Divines think David is called a man after Gods own heart, eſpecially for his frequent praiſing of God in the Pſalms. We ſhould learn contentation and patience alſo under Gods hand, and to bear loſſes quietly in theſe times, ſince all that we have we received freely from God. This was Jobs argument, The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken, though he was plundered by the Chaldeans and the Sabeans.

2. Mercy, which is (as it were) a ſenſe of anothers miſery, with a prompt and ready inclination of the will to help the creatures freely in their miſeries. This affection God challengeth as proper to himſelf, and glories in it. Heroick and noble Spirits are moſt gentle and merciſull; cruelty is a ſign of a weak and baſe mind. This mercifull nature of God, although it principally appear toward man, as appears by the Laws given concerning Orphans, Widows, Strangers, Poor, and others oppreſſed with any calamity, yet his mercy is exerciſed alſo toward the bruit beaſts, Deut. 22. 4,6,7. Exod. 23.5,11,12.

Exod. 33.19. Pſal. 103.8. Exod. 22.22. Iſa. 30.18. Lament. 3.22. Tit. 3.5. Exod. 34.6,7. Epheſ. 2.4. Rom. 4.19. & 11.30,31.

The Schoolmen diſpute, Whether Mercy be in God, Paſſion being not in him (ſay they) Compaſſion cannot be in him, as it is defined Ægritudo animi de malis alienis: So it is not in him, or as it is a perturbation, it is farre more glorious and tranſcendent in him, than in us. Vide Aquin. part. 3. Quæſt. 21. Art. 3. concluſ. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 2.17. Sect. 176.

Mercy is a diſpoſition toward the creature conſidered as ſinfull and miſerable by his ſinne.

It is a readineſſe to take a fit courſe for the helping of the miſerable; or it is an Attribute in God [c] whereby the Lord of his free love is ready to ſuccour thoſe that be in miſery, Judges 2.18. & 10.26. He is called, The Father of mercies, 2 Cor. 1.3. ſaid, To be abundant in mercy, 1 Pet. 1.3. Rich in mercy, Epheſ. 2.4. He hath a multitude of mercies, Pſalm 51.1. is ſaid, To be of tender mercy, Pſalm 25.6. Luke 1.58. to have bowels of mercy, Pſalm 40.12. Gods mercy in Scripture uſually hath ſome Epithets, Matchleſſe, Jer. 3.1. Great, 2 Samuel 24.14. Pſalm 57.10. & 103.11. Nehemiah 13.22. Everlaſting, Pſalm 25.6. Luke 1.50. Free, Epheſ. 2. Rom. 9.15,16. Sure, Iſaiah 55.3.

[c] Miſericordia eſt, qua propenſus eſt Deus ad ſuccurrendum ſuis creaturis in aliqua miſeria conſtitutis, iiſque re ipſa ſuccurrit. Wendelinus.

Gods mercy to his Church ſhines in theſe things:

1. In paſſing by her infirmities, Exod. 34.7.
2. In accepting her endeavours.
3. In correcting, 1. Sparingly: 2. Unwillingly.
4. In providing all things needfull for it.

The Scripture hath there notable words to expreſſe the fullneſſe of Gods mercy in Chriſt, Epheſians 2.7. Romans 5.20. 1 Timothy 1.14. 3. Verſe's put upon Gods mercy.

Mercy in God is not any paſſion or quality, as it is in men, but it is the very divine Eſſence it ſelf, and therefore [d] perpetual and infinite, ſuch as no tongue can expreſſe.

Luke 1.50,54. Pſal. 48.2,3. & 89.28. [d] Epheſ. 2.4. 1 Pet. 1.3.

Mercy and compaſſion differ only in the extrinſecal denominations taken from different objects. Compaſſion is good-will toward others, provoked from notice of their miſery; mercy is an exceſſe of bounty, not eſtranged from ill deſervers in diſtreſſe.

Mercy in God and in us differ:

1. It is in him eſſentially, in us as a quality.
2. In him primarily, in us ſecondarily.

Gods

Gods Mercy is the cauſe of all mercy, it is without motive or worth in us, natural, free, Romans 9.18. boundleſſe, extends to a mans ſoul, body, this life, the next, to a man and his poſterity, Exodus 34.6,7. It is above all his works, Pſalm 145.9. It is beyond his promiſe, and our expectation. He doth acts of mercy with delight, Jeremy 32.42. Micah 7.18. Counts it his glory to ſhew mercy, Jeremy 33.9.

Reaſons:

That God hath mercy in him.

First, Whatſoever good and commendable thing is to be found in the creature, that muſt needs be found eminently and excellently in the Creator, from whom it is derived to the creature; and who could not derive it to the creature, if he had it not more perfectly in himſelf. Now mercy is to be found in all good men, and it is a lovely and commendable thing in them, ſuch as begets good will and liking towards them; therefore it is much more fully in God.

He is ready to forgive more ſins than we can imagine.

Secondly, He hath great mercy in him; if God be mercifull at all, he muſt needs be mercifull in great meaſure, yea, above all meaſure, beyond all degrees, in all perfection; for the Eſſence of God is Infinite, and his Wiſdome, Power, and Mercy are Infinite. See Geneſis 8.21. Iſaiah 57.17. & 55.8,9. He gives and forgives farre beyond us.

First, He exceeds us in giving:

1. Our courteſies are often extorted from us, Luke 18.11. he gives freely, Iſaiah 65.1. Romans 10.21. 1 John 4.9.

2. We give but ſmall gifts, God the greateſt, himſelf, his Sonne, his Spirit, John 3.16. Luke 2.14. Romans 8.16. John 17.24.

3. We give with ſelf-reſpect.

4. We give to our friends and relatives, 1 Samuel 24.19. Mat. 5.45.

5. We are ſoone weary of giving, but ſo is not he, James 1.5. 2 Samuel 7.18,19.

6. We give at death, when we can keep no longer, Romans 5.11.

Secondly, He exceeds us in forgiving:

1. Man is revengefull to thoſe which wrong him, ſo is not God, Exodus 34.7. Hoſea 11.9. Jeremy 3.1.

2. We forgive when it is not in our power to avenge our ſelves, 2 Samuel 24.19. we are alwayes in Gods power.

3. We are hardly drawn to forgive, Nehem. 9.17. Pſalm 37.3. Epheſians 3.18,19, 20. Iſay 65.20. Luke 15.40.

4. We cannot forgive often, Matthew 18.21. God doth, Geneſis 6.5.

5. If we forgive, we do not forget, Jeremy 31,18,19,20.

Luk.6.11. Exod.20.6. The mercy of God which reacheth to the pardon of ſinne, is peculiar to the Catholick Church, Iſa.33.24. Luk. 16.24,25 Tit.3.5. Luk.1.77,78. Lam 3.12.

There is a mercy of God, which extends to all his creatures, Pſalm 145.9. Luke 6.35.

God is mercifull unto all men as men:

First, To the worſt of men, his foes:

1. In giving the good they do not deſerve, but abuſe.

He gives abundance of outward bleſſings to them:

1. In their bodies, firm ſtrength, Pſalm 73.4.

2. Their eſtates, fils them with hid treaſures, Pſalm 17.14.

3. In liberty, they are ſtee from fear, Job 29.9.

4. In their poſterity, Job 21.8.

2. In forbearing that evil they deſerve, and provoke him every day to inflict, Acts 13.18. yet he perfectly knows their ſinnes, and hates ſinne infinitely, Pſalm 5.5. and hath power in his hand to execute vengeance on ſinners. When wicked men abuſe all theſe forbearances, ſlight his threats, Iſaiah 5.19. Rom. 9.22. and his own people are much offended with this forbearance of his, Jeremy 12.1. Habak. 3.14.

Secondly, To his own children eſpecially, is God rich in mercy; all his mercies and forbearances to the wicked are for the good of his own; he hath ſaving, ſanctifying, pardoning, cleanſing mercies for his Saints:

1, In

1. In all ages.
2. To them of the loweſt forme, Zechary 4.10. Matth. 12.20.
3. In their ſaddeſt condition, Pſalm 4. ult.

The root of all the mercies we enjoy is the bloud of Chriſt, that God gave his Sonne, Eſay 7.8,9. from hence ſpring all our ſpiritual and temporal mercies, the Goſpel never comes empty handed, Hoſea 2. later end.

The ſpecial mercy of God is offered unto all within the Church, Ezekiel 16. 6. Acts 13.40. but is beſtowed onely upon ſome, viz. Such as receive Chriſt, John 1. 11, 12.

This life is the time of mercy, wherein we obtain pardon for ſinne; after this life there is no remiſſion or place for repentance.

All bleſſings ſpiritual and corporal are the effects of Gods mercy. Common bleſſings of his general mercy, ſpecial bleſſings of his ſpecial mercy.

The effects of Gods ſpecial mercy, are,

1. The giving of Chriſt for us.
2. His Word.
3. Juſtification.
4. Sanctification.
5. Giving his Spirit for a Comforter in our griefs and afflictions, John 14.16.
6. The Sacraments.

All his thoughts are thoughts of mercy to his people, Jer. 29.11. all his deſigns are projects of mercy, Deut. 6. toward the latter end. The wayes whereby he comes down to their ſouls preventing, convincing converting mercies, Pſal. 25.10. and whereby they aſcend to him, in their communion with him, Iſa. 57.17.

Mercy muſt accord with Wiſdome, Juſtice and Truth; therefore thoſe that ſtoop to Juſtice by acknowledging their offence, and worthineſſe to be puniſhed for it, and are ſorry they have ſo offended, and reſolve to offend ſo no more, and earneſtly alſo implore Gods mercy, ſhall partake of it. The Lord is plenteous in mercy to all which call upon him, and the Lords delight is in them which fear him, and hope in his mercy. Judge your ſelves, and you ſhall not be judged; humble your ſelves under the hand of God, and he will exalt you. On theſe termes he will ſhew mercy univerſally to all, which ſubmit to him thus, and ſeek to him for mercy, without any exception of perſon, fault, time.

On what terms God will ſhew mercy.

2. To whom he will ſhew mercy.

Queſt. Whether Mercy and Juſtice be equal in God, and how can he be moſt juſt and moſt merciſull?

Anſw. Mercy and Juſtice may be conſidered Ad intra, as they are eſſential properties in God, and ſo he is equally juſt as well as merciſull.

2. Ad extra, as he puts himſelf forth into the outward exerciſe of mercy and puniſhment. In this latter ſenſe, we muſt diſtinguiſh between this preſent time, where mercy triumphs againſt judgement; James 2.13. and the day of judgement, that is a time of juſtice and retribution to the wicked; and ſo David ſpeaking of this preſent time, ſaith, All thy wayes are mercy and truth, Pſalm 25. and that of the Schools is true, Remunerat ultra condignum, punit infra.

Gods Juſtice and Mercy are both infinite and equal in him, * onely in regard of man there is an inequality. For God may be ſaid to be more merciſull unto them that are ſaved, than juſt to them that are damned: for the juſt cauſe of damnation is in man, but of ſalvation is wholly from God. In himſelf and originally they are both equal, and ſo are all his Attributes; but in reſpect of the exerciſe and expreſſion upon his creatures and abroad in the world, there is ſome difference. Mr Bolton on Prov. 18.14. Juſtice ſeeks a fit object, Mercy only a fit occaſion: Juſtice looks on thoſe which deſerve, Mercy onely on thoſe which need.

* Etſi omnes homines Deus damnaret uno excepto, tamen adhuc major eſſet miſericordia quam judicium, nimirum quia nullum fit judicii divini effectum niſi propter merita eorum, qui damnantur: at miſericordia nulla invenit merita. Chamier. Tom. 3. lib. 7. c. 8. Miſericordia & juſtitia Dei in ſe & quatenus in Deo ſunt, pars ſunt; reſpectu effectorum & objectorum major eſt miſericordia. Wendelin.

First, We ſhould believe this point; labour to be fully perſwaded in our hearts that Gods mercies are great and many; he hath preventing mercies; how many ſinnes hath he preſerved thee from? 2. Sparing mercies, Lament. 3. 22. behold Gods ſeverity towards others, and mercy toward thee. 3. Renewing mercies. 4. Pardoning mercies. He is willing and ready to help us out of miſery; therefore we ſhould praiſe him for this Attribute. How excellent and deſirable a thing is mercy? therefore give him the glory of his mercy.

Mal.3.17. God will ſpare his in all their weakneſſes and ſervices, ſparing mercy in ſome reſpects is as great as pardoning mercy

Secondly, It is full of comfort to a childe of God, he need not be diſmayed with any thing, not his imperfections, ſince the Devil himſelf cannot hurt him: for God is more mercifull to help him, than the Devil can be malicious to hurt him.

1. Wounded ſinners which pant after grace, ſhould nouriſh their faith with the conſiderations of Gods mercy. Mercy conſiders not what one deſerves, but what he needs, *Iſa.*55.1. *Pſal.*25.10.

2. The lapſed, but penitent believers; all Gods wayes are mercy and truth, *Jude verſ.*21. 2 Tim. 1. 18. God will begin and end with mercy and truth, 1 John 1.19.

3. Gods children under ſtraights, when they are troubled about ſoul-matters, corruption is ſtrong, grace weak, 1 *Theſſ.*5.24. 1 *Tim.*1.12. and about the ſupplies of this preſent life. We muſt truſt in Gods mercy and truth for our ſouls, Luke 12.29. *Pſal.*115.15,16,18.

Thirdly, We ſhould be encouraged to ſeek to him for mercy, ſeeing there is ſo great ſtore of it in him. There is an infiniteneſſe of mercy in God, ſo that whatever my ſins have been, if now I will turn, he will accept me; if I ſtrive to turn he will enable me; therefore I will now run to him * for mercy, I will fall down before the throne of Juſtice, and confeſſe I have deſerved wrath, and nothing but wrath, but will cry to him for mercy.

Matth.18.30. * The Papiſts ſeek to the Virgin Mary, and other Saints, Maria mater gratiæ, mater miſericordiæ, Tu nos ab hoſte protege, & horâ mortis ſuſcipe.

Mercy much pleaſeth God.

2. All Scripture and Providence aim at this, the ſetting forth of Gods mercy.

The great motive to draw ſinners to repentance, is Gods mercy, Eſay 55.7. Acts 2. 38, 39.

This will, 1. Keep men from deſpair, Pſalm 130.4. and carnal confidence, Eſay 55.1. 1 *Cor.*1.29.

2. It layes the greateſt obligation on men, Titus 2.11. and gives the cleareſt ſatisfaction, *Rom.*4.16.

3. It is the great aim of the Scripture to draw men by mercy, Exodus 34.6. Neh. 9.17. Luke 15.20. Eſay 65.20. *Jer.*31.20.

4. It is the aim of providence, and all Gods diſpenſations, Pſalm 145.9.

Pſal.106 3. Luk. 1.46,60. Fourthly, Thoſe that have and do ſeek, ſhould give him the glory of his mercy, and take comfort themſelves in the confident hope of finding mercy. Praiſe him for his mercy to others, and he will give thee ſome comfortable hope of finding it thy ſelf.

Luk.6.35. Fifthly, We ſhould be mercifull like God, to our ſelves and brethren, their ſouls and bodies, imitate his mercy; be you mercifull to the afflicted and diſtreſſed, ſhew mercy freely and conſtantly, and then we ſhall obtain mercy, *Matth.*5.7.

Sixthly, We ſhould labour to be qualified for mercy.

1. Confeſſe our ſins, and forſake them, *Prov.*28.13.

2. Fear God, his mercy is on them that fear him, Luke 1.50. Pſalm 103. 11,17,18.

3. Love God, he ſhews mercy to them that love him, *Exod.*20.6.

4. Truſt in God, then mercy ſhall compaſſe us, *Pſal.*32.10.

5. Think on good things, then we ſhall have mercy, *Prov.*14.22.

6. Keep cloſe to the Rule of Gods word, *Gal.*6.6.

Chap. XII.

Of Gods Juſtice, Truth, Faithfulneſſe.

A Third vertue in God is Juſtice, by which God in all things wills that which is juſt; or it is the Attribute whereby [a] God is juſt in and of himſelf, and exerciſeth juſtice toward all creatures, and giveth every one his due, Eſay 45.21. Pſalm 11.7. Geneſis 18.25. Zeph. 3.5. Romans 2.6,7. 1 Peter 1.17. 2 Theſſ. 1.6,7. 2 Tim. 4.8. 1 John 1.9. & 2.29. Juſtice in man is a ſetled will to do right in every thing to every perſon; ſo God hath a ſetled will to do right, Shall not the Judge of all the world do right? And, Are not my wayes equal? God ſtiles himſelf by this Title, and gives himſelf this Attribute, Zeph. 3.5.

[a] Juſtitia eſt qua Deus in ſe juſtus eſt, & extra ſe conſtanti voluntate ſuum cuique tribuit. Wendelin. Gen.18.25. Iſa.9.7. Pſal.45.6.

Gods Juſtice is two-fold:

1. Diſpoſing, by which, as a moſt free Lord and ſupreme Monarch of all, he diſpoſeth all things in his actions according to the rule of equity, and impoſeth moſt juſt Laws upon his creatures, commanding and forbidding only that which is fit for them in right reaſon to do and forbear.

Juſtitia diſponens, qua Deus univerſa & ſingula juſto ordine diſponit & gubernat. Deut.32.4. Pſal.11.7. & 48.11. & 145.17. 1 Pet.1.17.

2. Diſtributive, which renders to every one according to his work, without reſpect of perſons, Pſalm 62.12. Job 34.11,19. Prov. 24.12. Jeremy 32.19. Ezekiel 7.27. Matth. 16.27. Deut. 16.17. 2 Chron. 19.7. Acts 10.34. Epheſ. 6.9. Gal. 2.6. And this diſtributive Juſtice is alſo two-fold, Præmii & Pœna, of Reward and Puniſhment.

Rom.2. from the 6. to the 12. 2 Cor.5.10. Col.3.25. Rev.22.12. Juſtitia diſtribuens eſt gratiæ vel iræ: illa eſt promptiſſima voluntas præſtandi promiſſa: iſta, voluntas implendi comminationes. Wendelin. Matth. 19.29. God aſſignes fit rewards for well and evil doing.

Firſt, Of Reward, when God bountifully rewards the obedience of the creature with a free reward, 2 Theſſ. 1.5,7. Matth. 10.41,42. Mark 9.41. God beſtows this reward not onely on the godly, both by heaping divers mercies on them in this life, and by the fullneſſe of glory and felicity in the life to come, but alſo on the wicked, whoſe morall actions he rewards with temporary rewards in this world, as the obedience of Jehu, the repentance of Ahab.

Secondly, Of Puniſhment, by which he appointeth to the delinquent creature, the puniſhment of eternal death for the leaſt ſinne, Geneſis 2.17. Rom. 6.23. which death is begun in this life, in divers kinds of miſeries and puniſhments, which for the moſt part are proportionable to their ſins, Gen. 3.17. & 20.18. but is perfected in the life to come, when the full wrath of God is poured upon it, John 3.36. 2 Theſſ. 1.16.

Dogma eſt Amyraldi, quod peculiari libro propugnavit, Deum poſſe, illibata ſua juſtitia, pro ſuo ſummo jure, torquere cruciatibus æternis animam ſanctam & innocentem. Si dixiſſet, Deum poſſe animam ſanctam deſtruere, eam reducendo ad nihilum, quanquam inutilis eſt quæſtio, & temeraria, nolim tamen pertinaciter ſuper ea re ducere contentionis funem. Sed bene eſt quod Amyraldus libro adverſus Spanhemium Ἀλογούμενα, aut ſibi contradicit: dicit enim, Deum non poſſe à ſe impetrare quin peccata Condonet reſipiſcenti. Molin. præfat. ad Judicium de Amyrald. lib. adverſ. Spanhem.

This juſtice is ſo eſſential [b] to God, immutable, and (as I may ſo ſpeak) inexorable, that he cannot remit the creatures ſins, nor free them from puniſhment, unleſſe his juſtice be ſatisfied; God cannot diſpenſe againſt himſelf, becauſe ſins do hurt the inward vertue of God, and the Rule of righteouſneſſe, the integrity therefore and perfection of God cannot ſtand, if he ſatisfie not that; yet through his bounty and goodneſſe he hath found out a way by which due ſatisfaction may be given thereunto, viz. By Chriſt, who hath born a puniſhment equivalent to our ſins, for us.

[b] Gods juſtice is not a quality or accident in him, but his very nature, eſſential to him. A man may be a man, and yet unjuſt; but God cannot be God, and be unjuſt. Gerh. loc. com.

Juſtice is taken:

1. For abſolute and univerſal perfection, Juſtitia univerſalis, the univerſal conjunction of all moral vertues, ſo Gods juſtice is the ſimple and abſolute perfection of his Eſſence.

2. For integrity in ones place and ſtation; ſo God is juſt in all his relations to men, a juſt Lord, Magiſtrate.

3. For faithfulneſſe in keeping promiſe, ſo God is juſt.

The Scripture proves the juſtice of God:

1. Affirmatively, when it cals him Juſt, a Revenger, Holy, Right, and extols his Juſtice, *Exod.*9.27. *Pſal.*11.7. *Jer.*12.1.

2. Negatively, when it removes from him injuſtice and iniquity, reſpect of perſons, and receiving of gifts, and alſo all the cauſes and effects of injuſtice, *Deut.*12.4. & 10.17. Daniel 9.14. Job 8,3.

3. Affectively, when it attributes to him Zeal, Anger, Fury, Exodus 20.5 & 32.10. Numb 11.10 which are not in God ſuch paſſions as they be in us, but an act of the immutable juſtice.

4. Symbolically, when it cals him a conſuming fire, Deut 4.24. compares him to an angry Lion, an armed Souldier, *Iſa.*38.13.

5. Effectively, when it affirms that he renders to every one according to his works. 1 *Sam.*26.23.

2. We forgive when it is not in our power to avenge our ſelves, 2 Samuel 24.19. we are alwayes in Gods power.

3. We are hardly drawn to forgive, *Nehem.*9.17. Pſalm 37.3. Epheſians 3.18,19, 20. Iſay 65.20. Luke 15.40.

4. We cannot forgive often, Matthew 18.21. God doth, Geneſis 6.5.

5. If we forgive, we do not forget, Jeremy 31,18,19,20.

There is a mercy of God, which extends to all his creatures, Pſalm 145.9. Luke 6.35.

Luk.6.11. Exod.20.6. The mercy of God which reacheth to the pardon of ſinne, is peculiar to the Catholick Church, Iſa.33.24. Luk. 16.24,25 Tit.3.5. Luk.1.77,78. Lam 3.22.

God is mercifull unto all men as men:

First, To the worſt of men, his foes:

1. In giving the good they do not deſerve, but abuſe.

He gives abundance of outward bleſſings to them:

1. In their bodies, firm ſtrength, Pſalm 73.4.
2. Their eſtates, fils them with hid treaſures, Pſalm 17.14.
3. In liberty, they are free from fear, Job 29.9.
4. In their poſterity, Job 21.8.

2. In forbearing that evil they deſerve, and provoke him every day to inflict, Acts 13.18. yet he perfectly knows their ſinnes, and hates ſinne infinitely, Pſalm 5.5. and hath power in his hand to execute vengeance on ſinners. When wicked men abuſe all theſe forbearances, ſlight his threats, Iſaiah 5.19. Rom. 9.22. and his own people are much offended with this forbearance of his, Jeremy 12.1. *Habak.*3.14.

Secondly, To his own children eſpecially, is God rich in mercy; all his mercies and forbearances to the wicked are for the good of his own; he hath ſaving, ſanctifying, pardoning, cleanſing mercies for his Saints:

1, In

Angels, but threw them into hell. Adam was caſt out of Paradiſe for one ſinne.

3. Neerneſſe; the Jews, Gods people formerly, are now caſt off; Moſes and David were puniſhed.

2. General, it extends to a mans poſterity; God will viſit the iniquity of fathers upon their children.

3. Inexorable, no ſinners can eſcape unpuniſhed; the ſinnes of the godly are puniſhed in their Surety Chriſt, and they are afflicted in this life. God is juſtice it ſelf, juſtice is eſſential to him, his will is the rule of juſtice: A thing is juſt, becauſe he willeth it, and not he willeth it becauſe it's juſt. He will right the wrongs of his children, 2 Theſſ. 1.6,7,8. He cannot be corrupted nor bribed.

Gods juſtice comprehendeth two things under it:

Firſt, Equity, in that he directs men equally, and requites them equally, commanding all and onely good things, ſuch as they in reaſon ought to doe, promiſing and threatning fit and due recompences of their obedience and diſobedience.

Secondly, Truth, whereby he declareth nothing to them, but as the thing is, and fidelity, whereby he fulfilleth all that he hath ſpoken.

The Arminians urge. How can God in juſtice command a man by his Word, the performance of that which cannot be done by him, without the inward help of the Spirit, and yet in the mean time God denies this inward grace unto him?

God may without blemiſh to his juſtice, command man to performe his du- [illegible] fault, time.

Queſt. Whether Mercy and Juſtice be equal in God, and how can he be moſt juſt and moſt merciſull?

Anſw. Mercy and Juſtice may be conſidered Ad intra, as they are eſſential properties in God, and ſo he is equally juſt as well as merciſull.

2. Ad extra, as he puts himſelf forth into the outward exerciſe of mercy and puniſhment. In this latter ſenſe, we muſt diſtinguiſh between this preſent time, where mercy triumphs againſt judgement, James 2.13. and the day of judgement, that is a time of juſtice and retribution to the wicked; and ſo David ſpeaking of this preſent time, ſaith, All thy wayes are mercy and truth, Pſalm 25. and that of the Schools is true, Remunerat ultra condignum, punit infra.

Gods Juſtice and Mercy are both infinite and equal in him, * onely in regard of man there is an inequality. For God may be ſaid to be more merciſull unto them that are ſaved, than juſt to them that are damned: for the juſt cauſe of damnation is in man, but of ſalvation is wholly from God. In himſelf and originally they are both equal, and ſo are all his Attributes; but in reſpect of the exerciſe and expreſſion upon his creatures and abroad in the world, there is ſome difference. Mr Bilſon on Prov. 18.14. Juſtice ſeeks a fit object, Mercy only a fit occaſion: Juſtice looks on thoſe which deſerve, Mercy onely on thoſe which need.

* Etſi omnes homines Deus damnaret uno excepto, tamen adhuc major eſſet miſericordia quam judicium, nimirum quia nullum ſit judicii divini effectum niſi propter merita eorum, qui damnantur: at miſericordia nulla invenit merita. Chamier. Tom. 3. lib. 7. c. 8. Miſericordia & juſtitia Dei in ſe & quatenus in Deo ſunt, pars ſunt; reſpectu effectorum & objectorum major eſt miſericordia. Wendelin.

First, We ſhould believe this point; labour to be fully perſwaded in our hearts that Gods mercies are great and many; he hath preventing mercies; how many ſinnes hath he preſerved thee from? 2. Sparing mercies, Lament. 3. 22. behold Gods ſeverity towards others, and mercy toward thee. 3. Renewing mercies. 4. Pardoning mercies. He is willing and ready to help us out of miſery; therefore we ſhould praiſe him for this Attribute. How excellent and deſirable a thing is mercy? therefore give him the glory of his mercy.

Mal.3.17. Godwill ſpare his in all their weakneſſes and ſervices, ſparing mercy in ſome reſpects is as great as pardoning mercy

Secondly, It is full of comfort to a childe of God, he need not be diſmayed with any thing, not his imperfections, ſince the Devil himſelf cannot hurt him: for God is more mercifull to help him, than the Devil can be malicious to hurt him.

1. Wounded ſinners which pant after grace, ſhould nouriſh their faith with the conſiderations of Gods mercy. Mercy conſiders not what one deſerves, but what he needs, *Iſa.*55.1. *Pſal.*25.10.

2. The lapſed, but penitent believers; all Gods wayes are mercy and truth, *Jude verſ.*21. 2 Tim. 1. 18. God will begin and end with mercy and truth, 1 John 1.19.

3. Gods children under ſtraights, when they are troubled about ſoul-matters, corruption is ſtrong, grace weak, 1 *Theſſ.*5.24. 1 *Tim.*1.12. and about the ſupplies of this preſent life. We muſt truſt in Gods mercy and truth for our ſouls, Luke 12.29. *Pſal.*115.15,16,18.

Thirdly, We ſhould be encouraged to ſeek to him for mercy, ſeeing there is ſo great ſtore of it in him. There is an infiniteneſſe of mercy in God, ſo that whatever my ſins have been, if now I will turn, he will accept me; if I ſtrive to turn he will enable me; therefore I will now run to him * for mercy, I will fall down before the throne of Juſtice, and confeſſe I have deſerved wrath, and nothing but wrath, but will cry to him for mercy.

Matth.18.30. * The Papiſts ſeek to the Virgin Mary, and other Saints, Maria mater gratia, mater miſericordia, Tu nos ab hoſte protege, & horâ mortis ſuſcipe.

Mercy much pleaſeth God.

2. All Scripture and Providence aim at this, the ſetting forth of Gods mercy.

The great motive to draw ſinners to repentance, is Gods mercy, Eſay 55.7. Acts 2.38,39.

This will, 1. Keep men from deſpair, Pſalm 130.4. and carnal confidence, Eſay 55.1. 1 *Cor.*1.29.

2. It layes the greateſt obligation on men, Titus 2.11. and gives the cleareſt ſatisfaction, *Rom.*4.16.

3. It is the great aim of the Scripture to draw men by mercy, Exodus 34.6. Neh. 9.17. Luke 15.20. Eſay 65.20. *Jer.*31.20.

4. It is the aim of providence, and all Gods diſpenſations, Pſalm 145.9.

Fourthly, Thoſe that have and do ſeek, ſhould give him the glory of his mercy, and take comfort themſelves in the confident hope of finding mercy. Praiſe him for his mercy to others, and he will give thee ſome comfortable hope of finding it thy ſelf.

Pſal.106 3. Luk. 1.48,60.

Fifthly, We ſhould be mercifull like God, to our ſelves and brethren, their ſouls and bodies, imitate his mercy; be you mercifull to the afflicted and diſtreſſed, ſhew mercy freely and conſtantly, and then we ſhall obtain mercy, *Matth.*5.7.

Luk.6.36.

Sixthly, We ſhould labour to be qualified for mercy.

1. Confeſſe our ſins, and forſake them, *Prov.*28.13.

2. Fear God, his mercy is on them that fear him, Luke 1.50. Pſalm 103. 11,17,18.

3. Love God, he ſhews mercy to them that love him, *Exod.*20.6.

4. Truſt in God, then mercy ſhall compaſſe us, *Pſal.*32.10.

5. Think on good things, then we ſhall have mercy, *Prov.*14.22.

6. Keep cloſe to the Rule of Gods word, *Gal.*6.6.

Chap. XII.

Of Gods Juſtice, Truth, Faithfulneſſe.

A Third vertue in God is Juſtice, by which God in all things wills that which is juſt; or it is the Attribute whereby [a] God is juſt in, and of himſelf, and exerciſeth juſtice toward all creatures, and giveth every one his due, Eſay 45.21. Pſalm 11.7. Geneſis 18.25. Zeph. 3.5. Romans 2.6,7. 1 Peter 1.17. 2 Theſſ. 1.6,7. 2 Tim. 4.8. 1 John 1.9. & 2.29. Juſtice in man is a ſetled will to do right in every thing, to every perſon; ſo God hath a ſetled will to do right, Shall not the Judge of all the world do right? And, Are not my wayes equal? God ſtiles himſelf by this Title, and gives himſelf this Attribute, Zeph. 3.5.

[a] Juſtitia eſt qua Deus in ſe juſtus eſt, & extra ſe conſtanti voluntate ſuum cuique tribuit. Wendelin.

Gen.18.25. Iſa.9.7. Pſal.45.6.

Gods Juſtice is two-fold:

1. Diſpoſing, by which, as a moſt free Lord and ſupreme Monarch of all, he diſpoſeth all things in his actions according to the rule of equity, and impoſeth moſt juſt Laws upon his creatures, commanding and forbidding only that which is fit for them in right reaſon to do and forbear.

Juſtitia diſponens, qua Deus univerſa & ſingula juſto ordine diſponit & gubernat. Deut.32.4. Pſal.11.7. & 48.11. & 145.17. 1 Pet.1.17.

2. Diſtributive, which renders to every one according to his work, without reſpect of perſons, Pſalm 62.12. Job 34.11,19. Prov. 24.12. Jeremy 32.19. Ezekiel 7.27. Matth. 16.27. Deut. 16.17. 2 Chron. 19.7. Acts 10.34. Epheſ. 6.9. Gal. 2.6. And this diſtributive Juſtice is alſo two-fold, Præmii & Pœnæ, of Reward and Puniſhment.

Rom.2. from the 6. to the 12. 2 Cor.5.10. Col.3.25. Rev.22.12. Juſtitia diſtribuens eſt gratiæ vel iræ: illa eſt promptiſſima voluntas præſtandi promiſſa: iſta, voluntas implendi comminationes. Wendelin. Matth. 19.29. God aſſignes fit rewards for well and evil doing.

Firſt, Of Reward, when God bountifully rewards the obedience of the creature with a free reward, 2 Theſſ. 1.5,7. Matth. 10.41,42. Mark 9.41. God beſtows this reward not onely on the godly, both by heaping divers mercies on them in this life, and by the fullneſſe of glory and felicity in the life to come, but alſo on the wicked, whoſe morall actions he rewards with temporary rewards in this world, as the obedience of Jehu, the repentance of Ahab.

Secondly, Of Puniſhment, by which he appointeth to the delinquent creature, the puniſhment of eternal death for the leaſt ſinne, Geneſis 2.17. Rom. 6.23. which death is begun in this life, in divers kinds of miſeries and puniſhments, which for the moſt part are proportionable to their ſins, Gen. 3.17. & 20.18. but is perfected in the life to come, when the full wrath of God is poured upon it, John 3.36. 2 Theſſ. 1.16.

Dogma eſt Amyraldi, quod peculiari libro propugnavit, Deum poſſe, illibata ſua juſtitia, pro ſuo ſummo jure, tam quere cruciatibus æternis animam ſanctam & innocentem. Si dixiſſet, Deum poſſe animam ſanctam deſtruere, cum redundo ad nihilum, quanquam inutilis eſt quæſtio, & temeraria, nolim tamen pertinaciter ſuper ea re ducere contentionis funem. Sed bene eſt quod Amyraldus libro adverſus Spanhemium Πελαγιανίζει, aut ſibi contradicit: dicit enim, Deum non poſſe à ſe impetrare quin peccata condonet reſipiſcenti. Molin. præfat. ad Judicium de Amyrald. lib. adverſ. Spanhem.

This juſtice is ſo eſſential [b] to God, immutable, and (as I may ſo ſpeak) inexorable, that he cannot remit the creatures ſins, nor free them from puniſhment, unleſſe his juſtice be ſatisfied; God cannot diſpenſe againſt himſelf, becauſe ſins do hurt the inward vertue of God, and the Rule of righteouſneſſe, the integrity therefore and perfection of God cannot ſtand, if he ſatisfie not that; yet through his bounty and goodneſſe he hath found out a way by which due ſatisfaction may be given thereunto, viz. By Chriſt, who hath born a puniſhment equivalent to our ſins, for us.

[b] Gods juſtice is not a quality or accident in him, but his very nature, eſſential to him. A man may be a man, and yet unjuſt; but God cannot be God, and be unjuſt. Gerh.loc.com.

Juſtice is taken:

1. For abſolute and univerſal perfection, Juſtitia univerſalis, the univerſal conjunction of all moral vertues, ſo Gods juſtice is the ſimple and abſolute perfection of his Eſſence.

2. For integrity in ones place and ſtation; ſo God is juſt in all his relations to men, a juſt Lord, Magiſtrate.

3. For faithfulneſſe in keeping promiſe, ſo God is juſt.

The Scripture proves the juſtice of God:

1. Affirmatively, when it cals him Juſt, a Revenger, Holy, Right, and extols his Juſtice, *Exod.*9.27. *Pſal.*11.7. *Jer.*12.1.

2. Negatively, when it removes from him injuſtice and iniquity, reſpect of perſons, and receiving of gifts, and alſo all the cauſes and effects of injuſtice, *Deut.*32.4. & 10.17. Daniel 9.14. Job 8,3.

3. Affectively, when it attributes to him Zeal, Anger, Fury, Exodus 20.5 & 32.10. *Numb.*11.10. which are not in God ſuch paſſions as they be in us, but an act of the immutable juſtice.

4. Symbolically, when it cals him a conſuming fire, *Deut.*4.24. compares him to an angry Lion, an armed Souldier, *Iſa.*38.13.

5. Effectively, when it affirms that he renders to every one according to his works, 1 *Sam.*26.23.

Gods juſtice comprehends his righteouſnes and truth, he is juſt in words and deeds.

Gods juſtice [c] is conſidered four wayes:

1. As he is free Lord of all, and ſo his Decrees are juſt, *Rom.*9.13,14.

2. As he is God of all, and ſo the common works of preſerving both the good and bad are juſt, Pſalm 145.17. 1 *Tim.*4.14. *Mat.*5.45.

3. As a Father in Chriſt, and ſo he is juſt in performing his promiſes, and infuſing his grace, and in beſtowing the juſtice of his Son, 1 John 1.5.

4. As Judge of all the world, and ſo his juſtice is not only diſtributive, but corrective.

[c] The righteouſneſſe of God is taken divers wayes in Scripture, ſometimes for the eſſential Attribute of God, ſometimes for the righteouſneſſe of Faith, which is called, The righteouſneſſe of God, becauſe it is ſuch a righteouſneſſe as God doth approve of, and with which we may appeale boldly in his preſence. Againe, Righteouſneſſe is taken for his Truth and Faithfullneſſe in promiſes. David prayes God to doe good to him for his Righteouſneſſe, he meanes, his Faithfullneſſe in his promiſes. See Mr Burroughs on Matth. 5.6.

God uſually deſtroyes the wicked by thoſe wayes by which they have deſtroyed, or intended to deſtroy the godly, Pſalm 7.15. & 57.6. It became a Proverb among the Jews, He that digs a pit ſhall fall into it, Prov.26.27. Eccleſ. 10.8. See Judges 1.7. 2 *Chron.*24.22.

Reaſons:

Firſt, That all the world may take notice that the puniſhments inflicted upon the wicked come immediately from God, Pſalm 9.15.

Secondly, That all may read the ſinne in the puniſhment, Leviticus 10. 1, 2. Geneſis 42.21,40.

Thirdly, That all men may take notice that a wicked man deſtroyes himſelf, *Prov.*5.22.

Fourthly, That all may know that God is above the Devil, wiſer than men.

His Juſtice is,

1. Impartial, he will not ſpare,

1. Multitude, all Sodome and Gomorra, and the old World periſhed.

2. Great ones, the excellency or greatneſſe of any creature will not exempt it from puniſhment; the Angels and Adam fell, he ſpared not the

Angels

Angels, but threw them into hell. Adam was caſt out of Paradiſe for one ſinne.

3. Neerneſſe; the Jews, Gods people formerly, are now caſt off; Moſes and David were puniſhed.

2. General, it extends to a mans poſterity; God will viſit the iniquity of fathers upon their children.

3. Inexorable, no ſinners can eſcape unpuniſhed; the ſinnes of the godly are puniſhed in their Surety Chriſt, and they are afflicted in this life. God is juſtice it ſelf, juſtice is eſſential to him, his will is the rule of juſtice: A thing is juſt, becauſe he willeth it, and not he willeth it becauſe it's juſt. He will right the wrongs of his children, 2 *Theſſ.*1.6,7,8. He cannot be corrupted nor bribed.

Gods juſtice comprehendeth two things under it:

Firſt, Equity, in that he directs men equally, and requites them equally, commanding all and onely good things, ſuch as they in reaſon ought to doe, promiſing and threatning fit and due recompences of their obedience and diſobedience.

Secondly, Truth, whereby he declareth nothing to them, but as the thing is; and fidelity, whereby he fullfilleth all that he hath ſpoken.

The Arminians urge. How can God in juſtice command a man by his Word, the performance of that which cannot be done by him, without the inward help of the Spirit, and yet in the mean time God denies this inward grace unto him?

God may without blemiſh to his juſtice, command man to performe his duty, although he have now no ſtrength to do it, becauſe once he had ſtrength, and now he hath loſt it. Precepts and Exhortations ordinarily ſignifie the approving will of the Commander, and his duty to whom they are propounded, although ſometimes the duty rather of the hearer, than the will of the ſpeaker be declared by them. Reſcrip. Amef. ad reſponſum Grevinch. cap. 12. Deus jubet aliqua quæ non poſſumus, ut noverimus quid ab illo petere debeamus. Auguſt. de grat, & lib. arbit. cap. 16. Gods Commandments and Exhortations ſhew what he approves and wills to be done as good, but his promiſes or threatnings ſhew what he intendeth effectually to bring to paſſe. Mr Pemble of Grace and Faith. Da Domine quod jubes, & jube quid vis, ſaid Auſtin. God giveth thee, although thou be unable, a Law to ſquare thy life by for three cauſes, Ut ſcias quid acceperis, ut videas quid amiſeris, ut intelligas unde repetendum ſit, quod amiſeris.

God hath not loſt his right to command, though we have loſt our ability to obey. A drunken ſervant is not diſobliged from ſervice. See *Phil.*2.3. The Apoſtles often inculcate that, Believe and repent, yet they hold Faith and Repentance to be giſts of God: Dei mandata non ſunt menſura noſtrarum virium, ſed regula officii, & materia precum. Molin. contra Amyraldum. declaratio debiti,

It reproves ſuch as live in ſinne, Exodus 34. 17. Pſalm 5. 5. *Galat.*6.6. If God be mercifull that he may be feared, much more is he juſt that he may be feared.

Conſectaries from Gods juſtice.

Secondly, We muſt take heed of juſtifying the wicked; we ſhould be juſt in our actions to man, in buying and ſelling, in rewarding and puniſhing, Magiſtrates, Miniſters, Maſters, Parents ſhould be juſt. We ſhould not murmure at Gods diſpoſing juſtice in making us poor, and ſhould yeeld to his directing juſtice, obeying his Commandments ſeem they never ſo unreaſonable. Mauritius the Emperour, when his wife and children were murthered before him, and his own eyes after bored out, uttered this ſpeech, Juſtus es, Domine, & recta judicia tua. We ſhould get Chriſts righteouſneſſe to ſatisfie Gods juſtice for us, and to juſtifie us.

2 Chron.2.5. Nehem.9.33. Pſal. 119.137. Dan.9.7. Rom 3.26.

The conſideration of Gods juſtice, ſhould affright us from hypocriſie, ſinning in ſecret, keeping boſom ſins. It miniſters comfort to the godly, who are wronged by the wicked, they ſhall have an upright and juſt Iudge, who will uphold them in a good cauſe, *Pſal.*33.24.

It

It may ſerve to exhort us to glorifie Gods Juſtice, both in fulfilling of his promiſes, and puniſhing wicked men, Pſal. 7. 18. & 51. 15.

Rev. 19. 1.

4. God is True.

John 14. 6. God is æterna veritas & vera æternitas.

Truth or veracity is, by which God is true as in himſelf, ſo in his ſayings and deeds. He revealeth himſelf to his creature ſuch a one as indeed he is.

If God (ſaid one) were to be corporeal, he would have light for his body, and truth for his ſoul. Truth is originally from God, the firſt Idea, Rule or Standard of truth, is Gods will, which is veritas Dei, whereby he is what he is, eſſentially, ſimply, immutably, by which he wils all things to be what indeed they are, and knows them to be ſuch as they are moſt certainly. Veritas rei, entitatis, whereby things are ſuch as God would have them to be, and ſo are true and good. Magna vis eſt veritatis, quæ cum per ſe intelligi non poſſit, per ea tamen ipſa quæ ei adverſantur eluceat: ut in natura ſua immobilis manens, firmitatem naturæ ſuæ quotidie dum attentatur acquirat. Hoc enim eccleſiæ proprium eſt, ut tum vincat, cum læditur, tum intelligat cùm arguitur, tum obtineat cum deſeritur. Hilarius l. 1. de Trinitate.

Real truth, or the truth of things, is a property of them by which they are the ſame indeed which they ſeem. It is an agreement betwixt the being and appearance of things; it is double, 1. Eſſential, or of the very ſubſtance of things. 2. Accidental, of the qualities and actions of things; and this, as it is referred to the reaſonable creature (for ſuch truth can be no where but in it) is inward and outward according as the actions are.

Inward truth of underſtanding, is an agreement betwixt its conceit of things, and the things themſelves, contrary whereto is error, or misjudging, and of the will contrary to hypocriſie and diſſimulation.

Outward, 1. Of word, which is Logical, when I ſpeak as the thing is; and is oppoſed to lying; Moral, when I ſpeak as I conceive the thing to be; and alſo in the matter of promiſes, when I mean as I ſay, and hold ſtill that meaning till I have actually made good my words.

2. Of deeds, when they are ſuch in the intention and meaning of my mind, as in the outward pretence, and are agreeable to the promiſes I have made.

God is true in all theſe reſpects:

1. His Eſſence is real and true, he is a God indeed, not in imagination alone; the Scripture cals God the true God, To know thee, ſaith our Saviour Chriſt, the onely true God, and whom thou haſt ſent, Jeſus Chriſt. He is the true God, not a bare conceit of our own head or fiction: He hath not an imaginary and counterfeit, but a very real being; he is indeed ſuch as he ſaith he is; for that which gives being to other things, muſt needs it ſelf be in very deed. The other ſuppoſed gods alone in name and in fancy of the worſhippers, but he is.

John 17. 3.

An Idol is nothing in the world.

2. He hath a true, not an erroneous conceit of things, he knows all things moſt exactly, he is indeed a willer of true goodneſſe.

Matth. 24. 35. John 17. 17. Which truth of God in his promiſes may be referred to juſtice, becauſe it is juſt to performe what thou haſt promiſed. 2 Tim. 4. 8.

3. He ſpeaks nothing but as the thing is, and as he doth conceive it; he means what he promiſeth, and doth what he means, the Lord diſſembleth not with men; he is true in his word, and his whole word, whether Narrations, Promiſes, Threats, Viſions, or Predictions: He is abundant in truth, Exod. 34. 6. what he telleth, it is as he telleth it; what he promiſeth or threatneth to do, he intendeth, and will perform, Pſal. 89. 33, 34. Deut. 7. 9. 2 Cor. 1. 20. Promiſſa tua ſunt; & quis falli timeat, cum promittit veritas? Aug. Confeſ. l. 12. c. 1.

4. God is true in his works, they are not done counterfeitly, as thoſe of the Devil, but truely, Pſal. 145. 17. Rev. 15. 3.

The Scripture proves the truth of God, 1. Eſſentially, when it affirms God to be true in his works, Deut. 32. 4. Pſal. 25. 10. Rev. 15. 3. & 16. 7. 2. In his words, which is proved both affirmatively, Joh. 17. 17. 2 Sam. 7. 28. and negatively, Num. 23. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 29. Heb. 6. 18.

Reaſons 1. All lying and falſhood ariſeth from weakneſſe * and imperfection, or wickedneſſe,

* If I ſpeak falſhood out of error and miſtake, I am weak, if wilfully, I am wicked: if I keep not promiſe, it is either becauſe I cannot, and then I am weak; or will not, and then I am wicked; therefore God cannot poſſibly lye, 1 Kings 22. 23. Ezek. 14. 9. Truth is moſt properly and firſt of all, or principally in the divine underſtanding, and in it, as the cauſe of things. Truth is properly in the created, humane underſtanding: but ſecondarily, and conceived from things. It is ſaid to be in the things themſelves, but improperly, viz. as they are referred either to the truth of the divine underſtanding, or to the truth exiſting in the humane underſtanding.

wickednesse, neither of which is in God, seeing to be God is to be perfect and absolute. He is the Lord God of truth. Psal. 34.5. his Son is truth, Joh. 14.6. his holy Spirit the Spirit of truth, Joh. 17.6. the Gospel is the word of truth, Col. 1.5. God is the chief and first truth, the Author of truth, truth is in him essentially and immutably, Psal. 100.5. onely true, Rom. 3.4. This distinguisheth him from false gods, 2 Chron. 15.3. Joh. 17.3. God is worthy to be trusted, honored, and esteemed, ergo most true. Where it is said, God seduced the Prophets, it is not so understood, as if God inspired a false prophecy and an error; but that he delivered them to the Devil to be seduced.

Consectaries from Gods truth.

1. It serves to reprove the wicked, who believe not threats; and the weak Christians, who in temptations and desertions doubt of promises.

2. It exhorts us to desire the manifesting of this truth, Psal. 43. 3. we should be true like God, Zach. 8. 16. in our words and deeds, keep our vows with God, and promises with men. God loves truth, as in himself, so in his creatures, but abhors dissimulation and hypocrisie, Prov. 12. 22. Ephes. 4. 25.

We should,

1. Know the truth, Joh. 2. 21. so as to be made free by it, from sinne, unto duty.

2. Obey it, 2 Joh. 1. 4. Rom. 2. 8. & 6. 17.

3. Hold it fast, Heb. 4. 14. & 10. 23, 26.

4. Do for it, labour to advance it, 2 Cor. 13. 8. Isa. 9. 4. Jude 3.

5. Be ready to suffer, yea die for it, as the two witnesses, Rev. 11. Rev. 2. 10, 13. Prov. 17. 17.

There is,

1. Moral truth, truth in man toward man, Zach. 8. 16. faithfulnesse. This lies in plainnesse of heart and dealing, Gen. 25. 27.

2. Doctrinall truth, the purity of Religion and worship, Zach. 8. 3. 1 Tim. 3. 15. 2 Cor. 11. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 1.

The Friar wittily told the people, that the truth he Preached, was like holy water, which every one call a pace for, yet when it came to be cast on them, they would turn aside their face. Bishop Stillingfleet on Gal. 4. 16.

The true Church is the pillar of truth, Gods word the word of truth, Psal. 19. 9. We should therefore believe Gods Word, and depend upon his promise, seem it never so unlikely or impossible, give him the glory of his truth; He that believeth, setteth to his seal that God is true, he that believeth not, maketh God a lyer. Will you receive the testimony of men? and will you not much more receive the testimony of God? He that believeth Gods promises, will surely do the things to which the Lord by promises encourageth him: He that believes the threats, will forbear the thing which God by his threats seeks to deter him from.

Truth and all outward comforts go together, Jer. 33. 6. See Psal. 91. 4. Heb. 10. 23. We should observe how Gods truth is fulfilled, Gen. 32. 10. Luke 1. 70.

This is matter of solid comfort for all the true children of God; if he be faithfull, they must be happy.

Truth is that virtue of the will by which it is moved to goodnesse for Gods sake, when the thing moving us to be good, is Gods Commandment, and the end whereat we aim is the glorifying and pleasing of God, then we serve God in truth.

1. This heightens gratitude, Psal. 108. 4. & 56. 10.

2. It strengthens faith, Psal. 18. 30. and 116. 1, 2. For this end, 1. We should get an interest in Christ, 2 Cor. 1. 20. the promises are the Churches dowry, as she is Christs Spouse. 2. Observe all providences, and compare them with promises, Col. 4. 2. especially observe the fulfilling the promises, 1. When God makes good the letter of them, Josh. 23. 15. 1 Kings 8. 56. 2. When you have pleaded them in prayer, Psal. 119. 49. & 34. 6.

5. God is Faithfull; Rev. 19. 11. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 2. 17. Sect. 177.

First, In himself, by an uncreated faithfulnesse.

Secondly, In his Decrees, Isa. 14. 24, 27.

Thirdly, In all his wayes and works, Psal. 145. 17.

1. Of Creation, 1 Pet. 4. ult.

2. Of Redemption, Heb. 2. 17.

3. Of

Of Juſtification, John 1.19.

4. Of Protection and Preſervation of his Church, *Rev.*19.11.

Fourthly, In all his words and ſpeeches:

1. His Commandements are the rule of truth and faithfulneſſe to us, Pſalm 19. 9.

2. His Predictions are all faithfully accompliſhed many thouſand years after, as Chriſts Incarnation in the fulneſſe of time, ſo *Gen.*49.10.

3. His Manaces are moſt faithfull.

4. His Promiſes, *Exod.*12.41. *Heb.*10.23.

There is a difference between faithfulneſſe in the Creator, and in the Creature.

1. All the ſaints are heirs of all the promiſes, yet many of the temporal promiſes ſhall not be fulfilled unto them in this life, as the ungodly are heirs of wrath, and ſubject to the curſes, yet they are not all accompliſhed on them here.

1. This is the Ocean and Fountain from whence all faithfulneſſe and truth in men and Angels iſſue.

2. This is the rule and meaſure of that, and the nearer it comes to this, the more compleat it is.

3. It is unchangenble in him; the Angels that fell were faithful, but ſoon changed, ſo Adam.

4. It is in God in moſt high perfection.

Reaſons.

1. Becauſe of his moſt juſt and righteous nature, whoſe moſt righteous will is the rule of all his wayes, *Pſal.*145.17.

2. He is moſt perfect and unchangeable in perfection.

3. Becauſe of his moſt pure and holy affection.

4. There is no imperfection in him to hinder his faithfulneſſe.

God beſtows the promiſes in a kind of prerogative way. 2. God will exerciſe the patience of the Saints, in not accompliſhing many temporal promiſes. Patience is ſhewd in waiting, as well as in ſuffering. 3. Thoſe to whom God denies temporal promiſes in this life, he will make them amends to all eternity, they ſhall be gainers, not onely by their ſervices and ſufferings, but deprivements.

Gods faithfulneſſe is the ground of all true Religion.

1. We muſt ground all the Doctrine of faith, all the Articles of faith, all our judgement and opinion in matters of faith upon this faithfulneſſe of God, and this by holding faſt all the faithful word, Titus 1. 9. Rom. 3.4.

2. All our obedience of faith muſt be grounded on this, John 3.33. *Heb.*11.11. & 10.33. *Zeph.*3.5. *Heb.*6.30.

3. All our Prayers of faith muſt be grounded on Gods faithfulneſſe, Dan. 9. 16. 1 John 1. 9. 1 *Pet.*4.19. *Pſal.*1.5.

4. All ſound profeſſion of faith muſt be grounded on this, Geneſ. 17. 1, Pſalm 91. 4.

5. All true preſeverance in the faith, 1 Cor. 1. 8. & 10. 13.

We muſt be faithful:

Conſectaries from Gods faithfulneſſe.

1. To God, by being faithful in his Covenant, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, Eſay 63. 8.

2. To men for Gods ſake in our ſeveral places, in friendſhip as David and Jonathan.

Heb. 2. 15. and 3. 5.

Moſes and Chriſt were faithful, the Apoſtle ſaith, In Stewards it is required that they be found faithful, 1 *Cor.*4.1. Titus 2.10. 1 *Cor.*4.10. *Epheſ.*6.21. *Col.*4.7,9. 1 *Sam.*3.20. 2 *Sam.*2.35. *Nehem.*13.13. 1 *Tim.*3.11. Faithfulneſſe is required and commended in all ſorts of men.

Reaſons:

The welfare and proſperity of all eſtates dependeth upon mans fidelity and faithfulneſſe, it will be impoſſible for any good to be done amongſt men, if each in his perſon and place be not faithfull; this therefore is required of all men.

What faithfulneſſe is.

Faithfulneſſe is that virtue by which a man is careful to perform conſtantly and in truth all thoſe duties to which either his place or promiſe, or both, do binde him him. Or, it is that virtue by which a man is as good as his word, when one doth ſpeak good, and is in deed as good as in ſpeech, this is faithfulneſſe. It hath two parts: 1. The agreement of his meaning with his words at the time that he ſpeaketh, when he purpoſeth to do according as he ſpeaketh. 2. The Agreement of his actions with his words and meaning, when he continues conſtant in his purpoſe till he have done what in him lies to effect it; as it is ſaid of Boaz, that when he had ſaid the thing, he would not be quiet untill he had brought it to paſſe. A promiſe is the proper ſubject of faithfulneſſe, in the well making and well keeping of that ſtandeth fidelity.

Nihil eſt in hominum ſocietate fide ſanctius, nihil in rebus divinis jurejurando. Bandi Oratio de Inducis Belgicis on Pſal. 24. well determines that Queſtion, An fides Hæreticis ſit ſervanda.

The godly and faithfull are uſually coupled, Epheſ. 1. 1. in the Revelation; choſen and faithful, and the children of faithfull Abraham, and unfaithfull ſervant. Faithfulneſſe is the Image of God, he is true and faithful, a God that keepeth Covenant. The Indians are ſo faithful to their truſts, unto whomſoever they ingage, that if they be at any time aſſaulted, they will rather dye in their defence, then forſake them at their need. Mr Terry his Voyage to East-India, See more there. But falſhood and faithleſſeneſſe is too common among Chriſtians.

Multis annis jam peractis; nulla fides eſt in pactis.
Mel in ore, verba lactis; fel in corde, fraus in factis.

Chap. XIII.

Of GODS Patience, Longſuffering, Holineſſe, Kindneſſe.

GOD is Patient, Pſal. 103. 8. Job 2. 17. Gods patience is that whereby he bears the reproach of ſinners, and defers their puniſhments; or it is the moſt bountiful will of God [a], whereby he doth long bear with ſin which he hateth, ſparing ſinners, not minding their deſtruction, but that he might bring them to repentance. See Acts 13. 18.

Nahum. 1. 3. Iſa. 30. 18.

[a] Patientia eſt qua ita iram ſuam moderatur Deus erga creaturam, ut vel penas differat, vel iram ſuo momento non effundat. Wendelinus.

Sometimes the conſideration of our infirmities prevailes with him, Pſalm 103. 13, 14. & 78. 38, 39. Iſaiah 57. 16. Sometimes the inſolency of the enemy prevailes with him to keep back his judgements, Deut. 32. 27. ſometimes the interceſſion of his people, Pſalm 106. 23. ſometimes the Covenant made with their forefathers, Pſalm 106. 45, 46.

This is aggravated:

1. In that ſin is an infinite injury offered to him, therefore in the Lords Prayer it is called a Treſpaſſe.

2. He is infinitely affected [b] with this; hence in the Scripture he is ſaid to be grieved with our ſins, to be wearied, as a cart full of theaves, he is ſaid to hate ſinne, for although he be ſuch a perfect God that none of our ſinnes can hurt him, yet becauſe he is a holy and juſt God, he cannot but infinitely diſtaſte ſinners, Pſalm 7. 11, 12.

[b] God is ſenſible of the wrong offered to him, and provoked to wrath thereby, 2 Pet. 2. 13. he not only

3. He can be avenged immediately, if he pleaſe; Men many times are pa-returns his anger, but gives them time to repent. Maſter Bolton ſaith, If but any tender-hearted man ſhould ſee one hour in the Throne of God Almighty, and look down upon the earth as God doth continually, and ſee what abominations are done in that hour, he would undoubtedly in the next ſet all the world on fire.

tient unwillingly, they would be revenged, but they know not how to compass it. He apprehends at the same time what he hath done for us, and withall our unthankfulnesse, unkindenesse, and yet endured Cain, Saul, Judas a long time.

Amos 9. 2, 3. When men begin through Gods forbearance, to have high Atheistical thoughts about him, Psal. 50. 20. and so strengthen himself in a way of sinning. Eccles. 8. 11. and to grow to that height as to mock at his judgements, Isaiah 42. 14. 2 Peter 3. 2, 3.

4. He beholds the universality of sinne, all men injure him, the idolatry of the Heathens, blasphemy among Christians, the prophaner sort are full of Oathes, adulteries, the better, negligent, lazy, cold. Men make it their businesse to sin against him, Jer. 32. 31.

5. God not only not punisheth, but still continues his benefits; the old drunkard is still alive.

6. He sets up a Ministry to invite us to come in, and we have that many years, Forty years long was I grieved with this generation.

Matth. 26. 39. 7. In Christ patience was visible, there was living patience.

8. He affects lightly and mercifully to win us; he makes thee sick and poor, to see if it will make thee leave thy sinning.

Object. God seems to be very impatient by his severe judgements inflicted on Persons, Families, Churches, Nations.

Answ. 1. Such are very few in comparison of those to whom he shews great patience. 2. He is long patient to them, before he come upon them in justice. 3. He proceeds very deliberately and leisurely, when he doth punish such. 4. When at last he comes in judgment, it is in goodness to mankind, and that they might be a warning to others.

God must punish sometimes, to evidence

1. That his patience is a powerful patience, proceeding from riches of goodnesse Rom. 2. 4. not a patience perforce.

2. To shew that it is a knowing patience, and comes not from ignorance.

3. That is a just patience.

4. That it is a holy patience, Psal. 50. 21.

This is in effect the same with patience, Numb. 14. 18. Nehem. 9. 17. 2 Peter 3. 9, 15, 20.

7. God is Long-suffering, Exod. 34. 6.

Long-suffering is that whereby he expecteth and waiteth a long time for repentance; or it is the most bountiful will of God, not suffering his displeasure suddainly to rise against his creatures offending, to be avenged of them, but he doth warn them before hand, rightly correct, and seek to turn them unto him. Christ endured Judas till the last.

Long-suffering is a dilation of revenge, though we be provoked; it is a further degree of patience, patience lengthned out further, Rom. 9. 22.

Longanimity is toward them of whom we can, patience toward them of whom we cannot be revenged. Nisi Deus expectaret impium, non inveniret quem glorificaret pium. Aug.

God endures to wonderment above measure, beyond all expectation.

Reasons 1. That men might not despaire, 1 Tim. 6. 16. 2. For his glory. 3. From his love; a Husband will forbear his Wife. 4. To leave men without excuse, Gen. 6. 3. & 15. 16. 1 Pet. 3. 20. God cannot properly suffer, for all things are active in him

Consectaries from Gods patience and long-suffering.

It denounceth a woe to all those who despise and abuse the riches of Gods patience to us; the Apostle calls it, Treasuring up wrath, that is, as a man lays up something every day till at last he get a great summe, so thou addest still to thy damnation; God will so much more severely damn thee, by how much he hath dealt more kindly with thee.

We should glorifie God for sparing us so long, and waiting for our repentance; we should be like him, slow to anger, * patient, not easily provoked, Romans 15. 4. Magistrates, Ministers, and all must be like God, wait for repentance; Eccles. 8. 11.

* Prov. 14. 29. Pessi & nolle nobile. The diference of a man deferreth his anger, and his glory is to passe by an offence, saith Solomon.

It

It reproves them that hence take liberty to ſin (patience abuſed turns into fury) and are the worſe for Gods forbearance, Mat. 24.48. Luke 12.45.

Chriſtian patience is that grace of God whereby a man is enabled through conſcience of his duty to God, to bear what evils God ſhall lay on him, and to wait for the promiſes not yet performed, it is the fruite of faith and hope. Faith and patience are often coupled together.

As by faith we enjoy God, and by love we enjoy our neighbour; ſo by patience we enjoy our ſelves, ſaith a Father.

It is a grace of the ſanctifying Spirit of God, whereby the ſoul doth freely ſubmit to the will of God in bearing its own burthen without inordinate ſorrow or fretting diſcontent.. Patience is,

We had need of patience, that our faith may be lively, and our hope continue to the end. Without patience we cannot worſhip God, believe in him, love him, pray, hold out, deny our ſelves, ſuffer loſſes, bear reproaches. God will exerciſe us with many trials, defer the beſtowing of good things, therefore we have need of patience.

There is a threefold patience, 1. In working, Rev. 2.26. Hab. 2.10. to be able to go through the difficulties which clog holy duties. 2. In waiting, to waite Gods time in fulfilling the promiſes, Hab. 2. 3. 3. In ſuffering, when we quietly ſubmit to the will of God in bearing our own burthen, Levit. 10.3.

1. Commanded, Luke 1.19. James 5.7. 2. It is commended to us by ſpecial examples: 1. Of Chriſt, Heb. 12.2. Rev. 1.9. 2. Of all the Saints, 1 Pet 2.20,21. James 5.10.

A Chriſtian in theſe ſuffering times may write this as his Motto, Sit miſer, qui miſer eſſe poteſt. Let him be miſerable that can be miſerable, 2 Cor. 4.8, 9. & 6. 10.

Periiſſem niſi periiſſem.

8. God is Holy, the holy one, Iſa. 40.25. Hoſ. 11.9. Hab. 3.3. Job 6.10. he is called The holy one of Iſrael, above thirty times, ſee Iſa. 41.20. & 43.14. that is, Iſraels moſt eminently and incommunicable one, or his God. The holy one of Jacob, Iſa. 49.23. Holy is his name, Luke 1.49. I the Lord am holy, and, Be you holy as I am holy, Pſal. 99. Iſa. 6. 3. It is three times repeated, Holy, holy, holy, (or, The holy one, the holy one, the holy one; the Lord of Hoſts, ſo Rev. 4.8. where according to ſome Greek Copies it is nine times (that is, thrice three times) repeated. As Iſa. 6. the Angels aſcribe holineſſe to him, ſo do the Saints in Heaven, Rev. 6.10. and the godly on earth, Exod. 15.11. 1 Sam. 2.2. All the perſons of the Trinity are holy, God the Father is called The holy one of Iſrael, ſee Iſaiah 43.15. and 49.7. Chriſt is holy, Daniel 9.24. Pſalm 16.10. The Spirit is the Spirit of holineſſe.

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 3.1. §. 5,6,7,8,9, 10; 11,12.

There is a twofold holineſſe: 1. Original, abſolute, and eſſential in God, which is the incommunicable eminency of the divine Majeſty exalted above all, and divided from all other eminences whatſoever.

Holineſſe in the general nature of it is the moral goodneſſe of a thing.

Holineſſe in man is that virtue whereby he giveth and yieldeth himſelf to God, in doing all for and to him, in regard of which the actions he doth are acceptable to God. Holineſſe in the creature, is a conformity to the holineſſe in God, in reſpect of the principle, rule, pattern and parts of holineſſe.

Gods holineſſe is that excellency of his nature, by which he gives himſelf (as I may ſay) unto himſelf, doing all for himſelf, and in all, and by all, and above all, aiming at his own pleaſure and glory; or it is the abſolute purity of his nature, and his abhorring of evil, Exod. 34.30. Revel. 15.4. he is holy without iniquity, Pſal. 5.5,6. & 145.17. 1 Sam. 2.2. Hab. 1.13. Zeph. 3.5. the Lord is ſaid to ſwear by his Holineſſe, Pſalm 89.35. Amos 4.2. that is, by himſelf.

The tranſcendent excellency of his own being, whereby he is advanced above all the creatures, and diſtinguiſhed from them, Pſal. 89.6.

For that which a man taketh to be, and makes an account of as his God (whether it be ſuch indeed or by him fancied onely) he aſcribes unto it, in ſo doing, a condition of eminency above, and diſtinct from all other eminencies whatſoever, that is of Holineſſe, Pſalm 49.18. Iſaiah 17.7. Habakkuk 1.12. 2. Derived or relative in the things which are his, properly called, Sacra, holy things. Mede on Matthew 6.9. The holineſſe of the creature differs from Gods holineſſe, becauſe it ſtands in conformity and ſubjection to God. It agrees with Gods holineſſe 1. In purity, 2 Peter 3.11. 2. In love to him.

There is a threefold holineſſe. 1. Eſſential, the holineſſe of God, all one with God himſelf, Exod. 15. 11. 2. Habitual, an inherent holineſſe, ſuch as is the holineſſe of righteous men, ſo Abraham, Job, David, and all the Patriarchs, are called Saints and holy men; this the Greeks call ὁσιότης, the Latines Sanctimonia. 3. Relative, a peculiar relation which a thing hath unto God, in regard of propriety of poſſeſſion, or ſpeciality of preſence: That which is holy after this manner, the Greeks call ἅγιον, the Latines Sacrum, for perſons, things, times. Maſter Medes on Deut. 9. 8.

Holineſſe is in God eſſentially and originally, 1 Sam. 2. 2. he is the Author of all holineſſe; he is called Holineſſe it ſelf, Iſa. 63. 15. all the holineſſe in Saints or Angels comes from God, and is a quality in the creature. He is holy of himſelf, men and Angels are ſanctified by him; his holineſſe is a ſubſtance, in men it is an accident. The eſſence of many Angels continues, though their holineſſe be loſt; moſt men never had holineſſe, and the man would remain, though his holineſſe were loſt.

2. Holineſſe is in him without meaſure, in the higheſt degree, mans may be limited, it is in him immutable and infinite, like himſelf, and cannot be leſſened or augmented.

Immutably, James 1. 17. He is what he was at firſt, Iſa. 40. 25. Our holineſſe is terminated in him. Exod. 28. 36.

3. He is holy formally and ſubjectively, holineſſe is a conformity to the will of God; how holy then muſt he needs be, when his nature and will are all one?

4. Objectively, he is the object of all holineſſe, for there is no holineſſe but what hath him for the object.

5. Exemplarly, Be ye holy, as I am holy, ſo Chriſt bids us learn of him, for he was meek and humble. He as Mediator was impeccable; he was God and man in one perſon, actus eſt ſuppoſiti; He diſcovers unholineſs in the beſt of the Creatures, Job 15. 15. and cannot be tempted with ſin, James 1. 13. or take pleaſure in that which is evil, either in perſons, or actions, Hab. 1. 13.

His holineſs conſiſts,

1. In a perfect abſence of all ſinne.

2. In a contrariety to all ſinne, to the leaſt ſinne as well as the greateſt.

3. In making himſelf his own end, he knows himſelf to be the beſt good.

God is holy in heaven, holy in earth, holy in hell it ſelf, holy in glorifying Angels, holy in juſtifying men, holy in puniſhing devils, holy in his Nature, Word, Works, Glorious in holineſs, Exod. 15.

Reaſons of Gods Holineſs:

1. This is the foundation of all his other excellencies; for if he were not thus taken up with himſelf, he could not be perfect in wiſdom, power, juſtice, mercy, neither could he carry himſelf to the creature as were fit, if he did not firſt carry himſelf to himſelf as were fit. If a King do not duly regard himſelf in his Royal authority, he can never duly govern his ſubjects.

He plants holineſſe in his childrens hearts, John 1. 16. therefore he is holy himſelf, Epheſ. 4. 24. God hath manifeſted his holineſſe, 1. In his Word, his Precepts. 2. By inſtituting the Sabbath to be kept holy, Iſaiah 58. 3. 3. By cauſing a holy Tabernacle and Temple to be erected, wherein were all holy things. 4. By inſtituting holy Prieſts. 5. By inflicting his judgements on thoſe which prophane holy things, 2 Sam. 6. 7. 19. 20.

2. Elſe he could not be perfectly happy, whatſoever thing looks to ſomewhat without it ſelf, to make it be well and contented, and enjoy it ſelf, that is but imperfectly happy, becauſe not happy without another. That alone is capable of perfect bleſſedneſs, which hath all things in and of it ſelf, without reſpect to any other thing, by which it enjoyes it ſelf.

In his Works, 1. Of Creation, Acts 17. 28. Eccleſ. 7. ult. 2. Of Providence, Pſal. 45. 17. & 103. 1. unuſquiſque operatur ut eſt.

God is holy in theſe particulars:

1. In his will, Holineſs is the rectitude of it, whereby he wils all things in the beſt manner, Pſal. 22. 3. whatſoever God wils is holy, whether it be his ſecret will and purpoſe, or his revealed will and word.

2. In all his works, Pſal. 145. 17. decrees, He hath predeſtinated us to be conformable to his Sonne, Rom. 8. 29. ſee Epheſ. 1. 4. this is the end of all his graces; faith purifieth the heart, he that hath this hope, purifieth himſelf as he is pure, this this is likewise the end of his Ordinances, his Word and Sacraments are to make us holy, John 17. 17.

Of Prayer, we pray that Gods name may be hallowed, that his will may be done on earth as it is in Heaven, of the promises, by them we are made partakers of the divine nature, of afflictions, Heb. 12. 10.

3. In his Laws and Commandements, Psal. 19. his Commandements are just and right, and require holiness of heart, not suffering the least sinneful motion, Thou shalt not covet.

4. What ever relates to him is holy.

1. The place of his habitation, Psal. 11. 4. & 20. 6. 1 Cor. 3. 7.

2. His Attendants: 1. The Angels, Luke 9. 26. Mat. 25. 31. 2. His people, Lev. 10. 1. Dan. 12. 7.

3. All his Services are holy, 2 Chron. 35. 30. Psal. 29. 1.

Holiness is the beauty of all Gods attributes, without which his wisdome would be subtilty, his justice cruelty, his Soveraignty Tyranny, his mercy foolish pity. Mr Scudder.

This distinguisheth him from all Heathen gods which were wicked, holiness distinguisheth between Angels and Devils, Heaven and Hell.

Holiness is (as it were) the Character of the soul, and of Christ Jesus, the Image of God, the beauty, the strength, the riches, the life, the soul of the whole man. It is a very beam of the Divine Light, called therefore by the Apostle, The Divine Nature. It exacts reverence from the carnal world, Marke 6. 20. There is a necessity of it, conformity makes way for Communion here and hereafter, Matth. 5. 8. Heb. 12. 24 John 3. 3. 2. There can be no agreement between us and God till we be sanctified.

Holiness is the working of God to his own end in all things suitable to his nature. When the Saints in heaven glorifie God for his chiefest excellency, it is thus, Holy, holy, holy: We find not in the Scripture any of Gods Attributes thrice repeated, Wise, wise, wise, or Almighty, almighty, almighty, but Holy, holy, holy, because the excellency of God consists chiefly in that. Master Burrh. Jun. Seed.

The Holiness of God is an universal Attribute, something of holiness runs through all the Attributes; his power is holy, Isa. 52. 10. his truth, Psal. 109. 4. his mercy, Acts 13. 34. it is unchangeable, he is so holy, that he cannot be tempted to evil, James 1. 13.

He is the principle and pattern of all holiness in the Creature.

1. The principle, Levit. 20. 8. and 21. 8, 15. he conveys holiness by Ordinances and Sabbaths, Deut. 7. 6. and afflictions, Isaiah 27. 9. See 1 Thess. 5. 23. and 1. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 4.

2. The patern of holiness, 1 Pet. 1. 11. the more any have been holy, the more they have eyed the holiness of God, Rev. 4. 9. Eph. 5. 1. his holiness is a rule to it self, we should have the Law written in our hearts. Habitual holiness is a conformity to his nature, Actual a conformity to his Will or Law.

Amongst the Turks, Jews, Indians, Persians, and the Papists themselves at this day, the most zealous and holiest, as they conceive them in their Religion, are most esteemed and honoured, and onely in the greater part of the Protestant Churches, the most knowing and tenacious of the Evangelical truth, and the most strict and godly in their lives are hated, nicknamed, disgraced and vilified. Sir Simonds D' Ewes Primitive practice for preserving truth, Sect. 17.

2. This condemns the Pope, who proudly arrogates the Title of the most * holy, and holiness it self; the high Priest was to be holy, Numb. 16. 7. but he will be termed most holy. Consectaries from Gods Holiness.

* Quæ de re ficta fabula accidisse narratur in Concilio Tridentino de quodam Episcopo, quem offendit ille Papæ titulus propterea. Nam si Deus inquit hac tantum sanctus, quomodo ejus vicarius dici potest sanctissimus? Adiit magnum periculum ea de causa. Decius in 15. num. c. 64.

2. Hypocrites, civil honest men, and prophane men, who scoff at purity and holiness which is Gods excellency, it was the Devils device to bring that slander on they, these are the holy early These are the Saints, say brethren.

early holineſs, A young Saint an old Devil.

Angelicus juvenis ſenibus ſataniſat in annis.

Eraſmus (in his pietas puerilis) ſaith, that proverb was deviſed by the Devil himſelf; it is contrary to that of Salomon, Prov. 22. 6. It was a great commendation of Origen, that he learned the Scriptures of a childe, Euſebius. The like Paul ſaith of Timothy, 2 Tim. 3. 15.

See Eccl. 12. 1. Pſal. 119. 9. It is a great honor to ſeek the Lord betimes, Mnaſon was an old diſciple, See Rom. 16. 17.

3. Conſutes merits, the Angels are impure in his ſight.

4. We ſhould be holy like God, not in degree, but in reſemblance, 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16. we ſhould be holy in our affections, actions. Holineſſe ſhould be prized and admired, the Seraphims ſing one to another, Holy, holy, holy, Iſa. 6. 3. They chooſe this out of all Gods Attributes to praiſe him for. We ſhould pray to God with pure hearts, worſhip him holily, John 4. 24. Zach. 14. 20, 21. that is, men ſhould be holy in thoſe ordinary natural actions of eating and drinking. We ſhould draw nigh to ſo holy a God. 1. In a holy ſtate, 1 Tim. 2. 8. 2. In a holy manner, Lev. 10. 3. 3. For holy ends, Moſes his face ſhined when he had been with God.

This of all Attributes is the moſt overawing to a ſinnefull creature. We ſhould eſpecially think of the holineſs of God, when we worſhip him, Job 17. 11, 22. Pſalme 3. because then we draw nigh to God. Lev. 10. 3. and his end in appointing ordinances is, that we might be partakers of his holineſſe.

5. This miniſters comfort to the Saints, and aſſures them that they ſhall find favor with him, and is for a terror to the unholy, which are altogether carried to themſelves, led by themſelves, and ſet up themſelves, and theſe things below. They love that which God loathes; God muſt neceſſarily hate ſin, becauſe it is ſo contrary to him: That he doth ſo, it appears, 1. In his depriving man of an infinite good, infinite glory and happineſs. 2. In inflicting on him infinite torments. A holy heart may draw much comfort from Gods holineſs. 1. He will diſtinguiſh between the precious and the vile, they have to do with a holy God, Num. 16. 2, 3. Mal. 3. ult. 2. Thou haſt communion with this holy God, there is ſweetneſſe and comfort in converſing with holy men, after this life they ſhall behold the beauty of Gods holineſſe, and give him the glory of it. 3. He will take ſpecial care of them, that they ſhall not be polluted, Exod. 29. 33, 34. 4. What holineſs is there in any of their ſervices, it ſhall be accepted, and their holineſſe begun ſhall be perfected.

If we may judge of the privation by the habits perfection, how great an evil muſt ſinne be, when God is ſo great a good! Ἅγιος quaſi Ἀγεος ſay the Etymologiſts, holy is as much as not earthly. Holineſſe is a ſeparation both from ſinne and the world. Ἅγιος proprie quidem venerabilem, per ſynecdochen vero ſanctum, vel ſacrum (quod tales reverentia digni) ſignificat. Gomari Defenſ. Doct. de Preſerv. Sanct. The will of God is the rule of holineſſe, as his nature is the pattern of it. See Acts 13. 22.

6. We ſhould labor after holineſſe, 1. To go quite out of our ſelves and all creatures, and go wholly, as it were unto God, making him the ground, meaſure and end of all our actions, ſtriving above all things to know him, eſteem him, and ſet all our powers upon him. This is the felicity of the creature, to be holy as God is holy; this is the felicity of the Saints in Heaven, they care for nothing but God, are wholly and altogether carried to him and filled with him. He is all in all unto them, as he is all and in all unto himſelfe. In being thus carried to him, they are united to him and enjoy him, and are bleſſed.

There are Saints on earth, as the Scripture ſhews, Pſal. 16. 3. and 132. 9. though the Papiſts deny this. Men are ſaid to be Saints here: 1. In regard of Sacramental holineſſe: Baptiſm is called the laver of Regeneration, Tit. 3. Sanctum, quaſi ſanguine tinctum. Iſidore. Such are dedicated to God, and ſet apart for a holy uſe. 2. In regard of inherent holineſſe, the denomination is from the better part, ſo man is called a reaſonable creature, from his reaſonable ſoul; and men (though in part corrupt) are called Saints from the Image of God, in the better part. 3. In regard of imputed holineſſe; Chriſt is made to us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification.

See Maſter Strongs Sermon on Heb. 12. 14.

Sanctification is, 1. The end of our Election, Eph. 1. 4. 2. Of our Redemption, Luke 4. 75. Eph. 5. 26. 3. Reconciliation, Col. 1. 21, 22.

The moſt excellent mark of the Spirit, Tous 3. 5. Utile dicitur quod ad finem ducit, grace leads to the higheſt and beſt end.

Holineſſe

Holineſſe is, 1. A beautiful thing, Pſal. 110. 3. therefore Chriſt cals the Spouſe The faireſt of all women. 2. A beneficial thing, makes one bear all afflictions eaſily, makes all our ſervices acceptable to God, will give us a ſight of God, Matth. 5. 8. Grace is advantagious to a mans good name, Pſal. 112. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 7. will bring peace and quietneſs, Prov. 16. 7. and much ſpirituall profit, the love of God and friendſhip with him, and will give comfortable hopes of eternal life, Titus 1. 2. Prov. 14. 32. Grace is the way to glory, Luke 16. 9. it will give a man boldneſſe in the day of judgement, 1 John 4. 17. It is good to have gifts beautified by grace, but it is better to have gifts ſanctified by grace.

9. God is Kind, Exod. 34. 7. keeping Kindneſſe for thouſands, ſo it ſhould be rendred, he ſpake of Gods mercy in the ſixth verſe, ſee Ephes. 2. 7. Titus 3. 4. it is called, Great kindneſſe, Nehem. 9. 17. Marvelous kindneſſe, Pſalme 31. 21. Mercifull kindneſſe, Pſalme 119. 2. Everlaſting kindneſſe, Iſaiah 54. 8. Excellent loving kindneſſe, Pſalme 36. 7. Multitude of loving kindneſſe, Iſaiah 63. 74. We may ſee this in Chriſt, he was good, mercifull, loving, pitifull, John 1. 14. His coming into the world in a poore manner, and to experiment our ſorrows ſhews this, he went about converting ſinners, wept over our neglects, Matthew 23. 37. Luke 19. 42. John 15. 13. God hath planted love and kindneſſe in our hearts, Acts 4. 32. Galatians 5. 22. he commands us to be loving and kinde to one another, John 15. 17. ſee John 13. 34. all Gods Ordinances require this, Act. 2. 42. Great are the effects of Gods love and kindneſſe 1. To mankind in generall, 1. Creation, he decked and filled the world to be a dwelling place for man, Pſalme 104. 24. 2. His Providence, Pſalme 145. 11. Acts 14. 17. 3. His Patience, Jon. 4. 11. 4. His Bounty. 5. His loving Invitations, Iſaiah 65. 2. 3. and 55. 7, 8, 9. 2 Corinthians 5. 20. 2. To his people in ſpeciall, Election, Redemption, 1 John 4. 10. Sanctification, Glorification.

Particular priviledges,

1. Gods preventing mercy.
2. His audience of Prayer, John 16. 26, 27.
3. The guard of Angels, Hebrews 1. 14.
4. The bleſſings of providence, Romans 8. 28.

We ſhould ſhew loving kindneſſe unto Chriſt, and one to another, 2 Peter 1. 3. 1 Corinthians 13. 4.

Some mention two other virtues:

1. Gods Jealouſie, by which he will have all due glory given to him, and ſuffers not the leaſt part of it to be communicated to the creature. This care of his honour and fame is manifeſt by the grievous puniſhments inflicted on thoſe who have dared to arrogate part of the Divine glory to themſelves, as on the building of Babel, Geneſis 11. 4. The Bethſhemites, 1 Samuel 6. 19. Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel 4. 29, 30. and Herod, Act 12. 22, 23.

2. His Humility, by which God deſcends to our capacity, and graciouſly provides for our weakneſſe, examples of which are both Gods familiar converſing and conference with Moſes and Abraham, interceding for Sodom, with David and others, and eſpecially the incarnation of Chriſt.

This Attribute of kindneſſe is the ſame with goodneſſe before ſpoken of, viz. Communicative goodneſſe.

Iſaiah 48. 11. and 42. 8. Exod. 20. 5.

Pſal. 113. 5, 6. Genes. 18. 1 Sam. 30. 8.

CHAP.

Chap. XIV.

Of GOD'S Power.

God is Omnipotent.

So much be ſpoken concerning Gods Will, Affections, and Virtues: there followeth Power in God, by which God by the bare beck of his Will, effecteth all things which he will, and howſoever he will, perfectly without labour and difficulty, and can do perfectly all things which he wills; this is called Abſolute [a] Power, by which he can do more things than either he doth or will. Actual [a] Power is when God cauſeth thoſe things to exiſt which he will have exiſt.

Both Gods Abſolute and Actual Power is Active [b] only, and no way Paſſive.

This Power of God is Infinite,

Firſt, In reſpect of the Divine Eſſence, ſince it flows from the Infinite Nature of God, for it is a moſt certain Rule, that the faculties and powers of the Subject flow from the form, and agree with the form.

Secondly, In reſpect of the Object [c] and Effects, for God doth never ſo many and ſo great works, but he can do more and greater; although we muſt hold that God cannot make a creature of infinite Perfection ſimply, or creatures indeed infinite in number, for ſo they ſhould be Gods, for the Divine Power is ſo farre extended on the object, as the paſſive Power of the object extends it ſelf, but Infinite Perfection imports a pure Act.

a Gen. 1. 1. Rev. 21. 6. Luke 1. 37. Mat. 19. 26. Ephes. 1. 19. Pſalm. 3. 9. Pſal. 33. 6. and 115. 3.

b Ephes. 3. 20.

c 1. In ſe & per ſe quia idem eſt cum eſſentia divina. Wendel.

a Potentia Dei infinita eſt reſpectu objectorum, quia innumera ſunt, quæ produci ab eo poſſint. Reſpectu actionis infinita eſt: quia tanquam effectum producit tam præſtantem, quin præſtantiorem poſſit producere. Wendelinus. Culices & muſcas ipſa per omnipotentem voluntatem produxit, æque ac elephantum & cetum, quamvis non æque illa nobis in utriuſque ſorte manifeſta ſint. Omnipotens eſt Deus (ait Auguſt. de Temp. ſerm. 119.) ad faciendum magna & minora: magnus eſt in Magnis, nec parvus in Minimis. Reſcript. Amef. ad reſponſ. Grevinchov. c. 8. Omnipotentem nos Deum tam ex eo, quod omnia facere poteſt, quàm quod in omnia poteſtatem, ac dominium exercet appellare ſolemus. Petav. De Deo Deique proprietatibus, l. 3. c. 5. Vide plura ibid. & c. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

Luke 1. 37.

Thirdly, In reſpect of Duration, which is perpetual as his Eſſence is, therefore this force and power of God is deſerved by ſtiled Omnipotency, Job 42. 2. Gods power is not only Potentia, or Multipotentia, but Omnipotentia, for degree infinite; Nothing ſhall be impoſſible for the Lord.

The Scripture confirms the Omnipotency of God,

Rev. 15. 3. Omnipotent is often put for God. Pantokrator Job 21. 15. and 27. 10. and 31. 2. God is called Almighty One and thirty times in Job. He is Almighty comparatively, can do more than the mighteſt man, nay, than all creatures put together, than we can ask or think, Epheſ. 3. 20. and doth all eaſily, without being weary, Iſa. 40. 28. There is ſtrength in Angels, Men, Beaſts, and all creatures in their kinde, therefore it is much more perfectly and eminently in God from whom they have it.

1. Affirmatively, when it calls God Adon, Job 34. 20. Shaddai Allſufficient, Gen. 49. 24. Deut. 10. 17. Pſal. 89. 13. Gibbor powerfull, Deut. 10. 17.

2. Effectively, when it witneſſeth, that God can do all things, Mat. 3. 9. & 19. 26. Mark 14. 36. Luke 18. 27. Rev. 3. 20. Hitherto belong all the works of the Divine Power and ſupernatural Miracles.

3. Negatively, when it denies any thing to be difficult to him, much leſſe impoſſible, Gen. 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17, 27. Luke 1. 37. Mat. 19. 26.

4. Symbolically, when it gives him a ſtrong right hand, a ſtretched out arm, 1 Chron. 29. 12. Jer. 32. 17. Epheſ. 1. 19.

Reaſon proves it alſo:

1. His eſſence (as was ſaid) is infinite, therefore his power.

2. He is moſt perfect, therefore moſt powerful.

3. Whatſoever good thing is to be found in any creature, the ſame is perfectly and infinitely in God.

Some

Some observe that this is expressed seventy times in Scripture, that God is Almighty. He is the onely Potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. The Psalmist saith, Power belongs to God. The first Article of our faith teacheth us to believe that God is Omnipotent.

God can work by weak means, without means, contrary to means.

It shews one to be a skilful Artist, when he can effect that by an unfit instrument, which another can scarce do with a most fit one: As it is reported of Apelles, that with a coal taken from the fire, he so expresst him by whom he was invited to Ptolomies dinner, that all at the first sight of it knew the man: But it is no wonder for God to perform what he will with unfit instruments, since he needs no instruments at all to effect what he pleaseth.

Gods power is,

Essential and Independent, it is the cause of all power, John 19. 8. it reacheth beyond his will, Mat. 26. 35.

2. It extends to things that are not, nor never will be, as to raise up children of stones to Abraham, Matthew 3. 9. to give Christ more than ten Legions of Angels.

Power is Gods originally and primarily, all power of all creatures is derived from him, and continued and ordered by him.

The object of divine power are all things simply and in their own nature possible, which neither contradict the nature of God, nor the essence of the creatures; those which are contrary to these, are absolutely impossible, such things God cannot do, because he cannot will them, nor can he will and do contrary things, as good and evill, contradictory, as to be, and not to be, that a true thing be false, that any thing while it is, should not be; God cannot sinne, lie, deny, change or destroy himself, suffer; for all these things doe ex diametro, oppose the Divine, Immutable, Simple, most true and perfect Essence. God cannot create another God, nor cause a man to be unreasonable, not a body to be infinite and every where; for these things contradict the essential definitions of a creature, of a man, and a body; not to be able to do all these things is not impotency, but power; for to be able to do opposite things, is a sign of infirmity, being not able to remain altogether in one and the same state.

God can do all things, qua habent rationem factibilitatis, qua contradictionem non implicant. Tit. 2. 2. 2 Tim. 2. 13. There are impossibilia naturæ, which exceed natures sphere, as to make a thing of nothing, to raise the dead to life, God cannot will the same thing at the same time to be, and not to be; this would argue inconstancy.

these God can do; and impossibilia naturæ, those things which are by themselves simply impossible. Propterea quædam non potest, quia omnipotens est. [There is impossibility ex parte Dei, & ex parte rei. See Dr Willet on Gen. 18. 12. Asylum hæreticorum est omnipotentia Dei. Chrysost. Vide Vedel. Rationale Theologicum, l. 3, c. 8.

God is therefore Omnipotent, because he cannot doe these things, which argue impotency, as if I should say, The Sunne is full of light, it cannot be dark. Yet it is not so proper a speech to say, God cannot doe these things, as to say, these are acts too mean, base and worthlesse to be effects of Divine Power, Hæc non possunt fieri, rather than, Deus non potest facere, saith Aquinas.

Gods Omnipotence lies in this, that he is able to do whatsoever is absolutely, simply and generally possible. A possible thing is that, the doing of which may be an effect of Gods wisdom and power, and which being done, would argue power and perfection; an impossible, that which cannot be an effect of wisdom and power, but if it should be done, would argue weaknesse and imperfection in God: The Arminians say, That God is often frustrated of his end, which derogates from his power. 2. In respect of manner, he doth it with a word, Let there be light, saith he, and there was light. 3. He can do all things of himself, without any creatures non posse ut fiat, quod fieri vult, quod quid aliud est, quam divinam omnipotentiam convellere. Nam & volumus & possumus, præstamus. Twiss. contra Corvinum, c. 12. §. 8. 3.

Mat. 3. 9. In Scholis Aristotelicis percrebuit illud, Deum & naturam nihil facere frustra, Deum sine suo frustrari nihil aliud est quam Deum præstare nos quæcunq;

mites help. Gods power is ſtiled, Might of power, Epheſ. 1.19. and it is ſeen in his works of Creation, making all things of nothing, therefore that follows the other in the Creed. 2. In his works of providence. Chriſt is a mighty God and Saviour to his people, *Iſa.*7.6. Pſalm 89.19. *Iſa.*63.1. *Heb.*7.25. *Revel.*18.8. He is ſtrong in himſelf.

He was mighty:

1. In ſuffering, he bore the revenging juſtice of God, he ſuffered the wrath of God upon the Croſſe.

2. In doing: 1. Made all, John 1.5. *Col.*1.16. 2. Preſerves all, *Col.*1.17. 3. As he is the Head of the Church.

Secondly, He is ſtrong in his Saints:

1. In the gathering of his Church.
2. In upholding it.
3. In raiſing all people out of their afflictions.
4. In his Ordinances, Prayer, Sacraments, Word, *Rom.*1.16.
5. In his Graces, Faith, *Heb.*11. Love, 1 *Cor.*13.

Gods power is limited and reſtrained:

1. By his Nature, he cannot contradict himſelf.
2. Regulated by his Will, he cannot do evil.
3. By his Glory, he cannot lie, he is Truth it ſelf, nor be tempted of evil, James 1.13.

There is a difference betweene δυναμις and ἐξουσια, Potentia and Poteſtas: ἐξουσια, or Poteſtas is properly authority, right to doe a thing, as a King hath over his Subjects, a Father over his Children, a Husband over his Wife, a Maſter over his Servants, of which Chriſt ſpeaks, John 17.2. Matth. 28. 18. δυναμις, or Potentia is properly ſtrength to doe ſomething; as ſome great King may have power to overcome his enemies over which he hath no authority. A Layman hath power to give Bread and Wine, but he hath not poteſtatem, a calling or right to do it.

Gods Omnipotency is proved:

1. From the Creation of the world, he made all things of nothing, and that with the ſpeaking of a word, 2 *Cor.*4.6.

2. From the Conſervation of the world, he upholds the world by his power, *Heb.*1.3.

3. From the Reſurrection of the dead, that God which can raiſe a body when turned to duſt, is Almighty: God will give to every man his own fleſh, every one ſhall riſe with his own body. Chriſt raiſed many when he was on earth from the dead, and raiſed himſelf by his own power, *Rom.*1.4.

4. From the Converſion of a ſinner; a greater power is required to convert a ſinner, than create a world. God met with no oppoſition in making the world; but in converſion there is reſiſtance from the Devil and ſinner himſelf. That was a temporary work, this perpetual.

5. From the perſeverance of true Saints, there is as much power required to uphold a converted Saint, as to make him one, 2 *Tim.*1.12. 1 Peter 1.6.

Laſtly, From the conſtant preſervation of the Church of Chriſt from the beginning of the world till now, in the midſt of all oppoſition, Eſay 27.2. Revel. 12. 6, 14.

Conſectaries from Gods power or omnipotency.

It ſerves both for a ſpurre to doe well, ſince God is able to ſave, Genes 17.1. and a bridle to reſtrain from evil, ſeeing he hath power to deſtroy; we ſhould therefore humble our ſelves under his mighty hand, 1 Peter 5.6. Luke 12.5.

Whatſoever God hath promiſed or threatned, we may be ſure ſhall be fulfilled, Act 26.8. Matth. 28.29.

Ephes.3.20. Prov.18.10.

It reproves the wicked, which care not for Gods power, but provoke the Almighty God, Matth. 10.28. and ſo contend with power it ſelf, none ſhall deliver them out of his hand, 1 Corinth. 10.22. and it condemnes the godly, which which distrust the power of God, Numb. 11. 21. John 21. 32. Remembring not that he hath unlimited power. The Lords Prayer ends thus, For thine is the power.

This ministers comfort to those which have God on their side, they need not fear what man or Devil can do against them. He can strengthen them in spiritual weaknesses against sinne, and unto duty; all the Devils in hell are not able to pluck them out of his hands, Matth. 16. 18. John 10. 28, 29. if a people fall from him, he is able to graft them in again, Esay 44. 22. Rom. 11. 23. they are kept by his power through faith to salvation, 1 Peter 1. 5. he can protect them against their enemies, though they be never so many, Daniel 3. 17. Psalm 3. 6. he can and will make you strong in his power to bear patiently all afflictions. God is able to raise them up again, when they are rotten in the grave, at the general Resurrection, Heb. 11. 19.

The power of God is the foundation, 1. Of our Faith, from. 4. 19. 2. Of our Comfort, Psal. 68. 13. 3. Of our Prayers. Mark 14. 36. John. 10. 39.

Rom. 8. 38. 2 Tim. 1. 12. This power of God is not idle, but creates, sustains, and governes all things.

We should not despise a weak Christian: God is able to make him strong; we should by this strengthen our faith in Gods promises, as Abraham, Rom. 4. 22. it is prefixed in the Creed, as the prop of our belief in the Articles of our Christian Faith. That Commandment, Be strong in Christ, and in his power, includes a promise, that he will give us his power, if we seek to him, and rest on him; for it were a very mocking to bid us be strong in him, if he would not communicate his strong power to us; if we have any strength either of body or minde to doe any thing, we must return to him the glory of it, and be ruled by him in the use of it, because we have it from him, and hold it at his meere pleasure. Oh, saith God to Job, Can you do this and that? and then, Who made the Clouds? By which question he would cause Job to see his own impotency, and Gods Omnipotent power.

Of all the Attributes of God, this onely is mentioned in the Creed, I, believe in God the Father Almighty, and sitteth at the right hand of God Christ.

the Father Almighty, because our faith is especially fixed on the power of God and

CHAP. XV.

Of Gods Glory and Blessedness.

FRom all these before-mentioned Attributes, ariseth the Glory or Majesty of God, which is the infinite excellency of the Divine Essence, Heb. 1. 3. Exodus 33. 18. Psalm 29. 9. This is called, The face of God, Exod. 33. 20. and light inaccessible, 1 Tim. 6. 16. which to acknowledge perfectly belongs to God alone, yet the revelation and obscurer vision thereof is granted to us in this life by the Ministery of those things which are seen and heard, the clearer in the life to come, where we shall see God face to face, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Matt. 18. 10.

Glory is not so much a distinct Attribute (say some) as the lustre of all Gods Attributes together; the excellency which results from all. ¶ See Mr Strongs Sermon on 1 Sam. 2. 30. about mans honouring of God, and his honouring of man.

God is, and ever shall be exceeding [a] Glorious, Exodus 15. 11. Deuter. 28. 58.

[a] Isa. 6. 1. Ezek. 1. 28. Numb. 12. 8. Exod. 33. 23. Non percepe-runt vim gloriæ qui eam desi-

Glory is sometime taken for outward lustre and shining, as one glory of the Sun; sometimes for outward decking and adorning, as long hair is a glory to a woman, but the proper signification of it is, excellent estimation by which one is preferred before others.

It is the ſplendor, clarity or ſhining of a thing, reſulting and riſing from the perfection, eminency, or excellency it hath above other things. The glory of God is the perfection of his Nature and Attributes, infinitely ſurpaſſing and outſhining the perfection of all creatures.

Things that are good we praiſe, things that are excellent we honour, and things that are tranſcendently good we glorifie.

nierunt nitidam claram cum laude; nam ſi ita ſe res haberet, ut ita, quidem Deum gloriſicari eſſet, vale dicere præditum gloriâ; unde Latinis gloriſicare ſignificat Cameron. de Eccleſia. Gloria quaſi claritas, ſaith Aquinas, it is the manifeſtation and ſhining forth of Excellency. God is ſaid to glorifie himſelf, when he manifeſteth his unſpeakable and incomprehenſible Excellency, Numb. 14. 21. Pſalm 72. 19. Levit. 10. 3. Angels and men glorifie him when they extoll his greatneſſe, and teſtifie their acknowledgment of his glory, Iſa. 6. 3, 29. Pſalm 1. 2. Luke 2. 14. Revel. 4. 11.

Glory is uſed metonymically for that which is the ground and matter of glory, as Prov. 19. 11. & 20. 29. Sometimes the glory of God ſignifieth the very Eſſence and Nature of God, as Exod. 33. 18. Sometimes it is uſed to ſignifie ſome of Gods Attributes, Eph. 1. 12. that is, his grace and good will, by ſhewing forth of which he makes himſelf glorious. Sometimes it is put for ſome work of God which is great and marvellous, John 11. 40. that is, the grace and powerfull work of God in raiſing up thy brother Lazarus unto life again, Exod. 25. 16. & 40. 35. that is, ſome extraordinary ſplendour, as R. Moſes expounds it, which God created thereby to ſhew forth his magnificence and glory.

Glory is eſſential, ſo it ſignifieth the incomprehenſible excellency of the Divine Nature, Exod. 33. 18. or elſe it ſignifieth manifeſtatively the acknowledgement and celebration of his excellencies, and this is called properly glorification: this may have more or leſſe.

1. When we have a greater ſenſe of Gods wiſdome, goodneſſe, our reverence and love to him is increaſed, Pſal. 50. 4.

2. When we are a means to increaſe in others a reverence of God, and provoke them to glorifie him, 1 Pet. 2. 12.

Or ſecondly, much to the ſame purpoſe, the glory of God may be taken two wayes:

1. For the inward excellency and worth whereby he deſerves to be eſteemed and praiſed.

2. For the actual acknowledging of it; for glory is defined a clear and manifeſt knowledge of anothers excellency; therefore the glory of God is twofold.

Firſt, Internal, which is again two-fold:

1. Objective, that glory of God is the excellency of his Divine Nature, for ſuch is his Majeſty and Excellency, that he is infinitely worthy to be praiſed, admired, and loved of all.

2. Formal, is his own knowledge, love and delight in himſelf; for this is infinitely more the glory of God, that he is known and beloved of himſelf, than that he is loved and praiſed by all Creatures, Men or Angels, becauſe this argueth an infinite worth in Gods own Nature, that an infinite love and delight is ſatisfied with it.

God hath this kinde of Glory Objective and Formal, moſt fully even from all Eternity: therefore when he is ſaid to make all things for himſelf, or his glory, it is not meant of this inward glory, as if he could have more of that.

Secondly, External; and that again,

1. By way of Object, viz. when he made the Heavens and Earth, and all theſe glorious creatures here below, which are ſaid, To ſhew forth his glory, Pſal. 19. that is, objectively, they are the effects of his glorious wiſdom and power, and ſo become objects of mens and Angels praiſes of him; and as the glory of men conſiſts in outward ornaments, ſo Gods glory conſiſts in having ſuch creatures, men and Angels to be his followers.

2. Formal,

2. Formal, when men and Angels do know, love and obey him, and praise him to all Eternity.

The Scriptures every where extoll the Majesty and glory of God:

First, Essentially, when it calls God Great, Most High, The God of Glory, Act. 7. 2. King of Glory, Psalme 24. 8. Father of Glory, Ephes. 1. 17.

Secondly, Efficaciously, when it affirmeth, that all the Earth is full of the glory of God, Isa. 6. 3. and propounds the glorious and wonderfull works of God to be considered by us, Exod. 32. 18. He means he will shew him so much of his glory, as it is possible for a creature to behold and live, we cannot behold the fullnesse of it.

God is glorious in his Nature, 1 Cor. 11. 7. his glory obscureth all other glory, Isa. 6. 2. Gen. 18. 17. 1 Kings 10. 13.

His glory is manifested:

1. Extraordinarily, In the Cloud, in apparitions and visions. Exod. 16. 10. Ezek. 1. 28.

2. Ordinarily, In his Word and works. * The Law sets forth the glory of his justice, and the Gospel that of his mercy, 2 Cor. 3. 8. It is called his glorious Gospel, Luke 2. 14. * Exod. 9. 15. Fearfull in praises, because Gods Majesty is so excellent, that even with trembling we are to praise him, but specially because he works such miraculous deliverances, and sheweth his terrible power.

All his works set forth his glory, both those of Creation, and Preservation, or Providence, Psalm 19. the whole Creation must needs shew forth his glorious power and wisdom, the sound is said to go over all the world; that is, All creatures must needs gather, that if the Heavens be such glorious Heavens, the Sun so glorious a Sun, how much more must that God be a glorious God, who is the author and worker of them.

The whole Platforme of saving the Church by Christ, sets forth Gods glory principally, Philip. 2. 11. Luke 2. 14. Glory to God in the highest. In some workes the Excellency of Gods Power, in others the excellency of his Wisdome, Patience; but in this all the Attributes of God shine out in their utmost perfection.

First, His Wisdome, that all the three Persons of the Trinity should joyne in one work, to one end, wherein Mercy, Power, Grace, Justice, Patience, all meet together: and his Wisdome is seen in bringing Justice and Mercy together.

Secondly, Power, in upholding Christ to undergoe the weight of Gods vindictive Justice, Ephes. 3. 20. His Power prevailes over our obstinacy and unbelief. His truth, the promise of the Messiah is the greatest promise.

Thirdly, Free-grace, to doe this without any motive in the world but himself, nothing was fore-seene in them, and some rather than others were saved. God is exceedingly glorified in Christ. 1. In the structure of his Person. 2. In his Doctrine. 3. In his benefits, and the influences of his grace.

Fourthly, His revenging justice and wrath here were manifested, as much as they be in Hell it self, Rom. 3. 25.

Fifthly, His Holinesse, he can have no communion with those that are uncleane.

Sixthly, His Majesty; none may be admitted to speak or come nigh to him, but in the mediation of Christ. The Gospel is, The glorious Gospel of the blessed God, 1 Tim. 1. 11. that is, The glory of all the Attributes of God doth appear in the Gospel more brightly, than in all the works which God hath made. Mr Burroughs.

God is glorious in all his works upon the hearts of believers, he puts a glory upon them, so that in this sense he is effectually glorious, Ephes. 5. a glorious Church, and Psalm 45. The Kings daughter is all glorious within; this glory is grace, when God makes one holy, heavenly-minded, meek, zealous; hereafter we shall have glorious bodies and souls.

God made all things for his glory; For of him, and to him are all things, Rom. 11. 36.

All the unreasonable creatures are for Gods glory:

First, In that they are serviceable to man; for herein God is glorified, in that that they can accomplish those ends for which they were made, and that is for man, Gen. 1. the Sun and Stars are for him, as well as creeping things. These creatures are for a two-fold use;

1. To give him habitation, and to be means of his corporeal life.

2. To be continual quickners of him, to praise Gods glorious Power and Wisdome; God is said, Acts 4. Not to leave himself without witnesse; the reasonable creatures are made chiefly for his glory, because they know and love him.

That God is glorious appears;

First, God hath made many of his creatures glorious, Daniel 10. 8. so there is one glory of the Sunne, another of the Moon; the King clad with gorgeous attire, and being arrayed with the Ensignes of his Soveregnty is glorious, so Solomon.

Secondly, This glory shall continue for ever, because God hath it from himself, and derived it not from another. He is a perfect being, independent, all things are under him; the Inferiour cannot work without the Superiour.

Solomons glory was in part visible, the shining of his Throne, his glittering apparel, but his wisdome and understanding were not; God perceives his own glory, and that it shall continue for ever; the Apostle beheld the glory of Christ, as of the onely begotten Sonne.

There is a double glory in things:

First, Inherent in themselves, which is partly visible, as that of the Sunne; partly intelligible, an excellency in a thing which affects the understanding.

Secondly, From without, given by others, so there is a kinde of glory and excellency in some precious stones which affect a man with a kind of wondering; so in an Angel a great shining, as in that which appeared to Zachary; so in the vision that Paul saw; and when God appeared to Moses.

There is an inward glory standing in being worthy of highest esteem, and an outward glory standing in being highly accounted of; God is worthy to be esteemed above all, and is so by the Saints.

The chiefest and highest cause of any benefit shewed to us, is not our selves, but the name of God, even his glory, and the clear declaration of his own excellencies, Ezek. 20. 9, 14, 22. Psalm 25. 1. Ezek. 36. 22.

Reasons:

First, The thing which induced God to make all things, must needs be the cause of all other benefits bestowed after the Creation, now he made all things for himself, and his own Name; for neither had they any being, nor could they have any before, and therefore could not be any moving cause to their own creation, therefore neither of any other thing.

Secondly, All creatures are nothing, and lesse than nothing in comparison of God, therefore he could not by them be moved to work any thing, but doth it for his own names sake. Things mean and trifling are not fit to be the highest end of an excellent work. God is most high and glorious, and all creatures are lesse than nothing before him, therefore himself must be moved by himself, not by them chiefly to do any thing for them; for as God hath no efficient, material or formal cause at all, but is to himself instead of all these, because he is of himself, so neither can he have any final cause but himself; for if he have any other end than himself, that is, his own glory, he were some way dependent upon some other thing, which is impossible.

If it be objected, How is it said then, that God doth this or that for Abraham, Isaac and Jacobs sake, as often Moses presseth him in his prayers?

The Answer is, He looks upon them still in subordination to his own Name, so that they are motives but in reference to his Name, and so otherwise. He glorifieth himself, and aimeth at his own glory, in keeping covenant and promise with them.

Gods glory is the end of Predestination, both Reprobation, Prov. 16. 1. and Election, Ephes. 1. 5, 6. of the Creation and administration of all things, Rom. 11. 36. of all benefits obtained in Christ, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and should be of all our actions, 1 Cor. 10. 31.

We had not had Christ the Gospel, Covenant of grace, or Scriptures else, 2 Cor. 1. 20.

1. 20. In his temporal mercies he aims at his glory, Psal. 50. 15. and in his spiritual mercies, 1 Cor. 6. 18. We have peace of conscience, and also acceptation with God for this end, Ephes. 1. 6.

Quest. Whether the infinite glory which God hath as God, be communicated to Christs humane Nature?

Answ. That being a creature, cannot have that glory which is due to the Creator. It is true, Christ is infinitely to be glorified, because he is God and man, but not therefore his humane Nature. Our Divines distinguish between a glory meerly Divine, and a Mediators glory, which is next to Divine, far above all creatures.

Object. Christ prayed for the glory which he had before the beginning.

Answ. Christ had it in Decree and Predestination, and that was not Gods essential glory, which is a property, for he requires he may have it now, which could not be, if he had it from Eternity. John 17. 5.

We glorifie God, not by putting any excellency into him, but by taking notice of his excellency, and esteeming him accordingly, and making manifest this our high esteem of him.

There is a two-fold glory:

First, Essential, Infinite, Everlasting; this is called Gloria, it receives neither addition nor diminution by any created power.

Secondly, Accidental, Final, Temporary, called Glorificatio; this ebbes or flowes, shines, or is overshadowed, as goodnesse or graciousnesse prevails in the world.

It serves,

First, To shew the vilenesse and baseneſſe of all wicked men, which oppose Gods glory, and strive to obscure it, dishonour this glorious God, setting light by him in their hearts, and blaspheming him with their tongues: a sinner in sinning lifts up himself above God, preferring his own wisdom before Gods, and his will before his; therefore David worthily concludes the 104 Psalm with an imprecation against sinners, God will gain glory of them in despight of their hearts by magnifying his justice. Consectaries from Gods glory.

Secondly, We should labour to partake of Gods image, that we might be partakers of his glory; we must earnestly desire that Gods glory may be communicated to us, that he would send forth his Spirit of glory to rest upon us, by which means we shall commend our selves to God, Christ, the Angels and Saints, and our owne consciences.

Thirdly, We must learn to contemplate the glory of God with admiration; by this one principally differs from a beast. He hath not a capacity to behold the excellency of God; the Saints in Heaven are even taken up, and filled with beholding Gods glory: Set your eyes round about to behold Gods works, and his glory in them, & in you may admire God, this will make your souls to enjoy God. Paul saith, In the mystery of the Gospel we behold as in a glasse the glory of God; be much in this exercise. Those that do not take notice of Gods name lose the chief fruit of his works.

Fourthly, We must long to go out of this world to behold Gods glory fully, John 17. 24. raise up your hearts to heavenly desires, with earnestly to be in Heaven. Every one would be willing to go to Heaven when he dieth, but we must desire to leave this life to go thither. * It is said of Fulgentius, when he came out of Africa to Rome? Rome, Rome be sold. Quantum fuligo Coelum Mauritanum, tam adverſa Ecclesiæ Romæ?

Fifthly, This should comfort us: It is a comfort to Gods people when they goe to him for any favour. Let them not be out of heart, because they finde nothing in themselves upon which to ground their prayer or faith. There is enough in his owne Name; the Lord doth not look upon any thing in us, but upon himself for arguments of doing good to us. His Name is the more magnified by how much we are more vile.

1. Against reproaches and contempt in the world; if God be glorified, we must sacrifice our names as well as our lives to him.

2. Against death, then we shall no more dishonour God.

3. The

3. The day of Judgement should be longed for, because it is Gods glorious day, 2 Thess. 1. 10. We runne to glorious sights on earth, as the Queen of Sheba.

Sixthly, We should ascribe all glory to God, the fountain of glory, 1 Chron. 29. 11, 12, Psalm 115. 1. God challengeth this from men, Give unto the Lord glory and strength, give unto the Lord the glory due unto his Name. He is very jealous of his glory, and will not suffer the least part of it to be given to the creature.

Glory is Gods due, because of the perfection of his nature, Matth. 6. 13.

We should ascribe unto his Name all the mercies we enjoy, giving all the praise from our selves wholly to him. God for his Names sake hath made and redeemed us.

Seventhly, Take heed of those Tenets which oppose Gods glory; As

1. The lawfulnes of giving religious honour to Images; the Popish Doctors have wearied themselves and racked their brains to coin distinctions, how Divine Worship may be given to Images, but the second Commandment forbids Image-worshipping, and God acknowledgeth himself a jealous God, and saith, He will not give his glory to another.

2. Attributing too much to our free-will, or setting up our merits, [a] this is robbing God likewise of his glory.

[a] Hereby we may judge which is the true Religion, what Doctrine is soundly pure, and of God, and what corrupt, and from men. That Doctrine which setteth forth the praise of God cometh from Heaven, but that which is from men advanceth the power, pride, and merit of man.

There is a difference between praise and blessing: praise hath respect to Gods excellency, blessing to his benefits, Ephes. 1. 3. We may praise one for his worth, though we have no benefit by him. The Angels praise God for his holinesse, Isa. 6. 3.

Let us first live to his glory, and do all for his glory;

1. Because he intended it.
2. He hath joyned our happinesse and his glory together.
3. It is infinitely more worth than all the world.
4. It is his condescending, that he will take this for glory.
5. He will have glory of us against our wils.
6. The Creatures glorifie God in their way.
7. How much glory do we give to things of an inferiour nature?
8. God will hereby give us glory.

We should do all we do for him and to him, even to shew forth our apprehension of his Name. Doing whatsoever good we do, and leaving whatsoever evil we leave, that we may declare our high esteem of him, and make it appear, that we do judge and repute him most wise, good, just, excellent, worthy all the service that we can do, and more too. And whatsoever is not thus done with reference to the name [b] of God, as the motive and end of it, doth want so much of goodnesse as it wants of this reference. Nothing is good, farther than it hath reference to God the chiefest good. If we aim at only or chiefly, and be moved only or chiefly by temporal benefits and respects of this kind, looking to our selves, our deeds are hollow and seemingly good alone, not real. If we look to our selves alone even in respect of eternal benefits, and not above our selves, to him and his Name, that also is but hypocrisie. But this is truth, to make our ends and motives the same with John 5. 18. Ephes. 1. 6. 2. 4. Rom. 3. 23. We must glorifie God by confession, as Achan, glorifie his Omniscience and mercy, by our praises, Psal. 50. 23.

[b] Duobus modis referri aliquid ad Dei gloriam dicitur. Primùm formaliter & explicitè, quando aliquis cognat cum animo, hoc sibi agendum esse, quia omnino divino sit gloriosum. Deinde virtualiter & implicitè, cum quis divinæ studens gloriæ, eâque nihil fore decernens nisi quod legi congruat, & ad hoc gratiam Dei quotidie exposcens, hoc quippiam facit, ut universali fine alia non egeant; sed solum particularis finis bonum intendens. Vossius in Thesibus. Though we cannot actually intend Gods glory always in every thing, yet we should virtually. Vide Aquin. 1. 2. Quæst. 1. Artic. 6. In metaphysical consideration, semper virtute, we may abstract Gods glory from our salvation, but practically and really they are so united, that the one cannot be intended without the other. See Dr Reynolds on 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. pag. 18.

Gods

Gods, and to have an eye still above and beyond our selves, even to Gods name, that we may cause it to appear to him and our selves, and others, that we know him, and confesse his great Name, Omnibus operibus nostris cœlestis intentio adjungi debet. Aquinas.

Grace will teach a man to love God above himself; Gods glory is our happinesse.

Happinesse consists:

1. In the most perfect operation of the soul, a man cannot will a greater good than the glory of God.

2. The soul takes its amplitude from the greatnesse of the object.

3. What ever one wils short of the glory of God, cannot make him happy: Happinesse consists in the enjoying of an uncreated good.

4. God is a liberal rewarder of all his servants.

5. He that willeth the glory of God for it self is happy, because he is sure to have that which he desireth. Happinesse lies in choice and assured enjoyment of the best things.

We should glorifie God:

First, With the heart:

1. By loving and esteeming him, Psalm 63.3. Phil. 1.20.

2. By trusting in him according to his promise, *Rom.*4.20.

Secondly, In word, by a solemn acknowledgement, or publick declaration of what he is, and hath done for us, Psalm 103.1.

Thirdly, In conversation, Psalm 50.21. *Rom.*11.36.

1. In the matter of it, walk so sweetly in our general and particular callings, as to win others to glorifie him.

2. In the end of it, Do all to his glory, Rom.11.36.

It is a great Question among the Schoolmen, and some of our Divines, Whether one should actually propound the rule, and intend the end in every service. Adam and Christ did so, though lapsed men cannot doe it: It is a duty nevertheless, it is good to do it as often as possibly men can. In serious and solemn actions our thoughts should be actual, in lesser the habitual intention sufficeth.

We should glorifie him in our natural actions, 1 Cor. 10.31.

2. In our civil acts: A Christian turns the Tables, and makes his commerce to be a kind of worship.

3. Much more in our spiritual acts; therefore we are said to live to God, Galat. 2.20. There is a distinction, 2 Pet. 3. 11. between holinesse and godlinesse; holinesse looks to the Rule, it is a conformity to the Law of God, godlinesse respects the aim; in our desires of grace, pardon of sinne, our ultimate end must not be self, but God, Ephes. 1.6.

About intending the glory of God in every businesse, these Propositions are considerable:

First, We should expressly dedicate and set apart our selves for the Lords use, *Rom.*6.13.

Secondly, This purpose of being for the Lords use must be often renewed, as when we use the seals, 1 Pet. 3.21. In prayer we should renew our purpose of serving and glorifying of God, Give us this day our daily bread, the Lords Prayer is a patern of our daily worship.

Thirdly, We must actually think of the honour of God, when the nature of the work requireth it, as when we invocate God.

Fourthly, This actual intention must be renewed in case of temptation.

God glorified himself, John 12. 28. Christ glorified him, his whole life was nothing but a seeking of his Fathers glory, John 17. 4. * See Heb. 2. 11.

* Christ glorified his Father,

1. By denying himself and his own glory, John 8.50. *Heb.*5.5.

2. By his Word, by his preaching, Luk 4.15.

By his prayer, John 12.28. *March.*26.39. By his confession, John 10.29. & 14.29. 3. By his works or miracles, Matth. 9.8. & 15.31. Mark 2.12. Luke 17.16. & 13.13. & 17.15. & 23.47. 4. By his sufferings, John 13.31. To glorifie is to manifest ones excellency, as appears John 17.4 compared with *vers.*6. See of glorifying God, Church his Apostolicall, pag. 11. to 18.

The Saints and Angels spend Eternity in setting forth his glory, Esay 6.23. Revel. 4.10.11. & 7.9, 10. All the creatures doe glorifie God in their kind, Psalm 145.10. & 148. The worme is not exempted; therefore that man, (saith Chrysostome) which doth not glorifie God, is baser than the baseſt worme. This is all the first Table of the Decalogue, and above half of the Lords Prayer; the three first Petitions concern Gods glory, and the Conclusion likewise hath reference to it. We should glorifie God in all conditions, in adversity as well as in prosperity, Psalm 50.15. In all the parts of our bodies, in our hearts, 1 Pet. 3.15. with our mouths, Rom. 15.6. in our lives, 1 Cor. 6. ult. Mat. 5.16.

Let us often think of the personal glory and excellency which the Saints shall enjoy when they come to Heaven.

1. In Body.
2. In Soul.

The bodies of the Saints in Heaven shall be,

1. Perfect, free from all blemishes, and every way for the souls use.
2. Incorruptible, not liable to sickneſſe, weakneſſe, * mortality.
3. Spiritual,
   1. In regard of state and condition, because they shall be upheld by the Spirit of God, without the use of meat, drink and sleep.
   2. In regard of quality and operation, active and agile as a Spirit, they shall move swiftly upward, downward, any way at the command of the soul.
4. Glorious, The bodies of the Saints shall then shine as the Sunne, and be like the glorious body of Christ.

* 1 Cor. 15. 42, 43.

There is (say the Schools) Beatitudo objectiva, so whatever is the chiefest good of the soul, as the fruition of God. ly and perfectly. blessed Potentate.

The soul shall be totally freed from all spiritual evils, all reliques of sinne, and all possibility of sinne; the corruption of the understanding, will, affections, conscience, shall be quite taken away. 2. From all apprehensions of wrath and eternal death.

2. Formalis, when the soul and its beatifying object are united, is the soul blessednesse. The soul is here united to God remotely and imperfectly, there immediate- 2 Samuel 22. 47. 1 King. 1. 48. Paul entituleth him, God blessed for ever, the only

2. It shall perfectly enjoy all spiritual good: 1. The Image of God shall be absolutely perfect in every one of the glorified Saints, every faculty of the Soul shall have all grace that faculty is capable of, and that in the highest degree. The mind shall have all intellectual vertues, the will and affections all moral vertues, and that in the highest degree they are capable of, 1 Cor. 13.10. The understanding uno intuitu shall know omne scibile, the will shall be fully satisfied with God, the conscience filled with peace, the affections of love and joy shall have their full content, the memory shall represent to you perpetually all the good that ever God did for you.

God is most Blessed, 1 Corinth. 11. 31. Rom. 9.4. 1 Tim. 1.11. & 6.15. 2 Corineh. 11.31. yea, blessednesse it self, he is blessed in himself, and to be blessed by us.

Gods blessednesse is that by which God is in himself, and of himself All-sufficient. Or thus, Gods happinesse is that Attribute whereby God hath all fulnesse of delight and contentment in himself, and needeth nothing out of himself to make him happy.

Vide Amesium in Fid. l. 1. * Beatitudo status est omnium bonorum aggregatione perfectus. Boetius de consol. Phil.

The Hebrews call blessed Asherei in the abstract, and in the plural number, Blessednesses, Psalm 1.1. & 32.1. Because no man (saith Zanchy) can be called and be blessed for one or another good, unlesse he abound with all goods. Blessednesse is a state of life wherein there is a heap * of all good things. The Greeks called blessed μακαρίους, one that is not subject to death, miseries. By the Etymologies and significations of these two words, it appears (saith Zanchy) that there are two parts of blessednesse, one to be free from all miseries, another to abound with all goods, and ſo to abound with them that thou deſireſt nothing more. A third particle (ſaith he) is to be added per ſe, & ſua natura; and a fourth condition, that he well know his own bleſſedneſſe. So that he is truly bleſſed (ſaith Zanchy) which of himſelf and from his own nature is alwayes free from all evils, and abounds with all goods, perfectly knowing his own felicity, and deſiring nothing out of himſelf, but being fully content with himſelf, which deſcription agreeth only to God.

and

1 Tim. 6. 15. Bleſſedneſſe is that Attribute by which the Lord from himſelf, and in himſelf is free from all miſery, and enjoyes all good, is ſufficient to himſelfe: Or, it is the fruition of himſelfe, and delighting in himſelfe.

God is bleſſed eſſentially, primarily, originally, of himſelf ſuch, and not by the help of any other thing.

Reaſons:

1. He that is the fountain * of all bleſſedneſſe to others, how can he be but infinitely bleſſed himſelf. He makes all thoſe things happy to whom he vouchſafeth in any ſort to communicate himſelf. Wherefore as that which maketh hot and light, that is more hot and light than that which is made ſo; ſo muſt he exceed all other things in bleſſedneſſe, which makes all thoſe perſons bleſſed which have any part of bliſſe.

* He that is the cauſe of all welfare to other things, and makes them in their ſeveral kinds happy, he muſt needs be therefore moſt happy himſelf. God is the author of all bleſſedneſſe, Pſal 132. 1, 2.

2. Either he hath bleſſedneſſe, or there ſhould be none; for if it be not found in the firſt and beſt eſſence, and cauſe of all other eſſences, it cannot be found in any other thing. All men and things affect it, therefore ſuch a natural and univerſal inclination cannot be wholly in vain, as it ſhould be if there were no bleſſedneſſe to ſatisfie it. The happineſſe of every thing ſtands in the perfect enjoying of it ſelf, when it hath all which it enclineth to have, and inclineth to have all and only that which it hath, then it is fully ſatisfied and contented, and full contentment is felicity. Goodneſſe filleth the reaſonable appetite of mans ſoul, therefore muſt he needs be happy whoſe will is filled with good, for then he enjoyes himſelf, then is his being truly comfortable to him, and ſuch as he cannot be weary of. Nothing is happy in enjoying it ſelf, and of it ſelf, but God alone; all other things do enjoy themſelves by help and benefit of ſome other thing beſides themſelves. And if they enjoy themſelves by help, favour, and communication of a perfect, laſting, conſtant, eternal and full goodneſſe, then have they a real, ſolid and ſubſtantial happineſſe; but if by a vain, ſhort, momentany, partial, defective goodneſſe, then have they but a ſhew and reſemblance of happineſſe, a poor, weak, feeble, imperfect, nominal happineſſe. The happineſſe of a man conſiſts in enjoying himſelf by vertue of the poſſeſſion of the greateſt good; whereof he is capable, or which is all one, by enjoying the greateſt good; for enjoying it he enjoyes himſelf in and by it; and enjoying himſelf by it, he doth enjoy it, theſe are inſeparably conjoyned. So when a man is poſſeſſed of ſuch a thing as doth remove from him all that may be diſcontentfull and hurtfull to him, and can fill him full of content, then is he happy, and that is, when he hath poſſeſſion of God as fully as his nature is capable of poſſeſſing him. Accordingly we muſt conceive Gods happineſſe to be in the enjoyment of himſelf; he doth perfectly enjoy his being, his life, his faculties, his Attributes, his vertues. I ſay himſelf in himſelf and of himſelf doth perfectly enjoy himſelf, and this is his perfect happineſſe. He liveth a moſt perfect life, abounds with all perfect vertues, ſets them a work himſelf in all fulneſſe of perfection, and in all this enjoyes himſelf with unconceivable ſatisfaction.

Dicimus nos ea re frui, quam diligimus propter ſe, & ea re fruenda nobis eſſe tantum qua efficimur beati: Cæterà vero utendum. Lombard. l. 1. Diſtinct. 1.

Bleſſedneſſe or felicity is the perfect action or exerciſe of perfect vertue in a perfect life. The Lord hath a moſt perfect life, and perfect faculties, and alſo moſt perfect vertues, and doth conſtantly exerciſe thoſe perfect vertues and faculties. He is bleſſed, becauſe he is ſtrong, and enjoyes his ſtrength; wiſe and enjoyes his wiſdome; juſt and enjoyes his juſtice; eternal and enjoyes his eternity; Infinite, Perfect, and that without any dependance, reference or beholdingneſſe to any other.

God is Happy:

First, Formally in himself, which implies:

1. That there is no evil of ſinne or miſery in him, neither is he leſſe happy, becauſe men offend him.

2. That he abounds with all poſitive good, he hath infinitely himſelf, and after a tranſcendent manner the good of all creatures; this is implied in that name, when he is called a God All-ſufficient; he made not the Angels or the world, becauſe he needed them.

3. That he is immutably happy, becauſe he is eſſentially ſo. Happineſſe is a ſtable or ſetled condition; therefore Saints and Angels alſo are happy but dependently, they have it from God.

Gods happineſſe is more than the happineſſe of any creature. The creatures are happy by the aggregation of many good things together, they are happy in their knowledge, in their love, joy, and theſe are divers things; but now God is happy by one act which is the ſame with his Eſſence. A man here on earth is happy, but it is not in act alwayes, it is ſometimes in habit.

Secondly, Thoſe Acts by which Angels are happy are ſucceſſive, they have one Act of Underſtanding, one of Love, one of Joy after another; but Gods happineſſe can be no more multiplied than his very nature or being can.

Happineſſe is taken two wayes: 1. Objectively, for the object wherein one is happy, as Gods infinite Eſſence is the object both of Gods, Angels, and mens happineſſe. 2. Formally; for thoſe acts whereby we poſſeſſe that object. God is happy formally, becauſe he knoweth, loveth, and enjoyeth himſelf; therefore it is ſaid, Our goodneſſe extendeth not to him; ſo Angels and men are formally happy, when they know and enjoy God. Beatitudo objectiva conſiſts in the viſion of God, and the glorious excellencies that are in him. Beatitudo formalis is that glory which ſhines from God to the creature, by which he is made conformable to God in holineſſe and happineſſe for ever.

Thirdly, He is happy effectively, he makes his children happy, Deut. 28. 3. Happy are the people whoſe God is the Lord. He can bleſſe the conſcience with peace, though hell and devils rage, the ſoul with grace, he is the Author of all bleſſedneſſe, all the bleſſedneſſe in Heaven is from him.

Fourthly, He is objectively bleſſed, God the only object and good thing, which if a man have, he muſt needs be bleſſed.

God is ſaid to be Bleſſed:

1. Objectively, as he is the object of our bleſſedneſſe, Pſalm 144. 15.

2. Subjectively,

1. Actively, as he hath the fulneſſe of perfection and contentment, 1 Timothy 1. 11. & 6. 15.

As he is the fountain of all bleſſedneſſe, Pſalm 149. 15. Epheſ. 1. 3.

2. Paſſively, as he receives praiſe and bleſſing from us, Pſalm 145. 10.

God is alſo to be bleſſed by us, which bleſſing adds nothing to his bleſſedneſſe, but is therefore required of us that we may ſomewhat enjoy his bleſſedneſſe.

There is:

1. A fraternal bleſſing, Pſalm 129. 8.

2. A prophetical bleſſing, when by way of bleſſing good things are fore-told, Luke 2. 34.

3. Miniſterial, Levit. 9. 23. 1 Chron. 23. 13.

4. Powerfull and efficacious, the bleſſing of Chriſt, Luke 24. 50, 51. Acts 3. 26.

The reaſonable creature ought to bleſſe God, that is, to obſerve and know his bleſſedneſſe, and to do two things to him,

1. To applaud it.

2. To expreſſe and acknowledge it.

In Scripture phraſe to bleſſe ſignifieth two things:

First, To praiſe a perſon for thoſe things which are praiſe-worthy in him, as Gods name is ſaid to be above all bleſſing and praiſe. Bleſſe the Lord, O my ſoul, and all that is within me bleſſe his holy Name.

Secondly,

Secondly, To wish well to it, That my soul may blesse thee before it die, pronounce and wish thee blessed. We cannot pronounce any blessing upon God, nor bestow any benefit upon him. He is too excellent to receive any thing by way of promise or performance from us, but we must perform these two things, viz. wish well to him, speak well of him. Wish well to him, that is, acknowledge his exceeding happinesse, and will, that he may be ever what he is, as we know he ever will be. For to wish a thing continue being that is, is possible, and to will Gods eternal, blessed and glorious being, that is one of the most excellent acts of the creature, and in doing so we blesse God so much as a creature can blesse him.

We should praise God, 1. Intensivè, Psal. 36. 19. & 103. 1. 2. Extensivè, with all praise, Psal. 9. 14. and for all mercies, Psal. 71. 7, 8.

Perfect happinesse is not to be had here, but so much happinesse as can be had here is to be had in him, he can give himself to those which seek him in some degrees, and then are they in some degrees happy; he can give himself to them in the highest degree, and then they are in the highest degree happy, according as he doth communicate himself to us more or lesse, so are we more or lesse happy.

Dicique beatus ante obitum nemo supremaque funera possit. Vide Aquin. summam 1, 2. Quæst. 5. Art. 3.

First, We have little mind to wish well to God, or rejoyce in his welfare, or to acknowledge and speak of it.

Consectaries from Gods blessednesse.

Secondly, We should stirre up our selves to blesse God, and say, How blessed art thou, and blessed be thy Name? We should set our minds and our tongues awork to set forth to our selves and others his exceeding great excellencies. When we see and know excellent abilities in any man, we cannot but be oft talking with our selves and others of his great worth: so we seeing and knowing the infiniteness of God must be often telling our selves and others what we do know by him, thereby to stirre up our selves and others more and more to know him, and we must declare before the Lord his goodnesse, and his loving kindnesse to the sonnes of men.

Thirdly, We must learn to seek happinesse where it is, even in God, and in his favourable vouchsafing to be ours, and to give himself to us. It is not possible for the creature to be happy and enjoy it self, unlesse it enjoy the best and greatest good, whereof it is capable, and which will fully satisfie all the longings and inclinations of it. We should,

Happinesse consists in two things, when the soul enjoyes a proportionable good, and a good that it hath a propriety in, a good of his own.

1. See our misery, that being alienated from God must needs be miserable till this estrangement be removed.

2. Set our selves to get true blessednesse by regaining this union and communion with God the fountaine of all blisse, and hate sinne which onely separates betweene God and us, and hinders us from enjoying the blessed God.

The happinesse of man consists in the enjoying of God.

3. We should place all our happinesse in him, and in him alone, for he is not onely the chief, but the sole happinesse; we should use the world, but enjoy him, Psalm 16. 11. we should use the means which may bring blessednesse, Psalm 1. 1. Matth. 5. 3. to 12. If we live holily we may look for happinesse. All the promises in the Scripture belong to godly men, they shall be blessed here and hereafter, who serve God in sincerity. We must expect and look for happinesse onely in our union with, and fruition of him. Augustine alledgeth out of Varro two hundred eighty eight severall opinions of Philosophers concerning felicity. Aristotle made it to consist in the knowledge of the Summum bonum; Seneca in the possession of vertue; and Epicurus in the enjoying of delight. Vide Ludovic. Viv. de veritate Fidei Christiana, lib. 1. cap. 5. & Aquinat. 1am. secundæ. Quæst. 2. Art. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

All other things are no otherwise means of happinesse, or helps to it, then as we see and taste God in them.

We must account our selves happy in this thing wholly and onely in that God is ours. Happinesse is the enjoyment of good commensurate to our desires. Ad perfectam beatitudinem requiritur, quod intellectus pertingat ad ipsam essentiam primæ causæ: Et sic perfectionem suam habebit per unionem ad Deum sicut ad objectum in quo solo beatitudo hominis consistit. Aquinas 1a. 2æ. Quæst. 3. Art 8. In God there is such a various Identity, that the Fruition of Him both satisfies and creates Desires: though That, without Satiety; and This, without Disquiet. Master Boiles Seraphick Love.

Blessednesse

Bleſſednesse is the acquiescence of rational appetites in an object so full of real and durable goodnesse, as to be able fully to satisfie all their longings. Dr Arrowsmiths Chain of Princip. Aph. 1. Exercit. 1.

Bleſſednesse is the enjoying of the sovereign good, now what that is, we must judge by these two Characters *, it must be,

* Bishop Lake

1. Optimum the best, otherwise it will not Sistere appetitum, give us content, we will be ever longing.

2. Maximum, the most compleat, otherwise it will not Implere appetitum, we shall not be satisfied therewith; God is Optimus Maximus. Appetitus sistitur in via, satiatur in patria.

Temporal things want;

First, Fulnesse, this is onely found in the Infinite God, Psalm 16. 11. See Eccles. 5. 10.

Secondly, Sincerity, Prov. 14. 13.

Thirdly, Eternity, the immortal soul must have an eternal good, Luke 12. 19, 20.

1. Every man would be happy, Psalm 4. 6.

2. We can not be happy but in God; none else is immutable, eternal, sufficient for the soul, Psalm 144. ult.

3. There can be no enjoying of God till sinne be removed, Esay 59. 2. Rom. 3. 23.

4. There is no removing of sinne, but by Gods pardon upon Christs satisfaction, Rom. 4. 6. & 8. 1.

Some say five properties must concur in that which shall be unto a man the chief good:

1. Summum bonum est tantùm bonum, there is no mixture of evil in it, as there is in all the creatures, Job 4. 18. There is none good but God, that is, Essentially.

2. Summum bonum est bonum universale, contains all good, Revel. 21. 6. it must be a self-sufficient good.

3. Summum bonum est bonum proprium, the chief good must be ones own good, he must have a propriety in it, God even our own God shall blesse us.

4. Summum bonum est bonum incommutabile, the chief goed is an eternal and unchangeable good.

5. Summum bonum est appetitus quietativum. Aquinas. The chief good must be a satisfactory good, it must satisfie without satiety, I shall be satisfied with thy likenesse, Psalm 17. ult. See 1 John 2. 15. That God which is the happinesse of the Angels in Heaven, and to the souls of just men made perfect, and to Christ as Mediator, Psal. 16. ult. nay which is his own happinesse by his self-sufficiency will be an All-sufficient portion.

Man in the state of blessednesse cannot see God absolutely, as he is in himselfe; for that which is infinite cannot be comprehended of that which is limited.

Perfect blessednesse consisteth in the immediate fruition of the chief, perfect, and All-sufficient good, even God himself. The good to be desired simply for it self is God onely, who being the first cause of all things, the first Essential, Eternal, Infinite, Unchangeable, and onely good, must needs be the chief good, and therefore the last end intended by man, given by God, who being not onely desired, but enjoyed, of necessity must fully satisfie the soul that it can go no farther, not onely because the subject is infinite, and so the mind can desire to know no more, but also because fulnesse of all good that can be wished is to be found in God. Therefore our happinesse is Compleat and Perfect, when we enjoy God, as an object wherein the powers of the soul are satisfied with everlasting delight.

Visio beatifica est cognitio non comprehensiva sed quidditativa. But God doth manifest himself so farre forth as a creature is able to know him. As a vessel may be filled with the water of the Sea, but it cannot containe all the water in the Sea. The Apostle saith, We shall know God, even as he also is known. But as is not a note of equality, but of likenesse. As God knoweth me after a manner agreeable to his infinite excellency, so shall I know God according to my capacity.

We

We enjoy God:

1. Mediately in common mercies.

2. Immediately, when we have immediate presence and influence, as in Heaven, Psalm 16.11. 1 Cor. 15.28.

This may suffice to have spoken concerning Gods Essence and Attributes, by which it appears, that God is far different both from all feigned gods, and from all creatures. The consideration of the Divine Persons followeth, for in one most simple nature of God there are distinct Persons.

Chap. XVI.

Of the Trinity or Distinction of Persons in the Divine Essence.*

* The word Essence or Trinity are not found in Scripture, but Essence is duly derived thence; for seeing God saith, I that He is, Exod. 3. Essence is fitly ascribed to him. Trinity hath a sufficient ground; There are three that bear witnesse in Heaven, 1 John 5.7. and the most ancient Fathers use the word. The word Person is extant, Heb. 1.3. therefore these words are rightly used in the Church. Calvinus ait, in Trinitate non comprehendi essentiam, quasi una sit ex numero trium, sed includi in omnibus tribus, quod quidem verissimum est, atque utinam sic semper errasset Calvinus. Bullinm. de Christo l.2. c. 5.

WE say God may be known by light of Nature, Quod attinet ad unitatem Naturæ, but not, Quod attinet ad Trinitatem Personarum.

We cannot by the light of Nature know the mystery of the Trinity, nor the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. 2.7,8.

The Emperour Gratian would not allow the Arians to dispute of God, and therefore by an especial Law forbad such Disputations, because the mystery of the Trinity is a mystery of Faith, farre above the reach of Humane Reason. Mr Ley his Discourse of Disputations concerning matters of Religion, Chap. 6.

Aquinas par. 1. Summæ Theol. Quæst. 32. Artic. 1. Conclus. saith, Impossibile est per rationem naturalem ad Trinitatis Divinarum Personarum cognitionem pervenire. It is impossible by natural reason to come to the knowledge of the Trinity of the Divine Persons. He there shews, that he which endeavours to prove this Mystery by natural reason, derogates from faith in respect of drawing others to believe. Cum enim aliquis (saith he excellently) ad probandum fidem inducit rationes quæ non sunt cogentes, cedit in irrisionem infidelium. Credunt enim quod hujusmodi rationibus innitamur, & propter eas credamus. When a man to prove any Article of faith urgeth reasons that are not cogent, he exposeth himself to the derision of Infidels. For they suppose that we relie on such reasons, and believe because of them.

Brochmand. System. Theol. Artic. 3. Relig. Christianæ de sac. Trin. Qu. 5. hath this Question, An Ecclesiarum nostrarum de sacrosanctâ Trinitate doctrina verbo Dei conformis sit? He begins thus, Sociniani negant, quippe quibus mysterium sacrosanctæ Trinitatis prædicandum pertinuit est. Vide plura ibid.

We think (saith Cleppenburg in his Answer to Bidel. Argum. 1.) that the mystery of the holy Trinity (as many mysteries of faith) can neither be demonstrated nor refuted by reason, 2 Cor. 10.5. Adam in the state of innocency was not able by natural reason to find out the Trinity.

But when by faith we receive this Doctrine, we may illustrate it by reason. The similies which the Schoolmen and other Divines bring, drawn from the creature, are unequal and unsatisfactory, since there can be no proportion between things Finite and Infinite.

Two

Two resemblances are much used in Scripture, the Light and the Word. The Light which was three dayes before the Sunne, Gen. 1. and then condensed into that glorious body, and ever since diffused throughout the world, is all one and the same Light. So the Father of Lights which inhabiteth light, which none can approach, Jam. 1. 17. and Sun of Righteousnesse, Mal. 4. 2. In whom all the fulnesse of the Godhead dwelleth bodily, and the holy Ghost the Spirit of illumination are all one and the same God.

Origo verbi Hebræi & radix non sine arcano ternarii divini, cujus potestate omnia consistunt, tribus literis notatur. Bibliander de optimo genere Grammaticorum Hebraicorum. Omne thema seu primogenium Hebræa lingua constat tribus literis substantialibus, sicut per totum Dictionarium cernis, idq; non sine magno mysterio. Nam ut una est dictio, & eo tribus subsistit literis substantialibus, ita una est divina essentia, tribus Personis realiter distincta, Forster. præfat. ad Dictionarium Hebraicum. Vide Schickardi Bechinath Happeruschim. Disput. 5. p. 102. Fidei, & professionis ejus, qua Christiani sumus, Caput est, unius summi Dei in essentia unitas, & in personis differentia: quo quo, velut fundamento, stat Catholica structura religionis, atque ab Judæorum, & Gentilium utriusque pravitate disjungitur. Perav. Dogmata Theol. Tom. 1. c. 1. Præfat. de Trinitate.

Again, it is the same thing that the mind thinketh, and the word signifieth, and the voice uttereth: so is the Father as the mind conceiving, the Son as the Word conceived or begotten, the holy Ghost as the voice or speech uttered and imparted to all hearers; and all one and the same God.

Vide Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 9. 10.

A studious Father meditating on the mystery of the Trinity, there appeared unto him a childe with a shell lading the Sea into a little hole, he demanding what the child did, I intend, said the child, to empty the Ocean into this pit. It is impossible, said the Father, as possible, said the child, as for thee to comprehend this profound mystery in thy shallow capacity.

Flor. on Rom. 11. 33.

The Mystery of the Trinity is necessary to be known and believed of all that shall be saved, it was not so plainly revealed to the Jews of old, as it is to us in the New Testament, a perfect and full knowledg of this mystery is not attainable in this life.

Vix ennubi unquam ante alios ex Judæis, quivis aliquando eundem esse spiritum in cunctis uniuersis, qui non concideret Deum trinum & unum: Verum Personæ nomen, & Patris & Filii unanimiter omnes usque adeo detestantur, ut nullatenus velint eis pulchrum fieri tale aliquid de Deo etiam somniare. Raymundi Martinii Pugio Fidei adversus Judæos part 3. cap. 4. Vide plura ibidem. Judæorum populus maximè ad idololatriam pronus erat; ne igitur in eorum, qui plures Deos colebant, errorem incideret: Caute à divina providentia factum est, Ut ipsum divinæ Trinitatis arcanum non explicari, sed implicitè eis traderetur. Sed quibusdam idololatriæ per Messiam penitus explodenda erat: universus quo ordo ad unum Dei cultum reducendus. Id prius mysterium illud Trinitatis explicitè atque apertè revelandum, ad dies Messiæ reservatum fuit. Galatinus de arcanis Cathol. veritt. lib. 2. cap. 1. Cum sacrosancta Trinitatis fides duplici gaudet constet, ut Deum esse Credamus unum, hoc est substantia naturaque singularem, Deut. 6. 4, & personas numero tres, quæ obscurius in Testamento veteri traditæ in novo distinctius explicantur: ac de utroque certa sint ejusdem testimonia Scripturæ. Quicunque ad unius naturæ communitatem spectant, ne ad personarum confundendam [illegible] Sabelliani conferunt: quibus autem personarum in eadem natura numerus inducitur; eis ad opprimendam naturæ unitatem obstrepit Arianus. Pacianus de Trinitate l. 2. Prænu.

Although Trinity in its native signification signifie the number of any three things, yet by Ecclesiastical custome it is limited to signifie the three * Persons in the Trinity. This is not meant as if the essence did consist of three Persons, as so many parts; and therefore there is a great difference between Trinity and Triplicity. Trinity is when the same Essence hath divers wayes of subsisting; and Triplicity is when one thing is compounded of three as parts, they are three not in respect of Essence or Divine Attributes, three Eternals, but three in respect of per-Exod. 33. 20. 1 Cor. 13. 9.

* Dicitur unus Elohim, unius rei duo nomina Deus, Elohim, unius Elohim Essentiæ Tres Deus. Divinus de Symbolis per Epistolam. Dist. 44. Vide Dionys. Terrapomanum, cap. 6. Sic cuncidit gravis quærela & expostulatio viri Dolli adversus libri cujusdam titulum, De tribus Elohim. Non enim voluit author libri illius voce Elohim proprie significare personas, ac proinde tot esse Elohim quot fides Christiana agnoscit esse personas in Divinis, cum Scriptura aperte contra stet, quæ asserit Deum unum esse. Non sic arrogans, & ignotus doctor ille Theologus, ut diceret & doceret Tres esse, nempe hominis, Elohim. Sed quoniam vocis illius terminatione pluralis Scriptura uti voluit S. Trinitatis mysterium, hoc respicere, & ea voluisse in libri (quem de S. S. Trinitate scribebat) titulo alludere inscribens non infrequenter, sed solemniter. Capel. Davidis Lyra. Vide illius Diat. de nomine Elohim, cap. 1. & 12. & Rivet. Grot. Discus. Dialys. Sect. 16. In Deo una substantia, sed tres personæ: in Christo duæ substantiæ, sed una persona: in Trinitate alius [illegible] alius, sed neque aliud, neque aliud: in Christo aliud aliud, non alius atque alius. Vincent. contra Hæres. c. 19. Unum Deum tres esse Elohim (quod dicitur) non aliter, quam unus Deus prædicatur, dicere refugimus: ne indisciplinatis verbis [illegible] veritatis fidelissimum Scholiastem [illegible] Scopulum objectamus. Orob. Pis. Tsalm. ex Gen. 4. Synod. Nic. Vide plura ibid.

sopal

sonal properties, as the Father is of none, the Son of the Father, and the holy Ghost of both; three Persons but one God, as to be, to be true, to be good, are all one, because Transcendents.

The acts of the persons in the God-head (say some) are of three sorts:

1. Essential, in which all the Persons have equal hand, Opera Trinitatis ad extra sunt indivisa, the outward works which concern the creature, belong to one Person as well as the other, as to create, govern.

2. Some ad intra, opera propria. The personal properties or internal works are distinguished, as the Father begets, the Son is begotten of the Father, and the holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son.

3. Appropriata, as the Schools speak, acts of office, more peculiarly attributed to one person than another, Ephes. 4. 7. So the Father is said to give the Sonne, the Sonne to redeem the world, to be made flesh, the holy Ghost is the bond of union. See Dr Hampton on Gen. 1. 6. and 1 Pet. 1. 2. Gods plot in the work of Redemption, was not only (say some) to exalt the Attributes of the Nature, but to glorifie the persons distinctly according to their appropriated acts.

There is in the Trinity alius & alius, another and another, but not aliud & aliud, another thing and another thing, as there is in Christ; the Father is another Person from the Sonne, but yet there is the same Nature and Essence of them all. They differ not in their Natures as three men or three Angels differ, for they differ so as one may be without the other, but now the Father is not without the Sonne, nor the Sonne without the Father, so that there is the same numerical Essence.

The Father in some sense is said to be the only God, John 17. 3. that is, besides the Divine Nature which is common to the three Persons, there is not another God to be found, the word (Onely) is opposed to all feigned gods, to every thing which is not of this Divine Nature; So when it is said, None knoweth the Father but the Son, and the Son but the Father, that excludes not the holy Ghost which searcheth the hidden things of God, but all which are not of that Essence.

Though there be no inequality in the Persons, yet there is an order, not of dignity but of beginning*. The Father in the Sonne by the holy Ghost made the world, not as if there were so many partial causes, much lesse as if God the Father were the Principall and these Instrumentall, but only meer order. A Person is Diversus modus habendi eandem Essentiam. Subsistentia in Schools signifies a being with an individual property, whereby one is not another; Person (say some) is a Law term, it is any thing having reason with an individual property.

* Mat. 28. 19. John 5. 26, 27. The Father is the fountain and original of all the Deity, and the cause of the Sonne, which the very word Father signifieth; therefore he is said to be unbegotten; and hence the name God is often peculiarly, and by an excellency given to the Father in Scripture. He is usually called Fons Divinitatis & Operationis. Majorem non esse Patrem Filio, naturâ, vel essentiâ, vel perfectionem re ulla; sed aequalem penitus, immò eandem in iis omnibus, qua attributa vulgo & perfectiones in Scholis appellantur, Catholica est dogma fidei; à quo nullus dissenit, nisi Arianus & hareticus. At verò si personalem proprietatem & relationem consideres; complures antiquorum Patrum, quâ Pater, non quâ Deus est, majorem concesserunt esse Filio. Petav. Tom. 4. Theol. Dog. de Incarnat. l. 6. c. 13. Vide plura ibid.

A Person is such a subsistence in the Divine Nature, as is distinguished from every other thing by some special or personal property, or else it is the God-head realio nomine, quam personarum expressit hactenus in hoc articulo, consentiens Catholica Ecclesia. Dr Prid. Lect. 17. de S. Trinitate. Qui personam vocant τρόπον ὑπάρξεως, hoc est, modum subsistendi, non existendi; illi non intelligunt modum nudum, sed subsistentialem ac entitativum, ut Scholastici loquuntur. Bisterfeldius contra Crellium, l. 1. Sect. 2. cap. 2. Passim Theologi, desumptâ denominatione à rebus creatis, tres subsistendi modos, personas divinas vocant, non quod sint propriè modi, sed quod cum subsistentiis creatis, quos ut modos concipiunt, habeant aliquam similitudinem. Voet. Theologia naturalis Reformata, c. 3. Sect. 4. p. 72. De ipsa voce Persona, ut pote quæ in Scripturis Sacris nullam ad hoc mysterium designandum expressè accommodata legitur, neque non contendemus; dummodo res, quam nomine expressam cupimus, adsimulatur. Brochmand Syst. Theol. Artic. 4. de Deo Patre & Nati. 2. Vide Petavium de Trinitate lib. 4. cap. 8, 10, 11.

Modum istum subsistendi diversum haud

ſtrained with his perſonal property. Or it is a different manner of ſubſiſting in the God-head, as the nature of man doth diverſly ſubſiſt in Peter, James, John, but theſe are not all one. It differs from the Eſſence as the manner of the thing from the thing it ſelf, and not as one thing from another; one Perſon is diſtinguiſht from another by its perſonal property, and by its manner of working.

Petavius De Trinitate l. 4. c. 1. ſhews that the Eſſence and Perſon are diſtinguiſhed. The Greeks call it οὐσίαν and ὑπόστασιν. The Latines call it Perſona and with a Greek name hypoſtaſis, the Ancients rarely call it ſuppoſitum.

Judæi nomen perſonæ in Deo plurimum deteſtantur audire, trium namque Perſonarum audito nomine trium mox concutiuntur errore Deorum, pariter & horrore. Raym. Pug. adverſ. Jud. par. 3. Diſtinct. 1. cap. 1. Pſalm 2. 17. proves that the Father begets, and the Son is begotten of the Father. Galat. 4. 6. See John 15. 26. & 14. 26. Quomodo autem Deus Pater genuerit Filium, nolo diſcutias, ne curioſus te ingeras in profunda arcani, ne forte dum inacceſſa lucis fulgorem pertinaciùs perſcrutaris, ejus quem ipſum, qui mortalibus divino munere conceſſus eſt, perdas aſpectum. Ruffinus de Symbolo. Vide plura ibid. Hæc eſt differentia inter eſſentiam divinam & perſonam divinam; Eſſentia divina eſt communis pluribus divinatis Perſonis. Perſona autem una alteri non eſt communicabilis. Unde Pater non eſt Filius, nec Filius Pater. 2. Eſſentia divina eſt una, Perſonæ plures. Wendelinus.

We have no reaſon to be offended with the uſe of the word Perſon, if we adde a fit Epithete, and ſay, The Father is a Divine or Uncreated Perſon, and ſay the ſame of the Sonne and holy Ghoſt. The word Perſon ſignifies an underſtanding Subſiſtent, 2 Gen. 1. 11. Perſona, quaſi per ſe una. This word doth expreſſe more excellency than the word ſubſiſtence, for it is proper to ſay, that a beaſt doth ſubſiſt, but it is abſurd to ſay, a beaſt is a perſon, becauſe a Perſon is an underſtanding ſubſiſtent. Dr Cheynel Divine Trin-unity.

The perſonal property of the Father is to beget, that is, not to multiply his ſubſtance by production, but to communicate his ſubſtance to the Sonne. The Sonne is ſaid to be begotten, that is, to have the whole ſubſtance from the Father by communication. The holy Ghoſt is ſaid to proceed, or to be breathed forth, to receive his ſubſtance by proceeding from the Father and the Sonne joyntly, in regard of which he is called The Spirit of the Father, and the Spirit of the Sonne both, Gal. 4. 6. The Father only begetteth, the Sonne only is begotten, and the holy Ghoſt onely proceedeth, both proceſſion and generation are ineffable.

If is commonly ſaid, that the perſon begets and is begotten, but the nature neither begets nor is begotten, but communicated. Brochmand ſaith, he willingly abſtaines from theſe ſubtilties.

When Gregory Nazianzen was preſſed by one to aſſign a difference between theſe words Begotten and Proceeding. Dic tu mihi (ſaith he) quid ſit generatio, & ego dicam quid ſit proceſſio, ut ambo inſaniamus. Diſtinguere inter Proceſſionem & Generationem, neſcio, non valeo, non ſufficio. Aug.

In the manner of working they differ, For the Father worketh of himſelf, by the Sonne, and through the holy Ghoſt; the Sonne worketh from the Father by the holy Ghoſt; the holy Ghoſt worketh from the Father and the Sonne by himſelf. There is ſo one God, as that there are three Perſons or divers manners of being in that one God-head, the Father, Son, and the holy Ghoſt.

1. Whatſoever abſolutely agrees to the Divine Nature, that doth agree likewiſe to every Perſon in the Trinity.

2. Every Perſon hath not a part, but the whole Deity in it ſelf.

* Perſona eſt individuum ſubſiſtens, vivum, intelligens, incommunicable, non ſuſtentatum ab alio, nec partem alterius.

A Perſon is one entire, * diſtinct ſubſiſtence, having life, underſtanding, will and power, by which he is in continual operation.

Theſe things are required to a Perſon:

1. That it be a ſubſtance; for accidents are not perſons, they inhere in another thing, a perſon muſt ſubſiſt.

2. A lively and intelligent ſubſtance endued with reaſon and will; an houſe is not a Perſon, nor a ſtone or beaſt.

3. Determinate and ſingular, for mankinde is not a Perſon; but John and Peter.

4. Incommu-

4. Incommunicable, it cannot be given to another; hence the nature of man is not a person, because it is communicable to every particular man; but every particular man is a person, because that nature which he hath in particular, cannot be communicated to another.

5. Not sustained by another, therefore the humane nature of Christ is not a person, because it is sustained by his Deity.

6. It must not be the part of another, therefore the reasonable soul which is a part of man, is not a person.

Persona igitur non est essentia, quæ pluribus est communicabilis.

Persona vox nimirum significat effectum aut relationem (ut Personæ a principio) vel eorum & visibilem speciem, etiam, vel formam alterum repræsentantem ut Personæ in drammate, sed modum quo Essentia Divina subsistit.

That there are three Persons in the Deity, viz. Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, is manifest by expresse Testimonies of Scripture. Gen. 1. 26. Let us make man in our image after our likeness. Dicit qui loquitur ad Deum loquitur; Ad Patrem & Filii imaginem homo conditur, nomen non discrepat, natura non differt. Hilary. l. 5. de Trin. Vide plura ibid.

There are three distinct rational Authors of action, three Hees, John 8. 16, 18.

Locus celebris, & multorum usu contritus his verbis exprimitur plurium inter se Consultatio, ac deliberatio, nec aliorum, quam quæ opus ipsum, de quo deliberatum erat, postea fabricati sunt, hoc est divinarum personarum. Petavius de Trinit. tr. 1. l. 2. c. 7. Habet (saith he there) Genesees ille locus magnam omnino vim ad Judæos, Mahammedanos, Sabellianos, Castoreanos, solitarios cultores numinis, eumque his Arianos refutandos.

Rident quidem Judæi, rident Sociniani, nos tamen existimamus hunc locum rectissimè à nobis ad probandam S. S. Trinitatem afferri, etsi non directè, indirectè tamen & reductivè. Hottinger de Creat. Quæst. 86.

Gen. 19. 24. Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of Heaven. The Lord rained from the Lord, the Sonne from the Father. Mercer on the place saith, Sed efficaciora in Judæos, aut alios qui Trinitatem negant, argumenta sunt proferenda. Numquid (saith Hilary de Trin.) non verus Dominus a vero Domino? aut quid aliud quam Dominus à Domino? vel quid præter significationem Personæ in Domino ac Domino coaptabis & memento quod quem solum verum Deum nosti, hunc eundem solum justum judicem fis professus. Adime filio quod judex est, ut auferas quod Deus verus est. Vide plura ibid. Constat bene multos antiquorum Patrum de Filii divinitate, & à Patre distincta ejus hypostasi, argumentum ex illo Geneseos sumpsisse. Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 7.

Nous avons en l'ancien Testament les preuves de la Trinité plus obscures, mais excellentes neantmoins. Instruction Celestienne Par Jacques Cappel Livre 1. Capitre 1.

Psal. 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool; that is, the Father to the Sonne. Rabbi Saadia Gaon on Daniel interprets this of the Messias. Vide Grotium in Matth. 22. 42. It is of Christ that he speaks, so Peter, Paul and Christ himself shew Matth. 22. 43. Luke 20. 42. and the Pharisees acknowledg it, since he cals him His Lord, although he ought to descend of his race, and should be called the son of David. Vide Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 7.

Psalm 33. 6. There three are named, the Word, the Lord, the Spirit, Isaiah 6. 3. Holy, Holy, Holy. These two places Petavius thinks not so fit to convince the Jews and other obstinate Hereticks.

But this truth is most clearly taught in the New Testament, Si quis omnia Novi Testamenti loca, quæ ad personarum diversitatem, aut earumdem, ac præsertim Filij, æqualitatem affirmandam pertinent, percensere velit; pene integrum ipsum transcribat necesse est, adeo nulla fere pagina est, ex quâ non illius rei significatio, vel argumentum aliquod existat. Petavius de Trinitate lib. 2. cap. 8.

John 1. 1, 2, 3. v. 14. Quibus verbis omnem, quæ adversus Trinitatem utcunque pugnat, proligavit hæresim, Sabellianorum, Arianorum, Eunomianorum, ut cæterorum denique. Petavius de Trinitate, l. 2. c. 8.

John 10. 30. Unum sumus, non unum volumus Victor Episcopus. See vers. 38. and 28. and 14. 9. and 16. 15. and 17. 10.

Quis noſcit Trinitatem, ni ad Jeſum? Quando Antitrinitarii adverſus ſanctiſſimum Ubiq; myſterium inſurgunt, id falſum eſſe, quia v. g. Tria non ſunt unum; ibi tum pronunciat ratio per ſe ipſa de hac re actione, & dicit eam falſam eſſe. Nam nemo lumen rationis id axioma intelligendum eſſe de iis, ad quæ per ſe ratio extingere poteſt. Vedel. Rational. theol. l. 3. c. 6. Petavius in his Preface to his 2d Tome of Dogmata Theologica, de Trinitate, c. 3, 4, 5, 6. proves the Trinity out of the ancient Fathers. See his firſt Book alſo, de Trinitate, cap. 5.

Matth. 3. 16. Luke 3. 22. The firſt Perſon in the Trinity utters his voice from Heaven, This is my beloved Son. The Sonne is baptized in Jordan, the holy Ghoſt deſcends in the ſhape of a Dove upon Chriſt. Pater audiatur in voce, Filius manifeſtatur in homine, Spiritus Sanctus dignoſcitur in Columba. Aug. Tract. 6. in Joh.

Adde to this the Hiſtory of Chriſts Transfiguration, deſcribed Mat. 17. 5. Mark 9. 7. Luke 9. 35. In which likewiſe the voice of the Father was heard from Heaven, This is my beloved Son, the Son is transfigured, the holy Ghoſt manifeſts himſelf in a bright cloud.

* Vide Broch. Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 3. de Deo, & S. S. Trinitate. c. 2. Quæſt. 6. See Joh. 15. 26.

Matth. 28. 19. * The Apoſtles are commanded to baptize In the name of the Father, Son and holy Ghoſt. Cameron thinks that is the moſt evident place to prove the Trinity. But that is as appoſite a place as any for this purpoſe, 1 John 5. 7. For there are three that bear record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghoſt. Quæ eſt ſacroſancta Trinitatis è verbo divino ſolida, & certa demonſtratio; à quâ quo ſe gloſſematis ſtrabi argumentorum humanorum abduci patiuntur, temeritatem ſuam tandem deſtebunt deperabundi. Brochm. Syſt. Theol. de Deo & S. S. Trinitate c. 2. Quæſt. 5. The Arians wiped this place out of many books. 2 Cor. 13. 14. The grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communion of the holy Ghoſt be with you all.

The Hereticks that are Antitrinitarians. See Joh. 8. 58. Pſalm 2. 12. * Vide Placei Diſput. de argumento, quinam efficitur, Chriſtum primo ſuæ Incarnationis inſtante beatæ Virginis ſecundum carnem concipere retuliſſe. Paulus Samoſatenus, more fitly Semiſabbatus, held Chriſt was but a meer man. Matth. 6. 6.

The Arians, Semiſabbatians, Sabellians, Photinians, and others deny the Trinity of Perſons in one Eſſence of God. Michael Servetus a Spaniard was burnt at Geneva in Calvins time, he denied that Chriſt was Gods Son till Mary bore him. Servetus Trinitatem idolum, item Cerberum Tricipitem vocabat. He entitled his Book De Erroribus Trinitatis. He reproached the very name of Trinity, and cald all Trinitarians Atheiſts.

The Miniſters of Tranſylvania (in a moſt peſtilent Book of theirs) often contumelliouſly call him Deum Tri-perſonatum, whom we holily worſhip. Hornbeck Antiſocin. l. 2. c. 5. ſect. 1. p. 418.

Thoſe of Poloniæ (in their Catechiſm) ſay, That there is but one Divine Perſon, and urge Joh. 17. 3. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Eph. 4. 1. Zanchy long ſince hath vindicated the truth and refuted them.

Socinus cals him, Deum triperſonatum, ridiculum humanæ curioſitatis inventum. Infanſtus Socinus omnium hæreticorum audaciſſimus, ſaith Rivet. Homo impurus, & Judæi, ac Mahommedani ſimilior, quam Chriſtiano. Peravius de Trinitate l. 3. c. 1. See Dr Cheynels riſe of Socinianiſm, cap. 3. & cap. 1. p. 6. The Socinians ſay, That the Doctrine of the Trinity, plainly oppoſeth right reaſon. Biddl inquires firſt how many are the Gods of the Chriſtians. Odioſe traducit dogma de Trinitate perſonarum, Arnoldus. Rationem in divina myſteria (ſaith Brochmand) non audimus, ſed Scripturam ſallere nefciam, ſequimur.

Some glory in this as a great argument againſt the three Perſons in the Trinity. If there be perſons in the Trinity, they are either ſomething or nothing. Nothing they cannot be, Non entia nulla ſunt affectiones, if ſomething they are either finite or infinite, finite they cannot be, nor infinite, then there ſhould be three Infinites.

It is,

1. Plain in Scripture, there is but one God eſſentially conſidered, 1 Cor. 8. 4.

2. The Scripture ſpeaks of Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt or Spirit, theſe are ſaid to be three, 1 Joh. 5. 7.

3. The

3. The God-head is attributed to all, and the eſſential Properties belong to all.

4. Something is attributed to one in the Scripture that cannot be ſaid of all. The Son was made fleſh, and the Son is begotten, this cannot be ſaid of the other; the Sonne and the Spirit are ſent, but this cannot be ſaid of the Father. It is not ſtrange among the creatures, that a Father ſhould be diſtinguiſhed from himſelf as a man, the Perſons are ſomething and infinite, each of them infinite, as each of them is God, yet not three Infinites nor Gods, ſo Athanaſius in his Creed. A Perſon is Eſſentia divina cum proprietate ſua hypoſtatica, the Divine Nature diſtinguiſhed by an incommunicable property, though we cannot expreſſe the manner of this great myſtery, yet we ſhould believe it. The ground of Arminianiſme and Socinianiſme is, becauſe they would examine all the great truths of God by their Reaſon. That ſaying of Bernard here hath place, Scrutari hoc temeritas eſt, credere pietas eſt, noſſe vero vita æterna eſt.

See Dr Arrowſmiths Chain of Principles, Aphor. 5 Exercit. 3. and Durham on the firſt Chapter of the Revelation, verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4.

That the Father is God, is confeſſed by all, and it is manifeſt from Scripture, we are directed to pray to him. The Apoſtle ſaith, Grace to you, and peace from God our Father, Philem. v. 3. See Rom. 1. 7. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Eph. 1. 3.

See Act. 4. 24, 25, 26, 27. & John 8. 54. Multa de Patris Deitate teſtimonia proferre ſupervacaneum eſt, quando in Confeſſo apud omnes eſt, hunc verum eſſe Deum. Zanch. Tom. 1. de Tribus Elohim l. 1. c. 6.

That Chriſt is God, is proved

1. By clear Texts of Scripture affirming this truth in ſo many words. The Prophet foreteſling of him ſaith, this is his name by which ye ſhall call him, Jehovah or The Lord our Righteouſneſſe, Jer. 23. 16. and The mighty God, Iſa. 9. 6. Paul ſaith, Rom. 9. 5. Who is God over all, bleſſed for ever; and S^t John ſaith, 1 Joh. 5. 20. This is very God; and S^t Paul ſaith, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Great is the myſtery of Godlineſſe, God manifeſted in the fleſh; and accordingly Thomas made his confeſſion, Joh. 20. 28. My Lord, and my God, which title he accepteth and praiſeth Thomas for believing, and that he could not have done without extream impiety, had he not been God. Vide Bellarm. de Chriſto l. 1. c. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. He that would at once conſider all the Texts of the Old Teſtament, aſcribing the name Jehova to Chriſt, let him read Zanchius, De tribus Elohim, who hath made a large Collection of them. He is the great God with Paul, Titus 2. 13. the true God with John, Joh. 17. 3. the only Lord with Jude verſ. 9.

Thoſe that deny the God-head of Chriſt muſt deny. 1. The ſatisfaction of Chriſt 2. The purchaſe of Chriſt, he that is but a man cannot merit. 3. That Chriſt ſhall judge the world. No creature can redeem us from hell, nor ſatisfie infinite juſtice. God purchaſed his Church with his bloud, Acts 20. 28. Etenim dum Filium oppugnant, bellum etiam faciunt Patri: quia negando, Chriſtum eſſe æterni Dei æternum Filium; negant ſimul etiam Deum Patrem, verum & æternum eſſe Patrem: eique illium ſua ipſius vera & æterna ſpoliant proprietate: ideoque & Deitate. Zanch. de tribus Elohim, l. 2. c. 1.

2. By evident Reaſons drawn from the Scripture.

He hath the Name, Titles, Works, eſſential Attributes and worſhip of God aſcribed unto him in Scripture.

1. Divine Names and Titles are given to Chriſt; He is the only bleſſed Potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. The King of Kings, Revel. 1. 5. and Lord of Lords, Apoc. 17. 14. and 19. 16. He is called The Image of the inviſible God, Col. 1. 15. The brightneſſe of his glory, Heb. 1. 3. The word and wiſdome of the Father, Prov. 8. 12. and 9. 1. He is called the Word, becauſe he is ſo often ſpoken of and promiſed in the Scripture, and is in a manner the whole ſubject of the Scripture; he is called ὁ Θεὸς cum articulo, 1 John 1. 1. Nam & Deum apertè prædicat illum, quem à Patre toto illo capite diſcernit, quemque apud Deum fuiſſe dicit. Et ipſa vox, ετυ, haud definiti temporis notione ex æterno productum fuiſſe demonſtrat: ut inter alios Cyrillus declarat. Petav. de Trinitate l. 2. c. 9. Acts 20. 28. he cals him God who redeemed the Church with his blood, 1 Tim. 3. 16. The true God, Titus 2. 3. Eſt egregius hic locus contra perfidos Arianos, qui Chriſtum unumque Deum confitentes, magnum eundem eſſe negabant. Petavius De Trinitate l. 2. c. 9. The true God, 1 John 5. 20. God over all; or Bleſſed above all, Rom. 9. 5. The moſt high, Luke 1. 76. and ὁ κυριος by which name the Septuagint have expreſſed Jehovah the proper name of God alone, John 20. 28. My Lord, Jude 4. The only Lord, Acts 10. 36. The Lord of all, 1 Cor. 15. 48. The Lord from Heaven, John 1. 1, 2.

Dignum eſt hæreticos non jam Apoſtolicis viris, ſed damnum clamore convinci. Clamat enim & ſæpè clamant, ven, 1 Cor. 2. 8. The Lord of glory, 1 Cor. 2. 8. The Lord of Heaven and Earth, Matth. 28. 18. Theſe Titles are too high and excellent to be given unto any meer man whatſoever, God therefore who will not have his glory given to another, would never have given theſe Titles to another, if he were not God.

Luc. 8. Quid mihi & tibi eſt Jeſu Fili Dei altiſſimi? Ineluctabili veritatis efficit confeſſionem, & naturæ poteſtatem teſtatur dolor, obediendi nititur vinculum, cum poſſeſſa diu corpora deſerunt, & bonitatem reddunt, dum naturam conſtentur. Dei ſe inter hæc filium Chriſtus & opere teſtatur & nomine. Hilarius de Trin. lib. 6. John 20. 28. Hæc vocabula, dicit ei, Judicant Thomam ad Chriſtum direxiſſe ſermonem, & cum vocaſſe Dominum ac Deum ſuum: ut id vocandi caſu aſſumpta iſta ſint quaſi dixiſſet, Domine mi. Aliqui Chriſtus diſcipulum ita loquentem minime caſtigat; ut Athan. orat. 3. contra Arianos Diſputat; & Hilarius lib. 7. Cyrillus lib. 7. in Joan. 9. 11. Petavius de Trinitate, l. 2. c. 9. 11. Cyrillus in Commentario ad Joannem obſervat Thomam exclamaſſe ὁ Κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου cum articulo; ut non quilibet è dominorum multitudine, ſed inſignis, & excellens, hoc eſt, Deus, intelligatur. Præclarum eſt & Evangeliſtarum omnium, ac Joannis Baptiſtæ pariter atque Iſaiæ Teſtimonium, in quo Chriſtus Dominus ac Deus appellatur. Nam Joannes Baptiſta Joan. 1. 23. ſcilicet ipſum Judæi quiſnam eſſet, cum ſe eſſe reſponſit, quem Iſaias prædixerat venturum ideò, ut parare viam Domini ac Dei mortalibus præciperet. Vox clamantis in deſerto; Parate viam Domini; rectas facite inſolitudine ſemitas Dei noſtri, ait Iſaias 40. 3. Quo ſuaviſſimo uno ore prædicant Evangeliſtæ quatuor Joannem Baptiſtam ſignificari. Matth. 3. 3. Mar. 1. 4. Luc. 4. 3. Joann. 1. 23. Quibus ſeptimus teſtis Zachariæ Pater accedit, quo Filium alloquens, Præibis, inquit, ante faciem Domini parare vias ejus. Enim verò nomen ipſum Dei ſic Filio Scriptura Sacra vindicant, ut eadem firmitate, & adjunctorum prærogativa, dignitateque de ipſo, ac de Patre dicatur. In qua ſtulta eſt hæreticorum ἀναισθησία, qui Filium Dei eſſe Deum fatentes, verum tamen, ac bonum, omnipotentem, immortalem; & id genus alia vocari nolebant. Idem ibid. Gen. 18. 13, 14. Jehovah is Chriſt whom Abraham calls the Judge of Heaven and Earth. 1 Cor. 8. 6. By the Apoſtle Chriſt is expreſly called θεὸς. He takes the God-head as his own right, Phil. 2. 7. Biſhop King urged that place, John 17. 5. ſtrongly againſt Legate an Arian, burnt in King James his Raigne, for denying Chriſt to be God.

Divine works.

2. The works of God, even the principal and moſt eminent of all, which are proper to the Lord only, are aſcribed to Chriſt.

No man can of himſelf, and by his own power do divine works, unleſs he be truly God: Chriſt doth works by his own power, and the ſame with his Father. Joh. 10. 37, 38.

1. The work of Creation, even of creating all things, John 1. 3. & Col. 1. 16. He for whom, and by whom all things were created, is very God. For Chriſt and by him all things were created, therefore he is very God. Heb. 1. 10, 11, 12. The foundation of the earth, and the creation of the Heavens, and the change which is to happen to both at the laſt day, are attributed to the Sonne of God.

Divines hold that the power of creating is not communicable to the creature, Argumenta hinc ſtruuntur pro aſſerenda Deitate adeò firma, ut ne ipſi quidem, Muhammedani eorum momentum ſpernere, aut quicquam contra hiſcere auſint. Hotting. Hiſt. creat. examen Queſt. 9. Sect. 3. Vide plura ibid.

He governs his Church. Epheſ. 4. 11. 1 Pet. 3. 19. Matth. 8. 2. compared with 2 King. 7. 9. Chriſt cured thoſe that were born blinde. John 10. 28.

2. The work of Preſervation and Governement is attributed to him alſo, he is before all things, and by him all things conſiſt, Heb. 1. 2. He who upholds all things by his powerful word, is God. So doth Chriſt, therefore he is God.

3. The working of Divine miracles, raiſing up the dead by his own power is given to him, Joh. 6. 54. & Joh. 5. 21. He that can quicken and raiſe the dead is God. So doth Chriſt, therefore he is God.

4. Redeeming of mankinde, Luke 1. 68. Matthew 20. 28. Epheſians 1. 7. Rev. 1. 5.

5. Sending of the holy Ghoſt, John 21. 22. & 14. 16. and of Angels, is aſcribed to him, Matth. 13. 41. Revel. 1. 1. He forgives ſinnes, Mark 9. 2, 5. He gives eternal life.

The principal and incommunicable Attributes of God are given to him.

See Rev. 2. 23.

1. Omniſcience, Joh. 2. 24, 25. He knew all men, and he knew what was in them, Joh. 21. 17. Lord, thou knoweſt all things.

2. Omnipotency, Rev. 1. 8. & 4. 8. & 11. 17. Phil. 3. 21.

3. Eternity,

3. Eternity, Joh. 17. 5. Rev. 1. 18. Joh. 1. 1. Isa. 9. 6. * He is called The everlasting Father.

4. Omnipresence, Matth. 18. 20.

* Mirum est adversarios hunc locum ubi agitur de Patre æterno, ad filium referre, quem constat secundum eos ipsos Patrem non esse. So the Polonian Catechisme: But the Text it self shews this place speaks of Christ, who is a Father not in respect of his Person, but in relation to his Church. He is the Author of their spiritual life and being. 2. In that he is the Author of everlasting life to his. John 6. 39, 40, 47, 51. He is stiled the Everlasting Father, in Hebrew, The Father of Eternity. The Septuagint hath it Πατὴρ τοῦ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, Pater futuri sæculi. Vide Raymundi Pugionem Fidei adversus Judæos, part. 3. Dist. 2. cap. 9.

5. Unchangeablenesse, Heb. 1. 11, 12, 13. and 13. 8. He that is Omniscient, Omnipotent, Eternal, Omnipresent, Unchangeable, equal to the Father in Majesty and Glory, Phil. 2. 16. is God. So is Christ, therefore he is God. John 17. 5.

Lastly, Worship due to God is ascribed to him, Heb. 1. 6. Let all the Angels of God worship him, Revel. 5. 13. The Lamb, that is, Christ, hath the same worship rendred to him that the Father hath. We are commanded to call upon his name, to believe and trust in him, John 14. 1. and 3. 16. and 6. 40. to hope in him, Isa. 11. 10. we are baptized in his name, Matth. 28. 19. Acts 8. 16. and swear by him, Rom. 9. 1. Psalm 45. 11. John 5. 22.

The Spirits dwelling in Christ, not only in a farre higher measure, but in a more glorious and eminent manner than in the Saints, proves him also to be God, Rom. 1. 3. q. d. There needed not a greater argument to prove, that Christ was the naturall Sonne of God, than the Spirit of holinesse that dwelt in him. That first Chapter of the Hebrews was written to prove that Christ was God, because he is above the glorious Angels.

There are five arguments to prove that,

1. Because he is the naturall and eternall Sonne of God, v. 4, 5.
2. Because they are to adore Christ, v. 6. and he hath all the Royalties of a King, v. 8, 9.
3. From his creating power, v. 10.
4. From Gods donation of glory to him.
5. From his session at his Fathers right hand.

The mystery of the Sons generation is so profound, that it is difficult and dangerous to wade further in it, than we have clear ground from Scripture: that the Sonne was of the Father begotten from eternity, and is one with him, and of equall power and dignity, seems clear from Prov. 8. 23, 26. John 1. 3. and 10. 30. and 17. 5. Phil. 2. 6. but Modus quo genitus fuerit, seems to some beyond humane reach.

Some of our Divines say, Christ is begotten of the Father by a communication of the Divine Essence; if this be granted (say others) it will be hard to defend the God-head of Christ. He that is God must have his being from himself, à se Deus, à Patre Filius. Mr Wotton on John 1. goes this way, and some others. But some say then he should be his adopted Son. Vide Bellar. de Christo l. 2. c. 15. The Athanasian Creed hath it, God of God, and Christ saith of the holy Ghost, that he shall receive of him. Illud arctè nobis tenendum, à persona Patris per generationem Filio esse communicatam essentiam ingenitam. R. Usser. Ignat. & Clem. Interpolator hæresi suspectus. c. 15. That Christ hath his God-head from the Father, makes not against his God-head but for it, if he hath the same God-head which the Father hath though from the Father, then he is the same God with the Father.

Filius dicitur Deus quia habet essentiam divinam quæ est à seipsa, non verò quia eam habet à seipso; habet enim à Patre Joh. 5. Zanch. Vide Voet. Theses. Et Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 11, 12.

Object. Mat. 19. 17. Marke 10. 18. Christ denieth that he was good, because he was not God.

Answ. Christ applieth himself to * him to whom he spake, now he called Christ

* Juvenis iste quamvis in Jesu majus bonitatis argumentum non nisi agnosceret, perabat tamen eo monstrante se perventurum ad possessionem ejus boni quo vitæ æterna paratur, quasi ad eam rem monstratore tantum egeret, cætera per se confecturus. At Jesus occurrens huic errori, simulque modestiæ nobis præbens exemplum, ait non esse multos boni fontes, sed unicum, Deum scilicet, hoc ipso indicans, non satis esse bonum nobis monstrari, nisi Deus mentem illustrans vires nobis suggerat, Grotius in loc.

good

good in no other ſenſe than he would have done any other Propher, and in this ſenſe Chriſt rebuked him for calling him good. He was good of himſelf, the fountain of goodneſſe.

Object. John 17. 3. God the Father is called the only true God. See 1 Tim. 6. 16.

See Rom. 16. 27. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Epheſ. 4. 6.

Anſw. Some referre both theſe to God himſelf and Chriſt, but others give a general rule, that the Word alone is not oppoſed to the other Perſons, but to the creatures, and feigned gods, and ſo John 8. 9. the woman is not excluded, but her accuſers; the added expreſſions ſhew him to be God, becauſe it is life eternal to know him as well as the Father.

Debitus Patri à Filio honor redditur, cum dicit: te ſolum Deum: non tamen ſe Filium à Dei veritate ſecernit cum adjungit: Et quem miſiſti Jeſum Chriſtum. Non habet intervallum confeſſio credentium, quia in utroque ſpes vitæ eſt. Hilarius l. 3. de Trinitate. The words are to be read (as we render them) That they may know thee (to be) the only true God, not, That they may know thee only (to be) the true God, according to the firſt reading, the predicate is common to the Father and the Son. Vide Bezam.

Object. Epheſ. 4. 6.

Anſw. The word Father is not there uſed relatively or perſonally, for the firſt Perſon in the Trinity, but eſſentially, as Mal. 2. Is not there one Father of us all? and ſo he is God, called Father in regard of his works ad extra.

Object. John 14. 28. My Father is greater than I. Poſt illum è Proverbiis locum (viz. 8, 22.) nullus Arianorum uſu contritior ac famaſior eſt, than this of the Apoſtle John, ſaith Petavius, De Trinitate, l. 2. c. 2. in quo Patre minorem ſe eſſe Chriſtus, planè ac citra ambages ullas profitetur. Ex quo (ſaith Petavius there) conflatam ſibi rem putabant, ut quoniam idem ſeipſo majus, minuſve dici non poteſt, non eandem utriuſque credi ſubſtantiam, vel eſſentiam oporteat.

* Hoc teſtimonio utuntur omnes Patres contra Arianos, ut probent unam eſſe eſſentiam Patris & Filij. Bellarm. de Chriſt. l. 1. c. 6.

Anſw. As he was man only or Mediator, the Father was greater than he, but as he was God, that is true, John 10. 38. * I and my Father are one; not in union of will (as John 17. 21.) but in unity of nature. See Phil. 2. 6.

Object. Prov. 8. 22. Arius * objected this place, The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way. Memorabilis ante alios Proverbiorum ille locus, ſaith Petavius, l. 2. de Trinitate. c. 1.

* Arius ſtumbled at the Greek Text κύριος ἔκτισέ με. The Lord created me, and on that corrupt Tranſlation grounded his hereſie, That Chriſt was a creature. Chriſt is God by nature, Gal. 4. 8. which place was ſtrongly urged by Mr Cheynel againſt Eatbury, who held, that the Saints have the ſame fulneſſe of the God-head dwelling in them, as it doth in Chriſt, and that the Spirit is but the power of God in the man Chriſt. An Account given to the Parliament by the Miniſters ſent by them to Oxford.

Anſw. This place much puzled the Fathers for want of skill in the original Tongue, it is in the Hebrew Poſſeſſed me the beginning of his way. So Arias Montanus reads it. See verſe 25, and Gen. 4. 1. It is ſpoken of Chriſt as Mediator, that is, ſemper apud ſe habuit, neque unquam me caruit: etiam ante mundi creationem, viam enim Domini vocat opera Dei, quibus quaſi ad nos venit, & initium via, ipſam primam rerum Creationem. Zanch. De Tribus Elohim, lib. 2. cap. 5.

Object. Col. 1. 15. Chriſt is called the firſt-born of every Creature, therefore he is a Creature. Here the Arians ſay, Chriſt is manifeſtly called a Creature. Cum Chriſtus primogenitus omnis creaturæ ſit, eum unum è numero creaturarum eſſe oportere neceſſe eſt. Ea enim in Scripturis vis eſt primogeniti, ut primogenitum unum ex eorum genere, quorum primogenitus eſt, eſſe neceſſe eſt. Catechiſ. Eccl. Polon. c. 1. de perſona Chriſti.

Anſ. There are three anſwers given to this Text in the Annot. Edit. 2. Vide Bezam in loc. It is a figurative ſpeech, Chriſt had the preheminence over the creatures, was Lord over them as the firſt-born.

The Arians urge Matthew 24. 36. and Mark 13. 32. to prove that the Sonne is of an inferiour and unlike condition to his Father. Non enim poteſt aliis

aequalis esse qui novit, ei qui ignorat, saith Jerome.

Many answers are given by the ancient Fathers. Some say, that Christ as he was man, or according to the flesh, did not know the day of judgement. So Athanasius Orat. 4. Eusebius Antiochenus, Gregory Nazianzene, Cyrill, Hilary. Hinc evidens est (saith Petavius) nullum ex illo Evangelij loco de substantia inaequalitatis, vel dissimilitudine peti posse à perfidis Arianis Argumentum.

John 5. 19. Hoc Ariani potissimum uti testimonio solebant, non modò ut infirmum docerent esse Filium, qui à se nihil faceret, quasi secundum divinitatem quoque subditus, & paterno subjectus imperio (saith Ambrose) sed etiam ut non ejusdem cum Patre esse substantiae monstrarent, cum utriusque diversa sit actio.

Many of the Fathers (which Petavius quotes) would have these words to referre rather to the Divine, than Humane Nature of Christ. Petavius rather thinks, they may more fitly be applied to the Humane Nature of Christ. The Jews Calumniating the Works of Christ, especially because he had restored health to one on the Sabbath day, he so defends himself, that he saith, that those very works which they reprehended in him, were done by his Father, because (Christ as man) did nothing at all, but what was commanded him by his Father. See John 8. 29. and 6. 38.

The Arians of old were wont to come to two men, and ask them. Hast thou a child, say they? Yes. And art thou not older than the child thou hast born? why, yes, say they. And yet, say they, our Adversaries, They tell us, that God hath a Sonne, and that the Sonne is Co-eternall with the Father. Athanasius confutes them thus; I ask thee a Question. Canst thou build a House without Timber and Stones, and other Materials? No: Yet God made the world without any of these things. He hath his Sonne from Eternity, but not as a naturall Parent. For who can declare his generation. Dr Arrowsmith on John 1. 2.

An Arian executed at Norwich for blasphemy against Christ, in the dayes of Queen Elizabeth, being moved to repent that Christ might pardon him, replied to this effect: and is that God of yours so merciful indeed as to pardon so readily those that blaspheme him? then I renounce and defie him.

The Socinians deny Christ to be God, and oppose his merits and satisfaction unto God for our sins, they hold Christ is God salvo meliori judicio, or prout mihi videtur, till they can examine it better.

They are more vexed with Athanasius, than with any other, and call him for Athanasius, Sathanasius, he stood against three hundred Bishops in a Councel, and maintained the Divinity of Christ against the Arian faction. He hath written also most copiously against the Arians, and hath solidly refuted their arguments against the Divinity of Christ.

The Gospel of St John was chiefly penned for this end to prove the Deity of Christ, Christ there gives a resolute and constant testimony of himself, that he was the Sonne of God, and very God, never any creature took this title upon him to be called God, but the fearful judgements of God were upon him for it. Mr Perkins on the Creed, See him also on Jude. Vide Lov. Viv. de verit. Fid. Christ. l. 2. c. 12. and 14.

Many Hereticks denied the God-head of Christ, as Ebion, Cerinthus, Arius, the Jews also and Mahometans, some denying him to be God, others saying, that he was not absolutely God, but inferiour to him.

In the first Nicene Councel gathered together against Arius, the Prince of all Hereticks, who denied the Divinity of Christ, there were 318 Bishops. A man would think that there were but small difference (if it is but a little Iota) between ὁμοούσιον and ὁμοιούσιον, yet the right believers could never be brought (as Theodoret witnesseth) either to omit the one, or admit the other. Dr Prideaux Epheseu Backsliding. Justinus 1. Imperator Edicto praecipit, ut ne quis vel unicam syllabam in Doctrina Ecclesiae orthodoxa de Trinitate mutatit, addita hac ratione, quod in ipsis syllabis veritas fidei contineatur. Vedel. de Prud. vet. Eccles. l. 3. c. 3. Hujus singularis, ac suspecti mysterij, & Catholici dogmatis in eo summo consistimus usque fundidrem, ac solitarium Deum Judaici more credamus; neque plures tamen asseramus Deos; Conjunctionis gentilium, & qui ab iis proximi sunt, haereticorum, ac praesertim Arianorum error invexit. Petav. de Trinitate, l. 4. c. 13. Vide plura ibid, & l. 4. c. 5.

He is God, not by office, nor by favour, nor by similitude, nor in a figure, as sometimes Angels and Magistrates are called Gods; but by nature, he is equal and co-essential with his Father, there is one God-head common to all the three persons, the Father, the Sonne, and the Spirit; and therefore it is said, Phil. 2. 6. that He was in the forme of God, and thought it no robbery to be equall with God. Lo an equality to God the Father ascribed to him, he is not God in any secondary or inferiour manner, but is in the very form of God equal to him, the God-head of all the three Persons being one and the same. To beat down Arius his Heresie the first Councel of Nice was called, the Nicene Creed made.

Petavius De Incarnat. l. 7. c. 1, 2, 3, 4. proves that Christ is Gods true and natural Sonne.

The difference between the Councel of Nice and Arius was but in a Letter, whether Christ was ὁμοιούσιος, i. like in essence; or ὁμοούσιος co-essential to the Father. The Arian Heretick presseth Austin to shew where the word ὁμοούσιον is read in Scripture. Austin asketh, what is Homoousion Consubstantial, but, I and my father are one, See of Arius his Heresie and end. D^r Heilins Geograph, pag. 725. Petavius saith, that word was Arx quaedam Catholicæ dogmatis.

Amphilochius a worthy Bishop petitioned Theodosius the Emperour, that the Arians might not have publick meetings in the City, but in vain. Shortly after, he coming to the Court, and finding Arcadius the Emperours Sonne, whom Theodosius had newly made Emperour together with him, standing by his Father. He reverently bowed to the Father Theodosius after his usual manner, but gave not the like respect to his Sonne, but coming near to him, he spake unto him as unto a young boy, Salve mi Fili, saith he, and with his hand stroked his head. Theodosius being herewith provoked to anger, chode Amphilochius with indignation for so slighting his Sonne, and not honouring him equally with himself, and withall commanded him to be cast out reproachfully. As he was carrying away, he turned and said, Think, O Emperour, that the heavenly Father is thus angry with those who honour not the Sonne equally with the Father, and dare say, that he is inferiour in nature to him. The Emperour hearing this, called back the Bishop, begs pardon of him, admires his act, makes a Law presently against the meeting of the Arians, and forbade their publick disputations, and the Emperour himself was hereby more confirmed in the true Religion, in which he wavered before. Vedel. Proleg. ad lib. de Prud. vet. Eccles. s. 2.

Olim haretici Agneta sunt dicti, qui Christum, etiam quà Deus est, multa ignorasse affirmarunt: ut inde evincerent, æqualem Patri & ejusdem cum Patre essentia non esse. Wendel. Christiana Theologiæ Systema majus, lib. 1. cap. 2.

Thirdly, That the holy Ghost is also God*, is proved by the same Arguments.

* Vide Bellarmine de Christo, lib. 1. cap. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.

1. The Names and Titles of God are given to him, 1 Cor. 3. 16. Three times doth the Apostle call the holy Ghost God, 1 Cor. 3. 16, 17. The taking of the shape of a Dove, and fiery Tongues, are acts of a distinct person. Acts 5. 3, 4. To lye to the holy Ghost and to God, are equivalent terms. Hoc testimonio pleriq; omnes orthodoxorum Patrum usi sunt non minus Græci, quam Latini, ad probandam Spiritus Sancti Divinitatem. Petavius de Trinitate, lib. 2. cap. 13. Vide plura ibid.

M^r Poole in his Pleа for the God-head of the holy Ghost, thus argues, he whom the Scripture cals the great and true God is God; but the Scripture cals the holy Ghost the great and true God: Ergo, the holy Ghost is God. He makes that addition (saith he) because Magistrates are said to be Gods, compare Acts 1. 16. with Acts 4. 24. Numb. 12. 6. with 2 Peter 1. 21. He is called the Spirit of glory, 1 Peter 4. 14.

Hottinger saith there is not a more illustrious place in all the Old Testament to prove the Godhead of the holy Ghost, than Gen. 1. 2. de Creat. Q. 32.

Secondly, Divine Attributes are given to the holy Ghost.

1. Omniscience,

1. Omniſcience, he knoweth all things, 1 Cor. 2. 10, 11. John 14. 26.
2. Omnipreſence, Pſalms 139. 7. Rom. 8. 9. John 14. 26.
3. Omnipotency, Heb. 3. 7.
4. Eternity, Heb. 9. 14.

The holy Spirit, 1. Works grace in the hearts of all Gods people, that is done by an almighty power, Epheſ. 1. 19. therefore he is an omnipotent Eſſence. 2. Dwels in the hearts of all Gods people, therefore he is omnipreſent. 3. Aſſiſts the people of God in their prayers, and increaſeth their graces, therefore he is an omniſcient God. In the Apoſtles Creed, as I believe in the Father, and in the Sonne, ſo in the holy Ghoſt. Credimus multum, ſed in nihil præterquam in Deum credimus. Quid eſt in aliquem credere, niſi ei per omnia aſſentiri, atque in eo omnem ſpem & fiduciam collocare? Hoc autem ſoli creatoræ ſed. Deo duntaxat convenit. 1 Pet. 1. 21.

Thirdly, The works of the true God are given to the holy Ghoſt.

1. Creation, Job 26. 13. Job 33. 4.
2. Preſervation and ſuſtentation of all things created is attributed to the holy Ghoſt, Gen. 1. 2. Zech. 4. 6.
3. Redemption, 1 Cor. 2. 10.
4. The power and working miracles is aſcribed to the holy Ghoſt, Matthew 12. 28. Acts 2. 4. Rom. 15 19. the reſurrection of the fleſh is aſcribed alſo to the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 8. 11.
5. Diſtributing of graces according to his pleaſure, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 6, 11. Luculenta Divinitatis Spiritus Sancti demonſtratio, Brochmand. Inſtructing of the Prophets, 2 Peter 1. 21. Governing of the Church, and making Apoſtles, Acts 13. 2. and 20. 28.

He is called the Spirit of truth, John 14. 26. the Spirit of adoption, Rom. 8. 15. the Spirit of ſanctification, Rom. 1. 4. the Spirit of renewing, Tit. 3. 5.

Fourthly, Divine honour and worſhip is given to him, Apoc. 2. 29. we are baptized in his Name, as well as in the Name of the Father and Sonne, Matthew 28. 19. we are commanded to believe in him, and call upon him. See Rev. 1. 4, 5. Blaſphemy againſt the holy Ghoſt ſhall never be forgiven, Matthew 12. 31. therefore he is no leſſe religiouſly to be worſhipped than the Father and the Sonne.

Rom. 9. 1. There are few Fathers who lived after the riſing of the Arian and Macedonian Hereſies, who have not written whole Tracts in defence of the God-head of the holy Ghoſt, Doctor Heylins Summe of Chriſtian, Theol. Artic. 9. Juſtin Martyr, Ireneus, Tertullian, Clemens Alexandrinus, worſhipt the holy Ghoſt. Cyprian begins his Tract concerning the holy Ghoſt, with the invocation of the holy Ghoſt. Una tantum eſt in Deitate Perſona & Spiritus Sanctus eſt, ut verba Chriſti ad Apoſtolos indicant. Luc. 24. 49. Catech. Eccl. Polon. c. 8. Vide plura ibid.

Mr Poole urgeth alſo theſe Arguments to prove the holy Ghoſt to be God.

He that dictated, or was the Author of the Scripture, is God: But the holy Ghoſt was the Author of the Scripture; Ergo, the holy is Ghoſt is God. The Major is proved out of Heb. 1. 1. Luke 1. 70. 1 Theſ. 2. 13. Hence all the Scripture is ſaid to be θεόπνευστος, of divine inſpiration, 2 Tim. 3. 16. or inſpired by God. The Minor is proved by Acts 28. 25. 2 Peter 1. 21. He who is one in nature and eſſence with the Father is God: But the holy Ghoſt is one with the Father; Therefore the holy Ghoſt is God. The Major will not be denied, he proves the Minor out of 1 John 5. 7.

He Anſwers Bidles Arguments againſt the God-head of the holy Ghoſt.

In the firſt Conſtantinopolitan Councell aſſembled againſt Macedonius who denied the Divinity of the holy Ghoſt, there were an hundred and eighty Biſhops.

Vide Doct. Prid. Lect. 20. de S. S. Deitate & Perſonalitate. The Arminians and Socinians (as Paltius ſheweth in his Harmony) ſay, The holy Ghoſt is only Vis & Efficacia, the power of God, but not a diſtinct Perſon, God himſelf, but 1 Cor. 12. 11. as he (i. the Spirit) will, therefore he is a Perſon as well as the Father and the Son, Eph. 1. 14. the Spirit of promiſe, who is (ſo the Greek may well be rendred) The earneſt of our Inheritance.

1. God the Father communicates the whole Divine eſſence unto the Son, and yet hath the whole divine eſſence in himſelf.
2. God the Father, and God the Son, are one eſſence, and yet though the Father begets the Son, the Son doth not beget himſelf.
3. God the Father begetteth God the Sonne, and yet the Father is not elder than the Sonne, nor the Sonne younger than the Father.
4. The Father begets the Sonne, yet the Sonne is not inferiour to the Father, nor the Father ſuperiour to the Sonne.
5. The Father begets the Sonne, yet the Sonne hath the ſame numericall nature with with the Father, and the Father the ſame numericall nature with the Sonne. Sermon 3d at Giles in the Fields by Mr Needler.

The Communion and Diſtinction of theſe three Perſons is to be conſidered.

1. The Communion; the ſame numerical eſſence is common to the three in one God, or of one eſſence there are three Perſons, by reaſon of which community of Deity all the three Perſons remain together, and are co-eternal delight to themſelves, Prov. 8. 22, 30. John 14. 10.

1. The Perſons differ;

1. From the Eſſence, not really as things and things, but modally, as manners from the things whereof they are manners, as degrees of heat from heat, and light from light.

2. They differ amongſt themſelves, as degrees from degrees, as relations in a ſubject from other relations in the ſame; as for example, if three degrees ſhould remain diſtinctly in the ſame heat, this is a diſtinction not of degree, ſtate or dignity (ſince all the Perſons are equal) but in other reſpects; and it is either Internal or External.

Internal is three-fold:

The Father is prima Perſona, in order, not in dignity.
2. The fountain and original of the Deity unto the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt, unto the Son gignendo, unto the holy Ghoſt, together with the Son ſpirando.
3. He is unbegotten, and proceeding from none. Mr Down on John 17. 1.
His perſonall property is to be unbegotten and without beginning.
Proprietates patris perſonales quibus à filio diſtinguitur & Spiritu ſancto, ſunt duæ.
1. Eſſe à ſe; Pater enim ab alio non eſt.
2. Gignere filium ab æterno & ſpirare, Wendelinus.

1. In Order, the Father is the firſt Perſon from himſelf, not from another, both in reſpect of his Eſſence and Perſon. The Sonne is the ſecond Perſon from his Father in reſpect of his Perſon and filiation, exiſting by eternal generation, after an ineffable manner, and is ſo called God of God. The holy Ghoſt is the third Perſon, proceeding or flowing co-eternally from the Father and the Sonne in reſpect of his Perſon.

2. In the perſonal property unchangeable and incommunicable, which is called perſonality, and it is

1. Of the Father, paternity, and to beget in reſpect of the Son; to ſend out or breathe in reſpect of the holy Ghoſt.

2. Of the Son, generation or to be begotten of the Father, Pſalm 2. 7. Heb. 1. 5. John 3. 16. & 5. 18. 1 John 4. 9. Abſque ullâ eſſentiæ, temporis, gloriæ imparitate, Chamier.

In this generation we muſt note

1. That the begetter and begotten are together in time.

2. He that begets communicates to him that is begotten, not a part of his Eſſence, but the whole Eſſence; that which is begotten is within, not without the begetter.

In reſpect of this generation, the Sonne is called The Word of the Father, John 1. 1. not a vaniſhing, but an eſſential word, becauſe he is begotten of the Father, as the word from the mind. He is called The Word of God, both internal and conceived (that is, the Divine Underſtanding reflected upon it ſelf from eternity, or Gods knowledge of himſelfe), ſo alſo he is the inward wiſdome of God, Prov. 8. becauſe God knows himſelf as the firſt and moſt worthy object of contemplation; and external or uttered, which hath revealed the counſels of God to men, eſpecially the elect; that we may know the Father by the Sonne as it were by an Image, John 1. 18. ſo alſo he is the externall wiſdome inſtructing us concerning the Will and Wiſdome of the Father to Salvation, 1 Cor. 1. 21. and verſe 30.

The Father in the eternal generation of the Sonne, by communicating his whole Eſſence to him, communicated alſo life and glory, and all eſſential properties.

Wendelinus. Quinque dicuntur de Deo, Paternitas, innaſcibilitas, filiatio, proceſſio, & communis ſpiratio. Auguſt. Paternitas & innaſcibilitas conveniunt ſolummodo Patri: Filiatio tantummodo Filio: Spiritui vero ſancto proceſſio, communis ſpiratio Patri & Filio reſpectu ſpiritus ſancti. Raym. Mart. Pugio adverſus Judæos part. 3. Diſt. 1. c. 5. Aliud eſt habere A ſeipſo, & aliud habere In ſeipſo. Pater ſolus habet A ſeipſo; Filius & Spiritus ſanctus habent quidem in ſeipſis, ſed non à ſeipſis; quia originem habent à Patre. Pater à nullo. Zanch. ad Arianum Reſponſ. Si ulla Chriſtiana pars religionis, quæ ſimplicem à nobis de ſolo authoritate fidem non ex ratione comprehenſionem exigit: hæc ipſa eſt profectio, de qua nunc agimus, æterna Filij productio, quæ in divinis Scripturis generationis nomen accepit. Petavius de Trinitate, lib. 5. cap. 3.

3. The

3. The Property of the Son in respect of the holy Ghost is to send him out, John 15. 26.

Hence arose the Schisme between the Western and the Eastern Churches, they affirming the Procession from the Father and the Sonne, these from the Father alone.

Cartwright in his Harmony saith, Hic locus eximius est ad asserendum processum Spiritus à Filio, meaning John 14. 15. The holy Ghost is called the Spirit of Christ, and of the Son, Rom. 8. 9. Gal. 6. the Spirit of the Father, Mat. 10. 20. because he is breathed from both. Vide Aquin. Sum. Theol. part. 1. Quæst. 36. Artic. 3, 4. In Ecclesia veteri δοξολογία, in templo cantari solebat, quam orthodoxi hoc modo concipiebant: Gloria Patri & Filio, & Spiritui Sancto in sæcula sæculorum. Ariani autem gloriæ Filii & Spiritus Sancti derrahentes sic eam concipiebant: Gloria Patri per Filium in Spiritu Sancto. Vedel. de prudentia veteris Ecclesiæ l. 2. c. 5. & Danæus de Potestate in Ecclesia c. 27. It's noted in the Ecclesiastick Stories, that the Arians and right believers so communicated together in holy Prayers, that you could not distinguish them till they came to the δοξολογία, the Gloria Patri, which the Arians used with some difference from other Christians. Mr. Hales his Sermon on Rom. 14. 1. Vide Petavium de Trinitate l. 7. c. 1, 2, 3, 4.

To deny the Procession of the holy Ghost from the Sonne, is a grievous errour in Divinity, and would have grated the foundation, if the Greek Church had so denied the Procession of the holy Ghost from the Sonne, as that they had made an inequality between the Persons. But since their forme of speech is, That the holy Ghost proceedeth from the Father by the Sonne, and is the Spirit of the Sonne, without making any difference in the Consubstantiality of the Persons, it is a true, though an erroneous Church in this particular; Divers Learned Men thinke, that a Filio & per Filium in the sense of the Greek Church, was but a Question in modo loquendi in manner of speech, and not fundamental.

Dr Field somewhat qualifieth this opinion of the Grecians, and saith they differ but modo loquendi, they held (saith he) that the holy Ghost was not à Patre & Filio, but à Patre per Filium. See Dr Halls Peace-maker, Sect. 4.

3. The personal propriety of the holy Ghost is called procession or emanation, John 15. 26.

Bellarmine proves the Procession of the holy Ghost from the Son by John 16. 14. and from John 20. 22. by that ceremony Augustine and Cyril say, Christ would signifie that the holy Ghost proceeds from him, and Bellarmine produceth fifteen Latine, and as many Greek witnesses, who most evidently taught (before the Grecians denied the Procession of the holy Ghost) that the holy Ghost proceeded from the Father and the Son. Bellarm de Christo l. 2. c. 22.

Neither hath the Word defined, nor the Church known a formal difference between this Procession and generation.

The third internal difference among the Persons is in the number, for they are three, subsisting truely, distinctly and per se, distinguished by their relations and properties, for there are internal works and different, and incommunicably proper to every person.

There follows an external distinction in respect of effects and operations which the Persons exercise about external objects, namely the creatures, for though the outward works are undivided in respect of the Essence, yet in respect of the manner and determination, all the persons in their manner and order concurre to such works. As the manner is of existing, so of working in the Persons.

The Father is the original and principle of action, works from himself by the Son, as by his image and wisdom, and by the holy Ghost. But he is said to work by his Son, not as an instrumental but as a principal cause distinguished in a certain manner from himself, as the Artificer works by an Image of his work framed in his mind, which Image or Idea is not in the instrumental cause of the work, but his hand.

1 Cor. 8. 6. Rom. 11. 36. Heb. 1. 2, 3.

To the Son is given the dispensation and administration of the action from the Father by the holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 8. 6. John 1. 3. & 5. 19.

To the holy Ghost is given the consummation of the action which he effects from the Father and the Son, Job 26. 13. 1 Cor. 12. 11.

The effects or works which are distinctly given to the Persons, are, Creation ascribed to the Father, Redemption to the Sonne, Sanctification to the holy Ghost;

Ghost; all which things are done by the Persons equally and inseparably in respect of the effect it selfe, but distinctly in respect of the manner of working.

The equality of the Persons may be proved, 1. By the work of Creation, joyntly, Psalme 33. 6. severally; for the Father, those places prove it, 1 Cor. 8. 6. Heb. 1. 2. the Son, John 1. 3, 10. Col. 1. 16. the holy Ghost, Job 33. 4. 2. By the work of Redemption, the Father sends and gives the Sonne, the Sonne is sent and given by him, the holy Ghost perfects the work of Conception and Incarnation, Luke 1. 35. 3. By the work of Sanctification, the Father sanctifieth, John 17. 17. Jude v. 1. the Son, Ephes. 5. 26. the holy Ghost, 2 Thess. 2. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 2. 4. By the act of religious adoration. The Father is religiously adored often in the Scripture, Ephes. 1. 17. the Sonne, Acts 7. 59. Heb. 1. 6. the holy Ghost, Acts 28. 25, 26. Rom. 9. 1.

This is a wonderfull mystery rather to be adored and admired than enquired into; yet every one is bound to know it with an apprehensive knowledge, though not with a comprehensive. No man can be saved without the knowledge of the Father; he hath not the Father who denieth the Sonne; and he receives not the holy Ghost who knowes him not, John 14. 17.

Nec periculosius alicubi erratur, nec laboriosius aliquid quæritur, nec fructuosius aliquid invenitur. Aug. l. de Trin.

2. We must worship the Unity in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity, as it is in Athanasius his Creed. We must worship God as one in substance, and three in Persons, as if Thomas, John, and Matthew, had one singular soul and body common to them all, and intirely possessed of every one; we were baptized in the Name of Father, Son, and holy Ghost.

Simon Magus was the first man that denied the Trinity of Persons, he saith they were Diversa nomina sub diversa operatione. Irenæus.

We worship another God than the Idolaters could imagine their God to be; they conceived him to be the Creator and Governour of all things, Omnipotent, Eternal, but they worshipped not one God in three Persons, the Father who accepts, the Spirit who works, and the Sonne who presents our services. One main intendement in the New Covenant was not onely to honour the Attributes of the nature, but the glory of the Persons, Ephes. 1, 3, 7, 13, 14.

2. All the Persons have a special hand in the salvation of a sinner, and every believer hath a special interest in the promises of the Persons, John 5. 19.

3. The order of working in the Persons is suitable to the order of their subsisting, the Father is first in order and also in working, therefore Adoption is reckoned by some Divines, as the first of spiritual benefits, then Redemption and Sanctification.

4. We should walk in the love of them all, 1 John 4. 16. See John 5. 9. & 14. 23. & 16. 27. and fear to offend them all, not only the Father, but the Son, Ezek. 21. 10. and the Spirit, Eph. 4. 30.

5. We should praise God for revealing this mystery to us in his Word, and be assured that what he promiseth or threatens shall be accomplished, being confirmed by those witnesses.

The Turks at their prayers use often to reiterate these words, Hue, Hue, Hue, that is, He, he, he, alone is God, or There is but one onely supreme power; which they do in derision of Christians, who (as they say) adore three Gods.

Therefore Erpenius in his History of Joseph saith, they call the Christians associantes, because they say that Christ is God, and adjoyne him to the true God. Yet Hyrnberck Summa Controvers. Relig. l. 3. De Mahumedismo saith, that the Mahometans openly confess, in Novi Testamenti Epistolis Paulinis clare & exserte Christi deitatem legi, unde adversus nos haut super re disputantes, Paulinarum Epistolarum illam ob causam auctoritatem declinant, & etiam illas à Christianis adulteratas esse. He who denies any one Person doth not worship the true God, as the Jews and Turks, and too many others in these dayes, John 16. 2. 1 John 2. 22, 23. No man can know the Father, nor believe in him, John 14. 2. but by Christ. Vide Vedel. de Deo Synagoga, l. 1. c. 6. Quo pertinebat receptissima gratiarum agendi forma: Deo Patri, & Filio, Domino Nostro Jesu Christo, cum Sancto Spiritu gloria, & imperium, in secula seculorum. Amen. Vossii Præfat. ad Differtat. Gen. There is one called Julius Conradus Otto a Jew hath put out a Book stiled Galli Razia Occultorum Detectio, wherein he asserts the Doctrine of the Trinity out of the sincerer Rabbies themselves, and confirmes the Christian Faith against the Jewish blasphemies. It is in Hebrew, Latine, and Dutch. The Papists (though erroneous in most other Doctrines.) are sound in that of the Trinity, Nous disons donc, qu' este l' Article de la Trinité, à peine en y a-il un autre en toute la Doctrine Chrestienne, qu' on ait laissé en son entier: qui ne soit falsifié par la Papauté. Chamier de la vocation Des Ministres, l. 3. Vide Down. Disc. de Antichrist. part 2. l. 3. c. 6, & 7.

The

The myſtery of the Trinity is no uſeleſſe ſpeculation, but a practicall principle of much uſe in Prayer, Epheſ. 2. 18. and our whole ſpirituall life, we pray to God the Father, through the Sonne, by the Spirit; See 1 Cor. 1. 2. We have in Prayer an experience of the truth of God the Fathers being, becauſe he anſwers our prayers, and of his love in regarding us. 2. We make uſe of Chriſt in prayer, as we accept him in the Word. 3. The holy Ghoſt worketh us, and inlargeth our hearts in the duty, manifeſts our adoption, Rom. 8. The Divine perſons glorifie one another, the holy Ghoſt Chriſt, John 16. 14. and Chriſt the Father, John 14. 14. Phil. 2. 10. The Father ſends the Sonne, the Sonne purchaſeth the Spirit. The Fathers love brought Chriſt to you, John 3. 16. and you to Chriſt, John 17. 6. Chriſt voluntarily ſubmitted to all he ſuffered, Gal. 2. 20. the Spirit gives us the effects of Chriſts purchaſe, and the ſenſe and feeling of them.

Prudentius hath exerciſed his Poetry well in defending and illuſtrating the whole Chriſtian Religion againſt the Jews, Heathens and Heretecks, and in celebrating the holy Trinity.

The End of the ſecond Book.

THE

THE THIRD BOOK. OF Gods Works

Chap. I.

Of Gods Decree, and especially of Predestination, and the Parts thereof, Election and Reprobation.

HAving spoken of the Scripture, and God; the works of God in the next place are to be handled, which some make two; the Decree, and the execution of the Decree. Others, three, Decree, Creation, Providence. The works of God, whereby he moves himself to his Creatures, are three; Decree, Creation, Providence; not three individually; for so they are innumerable, but in the species and kindes of things.

The works of God, are,

1. Before time, or eternal, his Decree.
2. In time.
   1. Past, Creation of all things.
   2. Present, Gubernation and Sustentation, Government and Preservation.

Or thus:

Gods Works are,

There are two sorts of the works of the Lord.
1. Immanent, terminated in himself, his Decree.
2. Transient, the execution of his eternal Decree in time

First, Internal, which are in the very will of God from Eternity, and they are called the Decrees of God, by which God determined from Eternity, what he would doe in time. We follow the received phrase of Divines, when we call the Decrees, the workes of God, and speak of God after our capacity. Therefore we call Decrees of God, his Workes; because the Decrees of man are Works, or Actions from man, and really distinct from his understanding and will, by which we conceive the Decrees of God, or rather God decreeing.

Secondly,

Secondly, External; Creation, and Providence.

1. Of Gods Decree.

1. Quid nominis.

Decree is a ſpeech taken from the affairs of men, eſpecially Princes, in the determination of cauſes between parties at variance, whoſe ſentence is called a Decree. Or ſecondly, it is a reſolution of things conſulted of, either negatively, or affirmatively; according to the latter uſe of the Phraſe, it is applied to God, Eſay 46. 10.

2. Quid Rei.

Decretum in the Latine is indifferent, to ſignifie either in the Abſtract, Gods Decree; or, in the Concrete, a thing decreed.

Gods Abſolute Decree [a], is that whereby the Lord, according to the Counſel of his own Will, hath determined with himſelf what he will do, command, or forbid, permit, or hinder, together with the circumſtances of the ſame, Acts 2.23. & 4.28. Luke 22.22. John 7.30.

[a] Decretum Dei eſt definita ejus ſententia de rebus omnibus per omnipotentiam & ſecundum conſilium ſuum efficiendis. Ames. Medulla Theol. Epheſ. 1.11.

Or, Gods Decree is an eternal and infinite act of the Divine Eſſence, by which he doth determine to do, or not to do, whatſoever is or ſhall be done, from the beginning to all eternity, that good is; and to permit or ſuffer whatſoever evil is done, or ſhall be.

Gods Decree is called Counſel [b], becauſe it is done moſt wiſely, all things being ſo ordered, as is moſt agreeable to trueſt reaſon; as if things had been long debated, or conſulted of before; though the Divine Nature be free from all need of conſulting; and it is called the Counſel of his Will; becauſe his Will doth determine all things agreeably to that Counſel.

[b] Decretum Dei eſt actio illius interna atque æterna, quæ ex rebus poſſibilibus atq; indefi- nitis, ea omnia & ſola, quæ jam fuerunt, ſunt, & erunt, ſecundum ſapientiæ ſuæ judicium, immutabili liberrimæ voluntatis placito, ut ita fierent, ad ſuam gloriam rectè præfinivit. Gomar. in Theſ. Decretum eſt actio Dei ex conſilio & propoſito ſuæ voluntatis omnia, omniumq; rerum circumſtantias omnes ab æterno in ſe certò & immutabiliter, & tamen liberè definiens.

It is an eternal determining of all things which have been, are, or ſhall be, ſo as himſelf ſaw fitteſt to have them, upon beſt reaſons known to him, though not to us.

Remonſtrantes abſolutum nullum admittunt decretum de futuro quovis contingente, ſed conditionatum tantum. Ames. Coron.

The Decree of God extends to all things good and bad; and the rule of it his own wiſdome, and good pleaſure guided by his wiſdome: the end is for his glory; that is, the manifeſtation of his excellencies. His mercy moved him to decree; his wiſdome orders the Decree; his power perfects it, and brings it to paſſe.

Though the Lord hath decreed ſinne to be, yet he decreed it not as ſinne, but as a means of the manifeſtation of his juſtice on the wicked, and grace on the Saints. Ipſum peccatum, quamvis non qua peccatum præfinitur, in ipſa tamen præfinitione certò videtur, & aliquo modo dici poteſt decreti illius conſequens, effectus autem nullo modo. Vult Deus actus bonos, & qua actus & qua bonos; malos qua actus non qua malos. Reſcript. Ames. ad reſponſ. Grevinch. c. 13. Act. 2.23. & 4.28. Gen. 45. 5, 6, 7. 1 Cor. 10. 13.

The Properties of Gods Decree:

1. It is compleat, that is, it comprehends the determination of every thing, whatſoever the Creature it ſelf works, or God concerning it, that was decreed from eternity ſo to be, Matth. 10.29. it reacheth to greater matters, the Incarnation and coming of Chriſt, Pſalm 40. 6, 7, 8. compared with Heb. 10. 5, 6, 7. the Kingdome of Chriſt, Pſalm 2.2. to leſſe matters, in things which befall the Church, as the ordering of things in Ægypt, when the Iſraelites were in Captivity. Nothing comes to paſſe but what God hath decreed ſhall come to paſſe; and nothing comes to paſſe otherwiſe than as he hath decreed it ſhall come to paſſe, we doe not onely ſubject res ipſas, but modos rerum to the Will and Decree of God. Neither hath God decreed onely good things, but even juſtly the evil works of evil men; for evil in reſpect of Gods ordering it, habet rationem boni, * viz. that by it the glory of God may be revealed in his Juſtice and

* Habet rationem boni triplici reſpectu: 1. Ut eſt pœna peccati, pœna enim eſt bonum morale quia juſtitiæ opus eſt. 2°. Ut eſt mera actio ab ipſa creatura producta. 3°. Ut eſt caſtigatio atque exercitium fidei, ut Martyrium vel ſatisfactio pro peccatis: ut mors Chriſti. Creavit omnia bona, & mala ex bonis oriturà præſcivit. Auguſt.

Mercy. He doth order, determine, and direct the ſinfull actions of men, but not effect them.

Unde factum eſt, ut tot gentes una cum liberis eorum infantibus, æterna morti involveret lapſus Adæ abſq; remedio, niſi quia Deo ita viſum eſt? Decretum quidem horribile fateor. Calv. Inſtit. cap. 22.

2. It is moſt wiſe, Ephe. 1.11. 1 Tim. 1.17. Rom. 11.33. In decretis ſapientum nulla litura.

3. Juſt, Rom. 9.13,14.

4. Free, Rom. 9.18. Nothing moved the Decree of God without, or beyond himſelf: Even ſo, O Father, ſaith Chriſt, becauſe it pleaſeth thee.

5. Certain, firm, 2 Tim. 2.19. infallible, unchangeable, Mat. 18.14.

6. Eternal, ſo ſome, Acts 15.18. Epheſ. 1.4. 2 Tim. 1.9. though Mr Lawſon in his Body of Divinity, Chap. 5. ſaith, they are not properly eternal, and gives his reaſon for it.

The Jeſuites are the ableſt, acuteſt and moſt malicious oppoſers of Gods abſolute Decree, as ſtated by Calvin and others of our Reformed Writers. The Dominicans as ſtrenuouſly aſſert the Doctrine of abſolute reprobation, as any that go by the name of Calviniſts. Mr Hickman againſt Mr Pierce. Bertius in his Preface to his Book, De Perſeverantia & Apoſtaſia Sanctorum, calls it, Fictitium decretum inconditionatæ Electionis & Reprobationis; & inanis opinio de decreto inconditionato Electionis ſingularis. And again, Nullus eſt in totâ Scriptura apex, ſi recto judicii examine rem perpendamus, qui talem Electionem ponat. He ſpeaks againſt it alſo in the Book it ſelf, p. 12,23. & 49.

In æternitate nihil eſt prius & poſterius: There is not ſomething firſt and ſomething after, but there are quædam ſubordinata in Gods Decree, 1 Per 2.3.

7. Abſolute; not ſo as to exclude meanes, but Cauſes, Merits, and Conditions.

Concerning the Controverſies betwixt the Calviniſts and Remonſtrants, about Predeſtination, and the coherent Doctrines, it were improper to give you here my ſenſe. The godly of both parties are perhaps otherwiſe look'd on by God, than by one another, as contending, which of Gods Attributes ſhould be moſt reſpected, the one ſeeming to affirm irreſpective Decrees, to magnifie his Goodneſſe; and the other to deny them, but to ſecure the credit of his Juſtice. Mr Boyles Seraphick Love, p. 110. See more there.

The Decree is two-fold:

1. Common and General, which concerns all Creatures, the Decree of Creation, and Government, or Providence. So that nothing comes to paſſe unawares, but it was ordered by an eternal Decree, Zech. 6.1. Mountains of braſſe; that is, ſtable and eternal Decrees.

2. Special, which belongs to reaſonable Creatures, Angels and men; and orders their eternal eſtate. It is called the Decree of Predeſtination, Pſal. 135.6. and it conſiſts of two parts, viz. of a Decree of Election, about ſaving; and of Reprobation about damning ſome Angels and Men.

The Execution likewiſe of the Decree is two-fold:

Firſt, Common; the execution of the Decree of Creation, which is Creation: and of Government, called Providence.

Secondly, Special:

1. The Execution of the Decree of Election, in good Angels, their confirmation in that ſtate, and in elect men, Redemption, and Reſtauration, and all the gracious works of God.

2. The Execution of the Decree of Reprobation, partly in evil Angels, caſting them out from their ſtate and condition, and their puniſhments in Hell; partly in men, viz. their rejection, obduration, and all effects of Divine anger upon them.

But I ſhall handle the ſpecial Decree firſt, called Predeſtination, and ſpeak briefly concerning the two parts of it, Election and Reprobation; and then proceed to treat likewiſe of Creation and Providence.

Of Predeſtination.

[d] To predeſtinate, ſignifieth to Decree,

To predeſtinate [d], is to Decree the attaining of ſome end, by ſuch like means as counſel ſhall prompt us with. It differs from Election; Election is in the Will; Predeſtination deſtination in the underſtanding, Act. 4.28. Election is only of the end, this is of the means alſo.

Appoint, and Deſign a thing before it come to paſſe:

and alſo to ſeparate a thing to this, or that uſe. Vide Zanch. de Natura Dei l. 4. c. 2. Quæſt. 1. Prædeſtinare nihil aut majus aut minus ſignificat quàm deſtinare. Chamier. Prædeſtinatio cùm ſit propoſitum, & conſilium Dei futurum aliquid deſtinantis, ac decernentis in æterna ſua providentia, duobus modis intelligitur: Primùm abſolutè, ſive comparatione duarum rerum, quarum altera eſt ſit, qui deſtinari dicitur: altera eſt id ad quod ordinatur: ſed ſimpliciter deſignatur id quod aliquando Deus facere decrevit. Deinde cum habitudine quadam rei unius ad aliam: ut cùm Petrus prædeſtinari dicitur ad ſempiternam gloriam. Perav. Theol. Dog. Tom. 4. pars altera de Incarnat. l. 11. c. 14. Vide plura ibid.

By Divines, Predeſtination is uſed to ſignifie the Decree of God concerning the eternal and ſupernatural eſtate of Angels and men, or of men Elect and Reprobate: Although Predeſtination concerne Angels and men alike; yet the Scripture eſpecially inculcates to us men the Predeſtination of men.

Arminius & Arminiani nudum Prædeſtinationis nomen retinentes poſtdeſtinationem re-vera introduxerunt, imò ſub inani titulo prædeſtinationis nihil aliud intelligunt quam voluntatem admittendi fideles in regnum Cœlorum, & excludendi infideles, conceptam in Deo tum demum quoad ſingulares, cùm prævideret eos ad extremum uſque, ſive in fide ſive in ſua infidelitate perſeveraſſe. Davenant. Diſſert. de Prædeſt. cap. 11. Prædeſtinatio Dei in Scripturis aliud nihil notat, quam Dei ante Conditum mundum de hominibus decretum ejuſmodi, quod iis, qui in ipſum crederent, eique obedirent, daturus eſſet vitam æternam: eos verò qui in eum credere, & ei parere recuſarent, æternâ damnatione puniturus eſſet. Catech. Eccleſ. Poſon. cap. 10. Vocabula iſta præfinire, prædefinire, prædeterminare, ac prædeſtinare, idem ſignificare, aut ſaltem coincidere videntur: quibus unum vocabulum Græcum προορίζειν reſpondet. Hæc inſignificatione ſua iſta complectuntur: 1. Certi aliquid de re agenda apud mentem ſuam conſtituere. 2. Eandem rem ad certum eventum ac finem velle deducere. Uſurpatur tam in malo quam in bono, Act. 4. 28. 1 Cor. 2. 7. Sed cum dicimus prædeſtinationem uſurpari in malo, intelligimus malum pœna aut ejuſmodi opera quæ à malis inſtrumentis quibus Deus utitur, fiunt male, licet eadem à Deo efficiantur bene. Sed ex uſu Theologorum prædeſtinationis vox reſtringi ſolet ad ordinationem perſonarum ad finem; ita ut comprehendat tum Electionem tum reprobationem Angelorum & hominum. Auguſt. in Enchirid. cap. 100. & lib. 15. de civitate Dei, & alibi. Aliquando autem ſtrictius ſumitur, ut de ſolâ electione intelligatur, quos Deus ordinavit ad ſupernaturalem ac æternam ſalicitatem, ut docet Apoſtolus in illa aurea catena, Rom. 8. 28, 29, 30. Strangius De Voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum, lib. III cap. 1.

Predeſtination in Scripture (ſay ſome) is all one with Election almoſt every where, as Rom. 8.30. When they are diſtinguiſhed, Election is eſpecially and properly referred to the End it ſelf, Predeſtination to the Means. With the ancient Latines, Deſtinare is uſed of puniſhment as well as reward; and ancient Divines make a Predeſtination to puniſhment, as well as to glory. Vide Wendelini Chriſtiana Theol. Syſtema majus l. 1. c. 3. p. 266.

Si quæ hodiè eſt controverſia religionis in qua cauto & ſuſpenſo pede ſit ambulandum, ea meo judicio eſt, in qua de prædeſtinatione agitur. Cauſab. Epiſt. 13. Eckius ventures upon the higheſt and moſt myſterious Queſtion of Predeſtination, Ut in ea juveniles poſſit calores exercere. Auſtin is obſerved by occaſion of the errour of Pelagius, to have examined more diligently, and more exactly diſcerned the truth in the points of Predeſtination and Free-will, than others his Ancients, Robinſ. Eſſayes, Obſerv. 9. Vide Petavium de Deo, lib. 9. cap. 1, 2, 3.

Predeſtination is the Sentence, or Decree of God, according to Counſel, determining with himſelf from all Eternity, to create and governe mankinde for his ſpecial Glory, viz. the praiſe of his glorious Mercy, or excellent Juſtice.

Epheſ. 1.4,6. Rom. 9.22,23. 2 Tim. 1.9.

Licet agnoſcamus, cum omni moderatione & ſpirituali prudentia ſed ulò curandum, ne ubi de Prædeſtinatione agitur, aut vanæ quæſtiones nec ædificationi ſervientes populo proponantur, aut quidquam ultra id, quod ſcriptum eſt, temerè urgeatur: attamen conſultum, imò planè neceſſarium judicamus, ut populus de Prædeſtinationis doctrinâ piè inſtituatur. Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Artic. 14. de Prædeſtinat. c. 1. Sect. 1. Vide plura ibid.

Or thus:

Predeſtination is the ſecret and immutable purpoſe of God, whereby he hath decreed from all Eternity, to call thoſe whom he hath loved in his Sonne Chriſt, and through faith and good works, to make them veſſels of eternal glory.

Or thus:

Predeſtination is the [c] infallible purpoſe of God, whereby he hath made choice of ſome, and rejected others, according to the pleaſure of his owne will.

[c] Prædeſtinatio, quatenus pro obje-ſto habet homines, eſt æternum & immutabile Dei Decretum de futuro hominum ſtatu æterno. Wendelinus.

Providentia Decretum Dei eſt, de rebus omnibus ad ſuum finem de ducendis. Prædeſtinatio autem de ipſis duntaxat rationalibus creaturis, aut ad vitam, aut ad mortem, perducendis. Zanch. De Natura Dei, lib. 4. cap. 2. Quæſt. 1.

It is part of Providence, 1 *Pet.*1.2. There is a double difference between Predeſtination and Providence:

1. In reſpect of the Object; all things are the Object about which Providence is converſant; reaſonable Creatures onely are the object of Predeſtination.

2. In reſpect of the End; Providence directs all things, as well to natural as ſupernatural ends, but Predeſtination only directs reaſonable Creatures to their ſupernatural ends.

Mat.24.24. Joh.10.15. Dan.12.1. Ezek.13.9. Exod.33.19. Joh.13.18. 2 Pet.1.10.

The Lord hath not onely decreed in general, that he will ſave ſome which believe, and condemne thoſe which continue in infidelity: but he hath determined whom, and how many he will bring to holineſſe, and life eternal, for the praiſe of his Grace, and how many he will leave to themſelves, and puniſh for ſinne, for the praiſe of his Juſtice. The ancient Fathers call that Verſe, Rom. 8.20. The golden chain of our ſalvation. See Dr Arrowſmiths Chain of Princip. Aphor. 5. Exercit. 1.

That is a full place for Election, Epheſ.1.3,4,5,6. Rom.11.22. Mal.1.33. Joh.3.16. Rom.9.23. Epheſ.2.14. Tit.3.5.

The parts of Predeſtination are two, Election and Reprobation.

The Doctrine of Election is profitable to be taught in the Church of God; for it ſets forth the profound depth of the Lords love; the glory and riches of his grace and mercy, aſcribing the whole praiſe of our Vocation, Juſtification, Adoption and Glorification, to the Mercy of God; it holds forth the wonderfull Wiſdome of God, Rom. 11.33. It ſets out his Power and Sovereignty, Rom. 9.20.

The Doctrine of Election is, 1. One part of Gods counſel, Act.20.27. 2. It will ſupport us in trouble, to conſider that every thing falls out by Gods Decree: yet it ought to be taught wiſely. Rom.12.3. Pſal.105.6. 1 Theſſ. 2.4. Epheſ. 1.11. Rom. 9.11. Epheſ. 1.4,5,6. Electio eſt voluntas Divina conferendi gloriam ſingularibus quibuſdam perſonis cum præteritione aliorum. Davenant. Diſſertat. de Prædeſtinat. cap. 1. Electio eſt Prædeſtinatio hominum quorundam ad vitam æternam in Chriſto per fidem obtinendam, ex ſolo Dei beneplacito ad declarandam in iis miſericordiam divinam. Wendelinus. Eſt Decretum Dei quo deſtinavit aliquem ſalutem. Twiſſ.

The word Election ſignifieth:

Firſt, The chuſing or taking of one into ſome Office, 1 Samuel 10.24. Luke 6.13. & 17.12. either in the Commonweale, Pſalm 78.70. or Church, John 6.70.

Secondly, The making choice of a Nation to be Gods peculiar people, upon whom (paſſing by others) he will beſtow his Lawes, Ordinances, and ſingular pledges of his Love, Deuter. 4.37. & 7.7. & 10.15. & 32 8. Rom. 11.5,25.

Thirdly, It is put for the Elect themſelves, as *Rom.*11.7.

Fourthly, It notes Electionem & ſalutem, the eternal Decree of God, ſeparating ſome men to holineſſe and glory, for the praiſe of his rich grace, *Epheſ.*1.4,11. 2 *Tim.*1.9. *Tit.*1.2. Particularis & completa electio, neminem ſpectat niſi morientem, ſay the Arminians.

Fifthly, It is taken for the execution of Gods Eternal Decree, or the ſeparation of certain men in time by effectual vocation, Luke 18.7. *Coloſ.*2.12. *Apoc.*7.14.

Election

Election is the Decree of Gods good pleasure, according to Counsel, whereby he hath from Eternity chosen and determined with himself to call some men to faith in Christ, to justifie, adopt, sanctifie and give them eternal life, for the praise of his incomprehensible grace, and rich mercy.

Or, It is an action of God ordaining some men out of his meer good will and pleasure to eternal life, which is to be had by faith in Christ, for the manifestation of his grace and mercy.

Dr Arrowsmith in his Chain of Principles Aph. 5. Exercit. 1. thus describes it, Election (which concerns the choice of men onely, not of Angels) is that secret unsearchable Decree of God, wherein he did from everlasting single out of the rest of mankinde a definite number of particular persons, ordaining them infallibly unto the attainment of holinesse here, and happinesse hereafter, according to the counsel and good pleasure of his will.

Or it is an unchangeable Decree of God, whereby he hath out of his own Free-will in Christ appointed some Angels and men to holinesse and happinesse, for the praise of the glory of his Grace.

The two principal emanations of Gods will respecting intellectual creatures, are his Decrees, and his Commands. Dr Arrowsmith's Chain of princip. Aphor. 5. Exercit. 1.

1. A Decree of God in Christ, Ephes. 1. 4. & 3. 11. Christ is first elected as the Head, we as the Members.

2. Of certain Angels and men, they are called Elect Angels; Jacob have I loved; Moses his name was written in the book of Life, Revel. 13. 20. & 8. 17. It is unchangeable, Zechary 6. 1, 2, 4. It is to the Means as well as the End, Ephes. 1. 4. 1 Peter 1. 1, 2. A Decree founded on Gods free-will, Ephes. 1. 11.

1. The general nature of it, it is an action of God ordaining.

2. The impulsive Cause, of his meer good will, Ephes. 1. 6. Rom. 9. 16, 18. There can be no other reason given, when men have wearied themselves out in disputes, but onely Gods will, [t] Even so Father because it pleaseth thee, Matth. 11. God will have mercy on whom he will have mercy. Gods meer free-will makes us differ in naturals; thou art a man, and not a toad; how much rather must it make us differ in supernaturals? To flie to a scientia media, or a congrua motio divina, or to the preparation and use of Free-will, is to wander, and to say any thing in man makes a difference.

[t] Quare Deus hunc trahat & illum non trahat, noli velle judicare si non vis errare, Augustin. Vide Bellarm. de Grat. & libero arbitrio. lib. 2. cap. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. That Scientia media which the Jesuites glory of as a new Light, is but the very old errour of natural man, which looks upon things contingent, as not decreed and determined by the will of God. Mr Gillesp. Miscel. cap. 1. Illud de futuris contingentibus per mediam quandam & conditionatam scientiam cognoscendis, novum est. Fonsecae & similium Jesuitarum Commentum, quod & Logicis & Theologicis principiis adversatur. Amesius cum Grevinchov. de Armin. sentent. Scholast. Disput. 5. Vide Dr Prid. Praelect. de scientia media: Et Voetii Thes. de Scientia Dei, pag. 254, 255, 256, 257, 264.

3. The Object of Election, whether man absolutely considered, or respectively, as good by Creation; miserable by sin.

See Aylesbury his Diatriba de Æterno Dei decreto, c. 8. & 9.

There are six several opinions about the object of Predestination; whiles some take it to be man indefinitely, and commonly considered. Others hold it to be man, that was to be created. Others man, as he was creable, fallable, saveable. Others man created, but as in his pure naturals: Others man fallen, which is the most common Tenet. Lastly, Others man, as believing, or disobeying the call of God. B. Halls Remaining works in his via media, or way of peace, the 5th Article of Perseverance.

Some make homo [u] condendus, man to be made, the Object of Election, some man made, but not fallen, some man made and fallen. But these opinions may be reconciled, for those who hold homo Condendus, or massa pura to be the object, do extend Election further than the later do, even to comprehend in it a decree to make man, and to permit him to fall; but as for that actual Election [u] Dr Twisse. Objectum circa quod versatur Electio, est massa nondum condita, nam considerare eandem conditam quod conditum non est, nam tam est considerare quam fingere. Twiss. contra Corvinum c. 6. digress. 2. Vide Strangium De voluntate & actionibus Dei circa peccata, l. 1. c. 19.

and

and Separation, Austin, Calvin, Beza, Rivet, hold it to be from the corrupted Masse; and so doth B. Carleton and others; of which opinion these reasons may be given.

First, We are chosen, that we might be holy and unblamable; this supposeth that we were considered in Election, as sinners, Ezek. 16.6,9. Election is of God, that sheweth mercy, and we are called vessels of mercy, mercy presupposeth misery.

If men extend the Decree of Election to the Creation of man, and the permission of his fall, then man created and fallen, could not be the object of Election so called, but the effect of it rather, Ephes. 1.4,5.

Secondly, We are elected in Christ as our Head; and he is a Mediatour and Saviour, which presupposeth sinne; he came to save sinners, Matth. 20.16. the means of salvation are given to few, few are holy, the effect of Election, Matth. 7.13.

Thirdly, Man simply considered is the object of Predestination, in respect of the Pre-ordination of the end; but man corrupted, if we respect the ordination of the meanes, which tend to that end; for man absolutely, in respect of the supreme or last end, not in respect of this, or that subordinate end.

In him, that is, Christ as a Mediatour, Christ as God comes not under the act of his will. 2. Take notice of the order of our Election. you in him, he was first beloved. 3. According to this order of Election is the order of Gods benediction, Unica tantum est Electio totius corporis Christi mystici. There are three great ends God aims at in his electing love, as may be proved out of that first of the Ephesians. 1. His own glory. 2. The glory of his Sonne. 3. The holinesse and happinesse of the Saints. Eligi a Christo nihil aliud est, quam ordinari vel ad gratiam, vel ad gloriam obtinendam per Christum, non ut Christus hoc ipso statuatur causa electionis sed salutis duntaxat sive gratiæ, sive gloriæ. Twiss. Animadverss. in Collat. Jun. propos. Armin. cap. 6. Sect. 5.

Finis electionis est patefactio divinæ misericordiæ in gratuita quorundam peccatorum salute. Wendelin. Ephes. 1.4. 2 Tim. 1.7. & 2. 19. Vide Daven. dissert. de Prædest. cap. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.

Fourthly, The end of Election is two-fold: 1. Near and immediate, eternal life. 2. Farther off and ultimate, the Glory of his Name, Ephesians 1. 3, 4, 5, 6.

Fifthly, The means to bring about these ends, Christs merits apprehended by faith.

Consider also the Adjuncts of this Decree, the Eternity, Immutability, and Certainty of it. There is a certain and determinate number of the Elect, which cannot be diminished or augmented.

Christ prayed to his Father, that the Faith of his Elect might not fail, John 17.16, 20. It is impossible they should be deceived, Mat 24.24.

The Papists thinke, that the certainty of immutable Election begets in a man carnal security and prophanenesse: but Peter thinkes farre otherwise, 2 Pet. 1.10.

God was not moved by any thing outwardly to chuse us to eternal life, but it was only the meer will of God.

[b] A man is elected, say they, on fore-sight that such a man will believe and persevere in this, and if he do not so, he shall not be elected.

Some of the Papists say, God did chuse man to eternal life upon the foresight of his good works, and his perseverance in them.

The Lutherans [b] say for faith foreseen, not because of any dignity in faith, but for Christ apprehended by it.

Laudet misericordiam Dei qui liberatur, non culpet judicium qui punitur. August. Epist. 106.

Object. If God should not predestinate for some thing in us, he is an accepter of persons, for all were alike, Judas was no more opposite than Peter, why then should one be elected and not another?

Answ. 1. This makes the Doctrine of Election such a depth, that God loveth Jacob, and hateth Esau; in the Angels, some are elected, and some fallen.

Secondly, To accept of persons, is then when we preferre one before another, and ought not to doe so, now that God chooseth some, it is of his meer grace, for all deserve eternal damnation. Vide Dav. Dissert. Prædest. pag. 132, 133.

Object. Predestination or Election is grounded on Gods foreknowledge, Rom. 8. 28,29. 1 Pet. 1.2. Ergo, say the Papists, God out of the foresight of mans good works, did elect him. And the Arminians say, that God elected them out of the foresight of mans

mens faith and perſeverance; ſo Election and Predeſtination ſhall be grounded on the will of man.

Anſw. The foreknowledge of God is, 1. Permiſſive, ſo he foreſaw all mens ſins, the fall of Angels, Adam. 2. Operative, ſo he foreknows all the good that is in men, by working it: God foreſees to give men faith, and then they ſhall believe; perſeverance, and then they ſhall hold out. There can be no difference till elective love make it: When God hath decreed to give grace, he foreknows that man which believes.

2. Predeſtination is not only an eternal act of Gods will, but of his underſtanding, Epheſ. 1.5. Acts 2.23.

3. There is a two-fold foreknowledge of God:

1. General, whereby he foreknew all things that ever were.

2. Special, a foreknowledge joyned with love and approbation, as 1 Pet. 1.21. Mat. 7.28.

Arguments againſt the Papiſts and Lutherans.

That which is the effect and fruit of Election, that cannot be a cauſe or condition, for then a thing ſhould be a cauſe to it ſelf. But theſe are effects, Epheſ. 1.4. It ſhould be according to them, he hath choſen us, becauſe we were foreſeen holy, Acts 13.48.

A man is not ordained to eternal life, becauſe he believeth, but he believeth becauſe he is ordained to eternal life, Acts 2.27. & 13.48. Rom. 8.30. See Rom. 9.16 & 11.13.

Secondly, Then we ſhould chooſe God, and not he us, contrary to that John 15.19.

Thirdly, Infants are elected, who cannot believe or do good works. This argument (ſaith Rivet. Diſput. 4. de cauſa Electionis) although it be puerile by reaſon of the Subject, yet it is virile if we reſpect its weight; for the Adverſaries cannot avoid it, without running into many abſurdities, by denying that Infants are ſaved, againſt that of Matthew 18; and by affirming that ſome are ſaved which are not elected, againſt Rom. 11.

Fourthly, If man were the cauſe of his own election, he had cauſe to glory in himſelf, election ſhould not be of grace. See Mr Bailyes Antidote againſt Arminians, pag. 26. to 46.

Noſtri Theologi dicunt Deum primò decernere alicui ſalutem deinde verò fidem, quia fidem ſtatuunt medium ad ſalutem, & omnis ratio ſobriè confirmat intentionem finis priorem eſſe intentione mediorum ad finem. Twiſſ. contra Corvinum, cap. 8. object. 17. Sect. 1. Vide plura ibid. Cum fideles dicuntur vocari in Scriptura, intelligendum id eſt, terminativè, non objectivè, hoc eſt, terminus in quo acquieſcit & deſinit Dei vocatio, ut in effecto, eſt fides qua aliquis conſtituitur fidelis, non autem objectum circa quod vocatio Dei verſatur, ut aliquid præſuppoſitum. Camero. in Collat. cum Tilen. de Grat. &c.

All the ſons of Adam without exception are not elected; for election ſuppoſeth a rejection. He that choſeth[1] ſome, refuſeth others. See Eſay 41.9. John 13.8. Whom God elected he doth alſo glorifie, Rom. 8.30. but all are not glorified, 2 Theſſ. 1.10. & 2.13. Choſen out of the World, John 15.19. therefore he choſe not all in the world, but ſome.

Secondly, Saving faith is a true effect of Gods Election, peculiar to the Elect, and common to all the Elect which live to be of age and diſcretion: But many are deſtitute of Faith for ever: Therefore they muſt needs be out of Gods Election.

Thirdly, The Scripture ſaith expreſly, That few were choſen, Mat. 20.16. Rom. 11.5,7. Few ſaved, Luke 23.23. See Eſay 1.8,9. & 17.6. Gods portion are called a remnant fourty times in Eſay and Jeremy, and in the ninth verſe of the firſt of Eſay, a very ſmall remnant; a remnant is a ſmall thing to the whole piece, but they are a very ſmall remnant. The Elect conſidered apart by themſelves, are a numberleſſe number, and exceeding many, Revel. 7.4,9. in compariſon of the wicked, they are but few, even a handfull, Mat. 7.13,14. & 22.14. Luke 12.32. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 2.10. Sect. 92.

Though ſome of the places of Scripture may be expounded of the ſmall number Vide Molinæi Enodat. Graviſ. Quæſt. Tract. 77. de Prad. cap. 2, 3, 4.

[1] Eligit qui è multis aliquos legit. The very word Election ſignifieth a ſeparating and culling out of ſome from the reſt, John 15.19. 2 Theſſ. 3.2. Matth. 8.11. Rom. 5.19. Revel. 13.3. Heb. 2.10.

Multitude is not then a good mark of the Church, of believers in the dayes of our Saviour, yet ſome are more generally ſpoken, ſhewing plainly that only few do find the way to life.

of

Brerewoods Enquiries touching the diverſity of Languages and Religions.

At this day, if the world were divided into thirty parts, nineteen of them doe live in Infidelity, without the knowledge of the true God. The Mahometans poſſeſſe other ſix parts of the world. Amongſt them which profeſſe Chriſt, ſcarce one part of thoſe five remaining do imbrace the true Religion. And many more do profeſſe with the mouth, than doe with the heart believe unto ſalvation.

Chryſoſtome preaching to the people of Antioch, ſaith, ſcarce a hundred of all that great City would be ſaved.

That there is a ſet and certain number given to Chriſt, is evident by ſundry paſſages in the prayer, which Chriſt made to his Father at his going out of the world. Eight ſeveral times is this word Given there uſed, and that to ſet out Gods free grace therein, John 17. 2, 4, 6, 7, 9, 11, 12, 24. Dr Gouge on Hebrews 2. 13. Sect. 131.

Notant curioſi levem ineſſe differentiam inter Reprobum, & Reprobatum, & Reprobatum dici qui non eſt Dei Electus; Reprobum verò qui ſit coram hominibus culpabilis, & reprehenſioni obnoxius, & hoc ſenſu Reprobum opponi ab Apoſtolo Probato; & talem innuere, quem conſtat experimento non eſſe, qualem eſſe oportebat; idem valet quod rejectaneus, & dignus etiam qui ab hominibus vapulet. Puto utramque nomenclaturam miſero illi hominum cœtui à Deo omiſſo, ſine injuria accommodari poſſe. Diat. Ayleſb. de Æterno Dei decreto. c. 7. See more there.

The Arminians ſay, There is an Election axiomatical, not perſonal: they acknowledge, that there is a choiſe of this or that particular means to bring men to ſalvation. God (ſay they) hath revealed but two wayes to bring men to life, either by obedience to the Law, or by faith in Chriſt. But they deny that there is an Election of this or that particular man. God hath ſet down with himſelf from all Eternity, not onely how many, but who ſhall lay hold on Chriſt to ſalvation, and who not, 2 Pet. 1. 10. ſpeaks of an Election perſonal, Rom. 9. 11, 12. of both Elections, axiomatical and perſonal. See John 10. 3. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Some hold that Gods Election is ſo uncertain and changeable, as that the Elect may become reprobates, and the reprobate elect. There is (ſay they) a conſtant and frequent intercourſe of members between Chriſt and Satan, to day a member of Chriſt, to morrow a member of Satan, Rom. 8. 28. All things work together for their good, then nothing ſhall work for their greateſt hurt, that is, their damnation. And verſ. 30. he ſaith, Thoſe whom he predeſtinated, he hath called, juſtified, glorified; not others, but thoſe whom he hath predeſtinated, theſe he called and juſtified. Gods Election is moſt firm, certain and unchangeable, John 6. 37. & 10. 28. Matth. 24. 24. By the Arminian Doctrine there can be no Certainty of Election; for they hold, That abſolute Election only follows final perſeverance in faith, and that faith may be totally loſt, and fail finally. So much concerning Election.

In the Scriptures reprobate, and to reprobate are referred rather to the preſent conditions of wicked men, than Gods eternal ordination concerning them. But the Decree of Reprobation is expreſt in ſuch terms as theſe, God is ſaid not to have given them to Chriſt, not to ſhew mercy on ſome, not to have written the names of ſome in the Book of Life.

Reprobatio eſt Prædeſtinatio quorundam ad æternam mortem, propter peccata infligendam; ad declarandam juſtitiam divinam. Wendel.

Reprobation is the purpoſe of God to leave the reſt of men to themſelves, that he may glorifie his Juſtice in their eternal deſtruction. Eſt decretum aliquod quo deſtinavit alicui Deus damnationem. Twiſſ. See Mr Manton on the 4th verſe of the Epiſtle of Jude.

Reprobavit Deus propter voluntatem, damnavit propter peccatum. Rom. 9. 22.

The Schoolmen and others diſtinguiſh betweene a Negative, and Poſitive, or affirmative act of Reprobation. The Negative Act is called Preterition, non-election, or a will of not giving life. The Poſitive or Affirmative Act is called Predamnation, or a will of damning the reprobate perſon. So there are two parts of Election, viz. the Decree of giving Grace, by which men are freed from ſinne by Faith and Repentance: 2. Of rewarding their Faith and Repentance with eternal life.

Preterition or negative Reprobation is an eternal Decree of God purpoſing within himſelf to deny unto the non-elect that peculiar love of his, wherewith Election is accompanied, as also that special grace which infallibly bringeth to glory: of which negations, permissions of sinne, obduration in sinne, and damnation for sinne, are direct consequents. Dr Arrowsmiths Chain of Principles, Aphor. 5. Exercit. 2.

is

The word Reprobation is taken three wayes, saith B. Davenant out of Junius:

1. For Preterition and damnation joyntly.

2. For the alone Decree of damnation: so to be reprobated, is to be appointed to eternal torments.

3. As it is opposed contradictorily to Election, so it is taken for Preterition only, or non-election. Daven. Dissert. de Praedestinatione c. 7.

The object of it are some sinfull men, or the greatest part of sinfull men, which are called vessels of wrath fitted for destruction, Rom. 9. 22. that there are more damned than saved, is proved, Mat. 20. 16. Mat. 7. 14.

The end of Reprobation is the Declaration of Gods Justice in punishing of sinne.

There is no cause of Reprobation in the Reprobate, that they rather than others are passed by of God; that is wholly from the unsearchable depth of Gods good pleasure, but that damnation whereto they are adjudged, is for their owne sinnes.

Mr Aylesbury in his Diatribae de Æterno Dei decreto cap. vii. saith, the nature of Reprobation is comprehended under a three-fold Act.

The first, In which God hath propounded his glory, and not to communicate his grace to some, which is called by some Divines Preterition or non-election, by others a will of not pitying.

The second act is conversant in ordaining the permission of sin.

The third and last act is called the affirmative act of Reprobation, by others a will of condemning.

There are five dreadfull consequences of Reprobation or Preterition:

1. Such whom God passeth by, he never cals, or not effectually; calling is according to purpose.

2. He deserts, leaves them to follow their own corrupt lusts.

3. Hardens them, Rom. 9.

4. They shall prove Apostates, 1 Tim. 2. 18.

5. They are liable to that dreadfull sentence, Mat. 25. 41.

Obj. 1 Tim. 2. 4. Who will have all men to be saved.

Answ. That is, God would have some [k] of all sorts of men to be saved, so all men is taken, vers. 1. Let prayers be made for all men, that is, all manner of men, he instanceth in one kinde, (viz.) Kings. All is likewise here to be taken, not pro singulis generum, but pro generibus singulorum. So Austin expounded this place above a thousand yeares since. All manner of men of all Nations and qualities. All, in this place doth not signifie universally, every man in every age and condition, but All opposed to the Jewes onely, All indefinitely, and that in the times of the New Testament, of which the Apostle speaketh.

[k] Qui quosvis homines vult servari. God doth not will that simply every man should be saved, but all given to Christ, whom God doth call externally, them he doth seriously invite to come unto him, that they may be saved, and doth approve of their conversion, but doth not effectually move every particular man to beleeve. The Greek word here used answereth to Chaphets the Hebrew word used by Samuel, 1 Samuel 15. 20. David, Psalme 51. 21. Jeremy 9. 24. Ezekiel 33. 11. and signifies not onely to will, but also to agree to a thing and to be pleased.

Object. 2 Peter 3. 9. Not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance: Therefore there is not an Election of some, and Reprobation of others.

Answ. He speaks there only of the Elect; and he would have none of them to perish. He speaks that for the comfort of the godly, and includes himself amongst them, Long-suffering to us-ward: therefore he means those in the same condition with himself:

selfe. He shews why God stayes the execution of his wrath, because all his Elect are not gathered. See 1 *Pet.*2.8.

Consectaries of Gods Decree.

There is nothing doth more set out the glory, excellency, and sufficiency of God than his Decree. O the infinite depth of the wisdome of God, which hath foreseen, decreed, and determined with himself, the innumerable things that ever did or shall come to passe. We should not search into the depths of his counsels, Deut. 29. 29. but in all things professe our dependance on him, and refer all to his Decree, *Psal.*37.5.

Psal.115.3. & 135.6. Jam. 1.14.

They are justly blamed that ascribe any thing to chance, fate, fortune, or good luck, as also such as are impatient under any crosse.

Admiring the methods of Gods eternal Counsel, and the execution of it for the salvation of our souls, will be a great part of our work in Heaven.

Consectaries of Predestination. Ephes. 1.4. Prædestinatorum hæresis (inquit Sigebertus ad annum Christi 415.) hoc tempore cœpit serpere: qui ideo Prædestinati vocantur, quia de Prædestinatione & divina gratia disputantes asserebant, quod nec piè viventibus prosit bonorum operum labor, si à Deo ad mortem Prædestinati fuerint, nec impiis obsit quod improbè vivant, si à Deo Prædestinati fuerint ad vitam. Quæ assertio & bonos à bonis avocabat, & malos, ad mala provocabat. Gameto Collat. cum Tileno. Semipelagiani excogitarunt novam hæresim Prædestinatorum, de qua nemo ante Gennadium meminerat. Renati Devirai Præfat. ad Lupum Servatum. Vide plura ibid.

That is a desperate inference: If I be predestinated, I shall be saved, * though I neglect and scoff at sanctity. God hath predestinated the means as well as the end; he hath decreed us to be holy as well as happy, 2 Pet. 1. 3. Ephes. 1. 4. Christ laid down his life not onely to save us from the guilt of our sinnes, but to sanctifie us, Titus 2. 14. The Spirit of God is a Spirit of sanctification, 2 *Thess.*2.13. In good things the Devil strives to sever the means from the end; in evil, the end from the means. We must not reason whether we be predestinated, but use the means, prove our Election by our calling, we should judge of our predestination, not so much ascendendo, by prying into Gods secret Counsel, as descendendo, by searching our own hearts. It was good counsel that Cardinal Poole gave to one who asked him how he might most profitably read the Epistle to the Romans. He advised him first to read the twelfth Chapter to the end, and then the beginning of the Epistle to the twelfth Chapter. Because in the twelfth Chapter the Apostle falls on matter of duty and sanctification, which is the only way to attain to the knowledge of those great Mysteries handled in the beginning, of Predestination.

Take heed of abusing this Doctrine:

Consectaries of Gods Election and Reprobation. Austin and some others which have written largely of Election, write sparingly of Reprobation, because there appears more seeming offensive harshnesse in the Doctrine of Reprobation, than in that of Election; the first being known gives light to the other.

1. Quarrel not with Gods Justice, because he hath determined not to give grace to some, Rom. 9. 14. That any are saved, it is from Gods mercy, there can be no injustice in refusing, when it is the meer mercy of God to take any: as if of many Traitors the King spare some, and hang up the rest: neither have the Elect a just cause to glory, nor the Reprobate to complain; since undeserved grace is shewed to the one, due punishment inflicted on the other. It bewrayes no more want of mercy in God, that he takes but such, then it did want of power, because he made not many worlds, since the exercising of one and the other, is determined by his wisdome.

It were unjust (say the Polonian Churches in their Catechisme) to punish any one, because he hath not done that which by no means he could do. But when God punisheth the wicked, and those that are refractory to his Word, what doth he do else but punish those which do not do that which they cannot do? See more there, *cap.*10. of the same brun.

This Doctrine of Absolute Election is very comfortable and usefull,

Secondly, This may comfort the people of God, who may be certain of their Election and salvation, Rom. 8. 38, 39. Paul had not this by immediate Revelation, because he concludeth upon such arguments as are general to all the godly. See 1 John 3.14. Certainty of mans Election and salvation is not such as we have of Arts

Arts and Sciences, yet the truths of God are more to be adhered unto than any humane principle.

there inculcates it three times in one Chapter, Rom. 8. 33. It is absolute as it opposeth cause or not as it opposeth means. Licet Electio non sit conditionata, tamen per Electionem constituit Deus ut salus non contingeret adultis nisi sub conditione fidei. Twiss contra Corvinum. Negamus who are omnes decretum absolutum, quod respuat media & conditiones salutis & damnationis ex parte hominum. Asserimus decretum absolutum quod nullum motivum (ut loquuntur) admittat ex parte Dei. Non negamus fidem conditionem esse salutis: Asserimus verò fidem dari absque omni conditione. Kendalli oratio de doctrina Neopelagianâ.

Ephes. 1. 5, 6, 11. The Apostle condition in us,

Thirdly, Nor is it such as we have of doctrinal truths, we are not so perswaded of Gods favour in particular to us, as that there is a God, and that there is Jesus Christ, because the dogmatical truth is contained in the Scripture, the other is but a practical conclusion drawn from the General. 3. It is not such an Assurance as expelleth all doubting and wavering, Mark. 9. 24. yet doubting is a sinne, and we are to bewaile it: but the Papists teach doubting, and praise it under the name of humility, and say it keeps us from presumption. They say we can have but a conjectural and wavering knowledge of our salvation, justly therefore did Luther terme the Romish Doctrine concerning uncertainty of salvation, Non Doctrinam fidei, sed diffidentiæ, No Doctrine of faith, but distrust.

Fourthly, It is not such as presumption and carnal security, excluding all use of the means, Work out your salvation with fear; those which have been most perswaded of Gods love to them, have been most active for him: the love of Christ constraineth us.

It is the duty of Christians to make their Election sure by their calling, 2 Pet. 1. 10 Make it your main study: there is the Adverb of correction rather: you would rather look after other matters, but study this most.

Fifthly, It is more than probable, conjectural, or moral.

Sixthly, It is not of our own conscience and Spirit only, but inabled by the Spirit of God thus to conclude and determine, Rom. 8. The Spirit witnesseth with our spirit.

Those that finde this in themselves should feed upon this eternal comfort, it is Absolute, Eternal, Immutable, nothing shall oppose it, who shall lay any thing to the Elect? It is full of love and grace. We may make our Election sure by our calling, Rom. 8. 29, 30. and our effectual calling by two things:

1. By a new light.

2. A new life, 2 Cor. 4. 5. 1 Pet. 2. 9. John 12. 36. Ephes. 5. 8.

We have a new knowledge wrought in us of our selves, we see our misery by sin, and our inability to help our selves, Rom. 2. 23.

2. Of God, God in Jesus Christ is discovered to us, 2 Pet. 1. 3. We see our need of Christ, and know him to be a Mediatour, who must reconcile God and us.

3. A new life is wrought in us, Ephes. 2. 1.

We now die to sin, and live to God:

1. By faith, Revelat. 17. 4. These three are put together, faithfull, chosen and called.

2. By new obedience.

1. The Apostles exhortation shews it is a thing possible.

2. It is necessary, of great concernment, use all diligence.

3. It is profitable, Such shall never fall utterly, an entrance shall be ministred unto them abundantly into the everlasting Kingdome of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

First, It is every mans duty to give diligence to make his Election sure, both for the glory of God, and the comfort of his soul, but in Gods way, and according to his Ordinance, first Calling, then Election.

Secondly, When he hath used his utmost diligence, if he cannot make it sure, it is his misery, not his sin.

Thirdly, When the Spirit of God reveales to a man either the truth of his own graces, or else Gods eternal love to him, then a man is bound to believe it. It is,

1. A certain Assurance,

2. Secret, Revel. 2. 17.

3. Exceeding sweet, Rejoyce in that your names are written in the book of life.

4. It is an imperfect assurance, the assurance of faith, not of sight, it may be eclipsed.

Chap. II.

2. The Execution of Gods Decree.

GOD executes his Decree by Actions, Creation and Providence.

2. Gods external works. Psal. 33.6. Heb. 10.13.

Gods works are in time:
1. Past, Creation of all things.
2. Present, Government and preservation.

Creation is taken:

1. Strictly, When God makes any creature of nothing, meerly of nothing, not as if nothing were the matter, but the term; so the souls of men, and Angels are created of nothing.

2. Largely, when of some prejacent matter, but very unfit and indisposed, a creature is made, as Adam of the earth.

[a] Creatio est actio Dei externa, quæ in principio temporis, seu dierum spatio, mundum produxit solo voluntatis suæ imperio, ad nominis sui gloriam. Wendelinus.

[a] Creation is the action of God, whereby out of nothing he brought forth nature it self, and all things in nature, both substances and accidents, in and with the substances, and finished them in the space of six dayes, both to his own glory and the salvation of the Elect.

Creation is a work of God, wherein in the beginning of time, he did by the word of his mouth, make all things of nothing exceeding good, in six dayes, for his glory.

Or, It is an action whereby God the Father by his Word and holy Spirit made all things exceeding good for the glory of his Name.

Or thus, Creation is a transient or external action of God, whereby in the beginning He made the world by a meer command out of his own free-will in six days space to the glory of his Name.

1. An action] not a motion or change; motion argueth some succession, but in the things created, the fieri & factum esse is all one, nor is it a change, because that supposeth some alteration in the Agent.

2. Transient] It passeth from the Agent to the thing created, whereas in immanent actions, as Gods Will, Decrees, and personal Actions, they abide in himself.

Gen. 1.1. and the beginning of the Apostles Creed. The Father is said to work all things by his Word and Spirit, not as by an instrument, but as by a principal efficient of the same substance, and equal with himself. Vide Ludov. Viv. de veritate Fidei Christianæ, l.1. c.9.

3. Of God,] The efficient cause of all things is God the Father, Sonne and holy Ghost. Creation is the proper work of God alone, so that he is God which created the world, and he created the world who is God, Jer. 10. 11. It is without controversie, that the work of Creation agrees to God the Father, the same is expresly given to the Sonne, John 1. 3. Colos. 1. 16. and to the holy Ghost also, Psalm 33. 6. He brooded on the waters, Gen. 1. 1, 2. Sometimes it is ascribed to all the three Persons joyntly, Let us make man, Gen. 1. the Father speaks to the Son and Spirit.

Aquinas parte prima Qu. 44. Artic. 1. hath this Question, Utrum sit necessarium omne id esse creatum à Deo? The Schoolmen much dispute, Whether God may not give a creating power to a creature? and answer, No creature can be so elevated, as to concur to the execution of an Almighty Act.

It is a Maxim in the Schools, Instrumentum creationis creatura esse non potest; therefore it is a good argument against the Arians, That Christ is no creature, because he is a Creator. Mr Hardy his Sermon before the Lords on Isa. 57. 19. See more there.

In Scripture it is alwayes made the work of God, Genes. 1. 1. Job 9. 8. Prov. 16. 4. Psalm 33. 6, 8, 9. Creation is an act of Omnipotency. The Apostles when they dealt with the Heathens, urged the works of creation, Acts 14. 16. & 7. 26. Rom. 1. 19, 20.

Plus apud me valent illa quinque verba: In principio creavit Deus cœlum & terram quam omnia Aristotelis cæterorumque Philosophorum argumenta quibus docent mundum carere initio. Erasm. Epist. Pellicano l. 19.

4. In

4. In the beginning] By the Scripture it is a matter of faith to hold, that the world was not from all eternity; in the beginning notes not that there was time firſt, and then God created the world (for time is a creature and concreated) but it denotes order, that is, at firſt.

5. The world] that is, the Heaven and Earth, and all things contained in them, Acts 4.4. & 14.15. & 17.24. Κόσμος, that well-ordered, decent, beautifull and comely frame of Heaven and Earth. John 1.10. & 16.3. Rom.1.20. Epheſ.1.4. Mundus Latinis appellatur.

6. By his meer command] as appears *Gen.*1. Let there be light, let there be Heavens, which argues his Omnipotency.

7. Out of his own free-will] For God did not need the world, and therefore he created it no ſooner. He was happy enough in himſelf without men or Angels, Pſal. 115.5. *Prov.*8.30. Pſal.33.9.

8. The final cauſe, To the glory of his Name, Rom.2.20. Three Attributes eſpecially manifeſt themſelves in this work of Creation, Gods Power, Wiſdome, Goodneſſe; his Power in that he made all things by a word, and of nothing, Iſa. 40.16. his Wiſdome is ſeen in the order and variety of his works, Pſalm 136.5. and their exceeding wonderfull and particular uſes; his Goodneſſe, in that he would communicate being to the creatures.

Plutarch writeth, That the old Philoſophers, the ancienteſt Divines amongſt the Pagans, were wont to deſcribe pourtrayed out in ſtone, wood, and other matters, the Images of their gods, with muſical Inſtruments in their hands, not that they would teach others, or did believe it themſelves, that the gods were Fidlers or Pipers, or uſed to ſolace themſelves with Lute or Violl, but becauſe they held nothing more fit or anſwering to the nature of God, than to do all things in ſweet harmony and proportion; which the Wiſeman calleth in number, in meaſure, and in weight. Mountague againſt *Seld.c.*1.

The work of Creation, (ſay ſome [b]) is ſet out generally in a general propoſition, In the beginning [c] God created the Heavens and the Earth; which propoſition he after explains by its parts.

[b] Paræus, Petavius, & alii. Act.17.24. Col.1.16.

That the world was not from Eternity, but was made by God, theſe arguments may perſwade.

Firſt, and principally, Faith, Hebr. 11.3. which is grounded upon divers places of Scripture, [d] as the firſt and ſecond Chapters of Geneſis, and 38, and 39 Chapters of Job, and ſome Pſalms almoſt whole, as 104, and 136. This alſo is the firſt Article of our Creed, That the world was created in time by God. The Apoſtle Paul, Act.14.15. & 17.24,28. doth point out God to the Heathen by this work above others.

[c] Dubitari non poteſt primum fidei articulum, quo credimus in Deum creatorem Cœli & terræ, extra-ſtum eſſe ex hoc Moſis aphoriſmo. Paræus.

Prov.8.23. John 17.24. Epheſ.1.4. 1 Pet.1.20. Vide Gatakeri adverſaria Miſcel. lib. 2. cap. 2. [d] Quamvis naturali lumine demonſtrari poſſet mundum à Deo fuiſſe conditum, tamen reſte Auguſtinus de Civit. Dei. lib. 11. *cap.*4. Quod Deus mundum fecerit, nulli rutius credimus quam ipſi Deo. Si mundus ſit opus Dei, neceſſe eſt ut Creator ejus ſit æternus, Rom.1.26. aliquin fuiſſet ipſe factus, & conſequenter pars mundi. Nam per mundum intelligimus compagem ſive aggregationem rerum creatarum. Twiſſ. contra Corvinum, *cap.*6. *Sect.*2. Nobis probabilior videtur eorum ſententia qui dicunt Hominem poſſe naturali lumine inveſtigare Creationem mundi. Baronii Metaphyſica Generalis, Sect. 8. *Diſput.*1. Vide plura ibid.

We can learn but little from Philoſophers, even concerning Creation it ſelf, (the only Article of the Creed which they ſpeak fully too) unacquainted with Scripture. D[r] Arrowſmiths Chain of Principles, Aph.5.Exercit.4.

The Doctrine of Creation is a mixt principle, partly diſcovered by nature, and chiefly in the Word. Conſider it, 1. Ex parte rei, ſo the thing it ſelf was known to the Heathens. 2. Ex parte modi, faith only teacheth what it is: the manner and circumſtances of the Creation, how and wherefore the world was made, was wholly unknown to them, becauſe theſe things are not matters of ſenſe, but depend on the limitation of Gods will; nor matters of reaſon, but depend on the exuberancy of his power.

The ſame individual aſſent to the ſame truth, may be both Cogbitio Scientiæ, and Cognitio Fidei. By Faith we know that the worlds were made, and aſſent to it. And by demonstrations it may be proved, That the world was made; and these also are sufficient to perswade assent. Now we from both grounds (joyntly) assent to this Proposition, that the world was made. The which Assent in respect of the Ground (Propter evidentiam rei) is an assent of Science or natural Knowledge. In regard of the other ground (Propter authoritatem dicentis) is an assent of Faith, or supernatural knowledge. Dr Wallis Truth tried, Chap. 8.

An mundus ab æterno creari, adeoque ab æterno esse potuerint; Inter Theologos controversum est. Scotus, Durandus, Thomas, & alii Scholastici, quibus recentiores accedunt, Gregorius de Valentia, & Suarez, affirmativam amplectuntur. Contra vero negativam, Ambrosius, Basilius, Augustinus cum Scholasticis nonnullis, quibus quoque Zanchius, Keckermannus, & Lutherani quoque nonnulli accedunt; quibus & nos suffragamur. Wendelini Christiana Theol. Systema Maius *l.*1. *c.*5. Vide Baronii *Metaphys. Gen. Sect.*8. Disput. 1. Et Petav. *de Deo. Deique proprie. l.*3. *c.*7.

Secondly, and probably, the light of Nature shining in these reasons:

1. The original of Nations laid down by Moses, Gen. 10. and elsewhere, which could not be fained by him, since some memory of them was then extant among many, which yet in progresse of time was extinguished.

2. The beginning of Arts, the first inventers whereof are known, and in what time they flourished: for it is not probable that so many ages before, mankinde lived without Arts, and that in these last times they were all both invented and perfected.

Mr Pemble in his Treatise of the providence of God.

3. The newnesse of all Heathenish Histories, the ancientest of which tell of nothing before Noah's flood, or the beginning of the Assyrian Empire under Ninus. The holy History it self is onely of four thousand yeares, or thereabout, which nevertheless is the greatest Monument of Antiquity. Now it would be a most unworthy reproach and contumely cast upon all those men who had lived so many infinite ages ago, to say they were so ignorant that they could not, or so sloathfull that they would not deliver in writing what was done in their times.

Vide Ludov. Viv. *de veritate Fidei Christianæ. lib.*1. cap. 20.

4. The decay of mans body and age, which from a great strength, quantity, bignesse and time of life, is now come down to a narrow scantling, which if it had decreased so always in infinite ages, it would by this time have been brought almost to nothing.

August. *de Civitate Dei. l.*12. c. 9. Plin. *l.*7. *c.*16. Aul. Gell. *l.*3. *c.*15. Juven. Sat. 13.

5. The certain series and order of causes and impossibility of their proceeding in infinitum: for it must needs be that there should be one first, which is the universal cause: but first it is not unlesse it be One, nor One except it be God.

See the several reasons urged by the Philosophers and their followers, to prove the Eternity of the world, answered by Raymundus in his *Pugio Fidei adversus Judæos parte prima, c.*7,8,9,10,11. See also *ibid. c.*12,13,14.

6. As a thing is, so it workes, but God doth not depend upon another in his being, therefore neither in working doth he require a pre-existent matter.

7. Art presupposeth Nature, and Nature matter; but God in working is a more excellent cause than Art or Nature; therefore presupposeth nothing in working.

8. The first cause, viz. God is Infinite, therefore he can doe whatsoever implyeth not a contradiction; but the Creation of things in time implieth it not.

Lactantius. Peter saith it three times in one Chapter, 2 Pet. 3.7,10, 12.

9. Whatsoever perisheth hath a beginning: the world doth perish, because all its parts decay, and are subject to corruption, therefore the whole. The Angels and soule of man are changeable by nature, as appears by the fall of the Devil and mans fall.

That the World is so compounded

10. Either the world was eternal, or had a beginning: It could not be eternal:

1. Because it is compounded of divers parts, and those in nature contrary one to another, which could not meet together in that order themselves, therefore it was made by some-what, and then either by it self, which could not be: for that which makes, is before that which is made; and the same thing cannot be before it self, or else it was made by some creature, which could not be, because that is but a part of the whole, and therefore meaner than it considered as whole, and not able to make it.

was

our senses tell us, seeing some things are heavy, some light, some hot, some cold, and one of these is apt to destroy another, as is the nature of contraries

2. The world could not be eternal, because it is limited in respect of place, quantity, power, therefore it is not infinite in time. That which is eternal is the first thing, and consequently the best, therefore God is only so, having no parts, not being subject to corruption.

What is eternal, is without beginning, mutation, succession, or end; so onely God. See Dr Hackwells Apology of Gods providence, pag. 39, 46. and Dr Pearsons Exposition of the Creed, Article first, pag. 93. to 106. De qua re inter duos Rabbinos est Controversia, R. Eliezer, & R. Josue; altero mundum in Martio; altero in Septembri contendente conditum esse. Quod quia nobis Scriptura non exprimit, tanquam curiosum relinquamus. Mercer. If the question were asked indefinitely, Whether the world began in the Spring, the Summer, the Winter, or the Autumn? The answer must be, That it began in all. For so soon as the Sunne set forth in its motion, the seasons immediately grew necessary to several portions of the Sphere, so divided among the parts of the Earth, that all had every one of these, and each one or other at the same time. Gregory de Æris & Epochis. Julius Scaliger saith, Mundum primo vere natum sapientes autumant, & exclere par est. So the most part maintain, and for the best reasons. And if it were not otherwise evident, Nature it self is very convincing, whose Revolutions begin and end in the Vernal Æquinox. Id. ibid. Mundi, adeoque Anni primi initium circa vernum æquinoctium fuisse non dubito. Unde Astronomi omnes cœlestium motuum initia a primo Arietis puncto sumpserunt. Hac opinio firmata est omnium Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum consensu, atque veterum Theologorum calculo comprobata. Simf. Paraf. ad Chron. Cathol. cap. 6. Vide plura ibid. Et Voet. Thes. de Creatione partem secundam, pag. 587, 588, 589, 590. Et Voffii Rat. Chronol. Dissertat. 11. cap. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7. Et Petav. De Doctrina Temporum, l. 9. c. 6. Et Hotting. Hist. Creat. Examen, Quæst. 5.

By these reasons it is evinced, That the world is not eternal, but was created by the chief Work-man of all things in time. But concerning the time of the yeer, when the world was made, whether in Summer, Autumn, or the Spring, we will not raise any curious and unprofitable Questions. See Sarsans Chronologia vapulans, pag. 123. B. Ushers Annals, and Needler on Gen. 1. 6. Let it suffice to know, that it was created by God in the beginning, Gen. 1. 1. that is, in the beginning of time, or rather together with time, thus in time; for the instant and moment of Creation was the beginning of all following, but not the end of precedent time.

Hitherto concerning the efficient cause, there followeth the matter of Creation.

Of the first and immediate Creation: there was no [e] matter at all, the Divine power drew out Nature it self, not out of any pre-existent matter, but out of meer nothing.

[e] This is a kind of contradiction in Logick, The matter was no matter, but true in Divinity.

Materiam nisi quæreres, nulla fuit.
Nothing but nothing had the Lord Almighty,
Whereof, wherewith, whereby to build this City. Silvester.

Nothing negatively, a thing that never had a being. When we say, God made the world out of nothing, our meaning is not, that nothing was the matter whereof the world was made; but onely this it was the Terminus à quo, non materia ex qua. Commune axioma illud Philosophorum placitum ex nihilo nihil fit, ordinaria rerum corporearum conflatarum & humanis artificiis aptari potest: sed Creationi (quam ignorant) & divinæ potentiæ opponi nequit. Gomarus De Provid. Dei. c. 7.

Thus were created all incorporeal and immaterial Substances, the Angels, the reasonable soul, and the highest Heaven (as some say) for those things which are void of matter, cannot be framed but of matter.

God made some things immediately perfect, as the Angels and highest Heavens, which were made the first day; other things he made by degrees, as the inferiour Creatures.

2. The

2. The mediate Creation is, when a thing is brought forth of a præexistent matter, yet so rude and indisposed, that it may be accounted for nothing: so Adams body was created of the dust (or slime) of the Earth, Gen. 2. 7. Beasts and birds out of the Earth, Gen. 1. 19. which God did meerly of his good pleasure, no necessity compelling him, nor the matter he took any way helping him in working; it was nothing privatively, as they call it.

Divines observe four things in Gods Creation:

1. His Command; whereby he said, Let there be light, and there was light. Gods words are things.

2. His Approbation; whereby all things are acknowledged as good. God saw they were good. They were so in respect of their own kind and nature. 2. In respect of the Universe, that is, apt for the end [f] for which they were made, free from all defect and deformity. God made all the creatures to be serviceable one to another, especially to man, 1 Tim. 4. 4. I cannot tell by what Logick we call a Toad, a Bear, or an Elephant ugly, they being created in those outward shapes and figures, which best expresse those actions of their inward forms. And having past that general visitation of God, who saw that all that he had made was good, that is, conformable to his will, which abhors deformity, and is the rule of order and beauty. Dr Browns Religio Medici.

[f] Bonitas rei creatæ est illa perfectio, qua apta fit ad usum cui inservit. Amesius. Hæc bonitas duplex est, 1. Generalis omnium creaturarum, viz. Integritas & Perfectio omnium donorum & virium naturalium, quarum beneficio suas operationes exercere possunt conformiter ad Divinam Voluntatem & ordinate ad proprios fines. 2. Specialis, creaturæ rationalis, Angelorum & hominum; qui donis supernaturalibus ornati sunt, quæ vocantur uno nomine sanctitas sive Imago Dei. Gen. 1. 26.

3. Ordination and Appointment, whereby he assigned unto all creatures their use, Jer. 52. 15. He made nothing in vain.

4. A Sanction of a Law and Decree which the creatures must alwayes observe, called a Covenant with day and night.

Hitherto of the efficient cause and the matter: there followeth the form of Creation, which may be considered either in respect of God, or in respect of the things created.

1. The manner of Creation in respect of God is this, He did not create the world by a necessity of nature, but according to the Eternal and Immutable; yet most free decree of his will.

The manner of Gods producing all things, by the word of his mouth, he spake not so many audible words, Let there be light; this word was Nutus Dei, an actual putting out of the will of God.

2. By his word and beck alone, without any change, wearinesse or toil, he made and established all things.

The form of Creation in respect of the things created, is two-fold:

1. Internal (viz.) the very force and power of nature imprinted by God both in all things in a common manner and respect, and in the several kinds according to the particular essence and condition of every thing, by which they are made powerfull to proper or common operations.

2. The external forme is two-fold, partly a suddain and momentary production of all things; partly, a most beautifull disposing and excellent order of all things produced, both in themselves, and among one another, Gen. 1. 3.

Mr Pemble, ubi supra.

There is order:

1. In making them: In simple things, as the Elements; God began with those that are most perfect, the light or fire, the purest creature, Psalm 104. 2. and then went on to the lesse perfect, in mixt bodies, he began with things more imperfect, first made things that have being and no life, then plants, after beasts and men.

2. In disposing all things in their proper places for the beauty and service of the whole, the beasts in the earth, the fishes more in number and greater in bulk in the Sea.

Sea. God could have created them all at once, but he made them in the ſpace of ſix [g] dayes, that he might ſhew,

[g] That opinion of Auguſtin, that God made all things in a moment, and diſtributed them into dayes, becauſe of our better underſtanding, is exploded by all. Although Creation was done in a moment, in reſpect of the particular bodies ſeverally conſidered, yet in reſpect of all, it was not perfected in an inſtant, but in the ſpace of ſix dayes; which ſpaces of dayes, note not a temporal ſucceſſion of the ſame, but the order of divers works. Some alledge, Gen. 2. 4. but it is not unuſual in the Scripture to comprehend many dayes under the name of one. Vide Aquin. part. 1. Quæſt. 74. Art. 2.

1. His power in producing whatſoever effects he would without their general cauſes, while he enlightned the world, made the earth fruitfull, and brought plants out of it, before the Sun and Moon were created.

2. His goodneſſe, and liberality, while he provides for his creatures not yet made, and brings the living creatures into the Earth filled with plants and nouriſhment, men into a world abundantly furniſhed with all things for neceſſity and delight.

3. That we might thereby more eaſily conceive, that the world was not made confuſedly or by chance, but orderly, and by counſel, and might not perfunctorily but diligently conſider the works of Creation. How ſhould we deliberate in our actions [h] which are ſubject to imperfection? ſince it pleaſed God not out of need to take leiſure.

[h] Feſtina lentè.

So much for the form of Creation, there remains in the laſt place the End, which is two-fold:

Firſt, The laſt and chiefeſt, the glory of God the Creator, in manifeſting his Goodneſſe, Power and Wiſdom, which Excellencies of God ſhining forth in the exiſtence, order and wonderfull workmanſhip of all creatures, and in the wiſe Government and adminiſtration of them, God would have acknowledged and praiſed by reaſonable creatures, Pſal. 19. 1. & 10. 24. Prov. 16. 5. Iſa. 40. 26. Rom. 1. 20.

Magnitudo creaturarum ducit nos ad Dei potentiam: Ordo verò, & pulchritudo ad ejus ſapientiam: Bonitas autem, gubernatio atque conſervatio, ad benignitatem. Raymund. Pug. adverſ. Jud. parte 3. Diſt. 1. cap. 6.

Secondly, The next End for the work it ſelf, that all things ſhould ſerve man, and be uſefull to him, eſpecially to further the ſalvation of the Elect, Gen. 1. 20. Pſ. 8. 4, 5, 6. 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22.

It ſerves to confute ſundry errours:

Conſectaries from Creation in general.

1. The Arians, which ſaid the world was made by Chriſt, as the inſtrument and ſecondary cauſe; that place Rom. 11. 36. doth not prove an inequality of perſons.

2. The Manichees, which held two beginnings contrary to themſelves, God the Author of good things, and the Devil the author of evil; this is blaſphemy againſt God, and is contrary to what Moſes ſaith, Gen. 1. 31.

3. Ariſtotle, that held the world was eternal (as Ludov. Viv. de verit. fidei Chriſt. l. 1. c. 10. ſaith) though ſome [i] ſay he did not. Yet lib. 1. de Cœlo cap. 10. he confeſſeth it the general opinion that the world was made: which was ſo ancient a Tradition of all the firſt Philoſophers, that from Linus, Muſæus, Orpheus, Homer, Heſiod, and the reſt, they all mentioned the original of the world, entitling their books, Κοσμογονία or Θεογονία, or the like. Pearſons Expoſition of the Creed, Article 1. pag. 96.

[i] Albertus Magnus, Et eo major diſcipulus, Thomas Aquinas.

Democritus who held that the world was made by a caſual concourſe of Atomes, and that there were infinite worlds, when the Scripture ſpeaketh but of one; God ſent his Sonne into the world, not worlds. See the Diſcovery of the World in the Moon, Propoſit. 2. M[r] Roſſe oppoſeth thoſe Atomes Refutat. of D[r] Browns Vulgar Errours, cap. 17. Ubi ſunt, aut unde iſta corpuſcula, cur illa nemo prater

Perſuaſum nobis cupiverunt non tam propoſitum Ariſtoteli fuiſſe æternitatem mundi arrodunmodis ac invitis rationibus comprobare quam illud ſolum oſtendere, mundum non eſſe genitum, hoc eſt, non incepiſſe per motum, qua Philoſophorum priorum ſententia erat. Voſſius in Theſibus de Creatione. Vide plura ibid. Et Hackwell Apolog. pag. 442, 443, 444. Vide Raymundi Pugionem Fidei part. 1. cap. 14.

mum Leucippum somniavit, à quo Democritus eruditus, hæreditatem stultitiæ reliquit Epicuro. Lactant. Divin. Instit. lib. 3. de falsa sapientia, pag. 190. Vide plura ibid. & 191.

Galen, who having read the fifth Chapter of Genesis, said, That Moses said much, but proved little.

Origen, who perverted this story of the Creation of the world delivered by Moses, by his Allegories. Against whom Epiphanius disputes in his 64th hereſie, and much more copiously in Ancorato, where he shews that Origen applied to a spiritual sense, what is written in the beginning of Genesis, of Paradise, and the procreation of the first man, and other things of that nature; whereas there is mention only of corporeal things in that whole relation. Vide Petavium de opificio sex dierum. l. 2. c. 5.

Secondly, It condemns:

1. Those which set their affections on the creature: If there be beauty in that, what is in the Creator?

2. Those that abuse the creatures by cruelty, or pretended Lordship.

3. Those which mock at the parts of any man; if born lame or deformed; this is to despise the Workman, to murmur at the Potter.

Jer. 27. 5. & 45. 4. Rom. 9. 21.

Thirdly, It shews that God hath first, chief, absolute and perpetual Sovereignty over all his creatures; so that he can use, command, and do with them as in equity seems good to his heavenly wisdom.

See Act. 17. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28.

Fourthly, When we behold the Heavens, the Earth, Air, and Sea, how they are filled, what use and commodities they have, we should contemplate God in those things we see with our eyes. 2. We should learne what a one God is.

1. Eternal, He that made Heaven and Earth is ancienter than both.

He bounds the Sea with his Word onely; God instanceth in the work of Creation to Job, to shew his power.

2. Almighty; Great works cannot be brought to passe without great strength: he must needs be infinite in Power, which made Heaven and Earth, and hangs the Earth as a Ball, without any pillar to support it.

3. Most Wise; strength separated from wisdom, is little worth: God knows all things, the nature of the Heavens, Earth, Water perfectly; because he put such a nature into them: Tell your selves, that God is a wise understanding Essence, can order all to the best.

4. Exceeding Good; He hath infused goodnesse into the Heavens, Waters, Earth, they are helpfull and serviceable to man: how much more goodness is there in God, He is good, and doth good, Psal. 119.

His Wisdome shines in the exquisite workmanship, variety, order, and subordination of them one to the service of another.

5. See his Love in making man[k] best of the creatures here below: we should honour God in our minds, account him the chiefest and only good, and his favour the chiefest felicity, bring our wils to long after him, to desire him above all other things, chusing him as our happinesse, loving him, and desiring to enjoy him fully: Learn to fear him above all, not daring to offend him, Acts 4. 24. and obey and please him; what more agreeable to reason, than that the Maker of all should be Ruler of all? We are more his, than a child his Parents, a servant his Masters. We [k] Man was magnified in Creation, in being made so excellent a Creature, Psal. 8. 5. and in having so many excellent creatures made for him, Psalm 8. 3, 6, 7, 8.

Luther in his Comment upon Magnificat, relates a Story of two Bishops, that riding to the Council of Constance, and espying by the way a poor Countreyman weeping, turned toward him, asked him, Why he wept? he answered, I weep to see this Toad (that lay upon the ground before him) because I never blessed God sufficiently, for that he made me so beautifull a creature, and not so ugly as that Toad: at which one of the Cardinals admired, and said that speech of Austins was true, Surgunt indocti & cœlum rapiunt, & nos cum doctrinis nostris sine corde, ecce ubi volutamur in carne & sanguine? But may it not be said of this speech (though the intention were good) what Lactantius wittily saith of Plato's thanking Nature, that he was a man rather than a beast, a male rather than a female, a Grecian rather than a Barbarian, an Athenian, and born in the times of Socrates? Ego plane contenderim, unquam tricquam dictum esse in rebus humanis delirius. Quasi vero si aut Barbarus, aut mulier, aut ignobilis denique natus esset, idem ipse Plato esset, ac non ipsum illud, quod natum fuisset. Lactant. Div. Instit. de fals. sapient. l. 3.

should

ſhould alſo acknowledge that he made us, Pſalm 100. and praiſe him. Gods great works call for great praiſe: We ſhould honour him with our tongues, and ſpeak good of his Name, Pſal. 19.2. The Heavens declare the glory of God, i.e. give occaſion to man of declaring it.

It is our duty to honour God as a Creator, Eccleſ. 12.1. other creatures were made by him, and for him; but we are living reaſonable creatures, have underſtandings to know him, and affections to fear him, he hath a right to us. It is the property of Gods children to be ſenſible of this obligation, Pſal. 100.3. a day of account alſo will come, when he will ask us, what ſhare he had in our time? whether we have lived for him, or our ſelves?

Fifthly, This is a comfort to thoſe who acknowledge God to be ſuch a one as he is. Is not he rich enough to maintain them? Wiſe enough to direct them? Strong enough to protect them? If thou want goodneſs, he can create in thee a new heart; it may comfort the godly in regard of the Reſurrection; God can raiſe them up at the laſt day.

There are ſpecial occaſions when we ſhould think of the works of Creation. 1. When we are not affected with the majeſty and glory of God, let us ſee his Excellencies in the creatures, Pſalm 104.1. 2. When we are haunted with the thoughts of Atheiſm, the world could not make it ſelf, that which is ſupported by another, muſt needs be framed by another. 3. When we doubt of the promiſes of God, becauſe of appearances to the contrary, Iſa. 51.6. & 46.11,12. Pſal. 124.1. 4. When our hearts doubt in reſpect of our proviſion, Mat. 6.25,26. 5. When we would greaten the priviledges of our Covenant-intereſt, Jon. 1.9. 1 Cor. 3.22,23. Marks to try when we meditate fruitfully of the creatures: 1. Then our hearts will be more apt to praiſe the Lord, Rev. 4.11. 2. Then the heart will be drawn off from the creatures to God. 3. There will be a greater fear of God, Jer. 5.22,24. 4. There will be more love to God for all his kindneſſe, and more obedience to him; what intereſt hath the Lord in you, who made you out of nothing, and ſuſtains you by his Providence? and you will truſt in him more, 1 Pet. 4.19.

Sixthly, It is a great terrour to the wicked, which do not fear but deſpiſe him; God will hate, deſpiſe and deſtroy them: God can do it; he made Heaven and Earth, and he will do it, becauſe he is true, he hath threatned it; Oh the miſery of that man which hath him for his enemy!

Iſa. 17.11.

Seventhly, We may learn from all the creatures in general:

1. To bewail our Rebellion againſt God, which all of them reprove, for they all ſtand in their kind and ſtation in which God ſet them at firſt. The Sun rejoyceth to run his courſe: the Sea keepeth her bounds: the Earth ſtands upon her foundation: the Heavens keep their motion, and declare Gods glory; the very Winds and Seas obey him.

2. All of them teach[1] the inviſible things of God, Rom. 1.20. as was beforeſhewed.

[1] He that ſtudies the creature much, ſhall finde much of God, and of himſelf. Some conceive Iſaac Gen. 24.63. ſtudied the Book of the creatures.

Eighthly, We ſhould make a right uſe of the creatures: uſe them,

1. Devoutly, 1 Tim. 4.5. in Faith, Rom. 14.14. & ult. with prayer and thankſgiving, Mat. 15.36. Acts 27.35.

2. Soberly, 1 Cor. 10.31.

3. Thankfully, 1 Tim. 4.4.

Having handled the works of Creation in general, I now proceed according to Moſes his Method, to a more particular enarration of each dayes work.

The whole firſt Chapter of Geneſis may be thus divided:

1. The Author of the worlds Creation, God.

2. The Work.

3. The Approbation of it.

Verſe 1. In the beginning of time, or being, therefore the World was not eternal.

John begins ſo, and took it hence: But beginning there may mean from Eternity: or as here, Chriſt did not begin then, but was then, Prov. 8.22.

Bara Elohim, Gods Created a. That difference between the Noun Plural, and Verb Singular (saith Boot) signifieth not the mystery of the Trinity, but is an Idiotism of the Hebrew Tongue, in which such Enallages are frequent, as Numb. 32.25. Most of our men take the joyning of a Singular Verb with the Plural Elohim, for a mysteal expressing the holy Trinity. But the Jewish Grammarians make it an Enallage of number, chiefly to expresse excellency in the Persons, to whom it is referr'd. Buxtorf Titles of Honour, part. 1. chap. 6. However, there is no difference in the thing it self; for the Name of Gods being taken here essentially, (not personally) is common to the three Persons; Gods created, is as much as the Father, the Sonne and holy Ghost created; for elsewhere it is manifest from Scripture, that not onely the Father, but the Sonne and holy Ghost also created the world.

a Aliis Scripturæ locis apertiùs & expressiùs potest Trinitas confirmari, & efficacius adversùm Judæos est pugnandum ne nos illis ridiculos præbeamus linguarum imperitos. Mercer. in loc.

Ego cum Calvino, Mercero, & aliis, in eo resisto, ex sola voce Elohim terminationis pluralis conjuncta cum verbo singulari non posse solidum duci argumentum pro tanto mysterio, quia rationes allata mihi videntur aliis adductis pro sententiâ contrariâ præponderare. Etsi existimem laudandum esse pium illorum studium, qui aliter sentiunt, & ex hoc loco sic intellecto mysterium Trinitatis probare conantur. Sed quia non agitur de intentione eorum, quam piam & bonam censemus, verùm de Moſis proposito in hujus vocis usu, missa eorum intentione, rem ipsam in se ballantes, judicamus solidiora consectanda esse argumenta, quam quæ à vocula aut constructione aliqua grammatica deducuntur, quam Judæis & hæreticis præcisè sit eludere, & quasi de re ipsâ triumphare, ex talium argumentorum refutatione gloriari. Rivetus in loc. Vide Galatin. de Arcanis Cathol. veritat. lib. 2. cap. 9. Pharus Vet. Teſt. Sect. 8. Capel. Diatrib. de nomine Elohim, c. 7. & 11. Non puto argumentum esse admodum solidum; Siquidem Scriptura consuetudo id habere videtur, ut nomina illustrium personarum ponantur in numero multitudinis, licet verba retineant numerum singularem. Quam consuetudinem non Itali ex parte imitamur, dum viris gravibus non dicimus, Tu, sed Vos: licet unum, non multos alloquamur. Bellarm. de Christo l. 2. c. 5. Vide plura ibid.

Created,] signifieth an act of infinite power, and is not communicable to any creature, i. Ex nihilo fecit, & quidem potentissimè ac magnificentissimè. Junius.

Per Cœlos intelligendum esse statuitur omne quod in Cœlo supra lunam est: per terram verò, omne quod in terra infra lunam est, ita ut hisce duobus comprehendatur Creatio universi mundi. Menasseh Ben Israel Problem. 23. de Creatione.

Heaven and Earth.] In the first day were created Heaven and Earth, as it were the foundation and roof of the building, Psalm 104. 5. Esay 40. 21, 22.

Some say the Heaven of the blessed is an uncreated place; God onely is the objective happinesse of Heaven, the subjective happinesse, or place where we enjoy this happinesse, is Heaven. Others say, it was made in the second day, when the Firmament was created.

The work of the first day, was

1. Heaven, Gen. 1. 1. under which name are comprehended partly the Empyrean first and immoveable Heaven, which is called in Scripture, the third Heaven, and Heaven of Heavens, Ephes. 4. 10. 2 Chron. 6. 18. Acts 1. 11. and partly the celestial Spheres, which it is probable were made the first day; but without those lights of the Stars, with which at length in the fourth day, they were adorned: The Hebrew word for Heaven being of the Dual number, may imply both. The heavenly Intelligences or Angels, the Inhabitants of the invisible Heaven were then made, as is probable, saith Chemnitius. Vide Hotting. Hist. Creat. Examen. Quæst. 17, 18.

Cælum, id est, extimum illum hujus universitatis ambitum cum superi cœlestibus incolis illius & spiritualibus formis atque intelligentiis, Gen. 2. 1, Job 38. 7. Jun. in loc. Piscator Expos. Symboli saith, The Angels were made on the second day with Heaven in which they live. He saith, they were not created the first day, then onely the confused Masse which prophane Writers name the Chaos, and light were created, but they were created before the third day, when the Earth was founded, Job 38. 4. therefore they were created the second day.

2. The four first simple things or elements, as some think, Earth, Water, Aire, Fire, and the fitting of them for use, by making day and night. Though others others hold, That the Air and Fire are comprehended under the Firmament, the work of the second day. For the Earth, there is He emphatical in that Earth which we dwell in, though then unpolished. The Earth is described in the second verse; In that it was without forme and void, deformity, and Vacuity in the original; without inhabitants, and without Ornament, the Earth and Waters were joyned together among themselves, the waters at first did encompasse and cover the Earth round about, as it were a cloathing and garment, Psal. 104.6. Darknesse was on the face of the deep; that is, the waters, which incloſed the earth in themselves.

Eadem habes apud Hebræos, Terra autem informis erat & vacua, &c. Vide Pererium in Genesin. Tostatum Annal.

Vers. 3. There is an extraordinary Light mentioned; (the ordinary fountain of light is the Sun) which in what subject it did inhere is not certain. Some say water in the thinner parts of the Superficies, some the heavenly Spheres, others say, the Element of fire: for that (say they) is either included under light, or we know not whether to referre it; and God created not accidents without subjects.

It is questioned, whether this light was spiritual or corporeal, a Substance or Accident. Vide Fuller. Miscel. Sac. lib. 1. cap. 19.

The works of the second day were two-fold:

First, That most vast Firmament, viz. that space between the Earth and Skie: The Hebrew word signifieth the extending of any thing, or the thing it self.

The word Firmament in Latine, Expansum in French. This made some hold, That there were waters above the crystalline Heaven. Omnium, quæ in Mosaica ista descriptione continentur, difficillimum est opus dei secundi: in qua firmamentum fuisse dicitur. Pererius de operib. sex dierum. lib. 2. in fol.

Secondly, The division of the Waters above, from the Waters below, that is of the Clouds which are in the middle Region of the Air, from the Fountains, Rivers and Sea, which remain under the lowest Region. But by the name of Clouds and Waters above the Firmament, we may understand all the Meteors, both watery and fiery, which were created then in their causes, Jer. 10.13.

Skies, as Brentius saith, alledging that place, Psal. 148.4. The Schoolmen understand it of the Heaven. Omnium, quæ in Mosaica ista descriptione continentur, difficillimum est opus dei secundi: in qua firmamentum fuisse dicitur. Pererius de operib. sex dierum. lib. 2. in fol.

The approbation given of other dayes, is here omitted in the Hebrew, not because Hell was created on this day, as the Hebrewes° say: but because this work of distinguishing the waters was yet imperfect, and finished on the third day.

° Mercer. in Gen. Vide Voss. de orig. & progres. Idol. l. 2. c. 67.

The work of the third day was three-fold:

First, The conflux, or gathering of the waters below into one place in regard of the greater part of them, called Sea, that so they might not overflow the Earth: and by this command of Gods, they still continue so. Luther said well, That all a mans life upon the Earth is as great a miracle, as the Israelites passing thorow the red Sea.

Eccles. 1.7. Job 26.10. & 38.13. Psal. 104.9.

Secondly, The drying of the Earth, to make it habitable, and fit for nourishing plants and living creatures.

Thirdly, The producing of Herbs and Trees of all kinds.

The works of the fourth day were, the Lights both greater, as Sun and Moon; and lesser, as the other Stars, placed in the Heavens as certain receptacles or vessels, wherein the Lord did gather light, which before was scattered in the whole body of the Heavens.

Secondly, The use of them, they were to give light to the world, to distinguish the Night from the Day, the Day from the Week, as also to distinguish seasons, Summer and Winter, Spring and Autumne, Seed-time and Harvest.

Gen. 8.22.

They are Signes

1. Natural: By them we may guesse of the Weather, Matth. 16.2,3. from the colour and figure of the Moon, some will conjecture what weather is like to be.

Pallida luna pluit, rubicunda flat, alba serenat.

Rangt soir & blanc matin, C'est le plaisir du pelerin. See Plinies Natural History, lib. 18. cap. 35. and Luke 21.25.

2. Civil:

2. Civil: Husbandmen, Gardners, Fishermen, Mariners, gather observations from them.

3. Ecclesiastical: To know the New Moons, and strange Apparitions in them are signs of Gods anger, as extraordinary Eclipses p, blazing-stars.

p As at Christs death, which Eclipse Phlegon Aroyensis, a great Astronomer beholding, and little knowing of Christs Death, cried out, Aut Deus naturæ patitur, aut mundi machina dissolvitur.

The works of the fifth day; were,

The Fishes of the Sea, and Fowles of the Air, divers in nature, shape, qualities, vertues and manners of living: the Fishes were appointed to increase, multiply, and fill the waters: and the Fowls to increase, multiply, and fly in the air.

The work of the sixth day is two-fold:

First, All terrestrial brute creatures, Beasts q, Cattle, and every thing which creepeth upon the earth in their kind, having vertue and power from God to increase and multiply.

q The Beasts of the earth are here distinguished into three ranks: 1. Cattel, that is, all tame and domestical beasts. 2. Creeping things, whereby are understood those which have no feet, as Serpents, or those which have but very short feet, as Worms, Ants. 3. Beasts, whereby are understood all wild beasts, which have their name from life in the Hebrew. The Jewish Rabbins gather from Gen. 1. 27. that the first man was both Man and Woman, both Male and Female, an Hermophrodite. Paget of Talmud. Alleg. cap. 1.

Secondly, Man, Male and Female, Adams body of the dust of the Earth, viz. That he might have in his own bosome an argument and incentive of humility, least for his excellency he should wax proud against God: Eves body out of a rib of Adam, for a signe of most near conjunction, and love betwixt man and wife. The Creation ceased in man, as in the Master-piece of Gods skill, and as in the end to which all other things were destinate. For all other Creatures, by the bounty of the Creator, were to serve Adam, as their Lord and Prince.

Chap. III.

Of the Creation of the Heavens, the Angels, the Elements, Light, Day and Night.

I Shall now insist more largely on the particular Creatures, and draw some Conclusions from them, saying little of the reasonable Creatures, Angels and Men; because I intend more fully to treat of them by themselves.

All Philosophy is in the first Chapter of Genesis: Basil, Ambrose, Zanchy, Plotinus, have drawn Discourses of Philosophy hence.

The Creation of the Heavens is a great and wonderfull work of God; the Heavens were not alwayes, neither came they by chance, or any other way, but by the wonderfull power of God creating them. So the Scripture telleth us often, Psal. 102. 15. Isa. 40. 12. & 22. & 42. 5. & 45. 2. & 48. 13. God frequently challengeth to himself the glory of this exceeding great work, alledging it, as an effect of his wonderfull power and greatnesse.

Du Bartas hath most excellently described the Creation of the world in his first Week. Ronsard being asked, what he thought of that Book, answered wittily, Monsieur Du Bartas à plus fait en sa sepmaine que je n'ay fait en toute ma vie: Bartas hath done more in one Week, than I have done in all my life.

The

The excellency and greatneſſe of this work appears in divers things:

1. The Abſtruſeneſſe of the matter.
2. The Perfection of the form.
3. The exceeding hugeneſſe of its Quantity.
4. The height of it.
5. Its ſwift motion.

Laſtly, The excellent Uſefulneſſe of it for the Creatures here below, and all other things contained in it.

Though ſome Aſtronomers have accuſed the Heavens into a diviſion of Spheres, yet may we ſuſpect ſuch diviſion to be rather in the Aſtronomers than in the Heavens. Dr Holyday on Ezek. 37. 22. Vide Zanch. de oper. Dei parte ſecunda lib. 2. cap. 2. Theſ. 4.

First, The Matter of the Heavens is dark and hidden, and goes beyond the power of mortal Creatures, certainly to determine of it. Philoſophers know not what to ſay here; ſome of them do thinke, that the upper Heavens are made of the ſame matter with theſe inferiour bodies; and ſome again do deny it, and think it conſiſts of another, which they call the fifth Eſſence; becauſe they perceive it to be of ſuch different working and qualities from the things below.

Secondly, The Perfection of the Figure [g] of the Heavens, and all the Starres of Heaven doth marvellouſly grace it. For it is of an Orbicular or round forme, a circle encompaſſing the earth and waters round, which is of it ſelf alſo for the main Orbicular; and this concerning the Starres our ſenſes doe declare, and concerning the whole Heavens the motions of the Starres, which our eye doth tell us: for the Sunne riſeth every Morning over againſt the place it did ſet the Evening before, and ſo evinceth, that its courſe is round [h], Eccleſ. 1. The round figure is the moſt beautifull, ſtrong, perfect and capacious figure, and this may mind us of Gods Infiniteneſſe, Periection and Unchangeableneſſe.

[g] Among all Geometrical Figures, the Spherical, or the round is the moſt perfect, and amongſt all natural bodies, the Heaven is the moſt excellent.

It was therefore good reaſon the moſt beautifull body ſhould have the moſt perfect and exquiſite ſhape. Mr Pemble. [h] The Earth is round, but not precifely: There are Hils like Warts, and Vallies like Wrinkles in a mans body. Exact roundneſſe is not found in any body but the Heavens. Vide Zanch. de oper. Dei parte 2da. lib. 2. cap. 3. Theſ. 1.

Thirdly, Conſider the hugeneſſe of its [i] Quantity: for who can meaſure the back-ſide of Heaven? or tell how many miles ſpace that mighty circle doth contain? The Globe of Earth and Water is very great, but all that is, as it were, an undiſcernable point, compared to the whole Globe of Heaven: how incomprehenſibly great is he which hath made a building ſo great? The whole circuit of the Heavens, wherein are the fixed Stars, is reckoned by Aſtronomers to be a thouſand and ſeventeen millions of miles at leaſt.

[i] How elſe could it contain the Sunne, Moon and Starres, in convenient diſtance from the Earth, one from another.

Prov. 25. 3. The Philoſophers think that the higheſt Heaven muſt be their Primum mobile, becauſe they find no motion beyond, but it is not neceſſary that every Heaven muſt move.

Fourthly, It is a high and ſtately building, The Heavens in height, Prov. 25. 2. Job 22. 12. an hundred and ſixty millions [k] of miles high from Earth to Heaven: It is ſo ſayne by the Aſtronomers rules. It is a wonder (ſaith [l] one) that we can look up to ſo admirable a height, and that the eye is not tired in the way. If this aſcending line could be drawn right forward, ſome that have calculated curiouſly, have found it five hundred years journey into the ſtarry Heaven. If that be true which ſome of our Mathematicians ſay; if a ſtone could fall from the ſtarry Heaven, or eight Sphear, and ſhould paſſe every hour an hundred miles, it would be ſixty five years, or more, before it would come to ground. Burtons Melanch. part 1. Sect. 2. Subſec. 2. [m] This puteth us in mind of the infinite mercy and good-

[k] Mr Greenhill on Ezek. pag. 104.

[l] Biſhop Hall in his Contemplations on the Creation. Vide Voſſium de Orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. lib. 2. cap. 83.

[m] Vide Fuller's Miſcellanea lib. 1. cap. 15. Infra à Deo ubi, quas in Scripturis ſæpe appellatur præceptum Domini, &c. conſo mone.

neſſe

nes of God, Psal. 103. 3. and of his Majesty, The highest Heavens are a fit Palace for the most High, Psalm 104. 3.

Fifthly, Its admirable swift Motion and Revolution in four and twenty hours, which our conceits cannot follow; teacheth us, that God is farre more swift and ready to help us in our need. A Bullet out of a Musket flies swiftly, it will flie an hundred and eighty miles an hour according to its motion. The Sun moves swifter, [a] 1160000 miles in one hour; the fixed Stars some of them two and fourty millions of miles each hour.

[a] Mr Greenhill ubi supra. Atoms omnes cœlestes esse per se regulares & æquabiles, Constantique lege circulariter ferri, pro Axiomate ab Astronomis omnibus jamdudum receptum est. Tycho Brah. l. 1. De nova Stella. Some of the Philosophers proved the motion of the Sun and Heavenly bodies to be natural because constant, nature is indeficiens principium. Philosophers say, the Heavens work upon Inferiour bodies by three instruments, viz. Light, Motion, Influence.

Macrobius saith by Hercules the driver away of evils, is meant the Sun, whence Porphyry interprets those twelve labours of his so often celebrated by the Poets, to be the twelve signes of the Zodiack yearly run thorow by the Sun. Vide Athanas. Kirch. Obelisc. Pamphil. l. 3. c. 11. The Philosophers have ascribed certain intelligences to the Orbs to move them, but there is no warrant for it in Scripture; they say the Orbs move regularly, which cannot be without some understanding mover: there is the same order in inferiour creatures, and that which worketh by nature worketh equally alwayes. Archimedes the great Mathematician did make Sphæram automatam, a Sphere to move it self, which many yet imitate. Poterit ergo sine angelis movere sphæram suam homo, non poterit Deus? saith Ludovicus Vives, Vossius also denies it.

The Ancients speak of the musick of the Spheres, caused, as they conceived, by their circumvolution, audible as they affirmed, but not heard, or rather not discerned, because we heard it alwayes. Philo saith it is not audible to us men, and the reason why God would not have it audible, he saith is, lest men ravished with the sweetnesse of it, should give over all care and thought of worldly affairs. Casaub. Treatise of Use and Custome, p. 53. 55. Vide Zanch. De Oper. Dei partis 2. l. 6. c. 2. Quæst. 3. & l. 2. c. 2. Thes. 10.

Lastly, The use of it is admirable, the motion of the heavenly bodies is the cause of generation and corruption here below: if they should cease moving, the being of sublunary bodies would cease. The inferiour heavens are fitted for the generation of Meteors, Rain, Snow, Thunder, Lightning, by their fit distance as it were from the Earth and Stars. Here is roome for the making and shewing of them all. The lower part of it also, by reason of its thinnes and subtilty, is fit for the flying of Birds, and for the breathing and the living of man and beast; and it is fitted to be enlightned by the Sun-beams, and to receive that illumination and heat, without which the creatures here below could not subsist, and the stars, chiefly the Sun, are placed at a convenient distance; and it is fitted for the swift motion of the heavenly bodies, in regard of its rarity and subtilnesse, which if it were thick and gross, could not have so speedy a passage through, or about the same; especially the highest heavens are fitted for the inhabitation of those immortal persons, some of which do, and others shall inhabit a being so spacious, bright, and every way glorious, that the multitude of those happy persons may have space enough to see the beauty of God.

Vide Zanch. De Oper. Dei partis 2. l. 2. c. 3.

The Philosophers divide the world into two Regions, the Celestial, and Elementary Region. The Celestial, they divide into divers Orbs, or Globes, for the Heaven of heavens, sedes Beatorum, the seat of the blessed Saints and Angels, they had little knowledge of, if any at all. The first moveable, as they termed it, the highest Orbe, by the unspeakable swift circumrotation of which, they thought all the other Orbes were carried from East to West, in the space of 24. houres. This is the tenth Globe or Orbe, the next they call the Chrystaline or watery Orbe, because it is clear, bright, and apt to shine through as water. [a] The next is the Starry heaven, which hath eight Spheres, one for the fixed Stars, and seven other for the Planets, each Planet having (as they say) his distinct Orbe. Saturne is the uppermost, next Jupiter, then Mars, in the midst the Sun, then Venus, next Mercury, the last and lowest of all is the Moon.

Post sim sum sequitur, Proxima Luna subest.

So is the division of the heavenly Region; the Elementary they divide into the region of fire next to the Moon, and of aire next to that; and that they distinguish

[a] Some say the Orbs are contiguous each to other, and closely infold each other as the skins of an guiſh into three Regions, the higheſt, middle, and loweſt; then that of the Water and Earth, compounded together; ſo they. But now the Scriptures divide the World into two parts, Heaven, and Earth, as you read in the firſt words of the Bible; In the beginning God made Heaven and Earth. By Earth, it meaneth this Globe of Earth and Water, where Men, Beaſts, and Fiſhes are. By Heaven, all the ſpace from the Earth upward; and of this Heaven it maketh three parts.

Onyon contain one another; and others think there is no ſuch variety or multitude of Orbes, but alone one firſt moveable, in which they conceive the fixed ſtars to be placed, and they think the Planets move not in Orbes but of themſelves, as birds flie in the air. Johannes Pena in his Prafat. De uſu Optices gives good reaſons againſt the diverſitie of Orbes or Spheres, becauſe the Stars could not then be ſeen through ſuch divers mediums. And Tycho Brahe in his book De Cometis, proves that ſome Comets have been found to be above the Moon. Cælum etſi liquidiſſimum & rariſſimum ſit nullisq; Orbibus realibus (quod nec jam ſeculi plurimi Philoſophantium fruſtrà credulè perſuaſerunt) compactum, quemadmodum vel ex ipſis Cometis, in eo curſum ſuum abſoluentibus, circa finem hujus operis ſufficienter oſtendam, non tamen ob id cum aere Elementari natura ejuſdem & ſubſtantia eſſe facilè conceſſerim, Tyc. Brah. l. 1. De nova ſtella, Anni 1572. c. 1. Vide ejus, l. De Cometa Anni 1577. Et Seth. Ward, prælect. De Cometis.

1. The higheſt Heaven, the Heaven of Heavens, 1 Kings 8. 27. the habitation of God himſelf, and all his Saints and Angels, Job. 14. where God reveals his glorious preſence to them for ever. This is called by Paul the third Heaven, 2 Cor. 12. 4. for its ſituation, above the Aire and Skie, both which have the name of Heaven, and Paradiſe [b], 2 Cor. 12. 4. becauſe the earthly Paradiſe was a figure of it; and becauſe it is a place of endleſs joy and pleaſure. This is a houſe (John 14. 2.) fit for God to dwell in, great men have great houſes, Dan. 4. 30. 2. Prepared by God. 3. An inviſible houſe, the inviſible works exceed viſible. 4. The higheſt houſe, the beſt things are higheſt. 5. An eternal houſe.

2. The Starry [c] Skie, where the Stars are; it is deſcribed in Job to be firm as a molten Looking-glaſſe.

[b] It is called the Paradiſe of God, Rev. 2. 7.

[c] It is called by the Greeks ὰλυμπ& quaſi ὰλολαμπὸς, that is altogether ſhining, becauſe of the great number of Stars in it. The Sanctum Sanctorum was laid within with gold, a moſt glorious place, and the type of Heaven.

3. The lower Heavens; all that place above our heads to the Starry Heaven. Hence the clouds are called the clouds of Heaven, and the Fowls of Heaven, and Birds are ſaid to flie in the Face of the Heavens.

Every one is to fall out with himſelf, and blame himſelf for ſlighting and neglecting the conſideration of this work, that offers it ſelf ſo conſtantly to our eyes, even this ſo curiouſly wrought Curtain, which God hath ſpread forth, eſpecially let us blame our ſelves for not ſeeing God in the workmanſhip of Heaven; that we take not notice of him, as the Author of it, and raiſe our hearts higher than the heavens, to him that meaſures them forth as with a Span: we ſhould believe that he is ſo Great, Good, and Wiſe, as this Heaven proclaimeth him the Maker thereof to be. Let us ſee and bewaile this blindneſſe; there is no place in the earth, which hath not the Heavens ſpread over it. Oh that we could put our ſelves in mind of him that did ſpread out the Heavens, and remember, that he ſees us every where; for where any work of his is to be ſeen, ſurely there is himſelf to be ſeen; and there he ſees all things that are there; eſpecially, let us learn to preſſe this knowledg upon our will and affections, that it may beget in us obedience, love, fear, joy, confidence, and other holy vertues; without which, all talking, yea and thinking of God, is idle and fruitleſſe. Let us preſſe our ſelves to become ſubject to him, who hath the heavens at command, becauſe he made them, to love him that hath formed, for our uſe, ſo excellent an houſe, ſo richly vaulted above; ſee the inviſible things of him that made all in theſe things which you behold, thy converſation ſhould be there where Chriſt is, Col. 3. There is thy Fathers houſe, Pſalm 104. 2. There he alludes to Gen. 1. 6. Let there be a Firmament or ſtretching forth. God made the heavens with as great eaſe as one can ſtretch our a curtain when it is folded up. Anaxagoras, Cum ab eo quæreretur, cujus rei cauſa natus eſſet, reſpondit, Cœli ac Solis videndi. Hanc vocem admirati omnes, ac Philoſopho dignam judicant. At ego hunc puto non invenientem quid reſponderet, effudiſſe hoc poſſim, ne taceret quod quidem ſecum, ſi ſapiens fuiſſet, commentatum, & meditatum habere debuit: quia ſi quis rationem ſui neſcius, non homo ſit quidem. Sed putemus non eo tempore dictum illud effuſum. Videamus in tribus verbis quot & quanta peccaverit: Primum, quod omne hominis officium in ſolis oculis poſuit, nihil ad mentem referens, ſed ad corpus omnia, &c. Lactant. Divin. Inſtit. l. 3. de falſa Sapientia.

thine own Countrey, thy inheritance. It is a great deale of comfort to Gods People, that have such a Father, who can so easily stretch out Heaven, trust in him for house-roome, that can build a world with so much ease.

If, 1. Thou beest united to Christ by faith, and his Father be thy Father, thou shalt hereafter dwell with God in glory, John 14. 2. and 20. 17. Romans 8. 17.

2. If God dwell with thee here, thou shalt dwell with him in Heaven. God dwels,

1. With the humble, Esay 57. 15. with the holy, it is the inheritance of Saints.
2. With the charitable person, 1 Joh. 4. 12.
3. In the true Seperatist, 2 Cor. 6. 16, 17, 18. not he that separates from true Churches, or from the Ordinances, but from sin, and keeps himself unspotted of the world.

Consectaries from the Angels.

For the Angels (because I intend to speak more largely of them afterwards) I shall here only answer one question about them.

Why are they not spoken of in the Creation, where man and beasts are mentioned, and why is not the special day named wherein they were made?

Angeli non sunt praetermissi in illa prima rerum creatione, sed significantur nomine coeli, aut etiam lucis. Ideo autem vel praetermissi sunt, vel nominibus rerum corporalium significati.

Answ. Not so much, for fear the Jews, a people prone to Idolatry, should have worshipped them: for then by the same reason Moses should have forborn to have mentioned them in the whole story of Genesis, which was publisht at the same time, and to the same people, that the first part of it: but it may be, to give us to understand, that God did not use any of their help in the Creation, and had no need of them at all, but made the whole world without them, or because he relates the making of sensible things * only, but that they were created, appeares, Col. 1. 16.

Quia Moses rudi populo loquebatur, qui nondum capere poterat incorpoream naturam. Et si eis fuisset expressum aliquas res esse super omnem naturam corpoream, fuisset eis occasio idololatriae, ad quam proni erant, & à qua Moses eos praecipuè retinere intendebat. Aquin. prima parte Quæst. 61. Artic. 1. * Quia Moses rudibatis se nostrae accommodare voluit, ideo quae altiora nostro captu erant praetermisit, ea tantùm commemoravit quae sub oculis sunt. Zanchius de Symb. Apost. Ego Mosem puto voluisse populo creationem rerum appellabilium proponere, & nihil de invisibilibus dicere, unde in toto sex dierum opere ne ullius quidem invisibilis Creaturae mentionem fecit. Mercerus in Gen. 1. 1. idem habet in cap. secund. versus primum, & idem habet Paraeus. Vide plenissim. Ben. Isr. Probl. 25. & 26. de Creatione. Moses prima fidei elementa rudi populo traditurus ea tantùm memorat, quae ubique oculis nostris sese ingerunt. Itaque nec metallorum, nec Angelorum meminit. Jacobi Capelli Historia Sacra & Exotica, l. 1. Vide Petavium de Angelis, lib. 1. cap. 15.

Vide Aquin. Partem primam Quæst. 61. Artic. 4. Gen. 1. 1. Job 38. 7.

The Scripture hath not so clearly expressed the precise time, and day of their Creation, therefore Ambrose and Damaus confesse that they know not when they were created, and so doth Brochmand, De Angelis bonis & malis, cap. 2. quæst. 3. But it is probable they were made with the highest Heaven, the first day of the week; so Origen, Beda and others say the second day. That they were created before the third day; may plainly be proved by Job 38. 4, 5, 6, 7.

As man was then first made, after his habitation the earth was made and adorned; so it is probable that the Angels were made together in a great multitude, after the Heavens their habitation was finished. Chemnitius in loc. communis.

Gen. 2. 1. The heavens and all the host of them. It is plain from Job 38. 7. that they were made before the Earth. When God laid the foundations of the earth, and laid the Corner-stone thereof: then the Sons of God (that is, the Angels, Job 17.) shouted for joy.

In genere, elementi nomine appellatur inde id, ex quo primum aliquid componitur, & in quod etiam dissolvitur, veluti sunt etiam elementa literarum, è quibus componuntur, syllabæ, adeóque tota oratio: & in quæ etiam dissolvitur. Zanch. De Oper. dei partis 2. lib. 2. cap. 4.

An Element is that whereof any thing is compounded, and it self uncompounded. Each element is superiour to other, not more in place then dignity.

See Sir Kenelm Digbies Treatise of Bodies, chap. 4. The German Erde, and the English Earth, as the Greek ἔρα from the Hebrew אֶרֶץ.

There

There are four Elements, Earth, Water, Aire and Fire, as both Philoſophers and Moſes himſelf, in the firſt of Geneſis ſhew. Vide Zanch. De Oper. Dei Partis 2. l. 2. c. 4. Theſ. 1.

The dry Land is called Earth, which is a firme, cold, and dry Element, round and heavie, hanging unmoveably in the midſt of the world, fit for habitation.

The Pſalmiſt deſcribes the creation of the earth, Pſal. 104. 5. Who hath laid the foundation of the earth, or founded the earth upon his Baſis, that it ſhould not be removed for ever. The earth is the heavieſt and loweſt element. It is ſo made that it doth ſtand firm in its place, ſo that neither the whole earth is moved out of its place, nor yet the great parts of it. This is an exceeding wonderful work of God to ſettle the earth ſo upon certain foundations, that it is not ſhaken out of its place. Take a little piece of earth not bigger then ones fiſt, nay then ones eye, or the apple of it: hold it up in the aire, let it fall, it will never ceaſe moving till it come to lye upon ſome ſolid body, that it may hold up and ſtay the motion of it. Now how is it, that this whole lump of earth, the whole body I ſay of the earth hangeth faſt in the wide and open aire, and doth not ſway and move now hither and now thither? what is it that holdeth it up ſo ſtedfaſt in the very midſt of the aire? It is Gods work who hath founded it on his Baſis that it cannot be moved. This work is often mentioned in the Scripture, Job 26. 7. There is nothing which might hold it up, and yet behold it hangeth ſtill and quiet, as if it had ſome pillar or baſe upon which to reſt it ſelf. The Lord doth in larger words commend it to the conſideration of Job, when himſelf comes to ſpeak with him, Job 38. 4. & 6. God there compareth himſelf to a builder that laies the foundation, and then ſets up the building by line and meaſure, and convinceth Job of his weakneſs, that knoweth not how this earth ſhould be ſet up or founded, whereas the Lord himſelf effected this building long before Job was. David telleth of it, Pſalm 24. 2. as a ground of Gods right unto it, and to all things that are in it; for ſaith he, He hath founded it upon the Seas, and eſtabliſhed it upon the floods. And Solomon mentions it, Prov. 8. 29. and 30. 4. Eccl. 1. 4. This is a great work, becauſe it is both neceſſary and unſearchable. It is neceſſary, for it is the cauſe of the order of things in all the world, and of their not being jumbled and confounded together. If the loweſt part of any building be not firm, all that is built upon it will totter and tumble, and come down quickly: ſo if the earth, this loweſt part of the world ſhould ſhake or reel, and be apt to move hither and thither, the things that be upon it by nature, or that are built upon it by the workmanſhip of man, could not poſſibly ſubſiſt or endure, Rivers and Channels would be daily altered, dry ground would ever and anon be-

A Baſe is the loweſt part of a pillar. Nec circumfuſo pendebat in aere tellus ponderibus librata ſuis. Ovid. met. Carpenter in his firſt book of Geo. ch. 4. ſaith, the earths circular motion is probable. Copernicus ſaid, that the earth moved, and the heavens ſtood ſtill. See more of this after about day and night. And in Fullers Miſcel. Sac. l. 1. c. 15. Vide Voſſium de Philoſ. Sectis, c. 6.

Forſan vertigo illa quam loquuntur, non tam terræ eſt, quàm cerebri potius parum fixi in ijs ipſis qui inſulſa ejuſmodi paradoxa profitentur. Doughteij Analecta Sacra excurſ. 137. At terram (quæ immota in perpetuum manet) locum mutare incongruum puto & rationi reſtæ contrarium: non morer ingeniosa Copernici commenta, quæ nervosè convellit Libert. Fromondus in ſua veſta; ubi Copernici, Galilæi, Keplerj, Mœſtlivi, Lanbergij Hortenſij ſophiſmata ad examen revocat, & ſuam terræ quietem reſtituit. Barlow Exercit. 6. Sua his locis ineſt emphaſis, ad terræ permanentiam perpetuam comprobandam; nam cum fundamentum Dei firmum maneat, eo magis neceſſe eſt terram in æternum permanere, quod Deus illam fundarit ut maneret in æternum. Mareſ. contra Prid. De Annibilat. Mundi. Vide Danæi Phyſic. Chriſt. Tract. 3. c. 26. & Tract. 4. c. 19. Non diſputo, ſed credo Cœlum moveri, terram quieſcere; quia illi motum, iſti quietem diſerte adſcribit Spiritus Sanctus; nuſquam verò terræ motum, Cœlo quietem, ſi vel unus locus in Scriptura extaret, per quem terræ Copernicani gyrus pateſceret, facilius eſſem ad acceptanda eorum placita. Arnoldi præfat. ad Reſponſ. Bidello. Ariſtotle would have Earth-quakes to proceed from a ſpirit or vapour included in the bowels of the earth (2d of his meteors 7. ch.) which finding no way to paſſe out, is enforced to turn back, and barred any paſſage out, ſeeks every corner: and while it labours to break open ſome place for going forth, it makes a tumultuous motion which is the Earth-quake. It is 1. Univerſal, which ſhakes the whole earth in every part, at leaſt in the upper face, the cauſe whereof is not natural, but the immediate and miraculous power of God; ſuch a one happened at our Saviours paſſion. 2. Particular, that which is limited to ſome one or more particular places. What Thunder is in the Clouds, the Earth-quake is in the Earth. Georgius Agricola tells us moſt probably, that the immediate cauſe of an Earthquake is a certain ſubterraneous fire kindled of ſome ſulphureous matter within the bowels of that vaſt body, and increaſed by the reſiſtance of the ambient coldneſſe, the paſſages whereof being precluded and locked up by the ſolid and cold matter of the earth, it rages, and roars within thoſe dark hollowes, and by the violence of it, as murmuring to be thus forceably impriſoned, ſhakes the parts about it, and at laſt makes way by ſome dreadfull eruption. Biſhop Halls Remaining works on Pſal. 60. 2.

come Sea, and Sea dry ground: trees would often totter and fall, or elſe be changed from place to place: buildings and houſes would be ſtill falling and tumbling down off the earth, did it not keep its own room: nay heaven and earth would come together, utter confuſion would overcome the face of the earth, and men, beaſts, and all things below would come to nothing. So needfull it was for this great Architect to ſet the Corner-ſtone of the earth faſt, firm, and immoveable. But the cauſe of it is unſearchable, who can finde out to the full, the reaſon of this ſo neceſſary a work? Every heavy thing we ſee muſt have ſomething to keep it up, ſomething on which to reſt it ſelf, that it may go no further but abide where it is: but what doth this earth reſt on? How is it held ſo even in the very midſt, and ſweyed neither one way nor another? who can tell me a full, juſt, ſatisfactory reaſon in nature? We muſt not think that God doth hold it up by an immediate, violent, ſupernatural, or miraculous working, but in a natural way, by ordering the principles of nature ſo, that they ſhall neceſſarily concur to effect this ſetledneſſe. Philoſophers give this reaſon of it, they ſay, the ſimple bodies were made, ſome of a light, ſubtil, thin, and ſpiritual nature: and their property is to aſcend, to go upward ſtill, ſo as the light ſtill flies higher, and ſome of a more groſs, thick, and heavy nature, and the property of theſe is to move downward, and ſtill the heavier to make it ſelf a way through the lighter, and to preſs toward the Center, that is the middle point of the whole round of the world, for it muſt be confeſſed that the world is round. Wherefore ſeeing every part and portion of the earth preſſeth toward the very middle point of all, it cannot be, but that all muſt ſtand faſt in the midſt, ſeeing each part thronging the other, and leaning upon the other toward the very middle: all will be quiet if the parts be even poiſed. But now how heavy things ſhould be made ſo to move toward the Center, and how each part ſhould ſo evenly move, and a number of other queſtions more, let them anſwer that are able, eſpecially ſeeing the earth doth not carry in it ſelf to ſenſe, a perfect, even, and ſmooth roundneſſe, it is hard then to anſwer to the queſtion which God propounded to Job, Upon what be the ſockets of it faſtned? It is a work of God exceeding our capacity, and muſt therefore quicken and call up our admiration.

We ſhould blame our ſelves for ſo ſeldome putting our ſelves in minde of this great work, to ſtir up our ſelves to magnifie the Author of it, and make it an argument of our bleſſing his Name, for which David ſpeaketh of it, Pſal. 104. or of humbling our ſelves before him in acknowledgement of his power and wiſdome, and of our weakneſſe and folly, to which end it is mentioned in other places, or indeed to any good purpoſe of informing our ſelves the better, either of his nature or our duty. Oh how brutiſh and blockiſh are we! So ſtrange and ſo mighty a work is done and continued in our ſight, here it was done before I was here, and here it will remain and be continually done after I am gone hence. I enjoy the benefit of it as well as any other, and wish all others, and yet when did I take it into conſideration? When did I once offer it to the ſerious meditation of my mind? When did I ſay to my ſelf, How doth this great ball of earth remain unmoveable in the midſt of this wide and ſpacious Heaven? Why doth it not reel or totter toward the North or South, the Eaſt or Weſt, or now upward, now downward? What hand doth hold it up, and that ſo ſtedfaſtly, that for thouſands of yeers it hath not moved? ſurely ſome potent and intelligent workman hath in ſuch a wonderfull manner reared up and founded this building. This is he whom we call God, why do I not faſten in my ſelf a more ſure and firm notion of his being, and a more lively, firm, and effectuall acknowledgement of his excellency?

We are worthy of great blame that have ſcarce ever directed our minds to the contemplation and fruitfull meditation of this great act of God among the reſt, for any good, ſpiritual, and holy intent. Scholars ſometimes in their Philoſophical ſtudies ſtumble upon theſe queſtions, and ſet their wits on work to find out the natural reaſon of them, but alas in how unfruitfull a manner, ſo as not at all to inforce the thing upon their ſouls, for making of them more thankfull and obedient! But for for the plain man that is no Scholar, though he have wit enough for all things elſe, yet he hath no wit to enter upon theſe cogitations: and when he findeth the matter ſo far above his reach, yet to tell himſelf that this is one of Gods works, and ſo to call on himſelf to fear, know, and obey him, this, this is that we muſt every man lament in himſelf, as a juſt and due cauſe why the Scripture ſhould aſcribe brutiſhneſſe unto us, and we unto our ſelves, and why we ſhould preſent our ſelves before the divine Majeſty with bathfull and lowly confeſſions of our wrongdone to God, in robbing him of the honour due unto him for his works which our ſelves have the fruit of. Secondly, to our ſelves, in depriving our ſelves of the beſt and moſt excellent fruit of them, which is to be led by them above themſelves unto him.

This may exhort every one of us to take this work of God from David, and to make it as it were our theme, or the object of our meditations. Whoſoever applieth himſelf to raiſe up ſuch thoughts, ſhall find a great unaptneſſe in himſelf, and a kind of wearineſſe to them with a vehement inclination to entertain other fancies, and the Devill will take occaſion hence to diſſwade him from doing the duty at all, as if it were as good omit it, as performe it ſo weakly: it is a falſe tale which Satan tels, for God hath promiſed acceptance to the weakeſt endeavours, in calling himſelf a Father, but to accept of the non-performance he hath never promiſed, for even a Father cannot do that.

Laſtly, We muſt learn to ſeek unto God, and truſt in him for ſpiritual ſtability of grace in our ſouls, and muſt thus importune him. Lord, when there was never an earth, thou mad'ſt one, and didſt lay the foundation of it ſo ſure, that no force nor skill can move it. Oh, thou canſt alſo create a frame of holineſſe in my heart and ſoul, and ſo ſtabliſh, ſettle, and confirm it that it ſhall never be moved. I beſeech thee do it, and truſt that thou wilt do this as thou haſt done the former. One prime uſe to which we muſt improve theſe natural benefits, is to quicken our Prayers, and confirme our faith in begging, and expecting ſuch as are ſpirituall. When God will confirme the faith of his people, and win them to call upon him for good things, he puts them in mind of theſe wonders in nature, they muſt make uſe of them therefore for this purpoſe.

The ſecond Element is water*, ſo neceſſary a creature, as nothing can be more dangerouſly or uncomfortably wanting to the life of man. The Romans denied water to condemned people. It is an Element moiſt in ſome degree, and cold in the higheſt, therefore it cools the body, and tempers the heat that it grow not exceſſive. It hath manifold uſes conſtantly. Triplex maxime aquarum eſt uſus, in irrigando, in abluendo, in navigando, Voſſius.

Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 2. 1 King. 3. 16, 20.

* Aqua, quaſi aqua, of the equal and plain face and ſuperficies thereof, or as Lactantius, quaſi à qua nata ſunt omnia, becauſe hence all things are bred and nouriſhed. Becauſe waters are either without motion, as in Lakes, or of an uniform motion, as in Rivers, or of diverſe and contrary motions, as in the Sea: the diverſities aſcribed to Tides, or ebbings and flowings,

1. We and our Cattle drink of it, and neither can continue without water or ſomething made of it, our bread muſt be kneaded with it, and our meat boyled with it.

2. It ſerves to waſh our bodies and apparel we weare: if our hands and feet were never waſht, what an evill ſmell ſhould we carry about?

3. It makes the earth fruitfull. The Husband-man looſeth his labour, if after ſowing there come no Rain.

It is,

1. Of large and common uſe, no Countrey can want it, neither rich nor poore, man nor beaſt.

2. Of conſtant uſe, we muſt have it daily, or ſometing made of it, and our beaſts alſo.

3. Very profitable, we drink it, and waſh with it, and our meat is prepared by it, and beaſts drink it.

Becauſe of ſo many good things in water, God himſelf in his word hath ſo often compared the grace of his Spirit with it, Iſa. 55. 1. John 4. 14. Rev. 22. 17. Divine ſold Servant to Negroes, their ſuppoſed Sea-God. Purchaſe Pilgrimage, l. 5. c. 13. ſect. 1. Lyſimachus (in Plutarchs Apothegmes) for great thirſt yielded up himſelf and his army, and being captive, when he drank ſaid he, O dij, quam brevis voluptatis gratia me ex rege feci ſervum.

grace

grace purgeth the ſoul from ſin, extinguiſheth the heat of anger, luſt, and other perturbations, ſatisfies the deſires of the ſoul thirſting after God.

It reprehends us, that ſo ungratefully enjoy and devour this benefit without lifting our hearts up to God, and praiſing him for it; A ſecret Atheiſme prevails in our hearts, which is the cauſe of this great blockiſhneſſe and ingratitude, and corrupts all things to us, and forfeits them, and provokes Gods juſtice againſt us, Say, Lord, thou mighteſt juſtly choake me for the time to come, for want of water, that have not been particularly thankfull to thee for this mercy. We ſhould bring in the parcels of Gods goodneſſe for bread, water, fire; when thou waſheſt thy hands, let thy heart be lifted up to God that made the Element; Say, O that I could praiſe, love, and obey him, that hath done this for me!

The uſefulneſs, abundance, and eaſineſs to come by; doth highly commend this benefit, and the giver of it, ſhewing water to be very good, and our ſelves much beholding to him that giveth it.

Anciently, in thoſe warmer Countries eſpecially, water was the uſuall drink of men; therefore in the deſcription of the coſt of families in houſe-keeping, when we read of ſo many Oxen and Sheep ſlain, and ſo much meal and fine flower, we read not of any Wine; which would have been mentioned, if it had been uſually drunk.

Thirdly, The Aire or all the void place between the Clouds and he Earth, giving breath of life to all things that breathe, this is the third Element, light and ſubtil, moving upward, not downward, becauſe it hath no heavineſſe in it.

It is divided into three regions or ſtages. The higheſt is ſaid to be exceeding hot, and alſo dry, becauſe it is neer the fiery Element and Stars, by the force of whoſe beams it receiveth the heat, which is much encreaſed by following the motions of the Heavens. The loweſt region is (they ſay) hot and moiſt: hot by the reflection of the Sun-beams meeting with the earth, and moiſt from its own proper nature, and by reaſon of the vapours exhaled out of the earth and water: or rather it is variable; now hot, now cold, ſometime temperate, differing according to times and ſeaſons of the year, and places alſo, or ſeverall climates. The middle region of the aire, is cold in reſpect of the two other, becauſe it cannot follow the motions of the Heavens (as the upper region doth) being hindred by the tops of mountains. 2. Being free from the reflex beams of the Sun, by which the lower region of the aire is made hot.

The qualities and uſe of the Aire.

The aire is moſt thin, without light or colour, but apt to receive heat, light and cold, heavier than the fire, lighter than the earth or water, placed in the midſt of them, fit for breathing, ſeeing, ſmelling, and moveing.

This Element alſo leads us to God. For, 1. It truly and really ſubſiſteth though it be not ſeen: So alſo the Lord, the Maker of it, hath a real, but inviſible exiſtence. 2. It is every where within and without us, ſo is God every where preſent. 3. It is the preſerver of my life, and we may ſay of it truly, as the Apoſtle of God himſelf, in it (under God) we live, move, and have our being.

Acts 17. 28.

Fire is a moſt ſubtill Element, moſt light, moſt hot, moſt ſimple, and unmixt. Therefore the Perſians worſhipped fire as a god, The Chaldeans adored Ur; and the Romans worſhipped holy fire. Vide Voſſium de orig. & progreſ. Idol. l. 2. c. 64, 65, 66.

Fourthly, Fire, which is (ſome ſay) to be underſtood in light, an adjunct and quality of it, Scaliger would prove a fiery Element becauſe fire tends thither. Firſt, God made the Elements of the Earth and Water, which in Geography make one Globe. Others ſay light neither is that Element, nor proceeds from it, but the Sun: however I ſhall handle it here among the works of the firſt day.

Without

Without light Gods other works could not have been discovered by men. Light is an excellent work of God, tending to manifest his excellency to men, it is a comfortable thing to behold the light, Psal. 104. 2 Who coverest thy self with light as with a garment, that is, createdst the light: thereby shewing his excellency as a man doth by making and wearing a rich and glorious suit of cloathes: he made and doth maintain the light in its perfection.

God expresseth his greatnesse above Job, in that he could not make light, nor knew not what it was, q. d. Job, thou art a mean Creature, thou dost not create nor order the light, neither dost thou know the nature and working of it. The greatnesse of this work appears principally by two considerations.

Job 38. 19, 24. Bonaventure hath seven questions, de quidditate luminis, it is an old saying, Non constat ex lumine naturâ quid sit naturâ luminis.

1. The hidden, abstruse, and difficult nature of it. Philosophers can not tell what to say of it, whether it be a substance or accident: and if a substance, whether corporeal or incorporeal and spiritual, is a quality (say they) which makes other things visible: that is the effect of it. This word, light, in English, signifieth both that which the Latines call lux, and that which they call lumen, which yet are two distinct things: The first in being the Sun or Moon properly, the second in the aire, and an effect of the other.

See Sir Walter Raleigh's history of the world, lib. 1. cap. 1. Sect. 7. If this light be not spiritual, it approacheth neareſt unto spirituality: and if it have any corporality, then of all other the most subtil and phre; for as it is of all things seen the most beautiful and of swiftest motion: so it is most necessary and beneficial. Sir Walter Raleigh. It is a great paradox to think light to be a body, which yet is maintained by Sir Kenelme Digby in his Treatise of Bodies. But that light should be a spiritual substance, is much more absurd, for how then should it be visible. Vide Aquin. partem primam Quæst. 66. Art. 1, 2, 3.

Some think that it is a substance, and one of the simple substances, which they call Elements, of which compounded substances are made, by mixing them together; and is nothing but the Element of fire, which Philosophers speak of, being more subtil than the air. And as the water compassed the earth, and the aire the water, so did light the aire, and was far greater than the air, as that was then the water and earth, so as this is the highest of all the Elements. See Sir Kenelme Dib. Treatise of Bod. c. 7.

2. It is very usefull, needfull, and beneficial; For first it carrieth heat in it, and conveyeth heat, and the cœlestial influences unto all other things. 2. It distinguisheth day and night each from other: without it, what were the world but a dungeon?

3. It is exceeding necessary for the dispatch of all businesse.

4. To make the beautiful works of God visible, Heaven and Earth, and dissipate those sad thoughts and sorrows, which the darknesse both begetteth and maintaineth.

1. It manifests things, Eph. 5. 13.

2. We walk and work by it, Psal, 104. 22, 23. John 9. 4.

3. It is delightfull, Eccl, 11. 7.

Consectaries.

1. We cannot see light without light, nor know God without his teaching.

2. This serves to condemn our selves which cannot see God in this light, though we see it with content, we should lament his blindnesse. When the day begins to peep in at our windows, let God come into your thoughts, he comes cloathed and thus armed, tell your selves how beautifull and excellent he is.

3. It may exhort us to labour to raise up our hearts to God in hearty thankfulnesse for the light, How merciful and gracious art thou, who givest me light and the sight of it! take heed of abusing it to sin, and thy eyes, whereby thou discernest it, especially magnifie God that giveth you spiritual light, and sight. Christ is the light of the world; natural darknesse is terrible, light comfortable, what is spiritual?

The eye cannot see any thing without a double light Lumine innato, an inward light and on the in the Chrystalline humour of the eye. 2. Lumine illato, an outward light in the aire, object.

Light

Gen. 1. 4, 5.

Light is so pure, faire and clear, that nothing can pollute it, a resemblance of Gods infinite purity.

The creation of day and night, and the distinction and vicissitude of both, is the last thing in the first dayes work.

Day is the presence of light in one half of the world, and night the absence of it in the other. So that the dispute whether day or night were first, seems superfluous, seeing they must needs be both together: for at what time the light is in one half of the world, it must needs be absent from the other; and contrarily, for all darknesse is not night, nor all light day: but darknes distinguished from light, that is night, and light distinguished from darknes, that is day; unlesse we will take day for the natural, not the artificial day; that is, the space of 24. hours, in which the Sun accomplisheth his diurnal motion about the earth. Darknesse is nothing but the absence of light. Night is the space of time in every place, when the light is absent from them. Day is the space of time in every place, when the light is present with them; it is not simply the presence of light, but presence of light in one half of the world, when the other is destitute of it; and night is not simply the absence of light, but the absence of it from one half of the world, when the other half enjoyeth it. God made the Sun the chiefe instrument of continuing the course of day and night for ever, by its diurnal and constant motion. This is a wonderful work of God, and to be admired.

The day is in Greek ἡμέρα of ἥμερος gentle or tame; because it is appointed for tame creatures or of ἱείσθαι I desire, because it is to be desired. In Latine it is dies a Deo of God, as a divine thing. The night is called Νὺξ of Νύσσω to strike, as in Latine nox a nocendo of hurting.

The Scripture notes it, The day is thine, and the night also is thine, saith the Psalmist, and the ordinances of day and night cannot be changed.

The greatnesse of this work appeareth in the cause of it, and the beneficial effects.

First, For the cause, it is the incredibly swift motion of the Sun which goeth round about the world in the space of 24. hours, that is, the space of 60. miles every houre in the earth, but how many thousand 60. miles in its own circle or circumference, for the earth is a very small thing, compared to the Sun. The body of the Sun is 166. times (as it is thought) greater than the earth, therefore the circumference that it goes, must needs be at least so much larger than the compasse of the Earth, therefore its course must needs be at least 160 times 60 miles every houre, that is, almost 160000. miles every hour, that is, 166. miles every minute.

The celerity of this motion * is incredible, it goes beyond the thoughts of a man to conceive distinctly of the passage through every place; if a man should divide the circumference of the circle of the Sun into certain parts, he could not so soon have thought of them, as the Sun runs through them. God doth this great work, it is thought to be caused by the turning round of the highest Sphere or the Firmament, which pulling along with it self in the inferiour Orbes, makes them to move according to it course. But who can give a reason why that Sphere it self should go so swiftly, even much more swifter than the Sun, because it is far higher than the Sun, as much as that is higher than the earth: but the immediate power of God who doth move all in moving this one? But that God should make the Sun fulfill such a daily race to make day and night, it highly commends the work.

* This incredible swiftnes gave occasion to Copernicus and others to conceive the Globe of the Earth did rather move, and the Sun stand still. See Dr Hackwels Apologie, and Carpenters Geography.

Some think there is a greater probability the earth should move round once a day, than that the heavens should move with such an incredible swiftnesse, scarce compatible to any natural body. Others deny it, grounding their opinion upon Scripture, which affirm the earth to stand fast, so as it cannot be moved; and upon sense, because we perceive it not to move: and lastly upon reasons drawn from things hurled up, and let fall upon the earth. Mr Peeble in his briefe introduction to Geography, p. 2. Vide Wilhelmi Langii de Annis Christi, l. 1. c. 2. This conceit can not stand with the metaphore of a foundation here, and in other places applied to the earth. Dr Gouge on Heb. 1. 10. Sect. 23. Quatuor Gentilium sunt, à quibus Astrologi, & Civitates dies suos auspicantur. Nam aut ab ortu solis ad occasum dies finiunt, ut Babylonii solebant, aut à meridie ad meridiem, ut in umbria pleriique olim, aut ab occasu solis ad occasum, ut Athenienses, ac Judæi, aut à media nocte ad mediam, quod Romani usitatum fuit. Petavius de doctrina temporum, parte prima, l. 7. c. 1.

Again, The usefulnesse of it is great: for if it should be in any place alwaies night, what could they do? how should they live? How would any thing grow, seeing seeing the nights are cold, light and heat being companions, and cold and darkneſſe companions. If no light had been in the world, the world would not have been a place fit for living things. But if one half onely of the world ſhould have had light with it alwayes, it would have cauſed exceſſive heat, and ſo would have burnt up and conſumed all things, and been no leſſe harmefull than the defect of heat: but now the ſucceſſion of one of theſe to the other, viz. light and heat to darkneſſe and cold, doth ſo temper them by a kind of mixture, that it is in ſuch proportion in every place, as is neceſſary to bring forth all ſorts of living things, eſpecially the fruits of the earth. So God hath aſſigned ſuch a way and race to the Sun, which by his preſence makes day, and by his abſence night, as was fit, and onely fit for the quickning, enlivening, and comfort of every kind of living creature, ſo that upon this courſe the wel-being, yea the very being almoſt of all things doth depend.

The night eaſeth the burthen of the day; and the day driveth away the terrour of the night.

We ſhould lament and bewaile our exceeding great blindneſſe, that live day after day, and night after night, and yet buſie not our ſelves about this work, nor ſee God in it, though it be ſo conſtant as it was never ſtopped but twice ſince the beginning of the Creation. viz. in Hezekiah's time by going back of the Sun, and in Joſhuah's time by ſtopping of the Sun for a certain time by the immediate power of God.

Conſectaries from day and night.

We have the profit of the day and of the night, but neither in one nor other do we mark the wiſdome, goodneſſe, and power of God. In the night men reſt and refreſh their bodies with ſleep, wilde beaſts then wake and hunt for their prey. In the day men and tame creatures make and diſpatch their buſineſſe, and eat and drink, and wild beaſts then reſt in their dens. God is ſtill working for us, our thoughts are ſtill idle towards him: this is a proof of our Atheiſme and eſtrangement from him; this is the blindeneſſe of our minds, a not being able to diſcern of things by diſcourſe of reaſon, and the power of underſtanding; for the conceiving of which, juſt and plain reaſons are offered unto us. There is a natural blindneſſe of the eye, when it is unable to diſcerne things by the light of the Sun: this is felt and complained of, but ſpiritual blindneſſe of mind is, when it is unable to diſcern ſupernatural truths which concern the ſoul, and another and better life, by the uſe of reaſon, and help of thoſe principles which are as light unto it: this is not felt nor lamented, but it is therefore not felt, becauſe it is ſo natural to us, and becauſe we brought it into the world. The beginning of the cure of ſpirituall blindneſſe, is to ſee it: let us ſee it therefore, and be troubled at it; why do not I ſee Gods great work in making night and day to ſucceed each-other?

Night is the time of reſt. Sleep is the parentheſis of our troubles. Pſalm 104. 20, 21, 22, 23. Triplex fuit noctis condendæ finis. Primum hominum atque animalium ſubleuatio. Secundo, Rerum omnium (quæ interdiu lucis calore exſiccantur & torrentur) refrigeratio & humectatio quædam. Tertiò, Hominis ſecuritas, & ferarum, quæ nunc homini ſunt horrendæ, tuta vagatio. Danæi Phyſica Chriſtiana, Tract. 1. cap. 23.

Let us look up to God in his work, and meditate on it at fit times, in the morning ſo ſoon as we are awake, and begin to ſee the darkneſſe vanquiſhed, and the light conquering, and that the Sun is raiſed above our Horizon, and is come to viſit our parts again, it were a fruitful thing to think thus. How great a journey hath the Sun gone in this little time wherein I have been aſleep, and could obſerve nothing, and now returned again as it were to call me up? ſay, Lord, thou haſt made night, I have the benefit of it, and now light viſits me. O that I could honour thee, and magnifie thy power and the greatneſſe of thy hand, and uſe the light of the day to do the ſervices that are required at my hand in my place. Again in the evening a little before we ſleep, we ſhould think of the great work of making day, for theſe many hours the Sun hath been within our ſight, and ſhewed its beams and light unto us, and hath run a long race for our good, bringing with it lightſome chearfullneſſe, the companion of the day. Now is is gone to the other part of the world to viſit them, that God might ſhew his goodneſſe to one place

Sol exprobrat dormientem. Eraſm. Eſay 40. 5. The glory of the Lord, that is, Chriſt in the doctrine of the Goſpel: Shall be revealed, that is, made publick and openly known: And all fleſh ſhall ſee it, that is, men generally and univerſally in the far greater number, and in a manner, all the Nations Together, at one and the ſelf ſame time.

as well as to another. Where a multitude of things concur to one effect, with which none of them in particular is acquainted, there we cannot but know that one common wisdome ruleth them all, and so it is in the working of the Sun, Moon, and Stars, to make the seasons of the day and night, and of Summer and Winter, therefore some common wisdome must over-rule all of them. There is a spiritual light in our Horizon: whereas Judaisme and Turcisme is darknesse, and Popery a glimmering light. We should pray to God to give us a spirituall light, and be thankfull for it. He makes day and night also in respect of prosperity and adversity: weeping may continne for a night: this vicissitude keeps the soul in growth, in good temper, as the other is profitable for the body, pray to God to send Christ to them which sit in darknesse and in the shadow of death, and vouchsafe to make it day with them as well as with us. He hath said in his word, that he will discover the glory of his Son, and all the earth shall see it together.

Chap. IV.

Of some of the Meteors, but especially of the Clouds, the Rain, and the Sea, the Rivers, Grasse, Herbs, and Trees.

By the name of Clouds and Waters above the Firmament, Gen. 1. We may understand all Meteors both watery and fiery, which were then created in their causes, and so by clouds and winds, Psal. 104. 3. must be understood all the Meteors, the great works of God by which he sheweth himself and worketh in this lower Heaven.

They are called Meteors*, because they are most of them generated aloft in the aire.

Philosophers define a Meteor to be a body imperfectly mixed, arising from a vapour or exhalation in a high place.

Zanchius saith there are four sorts of Meteors, others make but three sorts.

1. Fiery, which in the Supreme Region of the aire are so enflamed by the fire, that they are of a fiery nature, as Comets, Thunder.

2. Airy, which being begotten of dry vapours of the earth, come near the nature of aire, as winds.

3. Watery, which retain the nature of the water, as snow and rain.

4. Earthly, which being begot of earthly vapours, are also digged out of the Earth, as metals, stones.

The efficient cause is God, according to that of the Psalmist, 148.8 hail, snow, ice, winde and storm do his will.

The remote matter of the Meteors are Elements, the next matter are exhalations, which are two-fold, fumus & vapor: smoak is of a middle nature between earth and fire, vapour between water and aire. If it come from the earth or some sandy place, it is fumus a fume or kinde of smoak: if it come from the water or some watery place, it is a vapour.

Vapours or exhalations are fumes raised from the water and earth by the heavenly bodies, into one of the three Regions of the aire, whence divers expressions are formed according the quality and quantity of the exhalations.

Thunder is a sound heard out of a thick or close compacted Cloud, which sound is procured by reason of hot and dry exhalations shut within the cloud: which seeking seeking to get out with great violence rend [a] the cloud, from whence proceeds the rumbling noise which we call Thunder.

* Meteora à loco, quia in sublimi regione pendent, Brierw. Meteorum latine significat, sublime, aut suspensum. Fromond. Meteorol. lib. 1. cap. 1. There are three sorts of Meteors, one of fire, and hot, the other of aire or water, and cold, the other mingled. He sendeth snow like wooll. Vapor est calidus & humidus, oritur que ex aere & aqua, exhalatio calida & sicca, oritur ex igne & terra. Zab. Tonitru à tendendo dicitur. Isidorus.

The earth sends out partly by its own innate heat, and partly by the external heat and attraction of the Sun, certain hot and [b] dry steams, which the Philosophers call exhalations: and these going up in some abundance, are at last enclosed within some thick cloud, consisting of cold and moist vapours, which finding themselves straightned, do with violence seek a vent, and break through the sides or low part of the cloud. There is first a great conflict and combate there of the contrary qualities, a great rumbling and tumbling and striving of the exhalations within the cloud, untill it break forth into a loud and fearful crack. Sonitus vehemens ab exhalatione excitatus fractione nubis. Then the exhalation by its heat incensed in the strife, proves all on a flame as it comes in the aire, and that is Lightning.

Lastly, The exhalation falling down upon the earth is so violent, that sometimes it breaks trees, sometimes it singeth and burneth what it meets with, it kils men and living creatures, and in the most abundance of it, there is a Thunder-bolt begotten through exceeding great heat hardning the earthly parts of it.

God hath power over the Thunder. He commands it, rules it, orders it, for time, place, manner of working, and all circumstances, the Thunder in Egypt and at the delivering of the Law proves this. Therefore in the Scripture it is called the voice of God, and the fearfulnesse and terribleness thereof is made an argument of the exceeding greatnesse of God, that can at his pleasure destroy his enemies even by the chiding of his voice; in Egypt he smote them with haile, lightning, thunder, and with stormy tempest.

At the delivering of the Law, mighty thunder-claps made way to the Lords appearance, and were his harbingers to tell of his coming, and prepare the hearts of the people with exceeding great awfulness and obedience to receive directions from him. The Lord puts down Job 40. 4. with this question, Canst thou thunder with a voice like God? speak terribly, and with as big and loud a voice as thou canst; and if thy voice be answerable to loud thunder, either in terribleness or loudness, then will I confess my self to be thy equal; and Elihu reasoned for God by consideration of this great work.

David, Psal. 29. sheweth the greatnesse of God in the greatnesse of this mighty sound. But it pleaseth God to effect this work, not immediately but mediately, using natural and ordinary causes according to his own good will and pleasure for the effecting thereof.

There do arise from the ends of the earth, as the Scripture speaks, that is, from all quarters of this inferiour part of the world, consisting of earth and water, certain steams or fumes partly drawn up thence by the heat and influence of the Sun and other Planets or Constellations, partly breathed out of the earth by the natural heat thereof. Whereof some are hot and moist, being as it were of a middle nature betwixt water and aire: some hot and dry, being of a middle nature betwixt fire and air, as some Philosophers think, of which two, as of the matter, are brought forth these strange things which we see in the air, and among the rest, Thunder, Though thunder be first in nature, being by the violent eruption it makes out of the cloud the cause of fulgurations, yet we see first the lightning before we hear the thunder, because of the swiftness of the fire above the air, and because the eye is quicker in perceiving its object then the ear.

This is done for the benefit of the world, that by shaking of the air it might be purged and made fit for the use of man and beast, being cleansed from those ill and pestilent vapours, which otherwise would make it too thick, gross, and unwholsome for our bodies, for this is one special end of winds, thunders, and the like vehement works that are in the air, besides the particular work for which God assigneth them, and therefore with thunder likely is joyned much rain, because the cloud is dissolved at the same time, and sometimes violent winds and tempests, because the exhalation inflamed, snatcheth with it self such windy fumes as it meets withall in the air, and so by violent stirring the air purgeth it, and openeth the parts of the earth by shaking and moving it.

[a] Like chesnuts or eggs breaking in the fire.

[b] Cum exhalatio Calida & ficca in nubibus occurrit humidæ & frigidæ, illam violenta eruptione perrumpit, atque ex hac collisione fragor oritur qui tonitru dicitur, atque accensio & inflammatio exhalationis, quæ fulgur nominatur. Arist. lib. 2. Meteor. cap. 2. & 8. Job 37. 4. 1 Sam. 7. 10, Psalm 29. per tot. & 18. 13. A winters thunder is a summers wonder. In Autumn or Spring are oftner meteors seen then in the summer and winter, except in such places where the Summer and Winter are of the temper of Spring and Autumn. Job 37. 1. to 6. Plutarch in the life of Flaminius reporteth that there was such a noise made by the Grecians after their liberty was restored, that the birds of the air that flew over them were seen to fall down by reason that the air divided by their cry, was made so thin, that there was no strength in it to bear them up, therefore the thunder must needs rarifie & make thin the aire.

1. We must turn all this to a ſpiritual uſe, viz. to inſtruct us in the fear of him that is Lord of Hoaſts, who ſhews his greatneſſe in theſe mighty deeds of his hand, to which purpoſe alwayes the Scripture ſpeaks of it, exhorting the mighty to give unto the Lord glory and ſtrength in regard of this.

2. We muſt obſerve God ſo in this and all his great works, as to cauſe our minds to increaſe in the knowledge of his excellency, and our hearts in the love and fear of him. All his works are therefore exhorted to praiſe him, becauſe we by all ſhould learn his praiſe and greatneſſe. How able is God to deſtroy ſinners! how quickly and in a moment can he bring them to ruine! let him but ſpeak to the thunder, haile, tempeſt, and they will beat down and conſume his adverſaries before his face. O then tremble before him.

3. We muſt learn to put our confidence in God, and boldly to promiſe our ſelves deliverance when he promiſeth it.

God is wonderfull in making and ruling the clouds. This is a work which God doth often alledge in Scripture to prove his greatneſſe, Job 37.26. He binds the waters in a garment, *Prov.*30.4. that is, makes the Clouds. How as it were by an even poyſing of one part with the other, God makes theſe Clouds to hover a great while over the earth before they be diſſolved, is a thing worthy admiration, and greatly ſurpaſſeth our knowledg, Job 38.34. *Pſal.*14.78. & *Prov.*8.28. *Pſal.*104.3. The cloud is water rarified drawn upward till it come to a cold place, and then it is thick, and drops down.

They are but nine miles (ſay ſome) from the earth, but they are of unequal height, and are lower in Winter than in Summer, when the Sun hath the greater force, then they aſcend higher, and in his ſmaller force they hang the lower. Vide Voſſium de orig. & progreſſ. Idol. l.2.c.83.

Let us conſider the cauſes of theſe clouds, and the uſes of them.

The efficient cauſes are thought to be the heat and influence of the Sun and the Stars which doth rarifie the water, and draw thence the matter of the clouds, as you ſhall perceive if you hold a wet cloath before the fire, that a thick ſteame will come out of it, becauſe the fire makes thin the thicknes of the water, and turns it into a kind of moiſt vapour, and the earth hath ſome heat mixed with it, through a certain quantity of fire, that is diſperſed in the bowels of it, which cauſeth ſuch like ſteams to aſcend out of it, and the coldneſs of the middle region doth condenſate and thicken theſe ſteams or breaths, and turn them again into water at length, and at laſt to thick clouds.

2. The matter is the ſteams that the waters and earth do yeeld forth by this heat.

The uſes of it are to make rain and ſnow, (ſnow is nothing but rain condenſated and whitened by the exceſſive cold in the Winter time as it is in deſcending) for the watering of the earth and making it fruitful, or elſe for the exceſſive moiſtning of the earth to hinder the fruitfulneſſe of it, if God ſee fit to puniſh. The earth without moyſture cannot bring forth the fruit that it ſhould, and ſome parts of the earth have ſo little water near them below, that they could not elſe be ſufficiently moyſtened to the making of them fruitful. God hath therefore commanded the Sun among other offices to make the vapours aſcend from the Sea and Earth, that he may pour down again upon the forſaken wilderneſs or other places, whether for puniſhment or otherwiſe.

Obj. How can it be conceived, that the clouds above, being heavy with water, ſhould not fall to the earth, ſeeing every heavy thing naturally deſcendeth and tendeth downward?

Anſw. No man by wit or reaſon can reſolve this doubt, but only from the Word of God, which teacheth that it is by virtue of Gods Commandment given in the Creation, that the Clouds fall not, *Gen.*1.6. Let the Firmament ſeparate the waters from the waters: by force of which commanding Word the water hangeth in the clouds, and the clouds in the aire, and need no other ſupporters, Job 26.7,8. ſetting out the Majeſty and greatneſſe of God in his Works, here beginneth, that He hangeth the Earth upon nothing, he bindeth the waters in the Clouds, and the Cloud is not rent under them. Philoſophy is too defective to yield the true reaſon of

If it be a great cloud it is called nubes, if but a little one, it is called nubecula ab obnubendo, aut perjendo cælum. The clouds are called the boſomes of heaven, Job 38.37. The windows and flood-gates of heaven, *Gen.*7.11. and *Mal.*3.10. the fountains of the deep, Prov. 8.28. and the watery roof of Gods chambers, *Pſal.*104.3. The pavilion, chariot, and treaſure of the Lord, *Pſal.*18.11. 2 *Sam.*22.12. ſwadling bands for the Sea, Job 38.9. The cloud is a thick & moiſt vapour drawn up from the earth by the heat of the Sun to the middle region of the air, and by the coldneſs there further thickened, ſo that it hangeth, untill either the weight or ſome reſolution cauſe it to fall down. Mr Perkins on Jude 12.

of this great work of God, which commonly attributeth too much to Natura naturata, Nature; and too little to Natura naturans, the God of nature.

Now we must here also blame our own carelesnesse and folly which forbear to consider of this work that hangs over our heads. The Clouds are carried from place to place in our sight, and cover the Sun from us. They hinder the over-vehement heat of the Sun from scorching of the earth, and yet we never think what strange things they be, and what a merciful Creator is he that prepared them. Not seeing God in the works of nature, shews great stupidity, and should make us lament. Let us endeavour to revive the thoughts of God in our minds by his works. When we see the Clouds carried up and down as we do sometimes one way, sometimes another swiftly, then let us set our heart awork to think there goes Gods Coach, as it were, here he rides above our heads to mark our way, and to reward or punish our good or bad courses with seasonable rain for our comfort, or excessive showers for our terror. O seek to him and labour to please him, that he may not find matter of anger and provocation against us.

Consectaries. Job 37. 11. to 17. Job 36. 32. Psalm 95. 1.

Psalm 104. 3.

When the Clouds either favour or chastise us, let us take notice of Gods hand in these either comfortable or discomfortable effects, and not impute it all to the course of nature.

By means of the Clouds God waters the earth, yea the dry wilderness: without moisture there can be no fruitfulness, without clouds no rain, without that no corn or grass, and so no man or beast.

Rain [a] is as it were the melting of a Cloud turned into water, Psal. 104. 13.

[a] Great rain is called Nimbus, small rain imber. Amos 4. 8.

It is a great work of God to make rain, and cause it fitly and seasonably to descend upon the earth. It is a work often named in Scripture, Deut. 11. 14. & 28. 12. Levit. 26. 4. Jer. 5. 24. It is noted in Job divers times, ch. 36. 27. He maketh small the drops of water. God propounds this work to Job, as a demonstration of his greatness, Job 38. 25, 34. See Jer. 30. 13. Psal. 137. 8. Now this work is the more to be observed in these respects.

1. The necessity of it in regard of the good it bringeth, if it be seasonable and moderate, and the evil which follows the want, excesse or untimelinesse of it.

2. In regard of mans utter inability to procure [b] or hinder it, as in the dayes of Noah, all the world could not hinder it; and in the dayes of Ahab none could procure it. The hebrews say, God keeps four keys in his own hand. 1. Clavis Pluviæ, the Key of the Rain, Deut. 28. 12. 2. Clavis Cibationis, the Key of Food, Psal. 145. 15, 16. 3. Clavis Sepulchri, the Key of the Grave, Ezek. 37. 12. 4. Clavis Sterilitatis, the Key of the Womb, Gen. 38. 22.

[b] Though all men should unite all their wits, purses & hands together, to make or to hinder one showr of rain, they are unable. Rich men, great, wise men have not these waters in command: The lesser creature can do to effect it, the more doth the greatness of God shine forth in it.

3. In regard of the greatness of the work in the course of nature, for the effecting of which so many wonders concur.

First, Without this drink afforded to the fields, we should soon find the world pined and starved, and man and beast consumed out of it for want of food to eat. It is the cause of fruitfulnesse, and the want of it causeth barrennesse, and so destruction of all living creatures that are maintained by the increase of the earth. As mischievous and terrible a thing as a famine is, so good and beneficial a thing is rain which keepeth off famine.

Secondly, It procureth plenty of all necessaries, when the Heavens give their drops in fit time and measure, the earth also sends forth her off-spring in great store and fit season, and so both men and beasts enjoy all things according to their natural desire, this so comfortable a thing as plenty is, so worthy a work of God, is the effect of rain, I mean rain in due season and proportion.

In Egypt there is seldom rain, it is made fruitful by the inundation of Nilus.

Terra suis contenta bonis, non indiga Mercis,
Aut Jovis, in solo tanta est fiducia Nilo. Lucan.
Egypt no rains nor merchandize doth need,
Nilus doth all her wealth and plenty breed.

The Romans accounted it their Granary.

Lastly,

In Judea rain is not ſo frequent as with us. Ferome ſaith, He never ſaw rain there in the Moneths of June and July: hence rain in Harveſt was there unuſual, Prov. 26. 1. 1 Sam. 12. 16.

Laſtly, The greatneſſe of the works which muſt meet together for making and diſtributing of rain, doth magnifie the work. The Sun by his heat draws up moiſt ſteams and breath from the earth and water, theſe aſcending to the middle region of the Air which is ſomewhat colder then the lower, are again thickned and turn into water, and ſo drop down by their own heavineſſe: by drops, not all together as it were by cowls * full, partly from the height of place, from which they fall, which cauſeth the water to diſperſe it ſelf into drops, and partly becauſe it is by little and little, not all at once thickned and turned into water, and ſo deſcends by little portions, as it is thickned. So the Sun and other Stars, the earth, the water, winds, and all the frame of Nature are put to great toil and pains as it were to make ready theſe Clouds, for from the ends of the earth are the waters drawn which make our ſhowrs.

* As they do in the Indies.

Verbum Dei comparatur pluviæ, Deut. 32. 2. Ideoque Hebræi uno verbo Jorah, & doctrinam, & pluviam efferunt. Mollerus.

God is the firſt efficient cauſe of rain, Gen. 2. 5. It is ſaid there, God had not cauſed it to rain, Job 5. 10. Jer. 14. 22. Zech. 10. 1. 2. The material cauſe of it is a vapour aſcending out of the earth. 3. The formal, by the force of the cold the vapours are condenſed into clouds in the middle region of the Air. 4. The end of rain, to water the earth, Gen. 2. 6. which generation and uſe of rain David hath elegantly explained, Pſal. 147. 8.

Thaumantis filiam dixere Iridem Poetæ, Colores ejus tam exactè, ut vix artificis poſſit exprimere manus.

The cauſe of the Rain-bow is the light or beams of the Sun in a hollow and dewy cloud, of a different proportion, right oppoſite to the Sun-beams, by the reflection of which beams, and the divers mixture of the light and the ſhade, there is expreſſed as it were in a glaſs the admirable Rain-bow.

Conſectaries from the Rain and Rain-bow.

We ſhould be humbled for our unthankfulneſs and want of making due uſe of this mercy, the want of it would make us mutter, yet we praiſe not God nor ſerve him the better when we have it, Jer. 14. 22. intimating, without Gods omnipotency working in and by them, they cannot do it. If God actuate not the courſe of Nature, nothing is done by it; let us have therefore our hearts and eyes fixed on him when we behold rain, ſometime it mizleth, gently deſcending, ſometimes fals with great drops, ſometime with violence, this ariſeth from the greater or leſſe quantity of the vapour, and more or leſſe heat or cold of the Air that thickneth or melteth, or from the greater or ſmaller diſtance of the cloud from the earth, or from the greater purity or groſneſſe of the Air by reaſon of other concurring accidents; either we feel the benefit or the want of rain likely once every moneth. Let not a thing ſo admirable paſſe by us without heeding to be made better by it, Want of moiſture from above muſt produce praying, confeſſing, turning, 1 King. 8. 35, 36.

Job 5. 8, 9, 10.

James 5. 17, 18. See Gen. 9. 13.

The colours that appear in the Rain-bow are principally three, 1. The Cerulean or watery colour, which notes (they ſay) the deſtroying of the world by water. 2. The graſſie or green colour, which ſhews that God doth preſerve the world for the preſent. 3. The yellow or fiery colour, ſhewing the world ſhall be deſtroyed with fire.

Dew conſiſts of a cold moiſt vapour which the Sun draweth into the Aire, from whence when it is ſomewhat thickned through cold of the night, and alſo of the place (whether the Sun exhaled it) it falleth down in very ſmall and indiſcernable drops to the great refreſhment of the Earth. It falleth only morning and evening.

Hoſ. 14. 5.

Hath the rain a Father? or who hath begotten the drops of Dew? Out of whoſe womb came the rain and the hoary froſt of Heaven? who hath gendred it? ſaith God to Job, Ch. 38. 28, 29.

A froſt is dew congealed by overmuch cold. It differs from the dew, becauſe the froſt is made in a cold time and place, the dew in a temperate time; both of them are made when the weather is calm and not windy, and generated in the loweſt region of the air.

Hail and ice is the ſame thing, viz. water bound with cold, they differ only in figure, figure, viz. that the hail-ſtones are orbicular, begotten of the little drops of rain falling, but Ice is made of water continued, whether it be congealed in Rivers, or Sea, or Fountains, or Pools, or any veſſels whatſoever, and retains the figure of the water congealed. Valeſius de ſacra Philoſophia.

Though Ice be not Cryſtal, yet ſome ſay Cryſtal is from Ice; when ice is hardned into the nature of a ſtone it becomes Cryſtal; more degrees of coldneſſe, hardneſſe and clearneſſe, give Ice the denomination of Cryſtal, and the name Cryſtal imports ſo much, that is, water by cold contracted into Ice. Plinie in his Natural Hiſtory ſaith, The birth of it is from Ice vehemently frozen. But Dr Brown [a] in his Enquiries into Vulgar Errours, doubts of it; and ſo doth Mr Hill in his Commentary on Dionyſius his Deſcription of the world, pag. 201, 202.

The Art of Glaſſe-making is very highly valued in Venice, for whoſoever comes to be a maſter of that profeſſion is reputed a Gentleman, Ipſa arte, for the Art ſake; and it is not without reaſon, it being a rare kind of knowledge and Chymiſtry to tranſmute the dull bodies of duſt and ſand, for they are the only main ingredients, to ſuch a diaphanous pellucid dainty body, as we ſee Cryſtal-glaſſe is, which hath this property above gold and ſilver, to endure no poiſon. Howel of Venice, p. 38, 39. [a] Lib. 3. c. 2. Lib. 2. c. 1.

Chryſtallus nomen à glacie mutuavit, quod ei ſit quoad perſpicuitatem & colorem ſimilis; à Κρυος gelu, & στελλω contraho, quaſi quid gelu concretum. Muſeum Wormianum l. 1. Sect. 2. c. 16.

The Windes are alſo a great work of God, he made, and he ruleth the Windes [b]. They come not by chance, but by a particular power of God, cauſing them to be, and to be thus, he brings them out of his treaſures, he cauſed the Winds to ſerve him in Egypt to bring Frogs, and after Locuſts, and then to remove the Locuſts again. He cauſed the Windes to divide the red Sea that Iſrael might paſſe. He made the winds to bring Quails. See Jonah 1.4. And the Winds are ſaid to have wings for their ſwiftneſſe; the nature of them is very abſtruſe.

[b] Pſal. 104.24. & 135.7. & 147.18. & 148.8. Mat. 8.26, 27.

It is a dry and hot fume aſcending upward, and beaten back again by the coldneſſe of the middle region, and ſome comes downward again ſideling, with more or leſſe violence, as the fume is larger or ſubtiller, and the cold more or leſſe.

By Windes in Scripture are underſtood:

1. Temporal judgements on Civil States, Jer. 49.36.
2. The blowings of the Spirit, eſpecially accompanying the Ordinances, Acts 2.12. Cant. 4.16. Ezek. 37.4.
3. Spiritual Judgements, Hereſie, Schiſms, Diviſions, Epheſ. 4.14. Jude 11, 12. Apoc. 7.1. Durham in loc.

The efficient cauſes of them are the Sunne and Starres, by their heat drawing up the thinneſt and drieſt fumes or exhalations, which by the cold of the middle Region being beaten again, do ſlide obliquely with great violence through the air this way or that way. The effects of it are wonderfull, they ſometimes carry rain hither and thither, they make froſt, and they thaw, they are ſometimes exceeding violent, and a man that ſees their working can hardly ſatisfie himſelf in that which Philoſophers ſpeak about their cauſes, The winde bloweth where it liſteth, we hear its ſound, but know not whence it cometh, nor whether it goeth. It is a thing which far ſurpaſſeth our underſtanding to conceive fully the cauſes of it.

Ventus à violentia & vehementia nomen habet, quòd veniat abundè, & magna vi irruat in unum aliquem locum. Mag. Ph. Ventos dedit Deus ad aëris terrarumque temperiem; præterea ad evocandas ſupprimendaſque pluvias, & alendos ſatorum arborumque fructus: nec non ad inflationem, quæ putredini eſt vindex. Moriſoti Hiſt. orbis Maritimi. l. 11. c. 39. Vide plura ibid. Some think the Angels cauſe the winds to blow, Revel. 7.1. but that is but a conceit. See Mr Pells Improvement of the Seas on Pſal. 107. 25. p. 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372. Prov. 30.4. Amos 4.13.

They blow moſt ordinarily at the Spring and fall, for there is not ſo much wind in Winter, becauſe the earth is bound with cold, and ſo the vapour the matter of the winde cannot aſcend; nor in Summer, becauſe vapours are then raiſed up by the Sun, and it conſumes them with his great heat.

The profit of the wind. Dr Fulk of Meteors.

Theſe windes alter the weather, ſome of them bringing rain, ſome drineſſe, ſome froſt and ſnow, which are all neceſſary; there is alſo an univerſal commodity dity which riſeth by the only moving of the Air, which Air if not continually ſtirred would ſoon putrifie and infect all that breathe upon the earth. They blow from East, Weſt, North, South, *Eccleſ.*1.6. The Weſtern winds are ſtrongeſt, the Northern coldeſt.

It made Adam tremble when God came in the wind.

It ſerves to condemn our own blindneſſe that cannot ſee God in this great work; the Winde cometh down unto us, it is near us, we feel the blaſts of it, and yet we feel not the power and greatneſſe of God in it. When God doth ſo plainly, and ſo many wayes diſcover himſelf to us, yet blinde wretches we perceive him not. We are now to ſtirre up our minds to the conſideration of God in this his mighty work. See him walking through the earth, and viſiting it in the ſwift wings of this creature. It hath alſo an ape reſemblance and Image of God in it:

1 Cor.12.11.

Firſt, In the ſubtilneſſe and inviſible nature of it; the ſwiftneſſe of the Winde may note his Omnipreſence, who is ſaid to ride on the wings of the winde.

Secondly, In its powerfull motion and efficacy, which no man can hinder or reſiſt.

Thirdly, In the freedome of its motion, John 3.7.

Fourthly, In the ſecreſie of his working of mighty works; the Windes are inviſible.

The conſideration of the Winds, leads us into our ſelves, and that

1. For Humiliation; for who knoweth the nature of the Winde, the place of the Winde, the way of the Winde, to ſee in it our own vanity? Job 7.7. Pſal. 78.39.

Mat.8.26. Jer.18.17.

2. Inſtruction: Shall ſo fierce a creature be at a beck, and ſhall not I? See the miſerable eſtate of wicked men, on whom deſtruction and fear ſhall come as a whirlwinde, Prov. 27. 18. They ſhall be as ſtubble or chaffe before the winde, Pſal. 1.

Ariſtotle lib.1. cap.8. of his Meteors, makes Galaxias, or via lactea, a meteor, which is congeries minutiſſimarum ſtellularum contiguè colluentium, quas eadem arundo Dioptrica noviter detexit. Schickardi Aſtroſcopium.

* Metalla, i.e. μὴ ἄνωθεν γινόμενα, that is, which is ingendred or bred about, or with ſome other thing, as gold about ſilver, and ſilver about braſſe. Plin. lib.33. chap.6. Metals naturally grow (as ſome obſerve) in Lands moſt barren. Nature recompenſing the want of other things with theſe hidden treaſures. Purchas his Pilgrimage, *l.*8. *c.*1. Sect. 3. See more there. Vide Muſæum Wormianum *lib.*1. *Sect.*3. c. 1. Medallix vulgò nomiſmata vetera, quæ non amplius in uſu, ſed ſolùm antiquitatis cauſâ aſſervantur, ex Latino metalla. quia ex auro, argento, ære. Voſſ. *de vitiis Sermonis l.*3.*c.*25.

Metals* are mineral ſubſtances, fuſible and malleable. They are commonly diſtinguiſhed into perfect and imperfect; perfect, becauſe they have leſſe impurity or heterogeneity in them, as gold and ſilver; imperfect, becauſe they are full of impurities, as iron, copper, tin and lead.

The Latine word Argentum comes from the Greek Ἄργυρος, and is derived ἀπὸ τῆς ἀργότητος, becauſe of its white colour.

Of Metals gold is eſteemed moſt precious, as moſt enduring both age and fire, and leaſt ſubject to ruſt.

Gold of all metals is the moſt ſolid, and therefore the moſt heavy. It will loſe none of his ſubſtance, neither by fire nor water; therefore it will not make broth more cordial, being boiled in it. The ſecond place is given to ſilver amongſt metals, becauſe next to gold it is the moſt durable, and leaſt endammaged by fire.

The finding of that gold which is under the earth, as of all other Mines of mettal, is almoſt miraculous. They cut up a ground hazell of a twelve-moneths growth, which divides above into a fork; holding the one branch in the right hand, and the other in the left, not graſpt too ſlightly, nor too ſtrictly. When paſſing over a Mine, or any other place where gold and ſilver is hidden, it will diſcover the ſame, by bowing down violently. A common experiment in Germany; not proceeding from any incantation, but a natural ſympathy, as iron is attracted by the Loadſtone. Mr George Sandys his Commentary upon the 11th Book of Ovids Metamorphoſis.

They

They are called precious stones, Rev. 18. 12.

1. Because of their beauty.
2. Because of their vertue.
3. Because of their price.

Precious stones (in Latine Gemmæ) are esteemed for their rarity, or for some vertue fancied to be in them, or for their pureneſſe and transparencie.

They are called in Greek Μαργαρίται à nitore splendente. Waſerus De Lapidum pretiosorum nucleo.

Thoſe Pearls are preferred which are moſt white, bright, round, light, eſpecially if naturally they be pierced, Rueus l. 1. c. 13. de Gem.

Latini uniones vocant, non quia unquam duo simul reperiantur, ut Solinus prodidit, & Hadoto, verum, quia, si maxime ita Plinius, Nulli duo reperiantur indiſcreti. Voſſius de orig. & progreſſ. Idol. L. 4. c. 47. Jocale eſt Gallicum joyaull, & Belgicum juweel: Unde Gemarii juwellers. Nempe Gemmâ, & iſtiuſmodi, ſolùm joco, hoc eſt, oblectamento, ac inani inſerviunt voluptati. Voſſ. de vitiis Serm. l. 3. c. 17.

That Pearl of Cleopatras was of great price. Thomas Nicols hath written well the Hiſtory of Precious Stones.

The Pſalmiſt declares the great work of God in diſtinguiſhing the waters from the Earth, and making Sea and dry Land. The waters at the firſt did encompaſſe and cover the Earth round about as it were a garment, and overflow the higheſt parts of it altogether, ſo that no dry ground was ſeen, or could be ſeen in the world, this was the firſt conſtitution of them, as Moſes relateth, Gen. 1. 2. The deep was the whole Orb of waters, which incloſed the Earth in themſelves. But then God pleaſed to divide the waters from the Earth, ſo as to make dry Land appear, and for that end, he drave the waters into one place, ſpreading the Earth over them, and founding it upon them, Pſalm 104. 6, 7. God by his mighty power (compared there to a thundering voice) did make the waters to gather together into the place that he had appointed for them under the Earth, and that by raiſing up Hills and Mountaines, and cauſing Dales and Valleys, then God appointed the waters their bounds, that they ſhould ſtill continue in theſe hollowes under the Earth, and not returne to cover the Earth, as elſe of their owne nature they would have done.

Third dayes work. Pſal. 104. 8, 9. It is called Mare, either from the Latine Amarum, or the Chaldee Marah ſignifying alſo bitter; and Iam, becauſe the Sea-water is bitter and ſalt. For the uſe of man, and all other living creatures, God made a ſeparation of the earth and water, cauſing the water to ſink down into huge hollow chanels prepared to receive it, that ſo the dry Land might appear above it.

They are called great waters, Pſal. 107. 23.

1. For latitude they are called both great and wide, Pſalm 104. 25, 26. We call ſome the narrow Seas, becauſe Lands and Countreys are not farre diſtant from each other.

2. Longitude.

3. Profundity. They are of ſuch an unfadomable depth in many places, that no bottome is to be found, though one would tie themſelves with line and lead to make the trial of it.

There are divers profitable Queſtions about theſe things:

1. Whether the Sea would not naturally overflow the Land, as it did at the firſt Creation, were it not withheld within his banks by divine power?

We muſt conſider the earth and waters.

The anſwer is affirmative, and the reaſon is evident, the water is lighter than the Earth, and heavier things are apt to pierce through the light, and the light will take to themſelves an higher place, and give way to the heavier things to

1. Abſolutely, as they are Elements, and ſolid bodies, ſo the water hath the higher place, being lighter. 2. In reſpect of the ſuperficies of either; ſo the ſuperficies of the Earth is higher. Carpenter's Geography. If we compare the Caſpia and the neareſt Sea, then the Land is higher than the Sea: But if we compare the Land and the main Sea, then the Sea is higher than the Land; and therefore the Sea is called Altum, where ſhips ſail farther to the ſhore than from it. Vide Rivetum in Pſal. 24. ver. 2. & Fromondi Meteorologi l. 3. cap. 1. Artic. 2.

deſcend through them; mix a great deal of dirt and water, and let it ſtand a while and take its own proper courſe, and the dirt will ſink to the bottome, leaving the water above it ſelf. Ariſtotle and others ſay, that the Sea is higher than the Earth, and they can render no reaſon why it (being apt to run abroad) ſhould be kept from overflowing the Land, whence he proves Gods providence; but Voſſius de Orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. l. 2. c. 67. and others, deny that the Sea is higher than the Earth.

Non vivamus in ipſo mari, & ſicut aqua diluvii quindecim cubitis ſuperiores fuerunt altiſſimis montibus; Ita etiamnum Oceanus ſuperat terram trium ulnarum altitudine. Sed quare non ebruit nos? Quia Deus poſuit terminum mari. Idem videre eſt in omnibus furoribus mundi tumultuantis adverſus Eccleſiam. Luther. in Genes. 35.

2. Whether there be more Sea or Land. The multitude of waters made by God at firſt did cover the Earth, and incloſe it round; the Sea therefore muſt needs be far greater than the Earth. The Maps ſhew it to be greater in quantity than the Earth.

* Carpenter in his ſecond Book of Geography, ch. 10. ſaith, the perpendicular height of the higheſt mountains ſeldome exceeds ten furlongs.

3. Whether the deepneſſe of the Sea * doth exceed the height of the mountains.

It was a great work of God to make Mountains and Valleys, Hils and Dales. The Engliſh Language uſeth one and the ſame word for Hils and Mountains, calling the one as well as the other Hils, without any other diſtinction, but that ſometimes the word ſmall or great is added. The leſſer ſort are properly Hils, in Latine Collis; the bigger ſort is Mons a mountain.

See Voſſius in his Obſervat. on Mela, lib. 1. cap. 11. and Sr Walter Rawleighs Hiſtory of the World, lib. 1. cap. 7. Sect. 11. and Purchas his Pilgrimage, lib. 5. cap. 13. Sect. 1. It is called Atlas from a and τλάω, tolero, becauſe it is ſaid to ſuſtain Heaven. Nothing is to be ſeen but ſnow at the top of the Alpes, which hath lain there beyond the memory of man, and (as ſome ſay) ever ſince the floud. Raymunds Mercurio Italico, p. 252. Of the great profundity of the Sea. See Pells Improvement of the Seas, p. 155. and Orbis Maritimus lib. 1. cap. 49.

The Scripture often mentions it, Prov. 8. 25. Pſal. 65. 6. & 95. 4. & 90. 2. Pſa. 104. 8. Amos 4. 13. Therefore are the mountains exhorted to praiſe God, Pſalm 146. 9. Iſa. 40. 12. He is ſaid to have weighed the mountains in ſcales, and the hils in balances, that is, to have poiſed them even, ſo that the Earth might remain immovably in the parts of it as well as in the whole.

Mountains and Valleys were not made (as ſome have thought) by the Flood, but were created for beauty, uſe and variety, Pro. 8. 25. that is, before the worlds beginning. See Pſal. 104. 8. Daille his 2d part of his Melange De Sermons on Pſal. 107. 23. and alſo Mr Pell on that Text.

The greatneſſe of this work appears:

First, In the ſtrangeneſſe and hiddenneſſe of it.

How ſhould ſo heavy a thing as the Earth thus heave up it ſelf into ſo great aſcents, to give place unto the waters under it? The immediate power of God is the cauſe of it, Pſalm 24. 6. & Pſalm 136. It may be ſome Hils were made by the fury and violent motion of the waves of the waters of Noah's floud; but the moſt and greateſt were created on the third day. See Gen. 7. 20.

Secondly, In the uſefulneſſe of it.

1. For beauty and ornament, it gives a more delightfull proſpect to ſee Hils and Dales, then to look upon all one even and flat piece of ground without any ſuch rilings.

2. It conduceth to the fruitfulneſſe of the Earth. The Vales are much more fruitfull than if they were flats without Hils, becauſe of the dew and moiſture that deſcendeth upon them from the Hils, and ſome things grow better upon the higher places, on the ſides or tops of the Mountains.

3. Without ſuch Hils and Mountains there could not have been room for the waters which before did ſwallow up the Earth in its bowels, neither could the dry Land have appeared.

4. With-

4. Without ſuch Hils and Dales there could not have been Rivers and Springs running with ſo conſtant a courſe.

5. Hils and Mountains are the receptacles of the principal Mines for metals and quarries for all kind of uſefull ſtones, Deut. 8.9. & 33.15. They are for boundaries betwixt Countrey and Countrey, Kingdome and Kingdome. We ſhould tell our ſelves how admirable and uſefull this kinde of frame and ſituation of the Earth is.

4. Whether * Iſlands came ſince the floud? See Dr Browns Vulgar Errors refuted by Mr Roſſe, c.13.

* Inſulæ portiones terræ ſunt Oceano cinctæ ortum varia habent principia. Emerſere quædam ex mari, ac continenti avulſa quædam; aggeſta nonnullis ortum dedit materia. Johnſtoni Thaumatographia naturalis.

5. What is the cauſe of the ſaltneſſe of the Sea?

The water of the Sea is ſalt, not by nature, but by accident. Ariſtotle refers the ſaltiſh quality of the Sea-water to the Sunne, as the chief cauſe, for it draws up the thinner and freſher parts of the water, leaving the thicker and lower water to ſuffer aduſtion of the Sun-beams, and ſo conſequently to become ſalt. Two things chiefly concur to the generation of ſaltiſhneſſe, drowth and aduſtion; therefore in Summer, and under the torrid Zone, the Sea is ſalter. Our Urine and Excrements for the ſame reaſon are alſo ſalt, the pureſt part of our nouriſhment being imployed in and upon the body. Lidyat attributes it to under-earth, or rather under-ſea fires of a bituminous nature, cauſing both the motion and ſaltneſſe of the Sea. Vide Voſſ. de Orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. l.2. c.68. Zanch. de oper. Dei partis 2da l.4. c.1. Quæſt.5.

Duo maxima quæ Mari tribuuntur mira, ſalſedo & reciprocatio. Johnſtoni Thaumatographia naturalis.

The Sea is ſalt:

1. To keep it from putrifaction, which is not neceſſary in the floods, becauſe of their ſwift motion.

2. For the breeding and nouriſhing of great fiſhes, being both hotter and thicker.

Ac à ſalſedine quidem ſalum vocatur Pontus, ob amaroremautem dictum eſt mare. Nam & mare; & amarus veniunt ab Hebræo מר quod notat amarum eſſe. Voſſius de origine & progreſſ. Idol. l.2. c.68. Vide Fromond. Meteorol. l.5. c.1. Artic.3. Et Moriſoti Orbis Maritimi Hiſt. l.11. c.44.

6. What is the cauſe of the ebbing and flowing of the Sea?

There have been many opinions of the cauſe of the ebbing and * flowing of the Sea. De quo plura pro ingeniis differentium, quam pro veritatis fide expreſſa.

Zebulun that dwelt at the Haven of the Sea, Gen. 41. 12. found the benefit of the fluxes and the refluxes of the Sea, by which their ſhips came in, and by which they went out: So doth the Thames in London, and Hull in Humber.

* It is called Reciprocatio, & æſtus maris, becauſe it is cauſed by a hot exhalation boyling in the Sea, or becauſe the Sea ſuffers, as if it boiled again with heat. Brerewood de Meteoris. See Purchas his Pilgrimage, l.5. c.13. Sect.2. Vide Voſſ. de orig. & progreſſ Idol. l.2. c.6. Et Zanch. de oper. Dei part.2. lib.4. cap.1. Et Fromond. Meteorol l.5. c.1. Art.7,8,9, 10,11,&c. Et Moriſoti orbis Maritimi Hiſtoriam l.11. c.42.

Some ſay, it is the breathing or blowing of the world, as Strabo, Albertus Magnus, one ſaid it was becauſe the waters getting into certain holes of the Earth, were forced out again by Spirits remaining within the Earth. Macrobius ſaid it was by meeting the Eaſt and Weſt Ocean. Cicero ſeemes to aſcribe it onely to the power of God. Others for the moſt part aſcribe it to the various light or influences of the Moon, which rules over all moiſt bodies. Some attribute it to certain ſubterranean or under-ſea fires. The final cauſe of the Seas motion is the preſerving and purging of the waters, as the Air is purged by windes. Iſaiah alludes to the ebbing and flowing of the Sea, Chap. 57. 2.

See Mr Boyls Phyſico-Mechanical Experiments. Exper. 18.

Calius Rhodiginus (Antiq. Lect. lib. 29. cap. 8.) writeth of Ariſtotle, that when he had ſtudied long about it, at laſt being wearied, he died through tediouſneſſe of ſuch an intricate doubt. Some ſay, he drowned himſelf in Euripus, becauſe he could find no reaſon why it had ſo various a fluxion and refluxion ſeven times a day at leaſt, adding before that his precipitation, Quoniam Ariſtoteles non capit Euripum, Euripus capiat Ariſtotelem. Since Ariſtotle could not comprehend Euripus, it ſhould comprehend him. But Dr Brown in his Enquiries [a] ſeems to doubt of the truth of this ſtory. And Voſſius lib. 2. de Orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. cap. 69. denies that Decumani fluctus are greater than the other nine; for he ſaith, that he and his friends often obſerved it at the Sea, that they were no greater than the others.

[a] *Lib.*7. *cap.*13.

Other Queſtions there are concerning Rivers. What is the original of [b] Springs and Rivers? What manner of motion the running of the Rivers is, whether ſtraight or circular?

[b] See Dr Jorden of Bathes, chap. 3. Purchas his Pilgrimage. lib. 5. *cap.*13. *Sect.*3.

Rivers are ſaid to be ingendred in the hollow concavities of the Earth, and derive both their birth and continual ſuſtenance from the air; which penetrating the open chinks of the Earth, and being congealed by the extream cold of that element, diſſolves into water, as the air in winter nights is melted in a pearly dew ſticking on our glaſſe-windows.

Framond in his *Metearologicks lib.*5. *cap.*2. diſtinguiſheth between thoſe words, Fons, Flumen, Fluvius, Amnis, Rivus, Torrens. A Fountain is a water flowing continually out of the ſuperficies of the Earth. Flumen and Fluvius are Synonyma, and have their name à fluxu from flowing. Amnis is a River which compaſſeth ſomething, ſo called ab ambitu. Rivus is a thinner water infuſed from a Fountain into a channel, and continually running. Torrent is a River ſtirred up by ſuddain ſhowrs derived à torrendo, which ſignifies to dry. Thomas Lidyat our own Countreyman hath publiſht a learned Diſquiſition, De origine Fontium. Moriſotus the learned Frenchman in his Book ſtiled Orbis Maritimus l. 11. *c.*44. diſcuſſeth that Queſtion, Why fiſhes live not in the ſalt fountains and lakes, when the Sea abounds with innumerable fiſhes?

As one part of the waters, and the far greater part, is gathered into one place, and much of it hidden in the bowels of the Earth, and there as it were impriſoned or treaſured up by making the Sea and dry Land, ſo another part of them was appointed to run up and down within the Earth, and upon it in Springs and Rivers, which Rivers are nothing but aſſembling of the waters into divers great chanels from the Fountains and Springs, which the Pſalmiſt deſcribeth by its matter, and uſe or effect, *Pſal.*104.10. He ſendeth the ſprings into the valleys which run along the hils, that is, He made the Springs and Fountains to convey waters from place to place, the uſe of this is to give drink unto the beaſts, even unto the wilde Aſſes who quench their thirſt there, *verſ.*11. There be many other uſes of Springs and Rivers, but this is noted as the moſt manifeſt and evident. Another uſe is for the Fowls, which have their habitation in the Trees which grow near, and by means of theſe Springs, and there they ſit and ſing, *verſ.*12. Theſe Springs bring up ſo much moiſture to the upper parts of the Earth, as cauſeth Trees to grow alſo for Fowls to build and ſing in [c]. Some of the waters were drawn up into the middle region of the world, and changed into Clouds, that ſo they may be diſſolved and poured down again from thence upon the Hils alſo, and other places which cannot be watered by the Springs, that ſo the whole Earth may be ſatisfied with the fruit of Gods works.

[c] Hac eſt origo fontium & fluviorum, ut Salomon etiam aperte indicat. Eccleſ.1.7. Hoc tamen neſcivit deſipi Ariſtotelei, rerum naturalium diligentiſſimus indagator. Foord. in Pſalm. 104. 10, 11, 12.

Vide Athan. Kirch. *Oedip. Ægypt. Tom.*1. *Symag.*1.*c.*6,7.

John Baptiſta Scotia, a Jeſuite, hath publiſhed two Books of the River Nilus, Wendeline hath written a Book, which he calleth Admiranda Nili. It ſeemeth not without cauſe that the name Paper is derived from Papyrus, growing in in Nilus; ſo much Paper hath been written thereof. Purchas his Pilgrimage, lib. 6. cap. 1.

The ſoyl of Ægypt is ſandy and unprofitable, the River both moiſtning and manuring it. Yea, if there die in Cairo five thouſand of the plague the day before, yet on the firſt of the Rivers increaſe, the plague not onely decreaſeth, but meerly ceaſeth, not one dying the day after. Id. ibid. The name Nachal, a Torrent, is given to this River in the Bible, Numbers 3. 5. Joſh. 15. 47. Eſay 27. 12. 2 Chron. 7. 8. ἀπ' ἐχχὼν, and the name Nilus is derived from it.

Nilus is the moſt famous River in the world, whether we conſider the greatneſſe and length of it (for it runs about nine hundred and eight German miles) or the things it produceth, or the miraculous flowing and

The Poets feigned that Jupiter, Neptune and Pluto divided the Univerſe, and that Neptune had the Sea for his part, which is called Neptunus, either à nando from Navigation, or à nubendo, from covering, becauſe the Sea covers the Earth: and Pontus, the Nations about Pontus thought no Sea in the world like unto their own, and doubted whether there were any other Sea but that, whence Pontus was uſed for the Sea in general.

ebbing of it. Cowley his notes on the Pindarique Odes. Fluviorum rex pulcher Tiberis, cui primatum aterna urbis Roma ſingularis tribuit magnitudo, naſcitur ex monte Apennino: currit millia CCCC. Æthici Coſmographia. Strabo in his 15th Book ſaith, Ganges is counted the greateſt River. Euphrates in the Scripture is called the great River, and the River by an excellency. It is called by the Hebrews Pherath from Pharah, fluctuoſus fuit, becauſe by its inundation it makes Meſopotamia fertill, as it is declared by Pliny and Solinus, chap. 40. from that name by adding the ſyllable εὐ the name εὐφρήτης was formed by the Grecians. The whole courſe of it is deſcribed by Pliny l. 5. c. 24. and by Strabo l. 11. The crooked bending of the River Maander is celebrated in a Proverb. See Pliny l. 5. c. 29. whence oblique Counſels, or verborum ambages are wont to be called Maandri.

The Sea is a wide and ſpacious place, Pſal. 104. 25.

Multa tamen latus triſtia Pontus habet. Ovid Epiſt. Dido Æneæ.

The great deep, the womb of moiſture, the well of fountains, the great pond of the world. Dr Hall Contemplat.

The reaſon of the greatneſſe and wideneſſe of it, is the multitude of waters which were made by God at the firſt, which becauſe they did cover the Earth, and incloſe it round, it muſt needs be far greater than the Earth, and therefore when God ſaw fit to diſtinguiſh the dry Land from the Earth, muſt needs have very great ditches cut for it in the Earth, and caverns made to hold it: and therefore the Earth in the Scripture is ſaid to be ſpread out upon the Sea, becauſe a great part of it is ſo in reſpect of the waters that are under it.

Again, The principal uſe of the Sea and waters thereof was, that it might ſupply vapours for making of the Clouds by the attraction of the Sunne, and native heat of the Sea, in reſpect of ſome fire which God hath mixed with the Earth and waters, that they may be more fit to give life to living things. Amos 5. 8. & 9. 6.

Now if the Superficies of the Sea were not very large and wide, the Sunne could not have power enough by its attractive heat and warmth, by which it doth attenuate and make thin the waters into vapours: which after the cold of the Air, when they come into the middle Region of it, doth again thicken and turn it into waters. I ſay, The Sunne could not elſe have power to draw out of the Sea ſufficient ſtore of theſe vapours for watering the Earth with ſhowrs. So the multitude of the waters, and the neceſſity of having much of them drawn up for rain required, that they ſhould not have little receptacles, but one ſo great and ſpacious a receptacle, which we call the Sea. Oceanus, the Ocean is that general collection of all waters which environeth the world on every ſide.

Dictus eſt Oceanus à Græco voce ὠκὺς, qua velocem ſignificat. Claudii Barthol. Moriſoti Orbis Maritimus l. 11. c. 45. Nauta recentiores, qui proximè polos navigaverunt, hîc ſe in Oceanum perpendiculo, fundum non invenire prodierunt: ibi enim immenſa & abundantiſſima flumina lacuſque è terris devolvuntur, parumque è mari Sol trahit, qui raro eo locorum lucet, nec niſi remotior & hyberna luce exporrecta ſub utroque polo navigantibus. Atlantici atque Æthiopici aquoris altitudo 15. ſtadiorum putatur. Id. ibid.

Mare

Mare the Sea is a part of the Ocean, to which we cannot come but by ſome ſtrait.

Moriſotus in the ſecond Book of his Orbis Maritimus chap. 44. ſhews, why the Sea is not increaſed by the flowing in of the Rivers. The Latine word Ora the Sea-coaſt, is derived ab ore, becauſe there are certain extremities oppoſite to themſelves, with a hollowneſſe between, as lips about a mouth. Pomponius Mela often diſtinguiſheth between Ora and Littus. Littus proprie rectum aliquem videtur ſignificare tractum, & apud hunc, & apud alios: Ora vero tractum univerſum maritimum, qui ex variis conſtat litoribus. Voſſii Obſervat. ad Pomponium Melam. lib. 1. cap. 111.

Pſal. 104. 25. 107. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. Dr Halls Contempl.

In the Sea are innumerable creatures, ſmall and great, there walk the Ships, there play the Leviathans. What living mountains (ſuch are the Whales, ſome of which have been found ſix hundred foot long, and three hundred and ſixty foot broad) rowl up and down in thoſe fearfull billows! for greatneſſe of number, hugeneſſe of quantity, ſtrangeneſſe of ſhapes, variety of faſhions, neither air nor earth can compare with the waters.

Pſal. 104.

Another uſe of the Sea is, There go the Ships, as the Prophet ſpeaks in a kind of wonderment.

The whole Art of Navigation is a ſtrange Art, the Lord fitted the Sea for this purpoſe, that it might be uſefull to tranſport men from place to place, and other things from Countrey to Countrey. Men build moveable houſes, and ſo goe thorow the waters on dry ground: they flie thorow the Sea by the help of windes gathered in fitly with ſails, as Birds do thorow the Air: and having learnt of Birds to ſteer themſelves in the Sea, they have an Helm, at the which the Maſter ſitting, doth turn about the whole body of the Ship at his pleaſure. The ſwiftneſſe of the motion of a Ship is ſtrange; ſome ſay, that with a ſtrong winde they will go exceeding faſt. The Lord hath given underſtanding to man to frame a huge veſſel of wood cut into fit pieces, and to joyn it ſo cloſe with pitch and rozin, and other things mixt together, that it ſhall let in none, or but a little water, and it ſhall carry a very great burden within, and yet will not ſink under water; and hath given wiſdome alſo to man to make ſails to receive the ſtrength of the wind, and cords to move them up and down at pleaſure, and to make maſts to hang on thoſe ſails, and hath given men a dexterity to runne up to the tops of theſe maſts, by means of a cord framed in faſhion of a ladder, that can but even amuſe an ordinary beholder, and all this for a moſt excellent uſe, viz. of maintaining commerce betwixt Nation and Nation, and of conveying things needfull from one place to another, that all places might enjoy the Commodities one of another.

Licèt vaſta aliqua navis ocius vento, ocius ſagitta feratur, motus tamen ille non adficit veſtores. Voſſius on Mela l. 2. c. 3. Sed quod ad fabulam de Pegaſo, quo Bellerophontes vectus fingitur; nihil profectò aliud Pegaſi nomine quam navis intelligendum videtur, ut Pegaſi nomen formatum ſit à πήγνυμι Compingo; equus verò ænigmaticè vocatur, quod perinde à gubernatore ac equus à ſeſſore regatur, propter vela vero alis ſimilia alatus fingatur. Hilli in Dionyſii Περιηγησιν Commentarius.

1 King. 19. 26. & 10. 22.

To this Art of Navigation do Kingdoms owe moſt of their riches, delights and choiſe curioſities, a great part of Solomons riches came in this way; it is the eaſieſt, ſafeſt and quickeſt way of tranſportation of goods.

Conſectaries from the Sea.

How obnoxious are we to God, therefore we ſhould not be bold to offend him, how much danger do we ſtand in if he ſhould let the waters take their own natural courſe, and exalt themſelves above the mountains.

At the flood he gave leave to the great Deeps to break their bounds, and permitted the waters to take their own place, and the waters were ſome ſeven yards higher than the tops of higheſt mountains. He can do as much now for the demonſtration of his juſt wrath; for though he hath promiſed that the waters ſhall never overflow the whole earth, yet not, that they ſhall never overflow England which ſtands alſo in the Sea.

Secondly, Let us praiſe the goodneſſe of God which preſerveth the whole world alive by a kind of miracle, even by keeping the water from overflowing the the Earth. God would convince us, that we live of his meer favour, and that his ſpecial power and goodneſſe keeps us: the waters if they were left to their own natural propenſity, would ſoon overwhelme the Earth again, but that God locked them up in the places provided for them. This worke is mentioned in divers places, Job 38.8. & 26.10. Pſ. 33.7. Prov. 8.29. Jer. 5.22.

First, It is abſolutely uſefull for the preſeruation of the lives of all things that live and breathe out of the Sea.

Secondly, It is a ſtrange and hidden work, God effecteth it by ſome ſetled reaſon in the courſe of nature, but we cannot by ſearching find it out. Perhaps this may be it, the natural motion of every heavy thing is toward the Center, and then it will reſt when it hath attained to its own proper place. Now the Earth is ſtretched over the floods, and it may ſeem that a great part of them doth fill the very bowels and concavity of the Earth in the very place where the Center or middle point of it is ſeated.

Hence it is that they will not be drawn up again, nor follow the upper parts which roſſe themſelves up and down, but rather pull down thoſe riſing graves again, eſpecially ſeeing it is moſt evident in nature by many experiments every day, that it is utterly impoſſible there ſhould be any Vacuum, as they call it, any meer empty place in which nothing at all is contained, becauſe that would divide the contiguity of things, and ſo cauſe that the world ſhould be no longer an orderly frame of divers things together: for the parts would not be contiguous and united together if ſuch a Vacuum ſhould fall out, therefore water will aſcend, air will deſcend, and all things will even loſe their own nature, and do quite contrary to their nature, rather than ſuch a thing ſhould be.

There is the black Sea neer Conſtantinople, Mare mortuum, or the dead Sea, ſo called, either becauſe the water therein is ſtill and moves not, or becauſe of the unwholſome and poiſonous waters, having neither fiſh nor other living creatures therein. Mare mortuum metaphoricè dictum eſt, quia frigidum & congelatum, ideóque pigrum & immotum, cum calor & motus in animalibus præcipua ſint vitæ indicia. Hill. Comment. in Dionyſ. Περιηγητ. And the red Sea (in Strabo, Curtius, Steven, others) named from a King of that coaſt called Erythræus (for to ſpeak of red ſand, as ſome, or red hils, (as an old writer) were but refuges of ſhamefull ignorance) which was ſurely the ſame with Eſau, called in holy Writ Edom) both ſignifying (the one in Greek, the other in Hebrew) red. Mr Seld. Illuſtrat. of Drayt. Poly-olbion. Song 1. See Dr Gouge on Hebr. 11.29. and Mr Hill his Commentary on Dionyſius his Deſcription of the world, pag. 10, 11, 14, 164. Some have thought it to be more fitly called the Reed-Sea, than the Red-Sea.

Now it may ſeeme the Lord hath bidden the water in the Earth with ſuch turnings and windings, ſome places in which it is, being larger, ſome leſſe large, that the larger places having no open vent for air to ſucceed the water, cannot be ſo ſoon filled from below, as they would empty themſelves upward, and ſo there muſt needs be vacuity, if they ſhould not return back again, and ſtop their courſe, and therefore they muſt needs ſtop (as it were) in the midſt of their career. And this alſo may ſeem to be a great and principal cauſe of the flux and reflux of the Sea, which if it were not, the waters having their courſe alwayes one way, muſt needs by little and little return again to cover the Earth. If this be the cauſe (as is probable) it is wonderfull, that God ſhould ſet ſuch an inclination into all parts of the world, that they will ſuffer any croſſing of their own particular natures, rather than not maintain the general courſe of Nature in the cloſe joyning together of things: for if they might be ſundred one from another, at length the whole muſt needs be quite out of frame, and a general confuſion would follow.

We muſt even chide and reprove our ſelves for our extream ſtupidity that are ſo little (if ever a whit) affected with this work ſo great in it ſelf, and ſo behoveſull for our very life and being.

How

How are we daily and hourly preſerved from the ſwelling waves! How comes it that in all this length of time the Sea hath not broken in upon us, and over-topped the Earth? We do not tell our ſelves of our debt to God, for commanding the waves not to be ſo bold as to drown us.

See the Hiſtory of Canutus in Polydore Vergil and Camden.

It may exhort us to fear him that hath appointed the ſands for a bound of the Sea, and will not let the waves prevail over us for all their toſſing and tumbling. He is of great power, and can over-rule ſo furious an Element, and not to fear though the waters roar, and though the Mountains were caſt into the midſt of the Sea.

This commends unto us Gods greatneſſe who doth ſo infinitely ſurpaſſe the Seas greatneſſe, and who hath made ſo much water for it, and it a place for ſo much water. Let us think of it in particular, and dwell a little upon it, that we may alſo know our nothingneſſe. What a great thing is the Sea in it ſelf conſidered! What is this Iſland in compariſon of the Sea, and yet we call it Great Britain? It muſt needs be greater than the Earth, for the waters did round about involve and encompaſſe the Earth; what then is the whole Globe of Earth and Water, and yet that whole Globe is a thing of nothing in compariſon of Heaven, and yet all that is nothing in compariſon of God. Oh how great is he, and how much to be admired? Great, not in quantity and extenſion of dimenſions, but in perfection of Eſſence. How great is he that is beyond Earth, Sea and World, and all more, than theſe are beyond Nothing!

And let us a little compare our ſelves with this great and wide Sea. The Sea is but part of this Globe, yet hath in it water enough to drown all the men that are in the world, if either it were ſuffered to overflow, as once at Noahs floud, or elſe they were caſt into it, ſo that all men are but a ſmall trifling thing in compariſon of this Sea, and then, What am I muſt every one ſay to himſelf? And what compared to God the maker of the wide Sea, and this wide world? Oh how nothing is man, Am I my ſelf among other men, and why am not I humble before God? Why do I not caſt down and abaſe my ſelf in his preſence, and carry my ſelf to him as becometh ſo poor, mean and ſmall a creature, to ſo infinite and great a Creator? Let us morally uſe the things we ſee, elſe the natural knowledge will do us no good at all.

We may ſee in the Sea a Map of the miſery of mans life; it ebbeth and floweth, ſeldom is quiet, but after a little calm a tempeſt ariſeth ſuddenly. So muſt I look for ſtorms upon the Sea of ſo troubleſom a world.

Primus navium autor & inventor erat Deus, Dei monitu & conſilio, primam navem fabricabat Noah mirandi quidem operis, & ſtupenda magnitudine, ſed omnibus generi ſalutarem, & plenam myſteriis mathesin. Rivii Hiſtoria Navalis, l. 1. cap. 1. Vide plura ibid.

For the great work of Navigation, and ſo of Tranſportation of things by Sea, and for the fineſſe of the Sea to that uſe, we muſt praiſe God, every man hath the benefit of it. By vertue of it we have Pepper, Cloves and Mace, Figs and Raiſins, Sack and Wines of all ſorts, Silks and Velvets, and all the Commodities of other Kingdoms diſtant a thouſand of miles from us; and by this they have from us ſuch Commodities as our Land affords above theirs. See Mr Pells Improvement of the Sea in his Pourquiam, and on Pſalme 107.23.

The ſafety of this Kingdome conſiſts much in its wooden wals.

There is no Art which helps more to enrich a Nation, and to furniſh it with things for Uſe, pompe and delight. And yet how is it abuſed by Mariners, who behold Gods wonders in the deep, being the worſt of men, and never good but in a ſtorm, and when that is gone, as bad or worſe than ever. See Mr Pell on Pſalme 107.29.

Our Navy exceeds all others in the world, in beauty ſtrength and ſafety.

The maſterpiece of a Ship are wonderfull:

First, It is made of the ſtrongeſt and durableſt Wood, the Oake and Cedar.

dar. [h] Now it is a ſtrange work of God to make ſuch a great Tree out of the Earth.

Secondly, The Nails in it are made of Iron, that the pieces may be cloſely compacted.

Thirdly, Tar and Pitch to ſtop every creviſe, that no water or air might enter, this they learned of God himſelf, who bid Noah to plaiſter the Ark within and without with pitch.

Fourthly, Cords made of Flax, a multitude of ſtrange things concur to this work.

[h] See Plinies Natural Hiſtory, lib. 16. cap. 40.

Poſt aliquot ſæcula, navem longam fabricabat Argos: ex quo navis ipſa Argos dicta, & qui in ea navigabant Argonauta appellati. Rivii Hiſtoria Navalis Antiqu. lib. 1. cap. 1.

What pity is it that Souldiers and Mariners (as was ſaid) who are ſo ſubject to dangers, and have ſuch frequent experience of Gods goodneſſe and mercy to them in their preſervation, ſhould generally be ſo prophane and forgetfull of God? For the ſouldier it is an old ſaying, Nulla fides pietaſque viris, qui caſtra ſequuntur.

And for the Mariner,

Nautarum vota, is grown into a Proverb.

He that carries his life in his hand, muſt carry grace in his heart. Dr Sibbs in his Epiſtle to Sr Horatio Vere, prefixed before his Bruiſed Reed.

Qui neſcit orare diſcat navigare.

Latini diſtribuunt plantas in tria genera, herbam, fruticem, & arborem. Hebræi aliter in עֵשֶׂב & שִׂיחַ & עֵץ. Mercer. in primum caput Gen. 1. 11.

In the third dayes work were likewiſe created Graſſe, Herbs, Plants and Trees.

The firſt is Graſſe or green Herb, which is that which of it ſelf ſprings up without ſetting or ſowing.

2. Herb bearing ſeed, that is, all Herbs which are ſet or ſown, and increaſe by mans induſtry.

The third, Trees and Plants, which are of a woody ſubſtance, which bear fruit, and have their ſeed, which turns to fruit in themſelves.

God by his powerfull word, without any help of mans tillage, rain, or Sunne, did make them immediately out of the Earth, and every one perfect in their kind, Graſſe and Herbs, with Flowers and Seeds, and Trees with large bodies, branches, leaves and fruits, growing up ſuddenly, as it were in a moment by Gods word and power.

Voluit Deus per primam germinationem terræ non modo paſtui animantium, ſed immortalitati ſpeciei conſultum. Paræus.

The great power of God appears in this, He is able to work above nature without means, the fruitfullneſſe of the Earth ſtands not in the labour of the Huſbandman, but in the bleſſing of God. He alſo cauſed the Earth to yeeld nouriſhment for ſuch divers Herbs and Plants, yea Herbs of contrary quality will grow and thrive cloſe one by another, when thoſe which are of a nearer nature will not do ſo.

The Herb was given at firſt for mans uſe as well as beaſts, Gen. 1. 9. Pſal. 104. 14. Herbs are one wonderfull work of God.

Omnia ſunt, quæ admirationem in nobis excitare poſſint, Colorum varietas, Odoris ſuavitas, effectuum admirabilis experientia. Hottinger. de Creat. Quæſt. 58.

The greatneſſe of the work appeareth in theſe particulars:

1. The Variety of the kinds of Herbs.
2. The Variety of their uſes, of their ſhapes and colours, and manner of production, and of their working and growth. Some come forth without ſeed, ſome have seed, ſome grow in one place, ſome in another, ſome are for food, ſome for [1] medicine, and ſome for both.

That out of the earth by the heat of one Sun, with the moiſture of one and the ſame water, there ſhould proceed ſuch infinite variety of things, ſo differing one from another, is a wonder; ſome are hot in operation; ſome cold, ſome in one degree, ſome in another, ſome will draw, ſome heal, ſome are ſweet, ſome ſour, ſome bitter, ſome of milde taſtes.

[1] A poor man in Kent mowing of Peaſon did cut his Leg with a Sithe, wherein he made a wound to the bones, and withall very large and wide, and alſo with great effuſion of blood; the poor man crept unto this Herb, which he bruiſed with his hands, and tied a great quantity of it unto the wound with a piece of his ſhirt, which preſently ſtanched the bleeding, and eaſed the pain, inſomuch that the poor man preſently went to his dayes work again, and ſo did from day to day, without reſting one day, untill he was perfectly whole, &c. Gerrard's Herbal Book 2. Chap 390. of Clowns Wound-wort, or All-heal. Pythagoras was the firſt writer of Herbs, ſaith Langius Epiſt. Medic. lib.1. Epiſt. 73. Many have written of divers Herbs, and of their uſes. Pliny from the twelfth Book to the twenty eight. Theophraſtus alſo, and Dioſcorides have written moſt learnedly and diligently. But Salomon beſt of all, as we read in the Book of the Kings, Sed talibus ejus libris caret Eccleſia vitio & culpa hominum. Zanch. de oper. Dei partis ſecundæ, lib.5.cap 2. Of their peculiar vertue for the particular parts of the body. See Burtons Melanch. part. 2. Sect.4. Memb.1. Subſ. 3. Celebre eſt illud ſententiorum Cabaliſtarum pronuntiatum: Nulla herba eſt inferius, quæ non habeat planetam ſuperius dicentem ſibi, creſce. Athan. Kirch. Oedip. Ægypt. Tom.27. pars 2. cap.2,3.

Job 28.1,2. Ezek. 6.16, 17. Joel 3.5. Hag. 2.8. Gen. 1.11,12. Vide Mercer. in Geneſ. 1. 29.

In the bowels of the Earth the Lord created gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, and the face of the Earth above was beautified with graſſe, herbs and trees, differing in nature, qualities and operations.

Plants grow till they die, whence they are called vegetables.

At the firſt, Herbs were the ordinary meat of men, *Gen.*1.20. and they have continued ever ſince of neceſſary uſe, both for meat to maintain life, and for medicines to recover health.

Before the Flood both Herbs and fruits of Trees were ſo wholſome and good, as that man needed no other food, after it the Earth was ſo corrupted by the inundation thereof, and mans body became ſo weakned, that he ſtood in need of more ſolid and nouriſhing meat.

Solomons wiſdom and knowledge was ſuch, that he was able to ſpeak of the nature of all Plants, From the Cedar-tree that is in Lebanon, even unto the hyſſop that ſpringeth out of the wall, not that he ſpake of the greateſt tree and leaſt plant, as ſome interpret it, becauſe ſome trees are greater than the Cedar, and ſome plants leſſer than the hyſſop, but becauſe he diſcourſed of noble and baſer plants. It is likely (ſaith Bartholinus de latere Chriſti, c.8.) Salomonem ad crucem Chriſti ejuſq; per hyſſopum contemptum reſpexiſſe; That Salomon had reſpect to the Croſſe of Chriſt, and his contempt, by hyſſop.

We muſt here condemn our ſtupidity and blindneſs of mind, that are not provoked many times by this particular to magnifie the name of God. When a man hath occaſion to travel thorow a cloſe or ground, how great ſtore of Herbs ſeeth he, whoſe nature, yea names he is ignorant of, yet admireth not God in them, nor confeſſeth his power and goodneſſe.

Secondly, We are to lament the fruit of our ſin, which hath made us blind, there is nothing hurtfull to mans body, but ſome herb or other rightly applied would cure it.

[k] Gen.1.11,13

It is a great and worthy work of God to make graſſe on the Earth [k]. *Pſ.*104.14,15. & 147.8. He maketh graſſe to grow upon the mountains. The omnipotent power of God was exerciſed to make this creature, elſe it could not have been, and at his appointment it came forth. This is one of the benefits which God promiſeth to his people upon their obedience, *Deut.*11.5. *Zech.*10.16. There are many things conſiderable in this work of making graſſe.

It is a Carpet upon the Earth to adorn and beautifie it.

Firſt, The plenty, ſtore and commonneſſe of it: It groweth every where, and in abundance, covering the face of the Earth, and hiding the dry and naked face thereof.

Secondly, The colour of it. It is of a green, and ſomewhat of a dark green colour.

colour, which is neither over-light nor over-dark, but of an indifferent and middle nature, and ſo moſt fit to content and delight the eye, refreſh and preſerve the ſight.

Thirdly, The uſefulneſſe of this Creature for the Cattel, it is a ſoft covering to make the lodging of the poor beaſts more eaſefull for them, even as it were a mattereſſe for them to lie upon. It hath a ſweet juyce and verdure in it by which it is pleaſant to the taſtes of the beaſts, as any dainty meat can be to us, and is fit to nouriſh them to be turned to bloud and fleſh, ſo to make them fat and well liking.

Fourthly, The wayes, means, and manner for bringing it forth for this uſe, the whole courſe of the Heavens, Sunne, Moon and Stars, which runne a large race daily with great ſwiftneſſe, and the great works done in the Air for producing divers Meteors, do tend in great part for the bringing forth of this graſſe. The graſſe it ſelf hath a life and vigour in the root of it, by which it draws from the Earth that moiſture which is agreeable to it, and diſperſeth it likewiſe.

1. We are dull and blinde, and behold not God in this great work, when we go into the fields, and can ſcarce tread beſide it: We do not conſider Gods greatneſſe and goodneſſe in making ſo beneficial a thing ſo common: We let this work of God periſh in reſpect of any ſpiritual uſe we make of it, to make our ſouls the better.

2. Let us ſtir up our ſelves to obſerve Gods hand in this work with others, and confeſſe our debt to him, that gives us Commons and Paſture for all our Cattel.

Trees are certain plants ſpringing from a root with a ſingle Trunk or Stemme (for the moſt part) ſhooting up in height, and delineated with lims, ſprigs or branches.

Leaves are Ornamenta Arboris, & munimenta fructus, they ſerve to grace the Tree, make it pleaſant to behold, and defend the fruit from the injury of the weather.

The Philoſopher ſaith, Homo eſt arbor inverſa, a man is a Tree turned upſide down, for a Tree hath his root in the ground, and his branches ſpread above ground; but a mans root is in his head, therein is the fountain of ſenſe and motion, and there doth he take in nouriſhment, but the arms and legs are branches of this Tree, they ſpread downward. The Pſalmiſt compares a good man to a Tree, Pſalm 1. 3.

The Palm-tree grows in Ægypt all along the ſhores of the red Sea. It is ſaid to yeeld whatſoever is neceſſary to the life of man. The pith of it is an excellent Sallet, better than an Artichoake, which in taſte it much reſembleth. Of the Branches they make Bedſteds and Lattices; of the Leaves, Baskets, Matts, Fanns; of the outward half of the Codde, Cordage; of the inward, Bruſhes.

See rare things of a Tree called Coquo in Dr. Primroſe on the Sacr. *p.*30. and Purchas his Pilgrimage, *l.*3. *c.*12. *p.*56,57. The Palm is a famous Tree which bringeth forth Dates, and is ſo called, becauſe upon the top the boughs are thick and round, extending out like fingers, from whence it is called Dactylus, that is, a finger. Travels of the Patriarchs. Per Palmam Judæa notabatur, propterea quod ea potiſſimum regio Palmis abundet, & quod Judæi in ſacris ſuis ejus folijs uterentur, haberentque diem ſolemnem de Palmarum nomine appellatum: Unde in multis Romanorum numiſmatibus videmus Palmam, & mulierem maſtam ſub ea ſedentem, cum hujuſmodi inſcriptione, Judæa Capta. *Pier. Eruditi cujuſdam Hieroglyph. l.*2. *c.*39.

It is the nature of this Tree, though never ſo huge or ponderous a weight be put upon it, never to yeeld to the burden, but ſtill to reſiſt the heavineſſe thereof, and to endeavour to lift and raiſe it ſelf the more upward; for which cauſe it was given to Conquerours in token of victory. Hence figura-

Rem mirandam. Ariſt. in 8° problematum, & Plutarch. in 8°. Symposiacorum dicit. Si ſupra Palma (inquit) arboris lignum magna pondera imponas, ac tam graviter urgeas ut magnitudo oneris ſuſtineri non queat, non deorſum Palma cedit, nec infra flectitur, ſed adverſus pondus reſurgit, & ſurſum nititur reluctatque. Aul. Gel. *Noct Attic. l.*3. *c.*6.

tively it is used for the victory it self, Plurimarum Palmarum homo: and for the sign of it,

——Palmaque nobilis,
Terrarum Dominos evehit ad Deos.

*Revel.*7.9. With white Robes, in token of their innocency; and palms in their hands, in token of their victory.

Joseph. Acosta writeth of a Tree in America, that on the one side being situated towards great hils, and on the other being exposed to the hot Sun; the one half of it flourisheth at one time of the year, and the other part at the opposite season.

It is reported that the Arms of the Duke of Rhoan in France, which are Lozenges, are to be seen in the wood or stones throughout all his Countrey, so that break a stone in the middle, or lop a bough of a Tree, and one shall behold the grain thereof (by some secret cause in nature) diamonded or streaked in the fashion of a Lozenge. Fullers Prophane State, *l.*4 *c.*6.

The Cedar is an Hieroglyphick of Eternity, because it never rots. Therefore the Ark of the Covenant was made of Cedar, and they are said Cedro digna loqui, which write those things which time cannot abolish.

Groves were ever consecrated by the Ancients to some Deity or other. Because such shady and delightfull places affected the mind, and reduced it to sequestred contemplations; composing the thoughts, and inspiring a secret propensity to devotion, begetting an apprehension of some latent and invisible power. But they were converted by abuse to Idolatry. Mr George Sandys his Commentary upon the 8th Book of Ovids Metamorphosis.

It was a great work of God in making all sorts of Trees to proceed out of the earth, *Psal.*104.16,17.

The Nature of the Trees is wonderfull in these respects principally.

First, The way and manner of their growing and being. An Oak comes from an Acorn, an Apple-tree from a Kernel. What a kinde of power and vertue is that which God hath put into a kernel being so small a thing, that it should pull to it self by an unknown way the juyce of the earth, and should send some of it downward into little small strings as it were to fasten it self in the earth, and send some upward to spread it self above the ground; and yet it should distribute the moysture so fitly, as to grow in due proportion within the earth and without; that it should frame to it self a body, and divers branches in such fashion, that it should bud and put forth leaves, that it should cause a fruit to grow upon it, or seed, and that in great numbers, every one of which is able to make another Tree, and that Tree to yeeld as much more!

Secondly, The great variety of kinds of Trees; we in our Countrey have divers Oaks, Elmes, Albes, Beech-trees, Chesnut-trees, Sally, Willow, Maple, Sycamore, besides Apple and Pear-trees of divers kinds, Cherry-trees, Hazel, Walnut-trees. Some Trees are of huge growth, as Oaks, Cedars, Elms; some low as the Thorn, the Nut. Some of one fashion, colour, making and manner of growth, some of another: this sheweth an exceeding great measure of wisdom in him that made them all.

Although a Mulberry tree be called in Greek and Latine Morus, that is, a fool, yet her wisdom excelleth all other trees, because it never buddeth till all sharp weather be gone. Dr Muffets Health Improvement, Chap. 22.

The use of Trees in the next place is manifold:

1. They serve for fruit: what great variety of fruit do they yeeld, what pleasant and wholsome fruit, what store and plenty of fruit? Some Summer fruit that will be gone quickly, some Winter fruit that will last most part of the year, and some all the year.

2. For building both by Land and Sea, to make us houses both strong and stately, warm, dry and cool, under which we may rest our selves, in Summer free from scorching heat, in Winter and stormy times, free from pinching cold, and the injury of the weather. With wood also we make floating and fleeting houses, with which we may dwell upon the face of the waters, and passe through the deep Sea, as upon dry ground.

3. It yeeldeth fuell too, by which we do both prepare our food, and keep our selves warm in the Winter, and in the time of weakness and sickness. Had we not something to burn, we could neither bake our Bread nor brew our Beer, nor

nor seethe our meat, nor roast it, nor at all make use of flesh, to eat it as now we do.

4. For delight: How comfortable a shade doth a spreading Ash or Oak yeeld in the hot Summer, how refreshing is it to man and beast?

How pleasant a place was Paradise, and what made it so? but the artificial order, fashion, and growing of all sorts of Trees fit for food and shadow.

We must observe our own faultinesse with sorrow and humiliation, for that we have not observed more seriously and usefully this work of God. We have perpetual use of Timber and Fuel: We eat much fruit from these Trees, we reap the benefit of this work of God from time to time. We sit upon wood, we feed upon wood, we dwell under wood, under Trees cut down and fitted for our use. We cannot step out of doors, but our eyes are fixed upon some Tree or other, great or small: but we take not notice of God in this work, and praise his name that made all these Trees. Corollaries.

Let us mend this fault, and stir up our selves to consider God in this work, praise him for fruitfull Trees, and all other kinds of Trees. Let us acknowledge his power, wisdom and goodnesse in them, and his exceeding bounty and tender care to man that hath so furnished the world with innumerable sorts of Trees.

Let us be carefull of preserving these works of nature for our own use, and the use of posterity; let us set and plant Trees for * after ages.

* Serunt arbores, quæ prosint alteri sæculo. Cicero.

CHAP. V.

Of the Sunne, Moon and Stars.

ON the fourth Day were made the Sunne, Moon and Stars, which are as it were certain Vessels wherein the Lord did gather the light, which before was scattered in the whole body of the Heavens. The Hebrew word translated Lights, signifieth Lamps, Torches, or other things which shine forth, and give light. Gen. 1.14,15.

It was a great work of God in making and ordering the Sunne, Moon, and other heavenly bodies. This work is often spoken of in Scripture, *Gen.*1.14. *Ps.*104.19, 20,21,22,23. *Ps.*136.7,8,9. *Ps.*148. He calleth upon the Sun, Moon and Stars of light to praise God. And *Psal.*19. he saith of the Sun, God hath set a tabernacle for the Sunne. In another place he saith, He guideth the Stars, and calleth them by their names.

The wonderfulnesse of these works of God is seen:

First, In the very matter and substance of them, which is wonderfull and inexplicable, who can tell what the Sun is made of?

Secondly, In their quantity, both in respect of multitude and greatnesse. For multitude they be innumerable: and for magnitude, many of the Stars are far greater than the earth.

Licet enim Stellæ nobis adquodam conspiciantur exiguæ, & non aliter quam parvæ Faces in Cœlo lucere appareant; tamen per ingeniosas Mathematicorum observationes compertum est, eas non solum toti Terrestri Globo æquales esse, sed longè illum sua magnitudine excedere: adeo ut vix aliqua tam exigua in Firmamento conspiciatur Stella, quin decies ofties ad minimum, terrenam molem exuperet; ut tantam aliqua primum honorem obtinentes, centies quinquies terram magnitudinem excedere. Id licet multis incredibile videatur; tamen immensam earum à nobis distantiam consideranti nullum mirabile dabitur. Tych. Brah. l.1. de nova Stella Anni 1572. c. 8.

Thirdly, In their qualities, which are principally three:

1. Their figure, the fittest for motion and use, round and orbicular.

2. Their

2. Their brightneſſe and ſhining, eſpecially the ſplendour of the Sunne and Moon.

3. Their durableneſſe: they do not change.

Fourthly, In their motion which is very ſwift and regular.

Fifthly, In their effects, working ſo conſtantly and variouſly in the ſeaſons of the year.

2 Chron.33.3. Jer.44.17. Deut.4.19.

The moſt beautifull bodies of the Stars which we ſee faſtned in Heaven, are not Gods, as Plato in Timæo called the Stars, by the worſhipping of which the blind Gentiles, and the Jews alſo horribly polluted themſelves: but excellent works of God, by the contemplation of which we ought to be ſtirred up to acknowledge and celebrate the Majeſty, Glory, Wiſdome and Power of the Creatour, *Pſal.*8.3.4.

First, For the Sunne, that is called the greateſt Light, and that moſt truly and properly, both for the body and ſubſtance of it, and alſo for the brightneſſe and abundance of Light which is in it. For the moſt skilfull Mathematicians have demonſtrated, that the very body of the Sunne doth exceed the whole earth in bigneſſe a hundred ſixty ſix times; others ſay a hundred and fourty times.

* Sol uſitatiſſimè Hebræis dictus שמש Schemeſh a miniſtrando (quod שמש Schimmeſch) quia Dei Miniſter in natura clariſſimus: aliter à calore חמה Chammah Græcis ἀβὰν, i.e. ſplendore, ἥλιος Latinis Sol, vel quia ſolus ex omnibus ſideribus eſt tantus, vel quia quum eſt exortus, obſcuratis aliis ſolus appareat. Martinius.

The Sun * is the glorious ſervaut of all the world, therefore it hath its name in Hebrew from ſerving.

The Sunne is the fountain of heat and light, the life of the Univerſe, the great Torch of the world, and the Ornament of Heaven.

Its beauty, magnitude, the ſwiftneſſe of its courſe, and its force are commended by David:

1. Beauty, It comes forth as a bridegroom out of his chamber, Pſal.19.6. Many being allured with the great beauty of the Sun, fell to idolize it. Vide Athanaſ. Kirch. Obeliſc. Pamphil. l.2.c.10.

2. Strength, It is compared to a Giant.

3. Its ſwiftneſſe, *v.*6. goes ten hundred thouſand miles, ſay the Mathematicians, in an hour.

4. Its force and efficacy upon the inferiour bodies, There is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

The Sun is fitly ſituated, being in the midſt of the ſix other Planets, neither too high nor too low.

Aloino egreſſus cœleſtia tecta cremabit,
Inferius terras: medio tutiſſimus ibis. Ovid. *lib.*2. Metamorph.

See Dr Browns Enquiries, lib. 6. cap. 5.

The Philoſophers conceive that the Sunne and Moon are not Actu calidi; only they have a vertue, and by way of eminency, as it were, they doe produce heat below, and are not hot themſelves. To contain any thing by way of eminency, is a property of God, he contains all things eminenter, theſe faculties which he hath not actually, habitually and ſubjectively in himſelf, as faculties, yet he contains them eminently, as being able to produce all; but no creature can produce any thing, but by ſome vertue put into it. Dr Stoughtons Burning Light.

If the Stars be not fiery, why are waters (ſaith Voſſius) placed above the Heaven, as Moſes, and in other Scriptures, but to temper their burning heat, leaſt the Heavens ſhould be deſtroyed by their burning? Voſſius de orig. & progreſſ. Idol. l.2. c.39. Vide c.38.

Second-

Secondly, The Moon is also called a great Light, not for the bigneſſe of the body of it, but becauſe it is the loweſt of all the Planets, and neareſt unto the earth, and therefore appears biggeſt of all next unto the Sunne, and gives to the earth a greater light than any of the Stars, which are far greater in ſubſtance, and brighter in light.

[1] Non tam ad magnitudinem corporum, quàm ſplendoris eorum reſpexit Moſes, & ad popularem captum & aſpectum, qui hæc judicat eſſe maxima ſydera in Cœlo juxta ſenſum. Mercer. See Dr Hackwels Apology of Gods Providence, pag. 74, 76, 77.

Some ſay, it is the cauſe of the ebbing and flowing of the Sea, for it agreeth exactly with the Revolution of the Moon. It cauſeth it,

1. By its motion, as it brings its beams.
2. By its beam, as that brings the influence.
3. By infuſion, as that ſtirs the waters.

It is called in Latine, Luna a lucendo, ſaith Tully, or becauſe Sola lucet nocte, ſaith Varro. In Hebrew Jarеach, which word ſignifies a moneth, becauſe it is renewed every moneth.

Dominatur corporibus humidis; as over women (the brain) ſhell-fiſh. From the new Moon to the full, all humours do encreaſe, and from the full to the new Moon decreaſe again.

Stellarum notitia quaſi Alphabetum eſt Aſtronomiæ, quod, hiſce ſacris initiandus, primò omnium tenere debet. Sciekardi Aſtroſcopium.

A Star is the thicker part of Heaven, round and full of light.

In the day the gliſtering light of the Sunne (ſay ſome) obſcures all the Starres, but in the night, how many hundred thouſand of them do we ſee, beſides thoſe that are hidden from us in the other part of the Sphere which is not ſeen by us? The number of Stars ſet upon the Globe are 1025, and divers of them have proper names. All the Stars of the Heaven are not numbred nor cannot, ſince divers of them are ſo ſmall; but theſe 1025. are the principalleſt amongſt them, and all that have ever been accounted of.

To think that the brightneſſe of the Sunnes body above, doth drown our diſcerning of the leſſer lights, is a popular errour; the ſole impediment being that haſte, which by reflexion doth ſpread about us from the face of the earth. Sir Henry Wotton Elem. of Architect. part. 2. Only God can number the Stars, Pſal. 147. 4. It is impoſſible for man to number them, which God intimates to Abraham, Gen. 15. 5. It is called alſo an Aſterism. Quod ad multitudinem attinet, ſtellæ ſunt pene innumerabiles, non tamen infinitæ. Schick. Aſtroſcop.

All the Stars which are ſeen in our Hemiſphere, digeſted into conſtellations, beſides the ſeven Planets, amount not to above one thouſand and two and twenty: and in the other one hundred and one and twenty more have lately been diſcovered: ſo in all there are eleven hundred fourty and three: however the glimmering and twinkling of ſo many make them ſeem innumerable. George Sandys Commentary upon the firſt Book of Ovids Metamorphoſis. See the Hiſtory of Manual Arts, Chap. 9.

A Conſtellation is a certain number of Stars, repreſenting by their place and order (after a certain ſort) the forme of ſome living creature, or ſome other kind of thing elſe.

The Stars which do attend the Artick-pole are the greater and leſſer Bear, and the leaſt Star in the leſſer Bears-tail, is called the Pole-ſtar, by reaſon of its nearneſſe to it, and this is the guide of the Mariners.

Philoſophers diſtinguiſh them into fixed Stars and Planets.

The fixed Stars retain alwayes Eadem interſtitia.

2. Almoſt all of them ſcintillant.

3. They are diſperſed every where in the whole Heaven.

The Planets on the contrary:

1. Change their ſituations and configurations.

Stella, quæ Fixæ ſive Inerrantes, quòd tardiſſimo cieri, eodemque unanimi motu, & perpetuo, ſimilem ad ſe invicem obtinere diſpoſitionem, atque diſtantiam animadverſa ſint, appellantur. Tych. Brah. de nova Stella l. 1. c. 2. Verarum Stellarum quidem aliqua peculiari variè, & (ut tyronibus quidem videtur) inordinato motu incedunt. Unde etiam Planetæ vel Erronеs appellantur, ob id ipſum in ſchemate non appicti. Schick. Aſtroſcop.

2. Have

2. Have a constant tranquil light, and trembling but seldom.

3. They never wander farther from the Ecliptick. Schickardi Astroscopium.

The Planets are apparently seven, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, then the Sunne in the midst, as it were the King of all; after Venus, Mercury, and the Moon. Neither Moses, Job, nor the Psalmes (the most frequent in Astronomical observations) mention any of the Planets, but the Sunne and Moon.

The Stars are distinguisht among themselves in quantity, colour, situation and configuration.

1 Cor. 15. 41. All Stars are not Primæ magnitudinis.

Of these Stars some are greater than other, and are distinguished into six sorts of quantity. Their proportions are thus delivered, viz.

A Star of the first bigness or magnitude, is an hundred and seven times bigger than the Earth.

A Star of the second magnitude, ninety times bigger than the Earth.

A Star of the third bigness, seventy two times bigger than the Earth.

A Star of the fourth bigness, is four and fifty times bigger than the Globe of the Earth.

A Star of the fifth magnitude, is six and thirty times bigger than the Earth.

A Star of the sixth bigness, is eighteen times bigger than the Globe of the Earth.

Vide Schickardi Astroscopium pag. 12. he saith, pag. 13. Veras singulorum magnitudines verè ignoramus, easque ex tanto intervallo tam accurate scire velle, præsumptio est & temeritas.

Corollaries. Ethnici colebant Solem & Lunam prius quam alia creaturæ terrestres; usque adeò ut Moses, Deut. 4. 19. notans duas fontes Idololatriæ, prius facit mentionem Solis & Lunæ, deinde similitudinem viri aut fœminæ, aut quadrupedis, Job 31. 26. Jer. 44. 17, 18. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Tom. 2. Prælect 237. Sol ab antiquissimis, ut Deorum maximus colebatur: nominaq; Jovis, Saturni, Martis, Liberi, Osi, Osiridis, aliaq; multa Solem significarunt. Qua de re Macrobius, l. 1. Saturn. c. 16. Voss. in Maimon. de Idol. c. 6.

We are to bewail our own great folly and blindnesse, that we have not more admired, honoured, feared, loved that great worker, to whom these creatures do point us. We do not often enough tell our selves, this Moon, this Sun, these Stars could not, nor did not make themselves. They could not possibly be without any beginning at all, for they are but parts of the whole world, and no part of any whole can be eternal, because there must be something before that did unite those parts together; wherefore they were made by some superiour essence, and more excellent than themselves, and that is God. How great, how wise, how good, how infinitely excellent is he, whose hand framed and ordered these things! The Sun ariseth to us constantly, the Moon also keeps her course with like constancy. Doth not that mighty Army of Stars, which in a clear night shew themselves, even speak to us, as it were, to consider of his incomprehensible excellency, which made and rules them? See Job 38. 31, 32, 33.

Let us accustome our selves hereafter to these Meditations, if God had not beautified Heaven with these excellent bodies, light and heat could not have been equally, and in due quantity conveyed into all the quarters of the world. We must observe this work so, as to praise God for it, to informe our selves of his nature, and strive to work more love, fear, obedience and confidence in our selves towards him. The Apostle saith, That in the times before the Gospel, the Gentiles might have found God as it were by groping, Acts 17. 27.

Now we that have the Scripture to direct us, as in the day-light, shall not we find God out by these illustrious works of his?

Chap. VI.

Chap. VI.

Of the Fiſhes, Fowls, Beaſts.

IT commends the Doctrine of living Creatures, that Salomon wrote of four-footed Beaſts, Birds, Fiſhes, Inſects, 1 Kings 4.33. Alſo that from the living Creatures we draw examples of all vertues, and documents of all duties.

The fifth Dayes work was the Creation of all living Creatures which live and move in the two moiſt Elements, the Water and the Air, viz. Fiſhes * and moving Creatures, which live and move in the waters: and all kind of Fowls which flie in the open Region of the Air, divers in nature, ſhape, qualities, and manner of living.

The Hebrew Verb שָׁרַץ of which the word שֶׁרֶץ which is here tranſlated The moving Creature, is derived; is uſed as here, ſo in other Scriptures frequently; firſt to ſignifie creeping or moving forward without feet, as Geneſ. 7. 21. & Levit. 11.19. And ſecondly alſo, to bring forth abundantly, as here; and alſo Exod. 1.7. Fiſhes breed and bring forth young in great abundance, more than any other creatures do, by the multitude of ſpawn they would encreaſe beyond all meaſure and number, if by one means or other the ſpawn were not devoured and conſumed. Gen. 1.20,21, 22.

* The Fiſhes were appointed to increaſe and multiply, and to fill the waters. The Fowls were appointed to increaſe and multiply, and flie in the Air.

They were twice bid, Increaſe and multiply; God would have fiſhes to be ſo fruitfull, both becauſe of the vaſtneſſe of the Sea which they were to fill, and alſo becauſe the leſſer fiſhes were to be meat to the greater.

Who can render a reaſon of their ability to ſwimme ſo in the waters, to ſupport themſelves in the midſt of the waters, and convey themſelves up and down in it?

Fiſhes are in Scripture termed Reptilia, Pſal.104.25. In the great and wide Sea there are things creeping innumerable both ſmall and great, ſo called, becauſe things when they ſwim ſeem to creep along in the water. As Birds have their wings and trains, by means whereof they cut their way, and make ſmooth paſſage through the Air, ſo Fiſhes are furniſhed with fins wherewith they guide themſelves in their ſwimming, and cut the current of the ſtreams and waves for their more eaſie paſſage, wherein their courſe is directed by their tail, as Ships are conducted by their Helm.

The Sea gives more and greater dainties than the Earth, thoſe that did moſt affect to pleaſe their palate of old ſet great ſtore by Fiſh, and paid dearer for them than fleſh. Birds bring forth ſome four or five in a neſt, ſome three, and ſome but two, the moſt but twenty, as the little Wren; for being ſo little, the kind would be conſumed by the things which devour ſuch weak creatures, if thoſe that be did not bring forth very many: But every Fiſh brings forth a great multitude, many hundreds, as we may ſee in their ſpawn. Sunt complura in iis majora etiam terreſtribus. Cauſa evidens, humoris luxuria. Plin. Natural. Hiſt. l.9.c.1.

That God ſhould give unto theſe things a power to multiply ſo very faſt, is wonderfull, and it is agreeable to reaſon too, for the fiſhes do more devour one another than the beaſts do, the greater being much more ravenous than any beaſt, as being bigger; and their ſtomacks by an Antiperiſtaſis of the cold water more vehement in digeſting.

They are ſaid to be without number, Pſal.104.25. not ſimply, but to us, for we cannot tell the number of them, though God (which made them) do know the particular number of them. He can tell how many fiſhes there be in the Sea, though to us they exceed the power of counting, yet he hath the preciſe and exact number of them.

We know not the kinds of fishes, how much lesse the particulars.

Plinies Natural history, l. 32. c. 11.

There be (saith Pliny) of fishes and other creatures living in the Sea, one hundred seventy and six several and distinct kinds.

What Philosopher can tell how many Dolphins, Herrings, Whales, Sword-fishes there be in the Sea?

Quidam hoc unum animal quamdiu vivit, crescere arbitrantur. Pliny l. 8. c. 25. Naturalists write of the Crocodile that it grows as long as it lives.

A Crocodile equals sixteen cubits, it comes from an Egge as bigge as that of a Goose, Nec aliud animal ex minori origine in majorem crescit magnitudinem. Plin. lib. 8. cap. 25. From so small a beginning, it encreaseth to eight or ten yards in length. And no creature is so dangerous to man as it is. It is fearfull of those that pursue it, and bold against those that flie from it. Their bodies are not much longer then their tailes, which is of like use with them, as the Proboscis is to the Elephant; their mouths are very wide, at one gulph to swallow horse or man. The name is taken à Croceo colore, or per Antiphrasin quòd Crocum timeat. The Ichneumon steals into his belly, and gnaws his guts, whilest he opens his chaps to let the little Troclil pick his teeth, which give it feeding. Herb. Trav. l. 3.

Scribunt humanum caput à Crocodilo ob crassitiem ossis non posse devorari. Cum vero persentiat medullam, hoc est, cerebrum cranio subesse, lacrymas in id effundere quarum vi sutura protinus dissipentur: inde medullam exsugi à truculentissima bestia. Abjere hinc in Proverbium, Lacryma Crocodili, quæ non à commiseratione sed ab immanissima crudelitate proveniunt. Wendelinus de admirandis Nili. c. 16. Vide plura ibid. & c. 17. Crocodilus terrâ æquè ac flumine gaudet, cujus in nece placatus est filiorum est, ac planè ungatorius. Gab. Sionita, de nonnullis orientalium urbibus, &c. c. 9.

It is a symbole of Egypt or Nilus, because this living creature is proper to Egypt: hence the Emperour Augustus, (Egypt being brought under the power of the people of Rome,) Coined his Money with a Palme and Crocodile. Athan. Kirch. Obelisc. Pamphylij l. 4. Idea Hieroglyphica Hierogrammatismus 9.

Plinies Natural history, l. 32. c. 1.

The Echeneis, Remora, or stop-ship, but half a foot long, is able to stay the greatest Ship under sail. Keckermannus humori frigido à remora fuso adscribere videtur qui aquam circa gubernaculum conglaciet. in Disput. Physic. The Crampfish Torpedo is able to benum and mortifie the arms of the lustiest and strongest Fishers that be, by touching only the end of any part of an angle-rod, which they hold in their hands, although they stand aloft and a great way from her: hence it hath its name, quod torpore manus afficiat, because it benummeth the hands. See Vess. de orig. & progres. Idol. lib. 4. cap. 11. both of the Remora and Torpedo.

Id. ibid.

Johnstoni Thaumatographia.

The Tortoise is marvellously fortified by nature, dwelling continually under a strong roofe; which covers his whole body; therefore Testudo which signifies a Tortoise, signifies also the roof or vault of an house which covers all within it. The Shark hath not his name for nothing, for he will make a morsel of any thing he can catch, master and devour, they have three rows of teeth, very strong and sharp, they will bite off a mans leg at one bit. Master Terry his Voyage to East-Indies.

The Naturalists tell us of one fish which they call the Uranoscope, which hath but one eye, and that in a vertical point, on the top of the head, directly upward: by which it avoids all rocks and dangers.

* Plin. ibid. Foure Acres long in the Indian Sea. Idem l. 9. c. 2. Amama Antibarb. Bib. l. 3. Chamierus tom. 2. l. 9. c. 11. Plin. ib. c. 2. Antè omnia nihil velocius habent maria ut plerumque salientes transvolent vela navium. Solinus c. 21.

There have been known Whales six hundred foot * long, and three hundred and sixty foot broad, some like mountains, and some like islands. God himself speaking of his own power over all the creatures, rehearseth only two, the Behemoth, Job 40. 15. to the end, that is, the Elephant; and the Leviathan Job 41. per tot. that is, the Whale, say the most, this being the greatest among the Fishes, as that among the Beasts. The Whale never swimeth, unless she have a little Fish going before her as her guide, in shape like a Gudgeon; and this little Fish safely sleeps in the Whales mouth, for as long as he sleeps, the Whale never stirs, but as soon as he awaketh, and goeth his way, where ever he takes his course she alwayes followeth him, and if she fortune to loose him, she wanders here and there, and often striketh upon the Rocks, as a Ship that hath not Mast nor Rudder.

The Sword-fish hath a Beak or Bill sharp-pointed, wherewith he will drive through through the ſides and planks of a Ship, and bore them ſo, that they ſhall ſink withall.

The Dolphin is ſaid to be a fiſh of ſuch exceeding great ſwiftneſſe, as that oftentimes he out-ſtrippeth a Ship under Sail in the greateſt ruffe and merrieſt wind, in ſwiftneſs of courſe. See Plinies Nat. Hiſt. l. 9. c. 8.

In Veſpaſians Coines therefore there was a Dolphin embracing an Anchor, declaring that we muſt haſten ſlowly, ſhewing ſlowneſſe by the Anchor, ſwiftneſſe by the Dolphin. He is called for his ſwiftneſs the Arrow of the Sea.

In this fiſh is propounded to us an example of charity, and kind affection toward our children, as Pliny in his deſcription of the nature of this fiſh ſheweth, and Ælian lib. 5. cap. 18. As alſo of his ſingular love toward man, whereof Ælian produceth ſtrange examples, l. 6. c. 15.

It may ſeem ſtrange that it ſhould pleaſe the Pope to forbid fleſh to men rather than *fiſh, that is, the leſs dainty and luxurious, before the more: for what is by ſome alledged, that the curſe fell upon the earth, and not the Seas, is fondly affirmed, ſeeing when it is ſaid, curſed be the earth, by earth is meant the whole globe of the earth conſiſting of Sea and dry Land.

* Piſces Deus voluit ſibi offerri, tum quod extra aquam non vivant (nihil autem mortuum ex animalibus offerri ſibi Deus velit) tum etiam quod ex Serpentum genere cenſentur Piſces: Serpentum vero genus univerſum damnatum eſt à Deo, propterea quod per ſerpentem deceptus fuerit homo, fuitque ſerpens organon Diaboli, Gen. 3. Danæus Iſag. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 23. Tuta omnium qui in dulcibus aquis generantur piſcium æquali cunctarum gentium judicio longe nobiliſſimus habetur. Renatus Moreas in Schol. Salern. c. 69.

Some fiſhes are exceeding ſmall, and for their ſmalneſs and workmanſhip beſtowed upon them, admirable. In the Sea the Cockles, a little kind of ſhell-fiſh, yet in its kind very artificial, ſomewhat reſembling a Cre-fiſh, which are dainties for rich men.

Thoſe little and ſmall things are made with ſo many joynts and parts and turnings, ſuch a proportion and ſhape, and every thing ſo exact and ſuitable, as would ſtir up aſtoniſhment in any beholder. Gods power is likewiſe ſeen in the greatneſs of ſome fiſhes, as the Whale, ſome of which are 80. yards long, their eyes are as big as an hogſhead, and their mouth ſo wide, that a man ſitting on horſeback might be held in it.

God hath created the Fowls of Heaven among other creatures, Pſal. 104. 12. Gen. 1. 20, 21.

The orderly courſe of birds in breeding their young ones is moſt remarkable. After they have coupled they make their neſt, they line it with moſſe, ſtraw, and feathers: they lay their egges, they ſet upon them, they hatch them, they feed their young ones, and they teach them to flie: all which they do with ſo continuate and regular a method, as no man can direct or imagine a better. Sir Kenelm Digbies Treat. of Bod. cap. 37.

The things wherein the Fowls differ from other creatures are, 1. That they be winged, having feathers and wings by which they are covered, and by which they do paſs through the air, and the place wherein they fly, viz. in the open firmament in this lower heaven. Their creation is wonderfull in divers reſpects.

1. Their making is wonderfull, farre differing from that of beaſts, fiſhes, and men.

2. They have great variety of kinds, ſome wild, ſome tame, ſome great, ſome little, ſome ſea or water birds, ſome land birds.

Aves, ut nonnulli exiſtimant, appellantur, quod avia, id eſt, incerta itinera in aere ſectentur. Danæi Phyſice Chriſtiana Tract. 5. cap. 32.

3. Their manner of breeding, they lay egges and hatch them, and out of a kind of confuſed ſubſtance, that to us ſeems void of life, by the heat of their bodies they do bring forth their young naked at firſt, which after by the ſame cheriſhing of warmth, do bring forth feathers to cover them. Many of them are ſo beautifully adorned with their feathers for colour, and are ſo glorious, as a man cannot but look upon them with wondring and delight, for where doth nature ſhew more variety, and a pleaſinger compoſition of colours then in a Doves neck, a Peacocks tail, and ſome other like Birds?

4. For their ſwiftneſs of flying, that they can with ſuch celerity paſſe through the air.

5. They are many wayes ſerviceable to man: they are a dainty food for weak ſtomacks, they pull up many kinds of worms and vermine, that elſe would be harmfull to us.

Fowls or Birds are more worthy then fiſhes, becauſe they do more participate of air and fire (the two nobleſt Elements) then of water and earth. All birds are muſtered under the name of Fowls as under their Genus.

Job 12. 7. There are examples of virtues in the fowls propounded for us to imitate, and of vices for us to ſhun.

Frequentiora & majora in avibus exempla virtutum, & vitiorum reperimus, tam apud ſacros Scriptores, quàm apud profanos, quàm in piſcibus, quippe, quæ etiam notiores nobis ſunt, quam piſces: adde, quod perfectiora etiam ſint animalia aves, quam piſces. Zanch. De Oper. Dei, partis ſecundæ, lib. 7. cap. 1.

*The Fathers, Tertullian, Ambroſe, confirm the reſurrection by it. One cannot ſay of the Phœnix being only therefore there is no Phœnix. Aldrovandus Vide Veſſ. de orig. & progreſ. Idol. l. 3. c. 99. Æthiopes atque Indi inenarrabiles ferunt aves, & ante omnes nobilem Arabia phœnicem: haud ſcio an fabuloſe, unum in toto orbe, nec viſum magnopere, Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 10. cap. 2. Vide plura ibid. In the Phœnix * an example of the Reſurrection: in the Stork of loving affection: in the Dove of innocency and conjugal faith: in the Crows and Eſtridges of unnaturalneſs.*

[c] Job 39. 13, 14, 15, 16. Lam. 4. 3. Jer. 8. 7. We ſhould imitate the Storke, Crane, and Swallow [c] in acknowledging the ſeaſonable time of our repentance.

חסידה She is ſomewhat like a Hern having a long neck and feet.

The Stork hath her name from חסד, love, and the Hebrew word is near of kin with another which ſignifieth bowels of compaſſion, as which indeed are moſt tender in her. A ſtory whereof [a] we have in the deſcription of the Netherlands, viz. of a Stork, that when the houſe was on fire where her neſt was, kept the fire off from her young ones with her own body and wings ſo long till ſhe was burnt her ſelf.

[a] Doctor Twiſſe againſt Doctor Jackſon. Patronius Arbiter & Solinus call the Stork pietatis cultricem. Honos iis de ſerpentum exitio tantus, ut in Theſſalia capitale fuerit occidiſſe, eademque legibus pœna, quæ in homicidam. Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 10. cap. 23.

It is loving to mankind, delightfull to build in the tops of houſes and chimneys, as is uſual to be ſeen in Germany.

They count it there a happy Omen for the Stork to build in their houſes. It is the embleme of a gratefull man: for at her departure from the houſe where ſhe builds (as ſome report) ſhe uſually leaveth a young one behind her. Ælian lib. 8. de Animal. cap. 19. writeth of a Stork which bred on the houſe of one which had a very beautifull wife, which in her Husbands abſence uſed to commit adultery with one of her baſe ſervants; which the Storke obſerving, in gratitude to him who freely gave him houſeroom, flying in the villains face, ſtruck out both his eyes. It is recorded alſo of the Stork, that when the Dams are old, the young ones feed them; and when through age they are ready to faint in their flying, the young ones help them; and when they are paſt flying, the young ones carry them on their weak backs.

Vide Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 10. c. 3, 4, 5. Job 39. 27, 28, 29. The Eagle is reckoned the Soveraign Queen of all Fowls, as the Lion is reputed the King of Beaſts. She is attended with ſharpneſs of ſight, to diſcover her prey, with ſwiftneſs of wing to haſten unto it, and with ſtrength of body to ſeize upon it.

It is Altivolans avis, an high ſoaring bird, that ſometime flyeth ſo high a pitch as ſhe

ſhe tranſcendeth the view of man, whence the Proverb, Aquila in nubibus, ſhe is given to Jupiter, becauſe it flies the higheſt of all birds, ſhe makes her neſt alſo in the high trees or rocks, leſt her young ones ſhould be hurt of the leſſer birds, Jer. 49. 16. She flies alſo ſwiftly, Job 9. 26. She ſees acutely when ſhe is ſo high that men can ſcarce ſee her, ſhe ſees (they ſay) fiſhes ſwimming in the Sea.

——tam cernis acutum,
Quam aut aquila aut ſerpens Epidaurius, Horat. l. 1. Sat. 13.

She hath a tender care of her young, when they be fluſh and ready for flight, then ſhe ſtirreth up her neſt and fluttereth over them, yea ſhe taketh them on her wings, and ſo ſoareth with them through the air, and carrieth them aloft, and ſo freeth them from all danger. In that ſhe carrieth her young ones rather upon her wings then in her talons, ſhe ſheweth her tender care and love that ſhe beareth unto them, Exod. 19. 4. Deut. 32. 11.

Her feathers are ſo imperious, that they will not mix with the plumage of other birds, if they be by chance caſt in amongſt them, they will ſtrait conſume the others.

Accipiter ſacer aſt Soli propter motus ſui pernicitatem.

Athanaſij Kircheri Obeliſcus Pamphylius, l. 4. Ideæ Hieroglyphicæ Hierogrammatiſmus. Vide plura ibid. 10.

That which is reported by Gabriel Sionita, De nonnullis Orientalium urbibus, &c. cap. 9. and others, of the Pigeons that are called Carriers, is ſtrange, he ſhews there how they are brought to it. Vide Cotovici Itin. Hieroſol. & Syriac l. 4. c. 34.

What a wonder is that of giving ſpeedy intelligence by Pigeons. They take them when they ſit on their neſts, tranſporting them in open Cages, and return them with Letters bound about their leggs like jeſſes; who will never give reſt to their wings, untill they come to their young ones. George Sandeys Comment. upon the 12th Book of Ovids Metamorph.

Wonderfull things are written of the King-fiſher by Ariſtotle, l. 5. de Animal. by Pliny, l. 10. That of the Swans ſinging before his death, and the Proverb thence Cygnea Cantio, is conceived to be but fabulous. See Mr Hill's Commentary upon Dionyſius his deſcription of the World, p. 220.

Some ſay the Cranes have taught us the order of an Army. Grues non niſi acie inſtructa volant, electo duce, quem ſequantur, diſpoſitiſque in extremo agmine cuſtodibus qui gregem voce contineant. Angel. Roch. Biblioth. Therefore the Latines (ſaith he) uſe Congruere pro Convenire. Vide Plinij Nat. Hiſt. lib. 10. cap. 3.

The Nightingall canting in the ſolitary woods, is diſervedly called Philomela, or a lover of Muſick, in that no bird hath ſo ſweet a voice among all the Sylvan Muſicians: ſinging fifteen dayes and nights together, when the leaves begin to affoard her a ſhelter, with little or no intermiſſion. So ſhrill a voice in ſo little a body, and a breath ſo long extended, is worthy admiration; ſhe alone in her ſongs expreſſing the exact art of Muſick in infinite variety. Neither have all the ſame tunes and diviſions, which ſhews their skill to be more then naturall. They ſtrive among themſelves in fervent contention: the vanquiſhed not ſeldome ending her life with her ſong, through grief, or over-ſtraining. The young ones hear with attention; practice and repeat their Leſſon, which the old correct, and being perfect in that, proceed to a new. George Sandey his Gommentary on Ovids 6th Book of Metamorph. l. 7. c. 1. See of the Nightingales finging. Pliny l. 10. of natural Hiſtory, c. 29. and Famianus Stradas Proluſions.

The Hebrew name עוף which is tranſlated Fowl, Gen. 1. 26. ſignifieth in generall every living thing, which by help of wings flieth above the earth in the air: ſo that not only birds, but alſo bees, waſps, hornets, and all other winged things may here be underſtood. Inter omnia Inſecta principatus apibus, & jure præcipua admiratio, ſolis ex eo genere bonum cauſa genitis: Plin. Nat. Hiſt. lib. 11. cap. 5. Nomen Inſectis datur ab inciſuris, quas habent, quaſi annulat. Voſſius de orig. & progreſ. Idol. lib. 4.

Bees

Bees are principall among the Insects.

Bees are notable,

1. For their good husbandry, she is very painfull, she flies to every herb and flower, and seeks and searches into every corner of the same. She so abhors idlenesse that she punisheth the idle drone, and will not give it any quiet harbour in the hive.

When Bees are most angry in swarming, cast but a little dust upon them, and they are presently quiet and leave their humming.

2. She is thrifty, which is another part of good husbandry, what she hath gotten in the Summer, she charily laies up in her Cells, and doth not spend it till she must needs.

2. For their cleanlinesse and neatnesse, mundissimum omnium hoc animal, they will not suffer any sluttery within if they may go abroad, neither can they endure any unsavorinesse without nigh unto them. Pliny lib. 11. cap. 10. and 18.

Practise the sedulity of the Bee, labour in thy calling: and the community of the Bee, beleeve that thou art called to assist others: and the purity of the Bee, which never settles upon any foul thing.

3. For their care of the common good, she is an admirable lover of that, she labours, eats, fights in common, and all her pains is directed to the common good, she will with unresistable courage assail any enemy though never so strong, which shall offer to wrong the common body.

4. For their concord, Bees of the same hive are linked together in the bond of amity, though they be many of them, yet they know and love each other, and keep peace among themselves, and flye domestical sedition, unless the rulers be multiplied, and by their disorders set the rest of the Bees at variance.

Doctor Dove on Prov. 25. 19. See Butler's History of Bees. Vide Voss. de orig. & progres. Idol. l. 4. c. 72. de apum prudentia in fabricando alueari deque tota eorum πολιτεία. Apum prudentia, castitas, obedientiaque erga suum Regem, sedulitas item, & labor & frugalitas à Plinio describitur lib. 11. ab Aristotele l. 9. de Hist. animal. Zanch. De Oper. Dei part. 1.

5. For their dutifullnesse to their King or Prince (for they have a Monarchy as the Ants a Democracy) * they are most loyal subjects to him, they labour for him, and build him more then one Palace, and that more large and stately then their own, they fight for him, and go abroad with him.

* See Pliny his Natural History, lib. 11. cap. 5. & 7. Vide Mouffetum de 4. Georg.

Insectis, lib. 2. corpora bello objectans, pulchramque petunt per vulnera mortem. Virg.

The workmanship of God is more excellent in some Insects, as Bees, and others little creatures, then in those of great bulk; See Pliny l. 7. c. 21. and 36. 5. The Basiliske lives in the desarts of Africa. He is adorned with a white spot in his head, as with a certain diadem. Pliny cals it Regulus. If he look upon a man, he kils him with his sight alone. The Amphisbæna hath a double head, one at his head, and the other at his taile, as if it were little (saith Pliny) to breath his poison out by one mouth. Stellio is set forth with certain circles after the manner of Starres. There is no living creature more fraudulent, whence the crime Stellionatus.

What a strange and rare work is that of the Silk wormes, how they make silk out of their own bowels, (after the manner of Spiders,) See Dalechamp in his notes on Pliny, lib. 11. cap. 23. The Silk-wormes, and their flyes are lively described in Verse by T. M.

Augustine prefers a flye (in regard of its life) before the Sun. But some things (saith Vossius) are not so much to be valued for their form, as their end, which is more excellent in the Sun, then in any perfect living creature, man only excepted.

Corollaries.

We see and use the fowls, and eat their flesh, and lye upon their soft feathers, and yet contemplate not the goodnes of God in them.

We have divers kind of tame fowl in our back-sides, they bring us young, and we kill and dresse them, and set them upon our Tables and feast with them. They lay eggs, and we eat of them: they sit and hatch and cherish their young, and we see that that admirable manner of drawing actuall life out of a potentiall life by the working of heat. And we have many wilde fowl, but who seeth Gods wisdom, power, bounty, in giving them to us?

Let us stir up our selves to give God his due glory, in respect of this kind of creature.

Amongst other creatures, the Lord hath stored the world with divers kinds of four-footed beasts, which move and walk upon the face of the earth, Psa. 104. 11, 12. these were created on the sixth day, Gen. 1. 24.

These beasts are creatures endued not with life alone, but with sense also: Yea, they excell man in quickness of sense,

Nos aper auditu praecellit, aranea tactu,
Vultur odoratu, lynx visu, simia gustu.

They exceed us also in contentment, thankfulness, obedience, they consist of a body and sensible soul, and besides the life of vegetation which is to be found in plants, by which they grow and are nourished; They have also a soul whereby they discern divers bodily objects, and can both discern and follow that which is good for them, and shun what is evill, and so preserve themselves alive by using things helpfull for them, and avoiding the contrary. All these beasts were made to walk upon the ground with four feet, having their heads bowing down to the ground to seek their diet, without which they could not live, and which is provided for them upon the the face of the ground.

There are not known to be of beasts and creeping things above the number of 150 kinds, probably there are not many nor great that are not known. Plin. nat. hist. l. 10. Gesn. de animal.

This work is wonderfull in respect of the divers sorts of these beasts, some great, and some small, some of one shape and nature, some of another.

There are divers kinds of brute beasts differing in nature, qualities, figure, colour, use, quantity, voice, kind of food.

We see great variety of them in our own Countrey, and there is far greater variety abroad in the world which we have never seen. That out of the same earth and water all these kinds should grow by a word spoken with the mouth of God, let it be so, is a strange and wonderfull thing. By virtue of these words, there were Sheep, Goats, Kine, Horses, Camels and Dromedaries, Elephants, Lions, Bears, Dogs, Tygers, Wolves, Foxes, Deer. What are all these but a most artificial mixture of earth and water put into a certain shape or forme of members, having head, feet, back, breast, belly, brain, liver, heart, guts, and other entrails, and having power to see, hear, to touch, smell, taste, to eat, drink, go, generate, to remember, to have a kind of thought of things within, to imagine and discern, having also affections and passions. They carry us, feed us, cloath us, till the ground for us. How full of tedious and toilsome pains would our lives be, if we had not a horse to bear us up and down from place to place, and Horses or Oxen to convey all manner of things for us!

God hath propounded to us in the natures of the living creatures, examples of virtues which we may imitate, and of vices which we should avoid. See Aristotles 8th Book, De hist. animal. Zanch. commends Ælian for his observing and describing of this use of the living creatures, and exhorts students, especially Divines to read him, Zanch. De oper. Dei, partis secundæ, l. 7. c. 1. Alia animalia ad nos vestiendos, alia ad alendos, alia ad vehendos, alia ad terram Colendam, alia ad alios usus nobis inservient, Gen. 1. 27. usus verò spiritualis, longè nobilior & excellentior est ut etiam anima ipso corpore. Hic autem usus non solùm in eo existit, quod ex horum consideratione, in cognitionem Dei, ejusque sapientiæ, potentiæ, ac bonitatis adducimur, sed etiam quod in hujscemodi animalibus, talia virtutum nobis imitandarum, & vitiorum vitandorum in exempla.

We must magnifie the name of God, and frame our selves to sincere thankfulness unto him who hath made such a multitude of creatures inferiour to our selves, and given to us the use of them. O what a wonderfull skilfull workman is he, that out of the earth could produce such a number of such creatures! And how good was he to us, that he did not give reason * unto them as well as sense, for if they had reason to know their own strength and our weakness, we should never keep them under as we do.

* Mounsieur de la Chambre grants reason to beasts in some sense. See his Introduction, and part 4. chap. 1.

Let

Let us not abuſe the creatures of God to bad purpoſe, or uſe them in a cruell and inhumane manner: they are our fellow-creatures, made of a little courſer earth; and ſince they obey us with all chearfullneſs, let us be likewiſe obedient to God.

There is no creature among all the beaſts of the world which ſo aptly demonſtrates the power and wiſdom of Almighty God as the * Elephant, both in reſpect of his proportion of body and diſpoſition of ſpirit. He is by the Hebrews called Behemoth, by way of excellency, as the Latines for the ſame cauſe call him Bellua, and by Job 40. 15. he is likewiſe called Behemoth in the plurall number. Behold now Behemoth which I made with thee, he eateth graſs as an Oxe. The LXX. and Chaldee by Behemoth underſtand all earthly beaſts of great bulk, but the Hebrews think the Elephant is only meant, whom Thomas Aquinas and Nicolaus Lyranus follow; God ſtirs Job up to conſider well of this huge beaſt, as if he had ſaid, If thou doſt not yet underſtand how weak a man thou art, and how unfit to grapple with me, ſee how thou canſt deal with this great beaſt. Vide Voſſi. de orig. & progreſſ. Idol. lib. 3. cap. 50, 51 He is wittily called by Julius Scaliger, Beſtiarum Heros: and by Job in the ſame Chapter, v. 19. the chief of the wayes of God, that is, the greateſt, ſtrongeſt, and moſt underſtanding of all earthly irrational creatures, as Deodate interprets it. Vide Fulleri miſcel. Sac. l. 4. c. 10.

* Utrum ea vox Elephas ab Eleph bos, an vero potius ab Aleph quod Syris & Ebrais diſcere eſt, derivata ſit, meritò dubites, adeò, veriſimilis utraque ſententia eſt. Nam quod primam attinet, in confeſſo eſt apud Graecos & Latinos, nobilitatem ſemper fuiſſe bovis præ ceteris terreſtribus animantibus magnitudinem. Ita credibile eſt, Ebraos, Syros & Phœnices cum hoc animal & mole & figuratione corporis ad bovem quam proxime accedens primò vidiſſent, bovis nomine appellaſſe. Quod ad alteram attinet, quis ignorat ea, quæ de hujus bellua docilitate narrat Plinius, l. 8. c. 1, 3, 5. Cicero Epiſt. Famil. 1, 7. & plena manu Lipſius. Centuria prima Epiſt. 5. Amama Antibarb. Bibl. l. 3. The Elephant is for growth and underſtanding chiefeſt of unreaſonable Animals. They go two, ſometimes three years with young, and have extream torment in their labour: They grow till fifteen, in that time mounting to 24. foot, yet lye down, dance, and prove very active. Herberts Trav. l. 3.

See Mr Tory his Voyage to East-India, Section 6th. ſtrange ſtories of the Indian Elephant.

Elephas peregrinum eſt apud nos animal, Indis & aliis notiſſimum & obvium, Certè turres olim armatorum in prælia ferebant, Johnſtoni Thaumatographia. The Elephants were uſefull in the wars, they carried Towers, whence ten or fifteen ſouldiers did caſt darts or ſpears, See Mac. 6. 37. If by accident in their fury they kill him that feeds them, they ſo mourn for it afterward, that they dye through hunger, ſaith Strabo: the like I have heard reported of an Elephant here in England.

Ariſtotle l. 9. de hiſt. animal. c. 47. makes mention of a memorable thing to make men flye inceſt. The King of Scythia had a Mare of a moſt excellent race, which brought forth moſt excellent colts; among the reſt ſhe had one that excelled them all; the King was deſirous that this colt might horſe his damme, that ſo he might have an excellent race of them: but the colt when he was brought to his damme, would not horſe her; the King ſeeing this, he cauſed them to cover the damme that he might not know her. But he perceiving afterwards that it was his damme, ran away and caſt himſelf over a ſteep rock, and brake his neck. Vide Voſ. de orig. & prog. Idol. l. 3. c. 61.

Vide Pier. Valer Hierog. lib. 5. cap. 16.

There are many things wonderfull in the Dog, his ſagacity, docility, fidelity. Caius hath written a fine little book, De Canibus Brittannicis. Of this creature and the horſe is Plinies Elogie. Natural Hiſt. lib. 8. cap. 40. Montaigne his Eſſayes, lib. 2. cap. 12. Fideliſſimi ante omnia homini canis atque equus.

Among the Lacedæmonians the Dog was offered to Mars for his ſtoutneſs and readineſſe to aſſault. Vide Pier. Valer Hierog. l. 5. c. 32. one hath theſe Verſes of the Engliſh Maſtiffs,

Who fearleſs dare on any Monſter flye,
That wears the body of mortality.

Saint Mallos in France is kept by Maſtiffs.

I heard the Prince of Orange often ſay, that as he thought, but for a Dog he had been taken. Camiſado one night was given by Julian Romero with ſuch reſolution, that that the place of arms took no Alarm untill their fellows were running in with the enemies in their tailes. Whereupon this Dog hearing a great noise, fell to scratching, and crying, and withall leapt on the Princes face, awaking him being asleep, before any of his men. Whereby with much ado he recovered his horse before the enemy arrived. This Dog was a white little Hound called Cumus. The Prince ever after, untill his dying day kept one of that Dogs race. The Actions of the Low Countries, by Sr Roger Williams.

A Dog in Epirus in a great assembly of people, knowing the man that had murdered his Master, flew upon him with open mouth, barking and snapping at him so furiously, that he was ready to take him by the throat, untill he at length confessed the fact, that caused the Dog thus to rage and foam against him. Vide Voss. de orig. & progres. Idol. l. 3. c. 61. Plinie his Nat. Hist. l. 8. c. 40. See Camerar. Hist. Medit. l. 2. c. 6.

Alexander the Great being on his voyage toward the Indies, received for a Present a very great Dog which the King of the Albanians sent him, with advice, that he should not set his Dog against Wolves, Bears or Bores, but against Lions and Elephants. Alexander desiring to see some sport, made a Lion to be brought, whom the Dog overcame, and in a trice tare in pieces. Then he commanded to set an Elephant upon him, longing to see the issue of that fight. The Dog seeing his adversary, begins to bustle himself, and to bristle his hair all his body over, and casting out a furious bawling, maketh the Elephant turn tail, and proceedeth so courageously, to the great applause and astonishment of all that beheld it. Pliny lib. 8. cap. 12. See Camerar. Histor. meditat. lib. 2. cap. 6. and Voss. de orig. progres. Idol. l. 2. c. 56. Id. ib.

The Dogs which be near unto Nilus lap of the River, running still, and never stay while they are drinking, for fear of the greedy Crocodiles. Ægyptij canes è Nilo nunquam nisi currentes lambisant, dum Crocodili insidias cavent. Ferunt odore Pantherarum mire solicitari quadrupedes cunctas, sed capitis torvitate terreri. Quamobrem occultato eo, dulcedine invitatos corripiunt.

It happened, that upon a narrow thin plank that lay for a Bridge, one goat met another, both coming from divers parts: now by reason that the place was so narrow, that they could not passe by, nor turn about, nor yet retire backwards blindly, considering how long the plank was, and so slender withal; moreover the water that ran underneath, ran with a swift stream, and threatned present death if they failed and went besides, Mutianus affirmeth, that he saw one of them to lie flat down and the other to go over his back. Plin. Nat. Hist. l. 8. c. 50.

The oxe is very helpfull to man in tillage, therefore heretofore the Law forbad any to kill him.

The sheep are usefull in many respects, we have Cloathes of courser wearing from their skins, of finer from their wooll, meat from their flesh, medicine from their bloud, and musick from their bowels.

In Sibaris there was a young man named Crathis, which being not able to retain lust, but forsaken of God, and given over to a reprobate sense, committed buggery with a female Goat, the which the Master Goat beheld and looked upon, and dissembled, concealing his minde and jealousie for the pollution of his female. Afterward finding the said young man asleep (for he was a Shepheard) he made *all his force upon him, and with his horns dashed out the Buggerers brains. A memorable story of the punishment of buggery. * Topsell de quadrupedibus.*

See strange Histories of Beares, Treasury of Time, l. 8. c. 39, 40. and one strange one in Bertius his Tab. Geog. p. 298.

Alexander the Great had a very strange and faire horse called Bucephalus, * either for the greatness of his head, or else from the mark or brand of a Bulls head, which was imprinted upon his shoulder. This horse being brought to King Philip while Alexander was yet young, he was so rough that the Rider said he would do no service, affirming that it was unpossible, they found him so charlish, yerking out, and suffering no man to come nigh him. Alexander took the horse in hand, and turned him toward the Sun (for that he saw before that the horse started at his own shadow) and so used him, that he rode him, and made him as gentle as could be. * Bucephalus signifieth an ox head. Vide Vos. Instit. orat. l. 4. c. 7. Sect. 11. Plin. nat. hist. lib. 8. cap. 42. lib. 6. cap. 20. Aul. Gel. Noct. Att. l. 5. c. 2. & Plutarch in vita Alex. This horse is also celebrated by Plutarch and Q. Curtius.

Wherefore King Philip when he first saw Bucephalus tamed by Alexander, (the spectators admiring it) is reported to have wept, and kissing Alexander, to have said unto him, Regnum tibi quære : Macedonia enim te non capit : Seek a greater Kingdome Son, than Macedonia is, for Macedonia is too little for thee.

When the horse was dead, Alexander solemnized his funerals sumptuously; erected a Tomb for him, and about it built a City that bare his name Bucephalia.

Vide Olyss. Aldrovand. De Quadrupedibus, l. 1. c. 1.

That is a lofty description of a horse, Job 39. 19. to 26. By which words it is signified, that that terrible strength of the horse is from God, that neighing almost like to thunder, that mettle, when not being able to stand still, he hollows the earth with his hoofs, goes on undaunted into the battle, neither is terrified with so many darts falling near him and his rider, and runs with that swiftnesse that he seems to swallow up the earth, and rejoyceth at the sound of the Trumpet stirring up the souldier to battle.

[a] Sir Walter Rawleigh.

[b] Hic est leo hospes hominis, hic est homo medicus leonis. See Dr Willet of the Camell on Levit. 11. quest. 14. and Sandey his Commentary of the 13th Book of Ovids Metamorphosis

If Banks [a] had lived in elder times, he would have shamed all the Inchanters of the world; for whosoever was most famous among them, could never master or instruct any beast as he did his horse. He would restore a glove to the due owner after his Master had whispered that mans name in his ear; he would tell the just number of pence in any piece of silver coin barely shewed him by his Master, and obey presently his command in discharging himself of his excrements whensoever he bad him.

That story of Androdus and the Lion [b] is commonly known : Vide Aulì Gellij noctes Atticas, l. 5. c. 14. and Montaigne his Essayes, l. 2. c. 12. and Vossius de orig. & prog. Idol. l. 3. c. 52. relates a strange story out of Ælian, of the sagacity of the Lion.

of the Camelion. The Ape is so docible, that he will learn to play at Chesse. See Plin. nat. hist l. 8. c. 54. Vide plura de Simia Voss. de orig. & prog. Idol. l. 3. c. 59. Leones cicurari possunt, id quod ex hoc intelligo, quod in arca Londinensis leones custodum suorum oscula excipiunt, contactum admittunt, & colludunt. Ipse vidi. Caius de variorum animalium Historia.

The Lion is a very gratefull creature, knowing and loving his benefactor. See Captain Smiths History of Virginia, c. 48.

Banks was brought into suspition of Magick in France, among the Capuchins, for the strange feats which his horse Morocco plaied at Orleance. He to redeem his credit, promised to manifest to the world the contrary. To this end he commanded his horse to seek out one in the presse of the people, who had a Crucifix on his hat; which done, he bad him kneel down unto unto it; and to rise up again, and kiss it. And now Gentlemen (saith he) I think my horse hath acquitted both me and himself, and so his adversaries rested satisfied : conceiving (as it might seem) that the Devil had no power to come near the Crosse. Bishop Mortons Answer to Higgons.

Horses were the ancient Hieroglyphick of lust, and such desires in the sacred Scriptures are compared to their neighings. For there is no creature so prone unto Venus, as a Mare; and therefore fained to conceive with the wind. Sandys his Commentary upon the 9th Book of Ovids Metam.

The Chameleon lives by the air, saith Pliny, l. 8. c. 33. and Solinus, c. 53. and other living creatures (they say) live with the simple Elements, whence those Verses,

Quatuor ex puris vitam ducunt Elementis,
Chameleon, Talpa, & Maris Halec, & Salamandra.

But this, and his sodaine turning himself into what ever colours he toucheth, Gabriel Sionita refutes De nonnullis orientalium urbibus, &c. c. 9.

A Bear in the mountains of Thracia entring into the Lions Den, and killing the young Lions, the old He and She-Lion returned at last home from hunting, and seeing this spectacle, they pursued the Bear, and the Bear getting up into the next Tree, the Lioness stayed at the tree, and the Lion wandred about all the mountains, till he met with a Carpenter, who at the first sight of him out of fear let the hatchet fall from his hand, but the Lion fawned upon the man, man, and with his foot ſhewed him the hatchet, that he might take it up, and at length with his tail embracing the man he brought him to his den, and the Lioneſſe came thither, both ſhew the deſtruction of their whelps, and alſo looked up to the tree where the Bear was, then the Carpenter conjecturing that the Bear did this injury, cut down the Tree, that falling with the Bear, the Lion and the Lioneſſe preſently tear the Bear in pieces, and the Lion brought back the man ſafe to the place where before he did cut wood; See more of the Lion in that Chapter, and 53. of Voſſius his Book before-cited: and Plinies Nat. Hiſt. l. 8. c. 16. Athanaſ. Kirch. Obeliſc. Pamph. l. 4. Hierogrammatiſmus 4.

and

It is a great token of Gods goodneſſe to us, that from the very Serpents which are poiſonfull for mans ſin) a threefold profit redounds to man.

1. In reſpect of nouriſhment, in Africa, as Pliny relates, l. 6. c. 29. men feed on them.

2. They ſerve for Medicament: See Voſſius de Origine & Progreſſu. Idol. lib. 4. cap. 62.

3. They are a Preſervative againſt poyſon, amoletum ab amoliendo, or as they commonly write it amuletum. Treacle is made of the fleſh of a viper, the oyl of Scorpions is good againſt the ſting of Scorpions. Being bitten by a Serpent, if you annoint the wound with ſpittle, it will hinder the poiſon from ſpreading any farther.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Angels good and bad.

AMong the works of Creation, the principal are the reaſonable Creatures, Angels and Men. Amongſt thoſe which are indued with reaſon and underſtanding, God holds the ſupreme place, Men the loweſt, the Angels the middle between God and Men, ſaith Petavius.

The Name Angell comes of the Greek ἄγγελος, which ſignifies a Meſſenger, ſent forth from ſome ſuperiour perſon or State to deliver a meſſage, and to declare the mind of him or them that ſent him. The Hebrew name מלאך which is the name of an Angel in the Old Teſtament, ſignifies alſo a Meſſenger; but yet in a more full and large ſenſe: for it ſignifies ſuch a Meſſenger as doth not only deliver and declare a Meſſage by word of mouth, but alſo doth act and execute indeed the will of him that ſent him, and doth perform his work enjoyed as a faithfull Miniſter and ſervant.

Firſt of all, It ſignifieth that chief and principall Meſſenger and Embaſſadour of God, his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt, who is called Malachy 3. 1. The Angel of the Covenant.

Secondly, Paſtors are called Angels, Rev. 2. & 3. ch. being Gods Meſſengers ſent to the Church.

Thirdly, This word is moſt frequently uſed to ſignifie the heavenly Spirits, who are ſo called, becauſe they are both ready to be ſent on Gods meſſage, and often are ſent out to do the will of God, Gen. 19. 1. Pſalm 103. 20, 21. Matth. 18. 10. Angeli vox, nomen eſt officij, non naturæ. Auſtin, and Iſidore from him.

That there are Angels is proved out of Scripture, where they are often mentioned, Pſalm 68. 17. Dan. 7. 10. Col. 1. 16. and 2. 10. Heb. 12. 12. and by the manifold apparitions of them, Gen. 3. 24. Cherubims, that is, Angels appearing Angelorum nomen Græcum eſt ἄγγελος enim eſt nuncius ab ἀγγέλλειν nunciare. Græcum nomen Angeli, Europæa gentes ferè retinent, niſi quod inflectant ad terminationem ſuam & Galli id invertentes dicunt ange, Germani a in e mutato engel. Martinius de Creatione, Angeli ex miniſterio quod regi ſuo præbent, nuncupantur. Ludov. Viv. de verit. Fid. Chriſt. lib. 1. cap. 14. That there are Angels.

Omnes apparitiones veteris teſtamenti ad illam apparitionem ordinata fuerunt, qua filius Dei apparuit in carne. Aquin. part. 1 quæſt. 2. art. 2.

in the form of flying men to keep the entrance into the Garden, Gen. 18. 2. Abraham entertained Angels unawares. They were sent to destroy the filthy Sodomites, and the Cities about them that ran into the like exorbitances. An Angel stopped Abrahams hand which he lifted up according to Gods Commandment to slay his only sonne Isaac. [a] Abraham told Eleazer that God would send his Angel with him to prosper him in the businesse of taking a wife for his sonne Isaac. An Angel of the Lord met Hagar and sent her back to her Mistresse, when through discontent she had plaid the Fugitive. An Angel appeared to Zachary and foretold the conception and birth of John the Baptist. An Angel acquainted the blessed Virgin that she should conceive our Saviour in her womb by the over-shadowing of the Holy Ghost. A multitude of Angels celebrated the Nativity of our Blessed Saviour with an Hymn of joy. Angels ministred to Christ after his temptation in the wilderness, and in his bloudy Agony in the Garden. An Angel also set Peter at liberty when he was Imprisoned between two Souldiers. An Angel shook the foundation of the Prison wherein S[t] Paul and Sylas were laid fast in the stocks. An Angel shewed unto John the Vision of the Revelation at the appointment of our Lord Jesus Christ. The good Angels appeared alwayes in a bright form and shape, Matth. 28. Acts 27. 23. & 16. 9. the evil Angels in an ugly and horrid shape. Now besides these and many more apparitions of the heavenly Spirits, we read that the Angels of God are many thousands, yea millions, and of the company of innumerable Angels, and of Angels pitching their tents about the righteous, and holding them up in their hands, and chasing the wicked and destroying them.

[a] Esse Angelos vel hinc liquet, quòd sint in rerum natura quæ nullis possint adscribi causis Physicis, unde necesse est Spiritus esse unde illa proficiscantur. Tum etiam videtur ipse ordo universi id requirere ut sint Angeli, nempe certum est naturam esse corpoream, & certum item est mediam esse naturam, quæ nempe partim corporea, partim incorporea sit; consequens igitur est, ut sit natura quemadmodum mere corporea, sic etiam merè incorporea. Scriptura vero non probat esse Angelos, quemadmodum neque probat animam esse immortalem, sed hoc sumit. Cameron Tom. 2. Prælect.

That the Angels of God (whether good or evill) are truely essentiall and substantiall spirits, is proved by divers reasons, in Deacon and Walkers first Dialogue of Spirits and Devils, p. 26, 27, 28.

The Saducees deny Angels, Act. 23. 8. It was wonderfull, that any were found among the Jewes, which should deny the Angels, whom the very Heathens acknowledged. They held, that besides bodies, there were spirits void of body and matter. The Heathens held, that there were Angels, they called them dæmones or genii.

And besides the testimony of Scriptures, the Heathens also had some notions of them, as appears in their writings, but indeed it was in some respect a false notion; for they conceived them to be a certain kind of petty Gods, and did perform worship unto them, the evil Angels beguiling them: and if there be evil Angels, there must needs be likewise good.

The Angels are diversly called in Scripture: Spirits, Psal. 104. 4. to expresse their nature; and Angels to expresse their Office, as Messengers sent from God: They are called Sons of God, Job 1. 6. & 38. 7. Yea Elohim, Gods, Psal. 8. Cherubims, Gen. 3. 24. Ezek. 10. 1. from the form they appeared in, viz. like youths. Caph is a particle of similitude, and Rabiah signifies a young man in Chaldee, witness R. David. But Ludov. de Dieu in his Animadversions upon M[r] Medes Clavis Apocalyptica saith, Hoc est puerile & frivolum. Seraphim, Isa. 6. 2. Burning quasi accensi ardore justitiæ divinæ, they execute those things which God commands when he sits in the Throne of his justice, and according to it judgeth mankind. Not from their burning love toward God, as some imagine. Watchmen, or the watchfull ones, Dan. 4. 10, 13. being in heaven as a watch-tower, and keeping the world. Starres of the morning, Job. 38. 7. from their brightness of nature. A flaming fire, Psal. 104. 4. because God useth their help to destroy the wicked.

Vide Petav. De Angelis, l. 4. c. 1. He saith there, Ex tanto sapientum virorum etiam gentilium consensu id officiis vere esse confessum, ac pene naturali instinctu cognitam Angelos esse aliquos in rerum natura: qui etsi oculis minime videantur, usu tamen & officiis sentiantur. The Peripateticks call them Immaterial substances, Intelligences, abstracted and separated forms. The Angels are material. 1. They are perfect effects, therefore must have all the four causes. 2. Finire, therefore terminated in their essence: nothing terminates things but matter and form. Barlow in Hieron last farewell. Vide Crakanth. Metaphys. c. 2. Zanchy and others hold otherwise.

In

In the New Teſtament they are called Principalities for their excellency of nature and eſtate; and [b] Powers for their wonderfull force.

[b] Col. 1.10. & 2.10.

Reaſons why God made Angels.

The will and power of God, therefore they are, becauſe God ſaw it fit to make them, yet two reaſons may be rendred of this work.

1. God ſaw it fit to raiſe up our thoughts from meaner to more excellent [c] creatures, till we came to him: Firſt, things (ſay ſome) were made which had no life; then living things without ſenſe, as plants and trees, then ſenſible, then reaſonable.

[c] Angels are a mean betwixt God and man, as man was betwixt the Angels and the beaſts.

2. It was convenient that every part and place of the world ſhould be fill'd with inhabitants fit for the ſame, as the air with birds, the earth with beaſts and men, the ſea with fiſhes, and the heavens which we behold with ſtars, and the higheſt Heavens with Angels.

God made the Angels.

God is the maker of Angels, Pſal. 33. 6. Rev. 10. 6. Theſe glorious Creatures which ſhall have no end, had a beginning as well as the ſillieſt beaſt, bird, or fiſh, and they are equally beholding (nay more, becauſe they have received more excellent endowments) unto God for their Being, with the ſillieſt worm. And though Moſes mentions not in particular either the act of creating them, or the time; yet S[t] Paul ſaith, that By him were all things made, viſible and inviſible: and it is evident by diſcourſe of reaſon, that the Angels were made by God. That is too bold an aſſertion of M[r] Hobbes's in his Leviathan, part 3. c. 34. Concerning the creation of Angels there is nothing delivered in the Scripture: See more there. What can be meant but the Angels by Thrones, and the words following, Col. 1. 16. Vide Grotium in loc. For either they muſt be made by God or ſome other maker, or elſe they muſt be eternal; for whoſoever is not made by ſome maker, cannot be made at all; and whoſoever is not at all made, is eternal. Now if the Angels were eternal, then were they equal with God in ſelf-being, they might be called ſelf-ſubſiſting eſſences, and ſo ſhould be equall with God, ſtanding in no more need of him then he of them, owing no more ſervice, homage and praiſe to him, then he oweth to them, and ſo they were Gods as well as he; and then we ſhould have a multitude of Gods, not only one God, and ſo ſhould not God be the firſt and beſt Eſſence, there being ſo many others beſide him, as Good and Omniſcient as he; wherefore they muſt be made by ſome Maker, becauſe they cannot be Eternal: and if made, then either by themſelves or ſome other thing beſides themſelves, not by themſelves, becauſe that implies an abſolute contradiction: and if by ſome other thing, then by a better or worſe thing, not by a more mean, for the leſſe perfect cannot give being to a more perfect thing, for then it ſhould communicate more to the effect then it hath in it ſelf any way, which is impoſſible that any efficient cauſe ſhould do, not by any better thing then themſelves, for excepting the Divine Majeſty which is the firſt and beſt, there is no better thing then the Angels, ſave the humanity of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which could not be the Maker of them, becauſe they were created ſome thouſands of years before the humanity was formed in the Virgins Womb, or united to the ſecond perſon in Trinity.

Pſal. 104. 4. Solus Deus eſt ens per ſuam eſſentiam, omnia verò alia ſunt entia per participati.nem; omne autem quod eſt per participationem cauſatur ab eo quod eſt per eſſentiam; ſicut omne ignitum cauſatur ab igne: Unde neceſſe eſt Angelos eſſe creatos. Aquin. part. 1. Quaſt. 61. Artic. 1. Qui apti eſſent ad generandum, eos non oportebat condi univerſos pariter, nam ſuperflua fuiſſet generandi facultas attributa. Angeli quibus gignere datum non erat, uno ſunt velut partu editi. Lud. Viv. de veritate fidei Chriſt. l. 1. c. 16.

Their nature.

We are not able to conceive of their Eſſence, they are ſimple, incorporeal, Spiritual ſubſtances, therefore incorruptible.

An Angell defined. Wendelinus.

An Angel is a Spiritual, created, compleat ſubſtance, indued with an underſtanding and will, and excellent power of working.

An Angel is a ſubſtance.

1. Spiritual, that is, void of all corporeal and ſenſible matter, whence in Scripture, Angels are called Spirits [d], Pſal. 104. 4. Heb. 1. 14. Therefore the bodies in which either good or evil Angels appeared, were not natural to them, but only aſſumed for a time, and laid by when they pleaſed, as a man doth his garments, not ſubſtantial, but aerial bodies: they were not Eſſentially or perſonally, but only locally united to them, ſo that the body was moved, but not quickned by them.

[d] They are Spirits, Heb. 1. 14. Glorious ſpirits, Heb. 9. 5. Heavenly Spirits, Matth. 24. 36. Immortal Spiriti, Lu. 26. 36.

The Hebrew, Greek and Latine words for Spirit, ſignifie breath; there is no more ſubtil subtil being that we are acquainted with then breath, being condensed by the cold indeed it may be seen.

The Angels good and bad are Spirits, Eph. 6. 12. & 2. 2.

Because,

First, They are immaterial and incorporeal.

Secondly, Invisible, 1 Tim. 1. 16. That was a foolish fancy of the Disciples, Luk. 24. 37. if Christ had been a Spirit, he could not have been seen.

Thirdly, Impalpable, Luke 24. 37. compared with v. 39.

Fourthly, Incorruptible and immortal, they end not of themselves, and no creature can destroy them. God alone hath Immortality, 1 Tim. 6. 16. Origine in himself, so as to communicate it to another.

Fifthly, They are intellectuall beings, all understanding.

Sixtly, Their spirituality appears in the subtilty of their moving. It is a question whether they do transire ab extremo ad extremum, without going through the middle parts, yet they move like lightning.

Seaventhly, In respect of their strength and power, there is a great deal of force in a natural spirit extracted, Isa. 31. 3.

The Schoolemen thought they were bodily, because they endured Hell torments, but they are also Spiritual, and in evil Angels meerly Spiritual, as eternal life in the good Angels is meerly Spiritual.

2. Created, By which name he is distinguished from the Creator, who is an infinite Spirit, John 4. 24. Nihil de Deo & creaturis univocè dicitur. See Col. 1. 16.

3. Compleat, By which an Angel is distinguished from the reasonable soul of man, which also is a spiritual substance, but incompleat, because it is the essential part of man.

4. Indued with, 1. An understanding, by which an Angel knoweth God and his works. 2. A will, by which he desireth or refuseth the things understood. 3. An excellent power of working, by which he effects what the will commands, this is great in them, Psal. 103. 20. See 2 King. 19. 35.

The Angels are most excellent creatures, Est Angelica natura omnium Creaturum naturarum praestantissima, cui propterea nostra comparatur, praesertim Beata, Matth. 22. 30. Damasc. De Angelis, cap. 1. When the highest praise is given of any thing, it is taken from the excellency of Angels, Psal. [e] 78. 25. 1 Cor. 13. 1. This appellation of Angels, belongs both to good and evil Angels, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jud 4. 12. Jude v. 6. The good Angels are called holy Angels, Matth. 25. 31. Luke 9. 26. Mark 8. 36. therefore they are cloathed with linnen, Dan. 11. 4. to signifie their purity, and are called Angels of light, 2 Cor. 12. 14. to note the purity wherein they were created. They are called holy, and Angels of light, à posteriore, because they continued in holiness, and the light of truth, and in other excellent gifts with which they were adorned by God, Matth. 25. 31. they are called elect, 1 Tim. 5. 21. à priore, viz. from Gods eternal election according to his purpose, by which he decrees that they continuing in holiness and truth, shall perpetually injoy his blessedness and glory. They were chosen by God out of the whole kind of Angels, and ordained to eternal life, out of Gods meer grace choosing them, without any respect to any qualities of theirs. That may be applyed even to them, Rom. 11. 35, 36. They are called good Angels, both because they were made such, Gen. 1. 31. and because they obey the will of God, Psalm 103. 20, 21. and because also they are confirmed in good, Matth. 18. 10. Luke 20. 36. All the individual Angels were made at once, and as God made Adam perfect at the first, so they were made of a perfect constitution. They have all our faculties, save such as be badges of our weakness: They have no body, therefore not the faculties of generation, nutrition, augmentation. They have reason, conscience, will, can understand as much as we do and better too, they have a will, whereby they can refuse evil and chuse good, a conscience, reasonable affections, though not such as depend upon the body.

For their nature or substance they are called Spirits, for their property or quality glorious, for their place or abode heavenly, for their continuance immortall. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 1. 7. p. 55. to. 70.

[e] The bread of the mighty, or Angels food, not because they brought it, but because it was most pleasant, so that should Angels need food, they could not feed on better. See River and Willet on Exod. 16.

Their faculties.

Matth. 28. 5.

They

They are endowed with excellent abilities, know more of God, themſelves, us, and other things than we do; love God, themſelves and men, are obedient to God. The good Angels obey God.

1. Univerſally, in all things, Pſal. 103. 20.

2. Freely and readily, make haſt to do what he would have done, therefore they are ſaid to have Harps, Rev. 15. 2. as a ſign of their chearful mind.

3. With all their might, They ſerve God with diligence and ſedulity, therefore they are ſaid to have [a] wings to flye.

4. Conſtantly, Rev. 7. 15. & 14. 4.

[a] Angelis alas habere dicuntur propter velocitatem & celeritem in cuncta diſcurſum. Hieron. in Iſa. 6. & ventos alas quoque adfingunt ob eandem cauſam. Druſ. in Obſerv. Sac. l. 4. c. 19.

They have incredible ſtrength, and therefore by an excellency they are called Strong in ſtrength, Pſal. 103. 20. Angels of the power of the Lord Jeſus, 2 Theſ. 1. 7. Powers, Epheſ. 3. 10. Col. 2. 10. One Angel is able to deſtroy all the men, beaſts, birds, and fiſhes, and all the creatures in the world, and to overturn the whole courſe of nature if God ſhould permit it; to drown the earth again, and make the waters overflow it; to pull the Sun, Moon, and Stars out of their places, and make all a Chaos: Therefore we read of wonderfull things done by them, they ſtopt the mouths of Lions that they could not touch Daniel; they quencht the violence of the fire that it could not touch ſo much as a hair of the three Childrens heads, nor a threed of their garments; they made Peters chains in an inſtant fall from his hands and feet; Acts 5. 19. & 12. 7. they can move and ſtir the earth (ſay the Schoolmen) as appears Matth. 28. 2. The Angels ſhook the foundation of the Priſon where Paul and Silas lay, and cauſed the doors to flye open, and every mans bands to fall from him. They deſtroyed the firſt born of Ægypt, Sodom and Gomorrah. One Angel ſlew in one night in the hoſt of Senacherib an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand men, 2 Kings 19. 35. They can move bodies ſwiftly from place to place, as it is plain in the example of Ezekiel, Ezek. 8. 3. Dan. 14. 36. Philip. Acts 8. 39.

Dan. 3. 21, 22, 23. Job 1. 16. 19. See Eph. 2. 2. Gen. 19. 23, 24, 25. Exod. 12. 29.

Reaſ. Their nature in reſpect of bodily things is wholly active not paſſive, they are of a ſpiritual nature. What great things can a whirl-wind or flaſh of lightning do?

They are ſwift and of great agility, they have no bodies, therefore fill not up any place, neither is there any reſiſtance to them, they move with a moſt quick motion, they can be where they will, they move like the wind irreſiſtibly and eaſily, without moleſtation, and in an unperceivable time; they move more ſwiftly then the Sun, can diſpatch that ſpace in a few minutes which the Sun doth in twenty four hours.

They have admirable wiſdome, 1 Sam. 18. 14. & 14. 20. The knowledg of the good Angels is increaſed ſince their Creation; for beſides their natural knowledg, they know many things by revelation, Dan. 9. 22, 23. Matth. 1. 20. Luke 1. 30. either immediately from God or from his Word, Epheſ. 3. 9, 10. 1 Pet. 1. 12. Luke 15. 18. by experience and conjecture, Eph. 3. 10. So perfectly knowing are they, as that the very Heathen Philoſophers have ſtiled them by the name of Intelligences, as if their very being were made up of underſtanding.

Acts 6. 15. Mark 16. 32. Quidquid intelligentiæ rationiſque eſt particeps primarias habet facultates duas; quarum altera & cap. 7, 8, 9.

in rerum cognitione; altera in electione conſiſtit. Petavius de Angelis, lib. 1. cap. 6. Vide plura ibid. The Angels have not only cognitionem concreatam & infuſam, but acquiſitam ſay the Schoolmen.

How an Angel doth underſtand is much diſputed, their underſtanding is not infinite, they know not all things, Matthew 24. 36. Marke 13. Of that day the Angels know not: Again, they cannot know future contingent things any further than Gods reveals theſe things to them, neither can they know the ſecrets of mans heart, 1 Kings 8. 39. Pſalm 7. 10. for that is proper to the Lord alone.

They are ſaid indeed to rejoyce at the converſion of a ſinner, but that is no further then their inward convention puts it ſelf forth into outward actions.

They do not know the number of the Elect, nor the nature of ſpirituall deſertions, the manner of mortifying ſin, unleſs by the Church and Miniſtry of the word.

So

So again, for the manner of their knowledge, That of the Schools about their morning and evening knowledge, is vain: but it is plain, they know discursivè as well as intuitivè: though some say they are creaturæ intelligentes, but not ratiocinantes.

There are three degrees of their knowledge (say the Schoolmen b) 1. Natural, which they had from the Creation, John 8. 4. Some abode in the truth, others fell from it. 2. Revealed, 1 Peter 1. 12. Ephesians 3. 10. The Greek word signifies to look into it narrowly. Piscator thinks it hath reference to the Cherubims, who did turn their faces to the Propitiatory, which was a type of Christ. 3. Experimental, which they have by the observation of those things which are done among us, so they know the repentance of the godly, Luke 16. 10.

b Tum veteres patres, tum etiam Doctores Scholastici triplicem cognitionem tribuunt Angelis. Ex Patribus Augustinus triplicem in Angelis statuit rerum cognitionem: unam, qua res in verbo, in filio scilicet Dei vident; alteram qua eas cernunt in earum naturis: Tertiam, qua eas norunt in suis mentibus. Casmanni Angelographia.

2. The will of Angels is to be considered: Will in the good Angels is that whereby they desire good things known, and forsake evil.

The Angels would never have sinned, if they had not been voluntary. For although the good Angels be now so confirmed in holiness, that they can will nothing but good, yet that hinders not liberty, no more than it doth in God or Christ himself; to be a free Agent is a perfection; to sin is a defect, and ariseth not from the liberty, but the mutability of the will.

Ista necessitas, quæ scilicet ex suppositione fit, optimè conspirat cum libertate. Deus mundum creavit liberè, & tamen supposito Dei decreto de mundo ante annorum millia condendo, necesse fuit ut Deus mundum crearet, non tamen ut crearet necessariò, sed liberè. Sic proposito Dei decreto de non frangendis ossibus Christi, necesse fuit ut ab iis frangendis abstinerent milites Romani, non tamen ut abstinerent necessario sed libere; nam proculdubio quàm libere fregerunt ossa latronum, tam libere abstinebant à frangendis ossibus Christi. Twiss. contra Corv. c. 4. Sect. 11. Gratia non aufert libertatem arbitrii, licet vera & physica operatione determinet arbitrium, sed potius libertatem illi ad bonum restituit & confirmat. Dicimus enim determinati voluntatem ad bene agendum liberè. Id. ibid.

3. Their motion and place. That they are in a place is plain by Scripture, which witnesseth, that they are sometimes in Heaven, and sometimes on Earth, as their service and office doth require.

The terms definitivè and circumscriptivè being meer words, and on this occasion insignificant, passe only in Latine, that the vanity of them may be concealed.

They are not in a place as bodies are, they are not circumscribed by place. For a legion of Devils was in one man, Luke 8. 30. They are so here, that they are not there; and therefore one Angel cannot be in many places, although many Angels may be in the same place, and they move not in an instant, though they move speedily. They continue in the highest Heavens, unless they be sent thence by the Lord to do something appointed by him: where being freed from all distractions and humane necessities, they behold the glorious presence of God, their understanding and will being pitcht upon him, Matth. 18. 10. & 22. 30. Ps. 68. 1. Luke 2. 13.

For the circumscription of a thing, is nothing else but the determination or defining of its place, and so both the termes of the distinction are the same. Hobbes his Leviathan, part. 4. chap. 46. But we must be content with those termes (for want of better) to distinguish between bodies and Angels being in a place. Though Gauford de descensu Christi ad inferos, lib. 2. pag. 108. cals it distinctionem superam, of a bodies being in a place circumscriptivè, the soul definitivè, and God repletivè, and saith he dare affirm, hujus acuminis prorsus nihil cognitum fuisse ante Scholasticorum tempora.

Isa. 6. They cry one to another, Holy, holy, holy. Vide Aquin. part. 1. Quæst. 107. Art. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

4. Their society and communion. For it cannot be conceived that these glorious Spirits should not signifie to one another their meaning: but how this should be, it is hard to determine, they say that the Angels make known their minds to one another by their meer will.

5. Their multitude and order. That there are many Angels appears, Daniel 7. 10. Mighty Princes are attended with many followers. See Job 25. 3. Numerus lapsorum in Scriptura non est definitus. Quod Scholastici cum Thoma definiunt ex 2 Reg. 6. 16. plures Angelos permansisse in gratia, quàm peccasse, parum soliditatis habet. Voet. Disputat. de Natura Dæmon.

7. 10. Psalm 67.18. & Heb. 12. 22. an innumerable company of Angels, Rev. 5. 11. Mat. 26. 23. that is, seventy two thousand, as Jerom computes it. See Dr George on Heb. 12. 23. Sect. 103.

The Fathers generally thought, that the number of the Angels which fell should be made up by the Elect Saints. But Danæus in August. Enchir. ad Laurent. c. 29. dislikes that. Some think that Heb. 12. 27. seems to speak little lesse. Vide Petavium de Angelis lib. 1. cap. 14.

Some say the good Angels exceed the number of the wicked Angels, by how much evil men exceed the good; the greatest number of evil Angels that we read of, is but Legion, the good very many, as those places in Daniel, Matthew, Hebrews, and Rev. 5. 11. will shew.

As for their order, the Apostle indeed Colos. 1. sheweth, that there is an order among them, so that one may be above another in dignity, but not in power and command. Hence they are called an host, which word signifieth chiefly what hath a compleat order.

There are degrees of them, Colos. 1. 16. Rom. 8. 32.

1 Thessalonians 4. 16. Some are named Angels, some Arch-angels, 1 Thessalonians 4.

Dionysius Areopagita makes nine [c] Orders of Angels, and distinguisheth them into threes. The first containing Cherubims, Seraphims, Thrones. The second Dominions, Armies and Powers. The third, Principalities, Arch-angels, and Angels. Much more modest is Augustine: Qui fatetur se rationem hujus distinctionis ignorare contra Priscil. cap. 11. & c. 57. Enchirid. ad Laurent. See Doctor Prideaux on Matth. 18. 10. for their Nature, Properties, Order and Ministry.

[c] That ancient and high soaring (though counterfeit) Dionysius describes the Hierarchy of Angels, as exactly as if he had dwelt amongst them, delivering unto us nine Orders of them, out of nine words, found partly in the Old, partly in the New Testament, and tels us the several natures, distinctions and properties of them all. Mr Mede on Zech. 4. 16. He that was rapt into the third Heaven can tell us of Thrones, Dominions, Principalities, Angels and Arch-angels, in that region of blessednesse. We cannot be so simple as to think these to be but one classe of Spirits, doubtlesse they are distinctions of divers Orders; but what their several Ranks, Offices, Imployments are, he were not more knowing that could tell, than he bold that dare speak. I do verily believe there are divers Orders of celestial Spirits. I beleeve they are not to be believed that dare to determine them; especially when I see him that was rapt into the third Heaven, varying the Order of their places in his several mentions of them. Compare Ephes. 1. 21. with Col. 1. 16. Bishop Halls Invis. world, lib. 1. Sect. 7. Dionysius iste, quem Papistæ falsò Areopagitam appellant, Cœli supellectilem & Angelorum subsellia, non modo vanè, sed etiam falsò enumeravit, & de iis penè inventarium confecit. Danæus de Angelis. c. 5.

The Papists say, there are different Degrees of Angels, and that this is founded in their Nature.

Angelos certis ordinibus attributos esse, atque alios aliis esse superiores, sine ulla dubitatione antiqui omnes agnoverunt; tum eos ordines propriis nominibus effectos, ac distinctos esse, quæ ex sacris libris colliguntur. Petav. de Angelis l. 2. c. 1. Vide plura ibid. & c. 2, 3, 4.

The Protestants say, that this difference lies not in natura Angelica, but in Officio, as they are drawn forth to more eminent imployment.

The Scripture makes mention onely of two Orders of Angels, Angels and Arch-angels, Heb. 1. 4. 1 Thess. 4. 16. Seraphim is a common name unto all Angels: they are all described to be flames of fire, Psalm 104. 4. and all the Angels are Cherubims, as is evident by the Curtains of the Tabernacle, which were set forth and garnished with Cherubims onely, Exodus 26. 31. signifying the presence of the Angels in the Assembly of the Church, as the Apostle expounds it, 1 Cor. 11. 10.

It is evident (saith Mr Cartwright) that the Apostle, Col. 1. 16. heapeth up divers words of one and the same signification, thereby the more effectually to set forth [d] the supereminent power of our Saviour Christ above all.

Cartwright on Ephes. 1. 21. in his Annotat. on the Rhem. Test.

[d] Quatuor iis vocabulis Thronorum, Dominationum, Principatuum, & Potestatum, Apostolus complexus est universam cœlestem societatem. Quid inter se distant quatuor illa vocabula dicam qui possunt, si tamen possunt probare quæ dicunt, Ego me ista ignorare confiteor. Aug. Enchir. ad Lauren. c. 58. Vide Aquin part. 1. Q. 118. Art. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

Sixthly, The names of the Angels. The first and most common name is that of Angel, which name is common to the good and evil Angels, yet in a farre different sense. The evil spirits are seldom called so simply, though they be sometimes, to note the excellency of their original, because they fell from their blessed condition, 1 *Cor.*6.3. Jude 6.

The evil spirits are called Angels, the name which was first given them. Otherwise they are not absolutely called Angels, (that name being peculiar to the Angels which stood) but angels of the Devil, and angels of Satan, viz. because they are sent by the Devil their Prince.

Cameron Tom. Praelect.

Some as proper names are given to certain Angels, Michael, Dan.10.13. which is compounded of three Hebrew particles, Mi-ca-el, who is like or equal to the strong God? It signifieth the power of God, because by him God exercised his power: And Gabriel, Gloria Dei, Dan.8.16. & 9.21. Luke 17.19. that is, the glory of God, who executed the greatest Embassages in Gods name to men. Vide Sculteti Exercit. Evang. l.1.c.9.

According to the matter of their several ministeries, they have their several names bestowed upon them. The Spirit that was sent to Isaiah (because he purged the Prophets mouth with a fiery coal) was fitly called Seraphim of Saraph to burn. The Angel who cured Tobiah, is called Raphael, that is, the medicine of God, of Rapha to cure or heal. So the Angel who was sent to Daniel, and the Virgin Mary, (because he revealed matters impossible for any but a supernatural power to effect) was correspondently called Gabriel, that is, the strength of God, of Gabar to prevail. Deacon and Walkers answer to Durel. Dial.2.

Seventhly, The Angels Ministry and service. Their service may be considered either in respect of God, the Church, or the enemies of the Church. Respecting God, and the Church, and the people of God, they have divers services.

The Office of good Angels in respect of God:

[c] They are called Thrones (saith a Schoolman) because they do attend on the Throne of God.

1. They enjoy God and glory, [c] Matthew 18.10. & 22.30. This implieth their great purity and happinesse, and withall their Ministry. What God bids them do, they are ready to do. They shall attend Christ when he comes to judgement.

They love themselves and one another, and the creatures, yet they love God above all. Angelus Deum plusquam se diligit. Aquinas. Their happinesse consists in visione & dilectione Dei.

2. They praise God and celebrate his Name, cleave inseparably unto him, and obey his Commandments, Isa. 6. Psalm 103.20,21. & 104.4. *Dan.*7.10. Job 1.6. they see the worth and excellency of God, that he deserves more praise than they can give.

3. They praise and worship Christ as the Head of the Church, *Apocal.*5.11,12. *Heb.*1.6. *Phil.*2.10. also as his Ministers, *Matth.*4.11. Luke 22.43. Matth. 28.2. they stand alwayes ready to do him service; so in his agony an Angel comforted him.

2, Their service in respect of the Church and people of God:

Heb.1.14. The Angels are next to Christ in ruling the visible world, and therefore called Shinan in the Hebrew, Dan.10.12. Next to the first, and Principalities and Powers in the Greek, Col.1.16. that is, chief Governours next to Christ in reference to all the Creation beside. Lockier on Col.1.16. Vide Perav. de Angelis l.2.c.5,6.

1. They are glad for the good which befals the Elect: So when Christ came into the world, how glad were they? Luke 2. they cried, Glory be to God on high: They rejoyce at their conversion, Luke 15.10.

2. They reveal unto them the will of God, *Dan.*8.9. *Rev.*1.11.

Psal.68.17.

3. They keep the Elect from dangers both of soul and body, so farre as is expedient, *Gen.*19.16. & 28.12. & 25.7. & 32.1,2. Psalm 34.7. & 91.11. *Numb.*22. 1 Kings 19.7. 2 Kings 6.16. & 8,9,10. Both in the Curtains of the Tabernacle, *Exod.*26.1. and the wall of the Temple Cherubims were painted up and down, to signifie signifie (as judicious Divines think) what protection the people of God have in serving him. Exod. 34. 24.

The Angels are the guardians of Gods people, Heb. 1. 14. They are

1. A numerous guard.
2. Potent.
3. Watchfull.
4. A sure and safe guard.

4. They comfort them in distresse, heavinesse and distraction, Genesis 20. 17, 18. & 32. 1, 2. Esay 6. 6. Luke 1. 30. & 2. 10. Mat. 28. 5. Acts 10. 4. & 27. 23, 24. Judg. 6. 12. & 13. 10. Dan. 10. 12. Mat. 1. 20. & 2. 12, 13. Gen. 10. 9. Matth. 4. 10. John 13. Act. 5.

5. They suggest holy thoughts into their hearts, as the Devil doth evil and unclean thoughts: Resist Satan, as in Jude.

6. They carry the souls of the Elect into Heaven at the end of this life, Luke 16. 22. And at the day of judgement, They shall gather the Elect from the four windes, and separate between the Elect and Reprobate, Matth. 24. 31. & 13. 27. They are present at our Assemblies, Ephes. 1. Mysteries are made knowne to them; and

3. Their services against the wicked *, and all the enemies of the Church.

the woman must be covered because of the Angels. * An Angel defeated Senacheribs Army,

They are ready to execute vengeance upon the enemies of Gods people, Esay 37. 36. An Angel smote bloody persecuting Herod, Acts 12. At the last day the Angels shall hurry the wicked to Christs Tribunal, and cast the reprobate into hell, Mat. 13. 40, 41, 42, 49, 50.

God can work all things himself alone, and hath no need of the Ministry of Angels, but yet he useth them in the government of the world, and the Church.

The first and principal end he hath in it, is his own glory: for his glory shineth forth much in the Ministry of Angels. They praise his glory, goodnesse, power and wisdom, Glory be to God on high.

2. The good of the Angels themselves. It is a great honour to them to be imployed by God in so many good and great affairs.

The third end is, the order and beauty of the universe. God alwayes acts himself, and he would have no creature idle.

The fourth, that a greater consolation might come to us thereby, that we have the protection of Angels, Heb. 1. ult. They serve the Elect from the beginning to the end of their lives.

5. That so there may be a greater friendship between us and them.

Eighthly, The speech of Angels.

Angels and Devils communicate with God, and one with another; not by speeches, [a] for language requires bodily instruments, which these Spirits want: but as they apprehend every object without senses, so they expresse it without language in a secret way.

[a] Mr Bayly on Zech. 3. 1. pag. 43. See Dr Preston on Prayer.

We now come to some profitable Questions about the Angels:

The first is this, If the Angels be so beneficial to us, whether may they not be prayed unto?

The ground and cause which brought in praying to Angels, is laid down, Colos. 2. 18. where you have a general prohibition of religious worshipping of Angels, with the cause of it. Vide Petavium de Angelis l. 2. cap. 9. Origenes Angelos docet invocandos certamque invocationis formulam praescribit. Homil. in Ezech. Erant ex Judæis, qui cum docerent legem, Angelos colendos asserebant, quippe qui dicerent legem per Angelos esse traditam. Apostolus ad Colossenses secundo reprehendit eorum impietatem. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Christiani veteres, & seorsim, & junctim, & pro se singuli, & alij pro aliis, Deum precabantur; mutuo etiam; ut id fieret, rogabant; verùm quem praesentem nescirent, sive Angelus, sive anima foret defuncti, minimè invocabant: quia de cujus praesentia non constaret, cum cum fiducia auditionis, ut de exauditione nihil dicam, minimè invocare auderent: praesertim cùm ejus rei in Scripturis nec praeceptum haberent nec exemplum. Vossius de Orig. & Progres. Idol. l. 1. parte altera cap. 9. Vide plura ibid.

There are three cauſes why they attempted this:

Firſt, They entred into things which they did not know, as the Papiſts. How can they tell whether the Angels pray for us, whether they know our wants?

Secondly, They follow their carnal mind, becauſe they ſee in the world that to great Magiſtrates we uſe Mediators and Interceſſors, they dare not go of themſelves: ſo here.

Thirdly, Humility. For this, they talk as Papiſts do now; We are unworthy to go directly to God, and therefore we need the help of Angels: but this is vain. For Chriſt is nearer to us than Angels are, Eph. 3. 12. Tutius & jucundius loquar ad Jeſum, quam ad aliquem ſanctorum.

We ſay that all lawfull and moderate reverence is to be given to Angels, which conſiſts in theſe particulars:

Firſt, We acknowledge the great gifts of God in them, and praiſe God for them. We confeſſe it is his mercy that he hath made ſuch noble creatures to be ſerviceable to us, and then for themſelves, in our judgements.

1. We honour them, and judge them more noble creatures than man, they have greater wiſdom, holineſſe and power than man hath.

2. For our will and affections, we love them, becauſe they love us, and delight in our good, being ready to help us every where.

3. We ſhould be carefull of our carriage, becauſe of their preſence, we ſhould not ſin, becauſe of the Angels.

4. We deſire to make them examples of our lives, that we may do Gods will as they do.

5. If Angels ſhould appear viſibly to us, we ſhould honour them as more excellent creatures, but yet ſtill keep within the bounds of civil, or fraternal honour [b] as to our fellow-ſervants; but yet above us, and not honour them with Religious Worſhip.

[b] Cultum fraternæ ſocietatis.

The Papiſts [c] ſay, a Religious Worſhip is due unto them, but (yet that we may do them no wrong) not indeed ſuch, as is due to God, but ſecondary; yet ſtill Religious; and ſo they ſay they intercede for us, not as Chriſt, but in an inferiour way: and in this ſenſe they hold they may be worſhipped and prayed unto.

[c] Rhem. Annot. in Apoc. 19 Petavius de Angelis l. 2. c. 8, 9. See Mr Cartw. Rejoynd. to the Marqueſſe of Worceſter, p. 256, 257, 258, 259, 260. There were a ſort of Hereticks called Angelici, who profeſſing true Chriſtianity and deteſtation of Idolatry (as having learned, that God only is to be worſhipped properly) yet reſerved a certain kind of adoration to the bleſſed Angels. Angelici vocati quia Angelos colunt. Iſid. Orig. l. 8. c. 5.

Now we will refute their arguments, and then confirm the truth with ſtrong Reaſons:

For the firſt, All lawfull reverence is commanded by the firſt Table, and that is Religious; or elſe by the ſecond, and that is civil: But that manner and degree of their worſhip is required in neither: Therefore it is meerly invented.

Secondly, By general conſent, Religious worſhip is that whereby we do acknowledge God to be the primum principium, the ultimum finem, and ſummum bonum; now this is but one: and we may as well ſay, there is a ſummum bonum ſecundariò, as there is a ſecondary Religious woſhip.

Thirdly, There is the ſame reaſon of a Religious worſhip, as there is of a Divine act of faith, love and hope: But if a man ſhould ſay, We may with a Divine faith believe in God primarily, and Angels ſecondarily, it were ridiculous; therefore here if Religious worſhip were due, becauſe of ſupernatural excellencies, then every godly man were religiouſly to be worſhipped.

Our Arguments in general againſt this are theſe:

Firſt, Mat. 4. 10. Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerve, Heb. 1. it is applied to Chriſt.

Secondly, The promiſe is to thoſe only which call upon him, Pſalm 51. 15. Call upon me.

Thirdly, It cannot be of faith; for how ſhall I know whether they hear me, whether they be preſent?

Fourthly, Coloſ. 2. 8. It is condemned for will-worſhip; ſo that Idolatry is here committed, that kinde of it, Quando divinè colitur id quod non eſt ve- rum

rus Deus. John was reproved for this, Revelat. 19. 10. & 22. 9. Now John might have diſtinguiſhed, I do not worſhip you religiouſly, as God: But in the ſecond place,

The ſecond Queſtion is, Whether every man hath his peculiar Angel?

This is not a Queſtion of Faith, but yet the more to be ſuſpected, becauſe it was generally held among the Heathens, who did aſcribe to every man born a bad Angel to afflict, and a good one to defend him: a good and ill Genius, as they called them. Becanus brings places of Scripture to prove it; but there is altogether ſilence in the Scripture concerning it: for when the Angels are charged to have care over us, it implieth, that it is all their care. The chiefeſt place which moſt ſeems to favour that opinion, is Acts 12. 15. where they ſaid, that it was his Angel. Now to this ſome anſwer, That the men ſpake according to the opinion of men then generally received, and not according to the truth, as we may give an inſtance concerning the blind man, when they asked, Whether he or his parents had ſinned, that he ſhould be born blind? How could he ſinne before he was born? But ſome anſwer, That there was an opinion generally received, which all the Platoniſt held (and ſo Origen, and many of the Ancients) that the ſoul was created before it was put into the body; and as it did good or ill, it was put into a well-tempered or a maimed body: Eſpecially they thought theſe Angels did appear a little before or after mens death.

Hanc de Geniis ſententiam Ethnicorum duntaxat ſcriptis confirmatam ſecuti ſunt Doctores Papiſtæ ſolum nomen Geniorum in Angelos commutantes. Danæus de Angelis c. 10. Scripturæ pios tantum Angelorum cuſtodiam & miniſterium attribuit, Pſal. 148. 2. Heb. 1. 14.

impiis non item. Imò plures Angelos indefinitè circa pios excubare docet, non unum, Pſal. 34. 8. 2 Reg. 6. 17. Luc. 16. 22. Spanhemius. Danæus de Angelis cap. 10. Matth. 18. 10. Unde [concludunt, tum Patres, tum Scholaſtici, ſingulis pueris, atque adultis etiam certos Angelos eſſe attributos. Sic interpretati ſunt hunc locum Chryſoſtomus, Auguſtinus, Hieronymus, & alij. Caſmannus. It is greater both Dignity and benefit, that every one of the faithfull have many Angels appointed by the Lord for his guard, whereof the proof is manifeſt, Pſalm 34. 7. and 91. 12. An hoſt of Angels pitch their Tents round about them. As many reprobate Angels ſeek the deſtruction of one onely man, Mark 5. 9. & 12. 45. ſo the Lord encountreth them by a number of his elect Angels. Cartwright.

Calvin thinks that it was an Angel peculiarly deſtinated to Peter for that time of his impriſonment. If it were a peculiar Angel, then it would follow, that he ſpake and had the ſame geſtures that men have to whom they belong. Therefore it may well be rendred, It is his meſſenger, as the word is elſwhere tranſlated. But you will ſay then, they thought the meſſenger ſpake like him. No, but it might fall out, that they thought Rhode did miſtake: and when he ſaid, I am Peter, they might think he ſaid, I am come from Peter, and ſo it may be anſwered. If every man have one Angel, why did more than one carry Lazarus his ſoul to Heaven? And he hath given his Angels charge over thee; that is, many over one particular man. Cameron Tom. 2. Præleſt. Vide Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Tom. 1. c. 61. & Voet. Theſ. de Angelis.

Magiſter ſent. ait, unumquemque habere ad ſui cuſtodiam unum bonum Angelum, & unum malum ad exercitium. Eſt quidem antiqua iſta ſententia, verùm hanc ſententiam Scripturæ non tradunt; manavit hic error ex ſomniis Rabbinorum. Rainold. de lib Apoc. Luke 7. 24. that is, ſome Angel which God hath ſent for his deliverance. Mr Dering on Heb. 1. ult. See Mr Cartwrights Rejoynd. to the Marqueſſe of Worceſter, pag. 251, 252, 253. Singulis hominibus ſinguli Angeli ad cuſtodiam deputantur, quia Angelorum cuſtodia eſt quædam executio Divinæ Providentiæ circa homines. Aquinas part. 1. Queſt. 113. Artic. 2. Vide etiam Artic. 5.

The third Queſtion, What is the meaning of that, Let her be covered, becauſe of the Angels? Where the Apoſtle commands a woman in publick duties to have power, that is, covering, in ſign of her ſubjection to God, and that becauſe of the Angels. Some underſtand this properly of the Angels the heavenly Spirits, but differently;

1 Cor. 11. 10. διὰ τὸς ἀγγέλους.

See the laſt large Annotations. It might be a miſtake of the tranſcribers to double the γ, for if it were read διὰ τὸς ἀγέλους, and the ſenſe be, Women in publick Aſſemblies muſt wear a veil, by reaſon of the companies of the young men there preſent; it would be no ill exchange for the loſſe of a letter, to make ſo probable, ſo clear a ſenſe of the place. Dr Taylors liberty of Propheſying, Sect. 3. Tertul. de velandis virginibus, c. 7. Mulieres velandas ait propter Angelos, ne ipſarum forma illecebra illis ſit ad libidinem. Fuit enim veterum quorundam ea abſurdiſſima ſententia, viz. Angelos amore mulierum corruptos Cælo cecidiſſe. Vide Tertul. de habitu muliebri, c. 2. Juſtin. Martyr Orat. ad Gentes. Lactant. Inſtit. l. 2. c. 15 ortum huius erroris ex Gen. 6. 2. Viderunt filii Dei filias hominum & ingreſſi ſunt ad eas, ubi per filios Dei intelligebant Angelos. Vide Aug. de civ. Dei. l. 15. c. 23. Cyril. cont. Julian. l. 9.

ſome

ſome becauſe they are preſent at our Aſſemblies: and if you ask, What need that, ſeeing God and Chriſt are there? They anſwer, That he mentioned God and Chriſt before, and now addeth theſe as inſeparable ſervants which are ſent for the ſalvation of believers. Others as probably make it a new argument from the Angels, Eſay 6. as they covered their feet before God to ſhew their ſubjection, ſo ſhould theſe.

[d] Unicum, quod ſciam, ex veteribus Ambroſius, & ex noſtris, unicus Beza, Angelos exponunt, Sacerdotes, ſeu paſtores Eccleſiæ. Rectiſſime omnes alii, tum veteres, tum recentes, intelligunt ipſos Angelos, eoſq; bonos ac ſanctos. Laurent. Mal 2.7. Rev.1.20. [e] Beza in loc. Miniſters (ſaith Laurentius) are not any where in the Scripture called Angels abſolutely, but alwayes with addition.

Others underſtand it of the Miniſters [d] who are called Angels, becauſe they are the Meſſengers of God, and ſo they compare this place with that, *Eccleſ.*5.6. Before the Angel [e], there is He notificative, by which is ſignified the Highprieſt, before whom vows were made, *Levit.*27.8. Some interpret it generally of all good men; for we ought to be as ſo many Angels.

Junius negat dari per Angelos; ſed ἐν ἀγγέλων idem eſſe ac inter Angelos. Vide Grotium & Aquin. part. 1,2. *Queſt.*98. *Art.*3. Jun. *Paral.l.*1. *par.*92.

The fourth is, What is the meaning of thoſe places, Acts 7. 53. and Gal. 3. 19. Learned Junius renders the words, Acts 7. 53. You have received the Law in the midſt of the rankes of Angels, viz. who [f] accompanied God their Sovereigne Lord, when himſelf came to deliver the Law. The ſame anſwer may be made, as it is by the ſame Learned Writer (among Angels) they attending God, when he ordained and delivered it. It ſeems improper, that Angels in the plural number [g] ſhould have been imployed in ſpeaking of the Law. For without extraordinary guidance of God, many ſpeakers at once would have bred confuſion of ſounds, and by an extraordinary guidance one would have ſufficed. There is no neceſſity to aſcribe the delivery of the Law of the Decalogue to [h] Angels: Exodus 20. there is not ſo much as a word of the Angels in the whole matter. The Earthquake, Thunder, Lightning on Mount Sinai were raiſed by the Angels (ſaith Cameron) who can eaſily change the ſtate of the elementary Region.

[f] Ipſe Deus locutus eſt immediatè ad Moſem præſentibus ac teſtibus Angelis, Laurent. See Willet on Exo.19.37. Qu. Ordination is put for Miniſtration. [g] Maſter Palmer and Mr Cawdrey of the Chriſtian Sabbath, part 1. chap. 4. [h] Grotius, and River, and Dr White ſay, God ſpake not immediately, but by an Angel. See Pſal.78 49.

The fifth, What is the meaning of that Story, Jude verſe 9. Michael ſtriving with the Devil? The Apoſtle aggravates the ſinnes of thoſe who ſpeak evil of Dignities, by an argument from the greater to the leſſe, the Archangel durſt not do ſo; where you have the chief cauſe, Michael, which is as much, as who is like God: and then you have the adjunct, he is the Archangel, that is, a chief among the Angels, therefore it cannot be meant (ſay ſome) of [i] Chriſt, becauſe Chriſt is expreſly diſtinguiſhed from him, 1 Theſſ. 4. 6. Now what this diſpute was, and where the Apoſtle had it, it is hard to ſay: But that there was ſuch a thing done is plain. The matter of the ſtrife was Moſes dead on Mount Nebo, Deut.34.6. which is added either by Samuel, Joſhua, or Ezra. Some make this to be the body of Chriſt, and therefore called Moſes his, becauſe he propheſied of it. Very likely the diſpute was, that it ſhould not be buried, to occaſion Idolatry, the Archangel rails not on him, but leaves him to God. Now, Deut. 3. 44. where it is ſaid, The Lord buried him, that is to be underſtood by the means of the Archangel, and no man knew his burial, that divine honour might not be given him, and the Devil might ſay, how fit it was ſuch a man ſhould be ſolemnly buried.

Dan.10.13. [i] Cartw. on the Rhem. Teſt. interprets it of Chriſt. See Mr Perkins on Jude. Michael apud Patres & Rabbinos eſt è numero Angelorum; apud magos, Dæmonum: In Scripturâ verò arbitror eſſe ipſum Jeſum, Dominum noſtrum; idque ſatis patere mihi videtur, tum ex nomine ipſo, cùm ex iis quæ de eo referuntur. Primum enim nihil apud Hebræos vox hæc ſonat plusquam, quis ſicut Deus? Atqui non eſt veriſimile, ut nomen hoc tribuatur alii, quam illi, qui & ipſe Deus eſt. Deinde Dan.12. mentio fit hujus Michaelis, vocaturq; Princeps magnus, qui ſtat à populo Dei contra perditos & impios Eccleſiæ hoſtes. Huc accedunt ea quæ referuntur à Zecharia c.3. unde Judæ verba ſumpta eſſe videntur: ibi enim Angelus ille, qui cauſam agit Joſuæ ſummi Pontificis, dicitur Jehovah, quod nomen, ut omnes ſciunt, nulli Angelorum vel homini tribuitur, ſed ſolius Dei eſt proprium. Grotius in Conject.

The

The ſixth, What is meant by the voice of an Angel, 1 Theſſ. 4. 15. where the Apoſtle deſcribes the great and glorious coming of Chriſt to judgement, from ſome circumſtances which commend his Power and Majeſty? The Lord himſelf ſhall come downe in his own Perſon with a ſhout: Κέλευσμα is that voice which Mariners and Souldiers uſe, when they call one another to put to their ſtrength; ſo that it is no more than a great command of God that all be ready. Like that, Matthew 25.6. There was a voice, Behold the Bridegroome comes: Or like that, John 5. All that are in their graves ſhall hear his voice: So it ſhall be the inſtrument to raiſe them up, as it was Lazarus: For this may be compared with Matthew 24. The Voice and the Trump of God are all one, that is, a great noiſe, expreſſed by this Metaphor, ſo that it ſhould go to all in their graves.

Apud Hebræos, Græcos, & Latinos veteres populus convocabatur claſſico. Ad id exemplum cùm Deus homines convocat, dicitur id facere per tubam, Pſ. 47. Iſa. 27. 13. Jer. 4. 1. & 6. 1. & 51. 27. Oſ. 5. 8. Joel 2. 1.

Zech. 9. 14. Item in Apocalypſi, in omnibus Dei judiciis dantur Angelis tubæ; quia verò hoc judicium omnium eſt ut poſtremum, ita maximum atque generaliſſimum, ideo hic tuba datur, non Angelo, ſed alicui Angelorum principi, qualis Michael, Dan. 12. 1. Grot. in loc.

The ſeventh, Whether they have any efficacy in our converſion? Though they be ſent, Heb. 1. for the ſalvation of thoſe that believe, yet they have no efficacious power on the heart of man, for it is God only that can turn the heart: and therefore it is a wicked opinion of ſome, who give God no more efficacy in moving the heart to converſion, than good Angels have, which can be but by perſwaſion. It is true, in the Scriptures you may read of their admoniſhing and comforting: ſo an Angel comforteth Elias; and Chriſt himſelf as he was man; Joſeph was admoniſhed in a dream: but then you muſt know, this was a ſenſible appearance, or like it, viz. in dreams. But now you may reade of the Devil tempting in Scripture Judas and David without ſuch a way. The change of our hearts is to be aſcribed to God.

The eighth, Whether the Angels need Chriſt as a Mediatour? Some ſay, No, they never ſinned; and therefore need not a Mediator [k] to reconcile them to God, 1 Tim. 2. 5. Heb. 2. 16. A Mediatour is where two parties do diſagree. As for that place, Epheſ. 1. 22. He hath reconciled all things in Heaven and Earth: Some do mean by thoſe things in Heaven, the ſouls of thoſe departed: the Greek word ſignifieth briefly to recollect the things which were more largely ſpoken, and ſo a ſweet conſent of all things together. As by ſinne God was angry with us, ſo were the Angels, for they hated whom God hated; but by his death it is otherwiſe. But though Angels needed not ſuch a reconciliation as ſuppoſeth a breach of peace, yet they needed ſuch an one as conſiſts in the continuance of that peace, which they had before. The Lord hath now ſo fully revealed himſelf and his excellencies unto them, and his love and favour, and the neceſſity of their being obedient, that they cannot but continue to obey and ſerve him, they were not ſo farre enlightened and ſanctified at the firſt Creation, but that then in reſpect of themſelves there was a poſſibility of ſinning, as well as of thoſe that did ſinne; but now they are ſo confirmed [l] by the clear ſight they have of God, that they cannot be willing to ſinne againſt him. Matth. 18. 10. they are called the Elect Angels. 1 Tim. 5. 21. Chriſt is the Head of all the Elect. The confirmation they have is not by the bounty of Nature, but by the benefit of grace, 2 Theſſ. 3. 3. Jude 24. Chriſt is the natural and eternal Sonne of God, Heb. 1. 2. therefore by him

[k] Angels are the beſt creatures, yet they are mutable creatures, they were created bleſſed (as the Schools determine) with a natural bleſſedneſſe, not with a ſupernatural, which conſiſts in the viſion of God, for then they had never fallen. The good Angels indeed have obtained by Chriſt a ſupernatural bleſſedneſſe, though he be not a Redeemer, yet he is a Confirmer, a Supporter of the holy Angels. In reference whereunto he is called The head of all things, Epheſ. 1. 22. & 3. 15. Col. 1. 20. and that laſt place is not to be reſtrained to men, but takes in all things both in Heaven and Earth. Mr Caryl on Job 4. 18. Some think it is not ſpoken of men only, becauſe πάντα is of the neuter gender, all things, whether men or Angels. As Chriſt is to us Medium reconciliationis, ſo he is to the Angels Medium confirmationis & elevationis, ſay the Schoolmen, though Petav. de Incarnat. l. 12. c. 10. denies it. Col. 2. 10. A Head notes eminentiam. In ordine naturæ, as Chriſt was man he was below them, In ordine gratiæ he was above them. 2. Influxum. 3. Gubernationem. [l] In bono confirmatio non tollit bonorum Angelorum liberum arbitrium. Bernardus triplicem oſtendit à ſacris literis libertatem, quarum unam vocat libertatem à peccato, 2 Cor. 3. 17. alteram vocat libertatem à miſeria, Rom. 8. 20, 21. Tertiam appellat libertatem à neceſſitate, hoc eſt, à coactione; neceſſitas enim hic non opponitur voluntario, ſed coactioni. Caſmanus.

all

all other ſonnes and creatures receive their eſtabliſhment, Coloſ. 1. 15, 16. Epheſ. 3. 15.

The Angels by Chriſt obtained:

1. A glorious Head. Men had a head at their Creation, Adam. The Angels ſtood by vertue of their perſonal Covenant.

2. From his becoming their Head they are confirmed in grace; they were created perfect, but mutable, Job 4. 18.

3. By Chriſt, their nature was elevated above what it was in it ſelf; Electio ſive hominum, ſive Angelorum, extra Chriſtum intelligi non poteſt. Adoptati ſunt in filios Dei propter Chriſtum.

4. They have an honourable imployment; by this means they ſerve Chriſt in his humane Nature.

The ſtanding of the Angels and Saints in Heaven conſiſts in manutenentia perpetui influxus beatifici, ſay the Schoolmen.

The Angels which abode in the truth are called good Angels, not onely in reſpect of the righteouſneſſe which God beſtowed upon them at their Creation, but alſo in reſpect of the obedience which they performed, and their confirmation in that good eſtate. The cauſes why they abode ſtill in the truth, are the firm and unchangeable Decree of God, 1 Tim. 5. 21. His free grace, Phil. 2. 13. wherewith they were holpen, and their own free choice of will cleaving firmly unto God.

Whereſoever the good Angels are (though imployed about the affaires of this lower world) yet doe they ſtill ſee and enjoy the viſion of God. Biſhop Halls Inviſ. world, lib. 2. Sect. 2.

The ninth and laſt Queſtion concerning Angels is, How can they be happy in enjoying Gods face, and yet be on the earth? Mat. 18. 10. By Heaven there is not meant the place, but their heavenly eſtate and condition. Now though they go up and down doing ſervice, yet this hinders not their happineſſe; for they do not this with diſtraction: and theſe things are appointed as means for the end, viz. enjoying of God, and as the ſoul is not hindred in its happineſſe by deſiring the body again, ſo it is here.

Conſectaries from Angels.

1. We ſhould imitate the Angels.

2 It ſhews us how much we are beholding to Chriſt; no Angels could love us if it were not for him.

Let us not by our ill carriage thruſt away our guard.

How much are we to love God, who hath provided helps for man, eſpecially Chriſt who took our nature upon him, not that of Angels? Gods Angels are our Angels to defend and keep us. God hath committed the care of us to theſe miniſtring Spirits.

One Angel would quickly deſtroy all the wicked if God ſhould charge him to do it.

3. It ſhews the wofull condition of the impenitent, when Chriſt ſhall come with all theſe Angels, when thoſe great ſhouts ſhall be, Come thou ſwearer, drunkard, how terrible will this be?

The more potent God is in Himſelf and in his Miniſters, the more wretched are they, and the ſurer is their deſtruction.

4. This confutes the Papiſts in three errours:

Conſtituunt Scholaſtici ordines bonorum Angelorum, Primum, Secundum, & Tertium: & in unoquoque ordine tres diverſos gradus. Fruſtra hæc omnia, & ſine Dei verbo definita. Danæus de Angelis. cap. 15.

First, In that they hold nine Orders of Angels; They are diſtinguiſhed, Ratione objectorum & officiorum, in reſpect of the object and meſſage they go about.

See Elton on Coloſ. 1. and Cameron on Act. 12.

Secondly, They would have them worſhipped, but the Angel forbad John.

Thirdly, They ſay, every one hath his good Angel to keep him; ſo Bucan thinks in his Common-places.

2. The Sadduces, who ſaid there was neither Angel nor Spirit, Acts 24. 8. but held good Angels only to be good thoughts, and evil angels to be evil luſts and affections.

ctions. Their names, offices, actions, apparitions shew plainly, that they are not bare qualities, but true substances.

It serves for Instruction:

First, To see the blindnesse and erroneousnesse of mankinde, in that a great number of men of learning, and wit, and parts good enough, and that such as lived in the Church and acknowledged the five Books of Moses to be Divine, should yet make a shift to wink so hard, as to maintain that there were no Angels.

Objectant nobis Judæi, quod Sadducæi libros Mosaicos agnoscerent pro divinis, ubi sæpius commemoratur, ut Angeli apparuerint. Verum verisimile mihi fit Sadducæos eludere hæc solitos: cujus ratio nunc gemina occurrit. Una est, ut per eos non aliud intellexerim, quàm qualitates à Deo productas in imaginatione ejus, quem de re aliqua voluit edocere. Altera est, ut putarint Deum producere Spiritus, quando eorum opera uti velit, postea eos destruere, ac producere quidem separando quiddam ab anima mundana, quod postea redeat in naturam generalem. Vossius de Orig. & Progres. Idol. lib. 1. part. altera. cap. 6. Vide Petavium de Angelis lib. 1. cap. 1.

What falshood may not the Devil make a man entertain and defend, and yet seem not to deny the Authority of Scripture: if a man confessing Moses writings to be true, will yet deny that there be either Spirits or Angels, which are things so plainly revealed by Moses, that a man would account it impossible to receive his writings, and not confesse them? But if God leave man to the Devil and his own wit, he will make him the verier fool because of his wit, and he will erre so much the more palpably, by how much he seems better armed against errour, even as a mans own weapon beaten to his head by a far stronger arm, will make a deep wound in him.

See we our aptnesse to runne into, and maintain false opinions, and let us not trust in our own wits, but suspect our selves, and seek to God for direction.

Superbi sunt nec noverunt Moysis sententiam, sed amant suam; non quia vera est, sed quia sua est. Aug. Confes. l. 12. c. 25.

Secondly, Let us learn humility from this, and by comparing our selves with these excellent Spirits, learn to know how mean we be, that we may be also mean in our own esteem. So long as a man compares himself with those things and persons which are baser than himself, he is prone to lift up himself in his own conceit, and to think highly of himself; but when he doth weigh himself in the balance with his betters, he begins to know his own lightnesse. The Lord hath set us men in the midst (as it were) betwixt the bruit beasts, and the celestial Spirits, we do so farre exceed them as the Angels exceed us; as for bodily gifts, the beasts in many things go beyond us, some are more strong, swift, have more excellent sight and smell than we, but in few things do we equal the Angels. They are swifter and stronger than we, and their excellent reason goes beyond ours in a manner, as the understanding which is in us excelleth the fancy of the beasts: they know a thousand things more than we do, or can know; one Angel can do more than all men, can speak more languages, repeat more Histories, in a word, can perform all acts of invention, and judgement and memory, far beyond us.

Thirdly, Since God hath made Angels to serve and attend him, should not we that are farre inferiour to them be content also to serve him, yea exceeding glad and thankfull, that he will vouchsafe to admit us into his service? Doth he need our service that is served with such Ministers and Messengers? Let us frame our selves to obedience, and do Gods will on earth with all readinesse and cheerfulnesse, seeing there is so great store of more worthy persons in Heaven that do it. An Angel will not esteem any work too difficult or base, why should we?

Fourthly, The Angels which wait about the Throne of God are glorious, and therefore the Lord himself must needs excell in glory, Esay 6. 1, 2. Ezek. 1. 28.

They have a glory which flows from their own obedience, as they stood in integrity, and an additional glory, as they have received a Commission from Christ to be the Saints guardians, Heb. 1. 14. Some Angels fell from God, Jud. 8. 44. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. The Scriptures speak somewhat sparingly of the nature or fall of Angels, it being calculated chiefly for the use of man. See Mr Manton, and Mr Jenkyn on that 6th v. of Jude.

Of the Devils, or evil Angels.

The Angels which perſiſted in the truth, are called good Angels, Luke 9.26. but thoſe which revolted and kept not the Law were called evil angels, or evil ſpirits, Angels of darkneſſe [n], Luke 8.20. & 19.42. and Angels abſolutely, 1 *Cor.*6. becauſe they were ſo created of the Lord. In reſpect of their nature they are called ſpirits, 1 *King.*22.21. Matth. 18.16. Luke 10.20. In reſpect of their fall they are called evil ſpirits, 1 Samuel 18.10. Luke 8.2. unclean ſpirits, *Mat.*10.1. *Zech.*13.2. not ſo much becauſe of their inſtigation to luſt, as becauſe their natures are defiled with ſin: Lying ſpirits, 1 Kings 22.22. John 8.44. Devils, Leviticus 17.7. 1 Cor. 10.20.

[n] There is but one word (Dajiva) in the Syriack for the Raven, Ink, and the Devil, becauſe commonly he appeares to men in ſome black and terrible ſhape. Weems.

The Devil is the oldeſt ſinner that ever was, he ſinned from the beginning, the moſt induſtrious and malicious ſinner.

The Hebrew names for the Devil are, 1. Satan an adverſary, 2 Samuel 19.22. of Satan to oppoſe and reſiſt, 2 Peter 2.14. Belial, 2 Corin.6. though ſome reade it Beliar, unprofitable. He is likewiſe called Beelzebub, or Beelzebul, which word comes of Bagnal Dominus, a Lord or Maſter, and Zebub a Flie, the Idol of the [o] Accaronites, becauſe they thought theſe beſt of thoſe peſtiferous creatures; or elſe becauſe the Devils were apprehended as flying up and down in the air; but if it be read Zebul, then it ſignifieth by way of contempt a Dunghill god, Leviticus 17.7. The Devils are called Shegnirim the hairy ones, becauſe they appeared to their worſhippers like hairy Goats, and in the mountains.

[o] Quia civitatem Accaron invocatus à civibus, à muſcis liberavit. Cornel. à Lap. It is written in the law of Mahomet, That God created the Angels of the light, and the Devils of the flame. Dr Stoughtons Happineſſe of Peace. A Sacra Scriptura appellantur Diaboli, à Gentilibus autem Damones. Danæus de Angelis c.18. Mali nominantur hi Angeli, non quòd à Deo mali creati ſint, ſed quòd ſponte liberâ, plané voluntate proſtiti à Deo deſciverint & defecerint. Danæus *ibid.*c.19.

In Greek the Devil is called Διάβολος from διαβάλλειν to accuſe, becauſe he accuſeth men to God, and God to men; Δαίμων from δαίω, ſcio, becauſe they know much by Creation, and by experience. See Dr Gouge on Hebrews 2. 15. *Sect.*140.

He is called ὁ πονηρὸς the wicked one, Matth.13.19. which notes a ſpecial wickedneſſe. God is called by the Prophets in the Old Teſtament, The holy One, becauſe He is infinitely and altogether holy; ſo the Devil, becauſe he hath the moſt wicked nature is called The wicked One. 1. They fell of themſelves and made themſelves wicked. 2. They perſiſt in their wickedneſſe, 1 *Joh.*3.8. 3. They labour to make others wicked like themſelves, they are wicked ſubjectivè & effectivè.

The Devil is called an enemy, or the envious man, Matth. 13.39. The Tempter, Matth. 4.3. 1 Theſſ.3.5. A deſtroyer, Apoc.9.11. The old Serpent, Apoc.12.7,9. A roaring Lion, 1 Peter 5.8. The ſtrong man armed, Matth. 12.24. The prince of the world three times, John 12,31. & 14.30. & 16.11. Nay, The God of this world, 2 Cor. 4.4.

He hath three names given him from his three moſt active principles; a Serpent for his cunning, Geneſis 3.1. a Lion for his ſtrength, and a Dragon for his malice, *Revel.*20.2. Dr Reynolds on Zechary 3.1.2.

God would be reconciled to man, and not to Angels, *Heb.*2.16. for theſe reaſons, ſay ſome:

1. Their ſin was the firſt contempt of God.

2. The whole Angelical nature was not corrupted, as the humane; but the main reaſon was Gods man-kindneſſe Philanthropy, Tit.3.4.

2. Their Nature.

The evil angels are ſpirits created at firſt entire and good, Geneſis 1. *ult. Vide Aquin. part.*1. *Quæſt.*11. *Art.*4,5. But by a willing and free apoſtaſie from their Creator, are become enemies to God and man; and for this eternally tormented, John 8.44.

It was a total, wilfull, malicious apoſtaſie from God with ſpite and revenge:

1. Total,

1. Total, because God never intended to offer to the Angels a second Covenant, Heb. 2. 16.

2. With despight and revenge; therein lies the formality of the Devils sin, and of the sin against the holy Ghost, 1 John 5. 19.

That they are spirits appears by the opposition, Eph. 6. We wrestle not with flesh and blood; and this is to be opposed to those that deny that there are any spirits, or that the Devils are incorporeal.

For their sin, what, when, and how it was, it is hard to determine. That they did sin is plain, but the sin is not specified. Some say, it was lust with women, misunderstanding that place, The sons of God saw the daughters of men; for it is plain the Devils were fallen before. The ancient Fathers, as Petavius de Angelis lib. 3. cap. 11. shews, and our Divines [p] generally [q] conclude it was pride, from that place in Timothy, 1 Tim. 3. 6. whence he allured man to pride, Genesis 3. 5. and alwayes affected principality; he sought to be adored by Christ, and would be esteemed a god by the Heathens. Though there be different opinions about what this pride shewed it self, whether in affecting a higher degree than God [r] created them in, or refusing the worke and office God set them about; which (some conceive) was the ministration or the guardianship of man, which trust they deserted or scorned. Zanchius thinketh their sinne was, That they were not contented with the truth of the Gospel concerning Christ propounded to them at the beginning, and that they chose rather to leave their heavenly mansion, then subscribe to the truth. An inordinate desire of power to be like God in omnipotency, say the Schoolmen. Pride seems to be the Devils sin by his first temptation of man to be like God.

[p] Verisimile est ex superbia Daemones esse lapsos, quod Filium Dei contempserunt, & se ei voluerunt anteferre. Luther. in prim. cap. Gen. 26. Dr Ames.

[q] Downam. Mr Ball.

[r] Mr Caryl on Job 4. 18. Some bring that place, Isa. 4. 12. that is literally meant of the Assyrian King. It is probable the Devils sinne was pride, seeing man was enticed to offend with an argument drawn from the promise of excellency, Gen. 3. 4, 5. Vide Voet. disputat. de natura & operationibus Daemonum. Diabolus voluit se parificasse Deo is Peter Lombards expression. Austin saith, the sinne of the Angels was quod ab illo qui summè est, averti, ad seipsos conversi sunt. The Devil would not yeeld to this, that the second Person of Trinity for the salvation of mankind, should become flesh, and that in him the nature should be advanced above that of Angels. Bishop Down. of Justific. chap. 1. Some say his sinne was envy, but that rather followed, and was a kind of punishment. Post peccatum superbiae consecutum est in Angelo peccante malum invidiae, secundùm quod de bono hominis doluit, & etiam de excellentia divina. Aquin. part. 1. Q. 63. Art. 2. He is called the envious man; he envied, 1. That mankind should be restored, when they were cast off. 2. That the nature of man should be taken into glorious union with the Son of God, and that thereby the Image of God should be repaired. Vide Ruscam de Inferno l. 4. c. 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34.

Concerning the time when the Devil first sinned, it is uncertain, Tempus lapsus non definit Scriptura. It seemeth they continued in their integrity till the sixth day was past [s], Genesis 1. 31. It is likely that neither man nor Angel did fall before the eighth day, Genesis 2. 1, 2.

[s] Some collect from John 8. 44. that the Devils fell the first day.

The Devils stood not long, John 8. He was a manslayer from the beginning: They fell before man, that is plain.

Rusca de Inferno & Statu Daemonum, lib. 4. ca. 40. propounding that Question, Why Moses in Genesis spake nothing evident of the sinne of the Angels, when he so largely described the sinne of Adam, saith, Eandem causam omnes Doctores assignant brevem ac facilem: Divino consilio, id factum, quod Deus justè determinasset, Daemonum culpam non sanare, eosq; minimè restituere in pristinum statum: cum tamen Adae peccatum curare decrevisset.

See Mat. 25. 41 Rev. 12. 9. & 20. 2.

3. How the Devil sinned, seeing his understanding and will were perfect.

It was initiatively in his understanding, and consummatively in his will. Many of them fell, as appeareth, Luke 8. 30. there was a legion in one man: one of the chiefest (as some conceive) fell first, and drew the rest with him by his perswasion and example. That one great Angel (now Beelzebub) did first fall, and then drew after him the rest, is likely enough. Capel of Tentat. part 1. cap. 1.

It was in all likelihood some prime Angel of Heaven that first started aside from his station, and led the ring of this highest and first revolt; Millions sided with him,

Mr Lawson in his Body of Divinity, l. 1. ch. 10. saith, That vision of the Dragon and his Angels, Rev. 12. 7. may seem to imply some such thing.

him, and had their part both in this ſinne and puniſhment. B. Halls Inviſ. world. *lib.*3. *Sect.*2. Vide Aquin. *part.*1. *Qu.*63. *Art.*8. Deſertorum, ac rebellium ſpirituum princeps fuit is, qui exemplo, vel hortatu ſuo cæteros in ruinam præcipitaſſe creditur; qui & Diabolus, & Satanas, & vulgò etiam Lucifer nominatur. Petavius *de Angelis l.*3. *c.*3. Yet Voetius ſeems to doubt of this.

[t] Hoc eſt Angelis caſus, quod eſt Hominibus mors.

They fell irrecoverably [t] being obſtinate in wickedneſſe. The Schoolmen and Fathers give reaſons why they fell ſo, and not man.

Damaſcen. Four things aggravat the Devils firſt ſinne. 1. If we conſider their nature, they were Spirits, ſpiritual ſubſtances, and ſo had the greater power and advantage againſt ſin; they might more eaſily have kept themſelves pure, becauſe their natures were ſo ſimple, a great deal of the power of mans temptation roſe from the fleſh, the fruit was beautifull to look on, and pleaſant to the taſte. 2. They ſinned not, having any tempter or ſollicitor without; there was no tempter till they themſelves became tempters, therefore they fell by the meer freeneſſe of their will, every ſin the more it hath of will in it, the greater it is. 3. They were endued with a great deal of knowledge, and ſo ſin'd againſt more light. 4. They were highly exalted above man in their creation. The Angels are not by propagation one from another, but were created all at once, ſo that of them ſome might fall, and others ſtand, but men deſcend by generation from one ſtock or root, and therefore the firſt man filling and corrupting his nature, derived to all his poſterity a ſinfull nature.

Aquinas gives this reaſon from the condition of an Angels will; whoſe nature is ſuch (they ſay) that what it hath choſen with full deliberation, it cannot refuſe it again: but this is no good reaſon, becauſe the choice made cannot alter the nature of the will.

The Fathers give theſe reaſons, 1. The Devil ſinned of himſelf, but man was tempted. 2. In mans fall all mankind would have been damned, but in the Angels fall, not all Angels.

The beſt anſwer is this, When they had ſinned, God out of his juſtice refuſed to give them any help of grace, by which they might riſe from ſinne, and without which it was impoſſible for them to recover: and this is the Apoſtles argument, If God were ſo ſevere that he would not give theſe ſo great and noble Creatures time of repentance, neither would he others. The Angels were intellectual Spirits, dwelling in heavenly places in the preſence of God, and the light of his countenance; and therefore could not ſin by errour or miſperſwaſion, but of purpoſed malice, which is the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt and irremiſſible. But man fell by miſperſwaſion, and being deceived by the lying ſuggeſtion of the ſpirit of errour.

Vide Ameſii *Medul. l.*1. *cap.*11.

The Devils malice againſt mankind appears, Geneſis 3. where there is an imbred enmity in the Devil, as likewiſe, 1 Pet. where he is ſaid to be a roaring Lion; a Lion roars when he hath got his prey, by way of triumph, or when he is hungry and almoſt ſtarved, and ſo moſt cruel.

His malice is againſt all mankind, but eſpecially againſt the Saints, Gen.3. 15. Rev.12.8. 1. Becauſe God hath ſet his love upon them. 2. Becauſe they are members of Chriſt; his Kingdom was ſet up in oppoſition to Satans. 3. Becauſe they bear the image of God. 4. They conquer him here, and ſhall judge him hereafter.

This malice of his appears in his going up and down the whole world to damn men, and that though he get no good by it; nay, though his condemnation be ſo much the greater, and therefore if God ſhould ſet him do what he would againſt us, he would firſt bring all outward miſery, as upon Job, and then eternal damnation. And though he knows God will defend the godly, yet he never leaveth to vex them, to tempt them to ſin, to overwhelm them with grief and deſpair, ſo that he is oppoſite to God. The Devils malice is beyond his wiſdom, elſe he would never oppoſe the people of God as he doth, ſince he doth hereby advance their glory, and his own ruine.

Hence the Devil is compared to a ſerpent. What ſubtilty did he ſhew in beguiling of Eve? Leonem agit & ſavit Aracoerm

The Devils are ſubtil creatures: 1. In nature.
2. They have perfect intelligence of all things done in the world.
3. They have gotten ſubtilty by long experience, Job 32.7.
4. They have ſtrong deluſions and great ſtratagems, 2 *Cor.*11,14.
5. Their ſubtilty appears by their prevailing over the wiſeſt men in all ages, and by making choice of the fitteſt inſtruments to accompliſh their deſignes. When he would deceive Eve he made choice of the Serpent: When he would deceive deceive Adam he made choice of the woman. The Devils design was to draw Job to curse God, therefore he spared him two things, his tongue that he might be at liberty to curse God, and his wife to be a counsellour to him thereto.

— Their craft is seen likewise in their divers and suitable temptations, 2 Cor. 2. 12. We read of his methods, Eph. 6. and depths, Revel. 3.

His first stratagem and device is to observe the natural constitution of every mans mind and body, and to fit his temptations thereunto.

Secondly, To observe our natural abilities and endowments, and accommodate his temptations thereunto.

Thirdly, To apply his temptations to mens outward estate, condition and place.

Fourthly, To tempt us by method, beginning with questionable actions, thence proceeding to sins of infirmity, and so to wilfull transgressions, and at last to obstinacy and final impenitency.

Fifthly, To bring us from one extream to another.

Sixthly, To perswade that his suggestions are the motions of Gods Spirit.

Seventhly, To make advantage of time by alluring every age to the peculiar vices thereof, as children to idleness and vanity; youth to lust; perfect age to violent and audacious attempts, old age to covetousness, and every one to the sins of the time.

agit & fallit. Diabolus metuendus magis cum fallit quam cum sævit. Aug.

The strength of a temptation lies in the repetition of the motion. Luther was so often tempted to self-murther, that he durst do nothing but repeat the Commandment, Thou shalt not kill.

The Devil is called the Tempter, because of his trade and way. He takes advantages, tempted Eve when she was alone; our Saviour in the wilderness, and being hungry. He hath variety of temptations, if one will not take another shall, if not presumption then despair; and strives to prevail by his importunity. He assaults the Saints ardentius, the wicked liberius.

He tempts first by inward suggestions: for being a spirit he hath communion with our souls, and can dart thoughts into us, so he filled the heart of Judas. 2. By outward objects, he hath one temptation for the proud, another for the timorous. He tempts us, 1. From duties, as unseasonable and unfit. 2. In duties, Ezek. 14. 3, 7. & 22. 1at. end. 3. By duties, to rest upon them, Prov. 7. 14. Bonaventure reckons up six kindes of Satans temptations: 1. Those which are so sudden that they do judicium rationis prævenire. 2. They are often so secret that one cannot spy out where the temptation lies, they do subterfugere rationem. 3. Some of his temptations are so impetuous, that they do vires transcendere. 4. They are importunate in respect of their continuance. 5. The way is so dark that misery and transgression lie at the door. 6. Those fraudulent temptations wherein he prevails over us to be our own tempters. The Saints may yet be comforted, 1. That a restraint is put on Satan in all his temptations, 1 Cor. 10. 13. 2. They shall tend to the increase of their graces; Satans temptations and accusations increased Jobs graces. 3. They have experience of the power of Christ within them; experimental knowledge is knowledge upon trial, 2 Cor. 12. 19. 4. Hereby they know the power of Christs intercession, Luk. 22. 31, 32. and their own prayers, Rev. 11. 7, 8. 5. This quickens their wisdom and watchfulness, 1 Pet. 5. 8. 6. His temptations and accusations shall increase their glory hereafter.

The Devil is very powerfull [a], Ephes. 6. 12. the Devils are called Principalities and Powers. Alexander of Hales saith, They have as great power as the good Angels; wicked men may be stronger than the Saints. Peccatum non tollit naturam, say the Schoolmen. Yet the Schoolmen generally say, that the lowest order of good Angels is stronger than the highest order of the evil Angels. And Aquinas part. 1. Quæst. 109. Artic. 4. saith, Boni Angeli habent prælationem super malos.

[a] The Devils power is not a physical, but a moral power only, that is, by suggestions and temptations from suitable objects.

Astutiam suadendi, non potentiam cogendi habet Diabolus. Austin. Psal. 72. 48. & 136. 4. The Devil is magnipotent, but not omnipotent, saith Luther.

He is said Eph. 2. 2. to be the god of the world which rules in the children of disobedience. He is called the strong one, Matth. 12. 29. He hath a strong power over every one by nature, John 12. 31. the Lord represented this spiritual bondage by the Egyptian and Babylonish bondage.

But here is our comfort, Christ is stronger than he. He hath bruised his head, Col. 1. He hath led them captive, and triumphed over them; and their power is Dæmones non possunt quicquam creare, sed possunt creata specie tenus mutare. Quemadmodum docet Augustin. de civit. Dei lib. 18. cap. 18. Et ex eo Theologi Scholastici que uno consensu. Rainold. de lib. Apoc.

wholly wholly limited by God. The Devil is chained as it were; he could not enter into the swine without a permission. He cannot produce any substance, or change one substance into another, he cannot call the souls of men out of their place and unite them to the body again, he cannot turn the will of man, as he pleaseth, nor do that which is properly a miracle. The works of the Devil are called lying wonders *, 2 Thess. 2. 9.

* They are so, 1. Ratione causæ, they proceed from the Devil who is the father of lies. 2. Ratione formæ, in manner of working, they are but delusions. 3. Ratione finis. Vide Aquin. part. 3. Quæst. 110. Art. 4. & Quæst. 114. Art. 4.

In respect of the work it self, they are for the most part feigned, though not alwayes; but in respect of the end, they alwayes tend to deceive and beguile.

The Devil can,

1. Hurry bodies up and down in the air, Mat. 4. 5. Luke 8. 29, 33.
2. Raise tempests, Job 1. 16, 19.
3. Bring diseases both of body and mind, Luke 13. 16. & 9. 31.
4. Overthrow houses and buildings, Job 1. 18.
5. Break chains and bars, Mark 5. 4.

The Schoolmen say, the Angels (if God would suffer them) could tear the fabrick of heaven and earth in pieces.

They are used as instruments by God, to punish the wicked, and exercise the godly; as we may read in that story where God sent one to be a lying spirit in the mouth of the Prophets; and so Paul had one, 2 Cor. 12. to humble and try him.

The Devil is,
1. A creature.
1. A chained creature.
3. A cursed creature.
4. A conquered creature.

Therefore in all thy temptations, in all the sad exercises and buffetings of Satan still remember this; He is at Gods command; he bids him go, and he goeth; leave off, and he leaveth. That is a difficult place, 2 Cor. 12. 7. Paul repeateth the first words in that verse twice, as a thing worthy to be observed, Lest I should be exalted above measure, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan (so we read it) it may be rendred with Beza the Angel of Satan to buffet me. Some interpret this of a bodily disease; others of the concupiscence of the flesh; others think he meaneth some inward suggestion of Satan working upon his corruption, whatsoever it was.

ἄγγελος σατᾶν, Cameron saith, Paul was beaten black and blue by some angel of Satan. See my Annot. in loc.

I proceed to resolve some Questions concerning the Devils:

Quæst. 1. Whether the Devils have all their punishment already?

No: What art thou come to torment us before our time? and they are reserved in chains.

They have the beginning of eternal wrath, although the aggravation and increase of it shall be hereafter, as mens souls damned are full of Gods anger, yet shall have greater torment at least extensively, when soul and body are united at the day of Judgement: and while they are in the air, and go up and down tempting, they have not all they shall have, but hereafter they shall have the accomplishment of all; and shall never be received into favour again, although Origen held otherwise.

Quocunque volitant gehennam & catenam suam portant, say the Schoolmen. Reflexio culpæ suæ, their proper place hell, Reflexio exercitationis humanæ, they have their principality in the air, saith Aquinas. Interpretes recentiores Paulum metaphoricè dicunt in aëre dæmones collocasse: quasi hostes è loco superiori cervicibus nostris imminentes, ut reddant cautiores. Sanford. de Descensu Christi ad inferos, lib. 2. pag. 130. In patriam suam, inquit Bernardus, in Cantic. Serm. 14. Diabolus locum in aëre isto medium inter Cœlum & Terram fortitus est, scilicet ut videat & invideat. Dæmones non sentiunt dolorem, quatenus dolor est passio appetitus sensitivi: sed quatenus est actus voluntatis ægrè ferens, id quod est ei resistens & contrarium. Aquin. 1a, 2æ Quæst. 64. Art. 3.

Quæst. 2. How can they be punished with fire?

Seeing the fire is corporeal, how can it work upon immaterial substances?

They that go to Hell shall finde the fire no metaphore. Bishop Bilson Full Redemption of Mankinde by the death of Christ, pag. 52. Vide Sanford. de Descensu Christi ad inferos, pag. 137, 138, &c. Mobis verum ignis, & flammarum in inferno nihil esse nisi metaphoricum, & pueriliter sugari quicunque corporea, seu materialia sunt imaginati. Chamier. Tom. 2. lib. 5. c. 2. Aquinas Supplem. part. 3. Quæst. 97. Artic. 5. holds it to be corporeal, yet ibid. Art. 2. he holds the worm to be metaphorical.

Some

Some therefore to answer this, do deny that there is material fire in hell, only the torments thereof are set forth by what is most terrible, and the worm is metaphorical; others say, by Gods power it is elevated.

Mark 9. 44, 46, 48. The same thing is three times repeated. The never dying worme is the Spirit of God by the coactive power of the Law holding a mans sinnes before his eyes, and filling them with self-convictions, and so with perfect fear and despair for ever. The unquenchable fire is the wrath of God immediately upon the whole soul, especially the Conscience. The Scripture often sets forth the wrath of God, and the effects and impressions of it by fire, Deut. 4.24. & 3.24.

Quest. 3. Whether the Devils shall torment the wicked after the day of Judgement?

This is handled by the Schoolmen: I see no reason (saith Voetius) why the affirmative may not be admitted, although it is not to be made an Article of Faith.

The Scripture saith to be tormented with, not by the Devil and his Angels.

Gerhard in his Common-places de Inferno propounding this Question, An Daemones futuri sint damnatorum tortores? Thus resolves it, The Devils before judgment, and in this life torment men, but after judgement they themselves shall be tormented in the bottomlesse pit, therefore they shall be companions in torment, not executioners of it. The object of this wrath in Hell is the soul, and the punishment upon it must be its destruction, 2 Thess. 1.9. The Devils cannot fill all the corners of the soul with wrath, God onely can correct and destroy the Spirit. The wrath of God shall be the great and immediate executioner of the ungodly hereafter, 1 Cor. 15.28. He shall dispense himself immediately in Heaven and Hell. The Schoolmen dispute, Whether the Devils that have been incentores in culpa, shall not be tortores in poena. The ministry of the evil Angels shall last no longer than that of the good Angels, that shall be laid down at the Day of Judgement. Vide Calv. in 1 Cor. 15.24.

Quest. 4. What is the meaning of those Stories, Possessed with Devils?

More were possessed with them in the time of the Gospel, than ever before or after. See Matth. 4, 24. & 8. 16, 28. & 9. 32. & 12. 22. & 15.2. & 17.14, 15. Mark 1. 36. & 5.2. Luke 13. 16. John 10. 21. Acts 8. 36. & Luke 4, 33. & 8. 13. The reason is, because as our Saviour had spiritually, so he would corporally or externally manifest his power over Devils. This possessing was nothing but the dwelling and working of the Devil in the body: One was Demoniack and *Lunatick too, because the Devil took these advantages against his body; and this hath been manifested by their speaking of strange tongues on a sudden. The causes of this are partly from the Devils malice and desire to hurt us, and partly from our selves, who are made the slaves of Satan: and partly from God who doth it sometime out of anger, as he bid the Devil go into Saul; or out of grace, that they may see how bitter sinne is. Vide Voet. Thes. de Energ.

See Deacon and Walkers 2d, 3d and 4th Dialogue of Spirits and Devils.

* These Demoniacks mentioned in Scripture were no other than such as we call madmen; and Lunaticks, as appears by John 10.20. Matth. 17. 15. compared with Luke 9. Mr Mede on John 10.20.

Quest. 5. The meaning of Christs temptation by Satan, and how we shall know Satans temptations?

Mat. 4. The Devil carried Christs body upon the pinacle of the Temple. It is hard to say whether this were done in deed or vision only, although it seem to be real, because he bid him to throw himself down headlong: but now this was much for our comfort, that we see Christ himself was tempted, and that to most hideous things, Satan was overcome by him.

Damascene of old, and some of our Divines say, That Satan in his temptations of Adam and Christ, could not have accesse to their inward man to tempt them, therefore he tempted Adam by a Serpent and audible voice, and Christ by a visible Landship of the world.

Satans

Satans temptations (ſay ſome) may be known by the ſuddenneſſe, violence and unnaturalneſſe of them. All theſe are to be found in the motions of ſinne which ariſe from ones own heart: otiginal ſinne will vent ſinne ſuddenly, Iſaiah 57.20. Violently, Jeremiah 8.6. and it will break forth into unnatural luſts, blaſphemies againſt God, and murders againſt men, Mark 7.21, 22. Maſter Liford ſaith, If they ſeize upon us with terrour and affrightment, becauſe our own conceptions are free, it is very difficult to diſtinguiſh them: When thoughts often come into the minde of doing a thing contrary to the Law of God, it is an argument Satan is at hand.

Mr Elton on the tenth Commandment gives two rules to know,
1. If the temptations be againſt the light of nature corrupted, as for one to kill a parent without any cauſe.
2. Blaſphemous thoughts Gen.3.4. 1 Tim.2.14. 1 Sam.15.2 Cor.11.3.

The Devil tempts ſome to ſinne under the ſhew of vertue, Job 16.2. Phil. 3.6. Omnis tentatio eſt aſſimilatio boni, ſay the Schoolmen. Some under the hope of pardon, by ſtretching the bounds of Gods mercy, leſſening of ſin, propounding the example of the multitude, ſetting before men what they have done, and promiſing them repentance hereafter before they die.

Tentare eſt proprie experimentum ſumere de aliquo. Diabolus ſemper tentat ut noceat in peccatum præcipitando, & ſecundum hoc dicitur proprium officium ejus tentare. Aquin. *part.*1. *Qu.*114. *Art.*2.

The diffetence between Gods temptations and Satans: they differ,

Firſt, In the matter: the matter of Gods temptations is ever good, as either by proſperity, adverſity, or commandments, by chaſtiſements which from him are ever good: but the matter of Satans temptations is evil, he ſollicits us to ſinne.

Secondly, In the end, the end of Gods temptation is to humble us and do us good: but of Satans, to make us diſhonour God.

Thirdly, In the effect: God never miſſeth his end; Satan is often diſappointed.

A Queſtion is made by ſome, Whether Satan may come to the ſame man with the ſame tentation after he is conquered?

Mr Capel reſolves it, that he may, part 1. of tentation, *Chap.*7. *pag.*132,133.

It is alſo a Queſtion, An omnia peccata committantur tentante Diabolo? John 8. 41,44. Every work of ſinne is a work of falſhood, and all falſhood is from the Devil.

And likewiſe it is queſtioned, Whether man might not have ſinned if there had not been a Tempter?

To that it is anſwered, he might, for Satan fell without a tempter; the angelical nature was more perfect than the humane. 2. Nature is now ſo depraved that we cannot but ſin, James 1.14. Non eget Damone tentature qui ſibi factus eſt Damon, ſaith Pariſienſis.

Fourthly, What is meant by delivering up to Satan, 1 Cor.5.5? Some with Chryſoſtome think it was a corporeal delivering of him, ſo that he was vexed of him by a diſeaſe or otherwiſe, and that they ſay is meant by deſtruction of the fleſh, and ſo expound that Mark 6. They had power over the unclean ſpirits, that is, not only to expell them, but to put them in whom they pleaſed; but this is not approved, therefore others make it to be a caſting out of the company of the faithfull, and ſo from all the good things that are appropriated unto that condition, and therefore to the deſtruction of the fleſh, they expound to be meant of his corruption; for ſo fleſh is taken in Scripture*.

It ſeems to be taken from 1 Sam. 16.14. * Rom.8.13. Gal.5.20.

Satana tradi idem eſt atque ex Eccleſia (extra quam regnat Satan) ejectum declarari quempiam, non tamquam apud Satanam permanſurum, & cum eo perituram, ſed contrà ut miſerrimi ſui ſtatus ſenſu permotus, reſipiſcat: atque ita carne abolita, qua antea ipſi dominabatur ſpiritus ſuperior evadat, ut ita ſalvus fiat. Beza de excommunicatione.

Fifthly, Whether the Devils may appear, 1 *Sam.*28. He which appeared was, 1. Subject to the Witches power, therefore it was not the true Samuel. 2. If Samuel had been ſent of God, he would not have complained of trouble no more than than Moſes did, *Matth.*17. 3. The true Samuel would not have given countenance to ſo wicked a practice, to the Magick Art. 4. True Samuel would not have ſuffered himſelf to be worſhipped as this did. 5. Saul never came to be with the ſoul of Samuel in bliſſe: yet he ſaith, [c] To morrow ſhalt thou be with me. 6. God refuſed to anſwer Saul by Prophet, Viſion, Urim or Thummim, therefore he would not anſwer him by Samuel raiſed from the dead. 7. True Samuel after his death could not lie nor ſinne, Heb. 12. 23. He ſaid Saul cauſed him to aſcend, [d] and troubled him; if he had been the true Samuel, Saul could not have cauſed him to aſcend, if not, he lied in ſaying he was Samuel, and that he troubled him.

Spectrorum vox eſt à veteri verbo ſpecio, hoc eſt, video;

unde ſpecies, item ſpeculum, compoſita item inſpicio, conſpicio, alia. Græcè φάντασμα dicitur, Mat.14.26. & Marc.6. Græcanicam vocem vulgatam retinuit interpres: ſed ipſo exemplo Pythonyſſæ Samuelem evocantis confirmare conatur, poſſe Spiritus ſanctorum arte magica evocari. Rainold. *de lib. Apoc. To.*1. *cap.*75 Vide plura ibid.

Spectrum pratulit Eraſmus. Voſſ. *de orig. & progreſ. Idol. lib.*1. *parte altera, cap.*6. Agrippa hoc [c] As yeſterday is put for the time paſt, though long ago, Gen. 31. 2. Exod. 5.4. Joſh. 10. 3,4. So to morrow is put for the time to come, not the next day only, Exod. 13.14. Mat.16.30.

[d] Iſa. 57. 2. Revel.13.14. That it was not Samuel himſelf which appeared, but the Witches familiar ſpirit in his likeneſſe: Theſe reaſons prevail with me, 1. Neither by Witches nor Devils could the ſoul of the Saints be commanded or diſquieted from their places, when they are in reſt and peace. 2. We are aſſured by the Doctrine of our Saviour, Luke 16. that God will ſend none from the dead to inſtruct the living. 3. That which appeared received adoration at Sauls hands, which the Angel refuſed at S[t] Johns, Rev.22. and the ſoul of Samuel neither might nor would have accepted. 4. Saul forſaken of God could not after death reſt in the ſame place with Samuel the elect and approved ſervant of God. Laſtly, The Fathers do for the moſt part reſolve it was an illuſion of Satan to ſtrike Saul into deſperation. Biſhop Bilſons Redempt. of mankind, &c. pag. 204, 205. Vide Pet. Mart. in loc.

If God had ſent up Samuel the dead to inſtruct the living: Why is this reaſon given of the denial of the rich mans requeſt to have one ſent from the dead? Becauſe if they would not believe Moſes and the Prophets, They would not believe though one roſe from the dead. In ſo doing, the Lord ſhould ſeem to go againſt his own order.

Luke 16. Willet. in loc. See Dr Gouge on Heb.11.32 pag.194.

The ſouls of Saints which are at reſt with the Lord, are not ſubject to the power or inchantment of a Witch: But Samuel was an holy Prophet now at reſt with the Lord. Bellarmine anſwereth, That Samuel came not by the command of the Witch, but by the command of God, and that rather impeached than approved Art-Magick, which he proveth, becauſe the Witch was troubled. But the Scripture expreſſly teacheth, that her trouble was, becauſe it was the King: who (having lately ſuppreſſed Witches) had now in diſguiſed apparel ſet her on work, and ſo deceived her.

Bellarm. *de purg.l.*2.*c.*6. Vide illum de Chriſto. lib. 4. *cap.*11.

Bellarmine objecteth, The Scripture ſtill calleth him that appeared Samuel, as if it were not an ordinary thing in Scripture, to call things by the names of that which they repreſent, or whoſe perſon they bear; the repreſentations of the Cherubims are called the Cherubims. And things are often called in Scripture not according to the truth of the thing, or Scriptures judgement thereof, but according to the conceit and opinion of others. The Angels which appeared to the Patriarchs are called men, *Gen.*18. The Idols of the Heathen are called gods, Geneſis 25. becauſe they were ſo eſteemed by thoſe which worſhipt them.

Bellarm. *de purg.l.*2.*c.*19. Scriptura Deos appellat qui nihil minus erant. 1 Cor.10. Ideò quòd Gentiles crederent Deos eſſe, & ut Deos ipſos venerabantur.

Ita Scriptura Diabolum Samuelem vocat, ideo quod Saul illum Samuelem eſſe putaret. Lavater de Spectris, part. 2. cap. 8. Gen.18.2, & 32. 24.

Corollaries.

First, We muſt walk warily and watchfully againſt Satans temptations. We ſhould be ſober, 1 Theſ.5.6,8. Strong, 1 Cor.16.13. 1 Pet.5.8,9. Watchfull, 2 Tim.4.5. Mat. 26.41. Pro.4.23. Wiſe, Heb.5.14. Pro.2.9,10. and of good courage, Joſh.1.9. 1 Chro. 28.10. Taking unto our ſelves the whole armour of God, Eph.6.12,13,14. that we may be able to ſtand in the evil day.

The Devils have an angelical nature, therefore are more dangerous adverſaries. 1. They are more ſpiritual. 2. Undiſcernable, he diſcerns us, but we cannot diſcerne him, Luke 24. 39. 3. They are very agile, ſwift in motion, Pſal. 104. 4. 4. Act unweariedly, Job 1. 7. 5. Terrible. 6. Potent, Epheſ. 2. 2.

Secondly, Believe not Satan though he flatter, 2 Cor. 11.3. 1 Tim.2.14. Fear him not though he rage, 1 Pet. 5.8,9. Hearken not to him though he tell the truth,

2 Cor. 11. 14. Acts 16. 17. For if he transforme himself into an Angel of light, it is to seduce.

He assaulted our first Parents in innocency, and Christ himself, 1 *Cor.*7.5. But

1. He cannot hurt the people of God, 1 John 5. 18.

2. All his assaulting is by leave, Luke 22.32. See *Mat.*8.31. he hath not onely a general warrant to tempt, but a new commission for every act of temptation: Compare Job 1.12. with 2. 6.

3. God looks after him still.

4. This opposition of Satan is more for the honour and safety of our spiritual life.

5. He is a foiled enemy; Christ hath conquered him, *Col.*2 15.

6. Wait till death, and then thou shalt have a full conquest over him, 1 Peter 5.11. *Rom.*16.20.

Thirdly, See Gods great goodnesse, who offers us repentance, and Christ, when he absolutely refused the Devils.

Fourthly, See the exact justice of God, no greatnesse can priviledge one from punishment, none can be greater, nearer, holier, than Angels: yet if they sin they shall be tumbled out of Heaven. Therefore we must leave all sin if we desire to go to Heaven; it would not hold the Devils when they had sinned, No unclean thing shall come thither.

2 Pet. 2.4. Per Caliginem intelligunt nonnulli miserrimam & horroris plenam vitæ conditionem, sumpta translatione à facinorosis damnatis, qui in carceris pedore retinentur constricti, dum ad ultimum judicium protrahantur. Casmanni Angelographia.

1 John 3. 7, 8. Fifthly, Be not like the Devils, then thou art one of his children: Wicked men are called sons of Belial.

Certain particular sins make us like the D l:

1. A liar or murderer is like to him, John 8. 44.

Persisting in sin makes one like the Devil. Humanum est errare, in errore perseverare Diabolicum.

2. A slanderer, or an accuser of another.

3. Envious and malicious persons, as Witches.

4. He that tempts others, or perswades them to sin: The Devil is called the tempter: Eve spoke for the Devil; therefore she hath two punishments more than man, sorrow in child-bed, and subjection to her Husband.

5. He that goes about to hinder others from godlinesse, as Elimas, Acts 13. Thou childe of the Devil.

6. A drunkard, 1 *Sam.*1.15,16.

7. A proud person: especially take heed of pride in spiritual Illuminations and Gifts.

Sixthly, See the folly of those who do the Devil service, how ill will he repay them? Never did any trust in the Devil, but he deceived him, even for the base things of this life. Witnesse all Witches (his most devoted and professed servants) if ever he made any one of them wealthy: all Ages are not able to shew one.

Perkins on Heb.11.

Seventhly, Satans great businesse in the world, is to study men, Hast thou considered my servant Job? When he comes near to us in his temptations, there is something in us to take part with him, 1 John 5.6. There is abundance of self-love, self-flattery, and natural blindnesse, 2 *Cor.*2.11. He hath a strange power to make all his suggestions take with us; they are called fiery darts: fire will quickly take: We are led captive to do his will. He comes to us sometimes in the Name of God, and can transform himself into an Angel of light, 2 *Cor.*11.14. He can raise up in mens spirits strange ravishments, and can swallow them up with joy, as well as sorrow.

2 Cor.2.7.

Chap. VIII.

2. Of MAN.

WHen God had created Heaven and Earth, he rested not in Heaven nor any heavenly thing: neither in Earth, nor any earthly thing, but only in man, [a] because he is a heavenly thing for his soul, and earthly in regard of his body.

[a] Vocabulum homo est duarum substantiarum fibula. Tertullian.

Prometheus fashioned the bodies of men out of clay, but was fain to steal fire from Heaven for the quickning of them with souls.

last, because he was worthiest, the soul was inspired last, because yet more noble. Dr Halls Cont empl. of Paradise. Man was created after Gods Image. 1. To awe the creature, whose Soveraigne he was. 2. That he might acknowledge God to be his Lord, and do him homage, and that God and he might delight in each other. Ad imaginem ac similitudinem, id est, imaginem valde similem. Eman. Sa. ad loc. Significatur absoluta similitudo utraque voce, qua quid fit ita effictum ad exemplar alterius, ut proximè ad illud accedat, & quam maximè exprimat ac referat, ut in eo agnoscas illud ipsum Archetypon ad cujus effigiem sit factum. Merc. in loc. Some Schoolmen have determined, that God could not make man or Angels impeccable. For then he should have made them Gods.

Man is a living creature made after the image of God, Gen. 1. 26, 27. The image of God is mentioned there three times.

The efficient cause of man was the holy Trinity, God the Father, Sonne and holy Ghost.

In the Creation of man three things are considerable:

1. The consultation of the Trinity, Let us make man, Gen. 1. 26. Quia rationalis creatura quasi cum consilio facta videretur. Therefore the word for Creator is used in the plural number, Eccl. 12. 1. Isaiah 5. 4, 5.

Cum ibi sermo fiat in numero plurali faciamus, sunt multi Theologi, qui Angelos ideo convocatos esse dicant, non ut consuleret illos, cùm nemo sit tam rudis, qui cogitet Deum indigere consilio, sed ut indicaret velle se efficere longè nobilissimam illam creaturam. Aut voluit forsan Deus hoc ipso, hominis magnitudinem ostendere. Menass. Ben. Isr. de fragilitate humana, Sect. 4.

2. The work made, not an Hermaphrodite, as some would have it (though Adam comprehended both sexes) but he is distinguished into both sexes: Thus it followes after, male and female. The man was made of the dust of the earth, the woman was made of the mans rib, to shew the near and social conjunction between man and wife. She was not made of his head, because she should not rule over him; nor of his feet, because she should not be servilely subject to him. So Aquinas.

Quum dico hominem non solum Adamum, sed etiam Evam complecter Gen. 1. 27. Zanch. de oper. Dei, lib. 3. cap. 1.

3. The patern of it, the image of God, 1 Cor. 11. 7. Col. 3. 10. Exemplumque Dei quisque est in imagine parva. Manilius. Bellarmine distinguisheth between an image and similitude, the first (saith he) consists in natural endowments: the other in supernatural graces: rather image and similitude represent an exact likeness. These two words are in an inverted order joyned together, Chap. 5. 3. Jam. 3. 9. mentions only likeness, leaving out image, which is a certain sign, that there is no difference between them, but that the second is added to insinuate the perfection of the image.

Quoniam hæc duo synonymicè pro eadem usurpantur, verto, Ad imaginem sive similitudinem nostram. Quod autem ejusdem sint significationis, ne quis in his vane philosophetur, nimium liquet ex eo quod prox-

Similitude is larger then image, although often, when there is speech of man in the Scriptures, one is taken for the other.

ime in præcedente, & c. 9. 6. ipsa tantum dicitur hic & repetitur, Ad imaginem Dei, ut & Col 3. 10. Pricherellus in Collectaneis Anglic. Vide Molin. Enodat. Gravis. Quæst. 1. de Deo indagine. Etsi nonnulli magni viri, tam ex veteribus, quàm ex recentioribus volunt aliquod esse discrimen inter imaginem & similitudinem: mihi tamen magis altera placet sententia, quæ nomen imaginis, ad hominis, nempe animæ substantiam refert: nomen autem similitudinis, ad qualitates & dotes, variasque virtutes, quibus homo factus fuit similis Deo, Zanch. de oper. Dei, partis 3. l. 1. c. 1.

Mans primitive and pure condition was the enjoying of Gods image, Gen. 1. 26. his Apoſtate condition is the loſſe of Gods image, his renewed condition is the repairing of Gods image, 1 Cor. 3. ult. his bleſſed condition in the ſtate of glory, is the perfection of Gods image, Pſal. 17. 15.

Sociniani ſtatum neutralem, ſeu naturalem in puris qualitatibus fingunt cum Scholaſticis, eumque Adamo & Evæ aſſingunt, in quo in aliis juſtitiæ pariter atque in juſtitia exſortes habuerint ſe inſtar tabulæ raſæ, ſimileſque fuerint infantibus, aut pueris innocentibus.

The image of God in Adam and the Saints is not ſpecifically diſtinct, though his image was conveyed to him by God immediately, and ours by a Mediator, Rom. 8. 29. and the old image is renewed in his people, Col. 3. 10. Man is ſaid to be after Gods image, Gen. 1. 27. in that he was indued with perfect knowledge, and with true holineſs and righteouſneſs, Col. 3. 10. Eph. 4. 24.

nec non alij quos hactenus legimus, exceptis ſolis Socinianis, reſtitutionem illam, quam Eccleſiaſtes Adamo aſcribit, c. 7. v. 30. non tantum explicatè per remotionem injuſtitiæ, verum etiam perpoſitionem juſtitiæ, atque æquitatis internæ, nitentes tum genuina vocis Hebræa notatione, tum aliis Scripturæ locis, in quibus vox illa poſitivè accipitur, iiſque, qui habitu juſtitiæ atq; integritatis ſunt præditi, attribuitur. Cenſura In Confeſſ. Remonſt. cap. 5. Vide plura ibid.

There is a four-fold image or likeneſs:

Ut aliquid verè dici queat eſſe alterius rei imago: neceſſe eſt primò, ut ſit ex ea re expreſſum, aut ad exemplar illius rei effoꝛmatum: alioqui etiamſi ſimile ſit, illius tamen rei imago dici non poterat. Zanch. de oper. Dei, part. 3. lib. 3. cap. 1. Vide plura ibid.

First, Where there is a likeneſs with an abſolute agreement in the ſame nature, and ſo the Son of God is called the expreſs image of the Father.

Secondly, By participation of ſome univerſal common nature, ſo a man and beaſt are like in the common nature of animality.

Thirdly, By proportion only, as when we ſay, the Governour of a Commonwealth, and the Pilot of a ſhip are like.

Fourthly, By agreement of order, when one thing is a patern or exemplar, and the other thing is made after it: Now when man is ſaid to be like God, it is meant in thoſe two laſt wayes, Chriſt was the eſſentiall image of God, Man was Imago repreſentantis: aliter Imago imperatoris in nummo, aliter, in Filio. Auguſtine.

The Schoolemen make Images and Similitudes divers; and again they diſtinguiſh between imaginem Dei and ad imaginem Dei. Vide Aquin. part. 1. Art. 1. & 9. Et Bellarm. de Gratia primi hominis, c. 2.

The Image of God in which man was created, is the conformity of man unto God, 1. And chiefly in his ſoul. 2. In his body for his ſoul. 3. In the whole perſon for * of both.

 Quamvis imago propriè reſidet in anima, tamen ratione animæ totus homo reſte dicitur conditus ad imaginem Dei. Scriptura non dicit* Gen. 1. 27. factum eſſe animam ad imaginem Dei, ſed factum eſſe hominem. Bellarm. de Amiſſ. Grat. l. 4. c. 11. Verily either my eyes be dim, or there is not much ſet down in preciſe terms, wherein Adam's perfection did conſiſt. The Image of God is that high perfection of whole Adam, and the integrity of all the powers both of his ſoul and body, and that conformity that he had with God his Archetypus Dr Hampton on Gen. 1. 26. Homo fuit totus, tum corpore, tum anima, ad imaginem Dei factus. Zanch. de oper. Dei, part. 3. l. 3. c. 1.

The ſoul of a man is conformable to God in reſpect of its Nature, Faculties and Habits.

First, In reſpect of its Nature, Eſſence or Being, as it is a ſpiritual and immortal Subſtance. The Scripture witneſſeth, 1. That the ſoul of a man is a ſpirit, Mat. 27. 20. Act. 7. 59. as appears by comparing the 1 Pet. 4. 19. with Heb. 12. 9. in Peter God is called The Creator of ſouls, in the Hebrews, The Father of ſpirits, in the ſame ſenſe.

This was a great controverſie between Hieron and Auguſtine. An anima ſit ex traduce, an immortalis? Hieron held the immediate creation of it, and this is moſt ſuitable to the perfection and ſimplicity of the ſoul.

2. That it is immortal, 2 Cor. 5. 8. Phil. 1. 21, 22. 2 Pet. 1. 14. The Sadduces indeed denied the immortality of the ſoul, this opinion of theirs began on this occaſion. Antigonus Socheus, the Diſciple of Simeon the juſt ſaid, We muſt not ſerve God for hope of reward or wages. Hence his Diſciples Sadok and Baithos took occaſion to teach that there is no reward or puniſhment after this life, whereas Antigonus meant, that there ought to be in us ſo great love of the Divine Majeſty, and of virtue in it ſelf, that we ſhould be willing to ſerve God, and ready to ſuffer any thing, without looking for any reward or wages.

Zanchy obſerves, plures ſemper fuiſſe, eoſque graviſſimos Patres, qui ſenſerint, rint, animas quotidie novas creari, corporibusque infundi, quam qui per traducem propagari judicarint. De oper. Dei par. 3. lib. 2. cap. 5. De origine animorum. Vide plura ibid.

Augustine did stagger, and thought it was by propagation, because he could not see how original sinne could else be propagated. Apparet Augustinum inclinasse in eandem cum Hieronimo sententiam: & cupivisse se illam posse tueri, verum propter argumentum ab originali peccato ductum, à quo, quomodo se extricaret, viam non reperiebat; hærebat adhuc, nec audebat propter conscientiam, aperte & simpliciter Hieronymi sententiæ subscribere. Zanch. de oper. Dei, part. 3. l. 2. c. 1. For its being traduced by Parents. See manuduct. ad Philos. Teuton. A Carolo Hotham, for its creation and infusion by God. See Mr Pemble, De Origine Formarum. That of Zech. 12. 1. and Heb. 12. 9. makes it the more probable opinion, that it is by immediate creation, and for that of original sinne, the soul is created as part of man, and so justly deprived of that original excellency. Zanchy saith thus, Sicut eo momento, quo Deus animam rationalem à se creatam, cum corpore in peccatis concepto conjungit, ex corpore & anima fit homo, sic eodem momento, tum inobedientia Adæ, tum inobedientia hujus hominis, in utero matris existenti, imputatur, tum ex consequenti, ipsa etiam contagio, propensio ad malum, tanquam talis pœna peccati, quæ etiam peccatum sit; ex justa Dei ordinatione consequitur. Vide Fromond. Philol. Christ. de anima, lib. 4. cap. 3. And Needler on the 5th of Gen. 2. Artic. 1, 2. Vide Lessium de Immortalitate animorum. Et Zanchium de oper. Dei, part. 3. l. 2. c. 8. Vossij Hist. Pelag. part. 3. l. 2. Thes. 1.

Reasons of its immortality:

1. Because it cannot be destroyed by any second cause, Mat. 10. 28.

2. Being severed from the body, it subsists by it self, and goes to God, Eccl. 12. 7. Luke 16. 22.

3. Because it is a simple and immaterial substance, not depending on matter: the mind works the better the more it is abstracted from the body, when it is asleep or dying.

4. Because it transcends all terrene and mortal things, and with a wonderfull quicknesse searcheth after heavenly, divine, and eternal things. There is an invincible argument for the thing secretly imprinted in the instinct and conscience of the soul it self. Because it is every good mans hope that it shall be so, and wicked mans fear.

5. The food of the soul is immortal, 1 Pet. 1. 23. the evident promises of eternal life prove the soul to be immortal, He that believeth in me hath eternall life: and To day thou shalt be with me in Paradise. Nothing can satisfie the soul but God.

6. Man is capable of virtue and vice, of immortal desires and affections.

7. The souls of Adam and Eve were not made of any matter, but came by immediate Creation, in whom God gave a specimen what he would perpetually do with other men. That is but a cavil, that Solomon, Eccl. 12. 7. speaks only of our first Parents. See Dr Rainolds of the Passions, cap. 34. and Burtons Melancholy Part 1. Sect. 1. Subsec. 9.

Heathens held the immortality of the soul. Plato wrote a Book of it.

Children are called the fruit of their Parents body, to note, [a] that they are only fathers of their flesh: they have another, namely God, which is father of their spirits. St Paul teacheth it, Heb. 12. 9. and the use of it. And this checks their opinion who will have souls propagated no lesse then bodies.

[a] Bishop Lake on Ps. 132. 11. See Numb. 27. 16. Ps. 35. 15.

Mat. 17. 18. Etsi fuerint nonnulli apud Ethnicos qui putarint animam esse mortalem, Epicuri de grege porci, qui animam dixit sui dictam pro sale ne putresceret: tamen omnes paulo sapiores, & agnoverunt animæ immortalitatem, & firmissimis documentis stabilire sunt conati. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. cen. 2 prælect. 33. Illud autem maximum argumentum immortalitatis est, quod Deum solus homo agnoscit. In muta nulla species religionis, quia terrena prospiciunt. Homo ideo solus cœlum adspicit, ut Deum quærat. An potest igitur non esse immortalis, qui immortalem desiderat. Lactant. Divin. Institut. Epit. Hoc diligenter retinendum est, tria hæc, providentiam Dei, religionem, & animorum immortalitatem, ita esse conjuncta, ut dividi ac disjungi à se invicem non possint. Zanch. de operibus Dei, part. 3. lib. 2. cap. 8.

Many collect the immortality of the soul, and salvation of Jobs children, because they were not doubled as the rest of his estate was.

The soul of man is as it were the breath of God: God did not say of mans soul as of other creatures, Let it be made, Let there be a soul in mans body. No, but when he had formed the body, he breathed the soul into him. It was to note, that the soul of man had a more heavenly and divine original, then any of the other creatures tures that are here in this world. Vide Bellarm. de Amiſ. gratia, l.4. c.11. See Sr Walter Rawleighs Ghoſt, l.2. per totum. And Maſter Roſſe his Philoſ. Touchſtone, Concluſion.

God challengeth a peculiar propriety in the ſoul, he only hath power over it, Matth. 10. 28. Zach. 12. 1. He is called the God of the ſpirits of all fleſh,

He only knows the ſoul, Jer. 17. 10. and can immediately deal with the ſoul, to wound or heal it, to afflict or comfort it. It is Gods by extraction, in reſpect of regeneration, redemption, diſpoſall. It is a glorious immortal Spirit, as well as an Angel. It is the meaſure of all worldly excellencies, they are good or evill, as they promote or hinder the good of the ſoul. Grace is excellent, becauſe it adorns the ſoul; ſinne a great evill, becauſe it blots and hurts the ſoul. Riches are of a middle nature, becauſe one may do much good or hurt with them.

2. The ſoul of man is conformable to God in reſpect of its * faculties, in its Underſtanding, Will and Memory, is like the Trinity.

* Imago divina ſapientiæ in intellectu effulſit, imago bonitatis, manſuetudinis, tolerantia in ejus animo, imago charitatis & miſericordiæ in cordis affectibus, imago juſtitiæ ſanctitatis & puritatis divinæ in voluntate; imago comitatis, benignitatis & veritatis in geſtibus & verbis, & imago divinæ potentiæ in dominio conceſſo ſuper omnia animalia. Rivetus. Adam creatus eſt ad imaginem Dei relucentem. 1. In dominio, quod obtinuit in omnes creaturas Maris & Terræ. 2. In præſtanti totius corporis Symmetria, maximè in vultu. 3. In immortali ſpirituali anima noſtra ſubſtantia. 4. In excellentibus corporis & animæ noſtræ facultatibus. 5. In facultatum illarum puritate inculpatâ. Jacobi Capelli Hiſtoria Sacra & Exotica, lib. 1. Mihi quidem videtur totus homo vel imago Dei, vel ad imaginem factus debere dici: non ita ſanè, ut complures loquuntur, anima ſola rationalis: Nam illud Moſis verbis magis eſt conſentaneum. Petavius de opificio ſex dierum, l. 2. c. 4.

3. In the Qualities, Graces and admirable endowments of it. In the Underſtanding there was, Firſt, An exact knowledg of God and all Divine things, Col. 3.10. Knowledg is a principal part of Gods Image, by reaſon he was inabled to conceive of things ſpirituall and univerſal.

Secondly, A perfect Knowledge of all inferiour things, Adam knew Eve, and impoſed names on the creatures ſuitable to their natures. He had moſt exquiſite prudence in the practical part of his underſtanding, in all doubtful caſes. He knew what was to be done. 2. In the Will there was holineſſe, Eph. 4. 24. God had the higheſt place in his ſoul, his glory was his end. His liberty then ſtood not in this that he could ſtand or fall, a poſſibility to ſin is no perfection.

See Mr Burgeſs on 1 Tim. 1. 8. Lect. 12. p 111. 112, 113, 114. 115, 116.

Adam was by his natural frame and diſpoſition apt and fit to know, do, and forbear all, that God would have him know, doe, and forbear, Gen. 9. 6.

Thirdly, The image of God in our affections ſtood in four things:

1. All the affections were carried to their proper objects, Adam loved, feared, and deſired nothing but what God had commanded him to love, fear and deſire.

2. They were guided by a right rule, and carried in a due proportion to their objects. Adam loved not his wife more than God.

3. They were voluntary affections, he loved a thing becauſe his will made choiſe of it.

4. They were whetſtones of the ſoul in acting.

From this Image did neceſſarily follow peace with God, fellowſhip and union. He knew God to be his Creator, and to love him, in all good things he enjoyed God, and taſted his ſweetneſſe. Mans body alſo after a ſort is an Image of Divine perfection.

The Image of God (ſay the Schoolemen) was radicaliter in anima, redundanter in corpore. Moſes ſpeaks of the whole man, when he ſaith, he made man after his Image, for the ſoul alone is not the man. The whole man is corrupt, therefore the whole man was perfect, and Solomon confirmeth it, God made man (the whole man) perfect. This integrity or rectitude was the Image of God. The whole man ſoul and body both, is redeemed by Chriſt, and the body it ſelf is ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 6. 19.

Obſerve

Obſerve firſt, The Majeſtical form of the body, of which the Heathens took notice; by the ſtructure of the body a man ſhould be taught to contemn the earth which his feet tread upon, and to ſet his heart upon Heaven, whether his eyes naturally tend.

Os homini ſublime dedit, &c. Man only hath a hand, which is the inſtrument of inſtruments. Men only have oculos variatos, eyes of divers colours, when in other living creatures (unleſs horſes) they are either like or little unlike. All other creatures but man have only four muſcles, one to turn downwards, another to hold forwards, a third to the right hand, a fourth to the left: only man hath a fifth muſcle in his eye to roll it up to God. Columb. de re Anatom. God hath ſhewed admirable power and wiſedom in the countenances of men and women, in that within little more than the compaſſe of an hand breath, he hath made ſuch variety, as that among millions of millions, there are none either much unlike or abſolutely like in all lineaments, and alſo in the variety of voices. See Sr Walter Rawleighs Ghoſt, *l.*2. *c.*10. Mr Roſs his Arcana Microcoſmi.

It was convenient for man to have an erect ſtature, 1. Becauſe the ſenſes were given to man not only to procure the neceſſaries of life, as they were to other living creatures, but alſo to know, 2. That the inward faculties may more freely exerciſe their operations, whiles the brain is elevated above all the parts of the body Aquinas part. 1. Queſt. 91. Artic. 3. he gives two more reaſons there of it.

Secondly, Gods artifice in it, *Pſal.*139. 15. * Thou haſt curiouſly wrought me, and I was wonderfully made. Vide Lactantium de opificio Dei. Materiam ſuperbat opus, of the baſeſt matter, duſt, God made the nobleſt creature.

There is more excellency of workmanſhip in the ſoul: but more variety in the body. The ſoul does more truely expreſſe God: but the body more eaſily. Dr Holyday on 1 Cor. 15.20.

* Cum primis verò Jobus & Regius Pſaltes ſtupendum illud conceptionis, formationis ac nutritionis in utero miraculum accuratius expendiſſe videntur, unde verbis admodum emphaticis, de eo loquuntur, Job 10.8,9,10,11,12. Pſaltes Pſ.139.14. Geth. *loc. commun. de conjugio. Vide illum ibid. verba Hebræa optimè, c.*8. explicantem.

Thirdly, The ſerviceableneſs of every part for its end and uſe.

In anatomical diſſections there is ſcarce any thing more admirable or artificial, than the ſtructure of a mans eye, that it may deſervedly be called a miracle of the Creator. *Hinc factum eſt, ut Anatomici, per omne ævum in demonſtranda ad oculum oculi anatome occupati fuerint, obſtacula experti ſint, atque etiamnum experiantur varia. Muſeum Wormianum, l.*4. *c.*12.

Fourthly, There is matter of humiliation, becauſe it was made of the duſt, Gen. 3.19. Job 14.18, 19. & 5.15. The Greek name makes man proud, cals him ἀνθρωπον bids him aſpire, look up, but the Hebrew [b] and Latine humble him, bids him ſtoop, look down.

Dr Clerke
[b] Adam ab Adamah, Homo ad humo. Nobiliſſimis creaturis, & inter eas homini, viliſſima nomina Deus impoſuit, tanquam frana ſuperbiæ, & humilitatis documenta. Sic & אדם Homo ab Adama, id eſt, humo. Sunt quidem & alia animantia ab humo, ſed quia non indigent iſtis documentis, nec capiunt, adeo ab humo non ſunt denominata. Amama.

Adams body was immortal conditionally, if he had not eaten of the Tree, there could be no outward cauſe of his death, for Gods protection kept that off; nor no inward cauſe, becauſe original righteouſneſs was in his ſoul, and for old age and weakneſs, the Tree of life would have preſerved him from that.

3. The whole perſon (conſiſting both of ſoul and body) was conformable to God, in reſpect of his felicity and dominion over the creatures, Gen. 1.26, 28. The Image of God doth not principally conſiſt in this, but ſecondarily, therefore though the man and woman were created perfectly after Gods Image in other reſpects, yet in this reſpect the woman had not the Image of God, as the Apoſtle ſheweth. The power which Adam had over the creatures, was not abſolute and direct (that God reſerved to himſelf) but it was for Adams uſe, then the ſtouteſt Experientia docet multò excellentius in ſtatu innocentiæ habuiſſe hominem hanc potentiam, quam in ſtatu peccati. Tunc ſubjectio animalium erga hominem fuiſſet perfecta, quæ nunc difficilis eſt, & non obtinetur niſi adhibita cura maxima & aſſiduo labore, ſunt enim quædam animalia fera & indomita, quæ nunquam cicurantur. Vide Gen. 2. 7. Uno verbo imò nec etiam uſos & leones fugaſſet Adam. Hodiè habemus quidem defenſionem, ſed planè horribilem. Opus enim eſt ad eam gladiis, haſtis, bombardis, muris, ſepibus, foſſis, & tamen vix poſſumus cum noſtris in tuto eſſe, Luth. loc. commun. 2. Claſſ. loc. 3.

and

and fierceſt beaſts would be ruled by Adam, this dominion ſince the fall is loſt for a great part, becauſe of our rebellion againſt God, the creatures rebellion ſhould mind us of ours: we may ſee ſometimes a little childe driving before him an hundred Oxen or Kine this or that way as he pleaſeth.

For the infuſing of the ſoul, it is moſt probable that the body was firſt made as the Organ or inſtrument, and then the ſoul put into it, as God did make Heaven and Earth before man was made.

God did not create all the ſouls of men at once, but he creates them daily as they are infuſed into the body, for that the reaſonable ſoul is not ex tradvce. Zanchius De Operibus Dei, part. 3. lib. 2. cap. 5. Baronius in his Philoſophia Theologiæ Ancillans. Exercit. 2. Artic. 3. Metaphyſica Generalis, Sect. 10. Diſput. 1. prove it well.

There are theſe two Queſtions to be reſolved:

1. Whether immortality was natural to Adam?
2. Whether original righteouſneſs was natural to Adam?

For the firſt. A thing is immortal four wayes:

Gerh. Confeſſ. Cathol contra Pont. par. 3. l. 2. Spec. Artic. 20. cap. 2. Vide Bellarm. de Gratia primi hominis, c. 9. Et Aquin. par. 1. qu. 97. art. 1. Affirmativam ſententiam tuentur Evangelici contra Pontificios. Vide Bellarm de Gratia primi hominis cap. 1. & 5, 6, 7. Et Strangium de voluntate & Actionibus Dei Circa peccatum l. 11. c. 28.

1. Abſolutely, ſo that there is no inward or outward cauſe of mortality, ſo God only, 1 Tim. 6. 16.

2. When it is not ſo by nature, but immortality is a perfection voluntarily put into the conſtitution of the creature by the Creator, ſo Angels are immortal.

3. Not by any ſingular condition of Nature but of Grace, ſo the bodies of the Saints glorified.

4. When it is mortal inwardly but yet conditionally it is immortal, that is, if he do his duty, and ſo Adam was immortal.

Adam before the fall was free from all danger of death, not from the nature of his body, according to which as compounded of contrary qualities, he might have been corrupted, but ex anima originaliter juſta tanquam cauſa proxima, and from the ordination of God as the remote cauſe: and that according to the promiſe of eternal life, which God had ſealed to him in Paradiſe in the Sacrament of the Tree of life.

For the ſecond Queſtion.

It was called Righteouſneſſe, becauſe by this he was righteous before God, that is, innocent, holy, which is the cauſe why the Apoſtle joyns holineſs with righteouſneſs, ſaying, who was created in righteouſneſs and true holineſs. But it is called Original, becauſe the firſt man was made in this condition, not as a private perſon, but as the Original and roote of all mankind, viz. for this end, that that righteouſneſs might be propagated by Adam to all his poſterity, as alſo on the contrary, that firſt ſin of Adam is called original, becauſe he ſinned as the fountain of mankind, Zanch. De Oper. Dei, l. 3. c. 2.

The properties of it are theſe.

First, It is original righteouſneſſe, becauſe it is the natural perfection of the whole man and all his faculties, for diſtinction ſake we call it original righteouſneſſe.

Dicitur juſtitia originalis Primò, Ratione ſui, quia in homine fuit omnium prima. Secundò, Ratione primi hominis, quia is ab origine ſua naturalem illam affectionem per modum habitus Concreati habuit.

It is ſo both in regard of it ſelf, for it was the firſt in the firſt man.

Secondly, In regard of man, becauſe he had it from his very beginning.

Thirdly, In regard of his poſterity, becauſe it was to be propagated to others.

Secondly, It is univerſal, it was the rectitude of all parts, it could not elſe be an Image of God, unleſſe it did univerſally reſemble him in all holineſſe. His underſtanding had all things for truth, his will for good, his affections for obedience.

Thirdly, Harmonious, every faculty ſtood in a right order, the will ſubject to the underſtanding, and the affections to both.

Fourthly, It was due to him, not by way of deſert, as if God did owe Adam any thing; but conditionally, ſuppoſing God made Adam to enjoy himſelf, and by way of means.

Fifthly,

Fifthly, Natural, 1. Subjectivè, that which inwardly adheres to the nature of a thing from its beginning. 2. Perfectivè, that which perfects nature for its end and actions. 3. Propagativè, when it would have been propagated in a natural way, if man had continued in innocency; but Constitutivè and Consecutivè supernatural. So Gerhard and others.

Tertiò, Ratione discriminis, a justitia ethica, Pharisaica, imputata & in choata distinguitur. Quartò, Ratione propagationis in posteros, quia nisi homo per peccatum à Deo sese avertisset & justitiam illam concreatam amisisset, in posteros fuisset propagata. Gerh. Confess. Cathol. contra Pontif. l. 2. Spec. par. 3. Art. 20. c. 2. Rivet. exercit. 6. in Gen. 1. Scholastici disputant, quod justitia originalis non fuerit connaturalis, sed ceu ornatus quidam additus homini, tanquam donum: Ut si quis formosæ puellæ coronam imponat. Corona certè non est pars virginis naturæ, sed quoddam seperatum à natura, quod ab extra accedit, & sine violatione naturæ potest iterum adimi. Quare disputant de homine & dæmonibus, quod ejsi originalem justitiam amiserint, tamen naturalia pura manserint, sicut initio condita sunt. Sed hæc sententia quia peccatum originis extenuat, ceu venenum fugienda est. Quin hoc statuimus, justitiam non fuisse quoddam donum, quod ab extra accederet, sed fuisse verè naturalem, ita ut natura Adæ esset diligere Deum, credere Deo, agnoscere Deum. Luth. loc communes. 2. Classis loc. 3.

The Papists deny that that was natural to man in innocency, and therefore they say mans nature is not corrupted by the fall, because a supernatural gift only is taken from him, all his naturals being left, which is the opinion of the Pelagians, who affirm, That the nature of man fallen is perfect before the committing of actual sins.

Paradise is spoken of in Gen. 2. 8.

The LXX. there render the Hebrew word Gan by παράδεισον, although it be manifest there is as much difference between them, as between genus and species. For Paradise was a Garden, but every Garden is not Paradise. Therefore they are distinguished Eccles. 2. 5. I made me Gardens and Paradises, or Orchards as we render it.

Paradise is taken three wayes in the Scripture.

1. For the Garden of Eden, which God himself is said to have planted, Gen. 2. 8. See Gen. 13. 10.

2. Other Gardens are understood by the name of Paradise, as Cant. 4. 13. an Orchard or Paradise of Pomegranates, and Eccl. 2. 5.

3. The word Paradise is used for the place of the blessed, Luke 24. 23. 2 Cor. 12. 2.

Therefore Austin makes a threefold Paradise.

Terrestriall, in the Garden of Eden.

Spirituall in the Church.

Celestial in a blessed life.

Some of the Ancients (as Origen, Philo) yea and of later Authors have turned all this into an Allegory, but now that it was a real corporal place, we may prove,

See Sr Walter Rawleigh in the History of the World, page 1. Multi quia locum à Mose hic descriptum reperire nusquam potuerunt, hortum, arbores, flumina, aquas, & omnia hæc in allegoriam transformarunt, quod rectè August. refellit, quamvis & ipse se idem sensisse fateatur. Alij eodem deçui errore Paradisum finxerunt proximè sphæram Lunæ in aëre suspensum. Parœus in loc. Vide Bellarm. de Gratia primi hominis, cap. 10. & 11.

Because God planted a Garden, and put Adam into it, and there went a River out of it which was divided into four streames; but these were visible, and corporeal as Euphrates and Tigris; and in the third Chapter, it is said, That Adam hid himself with the leaves of the Tree, therefore the Trees in Paradise were real and not allegorical, and lastly Adam was cast out of it. The ground of allegorizing all these things ariseth from the vanity of mans mind, which thinketh these things too low for the Spirit of God to relate, and therefore endeavours to find out many mysteries.

2. In what part of the earth it was.

Some have thought it to be the whole world, but that cannot be, for it is said,

Mihi dubium non est, terram Canaan fuisse delecta totius orbis terrarum, itaque facile illis accedo, qui eo in loco fuisse ante diluvium Paradisum putant. Solus ille locus est, in quo postea Deus voluit Ecclesiam & populum suum esse. Luth. in Gen. 10. As the Scripture borroweth the name of Tartarus from the Heathen, 2 Pet. 2. 4. so it is thought by Tertullian and Gregory Nazianzen, that the Heathens took the ground of their Elysian fields from the Scripture-Paradise. Vide Wendelini Christ. Theol. Syst. majus, lib. 1. cap 7.

God took Adam and put him into it, and likewise that he was cast out of it: Others thought Paradise to be a very high place, reaching to the very Globe of the Moon, but that cannot be habitable for the subtilty of the Air. Others (as Oleaster and Vatablus) think it was in Mesopotamia only, and that it hath lost his beauty by the floud.

A Lapide, Willet, Rivet, Zanchius, and others, say it was about Mesopotamia and Armenia.

Because,

1. There are the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris.

2. Because Eden is part of Babylonia, and this part of Mesopotamia, as is manifest from Ezek. 27. 23. Isa. 37. 12.

3. These Regions are in the East, and most pleasant, and so agree with the description of Paradise, Gen. 2.

But the safest way is not to trouble our selves any further then Moses Text, which saith it was in the Region of the East, in respect of Judea, Egypt or Arabia, and as for the limits and bounds of it, they cannot now be known. Vide Bellar. de gratia primi hominis, c. 12, 13.

Homer had his invention of Alcinous Gardens (as Justin Martyr noteth) out of Moses his description of Paradise, Gen. 2. And those praises of the Elysian fields were taken out of this story, Ver erat æternum, &c. Ovid. Metam. lib. 2.

And from the talk between Eve and the Serpent, Æsops Fables were derived.

Thirdly, Whether the Waters of the Floud did destroy it?

*Bellarmine, and generally the Papists will not admit that it was destroyed by Noahs Floud, and it is to maintain a false opinion, for they say, That Enoch and Elias (who are yet in their bodies) are the two Witnesses spoken of, and that they shall come when Antichrist shall be revealed, and then he shall put them to death; and therefore they hold that Enoch and Elias are kept alive in this Paradise which they say still remaineth; but that this is a meer fable, appeareth, because John Baptist is expresly said by Christ to be the Elias that was to come, because he came in the spirit of Elias. Therefore we hold, that whersoever Paradise was, yet in the great Floud it was destroyed, not but that the ground remaineth still, only the form, beauty and fruitfulnesse is spoiled, Gen. 7. 19. Paradise signifieth a Garden, the word being translated out of Greek into Latine, and so into French and English; In Hebrew it is called Heden, which signifieth Delights, a Garden of all manner of Delights, a place beset with all kind of fruitfull and beautifull Trees.

It is certain that Paradise was near or about Mesopotamia and Babylonia, as besides the consent of the best writers, the rivers Tigris and Euphrates which compasse Mesopotamia, and which watered the Garden, do infallibly demonstrate. Dr Crakenthorp's Defence of Constant. c. 11. Vide orationem Conradi Aslaci, Bergensis de Paradiso, & Beseldi Synops. Hist. universal. p. 3.

* De Gratia primi hominis, c. 12. & 14.

Paradise was a little model of Heaven, and a sign of the great Heaven, assuring Adam, that if he continued in obedience to God, he should be translated into Heaven, to enjoy God supernaturally, as there he did enjoy him naturally; for the Law saying, Do this and live, means it of everlasting life. So Mr Wheatley held, but Mr Ball seems to differ from him in his Book of the Covenant.

Man was to dye if he disobeyed, Gen. 2. 17. which implies strongly that Gods Covenant was with him for life if he obeyed. In severall other Scriptures the promise is annexed, This do and live, Negatio fundatur in affirmatione, the life promised, must be answerable to the death threatned, that was not only a miserable condition, but a separation from God for ever in Hell, therefore the life promised was not only a happy condition, but a translating of Adam to Heaven, and his injoying of God for ever there. How long Adam should have lived before he had been translated, is not determined. There is an innate desire in the soul after the full enjoyment of God here, this instinct was not put in men in vain, Romans 3. 23. And come short of the glory of God. The word signifies to fall short of the race, he ran for the full and perfect enjoyment of God; See Heb. 4. and what man fell short of by sinne, if he had not sinned, he should have obtained.

This

This is the received opinion of Divines; That if Adam had not ſinned, then as ſoon as the number of Saints had been accompliſhed, men ſhould have been tranſlated from the earth to heaven, from their natural life to ſpiritural life, as we read of Enoch and Elias, Heb. 11. 6. 2 King. 2. 11. Dr Hampton on Gen. 1. 26. Though Menaſſeh Ben Iſrael de fragil. hum. Sect. 12. ſaith, That common opinion, that Enoch was tranſlated with his body and ſoul to heaven, doth not take place with them, and ſaith, that R. Solomon, Abrabanel, Aben Ezra interpret Gen. 5. 24. of a ſhort death. See more there. See Kellets Miſcel. l. 1. c. 3.

There were two ſpecial Trees in it, one called the Tree of life, the other of the knowledg of good and evil.

Some ſay * it was called the Tree of life from the effect, becauſe of the hidden power and force it had [a] of ſuſtaining and prolonging mans life. Although it be a Diſpute, Whether it had this force as meat to prolong life, or as a medicine to prevent death, old-age and diſeaſes, as likewiſe whether this power in the Tree were naturall or ſupernaturall. Vide Menaſſ. Ben Iſrael de fragil. hum. Sect. 4.

Therefore others ſay it was called ſo not from the effect, but ſignification, becauſe it was an outward ſign, that God would give them immortality if they did continue.

It is queſtioned, Whether the Tree of life was a Sacrament?

Paræus anſwers, That it was a Sacrament three wayes:

Firſt, As an admonition to them, that the life which they had, they had it from God, for as often as they taſted of it, they were to remember that God was the author of life.

Secondly, As it was a ſymbol of a better life in heaven, if he did continue in obedience.

Thirdly, Sacramentally of Chriſt, as in whom Adam and Angels did obtain life, Rev. 2. 7. He is called The Tree of Life in the midſt of Paradiſe, but that is only allegorical and alluſive, ſo that what the Tree of Life was to Adam in innocency, the ſame is Chriſt to us in our corrupt eſtate.

2. The Tree of Good and Evil.

It was not ſo called from any internal form, as if it ſelf were knowing good and evil, nor from the effect, as if by eating thereof it would have procured wiſedom in man, and made him wiſer; nor yet was it called ſo from the lying promiſe of the Devil, concerning omniſcience, for God called it ſo before they met together, therefore it was named ſo from the Event, for God by this name fore-told what would follow, if man did not abſtain from it; that he ſhould experimentally know what was good, and what was evil, he ſhould practically feel what he had loſt, and what evil he had plunged himſelf into. Some have thought, that thoſe words Gen. 3. 24. ſhould not be underſtood hiſtorically but allegorically, that is, that God gave him no hopes of coming into this place again, but the Text contradicts that. Some have underſtood by Cherubims, ſome ſpecies and images of terrible creatures, as we call Scare-crows, but that is ſimple to think that Adam was ſo childiſh to be afraid of thoſe; others interpret it of the fire of Purgatory. The more probable Interpretation is, that by Cherubims are meant Angels, who did after a viſible manner ſhake up and down this fiery ſword. Moſes doth therefore call them Cherubims, becauſe the Jews knew what he meant, having ſuch forms over the Ark. Therefore it is taken for Angels, not ſimply, but as they appeared in ſome ſhape. It is a curioſity to enquire how long they ſtaid there, although it is certain they ceaſed when Paradiſe was deſtroyed, which was by the Flood.

Therefore this ſerves,

1. * For Information to inſtruct us.

* Paræus in Geneſ. 2. 7.

[a] The Poets from the Tree of Life took their Nectar; and Ambroſia, Nectar, ſignifieth making young, and Ambroſia Immortality: therefore they are ſaid to be the meat and drink of the gods.

Paræus.

Arbor ſcientiæ boni & mali ſic nominata propter eventum futurum: quia poſt ejus eſum homo per experimentum pœnæ didicit, quid intereſſet inter obedientiæ bonum & inobedientiæ malum, Aquin. part. 1. Quæſt. 102. Artic. 2. Hanc arborem hoc nomine à Deo appellatam non legimus: ſed ab eventu Moſes appellavit: quo Adamus & Heva, ſi ex hujus fructu comediſſent, æternum erant victuri, c. 3. 33. infra. Picherel. in Coſmop. Annotat.

* Corollaries from Gods goodneſſe to man in his Creation. 1. It ſerves to blame mankind for his wonderful naughtineſſe in ſtriving againſt God, who hath beſtowed ſo great and undeſerved benefits upon him. 2. Let us ſeriouſly conſider of our ſelves and of our making, that we may come to a due knowledg of God, and of our ſelves. One ſaith, the ſoul is not altogether immaterial, for what hath accidents, hath matter, nothing but that is the ſubject of accidents. 2. What is finite is material: ſeeing finiteneſſe is the attribute of matter by which it is contained within its own limits. But it ſubſiſts, lives and works, being ſeparated from the body, therefore it is immaterial.

First, That every man and woman hath a ſoul, there is a body, and a ſpirit which enlivens and acts the body for all performances of the Compoſitum, we muſt glorifie God in both, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Secondly, It is immortal by Gods appointing (but in it ſelf endable, becauſe it hath a beginning) that it may be capable of everlaſting weal or woe.

Vide Raymundi Pugionem adverſus Judæos, part. 1. cap. 4.

Thirdly, It is ſo immortal, that it admits of no ceſſation or intermiſſion: the Anabaptiſts ſay, It is aſleep when it parts from the body till the day of Reſurrection, as ſoon as it leaves the body, it goes either to Abrahams boſome, or a place of torment. This opinion of the ſouls ſleeping is repugnant to the holy Scriptures, Luke 16. 23. Phil. 1. 23. and an hereſie long ſince condemned in the Church. The ſoul lives after death, and in a ſtate of ſeparation, Pſal. 90. 10. and we flye away, that is, the ſoul as a bird out of the ſhell, Eccleſ. 12. 3. Revel. 6. 9. 2 Cor. 5. 1, 8, 9. See John 17. 22, 24. 1 Cor. 13. 12. and Biſhop Halls Inviſ. world, l. 2. Sect. 3.

It is a ſtrange impudence in the Author of the Leviathan (whoſe ignorance in Divinity conteſteth with his preſumption, and I know not which may get the victory) to deny eternity of torments unto the damned, by wreſting the expreſſe words of Scripture, and rejecting the general conſent of the whole Church. But I muſt confeſſe this Aſſertion is ſutable to another of his abominable Principles, that the rational ſoul hath no Subſiſtence out of the body, ſo that herein he is conſentaneus to himſelf, though oppoſite to all the world beſides, denying what hath been generally received, as well by the choiceſt Philoſophers in the School of nature, as by Chriſtians in the School of grace. Theſe are Doctrines well agreeing to the Title of his Treatiſe, The Kingdome of Darkneſſe. Maſter Samwaies his Devotion digeſted, pag. 227, 228. See of the ſouls immortality and inferences from it, in Maſter Jeanes his mixture of Scholaſtical Divinity with Practical, on Matth. 10. 28. p. 27. to 64.

The place of burial is called in the Greek, Coimeterion, that is, the houſe of the living, and in the Hebrew, Beth-haiaim, that is, the houſe of the living: thereby to teach us, that the body ſleepeth, and the ſouls live. Biſhop Pilkinton on the 2d of Nehemiah.

Feurier a French Jeſuite, well proves the immortality of the ſoul by reaſons from nature.

The doctrine of the ſouls immortality is ſo demonſtrable by nature, that the Ancient Chriſtian ſymbols, or rules of faith, did not expreſly declare it as an Article of the Chriſtian faith, becauſe even the Heathen Philoſophers both confeſſed and proved it. Porters God Incarnate, lib. 1. cap. 8. See more there, and Fromond, De Anima, l. 4. c. 1. and many more Chapters there.

The firſt of thoſe who brought in that putide doctrine of the ſouls ſleeping even to the laſt day, was Vigilantius, whom the Ancients therefore deſervedly called Dormitantius. Vide Doctoris Arrowſm. Tact. Sac. lib. 3. cap. 3.

It is a queſtion about the ſtate and condition of the ſouls of the faithful ſevered from their bodies, before they be joyned to the glorified bodies in the reſurrection, whether they do any thing or nothing. Not only the Anabaptiſts, but the Socinians, Weigelians, and ſome Arminians alſo exclude them from the company of the bleſſed, and teach that they do nothing, feel and underſtand nothing, but lye as it were overwhelmed and buried with a deep ſleep, which errour is common to them, with ſome of the Fathers, Irenæus, Origen, Chryſoſtome, Tertullian, Lactantius, Ambroſe, Theophilact, and others. Againſt theſe Calvin wrote an entire Tract, which he Entituled Ψυχοπανυχία, that is, the ſtate of ſouls as it were ſleeping a perpetual night, where he refutes this Errour by many Arguments.

Fourthly, At the laſt day it ſhall be united with the body, and the body raiſed up for it, and both be happy or miſerable for ever.

2. Be thankfull to God that hath given us our ſouls, and redeemed them by the bloud of his Sonne, Propter hanc Deus fecit mundum, propter hanc Filius Dei venit in mundum, Chryſoſt. Bleſs him eſpecially for ſoul-mercies, Eph. 1. 3. John 3. 2, 4. and let the ſoul praiſe him, Pſalm 103. and 104. firſt and laſt.

We ſhould love our ſouls, Pſal. 22. 26. David calleth his ſoul his darling; it is the immediate immediate work of God. See Deut. 4. 9. Pſal. 119. 175. We ſhould work out our ſalvation, Phil. 2. 13. ſalvation is worth working for, 1 Cor. 15. ult. we have been violent in the wayes of ſinne, Rom. 6. 19. in working out our damnation. Conſider that place, Matth. 16. 26.

Weigh the ſouls excellency,

1. In its Creation.

2. Redemption, in regard of the price Chriſt payed for it.

3. In regard of its capacity and uſe, it was made to know, love, fear, ſerve, and injoy God.

4. Its preheminence above the body. That is but the ſheath. All the Ordinances are for the ſoul, hear and your ſoul ſhall live, Excommunication, that his ſpirit may be ſaved, one hath but one ſoul.

Happineſſe the end is neceſſary to be attained, Luke 10. ult. and the means are limited to it, Mark 16. 16. Heb. 11. 5. Luk. 13. 5. Joh. 3. 6. Heb. 12. 24. therefore we ought to take a great deale of care of both

CHAP. IX.

Of GODS Providence.

TWO things are to be diſcuſſed about it.

1. That there is a Providence, whereby the world is governed.

2. What it is.

1. That there is a providence which governeth the world, and that nothing is done in the world without the certain and determinate counſel of God, is thus proved,

First, Faith which leans and reſts on teſtimonies of holy Writ, Pſalm 14. 2. and 33. 13. the 104. Pſalm wholly, and Pſalm 91. 8, 9, 10, 11. Acts 17. 25, 28. Epheſ. 1. 11. Heb. 1. 3. Col. 1. 17. 1 Tim. 4. 10. 1 Pet. 5. 7. At the Feaſt of Tabernacles, the Jews were wont to reade the Book of Eccleſiaſtes, principally becauſe it ſpeaks ſo much of the Works of Gods Providence.

Moſes affirmeth Gen. 2. that God reſted from all the works which he had made, that is, from creating new ſpecies, but he creates individua daily, and both governs and preſerves them, and the ſpecies or kinds of things already made, Joh. 5. 17. Requies dupliciter accipitur, uno modo pro ceſſatione ab operibus. Alio modo pro impletione deſiderij. Et utroque modo dicitur Deus requieviſſe die ſeptimo. Primo quidem, quia dei ſeptimo ceſſavit novas creaturas condere. Alio modo ſecundùm quod rebus conditis ipſe non indigebat, ſed ſeipſo fruendo beatus eſt. Aquin. part. 1. Queſt. 13. Art. 2. Providentia Latinè dicitur à videndo, at Hebraicè, ut & Latinè vox à ſenſu ad intellectum transfertur. Rivetus. In its proper ſignification it may ſeem to comprehend all the actions of God, that outwardly are of him, that have any reſpect unto his creatures, all his works that are not ad intra, eſſentially belonging to the Deity. Doctor Owens Diſplay of Armin. c. 4. See more there. The Greek word προνοια, and the Latine Providentia, are derived from knowledge. The Greek word expreſſeth the knowledge of the mind, the Latine of viſion, which is proper to the eyes, but is often refer'd to the mind.

2. Certain demonſtrative reaſons, taken

1. From the cauſes, viz. the Attributes and Nature of God.

1. There is a God: therefore providence, becauſe he is a moſt powerfull and wiſe King, Iſa. 44. 6, 7. Epicurus granted that there was a God, yet he denied providence, than which (ſaith Lactantius) what can be more repugnant? Etenim ſi eſt Deus, utique providens eſt, ut Deus; nec aliter ei poteſt divinitas attribui, niſi & præterita teneat, & præſentia ſciat, & futura proſpiciat. Lactant. de ira Dei.

Vide Leſſium de numine ejuſque providentia l. 1. c. 1, 2, 3. See Job 22. 13. Pſal. 94. 7. Many of the Heathens believed that there was a providence, and had a reſpect to it. The Stoicks defended it, Epictetus and Seneca aſſerted it.

Therefore Gaſſendus (who wrote ſix Books, De vita & moribus Epicuri, and vindicates him other waies) ſaith, is fuit Epicuri graviſſimus lapſus, quod non ſapiens quemadmodum immortalis, beataque natura ſibi habere, aut alteri exhibere negotium poſſet, cenſuerit Deum non gerere nec generalem totius mundi, nec ſpecialem hominum curam.

2. The omnipotent will of God, whereby all things are done, without which nothing can come to paſs.

3. His

3. His infinite wisdom, whereby he can be present with all things which are done in his Kingdome, Ephes. 1. 11.

4. His Justice in distributing rewards and punishments, and goodnesse whereby he communicateth himself to the creatures.

God by his Prophet infallibly foretold future contingents.

5. His fore-knowledg of all things, unchangeably depending on the counsel and decree of God, Prov. 15. 3.

6. He regards the ends of things, therefore also the means to those ends.

7. He is the first cause: therefore on him depend the second causes. There is a concurrence of the first cause with all the acts of the second causes, Causa prima concurrit immediatè cum omni agente creato, say the Schoolmen. Dan. 3. 27. The Lord took not away actum primum, the nature of fire, but actum secundum, suspended his own concurrence.

2. From the Effects: the Works of God, Job 12. 7.

The Devil would else overturn all, and the godly would be of all men most miserable, Job. 16. 20.

1. The most wise order of things both natural and politick, which could not be setled, much lesse preserved by blind nature, chance or fortune. Aristotle judiciously observes, if any one should come out of darknesse into this light of the world which he never saw before, nor heard of, and should consider the courses of things, he could not doubt that all these things were ordered by the care and counsel of a most wise and powerful Prince.

Secondly, Natural notions, or the Law of Nature in the difference of honest and dishonest things.

Thirdly, Peace or torment of Conscience from keeping or violating the Law.

Fourthly, Punishments and rewards agreeable to mens deeds: which prove there is some Judg of the world, and revenger of sinnes, whose severity we cannot shun, Psal. 58. 11.

Fifthly, Heroick Motions, Vertues, and singular Gifts given by God to Princes, Magistrates, Inventers of Arts, Artificers and others, for the common benefit of mankind.

Lastly, By the same reasons it is proved, that there is both a God and Providence.

2. What Providence is?

It is the execution of Gods decree, whereby he upholdeth and governeth all things according to the counsel of his will.

It is an external and temporal action of God, whereby he preserveth, governeth and disposeth all and singular things which are and are done, both the creatures, and the faculties, and actions of the creatures, and directeth them both to the mediate ends, and to the last end of all, after a set and determinate manner, according to the most free Decree and Counsel of his own will; that himself in all things may be glorified.

It is continuata quadam creatio; Creation gives esse primò, Providence esse porrò. Verum est dicere de quavis Creatura, quod quamdiu est, Creatur. Durand. Cernitur in generatione rerum, optimus, aternus, & omnipotens Deus, seu natura numen sufficiendum. Doctoris Harvei exercit. 41. de Generat. Animal. Ea est providentia, qua Deus, ad gloriam suam, universa actiones suas externas earumque circumstantias, decrevit ab aterno: & tandem exequitur. Gomarus de Provid. Dei cap. 3. Providentia est aternum, sapientissimum, justissimum atque immutabile consilium sive decretum Dei: quo res singulas à se conditas ad suam ipsius gloriam & electorum suorum salutem liberrimè gubernat. Piscat. loc. 6. de Provid. Dei. Aphorism. 1.

God observeth all our particular speeches and actions, seem they never so small and trifling. God therefore pleaseth of purpose to put into writing things that seem not otherwise worthy the registring. See Psalm 104. and 147.

1. The matter or object of Gods providence, is the whole world, and whatsoever is in it, 2 Chron. 16. 9. Prov. 15. 3. for God cares for, and governs all things, Substances, Accidents, things great and little, necessary and contingent, good and evil, Gen. 45. 5, 7. Heb. 1. 3. Nehem. 9. 6. Acts 4. 48. The care of God for the bruit beasts, living creatures, and all Meteors, is discribed, Psalm 135. Job 37. 2. and 38. Matth. 6. 26. It extends to all necessary actions, to such as are necessary in their causes, Matth. 5. 45. and 6. 26, 28, 30. Also concerning voluntary things and actions of men, good and bad, as Prov. 21. 1. and 20. 24. and 16. 1. Jer. 10. 23. Psalm 139. 1. Psalm 33. 15. Concerning things that are contingent, Exod. 21. 13. Prov. 16. 33. and 21. 1. 1 Kings 32. 34. 2 Kings 7. 20. Matth. 20. 29, 30.

20. 29, 30. There is a prophetical adumbration of the Divine Providence in the first Chapter of Ezekiel. All good actions are ex providentia tantùm ex cauſa, evil actions are only ſecundùm providentiam. He not only works by, but in good inſtruments, in evil he works only by them.

The leaſt and ſmalleſt things are by the God of Heaven ordered and diſpoſed of according to his own pleaſure and wiſdom for very good purpoſe; not ſo much as a Sparrow falls to the ground without Gods providence; he ſaith, The hairs of our head are all numbred. Qui numeravit porcarum ſetas, multò magis numerabit ſanctorum capillos. Tertul. He feeds the young Ravens, and hears them when they cry. Some ſay, when the young Ravens are a little grown up, and too numerous for to feed, the Dam caſts them off, and that the Lord by his providence feeds them ſo caſt off. Therefore Cicero was out when he ſaid, Magna Dei curant, parva negligunt; and the Poet,

Non vocat exiguis rebus adeſſe Jovi.

Qui curat Angelos in Cœlo, curat vermiculos in cœno.

The Reaſons of this are theſe:

First, God is Infinite in all excellencies, infinite in wiſedome: there may as much wiſdom be ſeen in little as in great things: all things in the world, yea even all things which might have been as well as thoſe that have fallen out, are ſubject to his wiſedom and power, nothing ſo ſmall, but it is a fit ſubject of knowing and ordering.

God is maximus in maximis. Matth. 10. 29, 30. Gods providence is chiefly exerciſed about the nobleſt creatures Angels and men. Pſal. 36. 6. Pſalm 10. 4. David ſubjects not only the Heaven and Earth, the Clouds, Winds Angels, Mountains, Rivers, and other noble creatures, to the divine providence, but alſo Fouls, Beaſts, Sparrows, Storks and their houſes, and ſo concludes with that Epiphonema, v. 24. See alſo to the ſame purpoſe, Pſal. 148. The Lord kept the very Birds of the air, in pay under Godfrey of Bovillon. For who can be but aſtoniſht, to hear it told, how, when he beſieged Jeruſalem, the Sultan having taught Pigeons, to carry meſſages, diſpatched one of them with a Letter, which ſhe bore under her wings, to give ſome advice to the beſieged; but Providence would have it, that a Hawk ſeizing on her, juſt over the Chriſtian Army, took her, and made her bring her information to the Chriſtians, touching the enemies deſign. Dawbeny his Hiſtory and Policy reviewed. See Petavius de Deo, deique proprietatibus, lib. 8. cap. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Prov. 21. 10. God is an underſtanding Eſſence, preſent in all places at all times, with all perſons, therefore he muſt needs obſerve and know all their motions. 2. All things are ſpoken and done by an influence of power derived from him. He is the moſt principal worker of every action, without a ſpecial and immediate operation of whoſe might the ſecondary cauſe would be dead and powerleſs. 3. God hath given us a law to order men in all their words and carriages, little and great. 4. He is the Judg of all the world; he muſt judg certainly, infallibly and perfectly.

Secondly, There is a neceſſary connexion and mutual dependance between great and ſmall things, the one ſupporting and upholding the other, ſo that it is not poſſible to conceive how any thing ſhould be ordered by God if all things were not, the little things being like the pins of a houſe which hold the building together, or the hinges of a great gate, upon which the whole is moved.

Thirdly, The meaneſt creature works for an end which it underſtands not, Amos 9. 3. a Serpent doth not bite without a command, the Lion that ſlew the Prophet but medled not with his carcaſe.

Object. Theſe things are ſo ſmall, as it is an abaſement to the Divine Majeſty to intermeddle with them.

Anſw. It is his higheſt commendation to be Infinite, ſo that nothing can be hid from his knowledge: the Lords manner of working in the ſmalleſt things is ſo wiſe and excellent, as it ſerveth ſufficiently to free him from all imputation of baſeneſſe in regarding them. No Philoſopher would count it a baſe thing to be able to diſpute accurately of the nature of a flea, and to give a reaſon of its making and working: why therefore ſhall it be an impeachment to Gods glory, in a more perfect manner then ewe an conceive of both to know and guide them?

Object. 1 Cor. 9. 9. Doth God take care for Oxen?

Anſw. He doth not take care for Oxen chiefly and principally, but ſubordinately as his care is toward the other brute creatures, Pſalm 36. 7. and 147. 9. Paul doth not ſimply exempt the Oxen from Gods care, but denieth that the

the Law, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the Ox that treadeth out the Corn, was eſpecially written for Oxen, but rather for men; that they may underſtand what their duty is to the Miniſters of the Goſpel, whoſe labours they make uſe of.

The government of the world is in the hand of Chriſt as Mediator, Iſa. 49. 8. John 5. 22. When Adam fell by the breach of the Covenant, the world muſt elſe have periſhed, lying under the curſe of the firſt Covenant. God the Father looking on man as a ſinner could not diſpenſe himſelf immediately any more. He therefore hath committed a twofold Kingdom to Chriſt as Mediator.

There is,

1. The univerſall Kingdome of God by which he governs all creatures.
2. His ſpecial Kingdome, whereby he rules over his Church.

The Kingdome of Providence is Regnum Dei Creatoris, the Kingdome of Grace, Regnum Chriſti Mediatoris.

All wicked men are Subjects of his Kingdome of Providence, only the godly of the Kingdome of Grace, Eph. 1. 22.

All the adminiſtrations of the Kingdome of Gods Providence are for the benefit of the Subjects of the Kingdome of Grace.

Firſt, He is King of Saints, Rev. 4. 3.

Secondly, King of Nations, Jeremiah 10. 7. Daniel 4. 33, 34. Pſalm 103. 19. Chriſt rules and governs the world by his Spirit, which Tertullian cals Vicarium Chriſti, Ezekiel 1. 20. He hath as great a hand in the providentiall as ſpirituall Kingdome, in the governement of Kingdomes and Nations, as well as in the hearts of his people, Zach. 4. 7. The Angels are the inſtruments of the Spirit, and uſed by Chriſt in his providential Kingdom, theſe are the living creatures, compare Ezek. 1. 13. with 10. 20. They 1. rule all things for the Saints, Heb. 1. they make one Church with them, 2. They pray for them, Zech. 1. 11.

2. The kinds of Gods Providence.

1. The Providence of God, is either

See 1 Chron. 29. 11. Pſalm 22. 29. Matth. 28. 18. Acts 10. 36.

1. General and common to all creatures, that whereby God taketh care of the world, and all things therein according to their nature, Acts 17. 25. Heb. 1. 3. Gen. 9. 1, 2, 3. Pſal. 36. 6.

The Saints are under Gods peculiar providence. Zach. 2. 18.

2. Special, that which doth peculiarly appertain to creatures endued with reaſon and underſtanding, viz. Men and Angels; and among them he looks chiefly to his Elect with a fatherly care, 1 Tim. 4. 10. and of this Providence is that place before-noted, 1 Cor. 9. 9. to be underſtood, 1 Pet. 1. 5.

All Gods diſpenſations to them proceed from his infinite love. The Lord orders every thing for their good, Pſal. 106. 46. Nothing can do them hurt, Pſalm 46. 1. Luke 10. 19. Iſaiah 54. 17. He denies them no mercy they are fit for, and exerciſeth them with no afflictions but what they need, 1 Pet. 1. 5. If he deny them their choice, he chooſeth better for them, as he denied Moſes Canaan, but gave him a ſight of it, and Heaven alſo. All his actions towards wicked men, as well as toward themſelves are for their advantage.

There are ſome precious Texts of Scripture, which ſet out Gods ſpecial care of his own people, Iſaiah 49. 15. and 40. 11. and 27. 2, 3. Pſal. 125. 2. Exod. 25. 20. Mal. 3. 17.

Gods ſpecial Providence is ſeen,

1. In Marriages, Geneſis 24. per totum, 3d and 4th Chapters of Ruth, Proverbs 19. 14.

2. In Peace and War, therefore he is ſaid to be a man of war, Exodus 15. 3. the ſword is called the ſword of the Lord, Jer. 47. 6. See 14. 17. and the God of peace, See 2 Chron. 20. 30.

3. In diſpoſing Kings and Kingdomes, Prov. 21. 1. 2 Sam. 24. 1. Dan. 2. 21. & 4. 17, 18. & 5. 28.

4. In ſending and removing the Goſpel, Acts 16. 6, 7. Rev. 2. 16.

5. In giving the Spirit and his Graces, John 3. 8. Matth. 13. 11. & 11. 25. 1 Cor. 4. 7.

6. In

6. In giving Heaven, and casting into Hell, Rom. 6. ult. Rev. 1. 18.

The Lord hath promised his people a special interest in temporal salvation, Isa. 26. 1. & 60. 8. the Devil envies this, and complains of it, Job 1. 20. This peculiar providence in temporal salvation consists in these things:

1. Their temporal salvation flows from electing love, the same principle that their eternal salvation, Isaiah 43. 4.

2. It is grounded on the highest relation, Exodus 4. 22, 23. Jeremiah 31. 20. and 24. 3.

3. It is grounded on a promise, Psalm 119. 41.

4. It flows from the Headship and Priesthood of Christ, Acts 7. 56. Ezekiel 4. 19.

5. It comes out of Sion, Psalm 14. 7. & 53. ult. they have it as a return of Prayer, and a fruit of their communion with God in Ordinances.

6. It is a reward of their graces, Psalm 91. 9, 14.

7. They have the presence of God with them, Isaiah 43. 2. Daniel 3. 25.

8. All their salvation works for their good, Isaiah 4. 3. Rom. 8. 28.

2. Gods providence is either, 1. Mediate, when God governeth creatures by creatures, as by means and instruments.

By, 1. Good Angels, Heb. 1. 14. Psalm 34. 7.

2. Evil Angels, 1 Kings 22. 22.

3. By the Heavens and Earth, Hos. 2. 21, 22.

4. By the brute Creatures.

5. By godly people, especially good Magistrates, Rom. 13. Constantine the great, and Theodosius.

6. By evil People, and Magistrates.

But God useth them,

1. Not necessarily for want of power in himself, but of his own Free-will in the abundance of his goodnesse. Whatsoever the Lord works by means, he can work by his own immediate hand without means. He is Independent in working as well as being. The Effect shall be more gloriously produced by his own hand immediately, then by the concurrence of second causes.

The creatures are instrumentum arbitrarium not necessarium.

2. God well useth evill instruments besides and beyond their own intention, as the Jews, Acts 2. 23. and Josephs brethren, Gen. 45. 5.

2. Immediate, when God himself without the ministry of the creatures doth preserve and govern things; this is called the making bare of his arm, Isa. 52. 2. Thus the Apostles were called, Gal. 1. 1. thus God made the world immediately without any instruments.

Though the Lord delights to use means in his providential administrations, yet he worketh sometimes without them.

Firstly, To discover his own almighty power, the hearts of men would else be apt to be terminated in the creature.

Secondly, To keep up in the remembrance of his people a creating power. God hath the same power in the administration that he had in the Creation of all things.

Thirdly, To shew that he useth the creatures voluntarily not necessarily. Hab. 3. 17, 18.

Fourthly, To accustome our hearts in the meditation of Heaven, when all means shall cease, and God shall be all in all.

3. Gods Providence is,

1. Ordinary and usual, when God governeth the world and all things of the world according to the order and laws which himself set in the Creation.

2. Extraordinary and unusual, when he worketh either against or beside that order so appointed, as in working miracles, Psalm 36. 6. Rom. 11. 36.

He is the governor of nature, else he could not cross nature. Neh. 9. 6. Heb. 1. 3. Act. 17. 28. Col. 1. 16.

3. The Degrees and Parts of Gods Providence:

Some say the providence of God consists in four things,

1. In his prescience or foreknowledge.

2. In his preordaining of all things.

3. In his sustentation of all things.
4. In his government of all things.

Others make two parts of it, Conservation or Sustentation, and Gubernation.

Tres sunt gradus divinæ providentiæ.
1. Conservatio, actio Dei, qua essentias Creaturarum quoad species vel individua, continuat, eorumque agendi vires conservat.
2. Gubernatio, actio, qua pro summa sua autoritate, potentia & sapientia, de rebus omnibus disponit easque pro arbitrio suo regit.

1. Conservation, Job 12. 14, 15, Psalm 44. 2. It is that whereby God doth uphold the Order, Nature, Quantity and Quality of all and every creature both in their kind and in particular, until their appointed end, Psal. 19. 1, 2. & 36. 6. & 65. 2. Psal. 135. 6, 7. & 136. 25. He conserves those things quoad species, which are subject to death in their individua, as Trees, Herbs, bruit Beasts, Men; He preserves things quoad individua, which are incorruptible, as Angels, Stars. This sustentation or preservation of all things in their being, is rightly by the Schools called Divina manutenentia, Acts 17. 28.

2. Government, it is that whereby God doth dispose and order all things according to his own will and pleasure, so that nothing can come to passe otherwise then he hath determined, Psalm 33. 13, 14, 15. Eccles. 8. 6. Psalm 75. 6, 7. Gubernatio quâ prospicit actioni rei ad finem, Dan. 4. 30, 31, 34. conservatio quâ prospicit esse rei.

3. Ordinatio, qua Deus pro admiranda sua sapientia & potentia omnia in ordinem redigit, fines certos & bonos constituendo, & media ad fines disponendo, & disposita regendo, Isa. 10. 6, 7. Wendelin.

It is a great work of God to continue a succession of living creatures in the world Psalm 104. 30. This is that for which God took order in the beginning; when having made the several things, he bad them Increase and multiply, and fill the face of the earth, Gen. 1. 22. God challengeth this work to himself in his speech to Job 39. 1. One generation comes and another goes. It is noted as an act of Divine blessing to increase the fruits of the Cattle and the flocks of sheep and kine, Deut. 28. 4. Psalm 107. 38.

Reasons. 1. If this work were not wrought, the world would be empty of living creatures within one age: Beasts, Birds and Fishes, and all would fail within a few years, and so should men be deprived of that help and benefit which they enjoy by them.

Secondly, The power of propagating kinds is a wonderful work no lesse then that of Creation, done by a wisdom and power infinitely surpassing all the wisdom and power of all men.

Let us sanctifie God in our hearts by contemplating this great work. We see the truth of one part of the narration of Scripture, in the increasing and multiplying of creatures, and we see it done by a secret and hidden way, let us therefore believe his promise. Can God promise any thing to us more exceeding our reason, to conceive how it should be effected, then it exceeds our reason to think how the kinds of things are increased and continued in the world for so many hundreds of years? We can see no reason how an egge by the Hens sitting upon it for a few dayes should be made a Sparrow, Starling, Hen, or other Bird.

God prepareth fit nourishment for all the creatures to eat, and conveyeth it to each of them in that quantity and season which is fittest for them, Psalm 104. 27, 28. & 145. 15. & 147. 9. & Psalm 136. 25.

Reasons. He that provideth food for all, must know their number, their nature and places of abode, and their several needs, and he that knows these particulars, must be none other but God; he must know the quantity of the thing provided for food, and the quality of it, and the season of it, and none can do these things but an infinite Essence, that is to say, a God. 2. God in providing for the Creatures, provideth for man who feedeth on them, and he declareth his own wisdom and goodness in continuing the kinds of things, and continuing them in welfare.

This should teach us faith in Gods promises, by which he hath undertaken to feed and to provide for us, so our Saviour argues Matt. 6. 26.

Object. The adversity of the good, and prosperity of the wicked seem to oppose

Gods

Gods providence. If there were any providence, God would see that it should be Bonis bene, & malis male: si Deus est, unde mala, si non est, unde bona?

This hath troubled the wiſeſt of the Heathens, and the beſt of the Chriſtians. See Pſalm 73. 16. Jer. 12. 1. Hab. 1.

Anſw. There is no man abſolutely good or abſolutely evil, but as the beſt have ſome evil, ſo the worſt have ſome good, and therefore God will puniſh that evil which is in the good with temporal puniſhments, and give temporal bleſſings to the evil for the good that is in them: that ſeeing all good muſt be rewarded with good, and all evil with evil: the good of the good might have an everlaſting reward of good; and on the contrary, the evil of the evil might have an everlaſting reward of evil.

He ſpares the wicked, and rewards the good. God turns the miſery of the godly to their ſpecial good, and the proſperous eſtate of the wicked is an occaſion of their woe.

Conſider ſix things about the proſperity of the wicked.

1. No wicked man ſhall alwayes proſper, God hath an eternity to puniſh him in, Eccleſ. 8. 12. conclude not thence, there is no God, but ſurely there will come a day of judgment.

2. All wicked men do not proſper. See the Theater of Gods Judgements; many of the perſecuting Emperours died by a violent death.

3. This proſperity is all the Heaven he ſhall have.

4. It is a curſe to him, he is fatted for the ſlaughter.

5. Is often under ſpiritual plagues.

6. For good reaſons God ſuffers him to proſper for a while.

The godly are many times brought to great ſtraights:

1. That their ſufficiency may be in God alone, and that they may live by Faith.

2. That he may make them partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, Rom. 8. 29.

3. Though they be in wants, God is all-ſufficient to them in the loſſe of all things, 2 Cor. 6. 10. Hoſea 14. 3. The wicked often have great abundance, Pſalm 73. 7. but they receive theſe things ex largitate, from an overflowing bounty, not from any intereſt and propriety in God. 2. Theſe things are their portion, Pſalm 17. 14. they are but ſolatium to the godly, and præmium to them, as Proſper ſpeaks, as afflictions are juſti exercitium, and injuſti ſupplicium, ſaith he. 3. Theſe outward things are often their ſnare, Job 20. 22.

Conſectaries from Gods Providence. Satis conſtat Epicurum, quemadmodum animorum immortalitatem, ita Dei Providentiam ſuſtuliſſe. Voſſius. in Maimon. de Idol cap. 2. Vide Crakanth. de Prov. Dei.

1. It refutes the fancy of Atheiſts and Epicures, which pretend that the obſervation of ſuch ſlender matters, holds no correſpondence with Gods greatneſſe. Ariſtotle ſaid, It was as unfit for Gods knowledge to deſcend into theſe inferiour things, as for a Prince to know what is done in the Kitchin. Whereas it is Gods greateſt greatneſſe to be Infinite, the light of the Sunne extends to every little hole. 2. Some ſay he cares for univerſal things only, and not ſingular; but then he ſhould not care for himſelf, and his Knowledge ſhould not be Infinite. He takes care for all things, as if they were but one, and for every thing as if that one were all.

Some abuſe that paſſage, to take away the Providence of God, by which he governs men, and all things in the world, according to his pleaſure, viz. The Heavens are the Lords, but the Earth hath he given to the Sonnes of Men.

Secondly, We muſt admire and adore the excellency of God which knoweth all things. David contemplating this point, confeſſeth this knowledge is too wonderfull for him.

Gods Providence is like a well-drawn Picture which eyeth each in the room.

Thirdly, Let us often put our ſelves in minde of this truth, that it may

O tu bone Omnipotens, qui ſic curas Unumquemque noſtrum tanquam ſolum cures, & ſic omnes tanquam ſingulos. Auguſt. Confeſ. lib. 3. cap. 11. His Providence is converſant about ſinne; but without ſinne. The ſtory of Joſeph is one of the ſtrict Draughts of Providence, a lye caſt him into Priſon, and a Dream ſtrict him out.

work in us a reverent care of ordering all our words and actions aright in his ſight, that nothing may ſlip from us unworthy his eye and ear, offenſive to his moſt great and pure Majeſty, and all-ſeeing eye. How carefull are we of our ſpeeches and actions, when we know that they are marked by ſome one of note and quality?

Fourthly, God hath a general providence about all things, yea even in ſinnes. God determines ſinne in regard of time and meaſure, and orders it: and evils of puniſhment, Job 1.21. & 2.10. The Lord hath taken away, when the Sabeans ſpoiled him. Amos 3.6. Is there evil in a City, and the Lord hath not done it.

God preſerves the perſons and eſtates of his people in evil dayes. They are called The hidden ones, Pſal. 81.3. See Eſay 26.12.

Eſther 6. That the King ſhould not ſleep that night, and that then he ſhould call for a Book rather than any thing elſe, and that Book of the Chronicles, and that in that Book he ſhould light on that place which ſpecified Mordecai's ſervice.

First, The Lord decrees their preſervation from eternity; there is an election to preſervation as well as to ſalvation: See Eſay 4.3. Daniel 12.2.

Secondly, In evil times the Lord ſets his mark upon them, Ezekiel 9. & Revelations 7. he will order all things ſo that the judgement ſhall not come till they be ſecured.

Thirdly, He ſo orders all things that every thing ſhall tend to their deliverance.

Fourthly, The Lord will ſpeak to the hearts of thoſe that are the inſtruments of vengeance, that they ſhall ſhew kindneſſe to them; the great rule of God in the world is over the ſpirits of men, Jeremy 39.11,12.

Fifthly, Sometimes God raiſeth up the ſpirits of his people that they overcome their oppreſſours, Eſay 41.15. Zechary 16.3.

Sixthly, By ordering of counſels, reports and apprehenſions.

We ſhould:

1. Own providence.
2. Eye providence.
3. Depend upon providence, Pſal. 91.3. & 118.6.
   1. God only is a fit perſon to depend upon.
   2. Nothing ingageth him more to bleſſe us, than when we depend on him, Proverbs 3.6. Pſalm 37.5. & 52.6,7.
   3. We muſt depend upon him whether we will or no.
   4. Caſt all our unneceſſary burdens upon God.
   5. Treaſure up Gods providences.
   6. Marriage various providences, Pſalm 107. ult. We ſhould ſtudy what our preſent duty is, and what our carriage ought to be under providence, Micah 6.9 Heb. 12.11. Geneſis 45.8.

A Philoſopher could ſay in danger of ſhipwtuck in a light ſtarry night, Surely I ſhall not periſh there are ſo many eyes of providence over me.

We ſhall never feelingly applaud and acknowledge Gods wiſdom, juſtice, goodneſſe, or other excellencies, if we contemplate not the exerciſe of them in the works of his providence, but in obſerving theſe, we ſhall ſurely attain an high eſteem of him, and be ready to confeſſe his worth. When Gods works imprint not in our hearts a reverent fear of him, a hearty love to him, a confident truſting in him, a dutifull ſubmiſſion to him, and the like vertues, they are fruitleſſe to us, and we receive no profit by them.

In reſpect of God, there is no confuſion, but he rules wonderfully in the midſt of all diſorder that ſeemes to be in the world, wiſely diſpoſing of the ſame to the glory of his great Name, Eccleſ. 3.7. & 3.17. Eſay 26. 20, 21, Job 21.30.

Micha 2.10. It teacheth us thankfulneſſe and patience, if things make for us, to praiſe God; if againſt us, to be humbled.

We

We should desire that God may have his end in every providence. The main thing God seemed to intend in all Jobs troubles, was to glorifie his Soveraignty.

If thou beast hungry and in penury, murmur not, nor repine, but say with the blessed Martyr, If men take away my meat, God will take away my stomach. Merlin during the Massacre at Paris, some fortnight together, was nourished with one egge a day laid by an Hen that came constantly to the Hay-mow where he lay hid in that danger. The whole power almost of France being gathered together against the City Rochel, and besieging them with extremity, who defended the Town, God in the time of famine and want of bread, did for some whole moneths together daily cast up a kind of fish unto them out of the Sea, wherwith so many hundreds were relieved without any labour of their own. Civil Wars of France, Chap. 12.

Be of good comfort Brother (said Ridley to Latimer) for God will either assuage the fury of the fire, or else strengthen us to abide it.

Mrs Drake had a custome in tumbling over the Bible, to put her finger suddenly on some one verse as it hit; saying, Now whatsoever my finger is upon, is just my case, whatsoever it be, and my doom. But the Lord directed all her fingers so pat, that looking upon the verse, still it was found, encouraging and comfortable, she lighted at last on Esay 40.27. Mrs Drake Revived.

In the Longobardian Story of Paul the Deacon, it is reported, that Agilmond the second King of Lombard, riding by a fish-pond, saw seven young children sprawling in it, whom their unnatural mothers (as the Author thinketh) had thrown into it not long before. Amazed whereat, he put his hunting-spear amongst them, and stirred them gently up and down; which one of them laying hold on, was drawn to Land, called Lamissus, from the word Lama, which is the language of that people, and signifies a fish-pond; Trained up in that Kings Court, and finally made his Successour in the Kingdom. Dr Heylins Historia quinq. Articularis part. 2. c. 7.

In the time of the Massacre at Paris, there was a poor man, who for his deliverance crept into a hole, and when he was there, there comes a Spider and weaves a cob-web before the hole; when the murtherer came to search for him, saith one, Certainly he is got into that hole: No, saith another, he cannot be there, for there is a cob-web over the place; and by this means the poor man was preserved. The Civil Wars of France, ch. 8.

When Mr Samuel Heron (that godly Minister of the West lay a dying) he having many children, and little to leave them, his wife fell a weeping, whereupon he comforted her, and told her, That God would provide for the young Ravens, and so for the young Herons, which some thought too light a speech from so grave a man; but it was a prophetical speech, as appeared afterwards. See Mr Fullers Good thing be in wrath always, Mr Salters 6th.

Let us observe the Usual acts of Gods providence among us. He studies not the Scripture as he should, who does not [illegible] we should compare Gods providential [illegible] with what we see in his works.

We should apply providences to our selves, Gen. 42.21. Jonah 1.12. and take heed of crossing providence, Acts 11.17. & 27.24.

There is a three-fold vision of God, in his Word, Works, and in his Sonne; answerable to our vision of God, will be our communion with him.

The very providence of God is sometimes called Prudence:

Nullum numen abest, si sit Prudentia, sed nos
Te facimus Fortuna Deam, Cœloque locamus. Juven. Sat. 10.

Prudence in man is a vertue some way like Providence in God. Prudens dicitur quasi porro videns. Isid. in lib. Etym.

Austin

Eliz. Trans. Vide Mistaine universelle Dr Aubigne Tome premier, l. 3. c. 1. fol. a. p. 371. 372. & c. 4. p. 379.

I trust God which hitherto hath preserved and led me by the hand, will not now of his goodnesse suffer me to go alone. Q. Eliz. Stows Chron. See Dr Gaudens Memorials of B. Bromrig. p. 211, 212.

Job 36.24. Psal. 106.2. & 14.2. Psal. 92.4, 5. Psal. 107. ult. Psal. 48.8.

By a due respect to Gods providence, we give him,
1. The glory of the first cause of all events.
2. Of his absolute Soveraignty.
3. Acknowledge our dependance upon him.
Crak. de prov. Dei.

Austin preaching once forgat what he had purposed to utter, and so made an excursion from the matter in hand, and fell into a discourse against the Manichees. Possidonius and others dining with him that day, Austin told them of it, and asked them whether they observed it. They answered, that they observed it, and much wondered at it. Then Austin replied, Credo quòd aliquem errantem in populo Dominus per nostram oblivionem & errorem curari voluit. Two dayes after one came to Austin before others, falling at his feet, and weeping, confessing also that he had many years followed the Heresie of the Manichees, and had spent much money on them; but the day before, through Gods mercy by Austins Sermon, he was converted, and then was made Catholick.

Austin travelling on the way mistook it, and thereby saved his life, escaping an ambush of the Donatists. See especial providence in Mr Clarks Life of Mr Dod, p. 411. and of Mr Fox in his own life before his 1st volume of Acts and Monuments.

See Mr Thomas Whites Treatise of the Power of Godliness, Chap. 15. many rare stories of Gods providence, especially pag. 389, 390, 391.

Totum vitæ meæ curriculum plenum est mirandarum divinarum liberationum ex magnis malis, periculis, calamitatibus, nullum elementum est à quo non infestatus sum. Scultet. præfat. ad curriculum vitæ.

The End of the third Book.

THE

THE FOVRTH BOOK. OF THE Fall of Man, OF Sin, Original & Actual.

Chap. I.

Of the Fall of MAN.

HAving handled three principal heads of Divinity, viz. The Scriptures, God, and The Works of God; I shall now proceed to speak of Mans Apostasie and Restauration, or of the Fall and Recovery of Man.

There is a four-fold estate of man to be considered.

1. That happy estate wherein he was made, *Eccl.*7.31.
2. That miserable estate whereto he fell, Rom. 3.23,24. and 5.12.
3. That renewed estate whereto by grace he is called, 1 *Pe.*1.3.
4. That glorious estate which is in Heaven reserved for him, 1 John 3.2.

Having spoken already of his estate of Innocency or primitive condition, I shall now speak of his corrupt estate, in which I shall consider,

1. The cause of it, the Devils temptation, and our first Parents yielding to it.
2. The parts of it, sinfulness of nature and life, and the punishment of sin here and hereafter.
3. The properties of it, { 1. General; 2. Irremediable.

Though I shall not perhaps handle the last.

Res adeo cognitu necessaria atque utilis, ut in d'norum istorum Adami Christique recta notitia, à quo primo peccatum & maledictio, ab altero gratia omnis & salus, summam religionis bene constituat, Augustinus, Hornbeek Anti-Socin. lib. 3. cap. 3. Sect. 1. Gen.3.15. Eccl. 7. ult.

The

The Apoſtaſie of man is his Fall from the obedience due to God, or the tranſgreſſion of the Law preſcribed by God.

In which two things are conſiderable.

1. The tranſgreſſion.
2. The propagation of it.

Cauſa prima peccati erat Diabolus, 2 Cor. 11. 3. ſecunda Adam Rom. 7. 14. and 5. 12. Attende ordinem, progreſſum humana perditionis. Primò Deus dixerat: Quacunque die comederitis ex eo, morte moriemini. Deinde mulier dixit: Ne fortè moriamur. Noviſſimè ſerpens dixit, Nequaquam moriemini. Deus affirmavit, mulier quaſi ambigendo illud dixit, diabolus negavit. Lomb. lib. 2. diſtinct. 21. Rev. 12. 9. and 20. 2. Adæ peccatum primum non fuerit, quod fructum ederit; peccatum antè conceperit, quo proleſſus & quodammodo protractus ad edendum fuit. Cumque eo animo eſſet, ut fructum omnino non emiſſet, tamen peccaſſet graviter, quemadmodum quidam etiam S. bolaſti ci concedunt. Sed hujus peccati extremum quaſi actus fuit, odiſſe quod vetitum erat. Whitakerus lib. 1. de peccato originali cap. 14. Tranſgreſſionis perpetratio conſummata fuit in eſu fructus arboris prohibitæ, quæ dicta fuit arbor ſcientiæ boni & mali: ſed hujus inobedientiæ primus motus ac gradus neceſſariò antecedebat externum illum actum comeſtionis: ita ut rectè dicere liceat, hominem fuiſſe peccatorem, antequam externum illum actum comeſtionis perfecerat. Peccatum illud fuit conſummatum, quoad humani generis defectionem in Adamo. Adam enim propriè fuit principium humani generis, non Eva; Hinc eſt quod de ſecundo Adamo legimus in Scripturis, ſed non de ſecunda Eva. Ames. medul. lib. 1. cap. 11.

Our firſt Parents being ſeduced by Satan, ſinned againſt the known Law of God in eating of the forbidden fruit. Adams ſin was againſt his own light, and therefore a preſumptuous ſin, ſo ſome interpret that place, Rom. 5. 14. Death reigned from Adam to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adams tranſgreſſion; that is, thoſe which had not the Law clearly revealed to them, yet he was ſeduced by Satan, whereas Satan ſinned without temptation, thence he is called the old Serpent, becauſe by the Serpent he ſeduced Eve.

When God ſaith, Gen. 3. 22. Behold, Adam is become like one of us, knowing good and evil; it conſureth S^t Auſtins conjecture, that he believed not the Serpent, but conſented to his wife out of matrimonial indulgence; Etſi credendo non ſunt ambo decepti, peccando tamen ambo capti ſunt & diaboli laqueis implicati: and ſheweth manifeſtly that Adam alſo was circumvented with errour, wherefore doth God elſe upbraid him ſo ironically, that he is now like unto God: That Sarcaſmus in my underſtanding is a taxation of his credulous temerity in believing the Serpents promiſe. When S^t Paul 1 Tim. 2. 14. ſaith that Adam was not deceived, but the woman, he meant not to extenuate the mans offence, or to exempt him from the fraud of the Devil, but to ſhew whether ſex was more credulous or like to be ſeduced. Doctor Hampton on Rom. 5. 9.

Mans firſt ſin (ſaith D^r Weſtfield) was unbelief, that uſhered in pride.

The conſummation of that tranſgreſſion was the eating of the forbidden fruit, or of the tree of knowledg of good and evil by Adam, Gen. 2. 17. as the beginning of it was looking on it by Eve, ſaith Paulus Fagius on Gen. 3. 6.

2. That tree was no better than the reſt, only God forbad him to eat of it, for the trial [a] of his obedience. The leſſer the thing was required to ſhew his obedience, the greater was his fault in diſobeying.

[a] It was Præceptum exploratorium, a Symbolicall Precept. The Serpent of all Beaſts was the beſt to creep into the garden unſeen of Adam, (who was to keep the Beaſts out of it) and to creep out again.

It is called diſobedience, Rom. 5. 19. and offence or fall, Rom. 5. 15, 17, 18. Some ſay the Devil as an unclean Spirit could not have acceſſe to Adams inward man to tempt him, therefore he tempted him by a Serpent and audible voice, as he did Chriſt [b] by a viſible Landskip of the world.

[b] The evil one finds nothing in me, ſaith Chriſt, and Epheſ. 6. 12. If we had ſtood in our integrity (ſay they) Satan could have ſuggeſted objects to the

The ſtrong will of Adam (being left to himſelf) did fall, but the weak will of ours by the aſſiſtance of Gods grace ſhall ſtand.

The time of Adams fall is not certain. Some ſay he fell the ſame day he was created.

M^r Pinchon in his Treatiſe of the Sabbath, part 1. chap. 1. labours to prove by five reaſons, that Adam fell in the day of his Creation.

1. Becauſe Moſes joyneth the ſtory of his temptation and fall, Chap. 3. cloſe to his creation, and ſeating in Paradiſe, in Chap. 2. without mentioning of any other matter to come between.

2. Becauſe

2. Because Adam fell the very first time of his eating, and in reason he would not abstain from eating longer than that day, seeing variety of meat was ready for him, and he had an appetite to desire food.

3. Else he would not have omitted to have eaten of the Tree of Life.

4. The Devil had not else deserved the name of a subtil Serpent, if he had not circumvented Adam so, as to make him eate of the forbidden fruit in the first place.

5. Because he fell while the woman was a Virgin, viz. before he knew her after the manner of all flesh. See Lloids Consent of time, page 5, 6, 7. Curcellaus Dissert. de esu sanguinis, cap. 1. opposeth this opinion, and so doth Lydiat, Emendat. Temp. ab initio mundi, l. 2.

Neither Angels nor men did fall the sixth day before the Sabbath, for then God looked upon all his works and they were very good, Gen. 1. 31. and therefore could not as yet be bad and evill by any sin or fall. The objections against this from John 8. 44. & Psalm 49. 12. are easily answered.

Some learned Divines (as Simpson in his Chronology observes) conjecture that Adam and Eve were cast out of Paradise the eighth day after they were created. The space of eight dayes was sufficient somewhat to try the felicity of that state.

senses, but he could not have dealt immediately with the Spirit.

Shepheards Theses Sabbaticæ. Septimo die cum perfecisset Deus opus suum quod fecerat, quievit ab omni opere; & diei septimo benedicens, Sabbatum instituit & consecravit, Gen. 2. 2, 3. quippe in quo requievit & recreavit se: nec dum (ut videtur) peccato admisso, aut Non est verisimile, tam multa & varia, quæ inter Creationem ejus narrantur facta, in dimidium fere unius diei coarctari, Simpl. Chron. Cathol. par. 1. Vide plura ibid. Vide Cl. Gatakeri Cinnum. l. 2. c. 2.

pœna familiæ (vel Angelis, vel Hominibus) à Deo inflicta. Usserij Annales veteris Testamenti p. 2.

Adams sinne was a great sinne.

1. In the nature of it.

2. In the severall aggravations of it.

1. In the nature of it.

For the subject of it, it was the sin of mankind and of all the man.

Is was 1. a transgression of a positive Law, wherein God gave to Adam a clear discovery of his will, it heightens sinne when it is against great light, Heb. 6, Psal. 51. 1 Kings 11. 9.

2. A command wherein the mind of God was much, mens legis est lex, we must measure sin by the intention of the Law-giver.

2. For the object, it is the breach of the whole Law.

3. Of so easie a Law, the Fathers * aggravate it from this, præceptum tam breve ad retinendum, tam leve ad observandum, God gave Adam liberty to eat of all the Trees in the Garden save one, there was no cause why Adam should break it.

3. Its every sin virtually.

4. A Commandment much for his advantage, life here and eternal was promised, & eternal death was threatned.

4. It forfeits all goodnesse, and is an inlet to all misery. Doctor Harris on

5. A Symbolicall Precept, God gave him this whereby he should testifie his obedience unto all the rest of the Commandments.

Eccles. 7. 29. Vide Bellarm. lib. 3. de Statu peccati, cap. 9. & 10. * Hoc itaque de uno tibi genere non edendo ubi aliorum tacita copia subjacebat, tam leve præceptum ad observandum, tam breve ad memoria retinendum, ubi præsertim nondum voluntati cupidinis resistebat. Quod de pœna transgressionis postea subsecutum est, tanto, majore injustitia violatum est, quanto facilitate posset observantia custodiri. Aug. de Civ. Dei. l. 14. c. 12.

2. In the severall aggravations of it.

Rom. 5. 14. that is, those which had not the Law clearly revealed to them. Gen. 1. 26. and 2. 16, 17. Col. 3. 10.

1. It was a sin against the clearest light, there was no darkness at all in Adams understanding, he knew the law, the danger of the sin, that he stood for himself and all his posterity, God had adorned him with sufficient grace and holinesse.

2. It was a sin against the greatest goodnesse, being in Paradise where God set him.

3. Against the greatest trust, the Covenant was made with Adam and all his po-

This man adorned by God with such excellent gifts of knowledge and holinesse, created in integrity, did yet sin in a matter wherein he might so easily have abstained, it much heightens the sin. The place also where the fault was committed aggravates the offence, for Adam sinned in Paradise, a holy place, Appe. 2. 7. and a Type of heaven, Gen. 3. 23. Mr Ball.

ſtrictly, he forfeits his truſt, Rom. 3.2. *Hoſ.*6.7. But they like Adam have tranſgreſſed the Covenant: ſo Grotius.

4. Againſt a threatning, In dying thou ſhalt die, Certitudinem denotat & durationem.

5. It was voluntary, the more there is of the will in ſinne, the worſe it is, Satan could not force them to ſin, but only allure and perſwade them.

Cameron in his anſwer to the Epiſtle of a learned man, chap. 8. proves that errour was the firſt ſinne of the firſt man. Nota, hic ordinem & gradum peccati. 1. Eſt incredulitas. 2. Addere & detrahere verbo Domini. 3. Blaſphemia. 4. Contrarium dicere quàm habeat verbum Dei. 5. Cupiditatis ſeu concupiſcentiæ ſenſus. 6. Ipſum opus, quod ſequitur ſenſus mortis. P. Fagius in Gen. 3.

First, Adam admitted and received the temptation of Satan, whence followed blindneſſe of underſtanding, forgetfulneſſe of Gods benefits, doubting of his truth, affectation of excellency, giving credit to Satan, corrupt beholding of the fruit, and an inclination of the will and affections to eat thereof.

There were theſe ſinnes in this offence, Infidelity, Idolatry, Contempt of God, Diſcontent, Ingratitude, Curioſity, Blaſphemy, Murder, and Apoſtaſie.

Multa delicta in uno illo lapſo fuerint.
1. Dubitatio de verbo Dei.
2. Amiſſio fidei.
3. Curioſitas diſcedens à verbo Dei, & quærens alium ſapientiam.
4. Superbia.
5. Contemptus Dei.
6. Quod antecedit omnia.

There were many ſins in that one ſin.

1. Deſperate unbelief; Eve believed the Devil before God.
2. Pride, they deſired to be like God, not only in knowledge, but in ſtate and condition to be Independent.
3. Unthankfulneſſe, though God had given them ſuch glorious excellencies.
4. Vain curioſity to know more than they did know.
5. Diſobedience in reſpect of that particular command.
6. Spiritual murder, this ſinne would have damned all mankinde, though there had been no actual ſin: Primordialis lex eſt data in Paradiſo quaſi matrix omnium præceptorum. That firſt Law (ſaith Tertullian) given in Paradiſe, was the ſumme and comprehenſion of the whole Divine Law that was publiſhed afterwards. Therefore in the breach thereof all manner of offences are contained.

ferunt Diabolum Deo. 7. Ingratitudo. 8. Homicidium ſui & totius poſteritatis. Pezel. in Melanct. De Lapſu Primorum Hominum.

That firſt ſin of his (excepting only the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt) was in ſundry reſpects the moſt hainous ſin that ever mortal man did commit. Hilderſam on Pſal. 51.5. *Lect.*37. Vide Aquin. 2.2da. *Q.*163. *art.*3.

[a] As Dr. Whitaker. Extenſive, it is not greater than original ſinne; but intenſive it is. Aquinas.

There are [a] that call this ſinne, Omnium graviſſimum, and that except none but that againſt the holy Ghoſt. Robroughs Doctr. of Juſtific. cleared, part. 2. 1. & 2. Chap.

Next unto the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, and contempt of the Goſpel, this is the greateſt ſin. Shepherds Sincere Convert. c.3.

The dangerous and wofull conſequents of Adams ſin were five:

First, A perfect obliteration of the Image [b] of God, *Rom.*3.23. of original righteouſneſſe, and caſting out of Paradiſe.

[b] We loſt three things in reference to God when we fell, Gods Image, Gods favour, and Gods fellowſhip. Adam made genus humanum damnationis traducem. Tertul. *Stetit homo ille ut radix & caput, principium omnis naturæ; hoc quidem duplici titulo, ut caput naturale, ex quo tota natura proſeminanda erat, Act.*17.26. ut morale, in cujus obedientia, aut inobedientia ſtabat, trahebatq; univerſæ naturæ noſtræ aqua ſors. Inde derivatur noſtra natura, hinc natura moralitas. Ex iſto venit quod homines ſumus; ex hoc, quales, ſive boni, ſive mali. Hornbeeck. *Anti-Socin. l.*3. *c.*3. *Sect.*1.

Secondly, A total depravation of mans nature, the Devils Image is introduced, John 6.7. 1 *Cor.*15.4. Every man is de ſuo Satanas de Deo beatus. Auguſt.

Thirdly, It ſets up the Devils Kingdom and Dominion in the world; his dominion lies in ſin, *Eph.*6.12. and death, *Heb.*2.15.

Fourthly, It hath deſtroyed all the Creatures, they groan under bondage, Rom. 8.20, 21.

Fifth-

Fifthly, It had brought damnation on all mankind, had not Christ died and rescued them. The wicked Angels were entrusted but with their own portions, but Adam had the estates of all his posterity put into his hand, and he knew if he sinned he should draw a thousand souls after him.

In Adams act there were three things; An actuall fault, a legall guilt, and a natural pravity: According to these three came the participation of the fault, the imputation of the guilt, the propagation of the natural filthinesse.

In Adamo tanquam in radice totum genus humanum computruit, Greg.

Sin came upon all by Adam:

1. By imputation, the Lord in justice imputing the guilt of that first sin to all his posterity, Rom. 5. 13, 14, 19. 1 Cor. 15. 22. see 45, 47. There were two men by whom all fall and rise. Adam was the head of the Covenant of nature, if he had stood none of us had fallen; and so Christ is the head of the Covenant of Grace, if he be not risen, we cannot rise, vers. 16, 17.

2. By propagation, the lump and root of mankind being corrupted; so are the branches, Rom. 11. 16. Gen. 5. 3. Job 14. 14. M^r Lyf. Princip. of Faith and good Conscience, c. 2.

All mankind sinn'd in Adam, because we were all in his loins, Rom. 5. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 22. Heb. 7. 9, 10. And as Adam received integrity for himself and us, so he lost it for himself and us, saith M^r Ball in his larger Catechism. The Arminians and Socinians deny the imputation of Adams sin; therefore they say, corruption of nature is a punishment, but not a sin; for man can have no nature but what God gives him, that was a corrupt nature.

We are all guilty of this sin for these reasons:

1. The Covenant or promise, Do this and live, belonged not to Adams person only, but to all his posterity, and doth still stand in force: the Covenant was not only made with Adam, but with us in him, therefore the breach of it is not only by him, but by us in him, Rom. 8. 3.

2. The Spirit of God clears this, that the nature of man is defiled by one man, and by one offence of that one man, Rom. 5. 12. compared with vers. 17. because he was a publick person before he broke this Covenant.

The first Adam represented all mankind, and the second all the Elect. God might as well ground an imputation on a natural, as on a mystical Union. The Law cannot give life now, because it was broken by the first man. Omnes tramite unius ille homo. August. Therefore the sinne of that one man is the sinne of us all; the children of boadmen are boadmen; of traitors are traitors: Beneficium transit cum onere; Adam stood for us, and fell for us. D^r Reinolds. Our first Parents were not so much Parentes as Peremptores. Bernard. Iste Scriptura locus, Act. 17. 26. ineptum Preadamitarum assertorem vel solus inducere debuisset, ut suam de illa gente suspicionem in herba supprimeret, nec ipsso in lucem edito libro eam propugnaret. Apparet ex illo loco, omnes omnino homines ex uno eodemque sanguine oriundos esse, & passim super universo terrarum orbe habitare. Vorstii Philologia Sacra de Hebraismis N. T. Cxlii. Vide plura ibid.

3. The curse of the sin came upon all, therefore the guilt of the breach of the Covenant, Patet culpa, ubi non latet pœna. Prosper.

4. All men by nature are under the Law as a Covenant, Gal. 4. 21, 22.

It was Gods mercy to enter into Covenant with us, he might have dealt with Adam in an imperial way, therefore he might order the Covenant as he pleased.

2. Adam entred into Covenant on these conditions, that his righteousnesse should be hereditary to all his seed in case of obedience, and his sin in case of disobedience.

3. There is an after consent on our part to Adams treason; Imitation is a kind of consent, Esay 43. 27.

4. The offering of another Adam to thee in the Church, shews that the dispensation is not rigorous, so you may share in his obedience as well as the others disobedience. It is as agreeable to the wisdome and justice of God by the first Adam to introduce death, as to the wisdom and grace of God by the second Adam to introduce life. The first Covenant makes way for the second.

5. There is a parallel in Scripture between the first and second Adam, Isa. 49. 18. Rom. 5. 12. 1 John 5. 11. Christ is caput cum fœdere, as well as the first Adam.

Object. This sin of Adam being but one, could not defile the universal nature. Socinus.

Answ. Adam had in him the whole nature of mankind, 1 Cor. 15. 47. by one offence the whole nature of man was defiled, Rom. 5. 12, 17.

Adams personal sinne did infect the whole nature, and ever since the nature hath infected the personal actions. It was pœnalis vitiositas. August.

Object. Adams sin was not voluntary in us, we never gave consent to it.

Answ. There is a two-fold will: 1. Voluntas Naturæ, the whole nature of man was represented in Adam, therefore the will of nature was sufficient to conveigh the sinne of nature. 2. Voluntas Personæ, by every actual sinne we justifie Adams breach of Covenant. Rom. 5. 12, 19. seems clear for the imputation of Adams sinne. All were in Adam, and sinned in him, as after Austin, Beza doth interpet that, Rom. 5. 12. ἐφ' ᾧ, and so our last Translators in the Margin. And though it be rendred [for that all have sinned] by us, the Syriack, Eras. Vatabl. Calv. Pisc. yet must it so be understood, that all have sinned in Adam: for otherwise it is not true, that all upon whom death hath passed, have sinned, as namely Infants newly born; it is not said, All are sinners, but All have sinned, which imports an imputation of Adams act unto his posterity. Vide Bellarm. Tom. 4. l. 4. de Amiss. grat. & Statu peccati c. 3. Peccatum Adami ita posteris omnibus imputatur, ac si omnes idem peccatum patravissent. Id. ib. cap. 16. And again c. 8. Peccatum originale, tametsi ab Adamo est, non tamen Adami, sed nostrum est.

(Adam) all have sinned. So it is expounded by Hilary, Ambrose, Chrysostome, Theophylact.

Ita in Adam propter peccatum, tanquam in semine vel radice, omnis humana caro damnata est, & quemadmodum vitiato semine aut radice omnes deinceps fructus nascuntur vitiati, sic in vitio Adæ, quoniam ex eo omnes sumus. Quapropter generatio hominis facta est pudenda: quod ostendit naturalis pudor in ostensione genitalium, ideoque ea solum texerunt Adam & Eva, namque ubi senserunt vitium de illis erubuerunt. Lod. Viv. de veritate Fidei Christ. lib. 1. cap. 17.

Some Divines do not differ so much re, as modo loquendi about this point; they grant the imputation of Adams sin to his posterity in some sense, so as that there is a communication of it with them, and the guilt of it is charged upon them, yet they deny the imputation of it to posterity, as it was Adams personal sin. But it is not to be considered as Adams personal sin, but as the sin of all mankind, whose person Adam did then represent. It was one that made us sinners; it is one that makes us righteous: Prior in semine, alter in sanguine: it was man that forfeited, it is man that satisfied. D. Hampton on Rom. 5. 10.

Vide Garissolium & Rivetum de imputatione peccati Adami. See also the National Synod held at Charenton, 1645. pag. 72.

The parts of this corrupt estate: Sinfulnesse of nature and life, and the punishment of sin here and hereafter.

The division of sin into Original and Actual is gathered out of Rom. 5. 14. and I shall first treat of original sin, or the corruption of nature.

Sinne in general.

Sin is an absence of that righteousnesse which should be in us; in our nature, as original sin; in our actions, as actual sin, a moral inconformity or difformity in nature, or life, to the Law of God.

Non est idem peccatum & vitium. Peccatum enim est nomen operationis malæ, quæ opponitur operationi virtutis: vitium autem est nomen habitus mali, qui opponitur virtuti, ut virtus habitum significat. Bellarm. controv. 2. de Statu peccati. lib. 1. cap. 1. Peccatum differt à malo, quia illud potest esse pœna & divinæ justitiæ actus (cum Deus peccati author absque blasphemia non statuatur) à vitio etiam distinguitur, quia illud inanimatis & brutis, peccatum vero rationabilibus tantum competit. Dr Prid. Scholast. Theol. Syntag. Mnemon. cap. 3.

It is called Sin. Psal. 51. Mr Bedford on Rom. 6. Rom. 7. 7.

This viciousnesse of nature is not unfitly called Sinne, Rom. 6. 7. 1. Ex causa, it is the fruit and effect of that first transgression of our father Adam. 2. Ex effectu, it is the root, seed, spawn of all actual transgressions in every one of us: Original sinne is against the whole Law which is spiritual, and requires perfect integrity in man, more specially against the first and last Commandments.

That

That there is original sin, a defilement in every mans heart as soon as he is born, which were enough to destroy him, though he break out into no outward acts of rebellion, is proved

That there is such a vileness in all our natures, which ought to trouble us more than any thing else in the world. Your very cloaths tell you of original sinne; as often as thou sweares, so often doth it shew its effects.

First, By Scripture, Genesis 6. 5, 8. Job 14. 14. & 15. 14, 15, 16. Psal. 51. 5. Sunt qui dicunt, quod per hoc innuitur Eva, quæ non peperit nisi postquam peccavit. Porchet. Rom. 5. 12. Eph. 2. 13.

Secondly, By the effects: 1. Mans desperate contrariety to good things even from his youth, Psal. They went astray from their youth up. In Esay, Transgressours from the womb. A childe is opposite to any good duty, and ready to imitate all evil. 2. The Lord instituted Circumcision to shew the filthinesse we are begotten and born in, and which should be cut off. Therefore (saith Bellarmine) it was commanded to be done in that member in which the effect of that sin doth more violently appear, and by which mankind is propagated, and by propagation infected. The use of Baptisme also is to take away the guilt and filth of nature. The woman that had a childe was to go offer as unclean.

Thirdly, It is demonstrated by sickneſſe, other crosses and death, even of Infants, Rom. 3. 23.

Fourthly, The unserviceableneſſe of the creatures proves that there is original sin.

Fifthly, Because there must be a change of our natures.

1. Every man is born guilty of Adams sin.
2. Every man is born dead in sin, Ephes. 2. 1.
3. Every natural man is born full of all sin, Rom. 1. 29. as full as a Toad of poison.
4. What ever he doth whilst in a natural estate is evil:
   1. His thoughts, Gen. 6. 5.
   2. His words, Psal. 50. 16.
   3. His actions: 1. Civil, Prov. 21. 4. 2. Religious, Prov. 15. 18, 19. & 28. 9.

The vile nature of man is apt to commit most foul and presumptuous sins, Rom. 3. 9, 10, 11, to v. 18. Mark 7. 21.

Alensis cum Bonaventuram puerum sub disciplina haberet, solitus est dicere, In hoc Adam non peccavit. Chemnit. loc. com. Mr Bradford would never look upon any ones lewd life with one eye, but he would presently return within his own breast with the other eye, and say, In this my vile breast remains that sinne, which without Gods special grace I should have committed as well as he.

Reason 1. From mans self, sin hath come over all together with death.

2. The Devil laboureth to bring men to the most notorious sins, that he may render them most like to himself, Ephes. 2. 2.

3. The world is full of such things and persons as may induce an evil nature to most horrible deeds.

4. God in justice gives men over to work wickedneſſe with greedineſſe.

CHAP. II.

What Original Corruption is.

THese names are given to original Sin in Scripture. It is called sinne, Rom. 7. 8. The sinning sinne, Rom. 7. 13. Sinne that dwelleth in us, Rom. 7. 20. Sinne that doth easily beset us, Heb. 11. 1. The body of sin, Rom. 7. 23. A law in the members, and the body of death, Rom. 7. 24. It is also called flesh, John 3. 6. Rom. 7. 5. The old man, Rom. 6. 6. Ephes. 4. 12. Col. 3. 9. so called (say some) because it is deceitfull, rather because it hath the first possession of us, in opposition to the new man. The Law of sinne, Romans 7. 25.

Hoc verbum in Scripturis non habetur, neq; in patribus vetustissimis, sed res ubiq; tamen in Scripturis occurrit, Gen. 5. 2.

& Joan. 3. 6. Et patres vocabulis usi sunt ejusdem significationis. Augustinus ut haberet certum aliquid in quo Pelagianis resisteret, Originale passim nominavit. Unde hoc nomen deinceps in Ecclesia frequentatum. Whitakerus

7. 25. The wisdome of the flesh, Rom. 8. 6, 7. The law of sinne and of death, Rom. 8. 2. The plague in ones own heart, 1 Kings 8. 38. The root of bitternesse, Heb. 12.

It is called by the Fathers, original sinne, and there is ground enough for that appellation in the Scripture, Genesis 8. 21. Job 14. 4. Psal. 51. 7. Eph. 2. 3. It is an hereditary evil.

Some say it is not a meer want of original Righteousnesse, Carentia justitiæ originalis debitæ inesse. The Papists make Adam fallen to be the man in the Gospel, that was wounded as he was going to Jericho by thieves, and lay half dead. The scope of that Parable is to teach, who is to be accounted our neighbour. Our nature is not onely void of Gods Image, Rom. 3. 12. but fertil of all evil, Gen. 6. Psalm 14. & 53. Acts 13. 10. Eph. 4. 19. It is hard to determine what kind of positiveness can be in sin.

de peccato originali, lib. 1. cap. 4. Peccatum originis seu originale peccatum Augustinus constanter & fere ubique ita appellat, non ab origine humanæ naturæ, sed cujusque personæ. Chemnit. Originale dicitur, non quod, fons & origo peccatorum sit (quanquam omnia in nobis peccata ex hoc fonte aut potius sentinâ hac fluant) sed quia propagatione perpetua atque hæreditaria nostram naturam maculavit, atque in nobis statim, ut primum homines fumus, infecit, atque in nostra naturæ & originis instinctu ac lege derivatum est, ut non nisi peccatores & filii iræ nascamur. Whitak. ubi supra. Originale peccatum potest vel ad causam comparari, à qua contrahitur, vel ad effectum, vel ad subjectum. Si ad causam, vel ad propinquam; sic peccatum originale dicitur, quia à parente contrahitur, vel immediatam, & sic dicitur lex carnis, quia à carne contrahitur. Si ad remotam, dicitur languor naturæ. Si autem comparatur ad effectum, vel erit hoc prout est in dispositione remota, & sic dicitur concupiscibilitas; vel prout in propinquiori, & sic vocatur fomes: vel prout in propinquissima, & tunc vocatur concupiscentia. Si verò comparetur ad subjectum, tunc vel comparabitur ad rationem, & sic dicitur tyrannus; vel ad naturam, & sic dicitur lex naturæ: vel ad carnem, & sic est lex membrorum. Raymundi Pugio fidei adversum Judæos part. 3. dist. 2. cap. 6. Peccatum originale dicitur, ratione habita originis nostræ à generatione, potius quam respectu originis in Adamo, quamvis nec hæc omninò excludatur. Distinguunt aliqui originans, quod fuit peccatum in Adamo, & originale, vel originatum: inde in nobis duplex est origo naturæ, nostræ humanæ, eaque arcessitur ab Adamo, & hominis cujusque personæ in individuo singulari; eaque arcessitur ab Ada. Hoornbeck. Anti-Socin. lib. 3. cap. 3. Sect. 61. Est hæreditaria naturæ corruptio, per lapsum Adami introducta, qua homines nascuntur sine justitiâ & sanctitate primigeniâ, cum quâ primi parentes conditi fuerunt, pronè & propensi ex adverso in omne malum, ac ea propter naturâ rei iræ Dei, & morti æternæ obnoxii. Brochmand. System. Theol. Artic. 11. de peccato. cap. 5. Vide plura ibid.

Mr Hickman saith, That sin hath not a positive being, which he proves by good authority and better reason, from pag. 54. to the end of his book. Sinne hath no being, no entity, it is onely an ablence of righteousnesse. If sin were a positive thing, all the world cannot avoid it, but God must be the Author of it. For there is nothing can have a being, but it must derive its being from the first being. B. Usher on Rom. 5. 1.

Est generalis hæc, omniumque ferè communis argumentatio, qua malum & peccatum nihil esse demonstrant, sed veram boni privationem: quod malum à Deo productum non esse, docent contra Manichæos & similes hæreticos. Nam quicquid res est aliqua, & ut Schola loquuntur, positivum omne, procreatum est à Deo. Petavius de Deo, Deique proprietatibus, lib. 6. cap. 4. Vide plura ibid. & cap. 5.

There are two kinds of privations:

1. Simple, which doth meerly deprive, as darknesse doth light.

2. Compound, which besides the meer privation includes the contrary form, Privatio male disponens; as sickness, besides the meer privation of health, includes the humours abounding. Health is affectus corporis ad actum benè agendum, disease is the contrary.

Malum hoc originale tomen suum habet vel ratione inhærentiæ, & à modo inessendi, quia ab ortu nobis inest, Adeo ut mali fumus pene pri-

We call it positive, because the Scripture describes it by habitual depravation, Jeremy 17. 9. When we say such an one is a drunkard; it is not onely a meer privation of sobriety, but a readinesse to that sinne, because of the inhesion of it, and to denote the efficacy of it. Original sin is an affection ad actum malè agendum. It is both a privation of the habit of original righteousnesse, and also an evil disposition and pronenesse to all manner of sin infecting all the parts and faculties of the soul. Bish. Downe, of Justificat. lib. 7. cap. 7. Vide Hoornbeck Anti-Socin. l. 3. cap. 3. Sect. 1.

It is, 1. An internal uncleanneſſe, Titus 1. 15. It is called concupiſcence, which is the act of the will.

2. An abiding uncleanneſſe, it never ceaſeth ſo long as a man liveth, to provoke him to ſin, Rom. 7. 21. Actual ſins are but tranſient acts, an affront to Gods commands: Original ſin is a rooted contrariety to his nature.

3. An abounding uncleanneſſe, Pſalm 14. Rom. 3. It defiles all men, and all of men. In the firſt Covenant Adam was made a root of all mankind, therefore all ſinned and died in him, being all in his loins, Heb. 7. 9. Hence all that deſcend from him are children of wrath, Epheſians 2. 3.

uſquam ſumus. Vel ſecundo poteſt dici originale ratione efficientiæ, quia ipſa hæc culpa eſt radix & origo unde reliquia malæ infauſto ortu enaſcuntur. Vel tertiò ratione termini, nempè boni privati, prout eſt privatio juſtitiæ originalis debitæ ineſſe. Et ut mihi videtur, cauſa primaria & principalis cur hoc malum dicitur originale, eſt hæc ultima. Barlow. Exerc. 2. Malum originale duo includit, defectum juſtitiæ originalis, & affectum pravum, quod communiter aſſerunt non ſolum Pontificii varii, ſed & Reformati. Id. ibid. Sicut ægritudo corporalis habet aliquid de privatione, in quantum tollitur æqualitas ſanitatis, & aliquid poſitivi, ſcilicet ipſos humores inordinatè diſpoſitos: ita peccatum originale non eſt pura privatio, ſed quidam habitus corruptus. Thom. 1, 2. Quæſt. 82. Art. 1. reſp. ad 1. Peccatum originale includit in ſe, 1. Defectum phyſicum. 2. Affectum moralem. 3. Effectum quaſi politicum, hoc eſt deordinationem, maculam, & reatum ad pœnam obligantem. Iſtud autem peccatum eſt vel primum vel à primo ortum: Primum fuit originans, nempè Adami factum, contra pactum & mandatum creatoris, quod non contaminavit ſolum perſonam, ſed naturam omnibus communicandam poſteris. Sic quod in illo fuit originans, in illis evaſit originale, quod originem comitatur, & uſq; ad vitæ periodum hæret quaſi lateri Lethalis arundo. Dr Prid. Lect. 21. de pec. orig. Partes peccati originalis ſunt tres; Primo, participatio peccati primorum parentum, illud enim fuit commune peccatum totius generis humani. Secundò, carentia originalis juſtitiæ, id eſt, defectus donorum, tum intellectus, tum voluntatis, quibus Adamus & Eva ante lapſum ornati ſuni. Tertiò, propenſio vel inclinatio ad malum. Baron. Philoſ. Theol. ancil. Exerc. 8. Art. 6. Et Metaphyſ. Gen. Sect. 16. Diſſ. 1.

What the force of original ſin is in thoſe to which God loſeth the reins of his providence, ſee the firſt Chapter of the Romans, in which the Apoſtle hath graphically deſcribed the life of the Gentiles.

It is a Queſtion, Whether original ſin be drawn from Adam alone, or from Adam and Eve joyntly.

Bellarmine ſaith, from Adam alone, and urgeth 1 Cor. 15. 22. Brochmand. Syſt. Theol. artic. 11. De peccato cap. 6. Quæſt. 8. ſaith, from both joyntly: 1. Becauſe original ſinne is propagated by carnal generation, John 3. 6. to which both man and woman concur, and becauſe the Scripture alſo affirms it, Pſalm 51. 7. Cregutus in his Biurim, De peccato originali ſaith, It is more agreeable to Scripture and reaſon, that ſin ſhould be propagated from them both.

Sin came upon all by Adam two wayes:

Firſt, By imputation: The Lord in juſtice imputing the guilt of the firſt ſin to all his poſterity, Rom. 5. 12, 14, 19. 1 Cor. 15. 22. See 45, 47. verſes.

Secondly, By propagation: The lump and root of all mankinde being corrupted, ſo are the branches, Geneſis 5. 3. Job 14. 14. Rom. 11. 16. They are dead in ſins, Matth. 8. 22. Luke 15. 24. Epheſ. 2. 1. 1 Tim 5. 6. under the power of ſinne naturally, under the guilt of ſinne legally, Rom. 5. 15, 18. Therefore Regeneration is called a Creation and Reſurrection, Rom. 6. 5. John 3. 35. Eph. 1. 19, 20.

1. All the faculties of the ſoul are dead, the minde blinde, Zechary 11. ult. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Epheſians 4. 17. and vain in its apprehenſions, reſolutions, thoughts, Jeremy 4. 14.

2. Reaſonings: The will moſt deſperately ſhut againſt Chriſt and duty, Matth. 15. 19. & 23. 37. Luke 19. 14. John 8. 44. violently evil, Eſay 57. 17. The memory retains toyes, and lets go ſolid things. The affections are not carried to their right objects; we love ſin, are angry with thoſe that reprove us, or not in a right meaſure, we over-love, over-joy, Coloſ. 3. 5. They are contrary one to another, and inconſtant. The conſcience is not active in accuſing or excuſing, Titus 1. 15. 1 Timothy 1. 19. & 4. 2. Epheſians 4. 19. 2. They are dead in reſpect of ſpiritual duties, 1 Theſſalonians 1. 13. the Sabbath is a burden. 3. In their profeſſion, Revel. 3. 1. Jude v. 12. 4. In their whole converſation.

4. An

4. An active powerfull uncleanneſſe, Rom. 7. 23. It is peccatum actuoſum, though not actuale, it acts continually, Geneſis 6. 5. Sinfull acts and habits both flow from the pravity of our nature.

5. A diffuſive or infectious uncleanneſſe like a leproſie or plague, Pſalm 106. 36. it makes all bad that we meddle with; To the defiled all things are defiled.

Auguſtine of old, and our Proteſtant Writers of late maintain againſt Papiſts, that all the works of Heathens, yea of unbelievers, and unregenerate men, are ſins, Heb. 11. 6. Tit. 1. 15. Prov. 21. 4. & 27. verſes. Hag. 2. 13, 14.

It may well be called the ſinning ſin, not only becauſe it is the puniſhment of ſin, and the cauſe of ſin, but becauſe it ſelf is ſin, as Auſtin.

All the ſinnes of our lives are but original ſinne exerciſed and multiplied.

Corruptio originalis veneno ſuo præcipuè infecit nobiliſſimum opus generationis. Ideo ſtatim poſt lapſum primi parentes, non manus, non pedes, ſed pudenda texerunt. Chemnit. loc. com. Inſana Manichæorum hæreſis toties à patribus damnata. Barlow. Exercit. 2. Malum originale in Scripturis habet nomina ſubſtantialia, dicitur verum bomo, cor durum, animalis caro, cor lapideum. Hoc non eſt tanti ut ſolutione indigeat. Siquidem nemini ignota ex hac parte Scripturæ phraſiologia, qua tropos ſuos & metaphoras uſu frequenti adhibet; & attributis ſubſtantialibus utitur, cum non ſubſtantiam ipſam ſed qualitates indigitat. Id. ibid. Illyricus peccatum originale eſſentiam eſſe hominis opinatur: certè ſubſtantiarum & naturarum omnium Creator Deus eſt: peccatum autem neq; à Deo creatum eſt, neq; omnino creatura, ſit ſubſtantia, aut eſſentia eſt. Adamus poſt peccatum eandem naturæ ſuæ eſſentiam retinuit, quem antè habuit, idemq; homo fuit; & noſtra eſſentia, neq; peccato, neq; gratia in aliam mutatur. Whitak. de pec. orig. l. 1. c. 14. Vide Bellarm. de Amiſſ. gratia & ſtatu peccat. l. 5. c. 2, 3. Et Crocii Antiweigelium. cap. 7. Q. 1. Baronii Metaphyſ. Gen. Sect. 10. Diſſ. Original righteouſneſſe was not a ſuperadded grace in Adam, but the natural rectitude of Adams faculties of his ſoul, ſo original corruption is not a ſuperadded ſinne, but the natural defect of all the faculties in working. Errant ſi cuiquam nobiſcum naſci vitia, ſupervenerunt, ingeſta ſunt. Seneca Epiſt. 96. Vide Bellarm. Tom. 4. l. 4. de ſtatu peccati. cap. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Rom. 5. 19. Politicus Machiavellus in quæſtionibus ſuis hominem naſci vult æquè ad virtutem, quàm vitia pronum. Atqui hoc manifeſtè repugnat divinis literis, Gen. 8. 20. hoc eſt, ab eo tempore, quo prodit è ventre ſuæ matris. Nam ſimul ac ubera fugit concupiſcentiam ſuam ſequitur, & adhuc infans, occupatur ab ira, invidia, odio, ac cæteris vitiis, quibus tenera illa ætas eſt obnoxia. Menaſ. Ben. Iſr. de fræg. hum. Sect. 16.

The Pelagians out of hatred to this opinion ran too far into another extream, holding, that as man was born ſine virtute, ſo alſo ſine vitio, and they ſay, That original ſin is derived, not by propagation but imitation and example. Pelagius, qui vixit circa annum Domini 420. primus manifeſtè impugnavit peccatum originis. Brochm. Artic. 11. de peccato 6. Quæſt. 1. Vide Quæſt. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. We are by nature (not imitation) the children of wrath. Pagans and Heathens never heard of Adam, and many ſinnes are committed that Adam never did, and they imitate not him, the firſt drunkard and adulterer had no example.

The

The ancient Fathers against the Pelagians, and the Orthodox against the Arminians hold, That original sin is propagated from Adam to all his posterity. 1. God chargeth this on all the sons of men, Ezekiel 6. beg. Esay 48. 4. compared with 8. therefore it comes to them by natural inclination. 2. The Saints who have studied their own spirits, have confest this to be in them, Psalm 51. 5. Rom. 7. 18. 3. Adam in his fallen condition must communicate such a nature as he had, viz. defiled, Job 14. 4. Adam infected nature, and after nature infected the person. The continual actings of the depravednesse of our nature in our conversation, Psalm 58. 3. and the misery that lay on all men by nature, even Infants, prove this, Rom. 5. 12. and the necessity of regeneration, John 3. 5.

Vide Vossii hist. Pelag. l. 2. part. 1. Thes. 1. & 2. Baronii Metaphys. Gen. Sect. 10. Dis. 1.

The faculties of the soul only (not the substance thereof) are corrupted, otherwise the soul could not be immortal, neither could Christ take our nature upon him. The substance of man abstractedly considered is Gods creature since the fall, and therefore good, 1 Tim. 4. 4. Regeneration restores not the substance of man, but the qualities.

Qualis post lapsum fuit homo, tales & liberos procreavit, corruptus nempe corruptos, Corruptione ab

Adamo in omnes posteros solo Christo excepto non per imitationem (quod Pelagiani voluerunt) sed per vitiosæ naturæ propagationem, justo Dei judicio, derivata. Acta Synod. Dordrecht. in tertium & quartum Doctrina caput de hominis creatione & conversione.

Dr Ames saith, that Grevinchovius denied original sinne, and Dr Twisse[a] proves by this Argument, that the Arminians deny it. As many as teach that all the posterity of Adam have as much power to every thing that is good, as Adam in innocency, they deny original sinne: But the Arminians teach that all the posterity of Adam have as much power to every thing that is good, as Adam had in the state of innocency: for they hold that all Adams posterity have such power to every good work, that they want no other help but the perswasion and the concourse of God, which Adam himself needed to every good work.

[a] Contra Corvinum, cap. 7. Sect. 3. Peccatum originis nullum prorsus est, nec enim è Scriptura id peccatum originis doceri potest: & lapsus Adæ cum unus actus fuerit, vim eam, quæ depravare ipsam naturam Adami, multo minus verò posterorum ipsius posset, habere non potuit. Catech. Eccles. Polon. cap. 10. Vide plura ibid.

The Semipelagians also, the Socinians and Anabaptists deny this original vetiome or blot to be a sin; the Anabaptists that they might wholly take away Pedobaptisme denied original sinne, that there might not be a cause why Infants should be baptized.

Dr Taylor hath decried it, as if it were but a light matter, and the Dispute needlesse about it. Mr Burgesse (who hath written fully of this Subject) in his * Preface to his Treatise of Original Sinne, saith, he betrayeth much of original sinne, even while he writeth against it. Our reverend Divinity-Professour lately of Oxford, hath also in two solemn Lectures at the Act sufficiently confuted his opinion. I can not but wonder at that passage of his, in his vindication of the glory of the Divine Attributes, in the Question of original sinne, That our natural corruption in the regenerate still remains, and is still a sinne, and properly a sinne: I have (I confesse) heartily opposed it, and shall besides my Arguments, confute it with my bloud, if God shall call me. Yet before (he saith) For my part, I can not but confesse that to be which I feel, and groan under, and by which all the world is miserable. He saith also, If children be Innocents, we need not appeal to Gods goodnesse, for his justice will secure them. I had thought young children had been called Innocent in regard of actual sin only, not original.

* See also his Book.

In his Sermon on Exodus 20. 5. he saith, Death is not a consequent to any sinne, but our own. It is not said (saith he) that sinne passed upon all men, but death, and that also no otherwise, but as much as all men have sinned, as they have followed the steps of their Father, so they are partakers of his death.

The denying of this fundamental Article of Original Sinne is dangerous, What need then of the Gospel, what need of Christ himself; if our nature be not guilty, depraved, corrupted? These are not things in quibus possimus dissentire salva pace ac charitate. August. about which we may dissent without losse of peace or charity.

The Papists say, First, Original corruption hath not Rationem peccati, but is onely a privation of original righteousnesse. The Councel of Trent [b] decreeth it not to have the nature of sinne. Bellarmine saith, it is a simple thing to be humbled for original sinne. Pighius saith, it is no sinne at all. Andradens, it's the least of sins.

[b] The Councel of Trent. Sess. 5. Can. 6. saith, Original sin is not true sin, but only the froth and scum of sin. Est minimum omnium peccatorum & quasi veniali simile. Thom. in 2. distinct. 33. q. 1. art. 2.

Secondly, That the concupiscence and lust which riseth from the corruption of our nature, the motions unto evil that we feel in our selves, are no sins (but are called so abusively or metonymically, because they are from and incline to sinne) till we consent unto them and obey them, till they reign in us. See the Rhemists in their Annotat. Rom. 7. 7. & James 1. 15. Bellarm. de statu peccati, cap. 9, 10.

When our Divines urge that concupiscence is called sin several times in the sixth, seventh and eighth Chapters to the Romans. Bellarmine saith, the Apostle doth not say it is peccatum proprie, De statu peccati, c. 8.

Hoc possum testari meo exemplo, me cum multos annos Doctor Theologia fuissem, hanc doctrinam nondum satis fuisse Disputatam quidem de peccato originis, sed dictum in Baptismo sublatum esse. Lumb. lect. com. 2 class. de peccato originali.

Thirdly, That original sin after Baptism is done away. Si quis asserit non tolli in Baptismate totum id quod veram & propriam rationem peccati habet, anathema sit. Decret. 5. 6th Concil. Trid.

Fourthly, That the Virgin Mary was not conceived in sinne. Piè ac rectè existimatur B. Virginem Mariam singulari Dei privilegio ab omni omnino peccato fuisse immunem. Bellarm. de amiss. grat. & statu pec. lib. 4. cap. 15. See Rom. 3. 10, 11, 12. & 5. 12. Gal. 3. 22. She did actually sinne, Luke 2. 49. and Christ saved her by his death, Luke 1. 47. Acts 4. 12. Vide Brochm. System. Theol. art. 11. De peccato originali Quæst. 21.

The Spirit of God in the holy Scripture expressly calleth the corruption of our nature sin, as Psalm 51. 5. and in the sixth, seventh and eight Chapters of the Romans, fourteen times at the least, Heb. 12. 2.

2. The Scripture saith expressly, our original corruption is the cause of all our actual sins, James 1. 14. 2 Peter 1. 4.

3. Infants that are baptized, which have no other sin but original, and who never consented to it nor obeyed it in the lusts thereof, do die, Rom. 5. 14. therefore it must needs be sin, and may be truly and properly so called; for sin is the only cause of death, Rom. 5. 12.

Whatever holdeth not conformity with the rule of righteousnesse the Law of God, is sin; it hath the nature of sin in its irregularity and defect of good, and the effects of sin.

See Mr Pemble of Justification, Sect. 3. cap. 4. pag. 131. & cap. 1. pag. 78, 79. Vide Episc. Daven. de justitia habituali. cap. 4. & 15. & 18. Nomine concupiscentiæ intelligimus corruptionem hæreditariam in nobis, voluntate & affectibus, cum motibus inde procedentibus legi divinæ repugnantibus; sive consideremus radicem, sive truncum, sive ramos, sive fructus inde enascentes, nihil est in toto, vel in ulla parte sani. Sunt certe gradus, in unoquoque tamen est aliquid culpandum, imo peccatum proprie dictum, quod per se dignum esse morte, si Deus rigidè nobiscum ageret, & non in nobis ipsis non in Christo, ipsum justitia tellos consideraret. Bishop Carbol. Ortbod. Wall. 4. Quæst. 14. Fatemur concupiscentiam esse quandam iniquitatem & obliquitatem non solum contra dominatum mentis, sed etiam contra legem Dei. Stapleton lib. 3. de Justificat. cap. 2.

2. The Scripture expressly teacheth us, that this concupiscence even in the regenerate these evil motions that rise in us, though we consent not unto them, though we resist them, are yet a swerving from the Law of God, and a breach of it, Luke 10. 27. nay in the regenerate this corruption of our nature doth not only swerve from the Law of God, but opposeth and resisteth the Spirit of God, Rom. 7. 23. Galat. 5. 17. therefore it must needs be sin. This argument convinced Pauls conscience, Rom. 7. 7. He means those motions unto evil which the heart doth not delight in, nor consent unto.

When the Apostle saith Rom. 6. Let not sinne reign in your mortal bodies. By sinne (saith their Cardinal Bellarmine) all men understand concupiscence. And Ribera on Heb. 12. 1. saith, That by sinne the Apostle understandeth concupiscence, calling ling it ſo with an article τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, that is, the ſinne, a note of ſingularity. Cajetan in Rom. 7. calleth it formally a ſinne. Vide Caſſand. Conſult. art. 2. Tit. de Concupiſc. p. 4.

The proper definition of ſinne being this, a tranſgreſſion of Gods Law, therefore concupiſcence is ſin, ſee Exodus 20. 17.

Object. Cant. 4. 7. John 13. 10. Ezekiel 36. 25. Epheſians 1. 4. Therefore the regenerate have no ſin left in them.

Anſw. The Church in this preſent world is ſaid to be all fair, as it wholly ſhines with its Spouſes beauty which it puts on.

Concupiſcence in reſpect of its own nature is a ſin; but in reſpect of the perſon (who is a party regenerate in whom the guilt is pardoned) it is as no ſin. When the Fathers ſay, that luſt is taken away in the regenerate, they underſtand according to the guilt, not the thing. B. Mortons Appeal l. 5. c. 18. Sect. 4.

3. Original ſinne after Baptiſm is not done away; children are perverſe; death cannot ſeize where there is no ſin. How comes it to paſſe that Infants baptized die before they come to actual offending, if Baptiſm have aboliſhed in them their original ſtain? See Mr Pemble of Juſtificat. Sect. 3. cap. 4. pag. 133.

4. The Virgin Mary was not conceived without original ſinne; in her Song ſhe rejoyceth in God her Saviour, Luke 1. 47. & 2. 22. Chriſt came to ſave that which was loſt, Matth. 18. 11. See Job 14. 4. & 1 Cor. 15. 22. Rom. 5. 12, 16. & 3. 9. Gal. 3. 22. Declarat tamen hac ipſa ſancta Synodus, non eſſe ſua intentionis comprehendere in hoc Decreto, ubi de peccato originali agitur. B. & immaculatam

All the ancient Fathers, as farre as we can learn out of their Writings, believed that the bleſſed Virgin Mary was conceived in original ſinne. Vide Rivet. de Patrum authoritate, cap. 7. Daillé of the right uſe of the Fathers, lib. 2. cap 6.

Virginem Mariam, Dei genitricem. Vide Bellarm. de Amiſ. grat. & ſtatu pec. l. 4. c. 16. Agnoſcit ſicut redemptorem, ergo & peccati ſtatum; Chriſti alia prorſus eſt ratio, non enim deſcendit ſalvator ab Adamo generante activè ſed paſſivè tantum, & materialiter ſemen ſuppeditante, quod purgavit in utero Virginis Spiritus Sanctus, & ineffabili modo formavit. Dr Prid. Lect. 21. de pec. orig.

The Dominicans generally hold that ſhe was conceived in ſin.

All are infected with Adams ſin, Pſalm 14. 1, 2, 3. Prov. 20. 9.

1. The Heathens, Pagans, Infidels, Rom. 1. 18, 21, 24, 26, 28, to the laſt.
2. The Jews, Rom. 2. latter end.
3. Chriſtians, Rom. 3. from 9, to 19.

Whence that expreſſion, a ſeed of evil-doers, Eſay 1. 4. and a generation of vipers, Mat. 3. 7. Sin is as vigorous now as at the beginning; men now beget children corrupt, even as well as Adam did after the fall.

4. Infants. Rom. 5. 12, 13. None ſpeaks more fully of original ſinne than Paul: In the fifth Chapter he aſſerts the Doctrine of it, and in the ſeventh he declares the power of it. Infants are innocent in reſpect of actual tranſgreſſion; in reſpect of original pollution, are born blind, lame, How ſeverely did God deal with the children of the Sodomites? Saul was not to ſpare Infant nor ſucking of the Amalekites: How cruel were Pharaoh and Herod to young Infants?

5. Children of believing parents.

All men are equally guilty of original ſin.

In reference to Adam, Rom. 5. 12, 14.

They are equally deprived of Gods Image, Rom. 3. 9, 11. Reprobate to every good work. Originale peccatum eſt aqualiter in omnibus Omnis ſanguis concolor. Petrarch. Pſal. 51. 7. Sive hoc intelligatur de matre communi qua fuit Eva; ſive de ſua ſolum David hoc dixerit; ſignificare voluit eſſe peccatum quaſi naturâ & inſeparabile in hac vita. Menaſſ. Ben Iſrael de fragilitate humana. Impotentia itaq; iſta, ad quam ſequitur obnoxietas ad iram & damnationem naturalis eſt & vocari debet, Eph. 2. 3. non ſecundum naturam creatam à Deo, ſed ſecundum naturam corruptam ab homine, Pſ. 51. 7. Quia itaq; malum iſtud & à natura, ſcilicet corruptâ, eſt originaliter, & in natura ipſa eſt ſubjectivè, & propagatur cum generatione carnali tranſitivè, nec exui poteſt niſi per gratiam ſupernaturalem, naturam ipſam reſtaurantem, non minus naturalis iſta impotentia eſt, & vocari debet, quàm venenum naturale eſt Serpenti, rapacitas lupo. Spanhem. Exerc. de grat. univerſ. Annot. in Sect. 12.

3. Are equally depraved and corrupted, Rom. 3.12,13,14.

Reasons.

1. All men are equally in Adam, one was not more in his loyns than another, Rom. 5.12,19.

2. All men equally partake of the humane nature, are men as much as other men, Esay 58.7. Acts 17.28.

3. Total privations are equal, all men are spiritually dead.

Though the seed of all evil be in every mans heart by nature, yet even among natural men, some are better or rather lesse wicked than others, as one weed is lesse noxious than another.

This corruption shews it self lesse, because of restraining grace.

First, In moral and civil men, whose lives are void of grosse offences; as amongst the Gentiles, Cato, Aristides the just: among Christians, Paul unconverted, and the young man, who said, He had kept all the Commandments of God from his youth up.

Secondly, In such who reverence God and his Ministry, as Herod was better than Ahab who hated Micaiah.

Thirdly, In such as are loving and abhor all malice and quarrelling, than the malicious who are like the Devil, Mat. 9.10 whom it is a torment not to vex and torture men.

Fourthly, Such as are of a true and plain heart.

Fifthly, Such as prefer the publick good before their private.

Yet such (though comparatively good) are not good in a saving way:

1. Because their heart is not renewed all this while.
2. They are not for the powerfull exercise of all duties.
3. They have not a zeal to reclaim others.
4. They understand not the enjoying of God in all his Ordinances. Yet
   1. Their condemnation will be lesse.
   2. God bestows more blessings on them.
   3. They have more peace.

Those which are still in the state of nature are in a miserable condition.

First, They are severed from the best good, the love of God, Rom. 9.25.

Secondly, In danger of hell every moment, Matth. 3.7,10.

Thirdly, Without hope, Ephes. 2.13. of Heaven.

Fourthly, They have no interest in any one promise, 2 Cor. 1.20.

Fifthly, Nothing they do can please God, Esay 1.13. Rom. 8.7,8.

Sixthly, Under the dominion of Satan, 2 Tim. 2. ult.

Seventhly, All his blessings are turned into curses to him, Job 24.18.

Eighthly, What ever afflictions he lies under whilst he continues in that estate, are part of the curse of the punishment due to man, upon the breach of the first Covenant.

Five Properties and Characters of an unconverted person are laid down, Eph. 2. from 1.

First, He walks or lives in a way and course of wickednesse. See Psalm 5.5. Luke 13.27. 1 John 3, 8, 9.

Secondly, He walks according to the age or course of the world. See Rom. 12.2.

Thirdly, Is subject to Satan, 2 Cor. 4.4. obeyes his temptations, and expresseth his Image.

Fourthly, He is a child of disobedience, one wholly addicted to it.

Fifthly, He fulfils the lusts of original sinne in the flesh and mind, John 8.44.

Chap. III.

Of the Propagation of Original Sinne, and Conclusions from it.

HOw original Sinne is propagated:

Nihil est peccato originali (saith Austin) ad prædicandum notius, nihil ad intelligendum secretius; that is, Nothing is more knowne that original sinne is traduced, and nothing more obscure than how it is traduced.

Anima non est ex traduce vetum à Deo, ut vulgò dicitur, creando infunditur & infundendo creatur, ab origine prorsus impolluta, in carne autem sine sinnine, peccatum quod est spirituale, sedem non habet; & si haberet quomodo corpus spiritum inficeret? Non potest (inquit Bellarminus) intelligi, nostro vel ò corrupto quomodo unho labem induceret. Maximè torsit hæc objectio perspicacissimum Augustinum, ut patet in Epistolis ad Hieronymum & Optatum. Anima non extra, nec ex, sed in corpore sibi præparato à Deo, sine labe creata contrahit labem, quæ inibi seminaliter latebat in ipsa anima. Dr Prid. Lect. 11. de pec. orig.

It is propagated from the soul as well as the body, Genesis 5.3. John 3.6. Ezekiel 18. 20.

A spiritual substance cannot take taint from a corporal. This conceit led some learned Fathers into that errour, That the soul comes from the seed; they conceived not the conveyance of original sinne, but so. The scruple a long time stumbled St Austin too, he knew not how else to answer the Pelagiani. Dr Clerk on Eccles. 12.7.

This troubled and staggered Aug. Epist. 28. For if the soul be not naturally traduced, how should original sinne be derived from Adam unto it?

When we say the soul by conjunction with the body is defiled with sin, we mean not that the body works upon the soul, and so infects it, as pitch doth defile with the very touch: but that at the same instant at which God gives the spirit, puts it in the body, Adams disobedience is then imputed to the whole person, and so by consequent, corruption of nature and inclination unto evil, the pain of sin by Gods just appointment follows.

Quo pacto fiat hanc propagationem cognoscere arduum est, & definire periculosum. Molinæus. See Dr Reinolds on the Passions, cap. 32. and Mr Pemble de Origine formarum: and Barradius his Philos. Theol. Ancil. Exerc. 2. Art. 6, 7, 8, 9, &c. Corpus & anima perinde ab Adamo fluunt, modo tamen propagandi differi: illud quidem ex traduce est, hæc verò ex infusione, qua hoc respectu se parente est, quod non animam creat Deus, qua animam simpliciter, sed qua unius de Adami filiis anima est. Deus non solum ut creator considerandus est, sed etiam ut judex. Creator est anima quoad substantiam, cujus respectu cum creatur pura est. Judex est præterea Deus, dum animam creat, quoad hanc circumstantiam scilicet, quod non anima simpliciter ei sit creanda, sed unius ex Adæ filiis anima. Hoc respectu justum est, animam deserere, quoad imaginem, in Adamo amissam: ex qua desertione, sequitur carentia justitiæ originalis, ex qua carentia peccatum ipsum originale propagatur. Sanford. de Defect. Christ. ad infer. l. 3. Animæ nostræ à Deo creatæ nec, accipiunt puritatem seu justitiam & sanctitatem, neq; impuritatem & propensionem ad malum, sed tantum essentiam spiritualem & proprietates ab essentia dimanantes. Sed animæ eo ipso instanti, quo creantur, sunt impuræ, simul unitæ creantur & uniuntur substantialiter cum corporibus contagiosis, ex quibus labem contrahunt. Baron. Philos. Theol. anal. Exerc. 2. Art. 8. Vide etiam Molin. Emdat. gravis Quæst. de pec. orig.

God is a Creator of the soul in respect of the substance, so it is pure; but he is also a Judge, and so he creates the soul not simply as a soul, but as the soul of one of the sons of Adam, in which respect he forsakes it touching his Image, which was lost in Adam, and so it is deprived of original justice, whence followeth original sinne.

Corollaries from Original Sinne.

We must make it part of our businesse daily to consider of this natural corruption (that we may be daily humbled in the sense of it) and to beseech God to help

We should be humble, not only for the sinns of our lives, but for our original sin; so David, Psal. 51. and Paul, Rom. 7. ult. end: the pollution of nature in us: all sin is in our natures virtually, though not formally.

us against it, to keep it down, yea to beſtow his grace upon us to mortifie the deeds of our fleſh. See 1 *Tim.*1.13. This will quicken us to diligence; we have been earneſt in the ſervice of ſin and Satan, *Rom.*6.18.

We're all troubled with a naughty heart, a buſie Devil, and a corrupt world.

We have three great enemies, The World, that by profit, pleaſure enticeth us.

Secondly, The Devil, he makes uſe of the things of this world to draw us to ſinne: he can but ſollicit us to ſinne, cannot compell the will.

Thirdly, Our own Fleſh and corrupt Nature is our worſt enemy, it is an inward and conſtant enemy, James 1. 15. We muſt therefore every day give a hack at the old man, Proverbs 4. 23. Jeremy 4. 14. Uſe the Ordinances to this purpoſe.

a The luſts of our own hearts are greater enemies than the world and Satan, Propter continuam, & intrinſecam adhærentiam, Bonar. 1. Becauſe of their multiplicity and variety, *Tit.*3.3. 2. Their great activity, our thoughts are ſwifter than the Sun. 3. Their pride and ſovereignty.

First, Prayer; Pray in faith, out of a ſenſe of our own miſery, and a confidence that God is able and willing to help us.

Secondly, The Word, that is, the Scepter by which Chriſt rules, the ſword of the Spirit, John 17.17. There is a purging vertue in the promiſes, 2 *Cor.*7.1.

Thirdly, The Sacraments: 1. Baptiſme, It is not only for what is paſt, Romans 6.3. we muſt make conſtant uſe of that to crucifie ſinne. 2. The Lords Supper, There Chriſts death for our ſins is lively repreſented, and it is a ſtrengthening Ordinance.

Secondly, Look to the outward ſenſes; Job made a covenant with his eyes. David ſaith, Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity.

Thirdly, Keep the heart with all diligence, Proverbs 4. 23. Jeremiah 4. 14. Matth. 15, 19.

Thoſe that are regenerate ſhould often think of their eſtate by nature, what they were before converſion, 1 *Cor.*6.11. *Eph.*2.11, 12. Paul much preſſeth Chriſtians in all his Epiſtles, to look backward, what they were by nature, and he himſelf often tels us what a great ſinner he was before his converſion.

We ſhould conſider the wretchedneſſe of every natural and unregerate mans condition, pity them, and pray for them.

First, He is a child of wrath, *Epheſ.*2.3. and of the curſe, 2 *Pet.*2.14.

Secondly, He hath no power to do the leaſt good, *Epheſ.*2.1. Rom. 6.6, 7. All that he doth is diſpleaſing to God.

Thirdly, He cannot receive the leaſt good, 1 *Cor.*2. 14. The Arminians ſay, That natural men have power to believe and repent of themſelves.

Fourthly, The longer he lives in that condition, the more wrath he heapeth up, Rom. 2. 4.

Fifthly, As ſoon as he dies, his ſoul goes to hell, Job 21. 1. and at the general Judgement he muſt be ſeparated from Chriſt, *Matth.*25.32. and there will be no end of his miſery, *Revel.*20.15.

Means to come out of our natural eſtate.

1. Labour to be ſenſible of your condition, *Prov.*30.2.

2. Seek to God often, Pſalm 16.7. James 1.5.

3. Make uſe of Jeſus Chriſt, 1 *Cor.*1.30. *Col.*2.3.

4. Study the Word, *Jer.*8.9.

5. Meditate ſeriouſly of death, *Deut.*32.29. Pſalm 90.10. It ſhews us the vanity of all earthly things, Prov. 11.4. The neceſſity and excellency of grace, *Prov.*12.28.

Reaſons: First, To prevent ſpiritual pride, What haſt thou which thou haſt not received? God hath therefore left the remainders of ſpiritual death in us, to keep down pride; it's one great branch of the Covenant of Grace, They ſhall remember their evil wayes, and loath themſelves for their abominations.

2. To exalt the doctrine of Gods free-grace; The godly know by experience the corruption of nature, and therefore reject that conceit of free-will.

3. That

3. That you may admire the love of Christ, 2 *Cor.*5.14. we need preventing as well as subsequent grace. Be thankfull, watchfull, and compassionate to the wicked: Titus 3.3.

4. That we may not be altogether without hope for our friends that are dead in sin, since God hath quickned us who were so.

Secondly, Be thankfull to God if he have bridled it in some good measure in our selves and ours: Paul is often on this; and pity those that are in the state of nature.

Thirdly, If we have run into any loathsome crimes we should repent of them, and turn to God that we perish not in them.

Fourthly, There is no reason for any one to boast of his natural birth, though never so high, unlesse he partake of the new birth [b], *Eph.*2.3. we all enter into the world equally naked, vile, helpless; our continuance in the world is equally uncertain, and when we die we shall carry nothing out of the world, 1 *Tim.*6.7. See *Eccles.*2.22. & 5.16. Esay 10.3.

Fifthly, It informs us of the great condescension of Christ, that he would assume our nature and purge it; and of the difficulty and excellency of the work of Regeneration, the plaister of sanctification is as large as the sore of original sin, it daily eats up the proud flesh.

[b] ἐυγένεια ἢ εὐσέβεια, saith Greg. Nazianzene, The new birth is the noblest birth. Some say, that by the death of Christ all mankind are restored, and that Infants have no need of regeneration; that then when they grow up fall from the principles which they had in their infancy, and when they return to that condition they were in in their infancy, then they are well; and urge Matth. 8.1. to prove that Infants have principles begun in them, by which they may turn to God.

From the Apostles time to Austins for three hundred years and more (saith Moulin Enodat. gravis. Qu. de peccato Originali) Ecclesiastical Writers wrote not so accurately of original sinne, and therefore seem sometimes more prone to Pelagianism, which Austin l.1. in Julianum c. 2. excuseth, because (saith he) Tali quæstione nullus pulsabatur, & Pelagianis nondum litigantibus securius loquebantur. Austin himself (saith Moulin) at the first spake inconsiderately of this point, but after his conflict with the Pelagians he accurately handled this Question like a stout Champion for the truth, whom Prosper and Fulgentius followed.

CHAP. IV.

Of Actual Sinne.

THere is a two-fold evil, Malum culpæ, sinne; and malum pœnæ, the punishment of sinne. It is the partition of Tertullian against Marcion, l.2. and frequently in the Schools.

This distinction of sin into Original and Actual is according to Scripture, *Deut.*29.18. *Mat.*17.17,18. & 12.34,35. Luke 6.43.

It is a hard thing for any to tell exactly what sinne is, 1 John 3.4. Sinne is the transgression of the Law. The Greek word is a privative word, an anomy, irregularity, illegality. The Greek and Hebrew word for sinne signifies a missing the mark, Peccare est quasi transilire lineam, actus indebitus contra debitum finem.

Ambrose saith, it is a prevarication of the Divine Law. *Piscat. loc.*7. De peccato, Aphorism first, saith, Peccatum est actionis naturæve hominis à lege Dei discrepantia.

See of actual sins, Rom. 7.17. Jam.1.15. They are called the deeds of the old man, Evil works, Dead works, The works of darknesse. See Ainsworth on Deut.17.2.

what transgression is. There are evil thoughts, *Psal.*119.113. Words, Matth. 12.30. James 2.12. Actions, 2 Sam. 16.22.

Austin

[a] Contra Faustum, lib. 22. cap. 27.

Austin[a] saith, It is Dictum, factum, or concupitum contra æternam legem, A saying, deed, or thought against the eternal Law. See Prov. 7. 13.

It may be defined thus:

It is a defect, declination or aberration from the Law, or Will of God, obliging to eternal death. Or thus:

It is a transgression of the Law of God, by omitting some duty which it requireth, or doing of some act which it forbiddeth, Rom. 7. 7.

The Law of God is transgressed:

1. By omitting what is commanded, Jer. 10. ult. Matth. 25. 42.
2. By doing that which is forbidden, as in the first sinne.
3. By failing in the manner of performance.

Before the Law came into the world there was a Law in mens hearts, otherwise sinne could not have been imputed, as the Apostle proves, Rom. 5. 12, 13. the Gentiles were not without a Law, Rom. 2. 14. they could take notice of things contrary to right reason.

The Hebrew tongue, though it be very scanty and penurious of words, in comparison of other languages, yet hath it very many words to expresse sinne and wickednesse.

Chemnitius hath gathered eight names of sinne out of the Old Testament, and eight out of the New. Gerhard hath added eight more, twenty four in all. Amongst all the Ancients Austin hath treated most diligently of sinne. See Exod. 34. 7. Psal. 12. 13. it is called a turning away from God, a defection, rebellion, abomination, filthinesse and lewdnesse, Ezekiel 24. 13. stubbornnesse, Deut. 29. 19. perversnesse, Esay 30. 10. provocation, the metaphorical names are innumerable.

Dr Gell on Levit. 7. 7. He reckons up ten words there.

The divers distinctions of sin.

Many have written great Volumes about the divisions of sin, who can set out the several kinds of it?

Augustinus & Hieronymus ita ponunt, peccata cordis, cogitationum, oris, verborum, operis, membrorum.

They may be taken from the persons which commit it, or the object against whom they are committed; God immediately, as those of the first Table, irreligion, unbelief; our neighbour, injustice, oppression; and our selves, as gluttony, intemperance; from the subject wherein they are, the outward and inward man, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Inward of the minde, will and affections onely, Ephes. 2. 3. Titus 3. 3. Heb. 3. 9. Psal. 10. 3. or outward committed by the members of the body also, Rom. 6. 19. Ephes. 2. 3. Gal. 5. 16. Esay 59. 3. Psalm 36. 3, 4. & 53. 1, 2.

From the causes that produce it, ignorance or knowledge, James 4. ult. Sins

1. Of Ignorance, when a man doth evil, not knowing or judging it to be evil, by reason of his ignorance of the Law, or of the fact done, Lev. 5. 17. Luke 23. 24 1 Tim. 1. 13 Psalm 29. 12.
2. Of Knowledge, when a man sins, knowing that which he doth to be evil, Rom. 7. 14, 15.

Prov. 3. 28. Jer. 48. 10. Omission the transgression of an affirmative precept; commission the transgression of a negative precept.

From the acts of sinne, of omission when a good prescribed is left undone in respect of substance, manner or measure. Of commission, when a thing forbidden is committed, Ezek. 18. 24. and both these are either against the Law, Rom. 3. 27. or Gospel, Heb. 2. 2, 3. 2 Thess. 1. 7, 8.

A sinne of Commission is perpetrated three wayes:

1. By reason of the object; when an action is referr'd to an unlawfull object, as in Idolatry, adultery, theft.
2. By reason of the manner, when there is a failing there, in the principle, end, or circumstances of time, place.
3. By reason of degree.

From the manner of committing them, out of infirmity, or obstinacy, secret or open sins, 1 Tim. 5. 24.

A sin

A ſinne of negligence or infirmity, when a man is overtaken, or prevented with ſome ſinne, before ſuch time as he doth ſeriouſly conſider of the fact, Galat. 6. 1. Heb. 12. 1,2.

That is an infirmity in the body which a man makes not choice of, takes not pleaſure in, and labours to

Of obſtinacy or purpoſe, when a man upon deliberate counſel and purpoſe of heart, doth doe that which he knowes is offenſive in the ſight of God This diviſion is in expreſſe words laid down, Numb. 15. 12. Pſal. 19. 13,14. 2 Pet. 3.

cure, and ſo in the ſoul. It is called a ſin of infirmity, becauſe it doth ariſe from weakneſſe, the ſtrength thereof being taken out and mortified.

A Godly man cannot commit ſinne as the wicked do with full, entire, perfect reſolution, Pſal. 119.3. Some Divines do uſe this diſtinction, that the full will to ſinne may be underſtood two wayes; either it is ſo expounded, as when it is ſaid, the whole world, and ſo the whole man lieth in ſinne, and the whole will is addicted to nothing but ſinne; or that it ſhould be carried with all its force into this or that act of ſinne, without any reluctancy. In the former ſenſe the regenerate cannot ſin with full conſent; but in the later they may, even in greater treſpaſſes, that for the time there is felt no reſiſtance.

A preſumptuous ſin is,

1. Againſt light.
2. It is done with deliberation uſually.
3. They bear themſelves upon the mercy and free grace of God.

Some ſay there are two things in ſinne, The blot or blemiſh, whereby the ſoul is ſtained.

2. The guilt of it, whereby we become actually obnoxious to the curſes of the Law.

Others ſay, There are four things in ſin, 1. Culpa, the fault: 2. Macula, the ſtain: 3. Reatus, the guilt: 4. Dominium, the reign of ſin.

The fault is ſo eſſentially inſeparable to a ſinne, that it can never be taken away, but covered; the other three are taken away by Chriſt, Rom. 8. 2. Titus 1. 15. Heb. 12. 15. Anſwerable to theſe three powers of ſinne are Chriſts three Offices: His Kingdom takes away the reign of ſinne, his Prieſthood the guilt of ſinne, and his Prophetical Office the ſtain of it, Pſal. 119.9.

The fault is continued when the acts of it are repeated, and one relapſeth into the ſame ſin.

Secondly, The ſtain of ſin.

The defilement, blot, and blackneſſe of ſinne is the abſence and privation of that moral rectitude, the want of that whiteneſſe and righteouſneſſe which the holy Law of the Lord requireth to be in the actions, inclinations, and powers of the ſoul of a reaſonable * creature. The ſoul is deprived of that native beauty it had in the ſight of God. Sinne is compared to a menſtruous cloth, a plague-ſore, vomit, mire, called an excrement, James 1.2. It defiles the ſoul, and the very Land, Heſea 4.4. The Sanctuary of God, Ezekiel 44. 7. The Sabbaths of God, Exodus 20. 16. The Name of God, Exodus 20. 39. God himſelf in the eyes of the people, Ezekiel 13. 19. Facinus quos inquinat, aequat. It is compared to the Leaven, which hath three properties, ſay the Fathers, Serpit, inflat, infoecit; To a leproſie, which was, 1. Loathſome: 2. Secret, lurking in the bloud, Lev. 13.2. 3. Spreads: 4. Infects: See 13 and 14 Chapters of Levit.

It is called a ſpot, Deu. 32.5. See Pſal. 51.2. Rev. 22.11. The ſtain of ſin is that filthineſſe whereby the precious ſoul being turned from God is defiled and become unclean, Mat. 15.20. 2 Cor. 7.1 Jam. 1.26. Lyſ. Princ. of faith and good conſc. * Rutherfords Trial and Triumph of Faith, Serm. 19. Maculam (ſi quaſi qua in Juſtificatione tolli dicitur) mihi ignotam eſſe ingenuè fateor, nec à quoquam exponi poſſe quæ tandem ſit exiſtimo. Theologi Pontificii, quum in hujus maculæ naturæ inveſtiganda quingentos propemodum annos ſummo ſtudio & diligentia elaboraverint, nihil reperire potuiſſent quod verum eſſe ulla ratione demonſtraverint, aut demonſtrare conati fuerint. Wotton. de Reconcil. par. 2. l. 2. c. 27. Ne concilium quidem Tridentinum quicquam de maculæ naturæ definitum reliquit, imò eam ne nominavit quidem, nedum explicavit, etſi tam multa Seſ. 6. de juſtific. diſſeruerit. Id. ib. c. 26. Macula importat quendam defectum nitoris propter receſſum à lumine rationis vel divinæ legis. Aquin. 1. 2. Q. 86. Art. 2. The guilt of ſin is properly in the conſcience, but every part is defiled with it, Rom. 3. 13, 14, 15.

The Schoolmen underſtand by the blot an inclination to ſin again.

Thirdly, The guilt.

Somewhat which iſſueth from the blot and blackneſſe of ſin according to which the perſon is liable and obnoxious to eternal puniſhment.

There is a two-fold guilt, ſinfull and penal, Reatus culpæ & pœnæ: the guilt of ſin as ſin; this is all one with ſin, being the very eſſence, ſoul, and formal being of ſin, and is removed in ſanctification. 2. Reatus pœnæ, reatus formalis ſeu actualis, the actual guilt or obligation of the perſon who hath ſinned, to puniſhment; this is fully removed in juſtification.

This is alſo hard to diſcover; ſome make it a middle thing betwixt culpa and pœna. Rutherfords Trial and Triumph of faith. Serm. 19. Reatus eſt obligatio ad pœnam, ut inter crimen & pœnam medius ſit reatus. Voſſius de vitiis Serm. l. 1. c. 32. Reatus pœnæ vel ad pœnam, is the chief thing, which is commonly called guilt, and therefore guilt is obligatio ad pœnam. The guilt continues till we repent and ſue out our pardon, Acts 3. 19

There is a double guilt of ſin:

1. Hereditary, this comes on all by Adam.
2. Perſonal, by the actings of ſin.

This is likewiſe two-fold:

1. Intrinſecal, the merit of ſin, this is inſeparable from it, it deſerves eternal wrath.
2. Extrinſecal, a guilt which God hath added to it, a power which it hath to binde over the ſinner to the juſt vengeance of God, untill he hath made him an amends.

There is a four-fold guilt of ſin:

1. Reatus culpæ, which is an inſeparable conſequence of the offence, there is as neceſſary a connexion between the ſin and guilt, as between the precept and the curſe in the Law.
2. Reatus pœnæ, an obligation and ordination to puniſhment, this may be ſeparated from the ſin: the damned in Hell blaſpheme God, but are not puniſhed for it, 2 Cor. 5. 10.
3. Reatus perſonæ, a guilt that comes upon the perſon; this is taken off by Chriſt the Surety, Rom. 8. 1.
4. Reatus conſcientiæ, Jer. 17. 1. The whole man is the ſubject of the pollution of ſin, conſcience of the guilt, Heb. 9. 14. & 10. 17.

The Properties of this guilt:

1. It is in its own nature incurable by all the power of the creature; he that breaks the precept of the Law, can never break through the curſe of it, Rom. 5. 12. Jude 6.
2. It is univerſal, Morbus Epidemicus, Rom. 3. 19. John 13. 10.
3. Hereditary, conveyed from parents to children, Rom. 5. 17, 18. by one man, and one offence.
4. Loathſome and ſtinking, Pſal. 38. 5.
5. Very troubleſom; a ſmall ſin in the conſcience is like a mote in the eye.
6. Of an infectious and ſpreading nature, Rom. 1. ult. 3 ep. John 10.

Chriſt was that true Scape-goar, Levit. 16. 22. who expiated the ſins of all the Elect laid upon him, and carried them farre from the ſight of God, that they never appear; That is explained by the Prophet, Eſay 53. Eſay 11. and is confirmed by the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 5. 21. if Chriſt had not taken our guilt upon himſelf, (ſaith Sanford de Deſcenſu Chriſti ad inferos lib. 3.) We had been guilty to this day. There are three things (ſaith he) in ſin, the Name, the Fault, the Gulit which may be imputed: the Fault, that is, the fact it ſelf, cannot be imputed but to us ſinners; ſo either the guilt (ſaith he) is imputed to Chriſt, or only the empty name of our ſin.

He proves it alſo there out of the Fathers l 3. p. 103, 104.

Fourthly, The Dominion of ſin.

There is, 1. A virtual dominion in ſin, ſo original ſin reigns.

2. Actual, every mans darling and boſome ſin.

1. The darling ſin keeps Chriſt out of the ſoul.
2. All other luſts are ſerviceable to it.

The diviſion of ſin into ſin reigning or not ruling, is taken out of Rom 6. 12, 14. Rom. 8. 22.

Wicked men are ſaid,

1. To ſerve luſts, Titus 3. 3.
2. To provide for their luſts, Rom. 13. 14.
3. To fulfill the wils of the fleſh, Epheſ. 2. 3.

A godly man (ſome ſay) may have a ſpecial, though not a darling ſin, a maſter ſter ſinne, but not a reigning ſin. Others ſay, he may have a predominant ſinne, not in compariſon of grace, but of other ſins, Pſalm 18.23. Peter was inclined to tergiverſation and ſhrinking in time of trouble, as appears in his denial of Chriſt, *Gal.*2.11,12,13.

Theſe things make a reigniug ſin:

1. Sovereignty in the ſin.
2. Abſolute and uncontrolled ſubjection in the ſinner.

Sovereignty is a Throne of ſinne ſet up in the heart: Three things concur to this;

1. A conqueſt, yet that alone makes it not a reigning, but a prevailing ſinne.
2. Poſſeſſion, a ſtanding power in the heart.
3. The exerciſing of that power.

Secondly, On the ſinners ſide there muſt be a willingneſſe, *Rom.*5. His ſervants ye are whom ye obey, often in that Chapter of the Romans. Jude 11. there is a going on notwithſtanding warning in the way, an obſtinacy in ſin. 2. They ran greedily, or poured out themſelves; there is a free giving of the will to it.

Sins of ignorance and omiſſion may be reigning ſins, Hoſea 4.1. 2 *Theſſ.*1.8. not ſo much the greatneſſe of the ſin as the manner of committing it makes it a reigning ſinne. Secret ſins may be reigning ſins. In the Eaſtern Countreys the King was ſeldom ſeen abroad, Hoſea 7.17. An Oven the more it is ſtopt the hotter it is; ignorance of the act makes it not a reigning ſin, but of the right doth, if one be bound to know it. Sins of thought may be reigning ſins, therein the heart is the Throne, Eſay 59.5. Pray that the thoughts of thy heart may be forgiven thee. Little ſins, ſuch as the world cals little may be committed with a high hand. Every man hath ſome Peccatum in deliciis, as the Fathers call it, ſome boſome or darling ſin, as modern Divines term it, *Mat.*5.29. 2 *Tim.*2.25. A man is proner to ſome ſins than others, in regard of his temper of body, manner of life, education, age, place of living, ſtate, calling, and the like; one mans bodily temper inclineth him to anger, anothers to luſt, a third to carnal ſorrow, a fourth to fear, a fifth to carking and worldly cares. As envy in Saul, covetouſneſſe in Judas, ambition in Abſalom, uncleanneſſe in Herod. This is called in Scripture a mans right eye, his own iniquity, the ſtumbling block of his iniquity.

How to know a mans darling ſin.

1. Nothing is ſo pleaſing to the ſoul, nor ſo much ingroſſeth his thoughts as it; mark what thy ſoul is moſt prone to take pleaſure in, Job 20.12. and what thou moſt thinkeſt of, *Mat.*6.21. Job 17.11. *Hoſ.*14.11.

2. What the Spirit of God in thy moſt ſecret ſoul-ſearchings diſcovers to thee, or thy private friends moſt tell thee of, the guilt of it doth moſt affright thy conſcience when it is awakened.

3. What it is thy heart is moſt carefull to hide, Job 10.13. Men have ſeveral diſtinctions and excuſes for it.

4. It is the ſame which moſt interpoſeth in holy duties, *Ezek.*31.33.

How to know when ones darling ſin is mortified:

Quod non placet, non nocet, Rom.7.17. what diſpleaſeth us ſhall never hurt us.

Sin reigneth not:

1. If we have purpoſe againſt it.
2. If we have grief for it.
3. If we ſeek for ſtrength againſt it. Bains Spirit. Armour.

A diligent and conſtant care to reſiſt a mans own corruption is a ſure proof of uprightneſſe, and ſuch an one ſhall enjoy the comfort of his ſincerity in due time. This is Satans great bait, and by this ſin thou doſt moſt diſhonour God and wound conſcience; becauſe this ſin ſets up another God againſt God.

The reigning power of ſin lies mainly, if not only in the will. There is a fourfold act in the will, and ſin reigns by every one of them. 1. Election, when one chuſeth what ſin commands 2. Doth conſent to all the laws of ſin. 3. Fruition, Epheſ.4.19. 4. The imperium of it, it is the commanding faculty of the ſoul. 2 Sam.22.24. Pſal. 18.23. Ezek.7.19. Every mans boſom ſin ariſeth from the inordinate love of ſome earthly thing, 1 Joh.2.15. Licitis perimus omnes. See Mr Burgeſs of Grace and Aſſurance, Sect.9.Ser.76.

Chap. V.

Of the Evil of Sinne.

God is not in all his thoughts, or all his thoughts are, there is no God.

1. IN regard of God, it ſtrikes not only at his Sovereignty, Pſalm 51.4. but his Being, Pſalm 10.4.

It is contrary to the whole nature of God, *Levit.*26.22. *Col.*1.12. ſtrikes at all his Attributes. If we look on the Sovereignty of God, ſin is rebellion, 2 *Sam.*12.9. if on his Juſtice, ſin is iniquity: If on his goodneſſe, ſin is unkindneſſe; but it eſpecially wrongeth the Holineſſe of God in reſpect of its defilement, Zechary 11.8. Amos 5.21. Habakkuk 1.13. Pſalm 5.4, 5. If we conſider Gods Holineſſe as a Rule, ſin is a tranſgreſſion; if as an excellency, ſin is a deformity.

Sin is againſt the Father, Son and holy Ghoſt:

Firſt, The Father as a Law-giver, 2 Sam. 12. 9. Pſalm 119. 126. 1 John 3.4.

1. It is an irregularity, we are afraid to break the Laws of men.

2. It is an abuſe of his ſpecial love, 1 John 3. 1,2. ſuch cry up the Devil for their Father, 1 John 3.8,10.

Secondly, The Son as Redeemer, ſlights his bloud, 1 John 3.5. againſt his example, 1 John 3.4,7.

Thirdly, The holy Ghoſt, as a Sanctifier, grieves him, Epheſ. 4.30. it is againſt his firſt work of regeneration, 2 *Pet.*1.9. Titus 3.10.

2. His conſtant reſidence, who dwels and works in them, *Rom.*8.13.

It is a ſeparation or averſion of the ſoul from him in theſe reſpects:

In peccato duo attenduntur, ſcilicet converſio ad commutabile bonum, qua materialiter ſe habet in peccato; & averſio à bono incommutabili, quæ eſt formalis & completiva ratio peccati. Aquin. 2. Qu. 162. Art. 6.

Firſt, It is a taking off the ſoul from the love of God, as the greateſt good, and the fear of God and delight in him, relying on him, committing our ſelves to him, *Jer.*2.12,13. James 4.4.

Secondly, A ſeparation from the Law of God as our rule, therefore it is a going beſides, a being without the Law, John 3.4. *Mat.*15.6.

In the Law there is:

1. A rectitude, I have eſteemed thy Commandments in every thing to be right, ſin is a crookedneſſe, Pſalm 125.5.

2. A wiſdom, Wiſdom is juſtified of her children; there is a folly in ſin, the wicked man is called a fool often in the Proverbs, Jeremy 8.9.

3. There is a purity and holineſſe in the Law, Thy Commandments are very pure, therefore thy ſervant loveth them, Rom. 7.12. Sinne is filthineſſe it ſelf.

4. There is an harmony in the Law, ſin is a diſharmony.

5. There is a liberty in the Law, James 2.8. Sin is a bondage, 2 Tim.2.26.

6. The keeping of the Law brings a reward, but ſin, ſhame and death, Rom. 6.22,23.

In the leaſt ſins:

1. There is an infinite breach made betwixt God and us.

2. No finite creature can make up this breach, only an infinite God, who muſt be made man, and a curſe for us.

Thirdly, It takes away the ſoul from the dominion of God, We will not have this man to reign over us; therefore it is often called rebellion.

Fourthly, Defaceth the Image of God, it doth this not only meritoriè but phyſicè, not only provokes God to take away his Image, but in the nature of it blots it out, *Gal.*5.17. as one contrary expels another.

Fifthly, It ſevers us from communion and fellowſhip with God, *Jer.*2.13. Pſalm 10.4. Job 21.4. it makes much for the eternal ſeparation.

Sixthly, It ſevers us from the conformity and likeneſſe we had with God in our firſt first Creation, it's a disconformity of our judgments to the judgment of God, and a disagreement of our wils from the will of God.

Seventhly, It alienates the soul from God, and turns it against him as an enemy, Colos. 1. 21. men are stiled therefore haters of God, Rom. 1. 30. Evil only should be the object of thy hatred, there is no evil in God, fighters against God, Acts 5. 39. There is an infiniteness in sinne objectivè, though not subjectivè, it is committed against an infinite God, though it be in a finite creature.

Two things manifest the enmity of the heart to God. 1. A mans averseness from Christ and the way of the Gospel. 2. His unwillingness to rely upon God alone for succour. Omne peccatum est deicidium, say the Schools, It strikes at the very essence or being of God: Every sin saith, I would have no God, Rom. 8. 7. Abstractum denotat essentiam. The love of God consists in this; Velle Deum esse Deum, say the Schoolmen, to will that God should be what he is; hatred of God, (looking upon him, but ratione mali) is the contrary.

Secondly, In respect of all creatures; all the antipathies betwixt the creatures, came in by mans sin, Genesis 2. 29. man had an admirable dominion over them before the fall, they took delight to obey him, now they will not be subject to him. They are all fading, deceiving and defiling, Eccl. 1. 14. Titus 1. 15.

Rom. 8. 23. There is a double curse come upon the creatures, not only a general curse on them all in the fall, but a particular curse; the fig-tree lay under a general curse, and it would have withered with that, but because of the particular curse it withered presently.

Thirdly, The reasonable creatures, it hath defiled the Angels, Job 4. 17, 18. the Devil is called The evil one.

It poisoned all mankind at one draught, Rom. 8. 19, 20. who can reckon up the particular evils that befall him by reason of sin?

Vide Lombard. lib. 2. Sentent. dist. 25. & Aquin. 1, 2. Quæst. 85. Art. 1. Sins proper end is the dishonour of God, and the ruine and abasement of the nature where it is, the Law hath put another end on it, the manifestation of Gods justice, but Christ puts a new end on it, the Lord will exalt his grace and mercy in the pardoning of it. Sin hath defiled the soul in point of purity, and disquieted it in point of serenity. The soul of man in its creation exceeded the Sun in glory in its greatest splendour.

The evil of sinne goes through the whole man. It is expoliatio gratuitorum, say the Schools, a stripping of the soul of all those supernatural excellencies that God gave unto man in his Creation. 2. Vulneratio naturalium, the wounding of the soul in things moral and natural, Naturæ vires non sunt ablatæ sed diminutæ. A mans soul is carried after truth and good, accompanied with difficulty or delight. As the soul is carried after truth, it is called the mind, as after good the will, as after good that is difficult there is facultas irascibilis, heat in the affections; as the good is accompanied with delight, there is facultas concupiscibilis. The mind is now carried after error, and there is an unrighteous frame of spirit, one can resist no temptation, there are inordinate affections.

Sin is the utter enemy of the soul, 1 Pet. 2. 11. in six particulars:

1. To the purity of it, it hath taken away the beauty of it.
2. To the dignity and excellency of the soul, Reuben by sin was cast down from his excellency.
3. To the liberty of it, we are taken captives by Satan at his will.
4. To the strength of the soul, Ezekiel 16. 30. the Latines call it, Impotens libido.
5. To the peace of the soul, Ubi peccatum ibi procella.
6. To the safety and life of the soul, 2 Thess. 1. 9.

More especially fleshly lusts, they do more deeply defile, 2 Peter 2. 20, 21. and most strongly enslave, they are peccata maximæ adhærentiæ, as the Schools speak, Those that go in to her (saith Solomon of the whore) return not again; not usually: they do destroy the peace of the soul, Vastare conscientiam, being against natural light, they bring swift destruction. It is unsuitable to thee, contrary to thy duty and new nature, 1 John 3. 9.

Sinne is called darkness and crookedness in Scripture, it is a deviation from the Law of God, it deformeth the soul, it is the disease of it, Psalm 103. 3. it defileth fileth the ſoul: there is a macula in it: it is called filthineſſe, therefore there needs waſhing, purging, cleanſing.

It brings many calamities on the outward man, many diſeaſes, ſome are born blind, others dumb; ſome reckon up three hundred diſeaſes of the eye; every age diſcovers as new corruptions in the ſouls of men, ſo new diſeaſes in their bodies: Theſe are not from the condition of our nature, as the Pelagians ſay, but the demerit of our ſins, natural evils, hunger, thirſt, nakedneſſe, ſhortneſſe of life, there is a certainty of dying, yet an unwillingneſſe to die. Auſtin ſaith, after his friend was taken away, he was continually afflicted, Tadio vivendi & metu moriendi. Adde to this the loſſe of Heaven, Glory, and the torments of Hell, that God (who is love it ſelf) ſhould judge his creature to eternal torments; ſinne meritoriouſly cauſed hell and maintains it.

It is called evil, ſine adjecto, Rom. 7. 13. The holy Ghoſt could not call it by a worſe name than it ſelf. But ſin that it might appear ſin, prædicatio identica, and after, that ſin by the commandment might become exceeding ſinfull, hyperbolically ſinfull. It is a ſpreading evil.

Fourthly, It appears from the names of it, it is called Evil in the abſtract, Pſalm 5. 4. & Pſalm 97. 10. It is evil, the worſt evil, all evil, either formaliter, efficienter, or meritorie. There is more evil in one ſinne than good in all the creatures in Heaven and earth, Mat. 16. 26. one ſin will undo the ſoul which all creatures cannot ranſome, becauſe they cannot make God ſatisfaction in point of good or honour, ſin is both damnum and injuria, a ſoul is loſt and a wrong offered to God.

Fifthly, From the nature of it. That which is only and perfectly contrary to the greateſt good (God) muſt be the greateſt evil, and that which is contrary to all good hath all evil in it.

1. It is contrary to God the greateſt good, Col. 1. we are ſaid to be enemies to God, and Rom. 1. 30. Haters of God It is contrary,

1. To his glory, both eſſential, that which is in himſelf, and ſhines forth in Chriſt, Heb. 1. and manifeſtative, that glory which he hath manifeſted in all the works of Creation and Redemption, Prov. 16. 3.

1. It denies the glory due to God, Rom. 1. 21. Titus 1. 16.

2. Deſpiſeth his glory, Pſalm 10. 13. Ezekiel 13. 19.

3. Reproacheth God and all his Excellencies, his Juſtice, Rom. 3. 2. turns mercy and grace into wantonneſſe, abuſeth his patience, all his diſpenſations.

4 Miſemployeth his glory, gives it to ones ſelf, to men, the very Devil, He caſts out Devils by Beelzebub.

The damned in hell hate God, becauſe they are ſealed up in their obſtinacy againſt him, Iſa. 51 20. Revel. 16. 9. Aquinas brings that place to prove it, Pſalm 74. ult.

2. It wrongs God in his Nature and being, Pſal. 14 1. Every ſinner wiſheth there were no God; he hates God for himſelf; ſo the Devil and damned.

2. It is contrary to the Rule of goodneſſe, the Law; it is a tranſgreſſion of it, it looks upon it as a vain thing, Pro 1. 7. as a needleſſe thing, Heb. 2. 3. 1 Theſſ. 5. 20. as a burden or yoke, Pſalm 2. 3. Eſay 5 21, 24. as a hatefull thing, Leviticus 26. 15. as an unreaſonable thing, Pſalm 107. 11.

Sixthly, It hath been alwayes counted the greateſt evil by thoſe that are able to judge.

1. By God he hates nothing but ſin, he loves himſelf, his Son, his people, all his creatures: but his hatred is ſet on ſin onely, therefore he counts nothing evil but ſinne.

2. Chriſt was content to undergo all other evils.

The Angels dare not ſin, Jude v. 9. The creatures are not exorbitant. Aquin. part 1. Q. 48. Art. 6. proves, that Culpa habet plus de ratione mali quam pœna; 1. Quia ex malo culpæ ſit aliquis malus, non ex malo pœnæ; 2. Quia Deus eſt auctor mali pœnæ, non autem mali culpæ. Gods greateſt puniſhment is to puniſh ſin with ſin. He that is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill, the greateſt puniſhment in hell is ſin, as the Saints obedience in Heaven is pars præmii, ſo the blaſphemy of the wicked in hell is pars pœnæ, ſay the Schoolmen. There is more evil in the cauſe than the effect.

3. The Saints counted nothing evil in compariſon of ſinne, Heb. 11. 25. The Martyrs choſe rather to lay down their lives, than to admit of any thing againſt their conſcicences. Mallem, ego mundus à peccato gehennam intrare quam peccatorum ſordibus pollutus regnum Cælorum tenere, ſaith Anſelme. One ſhould rather venture the ſalvation of all mankind, than commit one ſin to ſave them.

Seventhly, There is more evil in ſin than in all ſufferings whatſoever, they are but

but the issues of sin: Moses chose rather affliction, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.

Sin is a transgression of Gods Law, Matth. 5. 19. and deserves hell, Rom. 6. ult. Luke 6. 20. to 23.

2. In the evil of affliction the offence is done to us; in sin the offence is done to God.

3. Sin separates from God, Esay 59. 2. but affliction doth not.

4. Sin is evil in it self, but affliction not so, Heb. 12. 11.

5. An afflicted estate may consist with love of God, not a sinfull.

6. Afflictions may be good if sanctified to us, Rom. 8. 28. not sins, Rom. 7. 23.

7. Nothing debaseth a man more than sin: Nebuchadnezzar put out among the beasts was in a worse condition, than Daniel when put into the Lions den.

8. The evil of suffering is but momentany, of sin everlasting.

9. Christ delivered us from the greatest evil, viz. sin, Mat. 1, 21. Acts 3. 26.

10. Sin hinders prayer, 1 Peter 3. 7. affliction quickens to duty, Esay 26. 6.

For Suffering:

1. We have Gods warrant, are called to it, 1 Pet. 2. 13.

2. His command to take up our Crosse.

3. Christs example, he hath left us a copy to write after.

4. The end of sufferings is glory, of sin shame.

5. By suffering we lose some outward good, by sin the soul.

6. God hath promised to be with us in suffering, never in sinning.

Sin made hell, Rom. 2. 5, 11. and is worse than Hell: Puts a sting into death, 1 Cor. 15. 56.

1. God is the author of all punishment, and of hell it self: Tophet is prepared, but he is not the author of sin, James 1. 14.

2. Some say Christ underwent the torments of * Hell in the essential parts of them, the wrath of God immediately upon his soul, but would not admit of the least sin, Psalm 110. ult.

3. In hell there is some good, the vindicative justice of God is glorified, there is no good in sinne.

4. Hell is contra bonum creatum against a created good, sinne contra bonum increatum, against an uncreated good, the glory of God.

Eighthly, Every sin is after a sort the greatest evil, as God is the greatest good. After a sort (I say) Non datur summum malum, quod sit causa omnis mali, say the Schools. For it would then follow, that there are two first Principles of things good and evil, which was the heresie of the Manichees.

1. God is per se bonus, so sinne is per se malum, evil in it self, and good in no respect.

2. As God is to be loved for himself, because he is the chiefest good, so sinne is to be hated for it self, one should hate sin as sin, and then he will hate every sin, aquatenus ad omne valet consequentia.

3. God is the great reward of himself, and sin the great punishment of it self, Hosea 8. 11. Austin speaks of a pœnalis vitiositas.

Ninthly, Every one sin doth virtually contain in it all sins, an idle word the sin against the holy Ghost, Rom. 5. 14. the sinne of Adam is called one mans offence. See Heb. 12. 15.

Therefore it is the property of a gracious heart to choose the greatest afflictions before the least sinne, Heb. 11. 25. Ne minimum malum propter maximum bonum.

1. What pains you most, Zec. 12. 10. What is your deep, constant, lasting trouble. 2. When you are afflicted, do you desire to have affliction sanctified or removed Job 36. 21.

Robertus Winchelsey Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis sæpe hanc usurpare solebat sententiam, cum de ærumnis quas in exilio perpessus est incideret mentio, nihil nocebit adversitas ubi nulla iniquitas dominatur. Godwinus de Præsul. Ang. Comment.

* See Field on the Church, p. 418. Perk. vol. 1. pag. 215. B. Bilson dislikes this in his Full Redemp. of mankind by the death of Christ, from p. 14. to 136. Pag. 135. he saith, that hell pains were never added to Christs crosse for 1300 years since the Apostles time.

Chap. VI.

Of the Degrees of Sinne.

IT was an errour of the [a] Stoicks which Tully refuted, and of the Jovinians which Jerome refuted, that all ſinns were equal. Though all ſinnes be mortal yet they are not equal. They are diſtinguiſhed in name and really, there are ſeveral puniſhments, one ſin may be heavier and greater than another in divers reſpects.

[a] The Stoicks thought all ſinnes were of an equal nature, becauſe to ſin is tranſilire lineas, to paſſe the bounds, but ſome may ſhoot wider than others, though both miſs the mark. The Scripture evidently confutes this opinion, John 16. 11. 1 Timothy 5. 8. Ezekiel 16. 47. 2 Peter 2. 26, 27. Some ſins are compared to Camels, others to Gnats, ſome to Beams, others to Motes, ſome to Talents, others to farthings. As there are degrees of graces and virtues, ſo of ſinnes. He that commits adultery by carnall copulation, is a greater ſinner than he that looks upon a woman to luſt after her. He that cals his brother Raca is not ſo great a murtherer as he that takes away his life.

In reſpect of the object, 1 Sam. 2. 25. Zech. 2. 8. Pſal. 7. 5. Prov. 3. 29. Exod. 22. 28. Acts 23. 5. Idolatry is a greater ſin than theft, the cauſe Lev. 4. 2. & 6. 2. the Law, quality, Prov. 6. 30, 31. the matter, the ſoul-ſinning, Matth. 5. 13. and 10. 15. Luke 12. 27. John 19. 11. the ſin of a profeſſour or publick perſon : Alphonſus, King of Spain ſaid, a great man could not commit a little ſin, the time, 1 Samuel 2. 17. John 9. 41. the place, effects, end, and manner of ſinning, as when one knows it to be a ſin and commits it, when ſins are lived in, one committed in the neck of another, or the ſame ſin is often committed.

There are greater puniſhments alſo for greater ſinners. See Mat. 10. 15. & 11. 22 & 23. 14. & John 19. 11.

There are Fautores, actores, and authores. Sins againſt the firſt table, cæteris paribus are greater than ſins againſt the ſecond,

A ſin againſt God in that reſpect is greater than a ſin againſt man.

1. From the object who is ſo infinitely excellent.

2. The graces which have reference to God, are far more than the duties to our neighbour.

3. There is a leſſe motive to offend God than our neighbour.

4. It doth therefore become a ſin, becauſe God is diſobeyed, whoſe Law is to love our brother.

5. By proportion, if a ſinne againſt our neighbour be leſſe which is againſt his goods than his life, becauſe it is a greater good, then much more concerning God : Life is a greater good than riches, God is to be more eſteemed than life or goods are.

6. That which is againſt a higher end, is a more hainous ſinne; there are ſenſuall and ſpirituall luſts, Eph. 2. 3. 2 Cor. 7. 1. ſinnes of the ſoul are greater than the ſinnes of the body in that reſpect, though otherwiſe there are greater aggravations, therefore the heart is called the good or bad treaſure, becauſe it gives all the ſinfulneſſe to the action.

See Shepheard's Sincere Convert, chap. 3. Peccata ſpiritualia ſunt majoris culpæ quam peccata carnalia, non quaſi quodlibet peccatum ſpirituale ſit majoris culpæ quolibet peccato carnali, ſed quia conſiderata hac ſolâ differentia ſpiritualitatis & carnalitatis graviora ſunt, quam cetera peccata, cæteris paribus. Aquinas 1, 2. qu. 73. art. 5. vide plura ibid.

Inward ſins are greater than outward ſins, Mat. 5. 27. Pſalm 5. 9.

1. They are the cauſes of outward ſinnes, Matthew 15. 18, 19. and 12. 35. John 13. 2.

2. They are the corruption of the chief part of a man, the underſtanding, judgement, thoughts, Mat. 6. 22. hence the Apoſtle praies for ſanctification in the Spirit, Eph. 4. 23.

3. They are againſt the chiefeſt part of Gods Law in regard of the obligation of

it,

it, Rom. 7. it is ſpiritual, his Law looks to the ſpirit and ſoul of a man.

4. From the contrary, inward obedience is far more acceptable, that is a great complaint by the Prophets, this people draw nigh with their lips, but their hearts is far from me.

5. The ſinnes of the Spirit do moſt imitate and and reſemble the Devil, he cannot be a Drunkard, an Adulterer, becauſe he is a ſpiritual ſubſtance, therefore his ſinnes are pride, malice, and envy, Rom. 2. 29. the Devils are called ſpiritual wickedneſſes, Eph. 6. all ſin is from Satan per modum ſervitutis, ſpiritual ſins per modum imaginis.

6. Where there is the greateſt delight and union, there is the greater ſinfulneſs, they rejoyced to do evill, Amos 3.

1. They are more abundantly in the heart than in the life, Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeaks.

2. They are continually in the heart, Romans 2. Sinne that dwels in me. Evill thoughts are, 1. A tranſgreſſion of the Law, as well as outward acts, the Law ſaith, Thou ſhalt not luſt, Deut. 15. 9. ſome ſinnes are perfected in the thought, as envy and malice, though they come not into act, the Devils wrath, malice, envy, make him an unclean ſpirit. 2. We are called to repent of thoughts, and ask pardon of them, Acts 8. 22. See Iſaiah 55. 7. the heart is the ſeat of the thoughts, God cals for the heart. 3. Conſider the multitude of our vain thoughts.

Luſts are, 1. Radicall, and habituall ſo corrupt nature in general James 1. 14. this is called the body of ſinne and of death, in the 6th and 7th Chapters of the Romans. 2. Acted. 1. Without conſent, Rom. 7. 7. 2. With conſent, James 1. 15. & 4. 1, 2. All evil is worſt in the fountain, Matth. 21. 31. Senſual luſts deprive us of communion with God, we

7. They are as incompatible with grace and ſanctification as outward groſs ſins are, for that is a holy nature, and regeneration is chiefly in the underſtanding and will.

8. They do more ſtrongly oppoſe the Spirit of God which works upon the ſoul firſt and the intellectual parts.

9. The cure of theſe is harder, partly becauſe they are more rooted, and partly becauſe they are more unperceivable, and alſo becauſe there are not thoſe bridles to curb them which might be in outward ſins: there diſgrace hinders, and the Laws of men. There are peccata carnalia & majoris infamiæ, & ſpiritualia & majoris culpæ. Gerſon. Yet outward ſins in ſome reſpects are above theſe.

1. Becauſe they are more ſcandalous and offenſive.

2. Outward acts ſtrengthen inward corruptions more.

3. They ſometimes argue a more ſenſeleſs and cauterized conſcience.

4. There are greater means and motives againſt theſe, a mans natural conſcience tels him that theſe outward acts are ſins.

can never give them content, they are diſquieting and debaſing luſts. Spirituall luſts uſually aſſault the higheſt perſons, men of greateſt parts, Rom. 1. 30. Elymas, Achitophel, Jeroboam, Machiavel, and of high condition, the very Saints are apt to be proud of ſpirituall gifts, theſe luſts are more ſubtle and deceitfull than ſenſuall luſts, they are not eaſily diſcerned, and have ſpecious pretences, one is not ſoon convinced of ſpirituall pride. The operation of ſpirituall luſts is more vehement and impetuous, the body moves ſlowly but the thoughts ſwifter than the Sun. Senſuall luſts make us like a Beaſt, ſpirituall like the Devill, Judas is called Satan.

Sins of omiſſion are great ſins, there are great threatnings againſt them, Judges 5. 23. They defraud God of his right, Luke 13. 7. Jeremiah 20. 25. they fit the heart for doing evill, Pſalm 14. 4. the not doing of good is the doing of evill James 4. 17.

The Law of God is affirmative and negative, it conſiſts of precepts and prohibitions, Pſal. 34. 14. and 37. 27. Iſa. 1. 16. Rom. 12. 9. Amos 5. 15. they argue a contempt of Gods authority, as well as ſinnes of commiſſion, and as much hatred of God and our unregeneracy, Epheſ. 2. 10. Rom. 3. 10.

They proceed from evill cauſes, and produce evil effects.

They proceed,

1. From prophaneneſs, the remainders of corruption in the beſt, Job 21. 15.

2. From ſloath, Matthew 25. 26. Canticles 5. 2.

3. From worldlineſs, Luke 14. 18.

4. From delay of duty, Acts 24. 25.
5. From flatneſs in duty.

2. They produce evil effects.

In the inward man grace languiſheth, luſts increaſe, 1 Theſſalonians 6. 19, 20. Job 15. 4. And in the outward man, men thrive not in the world, the neglect of worſhip and charity, Jeremiah 10. 25. Matthew 25. 42.

They are the great ſins of our lives, and go beyond ſins of commiſſion in theſe particulars.

There is in Chriſt both active and paſſive obedience his active anſwers the precept, his paſſive your tranſgreſſion of the prohibition. Pœna damni in hell anſwers to ſins of omiſſion, as ſenſus to thoſe of commiſſion.

1. The greatneſs of the evil of ſin is to be meaſured by the greatneſs of the Law, that is the greateſt Law in which the mind of the Law-giver is moſt. In every commandement there is a precept and prohibition, the precept commands duty, the prohibition forbids ſin, omiſſions are againſt the precept the main thing, the curſe is but the accidental part. He breaks the firſt Commandment, hath not Jehovah for his God, who doth not love, fear, truſt in him; as well as he that ſets up an Idol to worſhip him.

2. The firſt and main evil of ſin was in the omiſſion. Sin firſt draws away from God before it enticeth, James 1. 22. Jeremiah 2. 13. To ſpeak exactly, there is no ſin but that of omiſſion, it is a deficiency and coming ſhort of the rule.

3. The ſtate of unregeneracy lies mainly in the ſins of omiſſion, there is much more evil in a ſtate of ſin than in the act of it, Epheſians 2. 12. the reign of ſin is more ſeen in omiſſion than commiſion, there is a higher act of ſoveraingty in the negative voice, than in any poſitive Law.

When Satan tempted Eve, he firſt turned the heart from God. Malum commiſſionis & omiſſionis in aliquibus conveniunt & in aliquibus differunt. Conveniunt, 1. Quod utrumque contra legem. 2. Quod utrumque etiam eſt privatio rectitudinis debitæ & per legem requiſitæ. Differunt tamen, 1. Quia malum omiſſionis eſt contra præceptum affirmativum: Commiſſionis contra præceptum negativum. 2. Differunt ratione fundamenti; quia malum commiſſionis immediatè ſemper fundatur in actu aliquo aut habitu; malum omiſſionis non ſed in ipſa anima, Barlow. exercit. 2.

Sinnes of omiſſion are not all alike, ſome are greater, ſome leſſer.
1. The greater the duty, the worſe the omiſſion, as of faith, love, and the fear of God.
2. The more ſeaſonable the duty, the worſe the neglect, Eſth. 4. 13. Prov. 17. 26.
3. The more general and common, the worſe the neglect, Jer. 10. 25.
4. The eaſier the duty, the worſe the neglect, Amos 2. 16. Luke 16. 29. as in Adams ſinne. 5. When the duty is ſtrongly inforced by the Spirit of God, Job 15. 4. 6. When the omiſſion is continued, though the puniſhment of it be upon us, Rev. 2. 18. 7. To omit the good we have found benefit and ſweetneſſe by, Iſa. 43. 22. A ſinne of omiſſion is an averſion of the heart from God and duty in ſome thing commanded, as that of commiſſion is a converſion or turning to the creature and ſomething forbidden, Jud. 5. 23. Jer. 10. 25. 2 Theſ. 1. 7, 8. 1 Cor. 9. 16. There is an averſion from God before there is a converſion to the creature, James 1. 14.

4. The ground of every ſin of commiſſion is a ſin of omiſſion, turning away the ſoul from God, Pſalm 14. 1, 2. Job 15. 4. James 1. 14. John 20. 24, 25. Romans 1. 21. compared with 24. 2 Theſ. 2. 10.

5. The greatneſs of ſin is meaſured by the miſchief it doth the ſinner, ſins againſt the Goſpel are greater than thoſe againſt the Law, ſinnes of commiſſion make the wound, ſins of omiſſion keep you from the plaiſter, John 3. ult.

6. Theſe are the ſinnes which Chriſt will mainly enquire after, Matthew 25. 42, 43.

We ſhould loathe ſinnes of omiſſion which in the world are little made of, 1 Samuel 12. 23. Wo unto me if I Preach not the Goſpel, ſaith Paul. Peter and John ſay, We cannot but ſpeak the things which we have heard. Theſe omiſſions directly oppoſe the will, law, and honour of God, as well as the committing of foul faults. 2. They will damn us as well as commiſſions. 3. They will make way for groſs evil deeds.

There are three ſorts of omiſſions,

1. Totall, non-performances, not praying, reading, hearing, meditating; Pſalm 14. 4, 5.

2. Seldome performances, intermiſſion or performing of duties unevenly, 1 Theſſalonians 5. 17. Coloſſians 4. 2.

3. Slighty performances, when we keep a tract of duty, but do it cuſtomarily, pray not fervently and ſpiritually, Romans 12. 11.

Sinnes

Sins of commiſſion are greater in ſome reſpects,

1. We ſeem to be more inclined to ſins of commiſſion, we cannot indure the yoak, we are ready to eat the forbidden fruit.

2. They are more ſenſible to us, natural conſcience will ſmite for them.

3. They harden more, David was along time before he repented of his adultery.

4. There is more expreſſe contrariety to God in theſe.

5. They are ever accompanied with omiſſions of good, James 1.14. Jeremiah 2. 13.

Sins againſt the Goſpel are greater than ſins againſt the Law.

1. The more Laws are tranſgreſt the greater the ſin.

There are three ſorts of Laws,

1. The Law of nature, which teacheth to do good to them that do good to us. Matthew 5.43.

2. The Morall Law, which requires ſubjection to whatever God commands.

3. The Law of faith, Rom. 3. 27. which requires ſubjection to God in his Son: all theſe are broken by ſinning againſt the Goſpel.

2. The more of the mind of the Law-giver is in the Law, the greater is the ſin, Mens legis eſt lex: Gods mind is clearly ſeen in the Goſpel, viz. the exalting of himſelf in his Son, Proverbs 8. 30.

3. The more any one ſins againſt light, the greater the ſin; there was never ſuch a diſcovery of the filthineſs of ſin, nor of the juſtice of God upon: ſinit could not be purged but by the bloud of God, Acts 12.28. See Epheſians 5.26. never ſuch a diſcovery of Gods grace as in the New Covenant, a ſecond Covenant was never tendred to the Devils, John 15. 22.

Goſpell-ſinnes are theſe.
1. Unbelief of the promiſes.
2. Impenitence.
3. Apoſtaſie.
4. Preſumption, or diſpaire.

4. They are ſins againſt higher love; God loved Adam and the Angels Amore amicitiæ, they had never offended him, he loved us Amore miſericordiæ, Romans 5. 8. he loved Adam and Angels in themſelves, us in Chriſt, Epheſians 1. 6.

5. Theſe ſins make way for the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, Mat. 12. 32. Objectum hujus peccati non eſt lex ſed Evangelium.

There are three notable places in the Hebrews, Heb. 2. 3. & 10. 28, 29. & 12. 25. See Heb. 6. 6.

The ſins of Gods people are greater than others ſins. They diſhonour God more, they ſin againſt greater obligations, are more contagious.

In eadem ſpecie peccati gravius peccat fidelis quam infidelis, Grace aggravates and heightens ſin. They ſin, 1. Againſt the cleareſt light, Pſalm 51. 6. 2. The deareſt love, peculiar goodneſs, electing love, Eſay 1. 4. 3. Againſt ſpecial grace and the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, Epheſians 4. 30. 4. Againſt ſpecial Covenant and ingagement, Jeremiah 2. 20. and ſpecial deliverance from great dangers, Ezra 9. 13, 14. 5. Againſt more glorious comforts, ſome taſte and experience of the bitterneſſe of ſin, the ſweetneſs of obedience and communion.

Yet the ſins of the godly in other reſpects are not ſo bad as thoſe of the wicked.

1. All in a godly man is not ingaged in ſin. He that is born of God, ſins not at that rate as the wicked do.

2. There is a ſeed remaining, a principle of grace that oppoſeth ſin in his iniquity, there is not leudneſs.

3. He is under mercy when he ſins, 1 John 3. 2. the other is under wrath.

4. Gets ſome advantage by his fals, the other grows worſe.

By the greatneſſe of the precept we may judg of the greatneſſe of the tranſgreſſion, Matth. 22. 38.

Of all ſins to be without God, or out of Covenant with God, is the greateſt ſinne; it is againſt the great command in the Law, the firſt Commandment, and the great promiſe in the Goſpel.

Thoſe ſins wherein a mans ſelf is the object are the worſt of all ſins, ſelf-deceit is the worſt of all deceits, and ſelf-murder is the worſt of all murders.

There are ſome particular ſinnes which moſt grieve the holy Ghoſt, Epheſians 4. 30.

1. Againſt the firſt Table.

1. Hardneſs of heart, Mark 3. 5. Acts 17. 51.

2. Murmuring againſt Gods providence, Mal. 2. 17.

3. Senſuality, or an inclination to carnal delights, Jude 19. ſuch are uncapable of the illumination of the ſpirit, Epheſians 5. 18. of the quickning and efficacy of the Spirit, Hoſea 4. 19. and are ſtrangers to the comforts of the Spirit.

4. Worldlineſs, 1 Peter 1. 3. 2 Corinthians 5.

5. Idle and wandring thoughts in duty, Ezekiel 33. 31. the nouriſhing of vain thoughts in the heart, Jeremiah 4. 14.

6. Security and careleſneſs in the ſpiritual life, 2 Timothy 1. 6.

7. Deſiring the gifts and graces of the Spirit for a wrong end, Pſalm 51. 15. As Simon Magus would have the gifts of the Spirit to keep up his reputation.

2. Againſt the ſecond Table.

1. Raſh anger, contrary to love meekneſs and gentleneſs, Gal. 5. 20. 1 Tim. 2 8. 1 Peter 3. 7. Eph. 4. 26, 27.

2. Corrupt communication, Epheſians 4. 29. James 3. 11.

3. Idleneſs in our callings.

4. Lying, Eph. 4. 31. John 8. 44. Prov. 6. 19.

The degrees of ſin in a mans own heart, or the conception, birth and perfection of ſin there.

1. Fomes ſeu depravatio inhærens.

2. Suggeſtiones cogitationum & affectuum, id eſt, quando depravatio originalis movet ſe aliqua inclinatione.

First, Injection or ſuggeſtion from Satan, which ſtirs up the luſts in the heart, 1 John 5. 19.

Secondly, The ſoul receives the thought, there muſt be Partus cordis as well as ſeminarium noſtis. Bernard. Job 17. 11.

Thirdly, Delectatio, the ſoul is pleas'd with ſuch thoughts, ſo Eve.

Fourthly, Upon this the will conſenteth, then luſt is conceived.

Fifthly, There is a conſultation in the ſoul how to bring this into act, Romans 13. 14.

3. Delectatio. 4. Conſenſus. 5. Ipſum opus. Chemnit. loc. Commun.

As there is a growth in grace, ſo there is a thriving in ſin, when men are ſoon drawn to ſin, delight in it, ſin with little reſiſtance, ſhame, or fear, are bold and reſolute in ſinning, ruſh into it, as the horſe into the battle, Eccleſiaſtes 8. 11. Epheſians 4. 19.

Vice is firſt pleaſing, then it grows eaſie, then delightfull, then frequent, then habituall, then confirmed, then the man is impenitent, then he is obſtinate, then he reſolves never to repent, and then he is damned. Dr Jer. Taylor on Jer. 7. 9. 2d part.

CHAP. VII.

That all Sinnes are Mortal.

THe Schoolmen [a] and their followers the Jesuites [b] distinguish sins into Venial and Mortal. Some sins say they are sua natura, in their own nature venial, others mortal, of which they reckon up seven. Veniale quod est praeter, mortale quod est contra legem. As all sin except that against the holy Ghost Mark 7.29. is venial in Christ, so without him is all mortal and deadly, Cartw. on Matthew 5. 23.

Lex Dei prohibet omnia etiam levissima peccata quae venialia vocabulo antiquo, sed inepte & impie ab adversariis usurpato, vocantur. Baronius Disput. Theol. de peccato mortali & veniali. Sectione 1. Vide plura ibid. Sectione 2. & 3. [a] Aquinas 1ª 2æ, Quæst. 88. Artic. 1, &c. [b] Bellarm. de Amiss. grat. & statu peccati, lib. 1. cap. 3, &c. See Dr Halls No peace with Rome; and Dr Prid. Serm. 2. on Matth. 5. 25. p. 42. to 47. Mr Pemble of Justification, Sect. 3. cap. 4. pag. 144,145,146. And Mr Burgesse of Justification, pag. 206, 207. and Dr Featleys Vertumnus Romanus, pag. 28, 29. Videtur distinctio nata ex disciplina veteris ecclesiæ : apud quam venialia peccata erant, pro quibus non exigeretur satisfactio ecclesiastica. Quod verò tolerabile erat in foro Ecclesiæ, sophistæ postea malè traxerunt ad forum Dei & Conscientiæ. Paræus in Ursini Corpus Doctrinæ Christianæ, par. 1. quæst. 7.

All sinne deserveth eternal death, Romans 6. 23. as appeareth by the opposition of life everlasting, which the Apostle joyneth in the same verse, Id. ibid. There is the merit of Hell in every idle word, because the wages of sinne as sinne is death.

Every transgression of the Law is worthy of death, Galatians 3. 10 Every sin is a transgressiou of the Law, 1 John 3. 4. Rainold. de l. Apoc. Tom. 2. c. 164, & 165. See Deuteronomy 27.26. & 30.19. Ezekiel 18.4. James 2.10. Numbers 15.22,23,24. 1 Corinthians 15. 56.

Bellarmine seeks to elude these and that other place with these glosses, The soul that sinneth, that is, mortally, shall die; the wages of sin, that is, of mortal sin, is death; and the sting of death is sinne, that is, deadly sinne; these are tautologies; as if the Prophet had said, The soul that sinneth a sinne unto death shall die; and the Apostle, sinne that deserveth death deserveth death; He saith they are venial ex natura sua, such as if God please to remit the temporal punishment, they are so little that he cannot inflict eternal for them, they are venial propter parvitatem materiæ, & imperfectionem actus.

Quodvis peccatum peccantem in rigore legis morte involveret, si persona absque misericordia Dei in Christo judicaretur. Episc. Daven.

Sinnes may be termed venial and mortal : 1. Either comparatè in comparison of others; or simpliciter simply and in themselves, and that either, 1. Ex natura sua, of their own nature. 2. Ex gratia by favour or indulgence. 3. Ex eventu in the issue or event; in the two last respects all the sins of the elect are venial, but no sins ex natura sua are venial, that is, such as in their own nature deserve pardon, Nullum peccatum est veniale dum placet : sicut nullum mortale si verè displicet. August. Ambrosius saith, All mortal sins are made venial by repentance.

Object. Matth. 5. 22 *. There are two punishments lesse than hell fire, Therefore all sins are not mortal.

Bellarminus distinguit inter peccata quæ sunt contra legem, & quæ sunt præter legem, ut peccata venialia. Sed excogitatum est commentum nullius momenti & ponderis, Ubi enim in tota Scriptura reperient aliquid esse peccatum quod sit præter legem, nisi fortè opera supererogationis esse peccata venialia censeant, quæ præter legis mandata esse dicunt. Certè furari obolum (quod exemplum Bellarminus affert) directè pugnat contra mandatum, non furaberis. Mentiri vel jocosè vel officiosè est contra mandatum, non dices falsum testimonium. Johannes Fisherus Roffensis Episc. planè Luthero concessit, peccatum esse veniale tantum ex misericordia Dei. Venialia appellantur quædam peccata ab eventu, quia condonantur, non quod per se venia digna sint. Agnoscimus Joannem, 1 Jo. 5. 17. distinguere inter peccatum ad mortem, & non ad mortem, sed in hac oppositione per peccatum ad mortem, non intelligit quod mortem non meretur, sed in quo aliquis non moritur, vel quod tale non est, ex quo peccator non possit revocari ad meliorem mentem. Si autem intelligi hoc deberet de peccato mortali quod Pontificij à veniali distinguunt, sequeretur nullas preces fieri debere in Ecclesia nisi pro iis qui venialiter peccant, quod ipsi absurdum judicabunt, ut contrarium sua praxi confirmant. Riveti Cathol. Orthod. Tract. quart quæst. 13. * This place Bellarmine urgeth, De amiss. grat. & statu peccati, l. 1. c. 9.

Answ.

Anſw. That which our Saviour ſpeaketh here of three ſeveral puniſhments, is ſpoken by alluſion to the proceeding in the Civil Courts in Judæa, and all that can be gathered from thence is but this, That as there are differences of ſins, ſo there ſhall be of puniſhments hereafter.

2. Maldonate the Jeſuite ingenuouſly confeſſeth that by councel and judgement the eternal death of the ſoul is underſtood, yet with this difference, that a leſs degree of torment in hell is underſtood by the word Judgment than Councel, and a leſs by Councel than by hell fire.

Bellarmin ubi ſupra. The Papiſts have deviſed ſmoaky diſtinctions of peccatum ſimpliciter, and ſecundum quid, they ſay, Venial ſin is not properly ſin, but imperfectly and analogically, no tranſgreſſion, but prætergreſſion of the divine Law, and that it is pardoned without repentance, even by the outward ſprinkling of holy water.

Object. Matthew 5. 26. and 7. 5. and Luke 6. 41. 1 Corinthians 3. 12. Some ſinnes there are compared to very light things, as hay, ſtubble, a mote, a farthing.

Anſw. 1. Some ſins in compariſon of others may be ſaid to be light, as a mote is little to a beam, a farthing to a pound, yet no ſinne committed againſt God may be ſimply termed light or little, Zach. 1. 5. being committed againſt an infinite God, and having coſt an infinite price.

2. A mote if it be not taken out of the eye hindereth the ſight, ſo the leaſt ſin hinhindereth grace, and is ſufficient to damn the ſoul.

Omnis tranſgreſſio legis eſt quiddam admiſſum contra legem, ſed omne peccatum eſt tranſgreſſio legis divinæ, 1 Joan. 3. 4. Peccatum eſt dictum, vel factum vel concupitum contra legem Dei. Auguſtinus contra Fauſtum, lib. 22. cap. 27. Sic Bernardus, Omne peccatum contra legem Dei præſumitur, de præcepto & diſpenſ. cap. 14. Sic inter ipſos Pontificios Durandus, Gerſon, Vega, aliique. Vide Bellarm. de Juſtif. l. 4. c. 13. 2. Omnia peccata venialia lege divina prohibentur, ergo ſunt contra legem. 3. Recta rationi adverſantur, recta ratio enim dictat verba otioſa, cogitationes inordinatas eſſe mala illicita & fugienda, ergo contrariantur legi divinæ Epiſc. Dav. de juſtitia actuali, c. 48. Vide plura ibid.

3. Chriſt by the farthing Matthew 5. underſtands the laſt paiment of debt, not ſinne; and the Apoſtle light and vain Doctrine by hay and ſtubble: Purgatory is to cleanſe men from their leſſer ſins, but pretious Doctrines or good works are there tried by fire.

Object. James 1. 15. Sin when it is perfected brings forth death, therefore not every ſin, not ſin in every degree.

Anſw. The Apoſtle there ſets forth the method and order how ſinne comes to the height; the word he uſeth for ſinne is of the feminine gender, ſpeaking of the conception and production of ſin, he ſaith, Sin when it is finiſht brings forth death actually, the leaſt ſinne merits death; or the Apoſtle ſhews when death appears to us moſt, not in its conception and production, but when it is finiſht.

Object. Matthew 12. 36. He ſaith not, we ſhall be condemned for every idle word, but only that we ſhall be called to anſwer for it.

Anſw. The ſame phraſe is uſed concerning all kind of ſinnes, yea thoſe that are greateſt and moſt grievous.

Object. There is a mortal ſin, 1 John 5. 16. therefore a venial ſin.

Anſw. He ſpeaks of a mortal ſin, not by nature, or by merit, but by event, the event of which ſhall certainly be death, and the perſon out of all hope of pardon. Vide Bezam.

Of all words ſinne hath no diminutive, not in any tongue known to us commonly, only the Spaniard hath his Peccadillio, a petty ſin, Dr Clark.

Sinnes conſidered in reference to the object are all great, ſo Peccata ſunt æqualia.

2. The leaſt ſin that ever was committed had in it the whole nature of ſin, it is tam peccatum, as truly ſin as the greateſt.

Chap. VIII.

Of the Cauſe of Sinne.

SIN properly is nothing formally ſubſiſting or exiſting (for then God ſhould be the author of it) but it is an ataxy or abſence of goodneſs and uprightneſs in the thing that ſubſiſteth, Pſalm 5. 4. 1 John 2. 16. 1 John 1. 5. Habakkuk 1.13. Job 34.10.

Perkins Caſ. of Conſc. In peccato nihil poſitivum, ſay the Schoolmen. Vide Calvin. Inſtit. lib. 2. cap. 4. Deus non eſt eorum ultor, quorum eſt autor. Vide Strang. De voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum, ſuperlativè impius quidem, nedum

The Manichees think that God can by no means be ſaid to will ſinne, therefore they held two principles, ſummum bonum, from which all good things, and ſummum malum, from which all both ſins and puniſhments. They thought it abſurd and impoſſible for any evil to proceed from the chiefeſt good. But there can not be a ſummum malum, as there is a ſummum bonum, becauſe evill in its own nature is nothing elſe but privatio boni, ſinne a privation of juſtice and rectitude, and an aberration from the Law, and every privation muſt neceſſarily be in ſome ſubject.

lib. 1. cap 12, &c. & lib. 2. cap. 1. Actor in malo, not Author mali. Vix ullus unquam extitit adeò impius qui aſſeruit Deum eſſe authorem peccati, ſeu mali moralis, ut ſumitur pro malitia ipſa, nec Ethnicus quidem, nedum Chriſtianus. Barlow. exercit. 2.

The Church of Rome * ſlanders the Proteſtants, and ſaith, that they maintain God to be the cauſe of ſin, but we hold that the Devil and mans corrupt will are the cauſe of it. Sin in man at firſt came from Satan, John 3. 8. and 8. 44. John 6. 17. Matthew 16. 23. the cauſe of ſin now man is fallen, is from our ſelves, Matthew 15. 19.

* Bellarm. de amiſſ. grat. & ſtatu peccatorii, lib. 2. cap. 2, 3, 4, &c. Rhem. Annot. in Matth. 6. 13. & Jam. 1. 13. Sunt cauſæ duæ peccatorum propinquæ : Prior, Diabolus Compellens : poſterior, voluntas hominis conſentiens, & non Deus. Heerbrandi Compendium Theologiæ, loc. de peccato. See Aylesbury his Diatribæ de Æterno Dei decreto, cap. 9. Quapropter ſaluberrimè confitemur, quod rectiſſimè credimus, Deum Dominumque rerum omnium qui creavit omnia bona valde, & mala ex bonis oritura eſſe præſcivit, & ſcivit magis ad ſuam omnipotentiſſimam bonitatem pertinere, etiam de malis benefacere, quam mala eſſe non ſinere : ſic ordinaſſe angelorum & hominum vitam, ut in ea prius oſtenderet quid poſſet eorum liberum arbitrium, deinde quid poſſet ſua gratiæ beneficium juſtitiæque judicium. Aug. De Correptione & Gratia. Duæ hac de re ſunt extremæ ſententiæ pariter fugiendæ, Deum eſſe cauſam & autorem omnium peccatorum & ſcelerum. Altera quæ nudam & otioſam permiſſionem Deo tribuit in operibus malis. Strangius de voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum, l. 1. c. 1.

God hath no hand in the acting and approving of ſin, Romans 3.5,6. & 9. 14. He is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity with approbation; He is the wiſe permitter, powerful diſpoſer, and eternal avenger of it.

God can not ſin, or cauſe others to ſin:

1. Becauſe as he is ſubject to no Law which he can tranſgreſs, ſo his will is moſt holy and pure, and the rule of perfection, Iſaiah 6. He is holy in his Nature, Actions, he hath ſo confirmed his Angels in holineſſe that they cannot ſinne, 1 John 1. 4.

2. To ſin is to turn away from the chiefeſt and laſt end, therefore he can not ſin: The Scriptures alwayes attribute it to the Devil and man, Romans 9. 14.

3. God threatens ſinners in his Word, and puniſheth them, therefore he allows it not.

4. All deſervedly hate the Libertines, who would make that ſacred and dreadful Majeſty the cauſe of their deteſtable enormities, Quicquid ego & tu facimus,

Libertini affirmant Deum ita velle peccata, ut eorum ſit cauſa:

uſque adeò ut inde inferant, peccata non eſſe reprehendenda, quòd ſint opera Dei. Sententia hæc blaſphema eſt & Diabolica, neque alio ſpectat, quàm ad eam carnis licentiam quam profitentur : Unde & Libertini merito appellantur : Nempe ut omnis ſcrupulus & ſenſus peccati, ex hominum tollatur conſcientiis : Cùm id tamen, etiamſi crepent, fieri nullo modo poſſit. Zanch. de natura Dei, l. 3. c. 4. quæſt. 4. Videplura ibid. Vide Wendelini exercit. Theol. exercit. 26, 27, 28, 29. Et Baronij Metaphyſicam Generalem, Sect. 8. Diſput. 9.

Deus

Deus efficit, nam in nobis est. Calv. adverſ. Libert. cap. 12. Therefore Bellarmine doth wickedly in imputing to Proteſtant Divines that which they deteſt with the greateſt loathing.

Papiſtæ clamitant à Catholicis fieri Deum authorem peccati maximè Calvino, Martyre, Beza: hos enim docuiſſe, illum authorem eſſe omnium ſcelerum, & flagitiorum. Bellarminus præfatione in

That is a great Queſtion in Divinity, An Deus author peccati ex reformatorum placitis ſtatuatur?

Four ſeveral kinds of power though not in, yet over ſin, may be aſcribed to God, a permiſſive, deſertive, reſtrictive and diſpoſing power.

Firſt, A permiſſive power, elſe it could not be; he may permit what he is not bound to hinder.

Secondly, A deſertive power, it would not be if he withdrew not his grace; ſin needs no efficient cauſe no more than darkneſs, Cauſa deficiens in moralibus efficiens.

Thirdly, A reſtraining power, there may be an act of reſtraining grace on the Devil.

controverſias; & quidem ita authorem, ut cor hominis impellat & incitet ad maleſaciendum, adeò ut inceſtus Abſolomis verè fuerit illius opus. Chamier. tom. 1. lib. 3. cap. 1. de Script. Vide Whitak. cap. 1. quæſt. 5. controv. cap. 7. Bellarminus acerbiſſimè invehitur in Zuinglium, Calvinum, & Bezam, non quod dicat, eos ſcripſiſſe, Deum eſſe cauſam & authorem peccati: (fatetur enim, eos id apertè negare, & contrarium docere multis in locis, quorum aliquot citat, quibus multò plura addi poſſunt) ſed quod ex eorum dictis illud conſequens deduci poſſe contendit, impudenter affirmans, eos re ipſa ſentire, quod verbo profiteri non auderent. Atque hoc inſtituto, varias eorum ſententias corradit, plærasque mutilas ac truncatas, & ad alienum ſenſum detortas: quæ ſi ex ipſorum ſcopo, ac doctrinæ ſerie, candidè & benigne æſtimarentur, commodè accipi poſſent & quidem ab hac Bellarmini calumnia ſcitè vindicantur ab iis qui Animadverſiones in iſtos Bellarmini libros ſcripſerunt, præſertim à doctiſſimis Paræo, Twiſſo, & Ameſio. Strangius De voluntate & Actionibus Dei circa peccatum, lib. 11. cap. 14. Vide cap. 21, 22, 23, 24. Et lib. 4. per totum.

He limits it, for the time and meaſure, Rev. 2. 10. Non eſt eadem ratio futurorum bonorum & malorum; bona enim ſunt ex virtute poſitiva quæ ſemper cum ſuis effectis, ab efficaci Dei voluntate fluit: ſed mala ex defectu ſunt oriunda, atque adeò quæ talia non pendent ab efficaci aliquo decreto. Quicquid habent entis poſitivi, ab efficaci decreto pendet; quicquid pura negationis, ex eiuſdem decreti negatione ſequitur, quicquid vero privationis & pravitatis in ſeſe continent, peccatoribus ipſis debetur in ſolidum. Reſcrip Ameſ. ad reſponſum Grevinchov. cap. 13. Vide plura ibid. Malum eſſe bonum eſt, ſaith Auſtin; And again, Non fit aliquid niſi omnipotens fieri velit, vel ſinendo ut fiat, vel ipſe faciendo. Peccatum fieri Deo permittente bonum eſt, ſaith Bellarmine. The Arminians have blaſphemous expreſſions, Qui non vetat peccare cum poteſt jubet, ſay they. Why doth God complain of ſin, he might have kept it out of the world. See Mr Manton on Jam. 1. 13. from p. 100. to 105. God hardened Pharaohs heart, Exod. 4. 21. & 10. 1. 1. He infuſed no hardneſs, nor ſtirred up the inward propenſion in him to evil, neither did he harden him by bare preſcience, or by an idle permiſſion, it was Gods will that Pharaoh ſhould be hardened, and he diſpoſed all his providences to that end. He withdrew his grace, and left him looſe to the ſwinge of his own heart, Pſal. 81. 12. 1 Sam. 16. 14. He delivered him up to the power of Satan, 1 King. 22. 22. The Schoolmen diſtinguiſh between velle, nolle, and non velle. God is ſaid to will a thing, when he ſo approves it, as to effect it. To nill a thing, when he ſo diſlikes it, as to prohibit it, Non velle, not to will it, when he ſo diſlikes it, as not to prohibit, yea, and not to effect it, yet permits it to be for good ends. Dr Arrowſ. Chain of Principles, Aphor. 6. exercit. 3.

Fourthly, A diſpoſing power, whereby he diſpoſeth and ordereth ſin to ſome excellent and good end, his glory: When God doth diſpoſe or order the ſin of any man,

1. He doth not infuſe this evil but uſe it.

2. He uſeth it not as an evil or ſin, but as an inſtrument.

3. He would not uſe it to ſuch an end, but that he is able to raiſe more good by it, and to counterpoiſe all the evil in the action.

4. God did not infuſe malice into Joſephs brethren, but made uſe of it rather to a ſale than a murder, he ſent him before to ſave much people alive, Geneſis 45. 8.

In the beginning of ſin Gods will is exerciſed:

Firſt, By way of inhibition in giving a Law againſt it.

Secondly, By way of permiſſion, leaving a lawleſs man to a lawleſs way. In the progreſs of ſin, God either hinders or over-rules it, in the end, he either puniſheth or pardoneth it. And all this without ſin, or the leaſt blemiſh of ſin. For in the beginning of ſin he ſheweth his Wiſdome: In the progreſs he ſheweth his Power: In the end, he maketh manifeſt both his Juſtice and his Mercy. Mr Wiſehart on the Lords Prayer, Petition 3.

Thoſe places Acts 2. 23. 2 Sam. 1. 43. beſides a permiſſion do expreſſe an active providence; he is ſaid to harden and deceive. Gods permiſſion is not otioſa but efficax permiſſio,

1. God permits ſin, and how: See Alesbury his Diatriba de Æterno Dei decreto c. 7. p. 279. ad 288.

2. Cooperates

2. Cooperates to the act as natural.
3. Decreed it.
4. As a juſt Judg he denieth grace.
5. As the ſupream Judg he uſeth all theſe as inſtruments of his glory.

Papiſts and Arminians allow God no other power about ſin, but what is barely permiſſive or deſertive at moſt.

There are two ordinary ſimilitudes, one from a halting horſe, the rider which makes the horſe go is not the cauſe of his halting, but of his going only; but it is a queſtion whether this clears the doubt, for the rider is but an outward moving cauſe to the other, he doth not work to the motion of the horſe as immediately as the horſe himſelf doth, therefore this ſimile were good and fit if that opinion were true, God doth only give being, but not immediately work to the effect it ſelf; and if the ſimile were to the purpoſe, it would be, that the rider beſides this outward motion did as immediately help to going as nature it ſelf.

As for the other about a dunghill, the Sun-beams that work upon any boggy places and make them ſmell, but yet they themſelves are not defiled: this would illuſtrate well for all the ſinnes men runne into ſince the fall, but how will it anſwer about the firſt ſin, for Adams nature was not a bog?

One ſaith, that one of theſe ſimilitudes halts, and the other ſtinks.

The beſt way is to hold theſe two truths:

1. God doth not ſin nor is not the author of it.
2. That he hath a providence about it, and for the manner it is hard to determine.

Object. God bid Shimei curſe.

Anſ. That was an improper command, and implieth only that God uſed Shimei's tongue as a whip to ſcourge David.

Object. Ezekiel 20. 25. Wherefore I gave them alſo ſtatutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they ſhould not live: There God ſeems not only to permit, but alſo to command ſin.

Junius interprets it, Ipſis incommoda noxiaque, and mentions ſome particulars. I gave them in the wilderneſſe decrees and ordinances, that were not good for them but hurtfull; and judgments that did ſentence them to death: So the great Annotations, inſtancing there in ſome of thoſe judgments.

Hic nodus ſic ſolvetur, ſi dicamus per [illegible] ſtatuta, vel intelligi leges Ethnicorum, quibus Deus iratus populum ſuum ſubjecerat idque videtur innuere oppoſitio verſus viceſimi tertij, ubi Deus dicit ſe dediſſe populo ſuo ſtatuta, qua quiſquis impleverit, vivet per ea, opponens malas iſtas leges ſua legi: vel ſi dicamus per mala ſtatua intelligi legem Dei moralem & ceremonialem: qua quidem mala vocari poteſt accipiendo malum non pro injuſto, ſed pro noxio & in perniciem ceſſuro. Hunc interpretationi adſtipulatur ſubjecta clauſula: Additur enim, Statuta per quæ non poſſent vivere. Nam per legis impletionem nemo unquam ſalutem adeptus eſt. Molin. Enodat. graviſ. Quæſt. 1. cap. 2. de Dei Providentia. Mentem ijs ademi, ita ut meis legibus contemptis, ipſi ſibi leges facerent duras atque mortiferas, ita Chaldæus hic. Grotius.

Weems underſtands it of the ceremonial ſtatutes, and nicely diſtinguiſheth between not good and evil: See Pſalm 5.4,5,6. The ceremonial ſtatutes were good in their kind, and in reſpect of the end for which God ordained them, Coloſſians 2.17. Some ſay God did deliver them over into the hands of wicked Princes, he gave them over in judgement to obey their idolatrous Laws, the ſtatutes of Omri: Others hold the genuine meaning to be that of the Chaldee Paraphraſe, They obſerved ſtatutes which were not right, and cuſtoms whereby they ſhould not live.

Some Proteſtant Authors have uſed ſome incommodious and harſh phraſes, yet 1. They do moſt of them uſe but the Scripture-phraſe, and Bellarmine himſelf uſeth worſe in this matter. With what face can Bellarmine lay to Calvins charge that he makes God the author of ſin, when he wrote two Books againſt the Libertines, as Bellarmine himſelf acknowledgeth, 2. De latu peccati, cap. 1. when the Proteſtants profeſſedly handle the queſtion, An Deus ſit Author peccati? they determine it negatively, therefore it is not fair for their Adverſaries to conclude that they hold ſo by ſome paſſages in their writings which may ſeem to ſound that way.

Mr Archer indeed ſaith, That God is not only the Author of ſin, but alſo of the ſinfullneſs, the very Formality, the Anomy, the Ataxy, the Pravity, the ſinne, whence his Book was burnt.

None of our Divines attributes more to God in the actions of ſin or determination of the will to evill works, and in decreeing them, than many Papiſts, eſpecially the Dominicans; from whoſe Doctrine the Jeſuites gather the ſame abſurdities which they aſcribe to us, that the liberty of humane will, and the contingency of things is overthrown, and God is held to be the author of ſin: Vide Strangium de voluntate & Actionibus Dei Circa peccatum, l. 4. c. 11.

Chap. IX.

Of communicating with other Mens ſins.

NO godly man ought to partake or communicate with other mens ſins, Iſaiah 52. 11. Epheſians 5. 11. 2 Corinthians 6. 15, 16. 1 Timothy 5. 22. Revelations 18. 11.

Vitia aliorum ſi feras, facis tua.

We are guilty of other mens ſins, or communicate with others,

Firſt, Negatively and privatively, and that

1. By ſinfull ſilence: the Heathen knew not the exactneſs of godlineſs, when he ſaid, He repented him often that he ſpake, but never that he held his tongue.

2. When one omits to do his duty with that life, courage and zeal which he ought, as Eli reproved his ſons, but not ſharply enough, and puniſhed them not for their ſins.

3. When one doth not pray for a reformation, Pſalm 51. or humble himſelf for the ſins of others, 1 Corinthians 5. 2. 2 Corinthians 12. 21.

Secondly, More directly and poſitively:

1. He who commands or perſwades Iſaiah 10. 1. as Jeroboam who made Iſrael to ſin was a cauſe of all the peoples Idolatry, there was not one of the one and twenty Kings of the houſe of Iſrael that departed from the ſins of Jeroboam. Balaam inticed the people of Iſrael to fornication and idolatry; the Devil by being a tempter becomes guilty of all the ſins committed by men: Eve became a tempter to Adam, 1 Timothy 5. 22.

Numb. 31. 16. Dan. 3. 4, 5. 1 Sam. 22 18. Acts 23. 23. 1 Sam. 11. 15. 1 King. 21. 10. 1 Sam. 22. 18. Hab. 2. 15. Athaliah counſelled her ſon to do evil.

2. He who is a miniſter and ſervant to execute the evil commands of others, the three Worthies in Daniel refuſed to obey Nebuchadnezzar, and the Apoſtles would obey God rather than men; Doeg is curſed by God for this, Pſalm 52. 2 Kings 1. 9. Jeremiah 7. 17, 18.

3. He that gives conſent and allowance to it, Leviticus 20. 4, 5. though he do not act it, Romans 1. ult.

4. He who defends, praiſeth and encourageth others that have ſinned, He that breaks one of theſe leaſt commandments, and teacheth others ſo to do. Cajetan holds that to drink till a mans head be giddy is no ſin, or a venial one: Another holds that there is a lawful idolatry: the Papiſts canonize ſuch acts, to murder and poiſon Princes: the Phariſees encouraged the people in ſin.

5. Thoſe that familiarly converſe with wicked men, 1 Corinthians 5. 11. 2 Theſſalonians 3. 14. our very preſence in idolatrous ſervice is evil, 1 Corinthians 14. 15.

6. Permiſſion and connivance at evil, Leviticus 20. 4, 5. Qui non vetat peccare cum poteſt, jubet. This concerns Magiſtrates and other Superiours, if they reſtrain not ſin when they have power and authourity in their hands, 1 Samuel 3. 30.

7. Provoking to ſin, 1 Kings 21. 25. Epheſians 6. 4. Galatians 5. 26.

8. Giving

8. Giving ill example, as when Magiſtrates and Miniſters ſwear; Jeroboam by his ill example as well as precepts made Iſrael to ſin. Matthew 23. 35. not that they killed Abel, but they went on their predeceſſours ſteps.

Communicating in our Congregations with ignorant and prophane people, makes us not partakers of their ſinnes; Communion is a common union, their ſinnes are not the common thing we are united then in.

CHAP. X.

Of the puniſhment of ſinne.

GOD puniſhed Adams ſin with original and actual ſin: See Geneſis 3. 17, 18, 19, 23. The Lord ſent Adam forth from the Garden of Eden, there is loſs of communion, and verſe 24. he drove out the man as a teſtimony of his wrath and diſpleaſure.

See Rom. 5. 12. 16. Mat. 12. 34, 35.

Before ſin is committed it is Inimicus blandiens. In committing it is Dulce venenum, after committed it is Scorpio pungens. That ſpeech of Abner is true in ſin, 2 Samuel 2. 26. It will be bitterneſs in the latter end. ſin alwayes brings a ſtorm with it. Lamentations 3. 38.

Vide Bellarm. de ſtatu peccati, lib. 6. cap. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Pœna eſt aliquid damnoſum quod infligitur ob peccatum. Cameron. de Eccleſ. Pain is ſo allied to ſinne, that in the Hebrew Tongue one word ſignifies both; that in Cains ſpeech the Tranſlator knows not whether he ſhall Engliſh it, Gen. 4. 14. My ſinne is greater than can be forgiven, or My puniſhment is greater than can be born. Dr Clark. The Hebrew Aven, the Greek ἀμαρτία, and the Latine noxa, ſignifie both ſin and puniſhment. See Dr Halls Holy Panegyrick, p. 484.

Raro antecedentem ſceleſtum Deſeruit pede pœna claudo. Horace.

Sometimes ſins are puniſhed a long time after they were committed, 2 Samuel 21. 1. the bloud of Chriſt was viſited on Jeruſalem fourty years after; the wickedneſſe of Eli's ſons was viſited on the whole family in the dayes of Saul: Job ſaith, Thou makeſt me poſſeſs the ſins of my youth. God would ſhew patience as well as juſtice, therefore he ſpares long to ſee if men will convert without blows.

Before ſinne came into the world there was no evil, Gen. 1 31. but when ſin came (which was the firſt and is the chiefeſt evil) it brought with it all other evils. When Adam ſinned all other creatures ſhould have been deſtroyed, they were all curſed for mans uſe. There is a curſe on mans body, 1. Wearing and waſtinglabour: 2. Mutilation: 3. Deformity, want of that beauty which God beſtowed on him: 4. Sickneſſe: 5. Old age.

All evils of miſery are but the iſſue of ſin, firſt ſin entred into the world, and by ſin death.

1. Temporal evils.

All publick commotions, wars, famine, peſtilence, are the bitter fruits of ſin, Deuteronomy 28. there is Gods curſe on the creature, mans body, all his relations.

See Job 20. 5, 6, 7. 1 Kings 16. 9. Pſalm 55. 23. Hoſea 7. 2.

In two caſes God will correct the ſinnes of his children though he pardon them.

1. In caſe of ſcandal, 2 Samuel 12. 14.
2. For ſome ſin unrepented of.

God chaſtens his children by outward afflictions and ſpiritual deſertions.

Yet theſe afflictions are not properly Judicial acts; what is penal, comes from wrath, tends to the ſatisfaction of juſtice, and the deſtruction of the offender.

There is a double fruit of ſin:

1. Shame if one do repent, Ezekiel 16. 63. Romans 6. 21.
2. Death if one do not repent, Romans 6. 23.

Some have made a Controverſie of late, Whether death be truely penall to the gudly? though I am paſt doubt, but the hearts of thoſe men do apprehend it as a puniſhment, whoſe tongues and pens do plead for the contrary, Geneſis 3. 19. Maſter Baxters Treatiſe of Death, Sect. 3.

2. Spiritual:

Terrours of conſcience, horrours of death, 1 Corinthians 15. 56. are the effects of ſin.

What an evil is a condemning heart, an accuſing conſcience! yet this is the fruit of ſin, A wounded ſpirit who can bear. Some will bear outward evils ſtoutly, nay ſuffer death it ſelf boldly, but ſin will not ſo eaſily be born, when the conſcience it ſelf is ſmitten. See this in Cain and Judas, many a one maketh away himſelf to be rid of this vexation. This fils one with ſhame, John 8. 9. fear, Geneſis 3. 11. and grief, Acts 2. 37. The greateſt torment that in this life can befall a ſinner is deſperation; when the ſoul of a man convinced in her ſelf by the number of her hainous offences, loſeth all hope of life to come, and caſteth her eyes wholly on the fearful torments of hell prepared for her; the continual thought and fright whereof do ſo amaze and afflict the comfortleſs ſoul, that ſhe ſhrinketh under the burden, and feeleth in her ſelf the horrour of hell before ſhe come to it.

Biſhop Bilſons Redemption of mankind by the Bloud of Chriſt.

Spiritual plagues are the greateſt, 1. In reſpect of the ſubject, they light on the ſoul; mercies to the ſoul are the greateſt mercies. 2. They are not only judgements from God, but for ſinne in us, Iſa. 63. 17. 3. They are the greateſt evidences of eternal wrath, John 13. ult.

3. Eternal:

The everlaſting abſence of all good, 2 Theſſalonians 1. 19. and the preſence of all evil, Mark 9. 49. are the conſequents of it. Juſtum eſt, quòd qui in ſuo æterno peccavit contra Deum, in æterno Dei punitur.

Gregorius lib. 4. Moral. It is ſuch a ſtain as cannot be got out but by a remedy that is infinite, Iſa. 34. 13. All the tribulation in the world cannot do it, Jer. 6. latter end. The bloud of buls and goats could not purge the conſcience from dead works, nothing could get it off but the heart bloud of Jeſus Chriſt, Jer. 28. latter end Heb. 9. 13, 14. Hell fire will not do it.

Sin is finite in the act and ſubject, but of infinite * demerit, being committed, 1. Againſt an infinite Good, therefore it deſerves infinite puniſhment, 2. The obligation of the Law is everlaſting. This was the firſt Doctrine which was publiſhed to man, that eternal death is the puniſhment of ſin, Geneſis 2. 17. the Devil oppoſed it, Geneſis 3. 4. the belief of the threatning would have hindered them from ſinne.

* In peccato duo ſunt: Quorum unum eſt averſio ab incommutabili bono, quod eſt infinitum, Unde ex hac parte peccatum eſt infinitum. Aliud quod eſt in peccato, eſt inordinata converſio ad commutabile bonum: & ex hac parte peccatum eſt finitum, non enim poſſunt eſſe actus creaturæ infiniti. Ex parte igitur averſionis reſpondet peccato pœna damni, quæ etiam eſt infinita: Eſt enim amiſſio infiniti boni, ſcilicet Dei: Ex parte autem inordinatæ converſionis reſpondet ei pœna ſenſus, quæ etiam eſt finita. Aquin 1ª, 2æ. quæſt. 87. art. 4. Peccatum non formaliter, ſed materialiter, & objectivè eſt infinitum, quia peccato majeſtas infinita violatur.

The Socinians ſay, That man ſhould have died in the ſtate of innocency, although he had not ſinned, and therefore that death is not a puniſhment of ſin, but a condition and conſequent of nature. The holy Ghoſt aſſigns death to ſin as the cauſe. See of it Romans 5. 12. and 6. 23. Our bodies were not mortall till our ſouls were ſinfull.

The Pelagians (whom the Socinians follow) ſay, Mors eſt conditio naturæ, non peccati argumentum vel pœna; Death is rather the condition of nature than the fruit of ſinne.

Arminians ſay, That there is neither election nor reprobation of Infants, and that no Infants can be condemned for original ſin.

Jacob was in a ſtate of election in his mothers womb, Romans 9. 11. All men in the counſel of God are either elect or reprobate, But Infants are men or part of mankind, Therefore they are either elect or reprobate.

1. Infants are ſaved, therefore there is ſome election of Infants, for ſalvation is a fruit of election, and proper to the elect, Romans 11. 7. There is a manifeſt difference among Infants, between thoſe that are born in and out * of the Church,

* De extraneis judicare vetat Apoſtolus 1 Co. 5. 12. Ideoq; hos infantes libero Dei judicio relinquimus: non dudemus ſalutem cuiquam promittere manenti extra fœdus Chriſti. Molinæus.

Gen. 17. 17.

Geneſis 17. 17. Acts 2. 37. and 3. 21. Children of unbelievers are unclean, 1 Corinthians 7. 14. and aliens from Chriſt and the Covenant of promiſe, Epheſians 2. 11, 12.

2. That opinion, That no Infants are condemned for original ſin, ſeems to be contrary to that place, Epheſians 2. 3. If this were true, the condition of a Turks child dying in his infancy, is farre better than the condition of Abraham, Iſaac or Jacob living, for they might fall from grace (ſay they) and be damned, but a Turks child dying, according to their opinion ſhall certainly be ſaved.

Arminiani dicunt neminem damnari propter originale peccatum, hoc eſt, Turcarum, Saracenorum, Ethnicorum liberi in infantia defuncti regnum Cœlorum ingrediuntur, & conſequenter meliori conditione ſunt, quam ſunt Abrahamus, aut Moſes, & Virgo Maria, dum in terris agerent. Poterant enim illi perire juxta ſententiam veſtram, non poſſunt Turcarum liberi in infantia defuncti. Et tamen omnes & ſingulos ira filios naſci profitetur Apoſtolus, & qua ratio ſub imaginationem cadit, quare non moriantur etiam filij iræ? Twiſſ. cont. Corvinum, c. 9. ſect 3.

The worſt puniſhment of ſin is to puniſh it with ſin, and ſo God puniſheth it ſometimes in his own people, Iſaiah 63. 17. Mark 6. 52. a judicial blindneſs and hardneſs is the worſt.

See Ezekiel 24. 13. Romans 1. 26, 28. Revelations 22. 11.

Concerning Nationall ſinnes.

Sins though committed by particular perſons, may be National:

Firſt, When they are interwoven into the policy of a State, Pſalm 94. 20. when ſin is eſtabliſhed by a Law, Revelations 16. 8. and 17. 17. and 6. 12. Jeremiah 15. 9.

Secondly, When they are univerſal and overſpread the whole Kingdom, Jeremiah 9. 2, 3. Iſaiah 56. 11.

Thirdly, When the people that profeſs the name of God are infected with thoſe ſins, Geneſis 6. 2, 3, 4.

Fourthly, When few or none in the Nation bewaile them, Jeremiah 5. 31.

Fifthly, When they are openly countenanced and tolerated, 1 Kings 14. 24. when there are no maſters of reſtraint, Judges 18. 7.

Sixthly, When they are the predominant humour of the Nation at that time.

The ſins of Gods people which commonly provoke him to break a Nation.

1. Their omiſſions, that they ſtand not in the gap, Ezekiel 22. 30, 31. improve not their intereſt in him.

2. When their hearts are inordinately ſet upon the things of the world, 2 Chron. 36. 12. Matthew 24. 39.

3. When there is a great unfruitfulneſs and lukewarmneſs in the things of God, Hoſea 10. 1.

4. When diviſions are ſtill fomented amongſt thoſe that fear God, Iſaiah 9. 21. Deſolations in a State follow diviſions in the Church.

The ſins which may provoke God againſt a Nation:

1. Idolatry, Jeremiah 5. 19. when the true God is worſhipped in a way that he hath not appointed.

2. Inteſtine diviſions, Iſaiah 9. ult. compared with 10. 6.

3. Incorrigibleneſs under leſſer judgments, Iſaiah 9. 11.

4. Wearying of God, Iſaiah 7. 13, 18.

5. Unworthy and wicked compliances, Hoſea 5. 13.

Three things fill up the meaſure of the ſins of a Nation, Univerſality, Impudence, Obſtinacy.

Chap. XI.

Signes of a Christian in regard of sinne, and that great corruptions may be found in true Christians.

Of the first.

Signs of a Christian in regard of sin:

First, He is convinced of sin, John 16. 9. The Greek word signifies to evidence by demonstration, the Spirit so demonstrates it, that a man hath nothing to object, Psalm 51. 13.

Secondly, He is free from its dominion, as Paul saith, Sinne shall have no dominion over you, for you are not under the law but under grace, Rom. 6. 13, 14. and after, Being freed from sin. Whosoever is born of God sinneth not, John. They do no iniquity. David. They serve not sin * in the lusts thereof. He hath not an habitual resolution to continue in sin.

Rom. 6. 12. * Proinde bonus si serviat, liber est: malus autem etiam si regnet, servus est, nec unius hominis, sed quod est gravius, tot dominorum, quot vitiorum. Aug. de civit. Dei, lib. 4. cap. 3.

His bent is against it, Romans 8. 12. and his general course, Psalm 139. 24.

Sin reigns:

1. When the will approves of it and likes it, Jeremiah 2. 25.
2. When one readily obeys the desires of sin, Romans 6. 16.
3. When the strength of it bears down all convictions, 1 John 3. 8.
4. When one sins with a full bent and purpose, Psalm 119. 11. Ieremiah 44. 17.
5. When a man sins without any check or controll, Ephesians 2. 2, 3. 2 Peter 2. 22.

But a believer:

1. Sins not with allowance, Romans 7. 15.
2. Hates sin, Romans 6. 16. & 7. 15.
3. He is alwayes willing to be freed from it, though he be not able to free himself, Romans 7. 24.
4. He loves the spirituality of the Law, and submits to the Authority of it, Romans 7. 16.
5. Maintains a spiritual combate against it, Galatians 5. 17.

Mr Burges makes the opposing of sin, and abstaining from it, one of his Signs of Grace. See his Treatise of Grace, Sect. 2. Serm. 14.

Thirdly, He is troubled and wearied with the reliques of it, Romans 7. 24. and driven to Christ for pardon and help. He is weary of sin, and every sin so farre as he knoweth, especially his own sin, and that iniquity which cleaveth closest to him. His flesh is inclined to it, but his Spirit is averse from it, and even tired and burdened with it, so that he often sighs out in himself the complaint of Saint Paul, O miserable man that I am! Still as he prevails more against sin, the remainders of it do more afflict him: sin in it self considered is his greatest unhappinesse, that he hath so vile a nature, is prone to so vile deeds, and doth in many things so foolishly offend, this troubleth and disquieteth him even then when he hath no other crosse to trouble him, and many times imbitters all his prosperity.

He flies to Gods grace for daily pardon, 1 John 1. 9. and useth all good meanes against it, Colossians 3. 5.

Christians go to God for Justification, ne peccatum damnet, that the damning power of sin may be taken away. For sanctification, ne regnet, that the raigning power of sin may be destroyed. For Glorification, ne sit, that the very being of it may be abolished.

Fourthly, He is grieved with the sins of others, Jeremiah 9. 1. Ezekiel 9. 4. Ezra 9. 3, 4. See 1 Cor. 5. 2. David was the great Devotionist of the Old Testament. Psalm 119. 136. Philippians 3. 18.

The greatest sinners when once converted are most compassionate to others, because

cauſe they have experience of the power of ſin, and have moſt ſenſibly felt the goodneſſe of God.

God is diſhonoured by the ſins of others, as well as by our own ſins, the godly hate ſin both in themſelves and others, Pſalm 97. 10.

Of the ſecond:

Very great corruptions in heart are yet to be found in ſincere Chriſtians, 2 Chronicles 15. 17. Very few men are recorded in Scripture, but their great ſins are recorded as well as their graces, except Joſiah and ſome few * others. Davids adultery and murder, 1 Kings 15. 5. Some think he was given to lying, Pſalm 119. Remove from me the way of lying. Salomons groſſe Idolatry, 1 Kings 11. 4. Peters ſhameful Apoſtaſie, Mark 14. 71. Aſa's perſecution, 2 Chronicles 16. 10.

* God hath preſerved ſome of his people from ſhameful ſins and ſtains, Enoch, Abraham, Caleb, Joſhua, and many others, and we are commanded to be careful to live without juſt reproach, 2 Pet. 1. 5. Mr. Rogers in his 7 Treat. c. 11. See Mr. Hilderſam on Pſal. 51. the Title.

Firſt, For inward corruptions, there is the body of all ſins remaining in the ſoul of every gracious perſon, though it be mortified and broken, it doth not rule in him. Paul writeth to the Epheſians and Coloſſians, and wiſheth them to put of the corrupt old-man. They have a corrupt nature, Rom. 7. 24.

Secondly, For actual, we may ſay with James, In many things we offend all; our infirmities are mingled with our beſt duties, we break out many times into things we know to be evil, flagitious crimes: See Galatians 6. 1. James 1. 14.

They have their daily failings, Eccleſiaſtes 7. 20.

The new nature keeps from ſin, 1 John 3. 9.

1. Becauſe he feels the bitterneſs of ſin, the pangs of the new birth yet remain, Jeremiah 2. 19.

2. Sin receives its deaths wound in regeneration, Coloſſians 2. 11. Acts 11. 23. Romans 8. 12.

3. From the fruits of this work fear, Jeremiah 32. 41. 2. Faith which applies the Commandment, promiſe, Bloud of Chriſt, 3. Love of God, 2 Corinthians 5. 14. Pſalm 9. 7. 10. Hope, 1 John 3. 3.

4. From the daily ſuperintendency of the Spirit, Romans 8. 14.

The People of God are freed,

1. From the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, 1 John 3. 9.

2. From ſin raigning.

3. From a total Apoſtaſie, Jeremiah 3. 22. they cannot loſe all ſaving grace, 1 Peter 1. 13.

4. From final impenitency, Pſalm 37. 24.

Godly men may fall into other ſins:

1. The ſtate of grace can not exempt them, 1 John 2. 1.

2. The truth of grace can not preſerve them, their actions come from a mixt principle.

3. No degrees of grace can preſerve them, Philippians 1. 6. nothing will perfect our ſanctification but the beatifical viſion, 1 John 3. 3.

They may fall into the groſſeſt errours in judgement, and foulest evils of practice. In the Church of Galatia ſome denied Juſtification by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. In the Church of Corinth ſome denied the Reſurrection, Revelations 18. 4. Tertullian fell to Montaniſm. Luther to Conſubſtantiation. True believers may fall grievouſly and hainouſly:

1. Into ſins not only quotidiani incurſus. Auguſt. of daily incurſion: but ſuch which do vaſtare Conſcientiam, as the Schoolmen ſpeak, though they do not Excutere fidem.

2. So as to wound the conſciences of their brethren, Romans 14. 15.

3. To wound their profeſſion, 1 Timothy 6. beg. Romans 2. 24.

4. They may ſtrengthen the hands of ſinners, 2 Samuel 12. 14.

5. They may greatly grieve the Spirit.

6. They

6. They may contract a damnable guilt, Pſalm 90. 8.

They may loſe their peace Pſal. 51. 12. wound their own conſciences, Prov. 6. 33. weaken their graces, be a reproach to all the Saints.

7. They may fall ſo as to bring on themſelves great temporal afflictions, Ezra 9. 13. Pſalm 99. 8. Jeremiah 2. 19

8. They may be chaſtened with ſpiritual afflictions, Pſalm 51. 12.

9. God may in them puniſh one ſin with another. David was puniſht with carnal adultery for his ſpiritual ſecurity.

10. They may loſe, though not jus ad regnum, yet aptitudinem regnandi.

The heart of a wicked man is,

1. Ready to every ſuggeſtion of the fleſh.

2. Sins preſently, and not only conſents to an evil motion; but acts it.

3. Rejoyceth in the evil committed.

4. Defends it, and perſeveres in it.

Yet there is a great difference in ſinning between them and the wicked, their ſpots are not alike:

1. They have not ſuch a full inward principle to ſin. David committed adultery not as Zimri with his whole heart, the other had a principle checking him, totus homo ſins, but not totum hominis, there is a principle of grace.

2. They do not conſtantly ſin, they live not in groſs ſins; it is one thing to fall into the dirt as a ſheep, another thing to wallow in it as a ſwine doth.

3. Theſe are bitter ſins to them, and miniſter much matter of humiliation afterwards; David was a murderer and a bitter penitentiary for it, Pſalm 51. Deliver me from blood-guiltineſſe.

4. They are in a combat and fight with their ordinary infirmities of paſſions, as Paul Romans 7. & Galatians 6. it makes them often pray, it puts them into ſad agonies, as Romans 7. what they would not do they do, therefore O wretched man that I cannot pray, be humble.

5. They do at laſt come out of theſe with the contrary graces, and delight in them, they mortifie and ſubdue their luſts, Rom. 8. 2. The Law of the ſpirit frees them from the Law of ſin, yea they delight in the contrary graces, His delight is in the Law of the Lord.

6. They do not only come out of them themſelves, but ſet againſt them in others, the woman of Samaria called her neighbours; Lydia her family; Then will I teach tranſgreſſors thy wayes.

It is a great mercy for the holieſt men to be preſerved from groſſe and ſcandalous ſins, 2 Peter 1. 10.

Reaſons 1. Hereby all the actual exerciſes of grace are ſuſpended, one hath no more uſe of grace, than if he were an unregenerate man, Pſalm 51. 10, 11. there is a Deliquium gratiæ as well as animæ.

2. There is a ſuſpenſion of all the priviledges of grace when one fals into groſſe ſins, there is an interdiction though not an interciſion, a ſequeſtration though not an ejection, Pſalm 51. 7. He alludes to the purging of the Leper under the Law, he had a right and title to his houſe, but not an actual enjoyment of it, a man hath communion with God here by the acts of grace and conſolations of the Spirit, theſe are ſuſpended.

3. Groſſe fals in Gods people are commonly penal, the puniſhment of other ſins, 2 Samuel 11. 6. Matthew 26. 33, 34. as ſin cannot be called by a worſe name than ſin, Romans 2. 13. ſo God cannot puniſh ſin worſe than by ſin.

4. It leaves a blot on a man which ſhall never be wiped off. Peters denial is ſpoken of where ever the Goſpel is publiſht; Jeroboam that made Iſrael to ſin; This is that Ahaz; Judas the Traitor.

5. Hereby you grieve the hearts of the Saints, and ſtrengthen the hands of the wicked.

6. Though God pardon the ſin, yet he will not take off the temporal judgment from the perſon and poſterity.

See Jer. 13. 11, 13. Deu 32. 19. Mica. 1. 5.

The execution of judgment ſhall begin with them, Amos 8. 1. 1 Peter 4. 17. God will puniſh his people with greater * ſeverity, Lamentations 4. 6. Matthew 3. 10.

* 1. They are ſeerer unto

Six ſorts of godly perſons are in danger:

First,

First, Men in the highest place, Magistrates, Ministers, David, Peter.

Secondly, Men of great parts, Knowledge puffeth up. Augustine saith of Licinius, one of great parts, but of a corrupt judgement, Cupit Diabolus ut te ornari.

Thirdly, Men of the greatest graces, God leaves sin in men to keep them low, therefore when men are high in grace he leaves powerful lusts to exercise them.

Fourthly, Men that are carnally confident, as Peter, Dr Pendleton.

Fifthly, Those that are censorious against the fals of others, Galatians 6. 1.

Sixthly, Those that are used to great visions of God; Salomons heart departed from the Lord that appeared to him twice, Eclipsis lunaris nunquam contingit nisi in plenilunio.

The Saints of God are often gainers by their sin, Romans 8. 28. Good comes to them this way by accident, the Lord over-ruling it by his wisdom and grace.

First, Hereby a man is discovered to himself, sees that in his own heart which he never saw before, 2 Chronicles 32. 31.

Secondly, The work of his humiliation and repentance is perfected, this use Paul made of his grievous sins, I was a persecutor, saith he.

3. The work of regeneration is perfected, Luke 22. 32.

Fourthly, He exalts the grace of God: so Paul.

Fifthly, It makes him watch over his own heart, and shun the occasions of sin the more.

Sixthly, It makes him the more compassionate to others when they fall, Galatians 6. 1.

God than other men, Micha 2. 8. Jer. 12. 8.

2. Their sins provoke him more than the sins of others, being committed, 1. Against more light, Isa. 22. 1. & 29. 1. inward light, Psal. 51. 6.

2. Against greater mercies, those of the new Covenant, the bloud of a Son, the graces of the Spirit. Am. 9. 3.

3. Their sins dishonour God more than the sins of others, Rom. 2. 24.

CHAP. XII.

Two Questions resolved about Sinne.

Quest. 1. HOW can grace and corruption stand together, so that corruption poisons not grace, nor grace works out corruption, when the admitting of one sin by Adam kil'd him presently?

Answ. Perfect holiness cannot stand with any corruption, but when the first lines only of Gods Image are drawn they may stand with corruption. If corruption should destroy grace, or grace corruption formally, yet they may be mixed together in gradu remisso. God hath undertaken not to withdraw himself from them.

God could have made us pure and perfect at once in Christ as well as in Adam.

The Church Militant must differ from the Church Triumphant, therefore we are here not only subject to misery but sin.

God (though he could take away the seeds of sins) yet suffers such remainders of corruption to abide in his people for divers good reasons:

1. Because the Lord delights in this world rather to shew grace to the persons of his servants than to their natures.

Prov. 20. 9. Eccles. 7. 20. 1 John 1. 8.

ther Carthage should be destroyed in regard it had been such a great enemy to Rome, and had sent forces to the very walls. But some opposed it, because then Rome would degenerate into luxury, and there would be divisions among themselves, when they had no common enemy to incounter. Vide Livium & Aug. de civ. Dei, lib. 1. cap. 30.

It was much disputed whe-

2. That our justification and sanctification might help one another, if our inherent righteousnes were perfect, imputed righteousnes would be the less acceptable, John 13. 10. justification also helps sanctification, Luke 7. 47.

* God humbleth his people three wayes, 1. By love, melts them with his goodneſſe. 2. By ſuffering. 3. By ſinning,

3. Becauſe he would humble them * (as Paul when exalted above meaſure) and have them live on free grace, 2 Peter 1. 9. The Devil tempted Adam (though he was created perfect) telling him he ſhould be as God; if from a ſtate of ſin there ſhould be ſuch a ſudden change to perfection, men would be apt to ſwell. The Antinomians will have nothing to do with the Law, and then (ſince by the Law comes the knowledg of tranſgreſſion) they think they are without ſin, and after, that they are perfect, like God.

that is the worſt way, as the other by his love is the beſt. Gods people have principles of love to melt their ſouls, Ezekiel 36. 31. Hoſea 3. 15. There are two aggravations of their ſinnes, 1. That they ſhould ſinne againſt the ſweetneſſe of Grace, John 6. 61. 2. That they ſhould ſinne againſt the power of grace, Pſalm 51. 6.

4. That we might converſe often with God: He delights in their fervent hearty prayers, he would have his children daily begging of him.

5. He would have them long to be diſſolved, and to be at home with him.

6. That he might magnifie the power of the in-dwelling virtue of his Spirit, that a little grace ſhould dwell amidſt great corruptions.

7. That we might deal gently with our brethren when they fall, Galatians 6. 1. Titus 3. 3. and be more watchfull over our ſelves, Hebrews 3. 3.

1. In the godly there is a purpoſe not to ſin, 2 Samuel 6. 21, 22. Pſalm 16. 18. Pſalm 39. 1.

2. This reſolution is backt with ſerious indeavours.

3. When he is overborne, there is a ſtriving in the act, a grieving and timely remorſe, if they fall they admire grace, and depend on God more.

Queſt. 2. Wherein lies the difference between a man ſanctified and unſanctified in regard of the body of corruption?

Anſw. There are theſe apparent differences:

1. An unregenerate man hath a body of corruption in him and nothing elſe, all his thoughts in him are only evil continually, a regenerate man hath a body of grace as well as of corruption.

2. The natural man carries the guilt of it with him, the reward of his body of ſin is death and deſtruction, but in the regenerate man the guilt (that is, the power to bind him over to the wrath of God) is wholly done away in the Blood of Chriſt: Gods diſpleaſure doth not redundare in perſonam, the perſon is pardoned though the ſin remain.

A Swine is where he would be when he is in the mud, but ſo is not the Sheep.

3. The body of corruption hath the whole rule in the unregenerate man, it is the active principle from which all is wrought, but in the other grace ſtrugleth againſt it.

The Papiſts ſay, 1. There is no ſuch body of corruption left in a man when he is regenerate, in Baptiſm, or when Regeneration is wrought, the body of corruption is taken away: 2. They ſay, Concupiſcence never was a ſin, but was in Adam in the ſtate of Innocency: 3. That the good workes of regenerate men are perfect.

This may miniſter conſolation to the people of God who find theſe reliques of corruption, they are unteachable, ſinful, can do nothing well.

1. This is the condition more or leſs of all the ſervants of God.

2. Theſe corruptions are not imputed to thee, the Lord loves thee as well as if thou were rid of them.

3. Thy loathing thy ſelf for them is as pleaſing to God as if thou couldſt perform perfect duties.

4. Chriſt will reign in thee in the midſt of theſe his enemies.

5. He will deliver thee from theſe reliques of corruption when he hath done good to thee by them.

6. This ſhould make thee humble and watchful.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Saints care to preserve themselves from sin, and especially their own iniquities.

GODS people must and will carefully preserve themselves from wickedness.

2. They must bend their care most against their own sins.

The first Proposition is proved out of 1 Joh. 5. 18. Our Saviour also saith, Take heed to your selves of the leaven of the Pharisees, and take heed of covetousness, take heed to your selves that your hearts be not oppressed with surfetting and drunkennesse. Paul bids Timothy to keep himself pure. 2 Cor. 7. 11. Among other fruits of godly sorrow the Apostle begins with care or diligence, which is the duty we are now speaking of, viz. a care not to sin, Psalm 119. I hid thy law in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee, I took pains to withdraw my self from sin, Let every one that nameth the name of the Lord depart from iniquity.

The Empereſs Eudoxia ſent Chryſoſtome a threatning meſſage, to which he anſwered, Go tell her, Nil niſi peccatum timeo.

Judæos à carne ſuilla abſtinere Deus juſſit, id potiſſimum voluit intelligi; ut ſe à peccatis atque immunditiis abſtinerent. Eſt enim lutulentum hoc animal, & immundum; nec unquam cœlum aſpicit, ſed in terra tota & corpore & ore projectum, ventri ſemper & pabulo ſervit. Lactant. lib. 4. divin. Inſtit. de vera ſapientia. Vide plura ibid. Though ſin be weakned in the Saints, yet the nature of it abiding, all the properties of it remain. 1. It is reſtleſs in the beſt, oh wretched man that I am, See James 1.14. 2. Active, Gal. 5. 17. 3. Deceitfull, Epheſ. 3. 13.

1. They have a fixed will, purpoſe, and indeavour againſt all ſin, Acts 11. 23. Hebrews 13. 18. Pſalm 119. 106. Philippians 3. 12. Romans 7. 18, 19. Acts 23. 1. & 24. 16.

2. When they fall into ſin, they are ſeriouſly humbled for it, Pſalm 51.

3. They conſtantly mourn under the body of ſin and reliques of corruption, Pſalm 37. 23.

4. When they fall into ſin, they after admire free grace, Revelations 7. 14. Romans 7. 25. compared with 8. 1. are more watchfull, circumſpect, and dependent upon God, Pſalm 51. Thou makeſt me to know wiſdome.

Reaſons 1. Why the people of God ought to keep themſelves in this manner. 2. Why they can and will do ſo.

Firſt, They are bound to do ſo in divers reſpects:

1. Becauſe of the many advantages which ſin hath againſt them, in regard of which they will be miſerably overtaken with it, if they do not look to themſelves:

1. A naughty nature within them, by which they are apt to all ſin, as occaſion, temptation, and their natural ability doth ſerve, which if it be not oppoſed, will break forth very much.

2. We have an enemy the Devil, who doth obſerve and watch us with all ſubtilty and malice, with unwearied diligence, it is his buſineſs to draw us to ſin, to ſuggeſt evil fancies into us, and to work upon our corruption, we ſee how he impoiſoned our firſt parents when they were not careful.

3. The world is ſtored with variety of means to draw a man to every ſin, objects to every ſenſe, incouragements, provocations, examples. Great danger of ſinning requires great diligence to prevent the danger.

2. We muſt conſider of the hurt that will befall us from ſin, if through our careleſneſs we ſuffer it to get the better of us. Not to ſpeak of the miſchief of eternal death, a holy man may run into great ſins, and ſhall ſurely do ſo without great care and watchfulneſs, and thoſe will be very hurtful unto him, they will break off his communion with God, interrupt the peace of his conſcience, deface Gods Image in in him and disable him from praying or doing any good duty, and fill him full of doubts, fears and horrours, and make him grow worse and worse.

3. With due care and diligent observing of our selves; a godly man may much prevail to keep himself innocent from great transgressions, and unspotted of the world.

Secondly, The Saints can and will keep themselves from sin.

Because they have received the divine nature, by which they shun the pollutions that are in the world through lust, by which they are made sensible of the evil of sin, and framed to a loathing and hatred of sin; every true Christian hath the spirit which will make him lust against the flesh. The wisdom of the world is to keep themselves from misery, the wisdom of Saints is to keep themselves from that which is the cause of all misery, and the worst of all misery, from iniquity.

Lust perswades by many topicks:

1. Ab utili, from the profit and benefit of sin, Prov. 1.3.

2. By an argument from pleasure, ease and content, Prov. 7.18.

We must deny all its solicitations, Tit. 2.12. See Gal. 1.16. we must deny it presently.

3. Always, it must be actu continuo.

4. Strongly, peremptorily.

5. With wisdome, as Joseph did his Mistris, yet with a dependance on Christ for strength to maintain our denial, and praying to him for strength to make good our denial.

The godly will not only be carefull to abstain from evil acts, but to subdue their lusts, to crucifie sin in the thoughts and desires, Rom. 7.8,9.

1. The chief dominion of sin is in the heart, there is the evil treasure, the root.

2. This is contrary to the chief part of the Law; the letter of the Law is against the acting of sin, the spirit of it is against lusting.

3. This is the strongest part of sin and hardliest subdued, 2 Cor. 10.5.

The way to keep our selves from sin,

A Reverend and Religious man had this written before his eyes in his study, saith Mr Gataker, Noli peccare, nam Deus videt, Angeli astant, diabolus accusabit, conscientia testabitur, infernus cruciabit.

1. Often and earnestly call upon God to keep you by his Spirit of wisdom and strength, for you are not able to keep your selves.

2. Often renew and settle in your own hearts a resolution of not sinning, and that upon spiritual grounds and considerations taken out of Gods Word, 1 Peter 4.11. David saith, I hid thy word in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. This hiding the word is a calling to mind, and serious pondering the commandments, threats promises, exhortations, examples and reasons of Gods word against sin in the general, and against such and such sins in particular, and pressing them upon our selves till they have wrought in us a setled and determinate resolution, I will not sin, I will not do this and this evil.

3. It is requisite to observe and oppose the first rising of sin in the motions and desires thereof, in the thoughts of it, with a sigh, groan, ejaculation, calling to mind some text of Scripture against it, and stirring some detestation of it, and calling upon our selves to keep our former resolutions against it: The conception of sin is by the stirring and moving of ill desires within.

There were five men met together that asked one another what means they used to abstain from sinne. The first answered, that he continually thought upon the certainty of death, and the uncertainty of the time of it, and that made him live every day as if it were his last day. The second meditated of the severe account he was to give at the day of judgment, and of the everlasting torments of hell, and this kept him from sinne. The third, of the vilenesse and loathsomnesse of sinne, and of the excellency and beauty of grace, and this made him abhorre sin. The fourth, of the everlasting rewards and pleasures provided for those that abstain from sinne, and this prevailed with him. The fifth and last continually meditated of the Lord Jesus Christ and of his love, and this made him not to sinne against God. This last is the greatest Motive of all. Master Calamy on Ezek. 36. 32. If I were to Preach one Sermon in all my life for the humbling of men for sinne, I would take a Text that might shew the great price that was paid for it, and therein open the breach that sin hath made between God and mans soul. Master Burroughes on Hosea 10. 12. We should, 1. Mortifie the lust, subdue the habit of sinne, Gal. 5.24. 2. Prevent the act, the lust is a grief to God, the deed a dishonour to him.

4. Shun

4. Shun the occaſions of evil, Gen. 39. 10. Prov. 11. 14. all thoſe things which our ſelves have found in our experience to provoke and ſtir our corruptions and to give them advantage againſt us, Solomon ſaith, Look not on the wine when it is red, Prov. 23. 31. and guard the ſenſes, and above all the eye, it hath a great influence on the heart, Numb. 15. 39. Pſalm 119. 37.

A Chriſtian woman was poſſeſſed at a Theater, Satan giving this reaſon why at that time he entered into her, Quia invenerat eam in ſuo. Tertul. lib. de Spectac. Vide Auguſt. Confeſſ. lib. 6. cap. 8.

5. There are ſeveral things in the covenant of grace to be conſidered in reference to ſin.

1. Clear proviſion againſt every ſin, that would diſanull the Covenant, Jeremiah 31. 32.

2. Ordinary proviſion of peace and conſolation to believing ſinners, though they fall into ſin, Hebrews 10. 2.

3. There is full proviſion made againſt all ſuch ſins, as either in their own nature or aggravating circumſtances would bring the ſoul into perplexity, John 1. 16. Rom. 6. 6.

A true ſight and ſenſe of Gods being and excellency, is a notable check and curb to ſin.

A God,

1. Whoſe Majeſty is ſo glorious, Eſay 40. 15. Job 37. 22.

2. Whoſe Wiſdom and Power is ſo infinite, that he governs all things and nothing can withſtand him, 1 Corinthians 10. 42.

3. Who is ſo good in himſelf and to us, Pſalm 119. 58. Acts 17. 14. See Jeremiah 9. 23, 24. Deuteronomy 13. 29. Eccleſ. 12. 1.

4. Whoſe holy nature is ſo contrary to ſin, Exodus 15. 11.

5. A God that hath an abſolute propriety in us, and ſoveraignty over us.

6. A God who is omnipreſent and ſees all things, Romans 15. 3.

7. Hath ability and authority to puniſh us, is the great Judg, Hebrews 12. ult.

Secondly, Our care of avoiding ſin muſt ſhew it ſelf ſpecially againſt our own ſins, Ezekiel 18. Caſt away all your tranſgreſſions by which you have tranſgreſſed, Pſalm 18. 23.

The Apoſtle writing to the Corinthians ſaith, your incontinence.

Reaſons 1. Where the danger is greater, the care of preventing muſt be moſt uſed. Every man is ſooneſt and moſt eaſily overtaken with theſe ſins.

2. What will be a greateſt proof of his truth and ſincerity, and ſo the ſureſt foundation of his comfort, that ſhould he be moſt carefull to practice; this will make it appear that he ſtrives againſt ſin becauſe it is ſin, when he ſtriveth againſt thoſe evils that are moſt pleaſing to him. 1 Sam. 22. 24.

3. What will moſt further him in the works of ſanctification and amendment of life, that ought he moſt diligently to endeavour; now in prevailing againſt ones corruptions he ſhall moſt further the work of grace and holineſs in himſelf, kill that ſin, and the reſt will be more eaſily killed.

4. There we ſhould beſtow moſt pains, in which if we do not uſe care we loſe our labour in other things.

Means were preſcribed before to be uſed againſt ſin in generall, you muſt apply theſe in particular againſt your particular ſins.

Pray often againſt theſe, meditate and reſolve moſt againſt theſe, obſerve and reſiſt moſt the firſt riſing of theſe, ſhun the occaſions of theſe firſt. A diligent and conſtant care to reſiſt a mans own corruption, is a ſure proof of uprightneſſe, and ſuch a one ſhall enjoy the comfort of his ſincerity in due time.

Chap. XIV.

Of the Cauſe of forbearing Sinne, of abhorring it, and of ſmall Sins.

If the ſinfulneſſe of it make me forbear it, I ſhall reſtrain: 1. From ſecret ſins, which men cannot know nor ſee.

THe main cauſe of our forbearing any ſin ſhould be the ſinfulneſſe of it, that is, becauſe it is repugnant to Gods will, and offenſive to him, Eſay 59.2. So Joſeph, How ſhall I do this great evil, and ſin againſt God? Lo what did curb him from that wickedneſſe, which in the verdict of carnal reaſon he had ſo much cauſe to have committed, and he might have done with ſo much ſafety and aſſurance? Even this, It was a ſin againſt God, *Jer.*44.4. *Neh.*13.27. Pſalm 51.3. Pſalm 97.10.

2. From ſins to my ſelf very pleaſing and beloved. 3. From ſins countenanced and favoured in the world. 4. In the dayes of proſperity and welfare, when the rod is not upon me Unregenerate men may flie from ſin for ſome evil that comes by it. Peccare non metuunt, ſed ardere. Aug. Bern.

Reaſons, Firſt, This is the very proper cauſe of all the other evil effects of ſinne, and herein doth the very evilneſſe and vileneſſe of it conſiſt. The foul nature of ſin ſtands in this, that it is offenſive to God and oppoſite to the will of that excellent Majeſty to whom all creatures ought to be ſubject.

Secondly, Our forbearance of ſinne is no otherwiſe a fruit and effect of love to the Divine Majeſty, than if we forbear it on this ground, and further than it ariſeth from this ground, it is nought worth to our comfort, nor ſhall bring us any everlaſting reward, Ezra 9.14. Eadem velle & nolle, ea demum firma eſt amicitia.

God hates all ſin and alwayes. See Prov.8. 12.

Thirdly, Unleſſe this thought make us flie from ſinne we ſhall never forbear it conſtantly nor univerſally, becauſe no other motive will ſtill and every where hold.

We muſt not onely avoid ſinne, but abhorre it, Pſalm 97.10. Eſay 21.20. Eſay 30.22. Ezekiel 36.31. Rom. 12.9. David ſaith, I hate vain thoughts, ſee Pſalm 119.164. Paul mentioning divers evils, ſaith, God forbid. The wicked, and much more wickedneſſe, is an abomination to the juſt, 1 Samuel 26.11. *Rom.*6.2. Sin is often expreſt by abomination; 'tis ſo to God, it ſhould be ſo to men.

We muſt hate ſinne, Odio averſationis & inimicitiæ, not only with the hatred of flying from it, but of enmity, purſuing it.

Reaſons, 1. Becauſe our affections muſt be conformable to Gods, *Prov.*6.16. He hateth nothing ſimply but ſin, and ſinners for ſins ſake.

2. Sin in it ſelf is moſt hateſull, becauſe moſt hurtfull to man and injurious to God. The ground of hatred of any thing is the contrariety of it to our welfare; as we hate wilde fierce and raging beaſts for their miſchievouſneſſe; a Toad and Serpent for their poiſonouſneſſe, which is a ſtrong enemy to life and health: ſo we hate thieves and murderers. Sin is the moſt miſchievous and harmfull thing in the world.

The Law; 1. Diſcovers ſinne, Rom. 3.20.

2. Sets us againſt it, Jeremy 31.19. Affection follows apprehenſion and light; It oppoſeth ſin, *Epheſ.*6.17.

We never ſo truly hate ſin, as when we hate it for its own uglineſſe and deformity; as we never love God ſo truly, as when we love him for his own beauty and excellency. Mr Smiths Select Diſcourſes, A Chriſtians Conflicts and Conqueſts.

Not being is the bounds of hatred, where there is true grace, it will ſeek the ruine of ſin.

Our hatred againſt ſin muſt have theſe properties:

Firſt, It muſt be univerſal, we muſt hate all ſins, Pſalm 119.104. James 1.21.

1 Pet.

1 Pet. 2.1. our own as well as others ſins, gainfull and profitable ſins, as well as others. Hatred is of the whole kind, ſee Job 34.32.

Secondly, Sutable to the nature of ſin, hating thoſe ſins moſt which are moſt palpably ſinfull.

Thirdly, Moderated with pity and compaſſion toward the ſinners.

There are many Arguments to deter us from ſmall ſins:

1. Quia difficilius caventur, It is a thing more difficult to avoid them than greater.

2. Quia difficilius curantur, Becauſe the wound given by them is the more difficultly cured, as a prick made with a bodkin or ſteletto, if it be deep, is more dangerous than a wound given with a greater weapon.

3. Quia ad majora viam muniunt, Becauſe they are a preparation and diſpoſition to greater offences, as little thieves which creep in at the windows and open the door to the greater.

4. Quia parva peccata crebra ita nos pragravant ut unum grande, Small ſinnes with their multitude as much hurt the ſoul, as great ſins with their weight; greateſt Rivers are fill'd by drops. Dr Featley. See Pſalm 40.12.

There is no ſinne ſimply little, the leaſt offence is committed againſt an infinite God, and therefore deſerves infinite puniſhment. 2. The leaſt ſin coſt the ſhedding of Chriſts blood. 3. There is great diſobedience, defilement and unthankfulneſſe in a little ſinne. 4. The wages of ſinne, as ſinne, is death, and therefore of every ſinne. Mr Galamy on Jeremy 18. 7. The ſmalleſt ſinne abates the love of God, unfits for communion with God, keeps up the Devils trade, may admit of great aggravations.

How ſhall we do to get the heart affected with ſecret ſins? Affections follow knowledge.

Four conſiderations may get a remorſe in the ſoul for theſe things:

1. Think of the holineſſe of God, Job 4.18,19. 1 Samuel 6.20.

2. Your own proneneſſe to ſin, Pſalm 40.12. Sins in the whole courſe of your converſation, ſins in prayer, recreation, buſineſſe.

3. The exact purity of the Law, which condemns every irregular exceſſe and defect, luſt, motion. Pſal.119. Rom.7.9.

4. Conſider the ſtrictneſſe of the laſt account, 1 Cor 4.6.

Chap. XV.

Of ſome particular Sinnes, and ſpecially of Ambition, Apoſtaſie, Backſliding, Blaſphemy, Boaſting, Bribery.

There are divers ſorts of ſpecial ſins:

First, Such as appertain to, and moſt commonly ſhew themſelves in this or that age of mans life.

Secondly, There are ſins more proper to ſome countreys and places.

Thirdly, To the ſeaſon or times wherein we live.

Fourthly, There are ſpecial ſins of mens ſpecial callings, dealings and tradings in the world.

Fifthly, Of their conditions, whether poor or rich, great or ſmall.

Sixthly, There are ſpecial ſins following the conſtitution of the body, whether ſangvine, chollerick, flegmatick, or melancholly.

Seventhly, There are ſpecial ſins hanging about our relations.

Ambition.

Ambition.

Tripliciter appetitum hominis contingit esse inordinatum. Uno modo, per hoc quod aliquis appetit testimonium de excellentia, quam non habet, quod est appetere honorem supra suam proportionem. Alio modo, per hoc, quod honorem sibi exhibit non referendo in Deum. Tertiò, per hoc quòd appetitus ejus in ipso honore quiescit, non referens honorem ad utilitatem aliorum. Ambitio autem importat inordinatum appetitum honoris. Aquin. 2a, 2æ. Quæst. 131. Artic. 2.

Ambition is an inordinate desire of outward promotion to places of honour and wealth.

It is inordinate:

1. When it is carried after such honours as may not lawfully be possessed by him that desires them.

2. When to an higher place than that one hath already; as every one must be content with his goods, so with his place.

3. When the desire is over vehement[a], such as makes him to take irregular courses to satisfie them, or to be extreamly discontented, if he fail of his purposes. Absoloms ambition made him basely to crouch to the people. See in Plutarchs Lives, when Pyrrhus undertook to passe into Italy, what Cyneas his wise and trusty counsellour said to him, to shew him the vanity of his ambition.

[a] Latini ambitiosum vocant, utpote modum non tenentem in ambiendis honoribus. Steph. Thes. Grac.

4. When it seeks alone it self, and not the glory of God and publick good.

The Pharisees were very ambitious, Mat. 6. 1, 2, 5, 16. Luke 18. 11. Mat. 23. 6, 7. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 11. 24. Sect. 136.

Good men may enjoy worldly honours. There was a good Obadiah in Ahabs Court, Joseph in Pharaohs Court, Saints in Nero's household; Ezra, Nehemiah, Daniel had favour with the Princes of the times; yet they should be jealous and watchfull over themselves, Psalm 131. 1. 2 Samuel 17. 2. use their places for God, Prov. 3. 9. Nehem. 1. 10. and be ready to part with them, when God cals for them.

The Jesuites have most traiterously cast the platform, and do go about so much as the wit of men can devise, to bring all Kings, Princes and States under their subjection. Parf. Quodl. of Relig. and State, Quodl. 9. Answ. to 7th Art. See more there; and Answ. to the 16th Artic.

In his Answer to the 5th Article, he saith, The Jesuites have given it out for England by name, that it should be made an Island of Jesuites.

Fuligat in the life of Bellarmine, reports this passage of his, lib. 1. cap. 4. Dignitas quavis & purpura, eâm magis splendet, quo rosa marcescit, & relinquit de se pessimum odorem.

Tertullian calls ambitious men, Avidos gloriæ & famæ negotiatores.

The whole world satisfied not [b] Alexander.

> Unus Pellæo juveni non sufficit orbis,
> Æstuat infœlix angusto limine mundi. Juvenal. Sat.

[b] Alexandro in regno Macedoniæ nato, hoc est, Græciæ angulo, orbis hic non erat satis. Illachrymasse dicitur ad mentionem plurium mundorum, cum de hoc ipso Philosophi apud eum disputarent, Lodovic. Viv. de verit. Fid. Christ. lib. 1. cap. 10.

Yet Diogenes was more ambitious in refusing all honours, than Alexander in rejecting some.

God is served and glorified as well in a lower calling as a high, Titus 2. 10. In a private life there are more advantages of enjoying God, lesser snares and burdens.

We must labour to mortifie Ambition, by telling our selves often and seriously,

First, Of the vanity of this outward greatnesse which is but a bubble; those that are advanced highest for worldly greatnesse, are as full of discontents as any other men under Heaven;

Secondly,

Secondly, By convincing our selves that ambition is a damnable sin.

Thirdly, Of our unworthinesse of any good thing, and the danger of high places. See Rom. 12.16. Phil. 2.3. Psalm 131.1, 2. Qui bien se cognoit, peu se prise.

There are three qualifications of a holy greatnesse of mind. 1. A holy independency. 2. A holy magnanimity. 3. A holy self-sufficiency.

Fourthly, Labour to be ambitious of honour from God and our consciences, Rom. 15.20. The Greek word signifies an high ambition to preach the Gospel. The same Greek word is used also to the like purpose, 2 Cor. 5.9. & 1 Thess. 4.11. There is a holy ambition, Habet & sapientia sui generis superbiam. Lactantius.

It should be our ambition to serve God in the highest way of duty, Acts 13.36. and to obtain the highest degree of glory.

It is a Question, How far one may offer himself to places of Government in Church or Commonwealth?

First, One may desire that God would give him a call to the imployment of his gifts, 1 Tim. 3.1.

Secondly, He may modestly offer himself to a work if God call him, but must wait his leisure.

Thirdly, We must not use ill means, nor be to sollicitous in the use of lawfull means, Prov. 25.27.

Apostasie.

Apostasie and Backsliding are usually confounded: Yet

Some distinguish them, and say, Apostasie is a total and final departure from the faith once professed. Backsliding is a falling again into our old sins for a time, out of which we recover through Gods grace, being renewed again by repentance.

Apostatare vel apostatizare, pro deficere a fide Christiana, vel etiam a principe suo. Voss. de vitiis Sermonis lib. 4. cap. 1. Ille propriè est Apostata qui fidem veram antea professus, ab ea in totum recedit. Apostata enim idem sonat quod desertor & transfuga. Talis fuit Julianus, qui cognomen habuit Apostatæ; tales sunt qui ex Christianis, vel Judæi, vel Mahumetani sunt. Ames. de conse. l. 4. c. 5. The first disturbers of this uniformity in Doctrine, were Barret and Baro in Cambridge, and after them Thompson. B. Carleton ch. 2. Never was there any among us, before Mr Montague, that published this error of the Apostasie of the Saints in print, but only Thompson a Dutchman, Fellow of Clare-Hall in Cambridge, a man of an excellent memory, and of great learning, but of little grace, and of a debolst, loose and voluptuous life. Mr Prinne of the Perpetuity of a Regenerate mans Estate, pag. 221. Petrus Bertius Gæorheologus Leydensis librum edere haud veritus est titulo certè ipso execrabilem, De Apostasia Sanctorum: Homo esse videtur ex Arminii Schola. Abbot. de Perseverantia Sanctorum. King James said at the hearing of the Title of that Book, that he should have written another Book, De castitate Meretricum. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 3.12. Sect. 131, 132, 133, 134, 135. Bertius labours there to prove, Sicut sancti possunt perseverare, etiam possunt desicere, & peccatorum multorum conglomeratione eo usque fideles potest pertingere, ut universali Apostasia Spiritum gratiæ penitus queat excutere, & se bonis omnibus cælestibus spoliare.

Backsliding is a defection, aversion and departure from the Lord after a professed owning of him, and ingaging ones self to him, Hosea 14.4.

It is a great sinne:

1. A turning away from God, Jer. 2.27. Deut. 32.15. a contemning him in his Authority, 2 Sam. 12.9. 1 Kings 14.9. in his Omniscience, Psalm 51.3.

2. In every backsliding there is much pride of heart; other lusts may turn a man to the creature, pride only turns away the heart from God, 2 Chron. 32.26.

3. It is a grieving of the Spirit, Esay 63.10.

4. It is against knowledge, particular, practical knowledge, 1 Tim. 1.13.

5. Against goodnesse and mercy, 1 Kings 11.9.

The Question is not, Whether grace being a creature be defectibile, in its own nature defective, whether a creature being left to himself may fall off? Grace where it was perfect, was not able to defend it self. The Angels and Adam (we know) fell.

Bishop Carleton against Montague, chap. 2. thus states the Question, Whether they that are according to Gods purpose Predestinated, Called and Justified, may loſe theſe graces of their Predeſtination, Calling and Juſtification. This (ſaith he) the Orthodox Church hath alwayes denied. The Arminians, who admit no other Predeſtination but conditional, affirm it, and none but Pelagians and Arminians.

Non eſt revera corpus Chriſti quod non erit cum ipſo in æternum. Aug. de Doct. Chriſt. 1 John 2.8.

Eminent Profeſſors that have attained only common grace, may fall from a form of godlineſſe, Acts 19.33. compared with 2 *Tim.*4.14.

We muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt gifts or common graces, and true ſanctifying graces; the firſt may be loſt, not the other.

In ſanctifying graces there may be an intermiſſion of the act, a remiſſion of the degree, *Revel.*2.5. & 3.27. but not an utter and total amiſſion of the habit.

Franciſcus Spira ob agnitæ veritatis Evangelicæ abnegationem cum horrendis gemitibus deſperabundus interiiſſe, à Sleidano & aliis ſcribitur. Hiſtoriam ipſam, ſine gravi mentis horrore, qui legere poſſit? Dieterici Analyſ. Evang. Domin. p.480. Vide plura ibid.

A godly man may fall fearfully and dangerouſly, when God withdraws his aſſiſtance, but not totally and finally; he may decay in the degrees of grace, that he may never recover it to his dying day, neither the ſtrength nor comfort of grace that he formerly had: Per pancos invenies qui redeant ad gradum priſtinum. Bernard. yet it is a great ſin for a godly man to fall from any pitch of grace obtained, Heb. 12.15. *Revel.*2.5.

Our own times afford many ſad inſtances of Apoſtates, Profeſſors turned Apoſtates, nay pleaders for Apoſtaſie.

We have cauſe to mourn for the great doctrinal Apoſtaſie of theſe times:

Conſider, 1. The great multitude of people that are fallen from their ſtedfaſtneſſe.

2. The multitude of errours, fundamental errours, Dogmata devoratoria ſalutis, & carcinomata Chriſtianæ religionis, as Tertullian cals them.

3. The nature of the perſons; men of ſober lives, and ſuch as have been great profeſſors of Religion.

4. How theſe perſons are bewitched with errour, *Gal.*3.

5. The miſeries that neceſſarily follow theſe errours.

1. Hereby Chriſt is much diſhonoured.
2. Hereby Religion is much indangered.
3. Hereby the Goſpel-Ordinances come to be ſlighted and prophaned.
4. Hereby Reformation is hindered.
5. Hereby great diſturbances and confuſions are brought into Cities, Congregations, Families.
6. Many ſouls are alſo hereby ruinated.

Let ſuch conſider four Texts of Scripture, Luke 9.62. & 17.32. Hebr. 10.38. 2 Peter 2.21.

Theſe things premiſed I ſhall endeavour to prove, That a true believer cannot fall totally and finally.

Scripture proves it, Pſalm 1.3. 2 *Cor.*4.9. *Prov.*24.16. Not totally, 1 John 2.19. 1 John 3.9. nor finally, John 10.28,29. 1 Peter 1.5. God and Chriſt have agreed to uphold him.

Perſeverance in grace to the end is a gift of God given to true believers, *Rom.*8. 28,29,30. The chain is ſo linked together that it cannot be ſeparated. He whom God purpoſed to predeſtinate muſt needs be predeſtinated; he that is predeſtinated muſt needs be called; he that is called muſt be juſtified; he that is ſo juſtified muſt be glorified. But no man can come to glory without perſeverance to the end.

Mr Burgeſſe in his Treatiſe of Grace and Aſſurance, *Sect.*2. Serm. 14. on 1 John 3.9,10. ſaith, This place is brought to prove perſeverance in grace, and no ſtrength of wit hath yet been able to overcome it, and he interprets it, Sinneth not as one who is of the Devil his father, all within him is not corrupted, ſo that he makes ſin his trade, his cuſtom and delight.

See Deodate in loc.

He cannot fall into the ſervice of ſin totally and finally. Whether this ſeed of God be faith, or the word of God, or the grace of Gods calling according to his purpoſe, or the Spirit, or any of theſe, or all theſe, it proveth our purpoſe, that all is not fallen away, then the man in whom it abideth cannot fall totally. B. Carlton againſt Montague.

John

John 5.24. Hath everlasting life; it shall be as truly given him as if he had it already in possession. See Joh. 15.16

S^t Austin hath observed out of the Exposition of the Lords Prayer made by Cyprian, that almost in every petition we pray for perseverance. So then that prayer will uphold the Doctrine of perseverance, as the Articles of the Creed do generally that of Assurance.

Objections answered:

Quod minui potest, potest aboleri & abire in nihilum fides minui potest, Bertius. Apoc. 2.4. So Barlow in his Discourse of Spiritual Stedfastnesse, and others. 1 Pet. 1.23. 1 Iohn 3. 9.

First, If one degree of grace may fail, why not another, and so grace wholly decay?

Answ. Some say all the degrees of grace which a godly man obtains by trading with grace as a talent, may be lost; but the first stock which God gave him to trade withall, called incorruptible seed, the seed remaining cannot be lost. He may be brought to the first stock that God gave him to trade withall.

Secondly, We read many examples in Scripture of forward Disciples that seemed to be sanctified, and fell; Judas an Apostle, Matth. 26. 21. Demas and Alexander companions of Paul; Hymenaus and Philetus, 1 Tim. 1. 20. Hermogenes and Phygellus, 2 Tim. 1. and Nicholas the Deacon. See Gal. 3. 1. Julian, Ecebolius, Francis Spira, Pistorius, Ostorodius, and Vorstius, and other Apostates there have been of later times.

Answ. These were only temporary believers, not true converts. Common graces may fail, but not sanctifying.

Thirdly, The Scripture speaks of those, that denied the Lord that bought them, 2 Pet. 2. 1.

Answ. That Text is the strongest for Apostasie; he means bought in respect of external profession and esteem. Some say, their services were bought, not their persons. See the Annotat. on that place.

Fourthly, Others urge that place much, Ezek. 8. 21, 24, 25, 26, 27.

This Text (saith Plaifere in his Apello Evangelium, cap. 16.) by no evasion can be avoided; if the comparison there between a righteous man and wicked be well observed. For deny you any wise, that a righteous man can turn away from his righteousnesse and die, and I will deny likewise that a wicked man can turn from his wickednesse and live, and so we shall solvere Scripturas, make void the holy word of God: if a supposition putteth nothing in the one, it putteth nothing in the other: If the wicked there of whom the Text speaks, be truly and legally a wicked man, then the righteous there is truly and evangelically a righteous man. For legally righteous the Scripture knows but one. If it be ever seen that a wicked man turns from his wickednesse and lives, then it may as well be seen, that a righteous man may turn from his righteousnesse and die. See B. Mount. Appeal, ch. 4. M^r Goodw. Redemption Redeemed, chap. 12. Pestilentes sunt Magistri qui negant id fieri posse, quod Deus & fieri posse, & realiter à se puniri testatur. Grot. in ver. 24. Tanti hunc locum faciunt Bellarminus, Bertius, & alii ferè omnes qui pro Apostasia fidelium pugnant, ut in prima acie, primóq; illum semper ostentent. Amef. Anti-Synod. Script. de Persev. Sanct. c. 2.

There are several Answers given to this Objection.

The Scripture here considers a man as of himself, and what he is by his own power, not what he is by a Covenant of grace, which is only per accidens, and ex hypothesi, a meer extrinsecal and accidental thing to a man.

Some say, this place in Ezekiel is to be answered as Heb. 10. 38. If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. Such threatnings do not suppose that the regenerate and true believers shall ever fall away, but are means to preserve them from it, by filling their hearts with holy fear, Luke 12. 4, 5. Rom. 8. 13. Heb. 12. ult. See M^r Burgesse of justificat. pag. 237, 238.

Gods promises doe not make way to his threatnings, but his threatnings make way to his promises. God doth therefore threaten that he may not Promissionum & comminationum eadem non est per omnia ratio. Comminationum ratio est in homine, & ex homine ipso; & ideo proponitur maxima ex parte, ut homo moveatur ab eo quod est ratio minitandi, ex qua mutatione minitatio illa suum finem habet, atq; adeo cessat, eodem planè modo quo mandatum illud quod tentandi causa proponitur, mandati vim amittit post horam tentationis. Promissionis alia est ratio & alius finis. Amef. Coron. Art. 5. de persev. c. 2.

fulfill, but doth therefore promiſe that he may fulfill. Maſter Bridge on Rom. 4. 19.

The ſcope of the place (ſay ſome) is to anſwer a moſt unjuſt calumny that the Jews in their Captivity caſt upon God, that he viſited the iniquity of their fathers upon them; thence they ſaid, the wayes of God were not equal. The Prophet clears the juſtice of God, and tels them, God puniſheth no man for anothers ſins of which he is not guilty. God may inflict a temporal death on a righteous man, and that in diſpleaſure for falling from the degrees of his righteouſneſſe, as on Moſes and Joſiah.

Quæſtio fuit, utrum filii juſti luerent pœnas peccatorum patrum ſuorum; id eſt, utrum Iſraelitæ qui tunc temporis vivebant morte plectebantur abſque ſuo merito. Deus hoc ſenſu negat ſe velle mortem peccatoris, ita ſcilicet ut velit mortem cuiquam infligere propter alienam culpam. Hæc eſt clara & certa explicatio ex analyſi contextus fluens. Amef. Anti-ſynod. Script. de Perſev. 2. Profeſſa eſt Remonſtrantium ſententia, nullam in Veteri Teſtamento claram exſtare promiſſionem vitæ æternæ, atq; adeo nec comminationem mortis æternæ. Sed norunt remonſtrantes ſervire ſcenæ. Id. ibid.

Dr Featley in his Pelagius Redivivus gives three Anſwers to this place, the laſt is, That the Prophet ſpeaketh here of actual righteouſneſſe which may be loſt, and is loſt by the committing of any wilfull grievous ſin againſt conſcience, not of habitual which cannot be loſt.

Others ſay, this place, and that Ezek. 33. 11. only ſpeak of a temporal deſtruction of Gods own people. I delight not in your ruine as a tyrant that delights in cruelty, or as an inexorable Judge.

2. Theſe places only ſhew the poſſibility and acceptation of repentance, not Gods inward purpoſe; as a holy God he delights not in ſin, as a merciſull God he delights not in judgement.

Object. 5. There are exhortations and threatnings, that if you forſake God he will forſake you; ſo David to Salomon, and Take heed you loſe not the things you have wrought; watch, ſtand-faſt.

Anſw. The perſeverance of Gods people is certain, yet moral, not phyſical; therefore exhortations, admonitions and threatnings may well be uſed to ſtirre up Gods fear in them, which is a means to make them hold out to the end.

Bertius urgeth the example of Solomon, who when he was dear to God, and full of his Spirit, the author of Canonical Books, the dedicator of the Temple, and type of Chriſt, yet after by ſtrange women ſuffered his heart to be eſtranged from God, Adeo ut de ipſius ſalute etiam illi dubitent, qui maximè ſententiam noſtram oppugnant. But the Book ſtiled Vindiciæ Salomonis takes off all this.

Object. 6. Thoſe examples of David when he committed adultery, and put Uriah to death; and Peter when he ſo ſhamefully denied his Maſter, are urged alſo to prove Apoſtaſie.

Anſw. But I may ſay of David and Peters faith, and others that fell into enormous ſins, with Tertullian, Capit areſcere, ſed non exaruit. Mota fuit, ſed non amota; concuſſa, ſed non excuſſa, aut extincta. The 51. Pſalm, and Chriſts prayer for Peter prove the ſame more fully.

See Doctor Prideaux his Epheſus Backſliding. Maſter Robbinſons Eſſayes, Obſerv. 6.

The fals of eminent profeſſors ſhould make the people of God afraid, Luke 17. 32. Rom. 11. 20. 1 Cor. 10. 11. Heb. 4. 1. 1 Cor. 7. 11. 2 Tim. 2. 18, 19.

God hath recorded the fals of his people:

1. Ut oſtendat infirmitatem noſtram.
2. Ut oſtendat judicium ſuum.

We ſhould be Apoſtates from ſinne and Satan. Luther call'd them which fell off from the Pope Sancti Apoſtatæ, holy Apoſtates, and he being charged with Apoſtaſie, anſwered, Confitetur Lutherus ſe eſſe apoſtatam ſed beatum ac ſanctum, qui fidem Diabolo datam non ſervavit.

Where there is a principle of grace a man will fear ſin as the greateſt evil, Eccleſ. 9. 2. Pauls great fear was not to ſuffer, but ſin.

2. The Saints find by experience, that there is the ſame corruption in themſelves that is in others, Prov. 27. 19. Rom. 3. 12, 13, 14.

3. Becauſe

3. Because they know themselves liable to the same temptations, Neminem prorsus Dei gratia intentabilem facit. Prosper.

4. They are liable to the same desertions from God; the Saints of God may fall into cursed opinions, and very sinfull practices, 2 *Sam.*24.1.

5. The greater the person is that fals, and the more dreadfull the fall, the greater ground of fear, *Neh.*13.6. *Mat.*7.27. *Rev.*9.1,2,

There are divers grounds and roots of Apostasie.

1. Unbelief, *Heb.*3.12. & alt. Faith unites the soul to Christ, and preserves it in him; by it we stand.

2. The love of the world, 1 *Tim.*6.9. 1 John 2.15. It is observed, there were fewer Apostates in the primitive times, because then there was little worldlinesse to tempt and solicit them from the Gospel.

3. Living in the practice of a known sin, 2 *Thess.*2.10,11.

4. Carnal security.

5. Needlesse society with wicked men, and base fear.

Remedies against Apostasie:

1. Labour to be well principled in the grounds of Religion.

2. Keep your hearts in continual fear, Blessed is he that feareth alwayes; this will keep a man low in his own eyes. Pride of parts and gifts betrayes men to errour.

Fear is anima præsidium: Superbia est hæreticorum mater. Luther. See Dr Gouge on Heb.10.25. Sect.79.

3. Be sincere, live up to your knowledge, 1 *Tim.*1.19. He that begins in hypocrisie, many times ends in Apostasie. See those places Psalm 125.5. Mat. 12.43, 44,45. 2 Peter 2.20,21. *Heb.*10.26.

How to know whether we keep the grace we have receiv'd:

If we keep up a holy, humble and heavenly frame of heart:

1. A holy frame, that will be known:

1. By hatred of sin, Psalm 97.10.

2. By a care of, and delight in our communion with God, Acts 24.13.

2. An humble and dependant frame, Micah 6.8. Esay 57.15. Humility was required in innocency, else man had not fallen by pride, and is not abolisht in Heaven, *Revel.*4.10. there will be a constant sense of our own nothingnesse, and a submission to God.

3. A heavenly frame of heart, *Ephes.*1.3. Grace comes from Heaven, and tends thither, 2 Peter 1.4.

Blasphemy.

According to the notation of the Greek word, it signifies to hurt ones fame or credit; yea in the Hebrew also a blasphemer of God is said to strike through the name of Jehovah, Lev.24.16.

Blasphemo, pro exsecror, classicis est ignotum. Theologis verò cap. 2.

Jurisconsultis, atque aliis est crebrum. Vossius *de Vitiis Sermonis, lib.*4.

It was so detested of old, that whereas it had a name, yet they did expresse it by an Antiphrasis, and used the word blessing in stead of cursing, 1 Kings 21.10.

See Dr Willet on *Levit.*24. Quæst.11. And Ridley of the Civil Law, pag.59. Foxes 3d vol. pag.222.

The Jews were wont to rend their garments at the hearing of the name of God blasphemed, Esay 30.ult. & 37.1. Acts 14.14. to expresse the rending of their hearts with grief and indignation.

The School Divines thus describe it, If one deny any thing concerning God which agrees to him, or affirm any thing of him which doth not agree to him; or when that is attributed to the creature which belongs to the Creator. Vide Aquin. *secunda secundæ Q.*13. *Art.*1.

The Name of God is blasphemed in regard of the matter and manner. In regard of the matter, God is blasphemed two wayes; either Privatively, by taking away from him that which is due unto him, and wherein his honour consisteth. Or Positively, By attributing that unto him which is unbefeeming his Majesty, dishonourable to his great Name. In regard of the manner, when any thing is spoken of God ignominiously, contemptuously, as Exod. 5. 2. 2 Kings 6. 33. Daniel 3. 15.

Dr Gouge of the sin against the holy Ghost. See more there. And *Alsted. Theol.cas.*6.15.

is

Henry Stevens in his Book De La Conformité des merveilles anciennes auec les modernes hath two Chapters of blasphemies, l. 1. c. 14, & c. 25.

I would I were able to resist God, said Francis Spira.

Gregory the 9th reckoned three famous Impostors of the world, Moses, Mahomet and Christ.

Aigoland living in Arragon being by Charles the great perswaded to become a Christian, came to the Emperours Court very well accompanied: where finding many Lazars and poor people before the gates, attending for their usual Alms from the Emperours Table; he asked what and who they were; and was answered, that they were the poor servants of God: upon which words he speedily returned again, protesting, That he would never serve that God, who could keep his servants no better. Cluverius Introduct. to Geog.

During the last Civil Garboils in France, the Papists to anger the adversaries of the Remish Religion, began their play at dice with the saying of the Psalmist, Our help standeth in the name of the Lord, who hath made Heaven and Earth: abusing it of purpose to spite and anger them the more; for that Protestant Preachers were wont to call upon God in this manner, in the beginning of their Sermons. World of wonders, first Book c. 14.

What greater blasphemies could all the Devils in hell devise and forge, than those which we read in the book of Conformities, printed at Millan by one Gotard Pontice, in the year 1510. and after that in other places, where sundry things are recorded more like dreams and dotages than true Stories, Christ (he saith) was transfigured but once, S^t Francis twenty times; Christ changed water into wine but once, S^t Francis did it thrice; Christ felt the pains of his wounds but a short time, S^t Francis felt the pains of his for the space of two years together. And as for miracles, as giving sight to the blind, restoring limbs to the lame, casting Devils out of men possessed, and raising the dead, Christ hath done nothing in comparison of S^t Francis and his brethren. World of wonders, ch. 25.

Julian blasphemed Christ living and dying.

The Heathens would never suffer their gods to be blasphemed, but punished such as were guilty thereof by the power of the Magistrate. Socrates was put to death for blaspheming their multiplicity of gods. M^r Burroughes Irenicum, Chap. 3.

The Turks abhor blasphemy, not only against God and Mahomet, but also against Christ and the Virgin Mary, and other Saints, and they punish blasphemers of whatsoever Sect. Purchase his Pilgrimage, lib. 3. cap. 10.

The very Turks, who account of Christ but as a great Prophet, and powerfull in word and deed, inflict death upon that man that speaketh blasphemies against Jesus Christ.

Hereticks ought to be put to death now, as well as false prophets under the Law; the equity of the judicial Law remains, of putting blasphemers to death. Cartw. against White.

Oecolampad. & Zuing. epist. l. 1. ep. 1. Oecolamp. Servet.

When Servetus condemned Joannes Oecolampadius for his harshnesse, he answers, Mihi alius mansuetus ero: in blasphemiis quæ in Christum, non item. In other things I will be mild, but not so in blasphemy against God.

For immediate blasphemy against God himself, it was capital, Leviticus 24. 16.

The Civil Law herein followeth the Divine Law, Blasphemi ultimis supplicijs afficiantur. Others have punished this sinne with cutting off, or plucking out the tongue, and that deservedly; for that tongue is unworthy ever to speak more that shall dare once to speak against its Creator.

Lewis the 9th King of France, stiled the Saint, published an Edict for the burning of blasphemous persons in the lips. A Noble man having offended in that kind, and being brought to the King, many interceded for him, that such an infamous punishment might be changed to another. The King would not hearken to their request, but said, He himself would take it for an honour to be marked so on his forehead, if by that means he might drive away that enormous sin out of his Kingdom.

Helps against it:

1. Labour for a distinct, well-grounded knowledge in the principles of Christian Religion, Jude 10.
2. Receive the love of the truth, 2 Thess. 2. 11.
3. Walk in the truth, 2 John 4. 2 Cor. 13. 8. 2 Tim. 3. 14.
4. Pray earnestly, Jude v. 24.

It is a Question among the Schoolmen, Utrum damnati blasphement? Aquinas thinks it credible, that after the Resurrection they shall vocally blaspheme, as the Saints shall vocally praise God. And some say, Damnati secundum blasphemant Deum, in hoc peccant, because they are bound to an eternal Law. After this life the demerit of sinne ceaseth, you shall give an account for the things done in the body, 2 Cor. 5. 10. The soul sinnes after, but shall not be judged for those sins. Secunda secundæ Quæst. 13. Art. 4.

Recepta sapientum opinio est, in inferno non peccari: quæ & certissima ratione nititur. Etenim disertè Paulus, Qui mortuus est, à peccato liber est, Rom. 6. 7. quod Ambrosius non immeritò ad omnes naturaliter mortuos extendit. Nec bonis voluntas, nec malis facultas peccandi esse potest. August. Enchir. cap. 6. Anima damnati hominis ita pœnis obruitur, ut ne cogitationem quidem ullam concipere possit, quæ ad peccatum vergat, Apocal. 14. 11. Sanford. de Descensu Christi ad Inferos, lib. 3. pag. 174.

Of Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.

It is called the great transgression, Psalm 19. 12. and blasphemy against the Spirit, Matth. 12.

Blasphemy against the Spirit is, when a man doth maliciously and proudly revile and despite the truth of the Gospel and word of God, which he certainly knoweth.

Non quivis homines sunt peccati illius subjectum, sed ij tantum qui illuminati sunt à Spiritu sancto.

It is called the blasphemy against the Spirit, because it is against the knowledge wherewith a man is lightened by the Spirit of God. Cartwright on Matth. 12. 31.

It is called the sinne against the holy Ghost, not that it is onely against the third Person in the Trinity, the three Persons make but one Divine Essence; but because it is a direct opposition and resistance of the light of knowledge with which the holy Ghost hath enlightened it. Non dicitur blasphemia Spiritus ratione personæ illius: sed ratione propriæ ipsius in hominibus energiæ, quatenus Spiritus Sanctus est is, qui in veritatis lucem introducit. Rivet. in Exod. 30. Vide Thom. Aquin. 2da, 2dæ quæst. 14. Art. 1, 2, 3, 4.

2. Qui ex deliberata malitia contra dictamen Spiritus, bellum indicunt veritati cognitæ.

3. Qui ex odio id faciunt &

blasphemiam negationi addunt. Rivet. in Exod. 20. 7. In Spiritum sanctum blasphemi sunt, qui agnitam per Spiritus illuminationem & in conscientia approbatam Evangelicam veritatem destinato consilio abnegant cum pertinaci impugnatione, addentes voluntariam blasphemiam, atque adeo ejusdem hostes publici sunt, Rivet. in Exod. 30. 7. In Spiritum sanctum vocatur hoc peccatum, non quod Spiritus sanctus offendi à quoquam possit, quin simul in Patrem & Filium peccetur; sed κατ' ἐξοχὴν, quia singulari modo admittitur contra Spiritum sanctum, hoc est, contra proprium atque immediatum Spiritus sancti officium, seu operationem, quæ est mentium illuminatio, Ursini Explicat. Catech. part. 1. Quæst. 7. Veritatis agnitæ blasphemia, malitiosa, & finaliter perseverans abnegatio, & oppugnatio, vocatur peccatum in Spiritum sanctum, non quod reliqua peccata non committantur in Spiritum sanctum, nec quod hoc ipsum peccatum, non sit contra Patrem & Filium; sed quod contra propriam & immediatam Spiritus sancti operationem committatur. Defensio Fidei Doctoris Elis Artic. 16.

It is called sinne against the holy Ghost, not in respect of the Essence, but of the Office of the holy Ghost; this sinne is all malice, wilfull without any infirmity, he being pleased with malice for it selfes sake. Capell of Tentat. part. 2. cap. 3.

Origen (as Bellarm. l. 2. de Pœnitentia, c. 16. alledgeth) thought that every sinne committed against the Law of God after Baptisme, was the sinne against the holy Ghost;

Ghoſt, ſo Novatus. Auſtin makes it final impenitency. The Schoolmen ſay any ſin of malice.

It is conceived by ſome, that the preſumptuous ſinne in the Old Teſtament is the ſame with, or anſwers to the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt in the New: and that which leads to this apprehenſion is, becauſe no Sacrifice was appointed for that under the Law, as this is ſaid to be unpardonable under the Goſpel, *Heb.*10.20. but by Pſalm 19.12. it ſeems to be a pitch of ſinning beyond preſumption.

It is a wilfull, malicious and obſtinate denying of the foundation, viz. That Jeſus is the Mediator and Redeemer of the world.

It is deſcribed to be a general Apoſtaſie and revolt of a man wilfully fallen from the truth known, even to a malicious perſecuting and blaſpheming of it. Mr Bedford of the ſin unto death, out of 1 John 5. 16.

Mr Derring on Heb. 6.4, 5, 6. ſaith, It is a general Apoſtaſie from God with wilfull malice, and an unrepentant heart to perſecute his truth to the end.

Mr Whitt in his Treatiſe of this ſin, thus deſcribes it,

It is a wilfull, malicious oppoſing, perſecuting and blaſpheming the truths of God, againſt knowledge and conſcience, without ever repenting and grieving for ſo doing, but rather fretting and vexing that one can do no more.

It is a total Apoſtaſie from the faith, when the whole man revolteth from the whole Chriſtian Religion wholly, with an obſtinate reſolution never to return to it any more. Mr Downe in a Letter.

Dr Donne. It is a total falling away from the Goſpel of Chriſt Jeſus formerly acknowledged and profeſſed, into a verbal calumniating, and a reall perſecuting of that Goſpel with a deliberate purpoſe to continue ſo to the end, and actually to doe ſo, to perſevere till then, and ſo to paſſe away in that diſpoſition.

Dr Gouge. It is a ſpitefull rejecting of the Goſpel, after that the Spirit hath ſupernaturally perſwaded a mans heart of the truth and benefit thereof.

It is a ſin committed againſt clear convincing, taſting knowledge, with deſpight and revenge, *Heb.*10.29.

1. It muſt be a clear knowledge, an ignorant man cannot commit it.

2. Such a knowledge as lets in a taſte of the goodneſſe as well as diſcovers the truth of the Goſpel, *Heb.*6.3. yet goes againſt this knowledge with deſpight, oppoſeth the motions of Gods Spirit with rage, this puts a man into the Devils condition. Compare *Heb.*6.4,5. with 10.26,27. It is a voluntary way of ſinning after a man hath received, not only the knowledge, but the acknowledgment of the truth, ſo much knowledge as ſubdues the underſtanding. The will is chiefly in this ſinne, he ſins wilfully, he trampleth under his foot the bloud of the Son of God, ſins maliciouſly and with revenge. The Jews put Chriſt to death with the greateſt malice.

The conditions of that ſin are,

1. Hatred of the truth.
2. A ſetled malice.
3. An obſtinate will.
4. An accuſing conſcience.

Therefore this ſinne is diſtinguiſhed from other ſins by three degrees: 1. That they all fall Toti, 2. A Toto, 3. In Totum.

1. Toti, Becauſe they fall from God and his gifts, not out of infirmity or ignorance, but out of knowledge, will, and certain purpoſe.

2. A Toto, Becauſe they caſt away and oppoſe the whole Doctrine, his Authority being contemned.

3. In Totum, Becauſe they are ſo obſtirmed in their defection, that they voluntarily oppoſe and ſeek to reproach the Majeſty of God.

But the ſpecifical difference of this ſin is, that they reproach thoſe things which the holy Ghoſt hath revealed to them for true, and of whoſe truth they are convinced in their mind.

This

This ſinne neceſſarily ſuppoſeth the knowledge of the Mediator: Whereſoever there is any mention of it in the New Teſtament, there comes with it ſome intimation of the works of the Mediator. In *Mat.*12. they oppoſed Chriſt in his miracles. In *Heb.*6. Paul inſtanceth in their crucifying again of Chriſt, Heb. 10. ſpeaks of their trampling under foot the Sonne of God. The Devils ſinned againſt light and with revenge, but not againſt the light of the ſecond Covenant; this ſin is purely againſt the Goſpel, *Heb.*4. & 10.27,28,29 Objectum hujus peccati non eſt lex, ſed Evangelium.

Some conceive the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt could not be committed under the Law, becauſe the Spirit was not given, but under the ſecond Covenant. Mr Bedford.

Matth. 12. 32. He that commits this ſin ſhall neither be pardoned in this world, in foro conſcientiæ, nor in the world to come, in foro judicii; neither in this world, per ſolutionem Miniſterii, by the Miniſtry of the Word; nor in the world to come, per approbationem Chriſti.

When once the means of recovery by the Goſpel are neglected, contemned and deſpiſed, then there is no place for remiſſion; ſee *Heb.*10.26. The ſacrifices in the old Law were effectual in their time to the expiation of ſinne, if joyned with faith. The Sacrifice of Chriſts death was alwayes effectual; but if this alſo be deſpiſed, this being the laſt, there is no more ſacrifice for ſin, and yet without ſacrifice no remiſſion.

This ſin is not pardoned, 1. Becauſe it is never repented of, *Heb.*6. 4,6. 2. The means of pardon are rejected, *Heb.*10.29. Chriſt Jeſus offered in the Goſpel. 3. God is utterly renounced.

It is called the ſin unto death, not becauſe it may kill, for no ſin but may kill, if it be not repented of; but becauſe it muſt kill. 1 John 5. 16.

Divines obſerve two ſorts ſubject to this ſinne. Some have both knowne the truth, and alſo profeſſed it, as Saul, Judas, Alexander the Copperſmith, all theſe made profeſſion of the Goſpel before they fell away. Others have certain knowledge of the truth, but yet have not given their names to profeſſe it, but doe hate, perſecute, and blaſpheme it, ſuch were the Phariſees, *Matth.*13.

All they who do fall into this ſin, firſt do attain unto a certain and aſſured knowledge of the truth, though all do not profeſſe it.

Paul before his converſion walkt on the brink of the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, but becauſe he ſinn'd ignorantly, he was pardoned.

Abſolutely to determine of ſuch a one is very difficult; neither is there any ſufficient mark but the event, viz. final impenitency.

But the grounds of ſuſpition are ſuch as theſe:

1. Prophaneneſſe.
2. Doubting of every ſaving truth and impugning it.
3. Envying anothers grace and happineſſe.
4. Blaſphemy.
5. Want of good affections.

Many Chriſtians are ready to [a] ſuſpect that they have ſinned againſt the holy Ghoſt. Some Divines give this as a Rule, If the Lord give you a heart to fear that you have ſin'd againſt the holy Ghoſt, then you have not.

[a] Diſcant noſtri homines quid ſit peccare in Spiritum ſanctum, ne ſe decipiant. Cadit ſæpe in homines bonos metus, ne hoc peccatum commiſerint. Dicunt enim; Ego ſciva hoc vel illud eſſe peccatum, & tamen feci. Ergo commiſi peccatum in Spiritum ſanctum. Diſcite quæſo quid ſit peccare in Spiritum. Non eſt facere quod ſcimus malum eſſe, ſed eſt ideò aliquid facere, quia ſcimus malum eſſe, vel ideò aliquid perſequi, quia ſcimus bonum eſſe. Streſo. in Act. 3.18. *Conc.*39.

The temptation to that ſinne is not that ſinne. He that is willing to be pardoned hath not committed it, he ſcorns mercy. He that is willing to uſe the means of grace ſtill, hath not committed it. Every ſinne againſt the Spirit, is not the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt. Every blaſphemy in thought or word againſt any of the Perſons of the Trinity, is not the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt. This ſinne is not ſo much againſt the Perſon of the Spirit, as his work in us, illumination, and is a total Apoſtaſie from the truth once clearly known.

This ſin cannot be a ſin in thought or heart meerly, it will break forth into the tongue and act; it is an open and publick as well as malicious oppoſing known truths; blaſphemy is committed with the tongue. Every diſtempered word againſt the truth is not this ſinne; it is a malicious ſpeaking againſt the truth. All Apoſtaſie in pra-dice is not this ſinne, there will be a renouncing of the profeſſion of Chriſtianity. Such an one will wiſh that all men oppoſed the truth as well as he. See Mr Bridge on *Mat.*12.31,32. of this ſin; and *Streſos conciones Miſcellan.*36. *p.*234.

Boaſting.

A man boaſts when he is full of that which he thinks excellent, and to adde worth and excellency to him, Pſalm 34.2. & 44.8. & 64.10.

It is one of the ſins of the tongue, 1 *Sam.*2.3. a high degree of pride; ſee Ezekiel 28.3,4. *Rom.*2.17. there is vera and vana gloriatio, the higheſt act of faith is to glory in God, we make our boaſt of God all the day long, Pſalm 44. but to boaſt of God, when one hath no intereſt in him, is vain.

Bribery.

A Lacedemonian General complained that he was driven out of Aſia by a thouſand Archers, he meant by the King of Perſia's money, an Archer was the ſtamp of the Perſians coyn. So in the late Civil Wars in France, many were ſaid to have been pelted with Spaniſh Piſtols, a Piſtol is an indifferent word both for a certain coyn, and a ſmall piece. B. Smith. See that Proverb Bos in lingua, in Eraſmus his Adagies. And that Story of Demoſthenes is famous, who was Fee'd one way, and after receiving a Fee from the adverſe part, pretended he had the Squinancy, and ſo could not ſpeak; but one ſaid, it was not the cold, but gold which hindered him from ſpeaking. A Lord Chancellour of England heretofore, was a great Bribe-taker in his time. He excuſed his fault by laying the blame upon his ſervants, who waiting for his coming out of the Parliament-houſe, when he had received his cenſure, and riſing up, he bad them ſit ſtill, ſaying, That their riſing occaſioned his fall.

A Bribe is a gift given from him which hath or ſhould have a Cauſe in the Court of Juſtice, to them which have to intermeddle in the adminiſtration of Juſtice.

Bribery or taking gifts is a ſinne, *Exod.*23.8. the ſame is repeated, Deut. 16.19. Eſay 1.23. *Prov.*17.23. Pſalm 26.10. Hoſea 4.18. Amos 2.12. Micah 3.11.

Reaſons. 1. From the cauſes of it:

1. Covetouſneſſe. Samuels ſons inclined after lucre, and took gifts.
2. Hollowneſſe and guile.
3. A want of love of juſtice.
4. A want of hatred of ſin.

Secondly, The effects, 1. In the parties ſelf that offends. 2. In others.

1. In himſelf, The bribe blinds the eyes of the wiſe, 1 Sam.12.3. Exod.23.8. it makes him unable to ſee and find out the truth in a Cauſe.

Samuel learnt it from Moſes who hath it twice, Exod. 23.8. Deut. 16.19. Juſtice is not unfitly pourtrayed in the form of a man with his right eye open, to look at the cauſe, and his left eye ſhut, that he may not look at the perſon. Now a gift putteth all this out of order, and ſetteth it the quite contrary way. From this property of hoodwinking up the eyes a bribe is called in the Hebrew Copher, as 1 Sam.12.3. of Caphar, to cover, to daub up, or to draw over with lime, plaiſter, or the like. Doctor Sanderſon on 1 Samuel 12.3.

2. It perverts the words of the righteous, that is, it makes them which otherwiſe would deal righteouſly, and perhaps have had an intention of dealing righteouſly; yet to ſpeak otherwiſe than becomes, it expoſeth the offender to condigne puniſhment. Solomon ſaith, A gift proſpers whitherſoever it goeth, and it makes room for a man, meaning, that otherwiſe deſerveth no room. For the puniſhment of it, ſee Job 15.34. Fire ſhall devour the tabernacles of bribery, meaning, that God will not fail by ſome or other means to bring deſtruction upon thoſe families, that ſhall thus augment their eſtates.

For others, 1. It doth make all that are rich bold to ſin, becauſe they hope to bear it out.

2. It makes rich men alſo bold to do wrong.

3. It grieveth the heart and ſpirit of the innocent that is in low eſtate, and makes him call to God to be his avenger.

4 It

4. It overthroweth the Throne, *Prov.*29.5. It brings publick desolation.

It is lawfull to pacifie an angry foe with a gift, so did Jacob; but to hire and corrupt a Judge with a gift is unlawfull. He cannot lawfully take, therefore neither thou lawfully give, seeing these two are mutual causes and effects, and therefore can hardly be separated in their guiltinesse.

Cambyses caused a bribing Judge to be flaid quick, and laid his skin in his chair of judgement, that all Judges which should give judgment afterwatd should sit on the same skin. See in Sir Anthony Sherleys Relation of his Travels into Persia, a memorable judgment of the King of Persias, upon an extortioner.

Chap. XVI.

Of Carnal Confidence, Covetousnesse, Crueltie, Cursing.

Carnal Confidence.

One trusts in that which he makes the argument of his obtaining good, or escaping evil.

Confidence in general is that affection of the soul, whereby it rests it self in the expectation of any good from any thing. Therefore carnal confidence is a vice whereby the heart of man rests it self in the looking for any good of any kind from any thing but God alone. He is carnally confident which promiseth himself any thing desirable, as health, deliverance out of trouble, long life, because he hath such or such outward means, which he thinks are able to bring forth such safety unto him.

The Scripture cals it, Making flesh our arm, Jer.17.5. A man is said to make that his arm, which he thinks himself strong and safe if he have; and so he is said to make riches a strong Tower in the same sense.

There are several branches of carnal confidence:

1. Presumption or fond admiration, when one hath too great an opinion of himself or any other, Hosea 10.13.

2. Self-dependance, leans on his own ability, Psalm 44.6. and creature-dependance.

3. When one trusts in lawfull means, 2 *Chron.*16.12.

4. Trusting in outward advantages, riches, honours, credit, good name, beauty, Job 31.24.

5. Trusting in spiritual priviledges, *Jer.*7.4,14. The Jews because they were Abrahams seed.

6. When one trusts in his wickednesse, carnal devices, policy, Psalm 52.7. *Isa.*28.15,

There is a double trust in men warrantable:

1. Moral, when I trust a man upon his word.

2. Religious, when I trust a man as he is Gods instrument to do me good, in subordination to God.

Unlawfull trust is,

1. When I relie upon a man for any thing that God only can give, 2 Kings 5.10.

2. When I trust in the creature as the author of that good I expect.

Men are prone to this sin of false-confidence. David trusted in his strong hill. Asa in the Physicians, 2 *Chron.*16.12. The Israelites in Egypt for Chariots and horses, 1 *Sam.*17.45,46,47. Luke 12.19.

The grounds of it are,

1. Ignorance of God, whose strength and greatnesse together with his grace and goodnesse the mind apprehends not, Psalm 9.10.

2. Ignorance of these earthly things, their weaknesse, mutability and disability to help and comfort, Esay 28. 15. the Prophet brings in the leud men of his time flattering themselves, and soothing up their own hearts with fair words, and promising all safety to their own souls in derision and despight of all his threats; If a plague come through the Land it should not touch them; by vanity and falshood they meant wealthy friends and outward support, which the Prophet here cals by this name ironically.

This is a great evil, Esay 30. 1, 2, 3. & 31. 1, 2, 3. Jer. 17. 5, 13. See Psalm 146. 3, 4.

a Confidence must be withdrawn from all other things but God, in respect of the principal and full worth of it. Therefore we are forbidden to trust,

1. It is a denying of God, Job 3.28. Trust is only due to him, such an one sets up another God, Jonah 2.8. A covetous man is therefore called an Idolater, Ephes. 5.5. and covetousnesse Idolatry, Col. 3. 5.

2. It is the ground of all our miscarriage in practice, 1 John 5. 3, 4, 5. The world is a great hinderance to our keeping the Commandments.

3. It is the ground of all disquiet; if you would live a happy life seek a fit object for your trust, Psal. 30. 6, 7. & Psa. 112. 7. Expect all good things from God alone. Abraham looked for a child from God when nature failed him.

1, In man, Isa. 2. 22. Ier. 17. 5. Psalm 145. 3. 2. In riches, Psalm 62. 10. Mark 10. 24. 1 Tim. 6. 17. 3. In chariots, horses, Psalm 20. 7. & 44. 6. 4. In our own wits, Prov. 3. 5. & 28. 26. 5. In our own righteousnesse, Ezek 33. 13. Luke 18. 9. Phil 3. 3, 4. We may in some sense trust in man, that is, be perswaded that he will deal honestly with us, and rely upon him for performance of his promises, and for doing what in him lieth for our good: but we may not in this sense trust in him, that is, stay upon him as a sufficient help to do us good, but only we must look to him as an instrument, and relie upon God as the chief cause, because all men are changeable, and all things weak and uncertain.

Self-confidence discovers it self:

1. By running into temptation, Phil. 2. 12, 13.
2. By neglecting Gods wayes.
3. When we go forth to any work of consequence without our actual renewing our dependance on God, Col. 3. 17.
4. When we boast of our courage before we be call'd to trial.

The object of trust is God, Esay 58. 10. and God in Christ; we may love the creatures, and delight in them moderately; but trust is proper to God, 2 Cor. 1. 8, 9. Psalm 141. 3, 4. and God in Christ. God alone is rather the ground of horrour and distrust; God in Christ is the object of Christian confidence, Psalm 57. 1. & 91. 4. He hath respect there to the wings spread over the Mercy-seat, which was the figure of God in Christ.

This confidence in God is shewed,

1. By preferring his favour above all things.
2. By making his name our refuge in all troubles.
3. By using all good means and only good to get any good thing, and that without carking and vexation.
4. By comforting our selves in him when all means fail us, 1 Samuel 30. 6. Hab. 3. 17. See Jer. 49. 11. Zeph. 3. 12 Psalm 10. 14. 2 Cor. 1. 8, 9.

Trust in God is an exercise of faith, whereby looking upon God in Christ through the promises, our souls are taken off from all other supports, and raised above fears, waiting upon God either for support or final deliverance.

There are several acts of the soul:

1. The soul looks upon God, Heb. 11. 27.
2. It is taken off from all other supports, Zech. 3. 12.
3. It is raised up above fears; faith quiets and composeth the soul, Esay 26. 3. Psalm 112. 27. partly by committing our selves to God, to his power, 2 Tim. 1. 12. and partly by referring our selves to his will and goodnesse for seasonable support or final deliverance, Psalm 31. 20. Prov. 16. 3.

Signs of false confidence:

1. The inordinate desire of any earthly thing. What a man desires more than he should, that he looks for some good by.
2. Immoderate joy when he hath gotten it. He that finds great joy in any thing, doth doth therefore joy in it, becauſe he thinks heſhall be better for it.

3. Impatience in the abſence of it, Job 13.24,25.

4. To grow bold to do evil and careleſſe of doing good in reſpect thereof.

The cure of carnal confidence:

Firſt, Conſider how pernicious this vice is, it withdraws the heart from the Lord, *Jer.*17.5. and brings his curſe on the ſoul and body, 1 *Cor.*1.19.

Secondly, It makes one unable to uſe well that which he hath.

Thirdly, Conſider the weakneſſe and uncertainty of all outward things, Pſalm 39.5.

Fourthly, Meditate on thoſe places, Pſalm 62.10. & 146.3. 1 *Tim.*6.17.

Fifthly, Let us carry a holy jealouſie over our own hearts, when we have abundance of outward advantages.

Sixthly, Inure our ſelves to a holy and ſpiritual confidence, the love of God expels the love of the world, holy fear, carnal fear, faith in God, carnal confidence.

Covetouſneſſe.

It is an inſatiable deſire of having, or an inordinate love of money, Avarus quaſi avidus aris. Iſidor.

It is an inordinate deſire of getting or keeping the things of this world, be they much or little.

The Schoolmen ſay, Covetouſneſſe is Peccatum maximè adhæſivum creaturæ, & maximè à Deo averſivum.

It lies in the heart, *Phil.*3.19. Pſalm 49.11. but is reckoned by the Apoſtle among outward groſſe ſins, becauſe it is conſummate by outward ſordidneſſe.

Philoſophers make covetouſneſſe a vice in the defect, not in the exceſſe, it is the exceſſive carriage of the ſoul toward riches, but this is eaſily reconciled, take the exceſſe and defect as they ſtand in the habit to vertue, then covetouſneſſe is a defect to liberality, but take it according to the object; ſo it is rather in the exceſſe than the defect. Doctor Stoughton. See Maſter Wheatleys Caveat for the Covetous on Luke 12.15. Doctor Sclater on Rom. 1. 29. pag. 127, 128, &c. Amſ. de conſcient. lib. 5. cap. 51. Capel of Tentation. part. 3. cap. 3. And Doctor Gouge on Heb. 13. 5.

It is taken two wayes:

Firſt, For detaining or taking other mens goods in an unlawfull way, and ſo it is oppoſed to juſtice. Or,

Secondly, For an inordinate deſire to get and hold, though God call for it, and it oppoſeth liberality.

The deſire is inordinate:

Firſt, For the meaſure of it, when it is vehement and ſtrong, ſeeing wealth is a thing of a baſe and contemptible nature, not worthy any earneſtneſſe of deſire.

Secondly, For the quantity of the object, the ſumme of wealth deſired, if he ſuffer his deſires to be carried after more, than that which is ſufficient for the providing of meat, drink, and cloth for himſelf, and his, in a comfortable ſort, affecting an overplus. The proper end of riches is comfortable maintenance.

Thirdly, For the end of ones deſiring, when it is to ſerve and ſet up himſelf, and is not to fit himſelf to do God ſervice, and to profit mankind. Laban and Nabal, whoſe names Anagrammatize each other, are examples of avarice.

Henry Stevens *Traitte preparatif à l'Apologie pour Herodote l.*1.*c.*8. mentions theſe ancient proverbs, to witneſſe the covetouſneſſe of Eccleſiaſtical perſons, Trois choſes ſont tout d'unaccord, L'Egliſe, la cour, & la mort:. L'egliſe prend du vif, & du mort. La cour prend le droict & le tort. La mort prend le foible & le fort: Il y a trois choſes: inſatiables, les prelires, les moines, la mer.

We are inordinately affected to earthly things:

Firſt, When we make the world our ſcope and end, 1 *Tim.*6.9. not he that is rich, but he that will be rich.

Secondly, When they juſtle out better cares, *Matth.*6.23.

Thirdly, When we cannot part with theſe things upon Gods call.

1. Upon

1. Upon the intereſt of a good conſcience, *Heb.*10.34.
2. To works of charity, 1 *Tim.*6.18.
3. When he takes them from us, Luke 12.20.

It is a great and dangerous ſin, Eſay 57.7. *Hab.*2.9. *Col.*3.5. 1 *Sam.*8.3. Prov. 15.27. *Jer.*22.17. The ſame Prophet complains of the people in his time, that From the leaſt of them to the greateſt of them, they were all of them coveting covetouſneſſe, as the words are; that is, given unto it, did yeeld their hearts to a deſire of gain; which complaint alſo he renews, *ch.*8.18. and in both places alleadgeth it as a cauſe of great ſins, *Ezek.*32.31. The Lord ſo hates it that the godly ſhould not company with ſuch, 1 *Cor.*5.11.

Mr Perkins. In the body when the Spleen ſwels, all other parts decay and conſume; ſo when the heart ſwels with deſire of riches, all the graces of God conſume and fade away.

Greenham. When all other ſins wax old, this waxeth young in thee.

Reaſons. Firſt, From the cauſes of it:

Illa peccata dicuntur carnalia quæ perficiuntur in delectationibus carnalibus, illa vero dicuntur ſpiritualia, quæ perficiuntur in ſpiritualibus delectationibus, & hujuſmodi eſt avaritia. Delectatur enim avarus in hoc quòd conſiderat ſe poſſeſſorem divitiarum. Aquin. 22, 2æ *Quæſt.*118. *Art.*6.

1. Ignorance of the goodneſſe, mercy, power and excellency of God; and of the faithfulneſſe, profitableneſſe, deſirableneſſe of things heavenly and ſpiritual. He knows not God nor the worth of the graces of Gods Spirit, nor the excellency of his heavenly Kingdome, who is glewed unto theſe earthly, deceitfull vanities. And withall he doth not conceive of the worthleſneſſe of theſe trifles, who ſuffers his heart to be deceived with the ſame.

2. Errour: He is in a ſtrong and palpable errour concerning them, imagining them to be of more power and ability to profit him, than in truth they be; he over-prizeth earthly things, and imagineth riches to be a ſtrong Tower and Caſtle of defence.

3. He puts his truſt in riches, and dreams that he ſhall be ſo much the more happy, by how much the more rich, yea, that he cannot be happy without riches.

It is brought forth,

1. By diſtruſt of God or unbelief, *Matth.*6.25. to 31. *Heb.*13.14,15.
2. Sinfull ſelf-love, they are joyned together, 2 *Tim.*3.2.

Secondly, The effects of it: 1. The evils of ſin which flow from it generally; it is the root of all evil, it will make a Judge corrupt, as 1 Sam. 8. 3. a Prophet deal falſly with the word of God, as Jeremiah complains; it will make a man to lie, deceive and cozen in his dealing; it will make a woman unchaſt.

It cauſeth a neglect of ſpiritual things, Luke 14. 18. and contempt of the Goſpel, Luke 16.14.

